Of that black name, Edward black prince of Wales;
Whiles that his mountain sire — on mountain standing,
Up in the air, crown'd with the golden sun,—
Saw his hercal seed, and smil'd to see him
Mangle the work of nature.
This is a stem
Of that victorious stock; and let us fear
The native mightinesse and fate of him.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Ambassadors from Henry king of England
Do crave admittance to your majesty.

Fr. King. We'll give them present audience. Go, and bring them.

[Execut Mess. and certain Lords.

You see this chase is hotly follow'd, friends.

Dau. Turn head, and stop pursuit: for coward dogs
Most spend their mouths, when what they seem to threaten,
Runs far before them. Good my sovereign,
Take up the English short; and let them know
Of what a monarchy you are the head:
Self-love, my liege, is not so vile a sin
As self-neglecting.

Re-enter Lords, with Exit and Train.

Fr. King. From our brother England?

Exe. From him: and thus he greets your majesty.
He wills you, in the name of the Almighty,
That you divest yourself, and lay aside
The borrowed glories, that, by gift of heaven,
By law of nature, and of nations, long
To him, and to his heirs; namely, the crown,
And all wide-stretched honours that pertain,
By custom and the ordinance of times,
Unto the crown of France. That you may know,
'Tis no sinister, nor no awkward claim,
Pick'd from the worm-holes of long-vanish'd days,
Nor from the dust of old oblivion rak'd,
He sends you this most memorable line,

[Given a paper.

In every branch truly demonstrative;
Willing you overlook this pedigree;
And, when you find him evenly deriv'd
From his most fam'd of famous ancestors,
Edward the third, he bids you then resign
Your crown and kingdom, indirectly held
From him, the native and true challenger.

Fr. King. Or else, what follows?

Exe. Bloody constraint; for if you hide the crown
Even in your hearts, there will he rake for it:
And therefore in fierce tempest is he coming,
In thunder, and in earthquake, like a Jove;
(That, if requiring fail, he will compel;) And bids you, in the bowels of the Lord,
Deliver up the crown; and to take mercy
On the poor souls, for whom this hungry war
Opens his vasty jaws: and on your head
Turns he the widows' tears, the orphans' cries,
The dead men's blood, the pining maidens' groans,
For husbands, fathers, and betrothed lovers,
That shall be swallow'd in this controversy.
This is his claim, his threat'ning, and my message;
Unless the dauphin be in presence here,
To whom expressly I bring greeting too.

Fr. King. For us, we will consider of this further:
To-morrow shall you bear our full intent
Back to our brother England.

Dau. For the dauphin,
I stand here for him; What to him from England?
Exe. Scorn and defiance; slight regard, contempt,
And any thing that may not misbecome
The mighty sender, doth he prize you at.
Thus saith my liege: and, if your highness
Do not, in grant of all demands at large,
Sweeten the bitter mock you sent his majesty,
He'll call you to so hot an answer for it,
That caves and wobmy vaultages of France
Shall chide your trespass, and return your mock
In second accent of his ordinance.

Dau. Say, if my father render fair reply,
It is against my will: for I desire
Nothing but odds with England: to that end,
As matching to his youth and vanity,
I did present him with those Paris balls.

Exe. He'll make your Paris Louvre shake for it,
Were it my mistress court of mighty Europe:
And, be assured, you'll find a difference,
(As we, his subjects, have in wonder found,) Between the promise of his greener days,
And these he masters now: now he weighs time,
Even to the utmost grain; which you shall read
In your own losses, if he stay in France.

Fr. King. To-morrow shall you know our mind
At full.

Exe. Despatch us with all speed, lest that our king
Come here himself to question our delay;
For he is footed in this land already.

Fr. King. You shall be soon despatch'd with fair conditions:
A night is but small breath, and little pause,
To answer matters of this consequence.

[Exeunt.
Enter Chorus.

Chor. Thus with imagin'd wing our swift scene flies,
In motion of no less celerity
Than that of thought. Suppose, that you have seen
The well-appointed king at Hampton pier
Emblark his royalty; and his brave fleet
With silken streamers the young Phæbus fanning
Play with your fancies; and in them behold,
Upon the hempen tackle, ship-boys climbing:
Hear the shrill whistle, which doth order give
To sounds confus'd: behold the threaden sails,
Borne with the invisible and creeping wind,
Draw the huge bottoms through the furrow'd sea,
Breasting the lofty surge: O, do but think,
You stand upon the rivage, and behold
A city on the inconstant billows dancing;
For so appears this fleet majestical,
Holding due course to Harfleur. Follow, follow!
Grapple your minds to sternage of this navy;
And leave your England, as dead midnight, still,
Guarded with grandsires, babies, and old women,
Or past, or not arriv'd to, pith and puissance:
For who is he, whose chin is but enrich'd
With one appearing hair, that will not follow
These call'd and choice-drawn cavaliers to France?
Work, work your thoughts, and therein see a siege:
Behold the ordinance on their carriages,
With fatal mouths gaping on girded Harfleur.
Suppose, the ambassador from the French comes back;
Tells Harry — that the king doth offer him
Katharine his daughter; and with her, to dowry,
Some petty and unprofitable dukedoms.
The offer likes not: and the nimble gunner,
With linstock now the dreadful cannon touches,
[Alarum; and Chambers go off.
And down goes all before them. Still be kind,
And eke out our performance with your mind. [Exit.

SCENE I. — Before Harfleur.

Alarums. Enter King Henry, Exeter, Bedford, Gloucester, and Soldiers, with Scaling Ladders.

K. Hen. Once more unto the breach, dear friends, once more;
Or close the wall up with our English dead!
In peace, there's nothing so becomes a man,
As modest stillness and humility:
But when the blast of war blows in our ears,
Then imitate the action of the tiger;
Stiffen the sinews, summon up the blood,
Disguise fair nature with hard-favoured rage;
Then lend the eye a terrible aspect;
Let it pry through the portage of the head,
Like the brass cannon; let the brow o'erwhelm it,
As fearfully, as doth a galled rock
O'erhang and jutty; his confounded base,
Swill'd with the wild and wasteful ocean.
Now set the teeth, and stretch the nostril wide;
Hold hard the breath, and bend up every spirit
To his full height! — On, on, on, you noblest English,
Whose blood is fet from fathers of war-proof!
Fathers, that, like so many Alexanders,
Have, in these parts, from morn till even fought,
And sheath'd their swords for lack of argument.
Dishonour not your mothers; now attest,
That those, whom you call'd fathers, did beget you!
Be copy now to men of grosser blood,
And teach them how to war! — And you, good yeomen,
Whose limbs were made in England, show us here
The mettle of your pastures; let us swear
That you are worth your breeding; which I doubt not;
For there is none of you so mean and base,
That hath not noble lustre in your eyes.
I see you stand like greyhounds in the slips,
Straining upon the start. The game's afoot;
Follow your spirit: and, upon this charge,
Cry — God for Harry! England! and saint George!
[Exeunt. Alarum, and Chambers go off.

SCENE II. — The same.

Forces pass over; then enter Nym, Bardolph, Pistol, and Boy.

Bard. On, on, on, on! to the breach, to the breach!
Nym. 'Pray thee, corporal, stay; the knocks are too hot; and, for mine own part, I have not a case of lives: the humour of it is too hot, that is the very plain-song of it.
Pist. The plain-song is most just; for humours do abound;
Knocks go and come; God's vassals drop and die;
And sword and shield,
In bloody field,
Doth win immortal fame.
Boy. 'Would I were in an alcheous in London! I would give all my fame for a pot of ale and safety.
Pist. And I:
If wishes would prevail with me,
My purpose should not fail with me,
But thither would I hie.
Boy. As duly, but not as truly, as bird doth sing on bough.

Enter Fluellen.

Flu. Up to the preaches, you rascals! will you not up to the preaches? [Driving them forward.
Pist. Be merciful, great duke, to men of mould!
Able thy rage, able thy manly rage!
Able thy rage, great duke!
Good bawcock, bate thy rage! use lenity, sweet chuck!
Nym. These be good humours! — your honour wins bad humours.
[Exeunt Nym, Pistol, and Bardolph, followed by Fluellen.

Boy. As young as I am, I have observed these three swashers. I am boy to them all three: but all they three, though they would serve me, could not be man to me; for, indeed, three such anticks do not amount to a man. For Bardolph, — he is white-livered, and red-faced; by the means wherof, a faces it out, but fights not. For Pistol, — he hath a killing tongue, and a quiet sword: by the means whereof a breaks words, and keeps whole weapons. For Nym,—he hath heard that men of few words are the best men; and therefore he scorns to say his prayers, lest a should be thought a coward; but his few bad words are match’d with as few good deeds; for a never broke any man’s head but his own; and that was against a post, when he was drunk. They will steal any thing, and call it —purchase. Bardolph stole a lute-case; bore it twelve leagues, and sold it for three halfpence. —Nym, and Bardolph, are sworn brothers in filching; and in Calais they stole a fire-shovel: I knew, by that piece of service, the men would carry coals. They would have me as familiar with men’s pockets, as their gloves or their handkerchiefs: which makes much against my manhood, if I should take from another’s pocket, to put into mine; for it is plain pocketing up of wrongs. I must leave them, and seek some better service: their villainy goes against my weak stomach. [Exit Boy."

* Small pieces of ordnance.
* A molot to withstand the encroachment of the tide.

Re-enter Fluellen, Gower following."

Gov. Captain Fluellen, you must come presently to the mines; the duke of Gloster would speak with you.

Flu. To the mines! tell you the duke, it is not so good to come to the mines: For, look you, the mines is not according to the disciplines of the war; the concavities of it is not sufficient; for, look you, th’adversary (you may discuss unto the duke, look you,) is dight 9 himself four yards under the countermines: I think, ’a will plow up all, if there is not better directions.

Gov. The duke of Gloster, to whom the order of the siege is given, is altogether directed by an Irishman; a very valiant gentleman, Fluellen.

Flu. It is captain Macmorris, is it not?

Gov. I think it be."

Flu. He is an ass, as in the ’orld: I will verify as much in his peard: he has no more directions in the true disciplines of the wars, look you, of the Roman disciplines, than is a puppy-dog.

Enter Macmorris and Jamy, at a distance."

Gov. Here ’a comes; and the Scots captain, captain Jamy, with him.

Flu. Captain Jamy is a marvellous falorous gentleman, that is certain; and of great expedition, and knowledge, in the ancient wars, upon my particular knowledge of his directions: he will maintain his argument as well as any military man in the ’orld, in the disciplines of the pristines wars of the Romans.

Jamy. I say, gud-day, captain Fluellen.

Flu. God-den to your worship, goot captain Jamy.

Gov. Now how, captain Macmorris? have you quit the mines? have the pioneers given o’er?

Mac. Tish ill done: the work ish give over, the trumpet sound the retreat. By my hand, I swear, and by my father’s soul, the work ish ill done; it ish give over: I would have blowed up the town in an hour. O, tish ill done, tish ill done; by my hand, tish ill done!

Flu. Captain Macmorris, I peseech you now, will you youte safe me, look you, a few disputations with you, as partly touching or concerning the disciplines of the war, the Roman wars, in the way of argument, look you, and friendly communication; partly, to satisfy my opinion, and partly, for the satisfaction, look you, of my mind, as touching the direction of the military discipline; that is the point.

Jamy. It sell be very gud, gud feith, gud captains bath: and I sall quit 1 you with gud leve, as I may pick occasion; that sall I, marry.

Mac. It is no time to discourse, the day is hot, and the weather, and the wars, and the king, and the dukes; it is no time to discourse. The town is beseeched, and the trumpet calls us to the breach; and we talk, and do nothing; ’tis shame for us all: ’tis shame to stand still; it is shame, by my hand: and there is throats to be cut, and works to be done; and there ish nothing done.

Jamy. By the mess, ere these eyes of mine take themselves to slumber, aile do gude service, or aile ligge i’ the grund for it; ay, or go to death; and aile pay it as valorously as I may, that sal I surely do, that is the breff and the long: Mary, I wad full fain heard some question ’tween you twa.

Flu. Captain Macmorris, I think, look you, under your correction, there is not many of your nation —

Mac. Of my nation? What ish my nation? ish a villain, and a bastard, and a knave, and a rascal? What ish my nation? Who talks of my nation?

Flu. Look you, if you take the matter otherwise than is meant, captain Macmorris, peradventure, I shall think you do not use me with that affability as in discretion you ought to use me, look you; being as goot a man as yourself, both in the disciplines of wars, and in the derivation of my birth, and in other particularities.

Mac. I do not know you so good a man as myself: I will cut off your head.

Gov. Gentlemen both, you will mistake each other.

Jamy. Au! that’s a foul fault.

[Parley sounded.]

Gov. The town sounds a parley.

Flu. Captain Macmorris, when there is more better opportunity to be required, look you, I will be so bold as to tell you, I know the disciplines of war; and there is an end. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. — Before the Gates of Harfleur.

The Governor and some Citizens on the Walls; the English Forces below. Enter King Henry and his Train.

K. Hen. How yet resolves the governor of the town? This is the latest parle we will admit: Therefore, to our best mercy give yourselves: Or, like to men proud of destruction, Defy us to our worst: for, as I am a soldier, (A name, that, in my thoughts, becomes me best,) If I begin the battery once again, I will not leave the half-achieved Harfleur, Till in her ashes she lie buried. The gates of mercy shall be all shut up; And the flesh’d soldier—rough and hard of heart,— In liberty of bloody hand, shall range. What is it then to me, if impious war,— Array’d in flames, like to the prince of fiends, —Do, with his smirch’d 3 complexion, all fell 4 feats Enlink’d to waste and desolation? What is’t to me, when you yourselves are cause? What rein can hold licentious wickedness, When down the hill he holds his fierce career? We may as bootless 5 spend our vain command

Scene IV.

KING HENRY V.

Upon the enraged soldiers in their spoil,
As send preciços to the Leviathan
To come ashore. Therefore, you men of Harfleur
Take pity of your town, and of your people,
Whilest yet my soldiers are in command;
Whilest yet the cool and temperate wind of grace
O'erblows the filthy and contagious clouds
Of deadly murder, spoil, and villainy.
If not, why, in a moment, look to see
The blind and bloody soldier with foul hand
Defile the locks of your shrill-shrieking daughters;
Your fathers taken by the silver beards,
And their most reverend heads dash'd to the walls;
Your naked infants spitted upon pikes;
Whilest the mad mothers with their bowls confus'd
Do break the clouds, as did the wives of Jewry
At Herod's bloody-hunting slaugthermen.
What say you? will you yield, and this avoid?
Or, guilty in defence, be thus destroy'd?

God. Our expectation hath this day an end:
The dauphin, whom of succour we entreated,
Returns us — that his powers are not yet ready
To raise so great a siege. Therefore, dread king,
We yield our town, and lives to thy soft mercy:
Enter our gates; dispose of us, and ours;
For we no longer are defensible.

K. Hen. Open your gates. — Come, uncle Exeter,
Go you and enter Harfleur; there remain,
And fortify it strongly against the French:
Use mercy to them all. For, we dear uncle,
— The winter coming on, and sickness growing
Upon our soldiers, — we'll retire to Calais.
To-night in Harfleur will we be your guest;
To-morrow for the march are we address'd.

[Flourish. The King, &c. enter the Town.

Scene IV. — Rouen.

A Room in the Palace.

Enter the French King, the Dauphin, Duke of Bourbon, the Constable of France, and others.

Fr. King. 'Tis certain, he hath pass'd the river
Some.

Con. And if he be not fought withal, my lord,
Let us not live in France: let us quit all,
And give our vineyards to a barbarous people.

Dou. Shall a few sprays of us, —
Our scions. put in wild and savage stock,
Spirit up so suddenly into the clouds,
And overlook their grafters?

Bour. Normans, but bastard Normans, Normans bastards!

Mort de ma vie! if they march along
Unfought withal, but I will sell my dukedom,
To buy a slobbery and a dirty farm
In that nook-shotden 6 isle of Albion.

Con. Dieu de batailles! where have they this mettle?
Is not their climate foggy, raw, and dull?
On whom, as in despair, the sun looks pale,
Killing their fruit with frowns? Can sodden water,
A drench for sur-rein'd 7 jades, their barley broth,
Decoct their cold blood to such valiant heat?
And shall our quick blood, spiritid with wine,
Seem frosty? O, for honour of our land,
Let us not hang like roping icicles
Upon our houses' thatch, whiles a more frosty people
Sweat drops of gallant youth in our rich fields;
Poor — we may call them, in their native lords.

Dau. By faith and honour,
Our madams mock at us.

Bour. They bid us — to the English dancing-schools,
And teach jowlatas high, and swift corontas 8;
Saying, our grace is only in our heels,
And that we are most lofty runaways.

Fr. King. Where is Montjouy, the herald? speed him hence;
Let him greet England with our sharp defiance. —
Up, princes; and, with spirit of honour edg'd,
More sharper than your swords, hie to the field:
Charles De-la-bret, high constable of France;
You dukes of Orleans, Bourbon, and of Berry,
Alençon, Brabant, Bar, and Burgundy;
Jacques Chatillon, Rambures, Vaudemont,
Beaumont, Grandpré, Roussy, and Faulconberg,
Foix, Lestrale, Bouciquart, and Charolais;
High dukes, great princes, barons, lords, and knights,
For your great seats, now quit you of great shame,
Bar Harry England, that sweeps through our land
With pennons 9 painted in the blood of Harfleur:
Rush on his host, as doth the melted snow
Upon the vallies; —
You have power enough, —
And in a captive chariot, into Rouen
Bring him our prisoner.

Con. This becomes the great
Sorry am I, his numbers are so few,
His soldiers sick, and famish'd in their march;
For, I am sure when he shall see our army,
He'll drop his heart into the sink of fear,
And, for achievement, offer us his ransom.

Fr. King. Therefore, lord constable, haste on Montjouy:
And let him say to England, that we send
To know what willing ransom he will give. —
Prince dauphin, you shall stay with us in Rouen.

Dau. Not so, I do beseech your majesty.

Fr. King. Be patient, for you shall remain with us. —
Now forth, lord constable, and princes all;
And quickly bring us word of England's fall.

[Exeunt.

Scene V. — The English Camp in Picardy.

Enter Gower and Fluellen.

Gow. How now, captain Fluellen? come you from the bridge?

Flu. I assure you, there is very excellent service committed at the bridge.

Gow. Is the duke of Exeter safe?

Flu. The duke of Exeter is as magnanimous as Agamemnon; and a man that I love and honour with my soul, and my heart, and my duty, and my life, and my livings, and my uttermost powers; he is not, (God be praised, and blessed!) any hurt in the 'orld; but keeps the bridge most valiantly, with excellent discipline. There is an ensign there at the bridge, — I think, in my very conscience, he is as valiant as Mark Antony; and he is a man of no estimation in the 'orld: but I did see him do gallant service.

Gow. What do you call him?

Flu. He is called — ancient Pistol.

Gow. I know him not.

* Prepared.
7 Over-ridden.
8 Dances.
9 Pendants, small flags.
Enter Pistol.

Flu. Do you not know him? Here comes the man.

Pist. Captain, I thee beseech to do me favours: The duke of Exeter doth love thee well.

Flu. Ay, and I have merited some love at his hands.

Pist. Bardolph, a soldier, firm and sound of heart, Of buxom valour, hath, — by cruel fate, And giddy fortune's furious fickle wheel, That goddess blind,

Flu. By your patience, ancient Pistol. Fortune is painted plind, with a muffler ¹ before her eyes, to signify to you that fortune is plind: And she is painted also with a wheel; to signify to you, which is the moral of it, that she is turning; and inconstant and variations, and mutabilities; and her foot, look you, is fixed upon a spherical stone, which rolls, and rolls, and rolls; — In good truth the poet is most a excellent description of fortune: fortune, look you, is an excellent moral.

Pist. Fortune is Bardolph's foe, and frowns on him;

For he hath stol'n a piz ², and hanged must 'a be.

Let gallows gape for dog, let man go free,

And let not hemp his windpipe suffocate;

But Exeter hath given the doom of death,

For piz of little price.

Therefore, go speak, the duke will hear thy voice;

And let not Bardolph's vital breath be cut

With edge of penny cord, and vile reproach.

Speak, captain, for his life, and I will thee require.

Flu. Ancient Pistol, I do partly understand your meaning.

Pist. Why then rejoice therefore.

Flu. Certainly, ancient, it is not a thing to rejoice at: for if, look you, he were my brother, I would desire the duke to use his good pleasure, and put him to executions; for disciplines ought to be used.

Pist. A figo for thy friendship!

Flu. It is well.

Pist. The fig of Spain !³ [Exit Pistol.

Flu. Very good.

Gov. Why this is an arrant counterfeit rascal; I remember him now; a cutpurse.

Flu. I'll assure you, 'a utter'd as prave 'ords at the pridge, as you shall see in a summer's day: But it is very well; what he has spoke to me, that is well, I warrant you, when time is serve.

Gov. Why, 'tis a gull, a fool, a rogue; that now and then goes to the wars, to grace himself, at his return into London, under the form of a soldier. And such fellows are perfect in great commanders' names: and they will learn you by rote, where services were done; — at such and such a sconce ⁴, at such a breach, at such a convoy: who came off bravely, who was shot, who disgraced, what terms the enemy stood on: and this they can perfectly in the phrase of war, which they trick up with new-tuned oaths: And what a heard of the general's cut, and a horrid suit of the camp, will do among foaming bottles and ale-wash'd wits, is wonderful to be thought on! but you must learn to know such slanders of the age, or else you may be marvellous mistook.

Flu. I tell you what, captain Gower: — I do perceive, he is not the man that he would gladly make show to the 'ord he is; if I find a hole in his coat, I will tell him my mind. [Drum heard.]

Hark you, the king is coming; and I must speak with him from the pridge.

Enter King Henry, Gloster, and Soldiers.

Flu. Cot pless your majesty!

K. Hen. How now, Fluellen? camest thou from the bridge?

Flu. Ay, so please your majesty. The duke of Exeter has very gallantly maintained the pridge: The French is gone off; look you; and there is gallant and most prave passages: Marry, th' athersary was have possession of the pridge; but he is enforced to retire, and the duke of Exeter is master of the pridge: I can tell your majesty, the duke is a prave man.

K. Hen. What men have you lost, Fluellen?

Flu. The perdition of th' athersary hath been very great, very reasonable great: marry, for my part, I think the duke hath lost never a man, but one that is like to be executed for robbing a church, one Bardolph, if your majesty know the man: his face is all bubuckles, and wheiks, and knobs, and flames of red; and his lips plows at his nose, and it is like a coal of fire, sometimes blue, and sometimes red; but his nose is executed, and his fire's out.

K. Hen. We would have all such offenders so cut off: and we give express charge, that in our marches through the country, there be nothing compelled from the villages, nothing taken but paid for; none of the French upbraided, or abused in disdainful language; For when lenity and cruelty play a sport in a kingdom, the gentler gamester is the soonest winner.

Tucket sounds. Enter Montjoy.

Mont. You know me by my habit.

K. Hen. Well then, I know thee; What shall I know of thee?

Mont. My master's mind.

K. Hen. Unfold it.

Mont. Thus says my king: — Say thou to Harry of England, Though we seemed dead, we did but sleep; Advantage is a better soldier, than rashness. Tell him, we could have rebuked him at Harlefler; but that we thought not good to bruise an injury, till it were full ripe: — now we speak upon our cue,² and our voice is imperial: England shall repent his folly, see his weakness, and admire our sufferance. Bid him, therefore, consider of his ransom; which must proportion the losses we have borne, the subjects we have lost, the disgrace we have digested; which, in weight to re-answer, his petition would bow under. For our losses his exchequer is too poor; for the effusion of our blood, the master of his kingdom too faint a number; and for our disgrace, his own person, kneeling at our feet, but a weak and worthless satisfaction. To this add— defiance: and tell him, for conclusion, he lieth betrayed his followers, whose condemnation is pronounced. So far my king and master; so much my office.

K. Hen. What is thy name? I know thy quality.

² A small box in which were kept the consecrated wafers.
³ An allusion to the custom in Spain and Italy of giving poisoned figs.
⁴ An entrenchment hastily thrown up.
Scene VI. — The French Camp near Agincourt.

Enter the Constable of France, the Lord Rambures, the Duke of Orleans, Dauphin, and others.

Con. Tut! I have the best armour of the world. — Would it were day.

Orl. You have an excellent armour; but let my horse have his dues.

Con. It is the best horse of Europe.

Orl. Will it never be morning?

Dau. My lord of Orleans, and my lord high constable, you talk of horse and armour.

Orl. You are as well provided of both, as any prince in the world.

Dau. What a long night is this! — I will not change my horse with any that treads but on four pasterns. Ca, ha! He bounds from the earth, as if his entrails were hairs! 8 le cheval voleant, the Pegasus, qui a les marines de feu! When I bestride him, I soar; I am a hawk; he treads the air; the earth sinks when he touches it; the basest horn of his hoof is more musical than the pipe of Hermes.

Orl. He's of the colour of the nutmeg.

Dau. And of the heat of the ginger. It is a beast for Perseus: he is pure air and fire; and the dull elements of earth and water never appear in him, but only in patient stillness, while his rider mounts him: he is, indeed, a horse; and all other jades you may call — beasts.

Con. Indeed, my lord, it is a most absolute and excellent horse.

Dau. It is the prince of palfreys; his neigh is like the bidding of a monarch, and his countenance enforces homage.

Orl. No more, cousin.

Dau. Nay, the man hath no wit, that cannot, from the rising of the lark to the lodging of the lamb, vary deserved praise on my palfrey: it is a theme as fluent as the sea; turn the sands into eloquent tongues, and my horse is argument for them all: 'tis a subject for a sovereign to reason on, and for a sovereign's sovereign to ride on; and for the world (familiar to us, and unknown,) to lay apart their particular functions, and wonder at him. I once writ a sonnet in his praise, and began thus: Wonder of nature, —

Orl. I have heard a sonnet begin so to one's mistress.

Dau. Then did they imitate that which I composed to my courser; for my horse is my mistress.

Con. You have good judgment in horsemanship.

Ram. My lord constable, the armour, that I saw in your tent to-night, are those stars, or sums, upon it?

Con. Stars, my lord.

Dau. Some of them will fall to-morrow, I hope.

Con. And yet my sky shall not want.

Dau. That may be, for you bear a many superfluously; and 'twere more honour, some were away.

Con. Even as your horse bears your praises; who would trot as well, were some of your brags dismounted.

Dau. 'Would I were able to load him with his desert! Will it never be day? I will trot to-morrow a mile, and my way shall be paved with English faces.

Con. I will not say so, for fear I should be faced out of my way: But I would it were morning, for I would fain be about the ears of the English.

Ram. Who will go to hazard with me for twenty English prisoners.

Con. You must first go yourself to hazard, ere you have them.

Dau. 'Tis midnight; I'll go arm myself. [Exit. Orl. The dauphin longs for morning.

Ram. He longs to eat the English.

Con. I think, he will eat all he kills.

Orl. By the white hand of my lady, he's a gallant prince.

Con. Swear by her foot, that she may tread out the oath.

Orl. He is simply, the most active gentleman of France.

Con. Doing is activity: and he will still be doing.

Orl. He never did harm, that I heard of.

Con. Nor will do none to-morrow; he will keep that good name still.

Orl. I know him to be valiant.

Con. I was told that, by one that knows him better than you.

Orl. What's he?

Con. Marry, he told me so himself; and he said, he cared not who knew it.

Orl. He needs not, it is no hidden virtue in him.

Con. By my faith, sir, but it is; never any body

8 Hinderance. 7 Then used for God being my guide. 8 Alluding to the bounding of tennis-balls, which were stuffed with hair.
saw it, but his lackey: 'tis a hooded valour; and, when it appears, it will bate. 9
Orl. Ill will never said well.
Con. I will cap that proverb with—There is flattery in friendship.
Orl. And I will take up that with—Give the devil his due.
Con. Well placed; there stands your friend for the devil.
Orl. You are the better at proverbs, by how much—A fool's bolt is soon shot.
Con. You have shot over.
Orl. 'Tis not the first time you were overshot.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord high constable, the English lie within fifteen hundred paces of your tent.
Con. Who hath measured the ground?
Mess. The lord Grandpré.
Con. A valiant and most expert gentleman.—Would it were day!—Alas, poor Harry of England!—he longs not for the dawning, as we do.
Orl. What a wretched and peevish fellow is this king of England, to mope with his fat-brained followers so far out of his knowledge!

Con. If the English had any apprehension, they would run away.
Orl. That they lack; for if their heads had any intellectual armour, they could never wear such heavy head-pieces.

Ram. That island of England breeds very valiant creatures; their mastiffs are of unmatchable courage.
Orl. Foolish curs! that run winking into the mouth of a Russian bear, and have their heads crushed like rotten apples: You may as well say,—that's a valiant flea, that dare eat his breakfast on the lip of a lion.

Con. Just, just; and the men do sympathize with the mastiffs, in Robinson and rough coming on, leaving their wits with their wives: and then give them great meals of beef, and iron and steel, they will eat like wolves, and fight like devils.

Orl. Ay, but these English are shrewdly out of beef.
Con. Then we shall find to-morrow—they have only stomachs to eat, and none to fight. Now is it time to arm: Come, shall we about it?
Orl. It is now two o'clock; but, let me see,—by ten,
We shall have each a hundred Englishmen.

[Exeunt.

ACT IV.

Enter Chorus.

Chor. Now entertain conjecture of a time,
When creeping murmur, and the poring dark,
Fills the wide vessel of the universe,
From camp to camp, through the foul womb of night,
The hum of either army stilly sounds,
That the fix'd sentinels almost receive
The secret whispers of each other's watch:
Fire answers fire; and through their pale flames
Each battle sees the other'sumber'd face:
Steed threatens steed, in high and boastful neighs
Piercing the night's dull ear; and from the tents,
The armourers, accomplishing the knights,
With busy hammers closing rivets up,
Give dreadful note of preparation.
The country cocks do crow, the clocks do toll,
And the third hour of browsy morning name.
 Proud of their numbers, and secure in soul,
The confident and over-lusty French
Do the low-rated English play at dice;
And chide the cripple tardy-gaited night,
Who, like a foul and ugly witch, doth limp
So tediously away. The poor condemned English,
Like sacrifices, by their watchful fires
Sit patiently, and inly ruminate
The morning's danger; and their gesture sad,
Investing lank-lean cheeks, and war-worn coats,
Presenteth them unto the gazing moon
So many horrid ghosts. O, now, who will behold
The royal captain of this ruin'd band,
Walking from watch to watch, from tent to tent,
Let him cry—Praise and glory on his head!
For forth he goes, and visits all his host;
Bids them good-morrow, with a modest smile;

And calls them—brothers, friends, and countrymen.
Upon his royal face there is no note,
How dread an army hath environed him;
Nor doth he dedicate one jot of colour
Unto the weary and all-watch'd night:
But freshly looks, and over-bears attaint,
With cheerful semblance, and sweet majesty;
That every wretch, pining and pale before,
Beholding him, plucks comfort from his looks:
A largess universal, like the sun,
His liberal eye doth give to every one,
Thawing cold fear. Then, mean and gentle all,
Behold, as may unworthiness define,
A little touch of Harry in the night:
And so our scene must to the battle fly:
Where, (O for pity!) we shall much disgrace—
With four or five most vile and ragged foils,
Right ill-dispos'd, in brawl ridiculous,
The name of Agincourt: Yet, sit and see;
Minding true things, by what their mockeries be.

[Exeunt.

SCENE I.—The English Camp at Agincourt.

Enter King Henry, Bedford, and Gloster.

K. Hen. Gloster, 'tis true, that we are in great danger;
The greater therefore should our courage be.—
Good morrow, brother Bedford.—Now we find
There is some soul of goodness in things evil,
Would men observingly distil it out;
For our bad neighbour makes us early stirrers,
Which is both healthful, and good husbandry:
Besides, they are our outward consciences,
And preachers to us all; admonishing,
That we should dress us fairly for our end.
Thus may we gather honey from the weed
And make a moral of the devil himself.

9 An equivocum in terms in falconry: he means his valour is hid from every body but his lackey, and when it appears it will fall off.
1 Foolish.
2 Gently, lowly.
3 Discoloured by the gleam of the fire.
4 Over-saucy.
5 Calling to remembrance.
Enter Erpingham.

Good morrow, old sir Thomas Erpingham: A good soft pillow for that good white head Were better than a churlish turf of France.

Erp. Not so, my liege; this lodging likes me better.

Since I may say—now lie I like a king.

K. Hen. 'Tis good for men to love their present pains, Upon example; so the spirit is eased:
And, when the mind is quick'en'd, out of doubt,
The organs, though defunct and dead before,
Break up their drowsy grave, and newly move
With casted slough\(^6\) and fresh legerity.\(^7\)

Lend me thy cloak, sir Thomas. — Brothers both,
Commend me to the princes in our camp;
Do my good-morrow to them; and anon,
Desire them all to my pavilion.

Cbs. We shall, my liege.

[Exeunt Gloster and Bedford.

Erp. Shall I attend your grace?

K. Hen. No, my good knight;
Go with my brothers to my lords of England:
I and my bosom must debate a while,
And then I would no other company.

Erp. The Lord in heaven bless thee, noble Harry.

K. Hen. Worthy old heart! thou speakest cheer-

[Enter Pistol.

Pist. Qui va là?

K. Hen. A friend.

Pist. Discuss unto me; Art thou officer;
Or art thou base, common, and popular?

K. Hen. I am a gentleman of a company.

Pist. Trailest thou the puissant pike?

K. Hen. Even so: what are you?

Pist. As good a gentleman as the emperor.

K. Hen. Then you are a better than the king.

Pist. The king's a babcock, and a heart of gold,
A lad of life, an imp of fame;

Of parents good, of fist most valiant:
I kiss his dirty shoe, and from my heart-strings
I love the lonely bully. What's thy name?

Pist. Le Roy! a Cornish name: art thou of Cornish crew?

K. Hen. No, I am a Welshman.

Pist. Knowest thou Fluellen?

K. Hen. Yes.

Pist. Tell him, I'll knock his leek about his pate,
Upon saint David's day.

K. Hen. Do not you wear your dagger in your cap that day, lest he knock that about yours.

Pist. Art thou his friend?

K. Hen. And his kinsman too.

Pist. The figo for thee then!

K. Hen. I thank you: Heaven be with you.

Pist. My name is Pistol called. [Exit.

K. Hen. It sorts well with your fierceness.

[Enter Fluellen and Gower, severally.

Gow. Captain Fluellen!

Flu. So! speak lower. It is the greatest admiration in the universal 'orld, when the true and auncient prerogatives and laws of the wars is not kep't: if you would take the pains but to examine the wars of Pompey the Great, you shall find, I warrant you, that there is no tiddle taddle, or pible pabble, in Pompey's camp; I warrant you, you shall find the ceremonies of the wars, and the cares of it, and the forms of it, and the sobriety of it, and the modesty of it, to be otherwise.

Gow. Why, the enemy is loud; you heard him all night.

Flu. If the enemy is an ass and a fool, and a prating coxcomb, is it meet, think you, that we should also, look you, be an ass, and a fool, and a prating coxcomb; in your own conscience now?

Gow. I will speak lower.

Flu. I pray you, and beseech you, that you will.

[Exeunt Gower and Fluellen.

K. Hen. Though it appear a little out of fashion, There is much care and valour in this Welshman.

Enter Bates, Court, and Williams.

Court. Brother John Bates, is not that the morning which breaks yonder?

Bates. I think it be: but we have no great cause to desire the approach of day.

Will. We see yonder the beginning of the day, but, I think, we shall never see the end of it. — Who goes there?

K. Hen. A friend.

Will. Under what captain serve you?

Will. A good old commander, and a most kind gentleman: I pray you, what thinks he of our estate?

K. Hen. Even as men wrecked upon a sand, that look to be washed off the next tide.

Bates. He hath not told his thought to the king?

K. Hen. No: nor it is not meet he should. For, though I speak it to you, I think, the king is but a man, as I am: the violet smells to him, as it doth to me; the element shows to him, as it doth to me; all his senses have but human conditions: his ceremomies laid by, he appears but a man; and though his affections are higher mounted than ours, yet, when they stoop, they stoop with the like wing; therefore when he sees reason of fears, as we do, his fears, out of doubt, be of the same relish as ours are: Yet, in reason, no man should possess him with any appearance of fear, lest he, by showing it, should dishearten his army.

Bates. He may show what outward courage he will; but, I believe, as cold a night as 'tis, he could wish himself in the Thames up to the neck: and so I would he were, and I by him, at all adventures, so we were quit here.

K. Hen. By my troth, I will speak my conscience of the king; I think, he would not wish himself any where but where he is.

Bates. Then, 'would he were here alone; so should he be sure to be ransomed, and a many poor men's lives saved.

K. Hen. I dare say, you love him not so ill, to wish him here alone: bowsoever you speak this, to feel other men's minds: Methinks, I could not die any where so contented, as in the king's company; his cause being just, and his quarrell honourable.

Will. That's more than we know.

Bates. Ay, or more than we should seek after; for we know enough, if we know we are the king's subjects; if his cause be wrong, our obedience to the king wipes the crime of it out of us.
Will. But, if the cause be not good, the king himself hath a heavy reckoning to make; when all those legs, and arms, and heads, chopped off in a battle, shall join together at the latter day, and cry all—We died at such a place; some swearing; some, crying for a surgeon; some, upon their wives left poor behind them; some, upon the debts they owe; some, upon their children rawly 1 left. I am afeard there are few die well, that die in battle; for how can they charitably dispose of anything, when blood is their argument? Now, if these men do not die well, it will be a black matter for the king that led them to it; whom to disobey, were against all proportion of subjection.

K. Hen. So, if a son, that is by his father sent about merchandize, do sinfully miscarry upon the sea, the imputation of his wickedness, by your rule, should be imposed upon his father that sent him; or if a servant, under his master's command, transporting a sum of money, be assailed by robbers, and die in many irreconciled iniquities, you may call the business of the master the author of the servant's perdition:—But this is not so: the king is not bound to answer the particular endings of his soldiers, he is master of his servant: for they purpose not their death, when they purpose their services. Besides, there is no king, be his cause never so spotless, if it come to the arbitrement of swords, can try it out with all unsotted soldiers. Some, peradventure, have on them the guilt of premeditated and contrived murder; some, of beguiling virgins with the broken seals of perjury; some, making the wars their bulwark, that have before gored the gentle bosom of peace with pillage and robbery. Now, if these men have defeated the law, and outrun native punishment 2, though they can outstrip men, they have no wings to fly from God: war is his vengeance; so that here men are punished, for before-break of the king's laws, in now the king's quarrel: where they feared the death, they have borne life away; and where they would be safe, they perish: Then if they die unprovided, no more is the king guilty of it, than he was before guilty of those impieties for the which they are now visited. Every subject's duty is the king's; but every subject's soul is his own. Therefore should every soldier in the wars do as every sick man in his bed, wash every mote out of his conscience: and dying so, death is to him advantage; or not dying, the time was blessedly lost, wherein such preparation was gained; and, in him that escapes, it were not sin to think, that making God so free an offer, he let him outlive that day to see his greatness, and to teach others how they should prepare.

Will. 'Tis certain, every man that dies ill, the ill is upon his own head, the king is not to answer for it.

Bates. I do not desire he should answer for me; and yet I determine to fight lustily for him.

K. Hen. I myself heard the king say, he would not be ransomed.

Will. Ay, he said so, to make us fight cheerfully; but when our throats are cut, he may be ransomed, and we 'er the wiser.

K. Hen. If I live to see it, I will never trust his word after.

Will. 'Mass, you'll pay 3 him then! That's a perilous shot out of an elder gun, that a poor and private displeasure can do against a monarch! you may as well go about to turn the sun to ice, with fanning in his face with a peacock's feather. You'll never trust his word after! come, 'tis a foolish saying.

K. Hen. Your reproof is something too round; I should be angry with you, if the time were convenient.

Will. Let it be a quarrel between us, if you live.

K. Hen. I embrace it.

Will. How shall I know thee again.

K. Hen. Give me any share of thine, and I will wear it in my bonnet: then, if ever thou darest acknowledge it, I will make it my quarrel.

Will. Here's my glove; give me another of thine.

K. Hen. There.

Will. This will I also wear in my cap: if ever thou come to me and say, after to-morrow, This is my glove, by this hand, I will take thee a box on the ear.

K. Hen. If ever I live to see it, I will challenge it.

Will. Thou darest as well be hanged.

K. Hen. Well, I will do it, though I take thee in the king's company.

Will. Keep thy word: fare thee well.

Bates. Be so kind, you English fools, be friends; we have French quarrels enough, if you could tell how to reckon.

K. Hen. Indeed, the French may lay twenty French crowns to one, they will beat us; for they bear them on their shoulders: But it is no English treason to cut French crowns; and, to-morrow the king himself will be a clipper.

[Exeunt Soldiers.

Upon the king! let us our lives, our souls, Our debts, our careful wives, our children, And our sins, lay on the king;—we must bear all. O hard condition! twin-born with greatness, Subjected to the breath of every fool, Whose sense no more can feel but his own wringing! What infinite heart's ease must kings neglect, That private men enjoy?

And what have kings, that privates have not too, Save ceremony, save general ceremony? And what art thou, thou idle ceremony? What kind of god art thou, that suffer'st more Of mortal griefs, than do thy worshippers? What are thy rents? what are thy comings-in? O ceremony, show me but thy worth! What is the soul of adoration? Art thou ought else but place, degree, and form, Creating awe and fear in other men? Wherein thou art less happy being feared Than they in fearing. What drink'st thou oft, instead of homage sweet, But poison'd flattery? O, be sick, great greatness, And bid thy ceremony give thee cure! Think'st thou, the fiery fever will go out With titles blown from adulation? Will it give place to flexure and low bending? Canst thou, when thou command'st the beggar's knee, Command the health of it? No, thou proud dream, That play'st so subtly with a king's repose; I am a king, that find thee; and I know, 'Tis not the balm, the scepter, and the ball, The sword, the mace, the crown imperial, The enter-tissued robe of gold and pearl, The farced 4 title running 'fore the king, The throne he sits on, nor the tide of pomp

1 Suddenly. 2 e. Punishment in their native country. 3 To pay here signifies to bring to account, to punish. 4 Farced is stuffed. The timid puffy titles with which a king's name is introduced.
That beats upon the high shore of this world,
No, not all these, thrice-gorgeous ceremony,
Not all these, laid in bed majestical,
Can sleep so soundly as the wretched slave;
Who, with a body fill'd, and vacant mind,
Gets him to rest, cram'd with distressful bread;
Never sees horrid night, the child of hell;
But, like a lackey, from the rise to set,
Sweats in the eye of Phoebus, and solen night,
Sleeps in Elysium; next day, after dawn,
Doth rise, and help Hyperion 8 to his horse;
And follows so the ever-running year
With profitable labour, to his grave:
And, but for ceremony, such a wretch,
Winding up days with toil, and nights with sleep,
Had the fore-hand and vantage of a king.
The slave, a member of the country's peace,
Enjoys it; but in gross brain little wots,
What watch the king keeps to maintain the peace,
Whose hours the peasant best advantages.

Enter Erpingham.

Erp. My lord, your nobles, jealous of your absence,
Seek through your camp to find you.
K. Hen. Good old knight,
Collect them all together at my tent:
I'll be before thee.

Erp. I shall do't, my lord. [Exit.
K. Hen. O God of battles! steel my soldiers' hearts!
Possess them not with fear; take from them now
The sense of reckoning, if the opposed numbers
Pluck their hearts from them!—Not to-day, O Lord,
O not to-day, think not upon the fault
My father made in compassing the crown!
I Richard's body have interred new;
And on it have bestow'd more contrite tears,
Than from it issued forced drops of blood.
Five hundred poor I have in yearly pay,
Who twice a day their wither'd hands hold up
Toward heaven, to pardon blood; and I have built
Two chantries, where the sad and wailing priests
Sing still for Richard's soul. More will I do:
Though all that I can do, is nothing worth;
Since that my penitence comes after all,
Imploring pardon.

Enter Gloster.

Glo. My liege!
K. Hen. My brother Gloster's voice? — Ay;
I know thy errand, I will go with thee: —
The day, my friends, and all things stay for me.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. — The French Camp.

Enter Dauphin, Orleans, Ramures, and others.

Orl. The sun doth gild our armour; up, my lords.

Dau. Montez à cheval! — My horse! valet! lacquy! ha!

Orl. O brave spirit!

Dau. Vix! 7 — les eaux et la terre

Orl. Bien puis? l'air et le feu —

Dau. Ciel! cousin Orleans.

Enter Constable.

Now, my lord constable!

Con. Hark, how our steeds for present service neigh.

Dau. Mount them, and make incision in their hides;
That their hot blood may spin in English eyes,
And don't 8 them with superfluous courage: Hi!

Ram. What, will you have them weep our horses' blood?
How shall we then behold their natural tears?

Enter a Messenger.

Mett. The English are embattled, you French peers.

Con. To horse, you gallant princes! straight to horse!
Do but behold yon poor and starved hand,
And your fair show shall suck away their souls,
Leaving them but the shales and husks of men.
There is not work enough for all our hands;
Scarce blood enough in all their sickly veins,
To give each naked curtle-ax a stain,
That our French gallants shall to-day draw out,
And sheath for lack of sport: let us but blow on them.

The vapour of our valour will o'erturn them.
'Tis positive 'gainst all exceptions, lords,
That our superfluous lackeys, and our peasants, —
Who, in unnecessary action, swarm
About our squares of battle, — were enough
To purge this field of such a hilding 9 foe;
Though we, upon this mountain's basis by,
Took stand for idle speculation:
But that our honours must not. What's to say?
A very little little let us do,
And all is done. Then let the trumpets sound
The tucket-sonance, 1 and the note to mount:
For our approach shall so much dare the field,
That England shall cough down in fear, and yield.

Enter Grandpré.

Grand. Why do you stay so long, my lords of France?

Yon island carriions, desperate of their bones,
Ill-favour'dly become the morning field:
Their ragged curtains 8 poorly are let loose,
And our air shakes them passing scornfully,
Big Mars seems bankrupt in their beggar'd host,
And faintly through a rusty beaver peeps.
Their horsemen sit like fixed candlesticks,
With torch-staves in their hand: and their poor jades
Lob down their heads, dropping the lides and hips;
The gum down-roping from their pale-dead eyes;
And in their pale dull mouths the gimsal 9 bit
Lies foul with chew'd grass, still and motionless;
And their executors, the knavish crows,
Fly o'er them all, impatient for their hour.
Description cannot suit itself in words,
To demonstrate the life of such a battle
In life so lifeless as it shows itself.

Con. They have said their prayers, and they stay for death.

Dau. Shall we go send them dinners, and fresh suits,
And give their fasting horses provender,
And after fight with them?

Con. I stay but for my guard; On, to the field:
I will the banner from a trumpet take,
And use it for my haste. Come, come away!
The sun is high, and we outwear the day. [Exeunt.

6 Do them out, extinguish them. 7 Mean, desppicable.
The name of an introductory flourish on the trumpet.
2 Colours.
2 Ring.
SCENE III. — The English Camp.

Enter the English Host; Gloster, Bedford, Exeter, Salisbury, and Westmoreland.

Glo. Where is the king?

Bed. The king himself is rode to view their battle.

West. Of fighting men they have full three-score thousand.

Ere. There's five to one; besides, they all are fresh.

Sal. God's arm strike with us! 'tis a fearful odds.

God be wi' you, princes all; I'll to my charge:
If we no more meet, till we meet in heaven,
Then joyfully, — my noble lord of Bedford,—
My dear lord Gloster,—and my good lord Exeter,—
And my kind kinsman, — warriors all, adieu!

Bed. Farewell, good Salisbury; and good luck go with thee!

Ere. Farewell, kind lord; fight valiantly to-day:
And yet I do thee wrong, to mind thee of it,
For thou art fram'd of the firm truth of valour.

[Exit Salisbury.]

Bed. He is as full of valour as of kindness;
Princely in both.

West. O that we now had here

Enter King Henry.

But one ten thousand of those men in England,
That do not work to-day!

K. Hen. What's he, that wishes so?
My cousin Westmoreland? — No, my fair cousin:
If we are mark'd to die, we are enough
To do our country loss; and if to live,
The fewer men, the greater share of honour.
O no, I pray thee, wish not one man more.
By Jove, I am not covetous for gold;
Nor care I, who doth feed upon my cost;
It yeards me not, if men my garments wear;
Such outer things dwell not in my desires:
But, if it be a sin to covet honour,
I am the most offending soul alive.
No, faith, my coz, wish not a man from England:
By heaven! I would not lose so great an honour,
As one man more, methinks, would share from me,
For the best hope I have. O, do not wish one more:
Rather proclaim it, Westmoreland, through my host,
That he, which hath no stomach to this fight,
Let him depart; his passport shall be made,
And crowns for convoy put into his purse:
We would not die in that man's company,
That fears his fellowship to die with us.
This day is call'd — the feast of Crispian:
He, that outlives this day, and sees old age,
Will yearly on the vigil feast his friends,
And say — to-morrow is saint Crispian:
Then will he strip his sleeve, and show his scars,
And say, these wounds I had on Crispin's day.
Old men forget; yet all shall be forgot,
But he'll remember, with advantages,
What feats he did that day: Then shall our names,
Familiar in their mouths as household words,—
Harry the king, Bedford, and Exeter,
Warwick and Talbot, Salisbury and Gloster,—
Be in their flow're cups freshly remember'd:—
This story shall the good man teach his son;
And Crispin Crispian shall never go by.
From this day to the ending of the world,
Will soon be levied. Herald, save thou thy labour;
Come thou no more for ransome, gentle herald;
They shall have none, I swear, but these my joints:
Which if they have as I will leave 'em to them,
Shall yield them little, tell the constable.
Moult. I shall, king Harry. And so fare thee well:
Thou never shalt hear herald any more. [Exit.
K. Hen. I fear, thou'lt once more come again for ransome.
Enter the Duke of York.
York. My lord, most humble on my knee I beg
The leading of the vaward.
K. Hen. Take it, brave York; — Now, soldiers, march away: —
And how thou pleasest, God, dispose the day!
[Exeunt.

SCENE IV. — The Field of Battle.

Alarums : Excursions. Enter French Soldier,
Pistol, and Boy.
Pist. Yield, cur.
Fr. Sol. Je pense, que vous estes le gentilhomme de bonne qualité.
Pist. Quality, call you me? — Construe me, art thou a gentleman? What is thy name? discuss.
Fr. Sol. O seigneur Dieu!
Pist. O, signieur Dew should be a gentleman: —
Perpend my words, O signieur Dew, and mark; —
O signieur Dew, thou diest on point of fox,
Except, O signieur, thou do give to me
Egregious ransome.
Pist. Moy shall not serve, I will have forty moys;
For I will fetch thy rim 3 out at thy throat;
In drops of crimson blood.
Fr. Sol. Est il impossible d'eschapper la force de ton bras.
Pist. Brass, cur!
Oferst me brass?
Fr. Sol. O, pardonnez moy!
Pist. Say'st thou me so? is that a ton of moys? —
Come hither, boy; Ask me this slave in French,
What is his name.
Boy. Ecoutez; Comment estes vous appelé?
Fr. Sol. Monseigneur le Fer.
Pist. Master Fer, I'll fer him, and firk 6 him, and ferret him: — discuss the same in French unto him.
Boy. I do not know the French for fer, and ferret, and firk.
Pist. Bid him prepare, for I will cut his throat.
Fr. Sol. Que dit il, Monseigneur?
Boy. Il me commande de vous dire que vous faites vous prest; car ce soldat ici est disposé toute a cette heure de couper votre gorge.
Pist. Ouy, couper gorge, par may foy, pesant.
Unless thou give me crowns, brave crowns;
Or mangled shalt thou be by this my sword.
Fr. Sol. O, je vous supplie pour l'amour de Dieu, me pardonneur! Je suis gentilhomme de bonne maison:
gardes ma vin, et je vous donneray deux cents escus.
Pist. What are his words?
Boy. He prays you to save his life: he is a gentleman of a good house; and, for his ransome, he will give you two hundred crowns.
Pist. Tell him, — my fury shall abate, and I
The crowns we will take.
3 Vanguard.
4 An old cant word for a sword, so called from a famous sword cutter of the name of Fox.
5 The disphragm.
6 Chastise.

Fr. Sol. Petit monsieur, que dit-il?
Boy. Encore qu'il est contre son jurement, de pardonnier aucun prisonnier; neantmoins, pour les escus que vous l'avez promis, il est content de vous donner la liberté, le franchissement.
Fr. Sol. Sur mes genoux, je vous donne mille remerciements: et je me'sstime heureux que je suis tombé etreain les mains d'un chevalier, je pense, le plus brave, valiant, et très distingué seigneur d'Angleterre.
Pist. Expound unto me, boy.
Boy. He gives you, upon his knees, a thousand thanks: and he esteemes himself happy that he hath fallen into the hands of (as he thinks) the most brave, valorous, and thrice-worthy signeur of England.
Pist. As I suck blood, I will some mercy shew. —
Follow me, cur. [Exit Pistol.
Boy. Suivez vous le grand capitaine.

[Exit French Soldier.
I did never know so full a voice issue from so empty a heart: but the saying is true, — The empty vessel makes the greatest sound. Bardolph, and Nym, had ten times more valour than this roaring devil i'the old play, that every one may pare his nails with a wooden dagger; and they are both hanged; and so would this be, if he durst steal any thing adventurously. I must stay with the lackeys, with the luggage of our camp: the French might have a good prey of us, if he knew of it; for there is none to guard it but boys. [Exit.

SCENE V. — Another Part of the Field of Battle.

Alarums. Enter Dauphin, Orleans, Bourbon,
Constable, Rambures, and others.
Con. O diable!
Orl. O seigneur! — le jour est perdu, tout est perdu!
Dau. Mort de ma vie! all is confounded, all!
Reproach and everlasting shame
Sits mocking in our plumes. — O meschante fortune!
Do not run away. [A short Alarum.
Con. Why all our ranks are broke.
Dau. O perdurable? shame! — let's stab our-

Be these the wretches that we play'd at dice for?
Orl. Is this the king we sent to for his ransome?
Bour. Shame, and eternal shame, nothing but shame!
Let us die instant: Once more back again;
And he that will not follow Bourbon now,
Let him go hence, with shame and infamy.
Con. Disorder, that hath spoil'd us, friend us now!
Let us, in heaps, go offer up our lives
Unto these English, or else die with fame.
Orl. We are enough, yet living in the field,
To smother up the English in our thongs,
If any order might be thought upon.
Bour. The devil take order now; I'll to the throng;
Let life be short; else, shame will be too long.
[Exeunt.

SCENE VI. — Another Part of the Field.

Alarums. Enter King Henry, and Forces; Exeter, and others.
K. Hen. Well have we done, thrice valiant countrymen:
But all's not done, yet keep the French the field,
7 Lasting.
Eec. The duke of York commends him to your majesty.

K. Hen. Lives he, good uncle? thrice, within this hour,
I saw him down; thrice up again, and fighting;
From helmet to the spur, all blood he was.

Eec. In which array, (brave soldier,) doth he lie,
Larding the plain: and by his bloody side,
(Yoke-fellow to his honour-owing wounds,)
The noble earl of Suffolk also lies,
Suffolk first died: and York, all haggled over,
Comes to him, where in gore he lay insep't, And takes him by the beard; kisses the gashes,
That bloodily did yawn upon his face;
And cries aloud, — Tarry, dear cousin Suffolk!
My soul shall thine keep company to heaven:
Tarry, sweet soul, for mine, then fly a-breast;
As, in this glorious and well-fought field,
We kept together in our chivalry!
Upon these words I came, and cheer'd him up:
He smil'd me in the face, raught 9 me his hand, And, with a feeble gripe, says, — Dear my lord,
Commend my service to my sovereign.
So did he turn, and over Suffolk's neck.
He threw his wounded arm, and kiss'd his lips;
And so, espous'd to death, with blood he seal'd
A testament of noble-ending love.
The pretty and sweet manner of it forc'd
Those waters from me, which I would have stopp'd
But I had not so much of man in me,
But all my mother came into mine eyes,
And gave me up to tears.

K. Hen. I blame you not;
For, hearing this, I must perforce compound
With mistful eyes, or they will issue too. —

But, hark! what new alarum is this same?
The French have reinforce'd their scatter'd men:
Then every soldier kill his prisoner;
Give the word through.

SCENE VII. Another Part of the Field.

Alarums. Enter Fluellen and Gower.

Flu. Kill the poys and the luggage! 'tis expressly against the law of arms: 'tis asarrant a piece of knavery, mark you now, as can be offer'd in the 'orld: In your conscience now, is it not?

Gow. 'Tis certain, there's not a boy left alive;
and the cowardly rascals, that ran from the battle,
have done this slaughter: besides, they have burned and carried away all that was in the king's tent;
wherefore the king, most worthy, hath caused every soldier to cut his prisoner's throat. O, 'tis a gallant king!

Flu. Ay, he was born at Monmouth, captain Gower. What call you the town's name, where Alexander the pig was born?

Gow. Alexander the great.

Flu. Why, I pray you, is not pig, great? The pig, or the great, or the mighty, or the huge, or the magnanimous, are all one reckonings, save the phrase is a little variations.

Gow. I think, Alexander the great was born in Macedon; his father was called — Philip of Macdon: as I take it.

Flu. I think it is in Macedon, where Alexander is born. I tell you, captain, — If you look in the maps of the 'orld, I warrant, you shall find, in the comparisons between Macedon and Monmouth, that the situations, look you, is both alike. There is a river in Macedon; and there is also moreover a river at Monmouth: it is called Wye, at Monmouth; but it is out of my prains, what is the name of the other river; but 'tis all one, 'tis so like as my fingers is to my fingers, and there is salmons in both. If you mark Alexander's life well, Harry of Monmouth's life is come after it indifferent well; for there is figures in all things. Alexander, you know, in his rages, and his furies, and his wrath, and his choler, and his moods, and his displeasures,
and his indignations, and also being a little intoxicates in his prains, did, in his ales and his angers, look you, kill his pest friend, Clytus.

Gow. Our king is not like him in that; he never killed any of his friends.

Flu. It is not well done, mark you now, to take tales out of my mouth, ere it is made an end and finished. I speak but in the figures and comparisons of it: As Alexander is kill his friend Clytus, being in his ales and his cups; so also Harry Monmouth, being in his right wits and his gout judgments, is turn away the fat knight with the great pelly-doublet: he was full of jests, and gipes, and knavesies, and cockes; I am forget his name.

Gow. Sir John Falstaff.

Flu. That is he: I can tell you there is gout meu born at Monmouth.

Gow. Here comes his majesty

Alarum. Enter King Henry, with a Part of the English Forces; Warwick, Gloster, Exeter,
and others.

K. Hen. I was not angry since I came to France
Until this instant. — Take a trumpet, herald;
Ride thou unto the horseman on yon hill;
If they will fight with us, bid them come down,
Or void the field; they do offend our sight;
If they'll do neither, we will come to them;
And make them skirr'd away as swift as stones
Enforced from the old Assyrian slings:
Besides, we'll cut the throats of those we have;
And not a man of them, that we shall take,
Shall taste our mercy: — Go, and tell them so.

Exeunt Montjoy.

Exe. Here comes the herald of the French, my liege.

Glo. His eyes are humbler than they us'd to be.

K. Hen. How now, what means this, herald?
know'st thou not,
That I have fin'd these bones of mine for ransom?
Com'st thou again for ransom?

Montjoy. No, great king: I come to thee for charitable licence,
That we may wander o'er this bloody field,
To book our dead, and then to bury them;
To sort our nobles from our common men;
For many of our princes (wro the while!)
Lie drownd'd and soak'd in mercenary blood;
(Do so our vulgar drench their peasant limbs
In blood of princes;) and their wounded steeds
Fret fetlock deep in gore, and, with wild rage,
Yerk out their armed heels at their dead masters,
Killing them twice. O, give us leave, great king,
To view the field in safety, and dispose
Of their dead bodies.

* Scour.
SCENE VII.

K. Hen. I tell thee truly, herald, I know not, if the day be ours or no; for yet a many of your horsemen peer, and gallop o'er the field.

Mont. The day is yours.

K. Hen. Praised be God, and not our strength for it!—

What is this castle call'd, that stands hard by?

Mont. They call it — Agincourt.

K. Hen. Then call we this — the field of Agincourt, fought on the day of Crispin Crispianus.

Flu. Your grandfather of famous memory, an't please your majesty, and your great uncle Edward, the plack prince of Wales, as I have read in the chronicles, fought a most brave pattlehere in France.

K. Hen. They did, Fluellen.

Flu. Your majesty says very true: if your majesty is remembered of it, the Welshmen did gout service in a garden where leeks did grow, wearing leeks in their Monmouth caps; which your majesty knows, to this hour is an honourable padge of the service; and, I do believe, your majesty takes no scorn to wear the leek upon saint Tavy's day.

K. Hen. I wear it for a memorable honour:

For I am Welsh, you know, good countryman.

Flu. All the water in Wye cannot wash your majesty's Welsh blood out of your body, I can tell you that: Got ples it and preserve it, as long as it pleases his grace, and his majesty too!

K. Hen. Thanks, good my countryman.

Flu. I am your majesty's countryman, I care not who know it; I will confess it to all the 'orld: I need not to be ashamed of your majesty, so long as your majesty is an honest man.

K. Hen. God keep meso — our heralds go withhim. Bring me just notice of the numbers dead On both our parts. — Call yonder fellow hither.

[Points to Williams. Execute Montjoy and others.

Exe. Soldier, you must come to the king.

K. Hen. Soldier, why wear'st thou that glove in thy cap?

Will. An't please your majesty, 'tis the gage of one that I should fight withal, if he be alive.

K. Hen. An Englishman?

Will. An't please your majesty, a rascal, that swagger'd with me last night: who, if 'tis a live, and ever dare to challenge this glove, I have sworn to take him a box o' the ear: or, if I can see my glove in his cap, (which he swore, as he was a soldier, he would wear, if alive,) I will strike it out soundly.

K. Hen. What think you, captain Fluellen? Is it fit this soldier keep his oath?

Flu. He is a craven 1 and a villain else, an't please your majesty, in my conscience.

K. Hen. It may be, his enemy is a gentleman of great sort, quite from the answer of his degree.

Flu. Though he be as goot a gentleman as the devil is, as Lucifer and Beelzebub himself, it is necessary, look your grace, that he keep his vow and his oath: if he be perjured, see you now, his reputation is as arrant a villain, and a Jack-sauce 2, as ever his plack shoe trod upon the earth, in my conscience.

K. Hen. Then keep thy vow, sirrah, when thou meet'st the fellow.

Will. So I will, my liege, as I live.

K. Hen. Who servest thou under?

Will. Under captain Gower, my liege.

Flu. Gower is a goot captain: and is good knowledge and literature in the wars.

K. Hen. Call him hither to me, soldier.

Will. I will, my liege.

[Exit. K. Hen. Here, Fluellen; wear thou this favour for me, and stick it in thy cap: When Alençon and myself were down together, I plucked this glove from his helm: if any man challenge this, he is a friend to Alençon, and an enemy to our person; if thou encounter any such, apprehend him, an thou dost love me.

Flu. Your grace does me as great honours as can be desired in the hearts of his subjects: I would fain see the man, that has but two legs, that shall find himself aggrieved at this glove, that is all; but I would fain see it once.

K. Hen. Knowest thou Gower?

Flu. He is my dear friend, an please you.

K. Hen. Pray thee, go seek him, and bring him to my tent.

Flu. I will fetch him.

Follow Fluellen closely at the heels:
The glove, which I have given him for a favour, May, haply, purchase him a box o' the ear;
It is the soldier's; I, by bargain, should Wear it myself. — Follow, good cousin Warwick; If that the soldier strike him, (as I judge) By his blunt bearing, he will keep his word,
Some sudden mischief may arise of it;
For I do know Fluellen valiant,
And, touch'd with choler, hot as gunpowder,
And quickly will return an injury:
Follow, and see there be no harm between them. — Go you with me, uncle of Exeter. — [Exeunt.

SCENE VIII. — Before King Henry's Pavilion.

Enter Gower and Williams.

Will. I warrant, it is to knight you, captain.

Enter Fluellen.

Flu. Captain, I peseech you now, come apace to the king: there is more goot toward you, peradventure, than is in your knowledge to dream of.

Will. Sir, know you this glove?

Flu. Know the glove; I know the glove is a goot. Will. I know this; and thus I challenge it.

[Strikes him.

Flu. 'Shlud, an arrant traitor, as any's in the universal'orld, or in France, or in England. Gow. How now, sir? you villain!

Will. Do you think I'll be forsworn?

Flu. Stand away, captain Gower; I will give treason his payment into plows, I warrant you.

Will. I am no traitor.

Flu. That's a lie in thy throat. — I charge you in his majesty's name, apprehend him; he's a friend of the duke of Alençon's.

Enter Warwick and Gostler.

War. How now, how now! what's the matter?

Flu. My lord of Warwick, here is (praised be Got for it!) a most contagious treason come to light, look you, as you shall desire in a summer's day. Here is his majesty.

Enter King Henry and Exeter.

K. Hen. How now, what's the matter?
KING HENRY V.

Enter Chorus.

Chor. Vouchsafe to those that have not read the story, What may prompt them: and of such as have, I humbly pray them to admit the excuse Of time, of numbers, and due course of things, Which cannot in their huge and proper life

Enter John duke of Orleans, nephew to the king;

John duke of Bourbon, and lord Boucicaut; Of other lords, and barons, knights, and squires, Full fifteen hundred, besides common men.

K. Hen. This note doth tell me of ten thousand French, That in the field lie slain: of princes in this number, And nobles bearing banners, there lie dead, One hundred twenty-six: added to these, Of knights, squires, and gallant gentlemen, Eight thousand and four hundred: of the which, Five hundred were but yesterday dub'd knights: So that, in these ten thousand they have lost, There are but sixteen hundred mercenaries; The rest—princes, barons, lords, knights, squires, And gentlemen of blood and quality, The names of those their nobles that lie dead, — Charles De-la-bret, high constable of France; Jaques of Chatillon, admiral of France; The master of the cross-bows, lord Rambures; Great-master of the French, the brave sir Guisichard Dauphin; John duke of Alençon; Antony duke of Brabant, The brother to the duke of Burgundy; And Edward duke of Bar; of lusty earls, Grandpré, and Roussel, Fauconberg, and Foix, Beaumont, and Marle, Vaudemont, and Lestrale, Here was a royal fellowship of death!

Where is the number of our English dead?

Edward the duke of York, the earl of Suffolk, Sir Richard Ketley, Davy Gam, esquire; None else of name: and, of all other men, But five-and-twenty. O God, thy arm was here, And not to us, but to thy arm alone, Ascribe we all. — When, without stragagement, But in plain shock, and even play of battle, Was ever known so great and little loss, On one part and on the other? — Take it, Lord, For it is only thine!

Exe. 'Tis wonderful!

K. Hen. Come, go we in procession to the village: And be it death proclaimed through our host, To boast of this, or take that praise from God, Which is his only.

Flu. Is it not lawful, an please your majesty, to tell how many is killed?

K. Hen. Yes, captain, but with this acknowledgment, That God fought for us.

Flu. Yes, my conscience, he did us great goot.

K. Hen. Do we all holy rites; Let there be sung Non nobis, and Te Deum, The dead with charity enclos'd in clay, We'll then to Calais; and to England then; Where ne'er from France arriv'd more happy men.

[Exeunt.]
Scene I.

Which, like a mighty whiffer 'tore the king,
Seems to prepare his way: so let him land;
And, solemnly, see him set on to London.
So swift a pace hath thought, that even now
You may imagine him upon Blackheath:
Where that his lords desire him, to have borne
His bruised helmet, and his bended sword,
Before him, through the city: he forbids it,
Being free from vainness and self-glorious pride;
Giving full trophy, signal, and ostent,
Quite from himself; to God. But now behold,
In the quick forge and working-house of thought,
How London doth pour out her citizens!
The mayor, and all his brethren, in best sort,—
Like to the senators of the antique Rome,
With the plebeians swarming at their heels,—
Go forth, and fetch their conquering Caesar in:
As, by a lower but by loving likelihood,
Were now the general of our gracious empress
(As, in good time, he may,) from Ireland coming,
Bringing rebellion broached on his sword,
How many would the peaceful city quit,
Towelcome him? much more, and much more cause,
Did they this Harry. Now in London place him;
(As yet the lamentation of the French
Invites the king of England's stay at home:—
The emperor's coming in behalf of France,
To order peace between them;) and omit
All the occurrences, whatever chanc'd,
Till Harry's back-return again to France;
There must we bring him; and myself have play'd
The interim, by remembering you — 'tis past.
Then brook abridgement; and your eyes advance
After your thoughts, straight back again to France.

Exit.

Scene I. — France. An English Court of Guard.

Enter Fluellen and Gower.

Gow. Nay, that's right; but why wear you your leek to-day? Saint Davey's day is past.

Flu. There are occasions and causes why and wherefore in all things; I will tell you, as my friend, captain Gower. The rascally, beggarly, bragging knave, Pistol,—which you and yourself, and all the 'orld, know to be no better than a fellow, look you now, of no merits,—he is come to me, and prings me pread and salt yesterday, look you, and bid me eat my leek: it was in a place where I could not breed no contentions with him; but I will be so bold as to wear it in my cap till I see him once again, and then I will tell him a little piece of my desires.

Enter Pistol.

Pist. Ha! art thou Bedlam? dost thou thirst, base Trojan,
To have me fold up Parac's fatal web?
Hence! I am qualmish at the smell of leek.

Flu. Pessech you heartily, scourvy knave, at my desires, and my requests, and my petitions, to eat, look you, this leek; because, look you, you do not love it, nor your affections, and your appetites, and your digestions, does not agree with it, I would desire you to eat it.

Pist. Not for Cadwaller and all his goats.

Flu. There is one goat for you. [Strikes him.] Will be so goat, scald knave, as eat it?

Pist. Base Trojan, thou shalt die.

Flu. You say very true, scald knave, when Gort's will is: I will desire you to live in the mean time, and eat your victuals; come, there is saucy for it. [Striking him again.] You called me yesterday, mountain-square; but I will make you to-day a squire of low degree. I pray you, fall to; if you can mock a leek, you can eat a leek.

Gow. Enough, captain; you have astonished him.

Flu. I say, I will make him eat some part of my leek, or I will peat his pate four days: — Pite, I pray you; it is goat for your green wound, and your bloody coxcomb.

Pist. Must I bite?

Flu. Yes, certainly; and out of doubt, and out of questions too, and ambiguities.

Pist. By this leek, I will most horribly revenge; I eat, and eke I swear —

Flu. Eat, I pray you: Will you have some more sauce to your leek? there is not enough leek to swear by.

Pist. Quiet thy cudgel; thou dost sec, I eat.

Flu. Much goat do you, scald knave, heartily. Nay, 'pray you, throw none away; the skin is goat for your proven coxcomb. When you take occasions to see leeks hereafter, I pray you mock at them; that is all.

Pist. Good.

Flu. Ay, leeks is goat: — Hold you, there is a goat to heal your pate.

Pist. Me a great.

Flu. Yes, verily, and in truth, you shall take it; or I have another leek in my pocket, which you shall eat.

Pist. I take thy goat, in earnest of revenge.

Flu. If I owe you any thing, I will pay you in cudgels; you shall be a woodmonger, and buy nothing of me but cudgels. God be wi' you, and keep you, and heal your pate.

[Exit.

Pist. All hell shall stir for this.

Gow. Go, go; you are a counterfeit cowardly knave. Will you mock at an ancient tradition, — begun upon an honourable respect, and worn as a memorable trophy of predeceased valour,— and dare not avouch in your deeds any of your words? I have seen you gleeking 9 and galling at this gentleman twice or thrice. You thought, because he could not speak English in the native garb, he could not therefore handle an English cudgel: you find it otherwise; and henceforth, let a Welsh correction teach you a good English condition. 1 Fare ye well.

[Exit.

Pist. Dost fortune play the huswife 8 with me now?

News have I, that my Nell is dead i' the spital, 3 And there my rendezvous is quite cut off.

Old I do wax; and from my weary limbs
Honour is cudgell'd. Well, I will turn my soul
And something hau to cutpurse of quick hand.
To England will I steal, and there I'll steal:
And patches will I get unto these scars,
And swear, I got them in the Gallia wars.

[Exit.

SCENE II. — Troyes in Champagne. An Apartment in the French King's Palace.

Enter at one door, King Henry, Bedford, Glos- ter, Exeter, Warwick, Westmoreland, and other Lords : of another, the French King, Queen Isabel, the Princess Katharine, Lords, Ladies, &c. the Duke of Burgundy, and his Train.

K. Hen. Peace to this meeting, wherefore we are met!

Unto our brother France, — and to our sister, Health and fair time of day: — joy and good wishes To our most fair and princely cousin Katharine; And (as a branch and member of this royalty, By whom this great assembly is contriv'd,) We do salute you, duke of Burgundy; — And, princes French, and peers, health to you all! Fr. King. Right joyous are we to behold your face, Most worthy brother England; fairly met: — So are you, princes English, every one. Q. Isa. So happy be the issue, brother England, Of this good day, and of this gracious meeting, As we are now glad to behold your eyes; Your eyes, which hitherto have borne in them Against the French, that met them in their bent, The fatal balls of murdering basiliaks; The venom of such looks, we fairly hope, Have lost their quality; and that this day Shall change all griefs, and quarrels, into love.

K. Hen. To cry amen to that, thus we appear. Q. Isa. You English princes all, I do salute you. Bur. My duty to you both, on equal love, Great kings of France and England! That I have laboured.

With all my wits, my pains, and strong endeavours, To bring your most imperial majesties Unto this bar* and royal interview, Your mightiness on both parts best can witness, Since them my office hath so far prevail'd, That face to face, and royal eye to eye, You have congrued; let it not disgrace me, If I demand, before this royal view. What rub, or what impediment, there is, Why, that the naked, poor, and mangled peace, Dear nurse of arts, plenties, and joyful births, Should not, in this best garden of the world, Our fertile France, put up her lovely visage? Alas! she hath from France too long been chas'd; And all her husbandry doth lie on heaps, Corrupting in its own fertility, Her vine, the merry cheerer of the heart, Unpruned dies: her hedges even-pleached, — Like prisoners wildly over-grown with hair, Put forth disorder'd twigs: her fallow leas, The darnel, hemlock, and rank fumitory, Both root upon; while that the curler roots, That should deracinate* such savagery: The even mead, that erst brought sweetly forth The fleckled cowslip, burnet, and green clover, Wanting the scythe, all uncorrected, rank, Conceive by idleness; and nothing teems, But hateful docks, rough thistles, keckskies, burs, Losing both beauty and utility. And as our vineyards, fallows, meads, and hedges, Defective in their natures, grow to wildness; Even so our houses, and ourselves, and children, Have lost, or do not learn, for want of time, The sciences that should become our country; But grow, like savages, — as soldiers will, That nothing do but meditate on blood, — To swearing, and stern looks, diffus'd attire, And every thing that seems unnatural, Which to reduce into our former favour,? You are assembled: and my speech entreats, That I may know the let,5 why gentle peace Should not expel these inconveniences, And bless us with her former qualities.

Q. Isa. If, duke of Burgundy, you would the peace,
Whose want gives growth to the imperfections
Which you have cited, you must buy that peace
With full accord to all our just demands;
Whose tenours and particular effects
You have, enschedul'd briefly, in your hands. Bur. The king hath heard them; to the which, as yet,
There is no answer made.

K. Hen. Well then, the peace,
Which you before so urg'd, lies in his answer.
Fr. King. I have but with a cursory eye
O'er-glanced the articles: pleaseth your grace
To appoint some of your council presently
To sit with us once more, with better heed
To re-survey them, we will, suddenly,
Pass our accept, and peremptory answer.

K. Hen. Brother, we shall. — Go, uncle Exeter, — And brother Clarence, — and you, brother Gloster, — Warwick, — and Huntington, — go with the king; And take with you free power to ratify, Augment, or alter, as your wisdoms best Shall see advantageous for our dignity, Any thing in, or out of, our demands; And we'll consign thereunto. Will you, fair sister, Go with the princes, or stay here with us?

Q. Isa. Our gracious brother, I will go with them; Haply, a woman's voice may do some good, When articles, too nicely urg'd, be stood on.

K. Hen. Yet leave our cousin Katharine here with us;
She is our capital demand, compris'd
Within the fore-ram of our articles.

Q. Isa. She hath good leave.

[Exeunt all but Henry, Katharine, and her Gentlewoman.

K. Hen. O fair Katharine, and most fair! Will your touchsave to teach a soldier terms, Such as will enter at a lady's ear, And plead his love-suit to her gentle heart?

Kath. Your majesty shall mock at me; I cannot speak your England.

K. Hen. O fair Katharine, if you will love me soundly with your French heart, I will be glad to hear you confess it brokenly with your English tongue. Do you like me, Kate?

Kath. Pardonnez moi, I cannot tell vat is — like me.

K. Hen. An angel is like you, Kate; and you are like an angel.

Kath. Que dit-il? que je suis semblable à les anges? Alice. Ouy, vrayement, (sauf votre grace) ainsi dit-il.

K. Hen. I said so, dear Katharine; and I must not blush to affirm it.

Kath. O! les langues des hommes sont pleines des tromperies.

K. Hen. What says she, fair one? that the tongues of men are full of deceits?

* Barrier. 5 Force up by the roots.
6 Extravagant. 7 Appearance. 8 Hinderance.
Alice. Dry: will de tongue may be full of deceit: dat is de princess.

K. Hen. Tha princess is the abetter English woman, 1. saith, Kate, my woods fit for thy understanding: allthans thou canst not speak no better English; for, if thou couldst, thou wouldst find me such a plain king, that thou wouldst think, I sold my far to buy my crown. I know no ways to mince it in love, but directly to say—I love you: then, if you urge me further than to say—Do you, in faith? I wear out my suit. Give me your answer; faith, do; and so clap hands and a bargain: How say you, lady?

Kath. Sauf votre honnête, me understand well.

K. Hen. Marry, if you would put me to verses, or to dance for your sake, Kate, why undid me: for the one, I have neither words nor measure; and for the other, I have no strength in measure, yet reasonable measure in strength. If I could win a lady at leap-frog, or by vaulting into my saddle with my armour on my back, under the correction of bragging be it spoken, I should quickly leap for a wife. Or, if I might buffet for my love, or bound my horse for her favours, I could lay on like a butcher, and sit like a jack-an-apes, never off: but, I cannot look greenly, nor gasp out my eloquence, nor have no cunning in protestation; only downright, which I never use till urged, nor never break for urging. If thou canst love a fellow of this temper, Kate, whose face is not worth sunburning, that never looks in a glass; as yet he is not, upon any thing he sees there, let thine eye be thy cook. I speak to thee plain soldier: If thou canst love me for this, take me: if not, to say to thee—that I shall die, is true; but—for thy love, no; yet I love thee too. And while thou livest, dear Kate, take a fellow of plain and uncoid 2 constancy; for he perforce must do thee right, because he hath not the gift to woo in other places: for these fellows of infinite tongue, that can rhyme themselves into ladies' favours—they do always reason themselves out again. What! a speaker is but a prater; a rhyme is but a ballad. A good leg will fall; 3 a straight back will stoop; a black beard will turn white: two breasts will grow bald; a fair face will wither; a full eye will wax hollow: but a good heart, Kate, is the sun and moon; or rather the sun, and not the moon; for it shines bright, and never changes, but keeps his course truly. If thou would have such a one, take me: And take me, take a soldier; take a soldier, take a king: And what sayest thou then to my love? speak, my fair, and fairly, I pray thee.

Kath. Is it possible dat I should love de enemy of France?

K. Hen. No; it is not possible, you should love the enemy of France, Kate; but in loving me, you should love the friend of France; for I love France so well, that I will part with a village of it; I will have it all mine: and, Kate, when France is mine, and I am yours, then yours is France, and you are mine.

Kath. I cannot tell vat is dat.

K. Hen. No, Kate? I will tell thee in French; which, I am sure, will hang upon my tongue like a new-married wife about her husband's neck, hardly to be shook off. Quand j'ay la possession de France, 9 In dancing. 1 i.e. Like a young lover, awkwardly. 2 He means, resembling a plain piece of metal, which has not yet received any impression. 4 Fall away.

& quand vous avez la possession de ma, (let me see, what then? Saint Dennis be my speed!) — donc votre est France, & vous estes mie &e. It is as easy for me, Kate, to conquer the kingdom, as to speak the most uncouth French: I shall never move thee in French, unless it be to laugh at me.

Kath. Sauf votre honneur, le Francois que vous parlez, est meilleur que l'Anglois lequel je parle.

K. Hen. No, faith, 'is not, Kate: but thy speaking of my tongue, and I thine, most truly falsely, must needs be granted to be much at one. But, Kate, dost thou understand thus much English? Canst thou love me?

Kath. I cannot tell.

K. Hen. Can any of your neighbours tell, Kate? I'll ask them. Come, I know thou lovest me: and at night when you come into your closet, you'll question this gentlewoman about me; and I know, Kate, you will to her, dispraise those parts in me, that you love with your heart: but, good Kate, mock me mercifully; the rather, gentle princess, because I love thee cruelly. How answer you, la plus belle Catharine du monde, mon tres chere et divine desesse?

Kath. Your majeste' ave fausse French enough to deceive de most sage demoiselle dat is en France.

K. Hen. Nay, fye upon my false French! By mine honour, in true English, I love thee, Kate: by which honour I dare not swear, thou lovest me; yet my blood begins to flatter me that thou dost, notwithstanding the unmeaning and untempering office of my visage. Now brethrew my father's ambition! he was always thinking of civil wars; therefore was I created with a stubborn outside, with an aspect of iron, that, when I come to woo ladies, I fright them. But, in faith, Kate, the elder I wax, the better I shall appear: my shape is, that old age, that ill-layer up of beauty, can do no more spoil upon my face: thou hast me, if thou hast me, at the worst; and thou shalt wear me, if thou wear me, better and better; and therefore tell me, most fair Katharine, will you have me? Put off your maiden blushes; avouch the thoughts of your heart with the looks of an empress; take me by the hand, and say — Harry of England, I am thine: which word thou shalt no sooner bless mine ear withal, but I will tell thee aloud — England is thine. Ireland is thine, France is thine, and Henry Plantagenet is thine who, though I speak it before his face, if he be not fellow with the best king, thou shalt find the best king of good fellows. Come, your answer in broken music; for thy voice is musick, and thy English broken; therefore, queen of all, Katharine, break thy mind to me in broken English, Wilt thou have me?

Kath. Dat is, as it shall please de ray mon pere.

K. Hen. Nay, it will please him well, Kate; it shall please him, Kate.

Kath. Den it shall also content me.

K. Hen. Upon that I will kiss your hand, and I call you — my queen.

Kath. Laissez, mon seigneur, laissez, laissez: ma joy, je ne vous point que vous abaissez votre grandeur, en baissant la main d'une votre indifferent serviteur; excuses moy, je vous supplie, mon tres puissant seigneur.

K. Hen. Then I will kiss your lips, Kate.

Kath. Les dames, & demourbeis, pour estoise baisoies devant leur mocees, il n'est pas la costume de France.

K. Hen. Madam my interpreter, what says she?
Alice. Dat it is not be de fashion pour les ladies of France. — I cannot tell what is baiser, en English.
K. Hen. To kiss.
Alice. Your majesty entendre bettre que moy.
K. Hen. It is not the fashion for the maids in France to kiss before they are married, would she say?
Alice. Chus, wayment.
K. Hen. O, Kate, nice customs curt'sy to great kings. Dear Kate, you and I cannot be confined within the weak list of a country's fashion: we are the makers of manners, Kate; and the liberty that follows our places, stops the mouths of all faults; as I will do yours, for upholding the nice fashion of your country, in denying me a kiss; therefore, patiently, and yielding. [Kissing her.] You have witchcraft in your lips, Kate: there is more eloquence in a sugar touch of them, than in the tongues of the French council; and they should sooner persuade Harry of England, than a general petition of monarchs. Here comes your father.

Enter the French King and Queen, Burgundy, Bedford, Gloster, Exeter, Westmoreland, and other French and English Lords.

Bur. God save your majesty! my royal cousin, teach you our princess English?
K. Hen. I would have her learn, my fair cousin, how perfectly I love her; and that is good English.
Bur. Is she not apt?
K. Hen. Our tongue is rough, coz; and my condition is not smooth: so that, having neither the voice nor the heart of flattery about me, I cannot so conjure up the spirit of love in her, that he will appear in his true likeness. Shall Kate be my wife?
Fr. King. So please you:—we have consented to all terms of reason.
K. Hen. Is't so, my lords of England?
West. The king hath granted every article: His daughter, first; and then, in sequel, all, According to their firm proposed natures.
Exc. Only, he hath not yet subscribed this:— Where your majesty demands,—That the king of France having any occasion to write for matter of grant, shall name your highness in this form, and with this addition, in French,—Notre très cher fils Henry roy d'Angleterre, héritier de France; and thus in Latin,—Preclarissimus filius noster Henricus, regis Angliae, & heres Franciae.
Fr. King. Nor this I have not, brother, so denied, But your request shall make me let it pass.

4 Slight barrier.
5 Temper.

K. Hen. I pray you, then, in love and dear alliance, Let that one article rank with the rest: And, thereupon, give me your daughter.
Fr. King. Take her, fair son; and from her blood raise up Issue to me: that the contending kingdoms Of France and England, whose very shores look pale With envy of each other's happiness, May cease their hatred; and this dear conjunction Plant neighbourhood and Christian-like accord In their sweet bosoms, that never war advance His bleeding sword 'twixt England and fair France.
All. Amen!
K. Hen. Now welcome, Kate:—and bear me witness all,
That here I kiss her as my sovereign queen.

Q. Isa. God, the best maker of all marriages, Combine your hearts in one, your realms in one! As man and wife, being two, are one in love, So be there 'twixt your kingdoms such a spousal, That never may ill office, or fell jealousy, Which troubles oft the bed of blessed marriage, Thrust in between the portion of these kingdoms, To make divorce of their incorporate league; That English may as French, French Englishmen, Receive each other!—God speak this Amen; All. Amen!
K. Hen. Prepare we for our marriage:—on which day, My lord of Burgundy, we'll take your oath, And all the peers', for surety of our leagues. — Then shall I swear to Kate, and you to me! And may our oaths well kept and prosperous be!

[Exeunt.

SCENE, partly in England, and partly in France.
SCENE I.—Westminster Abbey.

Dread March. Corpse of King Henry the Fifth discovered, lying in state; attended on by the Dukes of Bedford, Gloster, and Exeter; the Earl of Warwick, the Bishop of Winchester, Heralds, &c.

Bed. Hung be the heavens with black, yield day to night! Comets, importing change of times and states, Brandish your crystal tresses in the sky; And with them scourge the bad revolting stars, That have consented unto Henry’s death! Henry the Fifth, too famous to live long! England ne’er lost a king of so much worth.

Glo. England ne’er had a king until his time. Virtue he had, deserving to command; His brandish’d sword did blind men with his beams; His arms spread wider than a dragon’s wings; His sparkling eyes replete with wrathful fire, More dazzled and drove back his enemies, Than mid-day sun, fierce bent against their faces. What should I say? his deeds exceed all speech, He ne’er lift up his hand, but conquered.

Exe. We mourn in black; Why mourn we not in blood? Henry is dead, and never shall revive: Upon a wooden coffin we attend; And death’s dishonourable victory We with our stately presence glorify,
Like captives bound to a triumphant car,
What? shall we curse the planets of mishap,
That plotted thus our glory's overthrow?
Or shall we think the subtle-witted French
Conjurers and sorcerers, that, afraid of him,
By magic verses had contrived his end?

_Win._ He was a king bless'd of the King of kings.
The battles of the Lord of hosts he fought:
The church's prayers made him so prosperous.

_Glo._ None do you like but an effeminate prince,
Whom, like a school-boy, you may over-awe.

_Win._ Gloster, whate'er we like, thou art protector;
And lookest to command the prince, and realm.
Why wife is proud; she holdeth thee in awe,
More than religion or than churchmen may.

_Glo._ Name not religion, for thou lovest the flesh,
And ne'er throughout the year to church thou go'st,
Except it be to pray against thy foes.

_Bed._ Cease, cease, these jars, and rest your minds in peace!

Let's to the altar: — Heralds, wait on us: —
Instead of gold, we'll offer up our arms;
Since arms avail not, now that Henry's dead.

_Posterity._ await for wretched years,
When at their mothers' moist eyes babes shall suck;
Our isle be made a nourish 2 of salt tears,
And none but women left to wail the dead.

_Henry the Fifth!_ thy ghost I invoke;
Prosper this realm, keep it from civil broils!
Combat with adverse planets in the heavens!
A far more glorious star thy soul will make,
Than Julius Caesar, or bright —

_Enter a Messenger._

_Mess._ My honourable lords, health to you all!
Sad tidings bring I to you out of France,
Of loss, of slaughter, and discomfiture:
Guizé, Champagne, Rheims, Orleans,
Paris, Guysoys, Poictiers, are all quite lost.

_Bed._ What say'st thou, man, before dead Henry's corse?
Speak softly; or the loss of those great towns
Will make him burst his lead, and rise from death.

_Glo._ Is Paris lost? is Rouen yielded up?
If Henry were recall'd to life again,
These news would cause him once more yield the ghost,

_Exe._ How were they lost? what treachery was us'd?

_Mess._ No treachery; but want of men and money.
Among the soldiers this is muttered, —
That here you maintain several factions;
And, whilst a field should be despatch'd and fought,
You are disputing of your generals.
One would have l'ing'ring wars with little cost;
Another would fly swift, but wanteth wings;
A third man thinks, without expense at all,
By guileful fair words peace may be obtain'd.
Awake, awake, English nobility!
Let not sloth dim your honours, new-begot:
Cropp'd are the flower-de-luces in your arms;
Of England's coat one half is cut away.

_Exe._ Were our tears wanting to this funeral,
Those tigers would call forth her flowing tides.

_Bed._ Me they concern; regent I am of France:
Give me my steel'd coat, I'll fight for France.
Away with these disgraceful wailing robes!
Wounds I will lend the French, instead of eyes,
To weep their interminable miseries. 3

1 There was a notion long prevalent, that life might be taken away by metrical charms.
2 Nurse was anciently so spelt.
3 i.e. Their miseries which have had only a short intermission.

Enter another Messenger.

_2 Mess._ Lords, view these letters, full of bad
mischance,
France is revolted from the English quite;
Except some petty towns of no import:
The dauphin Charles is crowned king in Rheims;
The bastard of Orleans with him is join'd;
Reignier, duke of Anjou, doth take his part;
The duke of Alençon fleeth to his side.

_Exe._ The dauphin crowned king! all fly to him!
O, whither shall we fly from this approach?

_Glo._ We will not fly, but to our enemies' threats: —
Bedford, if thou be slack, I'll fight it out.

_Bed._ Gloster, why doubt'st thou of my forward-
ness?
An army have I musterd in my thoughts,
Wherewith already France is over-run.

Enter a third Messenger.

_3 Mess._ My gracious lords, — to add to your laments,
Wherewith you now bedew king Henry's hearse, —
I must inform you of a dismal fight,
Betwixt the stout lord Talbot and the French.

_Win._ What! wherein Talbot overcame? is't so?
_3 Mess._ O, no; wherein lord Talbot was o'er-thrown;
The circumstance I'll tell you more at large.
The tenth of August last, this dreadful lord,
Retiring from the siege of Orleans,
Having the full scarce six thousand in his troop,
By three and twenty thousand of the French
Was round encompassed and set upon;
No leisure had he to enrank his men;
He wanted pikes to set before his archers;
Instead whereof, sharp stakcs, pluck'd out of hedges,
They pitched in the ground confusedly,
To keep the horsemen off from breaking in.
More than three hours the fight continued;
Where valiant Talbot, above human thought,
Enclosed wonders with his sword and lance.
Hundreds he sent to death, and none durst stand him;
Here, there, and every where, enrag'd he slew;
The French exclaim'd, the devil was in arms;
All the whole army stood agaz'd on him;
His soldiers, spaying his undaunted spirit,
A Talbot! a Talbot! cried out amain,
And rush'd into the bowels of the battle.
Here had the conquest fully been sealed up,
If sir John Fastolfe had not play'd the coward
He being in the vaward (place'd behind
With purpose to relieve and follow them,)
Cowardly fled, not having struck one stroke.
Hence grew the general wreck and massacre;
Enclosed were they with their enemies:
A base Wallon, to win the dauphin's grace,
Thrust Talbot with a'spear into the back;
Whom all France, with their chief assembled strength,
Durst not presume to look once in the face.

_Bed._ Is Talbot slain? then I will say myself,
For living idly here, in pomp and ease,
Whilst such a worthy leader, wanting aid,
Unto his dastard foe-men is betray'd.

_3 Mess._ O no, he lives; but is taken prisoner,
And lord Scales with him, and lord Hungerford;
Most of the rest slaughter'd, or took likewise.

_Bed._ His ransom there is none but I shall pay:
I'll hale the dauphin headlong from his throne,
His crown shall be the ransom of my friend;
Four of their lords I'll change for one of ours.

Scene II. — France. Before Orleans.

Enter CHARLES, with his Forces; ALENCON, REIGNIER, and others.

Char. Mars his true moving, even as in the heavens,
So in the earth, to this day is not known:
Late did he shine upon the English side;
Now we are victors, upon us he smiles.
What towns of any moment, but we have?
At pleasure here we lie, near Orleans;
Thewifles, the famish'd English, like pale ghosts,
Faintly besiege us one hour in a month.

Alen. They want their porridge, and their fat bull-beeves:
Either they must be diert as mules,
And have their provender tyed to their mouths,
Or piteous they will look, like drowned mice.

Reig. Let's raise the siege: Why live we idly here?
Tablet is taken, whom we want to fear:
Remaineth none but mad-brain'd Salisbury;
And he may well in fretting spend his gall,
Nor men, nor money, hath he to make war.

Char. Sound, soundralarm; we will rush on them.
Now for the honour of the fairborn French:
I him I forgive my death, that killeth me,
When he sees me go back one foot, or fly.

[Exeunt.]

Alarums; Excursions; afterwards a Retreat.

Re-enter CHARLES, ALENCON, REIGNIER, and others.

Char. Who ever saw the like? what men have I? —
Dogs! cowards! dwarsts! — I would ne'er have fled,
But that they left me 'midst my enemies.

Reig. Salisbury is a desperate homicide;
He fighteth as one weary of his life.
The other lords, like lions wanting food,
Do rush upon us as their hungry prey.

Alen. Froissard, a countryman of ours, records,
England all Oliveres and Rowlanders bred,
During the time Edward the third did reign.
More truly now may this be verified;
For none but Samsons, and Goliasses,
It sendeth forth to skirmish. One to ten!

4 i.e. The prey for which they are hungry.

Lean raw-born'd rascals! who would e'er suppose
They had such courage and audacity?

Char. Let's leave this town; for they are hair-brain'd slaves,
And hunger will enforce them to be more eager:
Of old I know them; rather with their teeth
The walls they'll tear down, than forsake the siege.

Reig. I think by some odd gimmals 5 or device,
Their arms are set, like clocks, still to strike on;
Else ne'er could they hold out so, as they do.
By my consent, we'll e'en let them alone.

Alen. Be it so.

Enter the Bastard of Orleans.

Bast. Where's the prince dauphin? I have news
for him.

Char. Bastard of Orleans, thrice welcome to us.

Bast. Methinks, your looks are sad, your cheer?
apal'd;

Hath the late overthrow wrought this offence?
Be not dismay'd, for succour is at hand:
A holy maid hither with me I bring,
Which, by a vision sent to her from heaven,
Ordain'd is to raise this tedious siege,
And drive the English forth the bounds of France.
The spirit of deep prophecy she hath,
Exceeding the nine sibyls of old Rome;
What's past, and what's to come, she can descry.
Speak, shall I call her in? Believe my words,
For they are certain and unfallible.

Char. Go, call her in: [Exit Bastard.] But,
first, to try her skill,
Reignier, stand thou as dauphin in my place:
Question her proudly, let thy looks be stern: —
By this means shall we sound what skill she hath.

[Retires.]

Enter LA PUCELLE, Bastard of Orleans, and others.

Reig. Fair maid, is't thou wilt do these wondrous feats?

Puc. Reignier, is't thou that think'st to beguile me?

Where is the dauphin? — come, come from behind;
I know thee well, though never seen before.
Be not amaz'd, there's nothing hid from me:
In private will I talk with thee apart: —
Stand back, you lords, and give us leave a while.

Reig. She takes upon her bravely at first dash.

Puc. Dauphin, I am by birth a shepherd's daughter,
My wit untrain'd in any kind of art.
Heaven, and our lady gracious, hath it pleas'd
To shine on my contemptible estate:
Lo, whilst I waited on my tender lambs,
And to sun's parching heat display'd my cheeks,
Our lady deigned to appear to me;
And, in a vision full of majesty,
Will'd me to leave my base vocation,
And free my country from calamity:
Her aid she promis'd and assur'd success:
In complete glory she reveal'd herself;
And, whereas I was black and swart before,
With those clear rays which she infused on me,
That beauty am I bless'd with, which you see.
Ask me what question thou canst possible,
And I will answer unpremeditated:

5 A gimmal is a piece of jointed work, where one piece moves within another; here it is taken at large for an engine.

6 This was not in former times a term of reproach.

Countenance.
My courage try by combat, if thou dar'st,
And thou shalt find that I exceed my sex.
Resolve on this: Thou shalt be fortunate,
If thou receive me for thy warlike mate.

Char. Thou hast astonish'd me with thy high terms;
Only this proof I'll of thy valour make,—
In single combat thou shalt buckle with me:
And, if thou vanquish'test, thy words are true;
Otherwise, I renounce all confidence.

Puc. I am prepared: here is my keen-edg'd sword,
Deck'd with five flower-de-laces on each side;
The which at Touraine, in saint Katharine's church-yard,
Out of a deal of old iron I chose forth.

Char. Then come on, damsel, I fear no woman.

Puc. And, while I live, I'll ne'er fly from a man.

[They fight.

Char. Stay, stay thy hands; thou art an Amazon,
And fightst with the sword of Deborah.

Puc. Christ's mother helps me, else I were too weak.

Char. Who'e'er helps thee, 'tis thou that must help me:
My heart and hands thou hast at once subdued.
Excellent Pucelle, if thy name be so,
Let me thy servant, and not sovereign, be;
'Tis the French dauphin sueth to thee thus.

Puc. I must not yield to any thoughts of love,
For my profession's sacred from above:
When I have chased all thy foes from hence,
Then will I think upon a recompense.

Char. Meantime, look gracious on thy prostrate thrall.

Reig. My lord, methinks, is very long in talk.

Men. He may mean more than we poor men do know.

Reig. My lord, where are you? what devise you on?
Shall we give over Orleans, or no?

Puc. Why, no, I say, distrustful recreants!
Fight till the last gasp; I will be your guard.

Char. What she says, I'll confirm; we'll fight it out.

Puc. Assign'd am I to be the English scourge.

This night the siege assuredly I'll raise:
Expect saint Martin's summer 9 halcyon days,
Since I have entered into these wars,
Glory is like a circle in the water,
Which never ceaseth to enlargement,
Till, by broad spreading, it disperse to nought.
With Henry's death, the English circle ends;
Dispersed are the glories it included.
Now am I like that proud insulting ship,
Which Caesar and his fortune bare at once.

Char. Was Mahomet inspired with a dove?
Thou with an eagle art inspired then.
Helen, the mother of great Constantine,
Nor yet saint Philip's daughters 1, were like thee.
Bright star of Venus, fall'n down on the earth,
How may I reverently worship thee?

Men. Leave off delays, and let us raise the siege.

Reig. Woman, do what thou canst to save our honors;
Drive them from Orleans, and be immortaliz'd.

Char. Presently we'll try: — Come, let's away about it :
No prophet will I trust if she prove false, [Exit

SCENE III. — London. Hill before the Tower.

Enter, at the Gates, the Duke of Gloster, with his Serving-men, in blue Coats.

Glo. I am come to survey the Tower this day;
Since Henry's death, I fear, there is conveyance.
Where be these warders, that they wait not here?
Open the gates; Gloster it is that calls.

[Servants knock.

1 Ward. [Within.] Who is there that knocks so imperiously?

2 Ward. [Within.] Who'e'er he be, you may not be let in.

Serv. Answer you so the lord protector, villains?

1 Ward. [Within.] The Lord protect him! so we answer him:
We do no otherwise than we are will'd.
Glo. Who willed you? or whose will stands, but mine?
There's none protector of the realm but I. —
Break up the gates, I'll be your warrantize:
Shall I be flouted thus by dunghill grooms?

Servants rush at the Tower Gates. Enter, to the Gates, Woodville, the Lieutenant.

Wood. [Within.] What noise is this? what traitors have we here?

Glo. Lieutenant, is it you, whose voice I hear?
Open the gates; here's Gloster, that would enter.

Wood. [Within.] Have patience, noble duke; I may not open;
The cardinal of Winchester forbids:
From him I have express commandment,
That thou, nor none of thine, shall be let in.

Glo. Faint-hearted Woodville, prizest him foreme?
Arrogant Winchester? that haughty prelate,
Whom Henry, our late sovereign, ne'er could brook?
Thou art no friend to Heaven, or to the king;
Open the gates, or I'll shut thee out shortly.

1 Serv. Open the gates unto the lord protector;
Or we'll burst them open, if that you come not quickly.

Enter Winchester, attended by a Train of Sercants in tawny Coats.

Win. How now, ambitious Humphrey? what means this?

Glo. Piel'd priest, 3 dost thou command me to be shut out?

Win. I do, thou most usurping prodict, 4
And not protector of the king or realm.

Glo. Stand back: thou manifest conspirator;
Thou that contriv'dst to murder our dead lord:
I'll canvass 5 thee in thy broad cardinal's hat,
If thou proceed in this thy insolence.

Win. Nay, stand thou back, I will not budge a foot.
Glo. I will not slay thee, but I'll drive thee back:
Thy scarlet robes, as a child's bearing-cloth
I'll use, to carry thee out of this place.

Win. Do what thou dar'st; I heard thee to thy face.

Glo. What? am I dar'd, and bearded to my face? —
Draw, men, for all this privileged place;
Blue-coats to tawny coats. Priest, beware your beard;

[Groston and his men attack the Bishop.

I mean to tug it, and to cuff you soundly:
Under my feet I stamp thy cardinal's hat;
In spite of pope or dignities of church.

Win. Gloster, thou'l answer this before the pope.

8 Be firmly persuaded of it.
9 Expect prosperity after misfortune.
1 Meaning the four daughters of Philip mentioned in Acts, xxii. 9.
2 Theft.
3 Alluding to his shaven crown.
4 Traitor.
5 Silt.
SCENE IV.

KING HENRY VI.

Glo. Now beat them hence, Why do you let them stay? —
There I’ll chase hence, thou wolf in sheep’s array. —
Out, tawny coats! — out, scarlet & hypocrite!

Here a great Tumult. In the midst of it, enter the Mayor of London, and Officers.

May. Fye, lords! that you, being supreme magistrates,
Thus contumeliously should break the peace!
Glo. Peace, mayor; thou know’st little of my wrongs;
Here’s Beaufort, that regards nor God nor king,
Hath here distract’d the Tower to his use.

Win. Here’s Gloster too, a foe to citizens;
One that still motions war, and never peace,
O’ercharging your free purses with large fines;
That seeks to overthrow religion,
Because he is protector of the realm;
And would have armour here out of the Tower,
To crown himself king, and suppress the prince.
Glo. I will not answer thee with words, but blows.

[Here they skirmish again. May. Nought restores me, in this tumultuous strife,
But to make open proclamation: —
Come, officer; as loud as c’er thou canst.

Oft. All manner of men, assembled here in arms this day,
Against God’s peace and the king’s, we charge and command you, in his highness’ name, to repair to your several dwelling-places; and not to wear, handle, or use, any sword, weapon, or dagger, henceforward, upon pain of death.

Glo. Cardinal, I’ll be no breaker of the law:
But we shall meet, and break our minds at large.
Win. Gloster, we’ll meet; to thy dear cost, be sure:
Thy heart-blood I will have, for this day’s work.
May. I’ll call for clubs?, if you will not away: —
This cardinal is more haughty than the devil.

Glo. Mayor, farewell; thou dost but what thou mayst.

Win. Abominable Gloster! guard thy head;
For I intend to have it ere long.
[Exeunt. May. See the coast clear’d, and then we will depart.

SCENE IV. — France. Before Orleans.

Enter on the Walls, the Master-Gunner and his Son.

M. Gun. Sirrah, thou know'rt how Orleans is besieged;
And how the English have the suburbs won.

Son. Father, I know; and oft have shot at them,
How'er, unfortunate, I miss'd my aim.

M. Gun. But now thou shalt not. Be thou rule'd by me:
Chief master-gunner am I of this town;
Something I must do, to procure me grace:
The prince's espians° have informed me,
How the English, in the suburbs close intrench’d,
Wont, through a secret grate of iron bars
In yonder tower, to overpeer the city;
And thence discover, how, with most advantage,
They may vex us, with shot, or with assault.
To intercept this inconvenience,
A piece of ordnance 'gainst it I have plac’d;
And fully even these three days have I watch'd,

° An allusion to the bishop's habit.
° That is for peace-officers armed with clubs or staves.

If I could see them. Now, boy, do thou watch,
For I can stay no longer.
If thou spy'st any, run and bring me word;
And thou shalt find me at the governor's.

Eat, Father, I warrant you; take you no care;
I'll never trouble you, if I may spy them.

Enter, in an upper Chamber of a Tower the Lords Salisbury and Talbot, Sir William Glansdale, Sir Thomas Gargrave, and others.
Sal. Talbot, my life, my joy, again return'd!
How worth thou handled, being prisoner?
Or by what means got'st thou to be releas'd?
Discourse, I pr'ythee, on this turret's top.

Tal. The duke of Bedford had a prisoner,
Called — the brave lord Ponton de Sautraille's;
For him I was exchang'd and ransomed.
But with a baser man of arms by far,
Once, in contempt, they would have barter'd me:
Which I, disdaining, scorn'd; and craved death
Rather than would be so poll'd esteem'd. 9
In fine, redeem'd I was as I desired.
But, O! the treacherous Fastolfe wounds my heart!
Whom with my bare fists I would execute,
If I now had him brought into my power.

Sal. Yet tell'st thou not, how thou wert entertain'd.

Tal. With scoffs, and scorns, and contumelious taunts.
In open market-place produc'd they me,
To be a public spectacle to all;
But, said they, is the terror of the French,
The scare-crow that affrights our children so.
Then broke I from the officers that led me;
And with my nayls digg'd stones out of the ground,
To hurl at the beholders of my mis'ry.
My grisly countenance made others fly;
None durst come near for fear of sudden death.
In iron walls they deem'd me not secure;
So great fear of my name 'mongst them was spread,
That they suppos'd, I could rend bars of steel,
And spurn in pieces posts of adamant:
Wherefore a guard of chosen shot I had,
That walk'd about me every minute-while;
And if I did but stir out of my bed,
Ready they were to shoot me to the heart.

Sal. I grieve to hear what torments you endur'd;
But we will be reveng'd sufficiently.
Now is it suppr't time in Orleans:
Here through this grate, I can count every one,
And view the Frenchmen how they fortify;
Let us look in, the sight will much delight thee. —
Sir Thomas Gargrave, and sir William Glansdale,
Let me have your express opinions,
Where is best place to make our battery next.

Gars. I think at the north gate; for there stand lords.

Glan. And I, here, at the bulwark of the bridge.

Tal. For aught I see, this city must be famish'd,
Or with light skirmishes enfeebled.

[Shot from the Town. Salisbury and Sir Thomas Gargrave fal]l.

Sal. O Lord, have mercy on us, wretched sinners!

Car. O Lord, have mercy on me, woeftul man!

Tal. What chance is this, that suddenly hath cross'd us?
Speak, Salisbury; at least, if thou canst speak;
How far'st thou, mirror of all martial men?
One of thy eyes, and thy cheek's side struck off! —
Accursed tower! accursed fatal hand,
That hath contriv'd this woeful tragedy!

° So stripped of honours.
In thirteen battles Salisbury o'ercame:
Henry the fifth he first train'd to the wars,
Whilst any trump did sound, or drum struck up,
His sword did never leave striking in the field.
Yet liv'st thou, Salisbury? though thy speech doth fail,
One eye thou hast, to look to heaven for grace:
The sun with one eye vie'sth all the world. —
Heaven, be thou gracious to none alive,
If Salisbury wants mercy at thy hands! —
Bear hence his body, I will help to bury it.
Sir Thomas Gargrave, hast thou any life?
Speak unto Talbot; nay, look up to him.
Salisbury, cheer thy spirit with this comfort;
Thou shalt not die, whil'se —
He beckons with his hand, and smiles on me;
As who should say, When I am dead and gone,
Remember to avenge me on the French. —
Plantagenet, I will; and Nero-like,
Play on the lute, beholding the towns burn:
Wretched shall France be only in my name.
[Thunder heard; afterwards an Alarum.]
What stir is this? What tumult's in the heavens?
Whence cometh this alarum, and the noise?

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, my lord, the French have gotten head.
The dauphin, with one Joan la Pucelle join'd, —
A holy prophetess, new risen up, —
Is come with a great power to raise the siege.

[Salisbury groans.]

Tel. Hear, hear, how dying Salisbury doth groan!
It irks his heart, he cannot be reveng'd.
Frenchmen, I'll be a Salisbury to you: —
Your hearts I'll stamp out with my horse's heels,
And make a quamgire of your mingled brains.
Convey me Salisbury into his tent,
And then we'll try what dairst Frenchmen dare.

[Exeunt, bearing out the Bodies.]

Scene V. — Before one of the Gates of Orleans.

Alarum. Skirmishings. Talbot pursueth the Dauphin, and driveth him in: then enter Joan la Pucelle, driving Englishmen before her. Then enter Talbot.

Tel. Where is my strength, my valour, and my force?
Our English troops retire, I cannot stay them;
A woman, clad in armour, chaseth them.

Enter La Pucelle.

Here, here she comes: — I'll have a bout with thee;
Blood will I draw on thee, thou art a witch,
And straightway give thy soul to him thou serv'st.

Puc. Come, come, 'tis only I that must disgrace thee.
[They fight.]

Tel. My breast I'll burst with straining of my courage,
And from my shoulders crack my arms asunder,
But I will chastise this high-minded Trumpet.

Puc. Talbot, farewell; thy hour is not yet come:
I must go victual Orleans forthwith.
O'ertake me, if thou canst; I scorn thy strength.
Go, go, cheer up thy hunger-starved men;
Help Salisbury to make his testament;
This day is ours, as many more shall be.

[Hark, countrymen! either renew the fight,
Or tear the lions out of England's coat;
Renounce your soil, give sheep in lion's stead;
Sheep run not half so timorous from the wolf,
Or horse, or oxen, from the leopard,
As you fly from your oft-subdued slaves.

[Alarum. Another Skirmish.]

It will not be: — Retire into your trenches:
You all consented unto Salisbury's death,
For none would strike a stroke in his revenge. —
Pucelle is entered into Orleans,
In spite of us, or ought that we could do.
O, would I were to die with Salisbury!
The shame hereof will make me hide my head.

[Alarum. Retreat. Exeunt Talbot and his Forces, &c.]

Scene VI. — The same.
Enter on the Walls, Pucelle, Charles, Reignier, Alençon, and Soldiers.

Puc. Advance our waving colours on the walls;
Rescue'st is Orleans from the English wolves: —
Thus Joan la Pucelle hath perform'd her word.
Char. Divinest creature, bright Astraen's daughter,
How shall I honour thee for this success?
Thy promises are like Adonis' gardens,
That one day bloom'd, and fruitful were the next.
France, triumph in thy glorious prophesies!
Recover'd is the town of Orleans;
More blessed hap did ne'er befall our state.

Reg. Why ring not out the bells throughout the town?
Dauphin, command the citizens make bonfires,
And feast and banquet in the open streets,
To celebrate the joy that heaven hath given us.
Alen. All France will be replete with mirth and joy,
When they shall hear how we have play'd the men.
Char. 'Tis Joan, not we, by whom the day is won;
For which, I will divide my crown with her:
And all the priests and friars in my realm
Shall, in procession, sing her endless praise.
A statelier pyramis to her I'll rear,
Than Rhodopes, or Memphis, ever was:
In memory of her, when she is dead,
Her ashes, in an urn more precious
Than the rich jewel'd coffer of Darius,
Transported shall be at high festivals
Before the kings and queens of France.
No longer on saint Denis will we cry,
But Joan la Pucelle shall be France's saint.
Come in; and let us banquet royally,
After this golden day of victory.

[Flourish. Exeunt.]
SCENE I.—The same.

Enter to the Gates, a French Sergeant, and two Sentinels.

Serg. Sirs, take your places, and be vigilant:
If any noise, or soldier, you perceive,
Near to the walls, by some apparent sign,
Let us have knowledge at the court of guard.

I Sent. Sergeant, you shall. [Exit Sergeant.

Thus are poor servitors
(When others sleep upon their quiet beds)
Constrain’d to watch in darkness, rain, and cold.

Enter Talbot, Bedford, Burgundy, and Forces, with scaling Ladders; their Drums beating a dead March.

Tal. Lord regent, and redoubted Burgundy,—
By whose approach, the regions of Artois,
Wallon, and Picardy, are friends to us.—

This happy night the Frenchmen are secure,
Having all day carous’d and banqueted:
Embrace we then this opportunity;
As fitting best to quittance their deceit,
Contriv’d by art and baleful sorcery.

Bed. Coward of France!—how much he wrongs his fame,
Despairing of his own arm’s fortitude,
To join with witches, and the help of hell.

Bur. Traitors have never other company.—

But what’s that Pucelle, whom they term so pure?

Tal. A maid, they say.

Bed. A maid! and be so martial!

Bur. Pray heaven, she prove not masculine cre long;
If underneath the standard of the French,
She carry armour, as she hath begun.

Tal. Well, let them practise and converse with spirits:
God is our fortress; in whose conquering name,
Let us resolve to scale their flinty bulwarks.

Bed. Ascend, brave Talbot; we will follow thee.

Tal. Not all together; better far, I guess,
That we do make our entrance several ways;
That, if it chance the one of us do fail,
The other yet may rise against their force.

Bed. Agreed; I’ll to yon corner.

Bur. And I to this.

Tal. And here will Talbot mount, or make his grave.

New, Salisbury! for thee, and for the right
Of English Henry, shall this night appear
How much in duty I am bound to both.

[The English scale the walls, crying St. George! to Talbot! and all enter by the Town.

Sent. [Within.] Arm, arm! the enemy doth make assault!

The French leap over the Walls in their Shirts. Enter, several ways, Bastard, Alençon, Reignier, half ready, and half unready.

Alen. How now, my lords? what, all unready so?

Bast. Unready? ay, and glad we squeal’d so well.

Reign. Twas time, I trow, to wake and leave our beds,
Hearing alarums at our chamber doors.

1 The same as guard-room.

Alen. Of all exploits, since first I follow’d arms,
No’er heard I of a warlike enterprise.
More venturous, or desperate than this.

Bast. I think, this Talbot be a fiend of hell.

Reign. If not of hell, the heavens, sure, favour him.

Alen. Here cometh Charles; I marvel how he sped.

Enter Charles and La Puckell.

Bast. Tut! holy Joan was his defensive guard.

Char. Is this thy cunning, thou deceitful dame?

Didst thou at first, to flatter us withal,
Make us partakers of a little gain,
That now our loss might be ten times so much?

Puc. Wherefore is Charles impatient with his friend?

At all times will you have my power alike?
Sleeping, or waking, must I still prevail,
Or will you blame and lay the fault on me?—

Improvident soldiers! had your watch been good,
This sudden mischief never could have fall’n.

Char. Duke of Alençon, this was your default;
That, being captain of the watch to-night,
Did look no better to that weighty charge.

Alen. Had all your quarters been as safely kept,
As that whereof I had the government,
We had not been thus shamefully surpriz’d.

Bast. Mine was secure.

Reign. And so was mine, my lord.

Char. And, for myself, most part of all this night,
Within her quarter, and mine own precinct,
I was employ’d in passing to and fro,
About relieving of the sentinels:
Then how, or which way, should they first break in?

Puc. Question, my lords, no further of the case,
How, or which way; ’tis sure, they found some place
But weakly guarded, where the breach was made.
And now there rests no other shift but this,—
To gather our soldiers, scatter’d and dispers’d,
And lay new platforms to endamage them.

Alarum. Enter an English Soldier, crying A Talbot!

A Talbot! They fly, leaving their Clothes behind.

SOLD. I’ll be so bold to take what they have left.
The cry of Talbot serves me for a sword;
For I have loaded me with many spoils,
Using no other weapon but his name.

[Exit.

SCENE II.—Orleans. Within the Town.

Enter Talbot, Bedford, Burgundy, a Captain,
and others.

Bed. The day begins to break, and night is fled,
Whose pitchy mantle over-veil’d the earth.

Here sound retreat, and cease our hot pursuit.

Tal. Bring forth the body of old Salisbury;
And here advance it in the market-place,
The middle centre of this cursed town.—
Now I have paid my vow unto his soul;
For every drop of blood was drawn from him,
There hath at least five Frenchmen died to-night.
And, that hereafter ages may behold
What ruin happen’d in revenge of him,
Within their chiefest temple I’I erect

2 Plans, schemes.
A tomb, wherein his corpse shall be inter'd:
Upon the which, that every one may read,
Shall be engrav'd the sack of Orleans;
The treacherous manner of his mournful death,
And what a terror he had been to France.
But, lords, in all our bloody massacre,
I muse we met not with the dauphin's grace;
He scarce a new-come champion, virtuous Joan of Arc;
Nor any of his false confederates.

Bed. 'Tis thought, lord Talbot, when the fight began,
Rous'd on the sudden from their drowsy beds,
They did, amongst the troops of armed men,
Leap o'er the walls for refuge in the field.

Bur. Myself (as far as I could well discern,
For smoke, and dusky vapours of the night,)
Am sure I scar'd the dauphin and his trull;
When arm in arm they both came swiftly running,
Like to a pair of loving turtle-doves,
That could not live saunder day or night.
After that things are set in order here,
We'll follow them with all the power we have.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. All hail, my lords! which of this princely train
Call ye the warlike Talbot, for his acts
So much applauded through the realm of France?

Tal. Here is the Talbot; who would speak with him?

Mess. The virtuous lady, countess of Auvergne,
With modesty admiring thy renown,
By me entreats, good lord, thou wouldst vouchsafe
To visit her poor castle where she lies;
That she may boast she hath beheld the man
Whose glory fills the world with loud report.

Bur. Is it even so? Nay, then, I see, our wars
Will turn into a peaceful comic sport,
When ladies crave to be encounter'd with. —
You may not, my lord, despise her gentle suit.

Tal. Ne'er trust me then; for, when a world of men
Could not prevail with all their oratory,
Yet hath a woman's kindness over-rul'd: —
And therefore tell her, I return great thanks;
And in submission will attend on her. —
Will not your honours bear me company?

Bed. No, truly, it is more than manners will:
And I have heard it said, — Unbidden guests
Are often welcomest when they are gone.

Tal. Well then, alone, since there's no remedy,
I mean to prove this lady's courtesy.
Come hither, captain. [Whispers.] — You perceive my mind.

Capt. I do, my lord, and mean accordingly.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III. — Auvergne. Cour of the Castle.
Enter the Countess and her Porter.

Count. Porter, remember what I gave in charge;
And, when you have done so, bring the keys to me.

Port. Madam, I will.

[Exeunt.

Enter Messenger and Talbot.

Mess. Madam,
According as your ladyship desir'd,
By message crav'd, so is lord Talbot come.

Count. And he is welcome. What! is this the man?

Mess. Madam, it is.

Count. Is this the scourge of France?
Is this the Talbot, so much fear'd abroad,
That with his name the mothers still their babes?
I see report is fabulous and false:
I thought, I should have seen some Hercules,
A second Hector, for his grim aspect,
And large proportion of his strong-knit limbs.
Alas! this is a child, a silly dwarf:
It cannot be, this weak and wrinkled shrimp
Should strike such terror to his enemies.

Tal. Madam, I have been bold to trouble you:
But, since your ladyship is not at leisure,
I'll sort some other time to visit you.

Count. What means he now? — Go, ask him whether he goes.

Mess. Stay, my lord Talbot; for my lady craves
To know the cause of your abrupt departure.

Tal. Marry, for that she's in a wrong belief,
I go to certify her, Talbot's here.

Re-enter Porter, with Keys.

Count. If thou be he, then art thou prisoner.

Tal. Prisoner! to whom?

Count. To me, blood-thirsty lord;
And for that cause I train'd thee to my house.

Long time thy shadow hath been thrill to me,
For in my gallery thy picture hangs:
But now the substance shall endure the like;
And I will chain these legs and arms of thine,
That hast by tyranny, these many years,
Wasted our country, slain our citizens,
And sent our sons and husbands captive.

Tal. Ha, ha, ha!

Count. Laughest thou, wretch? thy mirth shall turn to moan.

Tal. I laugh to see your ladyship so fond,
To think that you have aught but Talbot's shadow,
Whereon to practise your severity.

Count. Why, art not thou the man?

Tal. I am indeed.

Count. Then have I substance too.

Tal. No, no, I am but shadow of myself:
You are deceiv'd, my substance is not here;
For what you see, is but the smallest part
And least proportion of humanity:
I tell you madam, were the whole frame here,
It is of such a spacious lofty pitch,
Your roof were not sufficient to contain it.

Count. This is a riddling merchant for the nonce;
He will be here, and yet he is not here:
How can these contrarieties agree?

Tal. That will I show you presently.

He winds a Horn. Drums heard; then a Peel of Ordinance. The Gates being forced, enter Soldiers.

How say you, madam? are you now persuad'd,
That Talbot is but shadow of himself?
These are his substance, sinews, arms, and strength,
With which he yoketh your rebellions necks;
Razeth your cities, and subverts your towns,
And in a moment makes them desolate.

Count. Victorious Talbot! pardon my abuse:

[Exeunt.]
I find thou art no less than fame hath bruit'd,
And more than may be gather'd by thy shape.
Let my presumption not provoke thy wrath;
For I am sorry, that with reverence
I did not entertain thee as thou art.

Tal. Be not dismay'd, fair lady; nor misconstrue
The mind of Talbot, as you did mistake
The outward composition of his body.
What you have done, hath not offended me:
No other satisfaction do I crave,
But only (with your patience) that we may Taste of your wine, and see what cates you have;
For soldiers' stomachs always serve them well.

Count. With all my heart: and think me honoured
To feast so great a warrior in my house. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—London. The Temple Garden.

Enter the Earls of Somerset, Suffolk, and Warwick; Richard Plantagenet, Vernon, and another Lawyer.

Plan. Great lords, and gentlemen, what means this silence?
Dare no man answer in a case of truth?
Suf. Within the Temple hall we were too loud;
The garden here is more convenient.

Plan. Then say at once, If I maintain'd the truth;
Or, else, was wrangling Somerset in the error?
Suf. Faith, I have been a truant in the law;
And never yet could frame my will to it;
And, therefore, frame the law unto my will.

Som. Judge you, my lord of Warwick, then between us.

War. Between two hawks, which flies the higher pitch,
Between two dogs, which hath the deeper mouth,
Between two blades, which bears the better temper,
Between two horses, which doth bear him best,
Between two girls, which hath the merriest eye,
I have, perhaps, some shallow spirit of judgment;
But in these nice sharp quillets of the law,
Good faith, I am no wiser than a daw.

Plan. Tut, tut, here is a mannerly forbearance:
The truth appears so naked on my side,
That any purblind eye may find it out.

Som. And on my side it is so well apparel'd,
So clear, so shining, and so evident,
That it will glimmer through a blind man's eye.

Plan. Since you are tongue-ty'd and so loath to speak,
In dumb significants proclaim your thoughts:
Let him, that is a true-born gentleman,
And stands upon the honour of his birth,
If he suppose that I have pleaded truth,
From off this briar pluck a white rose with me.

Som. Let him that is no coward, nor no fatterer,
But dare maintain the party of the truth,
Pluck a red rose from off this thorn with me.

War. I love no colours; and, without all colour
Of base insinuating flattery,
I pluck this white rose with Plantagenet.

Suf. I pluck this red rose, with young Somerset;
And say withal, I think he held the right.

Ver. Stay, lords and gentlemen: and pluck no more,
Till you conclude—that he, upon whose side
The fewest roses are cropp'd from the tree,
Shall yield the other in the right opinion.

Som. Good master Vernon, it is well object'd;
If I have fewest I subscribe in silence.

Plan. And I.

Ver. Then, for the truth and plainness of the case,
I pluck this pale and maiden blossom here,
Giving my verdict on the white rose side.

Som. Prick not your finger as you pluck it off;
Lest, bleeding, you do paint the white rose red,
And fall on my side so against your will.

Ver. If, I, my lord, for my opinion bleed,
Opinion shall be surgeon to my hurt,
And keep me on the side where still I am.

Som. Well, well, come on: Who else?

Law. Unless my study and my books be false,
The argument you hold, was wrong in you;

[To Somerset.

In sign whereof, I pluck a white rose too.

Plan. Now, Somerset, where is your argument?

Som. Here, in my scabbard, meditating that,
Shall die your white rose in a bloody red.

Plan. Mean time, your cheaks do counterfeit our roses;
For pale they look with fear, as witnessing
The truth on our side.

Som. No, Plantagenet,
'Tis not for fear; but anger,—that thy cheeks
Blush for pure shame, to counterfeit our roses;
And yet thy tongue will not confess thy error.

Plan. Hath not thy rose a canker, Somerset?

Som. Hath not thy rose a thorn, Plantagenet?

Plan. Ay, sharp and piercing, to maintain his truth;
Whiles thy consuming canker eats his falsehood.

Som. Well, I'll find friends to wear my bleeding roses,
That shall maintain what I have said is true,
Where false Plantagenet dare not be seen.

Plan. Now, by this maiden blossom in my hand,
I scorn thee and thy fashion, peevish boy.

Suf. Turn not thy scorns this way, I Plantagenet.

Plan. Proud Poole, I will; and scorn both him and thee.

Suf. I'll turn my part thereof to thy throat.

Som. Away, away, good William De-la-Poole!
We grace the yeomen by conversing with him.

War. Now, by my life, thou wrong'st him, Somerset;

His grandfather was Lionel, duke of Clarence,
Third son to the third Edward king of England;
Spring crestless yeomen from so deep a root?

Plan. He bears him on the place's privilege,
Or durst not, for his craven heart, say thus.

Som. By him that made me, I'll maintain my words
On any plot of ground in Christendom:
Was not thy father, Richard, earl of Cambridge,
For treason executed in our late king's days?
And, by his treason, stand'st not thou attainted, Corrupted, and exempt from ancient gentry?
His trespass yet liveth guilty in thy blood:
And, till thou be restor'd, thou art a yeoman.

Plan. My father was attainted, not attainted;
Condemn'd to die for treason, but no traitor;
And that I'll prove on better men than Somerset,
We growing time once ripen'd to my will.
For your partaker Poole, and you yourself,
I'll note you in my book of memory,
To scourge you for this apprehension;
Look to it well; and say you are well warn'd.

9 Noised, reported. 1 Deceits; a play on the word. 2 Proposed. 3 e. Those who have no right to arms. 4 The Temple, being a religious house, was a sanctuary. 5 Excluded. 6 Opinion.
Enter Richard Plantagenet.

1 Keep. My lord, your loving nephew now is come.

Mor. Richard Plantagenet, my friend? Is he come?

Plan. Ay, noble uncle, thus ignobly us'd,

Your nephew, late-despisèd Richard, comes.

Mor. Direct mine arms, I may embrace his neck,

And in his bosom spend my latter gasp:

O, tell me, when my lips do touch his cheeks,

That I may kindly give one fainting kiss.

And now declare, sweet stem from York's great stock.

Why didst thou say — of late thou wert despis'd?—

Plan. I lean'd mine aged back against mine arm?

And, in that case, I'll tell thee my disease. 9

This day, in argument upon a case,

Some words there grew 'twixt Somerset and me:

Among which terms he used his lavish tongue,

And did upbraid me with my father's death;

Which obloquy set bars before my tongue,

Else with the like I had requited him:

Therefore, good uncle, — for my father's sake,

In honour of a true Plantagenet,

And for alliance's sake, — declare the cause

My father, earl of Cambridge, lost his head.

Mor. That cause, Sirrah, they say, that imprisonment'd me,

And hath detain'd me, all my flow'rest youth,

Within a lostsome dungeon, there to pine,

Was cursed instrument of his decease.

Plan. Discover more at large what cause that was:

For I am ignorant, and cannot guess.

Mor. I will; if that my fading breath permit,

And death approach not ere my tale be done.

Henry the fourth, grandfather to this king,

Depo'd his cousin Richard; Edward's son,

The first-begotten, and the lawful heir

Of Edward king, the third of that descent:

During whose reign, the Percies of the north,

Finding his usurpation most unjust,

Endeav'rd my advancement to the throne;

The reason mov'd these warlike lords to this,

Was — for that (young king Richard thus remov'd, Leaving no heir begotten of his body,) I was the next by birth and parentage;

For by my mother I derived am

From Lionel duke of Clarence, the third son

To king Edward the third, whereas he,

From John of Gaunt doth bring his pedigree,

Being but fourth of that heroick line.

But mark; as, in this haughty great attempt,

They laboured to plant the rightful heir,

I lost my liberty, and they their lives.

Long after this, when Henry the fifth,

Succeeding his father Bolingbroke, — did reign,

Thy father, earl of Cambridge, — then deriv'd,

From famous Edmund Langley, duke of York,

Marrying my sister, that my mother was,

Again, in pity of my hard distress,

Levied an army; woeing me to redeem,

And have instal'd me in the diadem:

But, as the rest, so fell that noble earl,

And was beheaded. Thus the Mortimers,

In whom the title rested, were suppress'd.

Plan. Of which, my lord, your honour is the last.

Mor. True; and thou seest, that I no issue have;

And that my fainting words did warrant death:

Thou art my heir; the rest, I wish thee gather:

But yet be wary in thy studious care.

Plan. Thy grave admonishments prevail with me:

But yet, methinks, my father's execution

Was nothing less than bloody tyranny.

1 Keep. Thinking.
ACT III. Scene I.

KING HENRY VI.

Mor. With silence, nephew, be thou politic;
Strong-fixed is the house of Lancaster,
And, like a mountain, not to be remov'd.
But now thy uncle is removing hence;
As princes do their courts, when they are cloy'd
With long continuance in a settled place.

Plan. O, uncle, 'would some part of my young years
Might but redeem the passage of your age!
Mor. Thou dost then wrong me; as the slaughter'd doeth,
Which giveth many wounds, when one will kill.
Mourn not, except thou sorrow for my good;
Only, give order for my funeral;
And so farewell; and fair be all thy hopes!
And prosperous be thy life, in peace, and war.

[Dies.

SCENE I. — The Parliament House.

Flourish. Enter King Henry, Exeter, Gloster, Warwick, Somerset, and Suffolk; the Bishop of Winchester, Richard Plantagenet, and others. Gloster offers to put up a Bill; Winchester raises it, and tears it.

Win. Com'vest thou with deep premeditated lines,
With written pamphlets studiously devis'd,
Humphrey of Gloster? If thou canst accuse,
Or aught intend'st to lay unto my charge,
Do it without invention suddenly;
As I with sudden and extemporal speech
Purpose to answer what thou canst object.

Glo. Presumptuous priest! this place commands my patience,
Or thou should'st find thou hast dishonour'd me.
Think not, although in writing I prefer'd
The manner of thy vile outrageous crimes,
That therefore I have forg'd or am not able Verbatim to rehearse the method of my pen:
No, prelate; such is thy audacious wickedness,
Thy vile, pestiferous, and dissentient pranks,
That very infants prattle of thy pride.
Thou art a most pernicious usurer:
Froward by nature, enemy to peace;
Lascivious, wanton, more than well beseeches
A man of thy profession, and degree;
And for thy treachery, What's more manifest?
In that thou liest a trap to take my life,
As well at London bridge, as at the Tower?
Beside, I fear me, if thy thoughts were sifted,
The king, thy sovereign, is not quite exempt
From envious malicious of thy swelling heart.

Win. Gloster, I do defy thee. — Lords, vouchsafe
To give me hearing what I shall reply.
If I were covetous, ambitious, or perverse,
As he will have me, How am I so poor?
Or how haps it, I seek not to advance
Or raise myself, but keep my wonted calling?
And for dissension, Who preferreth peace
More than I do, — except I be provok'd?
No, my good lords, it is not that offends;
It is not that, that hath incens'd the duke:
It is, because no one should sway but he;
No one, but he, should be about the king;

* i.e. Articles of Accusation.

Plan. And peace, no war, befall thy parting soul!
In prison hast thou spent a pilgrimage,
And like a hermit overpass'd thy days. —
Well, I will lock his counsel in my breast;
And what I do imagine, let that rest. —
Keepers, convey him hence; and I myself
Will see his burial better than his life. —

[Exeunt Keepers, bearing out Mortimer.
Here dies the dusky torch of Mortimer,
Chok'd with ambition of the meaner sort: —
And, for those wrongs, those bitter injuries,
Which Somerset hath offer'd to my house, —
I doubt not, but with honour to redress;
And therefore haste I to the parliament;
Either to be restored to my blood,
Or make my ill the advantage of my good.

ACT III.
Forbidden late to carry any weapon,
Have fill’d their pockets full of pebble-stones;
And, banding themselves in contrary parts,
Do pelt so fast at one another’s pate,
That none themselves, their giddy hands knock’d out.
Our windows are broke down in every street,
And we, for fear, compel’d to shut our shops.

Enter, skirmishing, the Retainers of Gloster and Winchester, with bloody pates.

K. Hen. We charge you, on allegiance to ourself,
To hold your slaughter’ring hands, and keep the peace.

Pray, uncle Gloster, mitigate this strife.
1 Serv. Nay, if we be Forbidden stones, we’ll fall to it with our teeth.
2 Serv. Do what ye dare, we are as resolute.

[Skirmish again.]

Glo. You of my household, leave this peevish broil,
And set this unaccustom’d fight aside.
3 Serv. My lord, we know your grace to be a man
Just and upright; and, for your royal birth,
Inferior to none, but to his majesty:
And ere that we will suffer such a prince,
So kind a father of the commonweal,
To be disgraced by an inkhorn mate,
We, and our wives, and children, all will fight,
And have our bodies slaughter’d by thy foes.
1 Serv. Ay, and the very parings of our nails
Shall pitch a field, when we are dead.

[Skirmish again.]

Glo. And, if you love me, as you say you do,
Let me persuade you to forbear a while.
K. Hen. O, how this discord doth afflic my soul!
Can you, my lord of Winchester, behold
My sighs and tears, and will not once relent?
Who should be pitiful, if you be not?
Or who should study to prefer a peace,
If holy churchmen take delight in broils?
War. My lord protector, yield; — yield Wincheste;
Except you mean, with obstinate repulse,
To slay your sovereign, and destroy the realm.
You see what mischief, and what murder too,
Hath been enacted through your enmity;
Then be at peace, except ye thirst for blood.

Win. He shall submit, or I will never yield.
Glo. Compassion on the king commands me stoop!
Or, I would see his heart out, ere the priest
Should ever get that privilege of me.

War. Behold, my lord of Winchester, the duke
Hath banish’d moody discontented fury,
As by his smoothed brows it doth appear:
Why look you still so stern, and tragical?
Glo. Here, Winchester, I offer thee my hand.
K. Hen. Eye, uncle Beaufort! I have heard you preach,
That malice was a great and grievous sin:
And will not you maintain the thing you teach,
But prove a chief offender in the same?
War. Sweet king! — the bishop hath a kindly gird.3
For shame, my lord of Winchester! relent;
What, shall a child instruct you what to do?

Win. Well, duke of Gloster, I will yield to thee,
Love for thy love, and hand for hand I give.

Glo. Ay; but, I fear me, with a hollow heart.

See, my friends, and loving countrymen;
This token serveth for a flag of truce,
Betwixt ourselves, and all our followers;
So help me God, as I dissemble not!

Win. So help me God, as I intend it not! [Aside.
K. Hen. O loving uncle, kind duke of Gloster,
How joyful am I made by this contract! —
Away, my masters! trouble us no more;
But join in friendship, as your lords have done.
1 Serv. Content! I’ll to the surgeon’s.
2 Serv. And so will I.
3 Serv. And I will see what physic the tavern affords.

[Exeunt Servants, Mayor, &c.

War. Accept this scroll, most gracious sovereign,
Which in the right of Richard Plantagenet,
We do exhibit to your majesty.

Glo. Well urg’d, my lord of Warwick; — for,
sweet prince,
And if your grace mark every circumstance,
You have great reason to do Richard right:
Especially, for those occasions
At Eltham-place I told your majesty.
K. Hen. And those occasions, uncle, were of force:
Therefore, my loving lords, our pleasure is,
That Richard be restored to his blood.
War. Let Richard be restored to his blood;
So shall his father’s wrongs be recompens’d.

Win. As will the rest, so willeth Winchester.
K. Hen. If Richard will be true, not that alone,
But all the whole inheritance I give,
That doth belong unto the house of York,
From whence you spring by lineal descent.

Plan. Thy humble servant vows obedience,
And humble service, till the point of death.

K. Hen. Stoop then, and set your knee against my foot;
And, in reguerdon of that duty done,
I girt thee with the valiant sword of York.
Rise, Richard, like a true Plantagenet;
And rise created princely duke of York.

Plan. And so thrive Richard, as thy foes may fail;
And as my duty springs so perish they
That grudge one thought against your majesty!

All. Welcome, high prince, the mighty duke of York!

Glo. Now will it best avail your majesty,
To cross the seas, and to be crown’d in France:
The presence of a king engenders love
Amongst his subjects, and his loyal friends;
As it disanimates his enemies.
K. Hen. When Gloster says the word, king Henry goes;
For friendly counsel cuts off many foes.

Glo. Your ships already are in readiness.

[Exeunt all but Exeter.

Exe. Ay, we may march in England, or in France,
Not seeing what is likely to ensue:
This late dissension, grown betwixt the peers,
Burns under feigned ashes of forg’d love,
And will at last break out into a flame:
As fester’d members rot but by degrees,
Till bones, and flesh, and sinews fall away,
So will this base and envious discord breed.
And now I fear that fatal prophecy,
Which, in the time of Henry, aam’d the fifth,
Was in the mouth of every sucking babe,
That Henry, born at Monmouth, should win all;
And Henry, born at Winchester, should lose all:
Which is so plain, that Exeter doth wish
His days may finish ere that hapless time. [Exit.

3 Feels an emotion of kindness.

4 Recompense.
SCENE II.—France. Before Rouen.

Enter La Pucelle disguised, and Soldiers dressed like Countrymen, with Sacks upon their backs.

Puc. These are the city gates, the gates of Rouen, Through which our policy must make a breach: Take heed, be wary how you place your words; Talk like the vulgar sort of market-men, That come to gather money for their corn. If we have entrance, (as, I hope, we shall,) And that we find the slothful watch but weak, I'll by a sign give notice to our friends, That Charles the dauphin may encounter them. I Sold. Our sacks shall be a mean to sack the city, And we be lords and rulers over Rouen; Therefore we'll knock. [Knocks. Guard. [Within.] Qui est là? Puc. Pauvres, pauvres gens de France: Poor market-folks, that come to sell their corn. Guard. Enter, go in: the market-bell is rung. [Opens the Gates.

Puc. Now Rouen, I'll shake thy bulwarks to the ground.

[Pucelle, &c. enter the City.

Enter Charles, Bastard of Orleans, Alençon, and Forces.

Char. Saint Denis bless this happy stratagem! And once again we'll sleep secure in Rouen. Bast. Here enter'd Pucelle, and her practisants; Now she is there, how will she specify Where is the best and safest passage in? Alen. By thrusting out a torch from yonder tower; Which once discern'd shows that her meaning is, No way to that, for weakness, which she enter'd. Enter La Pucelle on a Battlement; holding out a Torch burning.

Puc. Behold, this is the happy wedding torch, That jointeth Rouen unto her countrymen; But burning fatal to the Talbotites.

Bast. See, noble Charles! the beacon of our friend, The burning torch in yonder turret stands. Char. Now shine it like a comet of revenge, A prophet to the fall of all our foes! Alen. Defer no time, Delays have dangerous ends; Enter, and cry—the Dauphin—I—presently, And then to execution on the watch. [They enter.

Alarums. Enter Talbot, and certain English.

Tal. France, thou shalt rue this treason with thy tears, If Talbot but survive thy treachery.

Pucelle, that witch, that cursed sorceress, Hath wrought this hellish mischief unawares, That hardly we escap'd the pride of France. [Exeunt to the Town.

Alarum: Excursions. Enter from the Town, Bedford, brought in sick, in a Chair, with Talbot, Burgundy, and the English Forces. Then enter, on the Walls, La Pucelle, Charles, Bastard, Alençon, and others.

Puc. Good morrow, gallants! want ye corn for bread? I think, the duke of Burgundy will fast, Before he'll buy again at such a rate: 'Twas full of darnel; Do you like the taste?

Burg. Scoffon, vile fiend, and shameless courtisan! I trust, ere long, to choke thee with thine own, And make thee curse the harvest of that corn. Char. Your grace may starve, perhaps, before that time.

Bed. O, let no words, but deeds, revenge this treason! Puc. What will you do, good grey-beard? break a lance, And run a tilt at death within a chair? Tal. Foul fiend of France, and hag of all despite, Becomes it thee to taunt his valiant age, And twit with cowardice a man half dead? Damned, I'll have a bout with you again, Or else let Talbot perish with this shame.

Puc. Are you so hot, sir?—Yet, Pucelle, hold thy peace;

If Talbot do but thunder, rain will follow.— [Talbot, and the rest consult together.

Tal. Dare ye come forth and meet us in the field? Puc. Belike, your lordship takes us then for fools, To try if that our own be ours, or no.

Tal. I speak not to that railing Hecate, But unto thee, Alençon, and the rest; Will ye, like soldiers, come and fight it out? Alen. Signior, no.

Tal. Signior hang!—base mulecters of France! Like peasan foot-boys do they keep the walls; And dare not take up arms like gentlemen. Puc. Captains, away: let's get us from the walls; For Talbot means no goodness, by his looks.— We came, sir, but to tell you we are here.

[Exeunt La Pucelle, &c. from the Walls.

Tal. And there will we be too, ere it be long, Or else reproach be Talbot's greatest fame!— Vow, Burgundy, by honour of thy house, (Prick'd on by publick wrongs, sustain'd in France,) Either to get the town again, or die: And I,—as sure as English Henry lives, And as his father here was conqueror, As sure as in this late betrayed town Great Cœur-de-lion's heart was buried; So sure I swear to get the town, or die.

Bur. My vows are equal partners with thy vows.

Tal. But, ere we go, regard this dying prince, The valiant duke of Bedford:—Come, my lord, We will bestow you in some better place, Fitter for sickness, and for crazy age.

Bed. Lord Talbot, do not so dishonour me: Here will I sit before the walls of Rouien, And will be partner of your weal, or woe.

Bur. Courageous Bedford, let us now persuade you.

Bed. Not to be gone from hence; for once I read, That stout Pendragon, in his litter, sick, Came to the field, and vanquished his foes: Methinks, I should revive the soldiers' hearts, Because I ever found them as myself.

Tal. Undaunted spirit in a dying breast!— Then be it so:—Heavens keep old Bedford safe!— And now no more ado, brave Burgundy, But gather we our forces out of hand, And set upon our boasting enemy.

[Exeunt Burgundy, Talbot, and Forces, leaving Bedford, and others.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter Sir John Fastolfe, and a Captain.

Cap. Whither away, sir John Fastolfe, in such haste?
FIRST PART OF

Act III.

Char. Ay, marry, sweeting, if we could do that, France were no place for Henry's warriors; Nor should that nation boast it so with us, But be extirped from our provinces.

Alen. For ever should they be expuls'd 2 from France, And not have title to an earldom here.

Puc. Your honour shall perceive how I will work, To bring this matter to the wished end. [Drums heard.

Hark! by the sound of drum, you may perceive Their powers are marching unto Paris-ward.

An English March. Enter, and pass over at a distance, Talbot and his Forces.

There goes the Talbot, with his colours spread; And all the troops of English after him.

A French March. Enter the Duke of Burgundy, and Forces.

Now in the rearward comes the duke, and his; Fortune, in favour, makes him lag behind.

Summon a parley, we will talk with him. [A parley sounded.

Char. A parley with the duke of Burgundy.

Bur. Who cares a parley with the Burgundy?

Puc. The princely Charles of France, thy countryman.

Char. Speak, Pucelle; and enchant him with thy words.

Puc. Brave Burgundy, undoubted hope of France! Stay, let thy humble handmaid speak to thee.

Bur. Speak on; but be not over- tedious.

Puc. Look on thy country, look on fertile France, And see the cities and the towns defac'd By wasting ruin of the cruel foe! As looks the mother on her lovely babe, When death doth close his tender dying eyes, See, see, the pining malady of France; Behold the wounds, the most unnatural wounds, Which thou thyself hast given her woful breast! O, turn thy edged sword another way; Strike those that hurt, and hurt not those that help! One drop of blood, drawn from thy country's bosom, Should grieve thee more than streams of foreign gore; Return thee, therefore, with a flood of tears, And wash away thy country's stained spots!

Bur. Either she hath bewitch'd me with her words, Or nature makes me suddenly relent.

Puc. Besides, all French and France exclaims on thee, Doubting thy birth and lawful progeny. Who join'st thou with, but with a lordly nation, That will not trust thee, but for profit's sake? When Talbot hath set footing once in France, And fashion'd thee that instrument of ill, Who then, but English Henry, will be lord, And thou be thrust out, like a fugitive; Call we to mind, — and mark but this, for proof; — Was not the duke of Orleans thy foe? And was he not in England prisoner? But, when they heard he was thine enemy, They set him free, without his ransom paid, In spite of Burgundy, and all his friends. See then! thou fight'st against thy countrymen,

7 Scoffs.
8 Quite dispirited.
9 Make some necessary dispositions.
10 Funeral rites.

SCENE III. — The Plains near the City. Enter Charles, the Bastard, Alençon, La Pucelle, and Forces.

Puc. Dismay not, princes, at this accident, Nor grieve that Roïen is so recovered: Care is no cure, but rather corrosive, For things that are not to be remedied. Let franckick Talbot triumph for a while, And like a peacock sweep along his tail; We'll pull his plumes, and take away his train, If dauphin, and the rest, will but rul'd. Char. We have been guided by thee hitherto, And of thy cunning had no diffidence; One sudden foil shall never breed distrust. Bast. Search out thy wit for secret policies, And we will make thee famous through the world. Alen. We'll set thy statue in some holy place, And have thee reverence'd like a blessed saint; Employ thee then, sweet virgin, for our good.

Puc. Then thus it must be; this doth Joan devise: By fair persuasions, mix'd with sugar'd words, We will entice the duke of Burgundy To leave the Talbot, and to follow us.

your grace from the duke
of Burgundy.

Tal.
Shame
to
the duke
of Burgundy, and thee!
I vow'd, base
knight,
when
did meet thee
next,
To tear
the garter
thy craven's leg,

[Plucking
it off.

(Which I
done), because unworthily
Thou
was installed in that high degree.

Pardon
me, princely
Henry,
and
the rest:
This
dastard at the battle
of Patay,
When
but in all
I
was six thousand strong,
And
that
the French
were almost ten to one,
Before
we met, or
a stroke was given,
Like
a trust squire, did run away;
In
we lost twelve hundred men;
Myself,
and divers gentlemen beside,
Were
there surpriz'd,
and taken prisoners.
Then
judge,
great lords, if
I have done
amiss;
Or whether that such cowards ought
wear
This ornament
of knighthood,
yea,
or no.

Glo.
To say
the truth,
this fact was infamous,
And ill besseeving any common man;
Much more
a knight,
a captain,
and
leader
Tal.
When first this order
was ordain'd, my lords,
Knights
the garter
were
of noble birth;
Valiant
and virtuous, full
of haughty courage,
Such
as were grown to credit by the wars;
Not fearing death,
or shrinking for distress.
But always resolute in most extremes.
He
then,
that is not furnished
in this sort,
Doth
but usury
the sacred name
of knight,
Profaning
this most honourable order;
And
should (if I
were worthy
be judge)
Be quite degraded,
a hedge-born swain
That doth presume
to boast
gentle blood.

Confirmed

Rewarded.

To set a gloss upon his bold intent,
Yet know, my lord, I was provok'd by him;
And he first took exceptions at this badge,
Pronouncing — that the paleness of this flower
Bewray'd the faintness of my master's heart.
York. Will not this malice, Somerset, be left?
Som. Your private grudge, my lord of York, will out,
Though ne'er so cunningly you smother it.
When, for so slight and frivolous a cause,
Such factious emulations shall arise!
Good cousins both, of York and Somerset,
Quiet yourselves, I pray, and be at peace.
York. Let this dissension first be tried by fight;
And then your highness shall command a peace.
Som. The quarrel toucheth none but us alone;
Betwixt ourselves let us decide it then.
York. There is my pledge; accept it, Somerset.
Ver. Nay, let it rest where it began at first.
Bas. Confirm it so, mine honourable lord.
Glo. Confirm it so? confounded be your strife,
And perish ye, with your audacious pride!
Presumptuous vassals! are you not ashamed,
With this immodest clamorous outrage
To trouble and disturb the king and us?
And you, my lords, — methinks, you do not well,
To bear with their perverse objections;
Much less, to take occasion from their mouths
To raise a mutiny betwixt yourselves;
Let me persuade you take a better course.
Exe. It grieves his highness; — Good my lords, be friends.
K. Hen. Come hither, you that would be combatants.
Henceforth, I charge you, as you love our favour,
Quite to forget this quarrel, and the cause.
And you, my lords, remember where we are;
In France, amongst a fickle wavering nation:
If they perceive dissension in our looks,
And that within ourselves we disagree,
How will their grudging stomachs be provok'd?
To wilful disobedience, and rebel?
Beside, what infamy will there arise,
When foreign princes shall be certified,
That, for a toy, a thing of no regard,
King Henry's peers, and chief nobility,
Destroy'd themselves, and lost the realm of France?
O, think upon the conquest of my father,
My tender years; and let us not forego
That for a trifle, that was bought with blood!
Let me be umpire in this doubtful strife.
I see no reason, if I wear this rose,
[Putting on a red Rose.
That any one should therefore be suspicious
I more incline to Somerset, than York:
Both are my kinsmen, and I love them both:
As well they may upbraid me with my crown,
Because, forsooth, the king of Scots is crown'd.
But your discretions better can persuade,
Than I am able to instruct or teach:
And therefore, as we hither came in peace,
So let us still continue peace and love.
Cousin of York, we institute your grace
To be our regent in these parts of France:
And good my lord of Somerset, unite
Your troops of horsemen with his bands of foot; —
And, like true subjects, sons of your progenitors,
Go cheerfully together, and digest
Scene II.          KING HENRY VI.

Your angry choler on your enemies.
Ourselves, my lord protector, and the rest,
After some respite, will return to Calais;
From thence to England; where I hope ere long
To be presented, by your victories,
With Charles, Alençon, and that traitorous rout.

Win. Sup. and Basset.
War. My lord of York, I promise you, the king
Prettily, methought, did play the orator.
York. And so he did; but yet I like it not,
In that he wears the badge of Somerset.
War. Truth, that was but his fancy, blazon him not;
I dare presume, sweet prince, he sought no harm.
York. And, if I wist he did. — But let it rest;
Other affairs must now be managed.

[Exeunt York, Warwick, and Vernon.

Exe. Well didst thou, Richard, to suppress thy voice;
For, had the passions of thy heart burst out,
I fear we should have seen deciplier'd there
More rancorous spite, more furious raging broils,
Than yet can be imagin'd or supposed
But howsoever, no simple man that sees
This jarring discord of nobility,
This should ring of each other in the court,
This factious bandying of their favourites,
But that it doth presage some ill event.
'Tis much, when scepters are in children's hands;
But more, when envy breeds unkind division;
There comes the ruin, there begins confusion.

[Exit.

Scene II. — France. Before Bourdeaux.

Enter Talbot, with his Forces.

Tal. Go to the gates of Bourdeaux, trumpeter,
Summon their general unto the wall.

Trumpet sounds a Parley. Enter, on the Walls, the General of the French Forces, and others.

English John Talbot, captains, calls you forth,
Servant in arms to Harry king of England;
And thus he would, — Open your city gates,
Be humble to us; call my sovereign yours,
And do him homage as obedient subjects,
And I'll withdraw me and my bloody power:
But, if you frown upon this proffer'd peace,
You tempt the fury of my three attendants,
Lean famine, quartering steel, and climbing fire;
Who in a moment, even with the earth
Shall lay your stately and air-braving towers,
If you forsake the offer of their love.

Gen. Thou ominous and fearful owl of death,
Our nation's terror, and their bloody scourge!
The period of thy tyranny approacheth.
On us thou canst not enter but by death:
For, I protest, we are well fortified,
And strong enough to issue out and fight:
If thou retire, the dauphin, well appointed,
Stands with the snares of war to tangle thee:
On either hand thee are squadrons pitch'd,
To wall thee from the liberty of flight;
And no way canst thou turn thee for redress,
But death doth front thee with apparent spoil,
And pale destruction meets thee in the face.
Ten thousand French have ta'en the sacrament,
To rive their dangerous artillery
Upon no Christian soul but English Talbot.
Lo! there thou stand'st, a breathing valiant man,
Of an invincible unconquer'd spirit:
This is the latest glory of thy praise,
That I, thy enemy, due 2 thee withal;
For ere the glass, that now begins to run,
Finish the process of this sandy hour,
These eyes, that see thee now well coloured,
Shall see thee wither'd, bloody, pale, and dead.

[Drum afar off.
Hark! hark! the dauphin's drum, a warning bell,
Sings heavy musick to thy timorous soul;
And mine shall ring thy dire departure out.

[Exeunt General, &c. from the Walls.

Tal. He fables not, I hear the enemy; —
Out, some light horsemen, and peruse their wings.
O, negligent and heedless discipline!
How are we pack'd, and bound in a pale;
A little herd of England's timorous deer,
Max'd with a yelping kennel of French curs!
If we be English deer, be then in blood:
Not rascal-like 4, to fall down with a pinch;
But rather moody-mad, and desperate stags,
Turn on the bloody hounds with heads of steel,
And make the cowards stand aloof at bay:
Sell every man his life as dear as mine,
And they shall find dear deer of us, my friends.
God, and saint George! Talbot, and England's right!
Prosper our colours in this dangerous fight!

Scene III. — Plains in Gascony.

Enter York, with Forces; to him a Messenger.
York. Are not the speedy scouts return'd again,
That dogg'd the mighty army of the dauphin?
Mess. They are return'd, my lord; and give it out,
That he is march'd to Bourdeaux with his power,
To fight with Talbot: As he march'd along,
By your espials 5 were discovered
Two mightier troops than that the dauphin led;
Which join'd with him, and made their march for Bourdeaux.

York. A plague upon that villain Somerset;
That thus delays my promised supply
Of horsemen, that were levied for this siege!
Renowned Talbot doth expect my aid;
And I am lowted 6 by a traitor villain,
And cannot help the noble chevalier:
God comfort him in his necessity!
If he miscarry, farewell wars in France.

Enter Sir William Lucy.

Lucy. Thou princely leader of our English strength,
Never so needful on the earth of France,
Spur to the rescue of the noble Talbot;
Who now is girdled with a waist of iron,
And hemm'd about with grim destruction:
To Bourdeaux, warlike duke! to Bourdeaux, York!
Else, farewell Talbot, France, and England's honour.
York. O, would that Somerset — who in proud heart
Doth stop my cornets — were in Talbot's place!
So should we save a valiant gentleman,
By forfeiting a traitor and a coward.
Mad ire, and wrathful fury, makes me weep,
That thus we die, while remiss traitors sleep.

Lucy. O, send some succour to the distress'd lord!
York. He dies, we lose; I break my warlike word:
We mourn, France smiles; we lose, they daily get;
All long of this vile traitor Somerset.

Lucy. Then, God take mercy on brave Talbot's soul!

2 Endue, honour.
3 In high spirits.
4 A racial deer is the term of chase for lean poor deer.
5 Spies.
6 Vanquished, baffled.

H h 4
And on his son, young John; whom two hours since,
I met in travel toward his warlike father.
These seven years did not Talbot see his son;
And now they meet where both their lives are done.
York. Alas! what joy shall noble Talbot have,
To bid his young son welcome to his grave?
Away! vexation almost stops my breath,
That sonnerd friends greet in the hour of death.
Lucy. Farewell! no more my fortune can,
But curse the cause I cannot aid the man.
Maine, Blois, Poictiers, and Tours, are won away.
'Long all of Somerset, and his delay.
[Exit.]
Lucy. Thus, while the vesture of sedition
Feeds in the bosom of such great commanders,
Sleeping negligence doth betray to loss
The conquest of our scarce-old conqueror,
That ever-living man of memory,
Henry the fifth; — Whiles they each other cross,
Lives, honours, lauds, and all, hurry to loss. [Exit.

SCENE IV. — Other Plains of Gascony.

Enter Somerset, with his Forces; an Officer of Talbot's with him.

Som. It is too late; I cannot send them now:
This expedition was by York, and Talbot,
Too rashly plotted; all our general force
Might with a valley of the very town
Be buckled with: the over-daring Talbot
Hath sunder'd all his gloss of former honour,
By this unheedful, desperate, wild adventure;
York set him on to fight, and die in shame;
That, Talbot dead, great York might bear the name.
Oft. Here is sir William Lucy, who with me
Set from our o'er-match'd forces forth for aid.

Enter Sir William Lucy.

Som. How now, sir William? whither were you sent?
Lucy. Whither, my lord? from bought and sold lord Talbot?
Who, ringing about? with bold adversity,
Cries out for noble York and Somerset,
To beat assaulting death from his weak legions.
And whilsts the honourable capter there
Drops bloody sweat from his war-wardened limbs,
And, in advantage ling'ring, looks for rescue,
You, his false hopes, the trust of England's honour,
Keep off aloof with worthless emulation.
Let not your private discord keep away
The leved succours that should lend him aid,
While he, renowned noble gentleman,
Yields up his life unto a world of odds:
Orleans the Bastard, Charles, and Burgundy,
Aixer, Reignore, compass him about,
And Talbot perish'd by your default.

Som. York set him on, York should have sent him aid.

Lucy. And York as fast upon your grace exclaims;
Swearing that you withhold his levied horse,
Collected for this expedition.

Som. York lies; he might have sent and had the horse:
I owe him little duty, and less love;
And take foul scorn, to fawn on him by sending.

Lucy. The fraud of England, not the force of France
Hath now entrapp'd the noble-minded Talbot:
Never to England shall he bear his life;
But die, betray'd to fortune by your strife.

Som. Come, go; I will dispatch the horsemen straight:
Within six hours they will be at his aid.
Lucy. The place doth come rescue; he is ta'en or slain;
For fly he could not, if he would have fled;
And fly would Talbot never, though he might.
Som. If he be dead, brave Talbot then adieu!
Lucy. His fame lives in the world, his shame in you.

SCENE V. — The English Camp, near Bourdeaux.

Enter Talbot, and John his Son.

Tal. O young John Talbot! I did send for thee,
To tutor thee in stratagems of war;
That Talbot's name might be in thee reviv'd,
When sapless age, and weak unable limbs,
Should bring thy father to his drooping chair.
But, — O malignant and ill-boding stars! —
Now thou art come unto a feast or death,
A terrible and unavoid'd danger!

Therefore, dear boy, mount on my swiftest horse;
And I'll direct thee how thou shalt escape
By sudden flight: come, daily not; begone.
John. Is my name Talbot? and am I thy son?
And shall I fly? O, if you love my mother,
Dishonour not her honourable name,
To make a bastard, and a slave of me:
The world will say — He is not Talbot's blood,
That basely fled, when noble Talbot stood.

Tal. Fly, to revenge my death, if I be slain.
John. He, that flies so, will ne'er return again.
Tal. Too both stay, we both are sure to die.
John. Then let me stay; and, father, do you fly:
Your loss is great, so your regard should be;
My worth unknown, no loss is known in me.
Upon my death the French can little boast;
In yours they will, in you all hopes are lost.
Flight cannot stain the honour you have won;
But mine it will, that no exploit have done:
You fled for vantage every one will swear;
But, if I bow, they'll say — it was for fear.
There is no hope that ever I will stay,
If, the first hour, I shrink, and run away.
Here, on my knee, I beg mortality,
Rather than life preserv'd with base iniquity.

Tal. Shall all thy mother's hopes lie in one tomb?
John. Ay, rather than I'll shame my mother's womb.
Tal. Upon my blessing, I command thee go.
John. To fight I will, but not to fly the foe.
Tal. Part of thy father may be sav'd in thee.
John. No part of him, but will be shame in me.
Tal. Thou never hadst renown, nor canst not lose it.
John. Yes, your renowned name; Shall flight abuse it?
Tal. Thy father's charge shall clear thee from that stain.

John. You cannot witness for me, being slain.
If death be so apparent, then both fly.
Tal. And leave my followers here, to fight and die?
My age was never tainted with such shame.
John. And shall my youth be guilty of such blame?
No more can I be sever'd from your side,
Than can yourself yourself in twain divide:
Stay, go, do what you will, the like do I;
For live I will not, if my father die.
Tal. Then here I take my leave of thee, fair son,
Born to eclipse thy life this afternoon.
Come, side by side together live and die;
And soul with soul from France to heaven fly.

[Exeunt.]
Scene VI. — A Field of Battle.

Alarum: Excursions, wherein Talbot's Son is hemmed about, and Talbot rescues him.

Tal. Saint George and victory! fight, soldiers, fight! The regent hath with Talbot broke his word, And left us to the rage of France's sword. Where is John Talbot? — pause, and take thy breath; I gave thee life, and rescu'd thee from death. John. O twice my father! twice 1 thy son: The life thou gav'st me first, was lost and done; Till with thy warlike sword, despite of fate, To my determin'd 2 time thou gav'st new date.

Tal. When from the dauphin's crest thy sword struck fire, It warms thy father's heart with proud desire Of bold-faced victory. Then leaden age, Quicken'd with youthful spleen, and warlike rage, Beat down Alençon, Orleans, Burgundy, And from the pride of Gallia rescu'd thee. The fierce bastard Orleans — that drew blood From thee, my boy; and had the maidenhood Of thy first fight — I soon enwrapped; And, interchanging blows, I quickly shed Some of his bastard blood; and, in disgrace, Bespoke him thus: Contaminated, base, And misbegotten blood I spilt of thine, Mean and right poor; for that pure blood of mine, Which thou didst force from Talbot, my brave boy: — Here, purposing the Bastard to destroy, Came in strong rescue. Speak thy father's care; Art not thou weary, John? How dost thou fare? Wilt thou yet leave the battle, boy, and fly, Now thou art seal'd the son of chivalry? Fly, to revenge my death, when I am dead; The help of one stands me in little stead. O, too much folly is it, well I wot, To hazard all our lives in one small boat. If I to-day die not with Frenchmen's rage, To-morrow shall I die with mickle age: By me they nothing gain, and if I stay, 'Tis but the short'nig of my life one day: In thee thy mother dies, our household's name, My death's revenge, thy youth, and England's fame: All these, and more, we hazard by thy stay; All these are sav'd, if thou wilt fly away. John. The sword of Orleans hath not made me smart; These words of yours draw life-blood from my heart: On that advantage, bought with such a shame, (To save a paltry life, and slay bright fame,) Before young Talbot from old Talbot fly: The coward horse, that bears me, fall and die: And like 3 me to the peasant boys of France; To be shame's scorn, and subject of mischance! Surely, by all the glory you have won, An if I fly, I am not Talbot's son: Then talk no more of flight, it is no boot; If son to Talbot, die at Talbot's foot. Tal. Then follow thou thy desperate sire of Crete, Thou Icarus; thy life to me is sweet: If thou wilt fight, fight by thy father's side; And, commendable prov'd, let's die in pride.

Scene VII. — Another Part of the same.

Alarum: Excursions. Enter Talbot wounded, supported by a Servant.

Tal. Where is my other life? mine own is gone; — O, where's young Talbot? where is valiant John? —

[Exit.]

Tal. Young Talbot's valour makes me smile at thee: — When he perceiv'd he shrink, and on my knee, His bloody sword he brandish'd over me, And, like a hungry lion did commence Rough deeds of rage, and stern impatience; But when my angry guardian stood alone, Tending my ruin 4, and assail'd 5 of none, Dizzy-ey'd fury, and great rage of heart, Suddenly made him from my side to start Into the clust'ring battle of the French: And in that sea of blood my boy did drench His overmounting spirit; and there died My Icarus, my blossom, in his pride.

Enter Soldiers, bearing the Body of John Talbot.

Serv. O, my dear lord! lo, where your son is borne!

Tal. Thouantic death, which laugh'st us here to scorn.

Anon, from thy insulting tyranny, Coupled in bonds of perpetuity.

Two Talbots, winged through the lither 6 sky, In thy despite, shall 'scape mortality. — O thou whose wounds become hard-favour'd death, Speak to thy father, ere thou yield thy breath: Brave death by speaking, whether he will, or no; Imagine him a Frenchman, and thy foe. — Poor boy! he smiles, methinks; as who should say: Had death been French, then death had died to-day. Come, come, and lay him in his father's arms; My spirit can no longer bear these harms, Soldiers, adieu! I have what I would have, Now my old arms are young John Talbot's grave.

[Exit.]

Alarums. Exeunt Soldiers and Servant, leaving the two Bodies. Enter Charles, Alençon, Bur- gundy, Bastard, La Pucelle, and Forces.

Char. Had York and Somerset brought rescue in, We should have found a bloody day of this.

Bast. How the young whelp of Talbot's, raging wrong,

Did flesh his pungy sword in Frenchmen's blood! Puc. Once I encounter'd him, and thus I said, Thou maiden youth, be vanquish'd by a maid: But — with a proud, majestic, high scorn, — He answer'd thus; Young Talbot was not born To be the pillar of a girly 7 wench: So, rushing in the bowels of the French, He left me proudly, as unworthy fight.

Dur. Doubtless, he would have made an able knight. See, where he lies inerced in the arms Of the most bloody nurser of his harms.

Bast. Hew them to pieces, hack their bones asunder;

Whose life was England's glory, Gallia's wonder.

Char. O, no; forbear: for that which we have fled During the life, let us not wrong it dead.

Enter Sir William Lucy, attended: a French Herald proceeding.

Lucy. Herald, Conduct me to the dauphin's tent; to know Who hath obtain'd the glory of the day.

Char. On what submissive message art thou sent? Lucy. Submission, dauphin? 'tis a mere French word; —

[To Eleanor.] 4 Watching me with tenderness in my fall." 5 Flexible, yielding. 6 Raving mad. 7 Wanton.
We English warriors wot not what it means,
I come to know what prisoners thou hast ta'en,
And to survey the bodies of the dead.
Char. For prisoners ask'st thou? hell our prison is.
But tell me whom thou seek'st.
Luc. We seek the great Alcides of the field,
Valiant lord Talbot, earl of Shrewsbury?
Created, for his rare success in arms,
Great earl of Washford, Waterford, and Valence;
Lord Talbot of Goodrig and Urchinfield,
Lord Strange of Blackmere, lord Ver dun of Alton, Lord Cromwell of Wingfield, lord Furnival of Shief-field,
The thrice victorious lord of Falconbridge;
Knight of the noble order of saint George,
Worthy saint Michael, and the golden fleece;
Great marshal to Henry the sixth,
Of all his wars within the realm of France?
Puc. Here is a silly stately style indeed!
The Turk, that two-and-fifty kingdoms hath,
Writs not so tedious a style as this.
Him, that thou magnifist with all these titles,
Bloody and breathless lies here at our feet.

Lucy. Is Talbot slain; the Frenchmen's only scourge.
Your kingdom's terrou and black Nemesis?
O, were mine eye-balls into bullets turn'd,
That I, in rage, might shoot them at your faces!
O, that I could but call these dead to life!
It were enough to fright the realm of France:
Were but his picture left among you here,
It would amaze the proudest of you all.
Give me their bodies; that I may bear them hence,
And give them burial as becometh their worth.

Char. Take their bodies hence.
Lucy. I'll bear them hence:
But from their ashes shall be rear'd
A phoenix that shall make all France afear'd Char. So we be rid of them, do with 'em what thou wilt.
And now to Paris, in this conquering vein;
All will be ours, now bloody Talbot's slain.

[Exeunt.

ACT V.

Enter King Henry, Gloster, and Exeter.
K. Hen. Have you perus'd the letters from the pope,
The emperor, and the earl of Armagnac?
Glo. I have, my lord; and their intent is this,—
They humbly sue unto your excellence,
To have a godly peace concluded of,
Between the realms of England and of France.
K. Hen. How doth your grace affect their motion?
Glo. Well, my good lord; and as the only means
To stop effusion of our Christian blood,
And 'stablish quietness on every side.
K. Hen. Ay, marry, uncle; for I always thought,
It was both impious and unnatural,
That such immanity and bloody strife
Should reign among professors of one faith.
Glo. Beside, my lord,—the sooner to effect,
And surer bind, this knot of amity,—
The earl of Armagnac—near knit to Charles,
A man of great authority in France,
Proffers his only daughter to your grace
In marriage, with a large and sumptuous dowry.
K. Hen. Marriage, uncle! alas! my years are young;
And fitter is my study and my books,
Than wanton dalliance with a paramour.
Yet, call the ambassadors; and, as you please,
So let them have their answers every one:
I shall be well content with any choice,
Tends to God's glory, and my country's weal.

Enter a Legate, and two Ambassadors, with Winchester, in a Cardinal's Habit.

Exe. What! is my lord of Winchester install'd,
And call'd unto a cardinal's degree!
Then, I perceive, that will be verified,
Henry the fifth did sometime prophecy,

* Inhumanity.

If once he came to be a cardinal,
He'll make his cap co-equal with the crown.
K. Hen. My lords ambassadors, your several suits
Have been consider'd and debated on.
Your purpose is both good and reasonable:
And, therefore, are we certainly resolv'd
To draw conditions of a friendly peace;
Which, by my lord of Winchester, we mean
Shall be transported presently to France.
Glo. And for the profiter of my lord your master,—
I have inform'd his highness so at large,
As—liking of the lady's virtuous gifts,
Her beauty, and the value of her dower,—
He doth intend she shall be England's queen.
K. Hen. In argument and proof of which contract,
Bear her this jewel, [To the Amb.] pledge of my affection.
And so, my lord protector, see them guarded,
And safely brought to Dover; where, in shipp'd,
Commit them to the fortune of the sea.

[Exeunt King Henry and Train; Gloster,
Exeter, and Ambassadors.

Win. Stay, my lord legate; you shall first receive
The sum of money, which I promised
Should be deliver'd to his holiness
For clothing me in these grave ornaments.

Leg. I will attend upon your lordship's leisure.
Win. Now, Winchester will not submit, I trow,
Or be inferior to the proudest peer.
Humbley of Gloster, thou shalt well perceive,
That, neither in birth, or for authority,
The bishop will be overborne by thee:
I'll either make thee stoop, and bend thy knee,
Or sack this country with a mutiny.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. — France. Plains in Anjou.

Enter Charles, Burgundy, Alençon, la Pucelle,
And Forces, marching.
Char. These news, my lords, may cheer our drooping spirits:

Scene III.

SCENE III. — Before Angiers.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter La Pucelle.

Puc. The regent conquerors, and the Frenchmen fly. —

Now help, ye charming spells, and periaps; and ye choice spirits that admonish me, and give me signs of future accidents! You speedy helpers, that are substitutes Under the lordly monarch of the north, appear, and aid me in this enterprise! — No, they forsake me. Then the time is come, That France must vail her lofty-plumed crest, And let her head fall into England's lap. My ancient incantations are too weak, And hell too strong for me to buckle with: Now, France, thy glory droopeth to the dust.

[Exit.

Alarums. Enter French and English fighting. La Pucelle and York fight hand to hand. La Pucelle is taken. The French fly.

York. Damsel of France, I think I have you fast: Unchain your spirits now with spelling charms, And try if they can gain your liberty. — See how the ugly witch doth bend her brows, As if, with Circe, she would change my shape.

Puc. Chang'd to a worser shape thou canst not be.

York. O, Charles the dauphin is a proper man: No shape but his can please your dainty eye.

Puc. A plaguing mischief light on Charles, and thee! And may ye both be suddenly surpriz'd By bloody hands, in sleeping on your beds!

York. Fell, bann'd! beg! enchantress, hold thy tongue.

Puc. I pr'ythee, give me leave to curse a while.

York. Curse, miscreant, when thou comest to the stake.

[Execut.

Alarums. Enter Suffolk, leading in Lady Margaret.

Suf. Be what thou wilt, thou art my prisoner.

Gases on her.

O fairest beauty, do not fear, nor fly; For I will touch thee but with reverent hands, And lay them gently on thy tender side. I kiss these fingers [Kissing her hand.] for eternal peace:

Who art thou? say, that I may honour thee.

Mar. Margaret my name; and daughter to a king, The king of Naples, whose'oeur thou art.

Suf. And Earl I am, and Suffolk am I call'd.

Be not offended, nature's miracle, Thou art allotted to be ta'en by me: So doth the swan her downy cygnets save, Keeping them prisoners underneath her wings, Yet, if this servile usage once offend, Go, and be free again as Suffolk's friend.

[She turns away as going.

O, stay! — I have no power to let her pass; My hand would free her, but my heart says — no.

As plays the sun upon the glassy streams, Twinkling another counterfeit beam, So seems this gorgeous beauty to mine eyes.

Pain would I woo her, yet I dare not speak: I'll call for pen and ink, and write my mind: Fye, De la Poole! disable not thyself;

Hast not a tongue? is she not here thy prisoner? Wilt thou be daunted at a woman's sight?

Ay; beauty's princely majesty is such, Confounds the tongue, and makes the senses rough.

Mar. Say, earl of Suffolk, — if thy name be so, —

What ransome must I pay before I pass? For, I perceive, I am thy prisoner.

Suf. How canst thou tell, she will deny thy suit, Before thou make a trial of her love?

Mar. Why speak'st thou not? what ransome must I pay?

Suf. She's beautiful; and therefore to be woo'd: She is a woman; therefore to be won.

Mar. Will thou accept of ransome, yea, or no?

Suf. Fond man! remember that thou hast a wife; Then how can Margaret be thy paramour?

Mar. I were best leave him, for he will not hear.

Suf. There all is marr'd; there lies a cooling card, Mar. He talks at random; sure the man is mad.

Suf. And yet a dispensation may be had.

Mar. And yet I would that you would answer me, Suf. I'll win this lady Margaret for my king, And so no fancy may be satisfied, And peace established between these realms.

But there remains a scruple in that too: For though her father be the king of Naples, Duke of Anjou and Maine, yet is he poor, And our nobility will scorn the match.

Mar. Hear ye, captain? Are you not at leisure?

Suf. It shall be so, disdain they near so much:

Henry is youthful, and will quickly yield.

[Aside.

Madam, I have a secret to reveal.

Mar. What though I be enthral'd? he seems a knight, And will not any way dishonour me.

Suf. Lady, voue safe to listen what I say.

Mar. Perhaps, I shall be rescued by the French; And then I need not crave his courtesy.

Suf. Sweet madam, give me hearing in a cause — Mar. Tush! women have been captivate ere now.

Suf. Lady, wherefore talk you so?

Mar. I cry you mercy, 'tis but quid for quo.

2 "Do not represent thyself so weak."

4 Love.
FIRST PART OF

And make this marriage to be solemniz'd;
So, farewell, Reignier! Set this diamond safe
In golden palaces, as it becomes.

Reig. I do embrace thee, as I would embrace
The Christian prince, king Henry, were he here.

Mar. Farewell, my lord! Good wishes, praise, and prayers,
Shall Suffolk ever have of Margaret.
[Going.

Suf. Farewell, sweet madam! But hark you,
Margaret;

No princely commendations to my king?

Mar. Such commendations as become a maid,
A virgin, and his servant, say to him.

Suf. Words sweetly plac'd, and modestly directed.
But, madam, I must trouble you again, —
No loving token to his majesty?

Mar. Yes, my good lord; a pure unspotted heart,
Never yet tainted with love, I send the king.

Suf. And this withal.

[Kisses her.
Mar. That for thyself; — I will not so presume,
To send such peevish tokens to a king.

[Exit Reignier and Margaret.

Suf. O, wert thou for myself! — But, Suffolk, stay;
Thou mayst not wander in that labyrinth;
There Minotaurs, and ugly treaasons, lurk.
Solicit Henry with her wondrous praise:
Bethink thee on her virtues that surmount
Her natural graces that extinguish art;
Repeat their semblance often on the seas,
That, when thou com'st to kneel at Henry's feet,
Thou mayst beare him of his wits with wonder.
[Exit.

Enter York, Warwick, and Cardinal Beaufort, attended.

Car. Lord regent, I do greet your excellence
With letters of commission from the king.
For know, my lords, the states of Christendom,
Mov'd with remorse? of these outrageous broils,
Have earnestly implo'rd a general peace
Betwixt our nation and the aspiring French;
And here at hand the dauphin, and his train,
Approacheth, to confer about some matter.

York. Is all our travall turn'd to this effect?
After the slaughter of so many peers,
So many captains, gentlemen, and soldiers,
That in this quarrel have been overthrown,
And sold their bodies for their country's benefit,
Shall we at last conclude effeminate peace?
Have we not lost most part of all the towns,
By treason, falsehood, and by treachery,
Our great progenitors had conquer'd? —
O, Warwick, Warwick! I foresee with grief.
The utter loss of all the realm of France.

War. Be patient, York: if we conclude a peace,
It shall be with such strict and severe covenants,
As little shall the Frenchmen gain thereby.

Enter Charles, attended; Alençon, Bastard,
Reignier, and others.

Char. Since, lords of England, it is thus agreed,
That peaceful truce shall be proclaim'd in France,
We come to be informed by yourselves
What the conditions of that league must be.
York. Speak, Winchester; for boiling choler chokes
The hollow passage of my poison'd voice,
By sight of these our baleful enemies.
Car. Charles, and the rest, it is enacted thus: That— in regard king Henry gives consent, Of more compassion, and of lenity, To ease your country of distressful war, And suffer you to breathe in fruitful peace,— You shall become true liegenmen to his crown; And Charles, upon condition thou wilt swear To pay him tribute, and submit thyself, Thou shalt be plac’d as viceroy under him, And still enjoy thy regal dignity.

Alen. Must he be then a shadow of himself? Adorn his temples with a coronet? And yet, in substance and authority, Retain but privilege of a private man? This proffer is absurd and unreasonable.

Char. "Tis known, already that I am possess’d With more than half the Gallian territories, And therein reverence’d for their lawful king: Shall I, for lucre of the rest unvanquish’d, Detrac so much from that prerogative, As to be called but viceroy of the whole? No, lord ambassador; I’ll rather keep That which I have, than, coveting for more, Be cast from possibility of all.

York. Insulting Charles! fast thou by secret means Used intercession to obtain a league; And, now the matter grows to compromise, Shall our ambassador not on the point? Either accept the title thou usurp’st, Of benefit proceeding from our king, And not of any challenge of desert, Or we will plague thee with incessant wars.

Reig. My lord, you do not well in obstinacy To cavil in the course of this contract: If once it be neglected, ten to one, We shall not find like opportunity.

Alen. To say the truth, it is your policy, To save your subjects from such massacre, And ruthless slaughters, as are daily seen By our proceeding in hostility: And therefore, I am much compact of a truce, Although you break it when your pleasure serves.

[Aside to Charles.

War. How say’st thou, Charles? shall our condition stand?

Char. It shall:

Only reserv’d, you claim no interest In any of our towns of garrison.

York. Then swear allegiance to his majesty; As thou art knight never to disobey, Nor be rebellious to the crown of England, Thou nor thy nobles, to the crown of England.

[Charles, and the rest, give tokens of fealty. So now dismiss your army when you please; Hang up your ensigns, let your drums be still] For here we entertain a solemn peace.

[Exeunt.

Scene V.—London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Henry in conference with Suffolk; Gloster, and Exeter, following.

K. Hen. Your wonderous rare description, noble earl, Of beauteous Margaret hath astonish’d me: Her virtues, grace with external gifts, Do breed love’s settled passions in my heart: And like as rigour in tempestuous gusts Provokes the mightiest hulk against the tide;

8 Coronet is here used for crown.
9 "Be content to live as the beneficiary of our king."

So am I driven, by breath of her renown, Either to suffer shipwreck, or arrive Where I may have fruition of her love.

Suf. Tush! my good lord! this superficial tale Is but a preface of her worthy praise: The chief perfections of that lovely dame, (Had I sufficient skill to utter them,) Would make a volume of enticing lines, Able to ravish any dull conceit, And, which is more, she is not so divine, So full replete with choice of all delights, But, with as humble lowliness of mind, She is content to be at your command; Command, I mean, of virtuous chaste intents, To love and honour Henry as her lord.

K. Hen. And otherwise will Henry ne’er presume. Therefore, my lord protector, give consent, That Margaret may be England’s royal queen.

Glo. So should I give consent to flatter sin. You know, my lord, your highness is betroth’d Unto another lady of esteem;

How shall we then dispense with that contract, And not deface your honour with reproach?

Suf. As doth a ruler with unlawful oaths; Or one, that, at a triumph! having vow’d To try his strength, forthsaketh yet the lists By reason of his adversary’s odds. A poor earl’s daughter is to use no odds, And therefore may be broke without offence.

Glo. Why, what, I pray, is Margaret more than that? Her father is no better than an earl, Although in glorious titles he excel.

Suf. Yes, my good lord, her father is a king, The king of Naples, and Jerusalem; And of such great authority in France, As his alliance will confirm our peace, And keep the Frenchmen in allegiance.

Glo. And so the earl of Armagnac may do, Because he is near kinsman unto Charles.

Exe. Beside, his wealth doth warrant liberal dower; While Reigl will sooner receive, than give.

Suf. A dower, my lords! disgrace not so your king, That he should be so abject, base, and poor, To choose for wealth, and not for perfect love. Henry is able to enrich his queen, And not to seek a queen to make him rich: So worthless peasants bargain for their wives, As market-men for oxen, sheep, or horse, Marriage is a matter of more worth, Than to be dealt in by attorneyship; Not whom we will, but whom his grace affects, Must be companion of his nuptial bed: And therefore, lords, since he affects her most, It most of all these reasons binds us, In our opinions she should be preferred. For what is wedlock forced, but a hell, An age of discord and continual strife? Whereas the contrary bringeth forth bliss, And is a pattern of celestial peace. Whom should we match with Henry, being a king, But Margaret, that is daughter to a king? Her peerless feature, joined with her birth, Approves her fit for none, but for a king; Her valiant courage, and undaunted spirit, (More than in women commonly is seen,) Will answer our hope in issue of a king; For Henry, son unto a conqueror, Is likely to beget more conquerors.

1 A triumph then signified a public exhibition; such as a mask, or revel.
If with a lady of so high resolve,
As is fair Margaret, he be link'd in love.
Then yield, my lords; and here conclude with me,
That Margaret shall be queen, and none but she.

K. Hen. Whether it be through force of your report,
My noble lord of Suffolk; or for that
My tender youth was never yet attaint
With any passion of inflaming love,
I cannot tell; but this I am assur'd,
I feel such sharp dissension in my breast,
Such fierce alarums both of hope and fear,
As I am sick with working of my thoughts.
Take, therefore, shipping; post, my lord, to France;
Agree to any covenants; and procure
That lady Margaret do vouchsafe to come
To cross the seas to England, and be crown'd
King Henry's faithful and anointed queen:
For your expenses and sufficient charge,

Among the people gather up a tenth.
Begone, I say; for, till you do return,
I rest perplexed with a thousand cares.—
And you, good uncle, banish all offence:
If you do censure me by what you were,
Not what you are, I know it will excuse
This sudden execution of my will.
And so conduct me, where from company,
I may revolve and ruminate my grief.

Glo. Ay, grief, I fear me, both at first and last.

Suf. Thus Suffolk hath prevail'd: and thus he goes,
As did the youthful Paris once to Greece;
With hope to find the like event in love,
But prosper better than the Trojan did.
Margaret shall now be queen, and rule the king;
But I will rule both her, the king, and realm.

Exit.

SECOND PART OF

KING HENRY VI.

ACT I.

SCENE I. — London.  A Room of State in the Palace.

Flourish of Trumpets; then Hautboys. Enter, on one side, King Henry, Duke of Gloucester, Salisbury, Warwick, and Cardinal Beaufort; on the other, Queen Margaret, led in by Suffolk; York, Somerset, Buckingham, and others, following.

Suff. As by your high imperial majesty I had in charge, at my depart for France, As procurator to your excellence, To marry princess Margaret for your grace; So in the famous ancient city, Tours,— In presence of the kings of France and Sicil, The dukes of Orleans, Calaber, Bretaigne, Alençon, Seven earls, twelve barons, twenty reverend bishops,— I have perform’d my task, and was espous’d: And humbly now upon my bended knee, In sight of England, and her lordly peers, Deliver up my title in the queen To your most gracious hands, that are the sub-tance Of that great shadow I did represent; The happiest gift that ever marquess gave, The fairest queen that ever king receiv’d.

K. Hen. Suffolk, arise. — Welcome, queen Margaret: I can express no kinder sign of love, Than this kind kiss. — 0 Lord, that lends me life, Lend me a heart replete with thankfulness! For thou hast given me, in this beauteous face, A world of earthly blessings to my soul, If sympathy of love unite our thoughts.

Q. Mar. Great king of England, and my gracious lord; The mutual conference that my mind hath had — By day, by night, waking, and in my dreams; In courtly company, or at my beads,— With you, mine alder-liebest 1 sovereign,

1 Beloved above all things.
SECOND PART OF

Act 1.

Makes me the bolder to salute my king
With ruder terms; such as my wit affords,
And over-joy of heart doth minister.

K. Hen. Her sight did ravish: but her grace in speech,

Her words y-clad with wisdom's majesty,
Makes me, from wondering, fall to weeping joys;
Such is the fulness of my heart's content.

Lords with one cheerful voice welcome my love.

All. Long live queen Margaret, England's happiness!

Q. Mar. We thank you all. [Flourish.

Suf. My lord protector, so it please your grace,
Here are the articles of contracted peace,
Between our sovereign and the French king Charles,
For eighteen months concluded by consent.

Glo. [Reads.] Imprimis, It is agreed, between the French king, Charles, and William de la Poole, marquess of Suffolk, ambassador for Henry king of England, — that the said Henry shall espouse the lady Margaret, daughter unto Régnier king of Naples, Sicilia, and Jerusalem; and crown her queen of England, etc. the thirtieth of May next ensuing.

Item, — That the duchy of Anjou and the county of Maine, shall be released and delivered to the king her father

K. Hen. Uncle, how now?

Glo. Pardon me, gracious lord;
Some sudden qualm hath struck me at the heart,
And dimm'd mine eyes, that I can read no further.

K. Hen. Uncle of Winchester, I pray read on.

Car. Item, — It is further agreed between them, — that the duchies of Anjou and Maine shall be released and delivered over to the king her father; and she sent over of the king of England's own proper cost and charges, without having dover.

K. Hen. They please us well. — Lord marquess kneel down;
We here create thee the first duke of Suffolk,
And girt thee with the sword.

Cousin of York, we here discharge your grace
From being regent in the parts of France,
Till term of eighteen months be full expir'd. —

Thanks, uncle Winchester, Gloster, York, and Buckingham,
Somerset, Salisbury, and Warwick;
We thank you all for this great favour done,
In entertainment to my princely queen.
Come, let us in, and with all speed provide
To see her coronation be perform'd.

[Exeunt King, Queen, and Suffolk.

Glo. Brave peers of England, pillars of the state,
To you duke Humphrey must unload his grief;
Your grief, the common grief of all the land,
What did my brother Henry spend his youth,
His valour, coin, and people in the wars?
Did he so often lodge in open field,
In winter's cold, and summer's parching heat,
To conquer France, his true inheritance?
And did my brother Bedford toll his wits,
To keep by policy what Henry got?
Have you yourselves, Somerset, Buckingham,
Brave York, Salisbury, and victorious Warwick,
Receiv'd deep scars in France and Normandy?
Or hath my uncle Beaufort, and myself,
With all the learned council of the realm,
Studied so long, sat in the council-house,
Early and late, debating to and fro
How France and Frenchmen might be kept in awe?
And hath his highness in his infancy

Been crown'd in Paris, in despite of foes?
And shall these labours, and these honours, die?
Shall Henry's conquest, Bedford's vigilance,
Your deeds of war, and all our counsel, die?
O peers of England, shameful is this league!
Futal this marriage, cancelling your fame:
Blotting your names from common memory:
Razing the characters of your renown;
Defacing monuments of conquer'd France;
Undoing all, as all had never been!

Car. Nephew, what means this passionate discourse?

This peroration with such circumstance?

For France, 'tis ours; and we will keep it still.

Glo. Ay, uncle, we will keep it, if we can;
But now it is impossible we should:
Suffolk, the new-made duke that rules the roast,
Hath given the duchies of Anjou and Maine,
Unto the poor king Régnier, whose large style
Agrees not with the leanness of his purse.

Sa. Now, by the death of him that died for all,
These counties were the keys of Normandy:
But wherefore weeps Warwick, my valiant son?

War. For grief, that they are past recovery:
For, were there hope to conquer them again,
My sword should shed hot blood, mine eyes no tears
Anjou and Maine, myself did win them both;
Those provinces these arms of mine did conquer:
And are the cities, that I got with wounds,
Deliver'd up again with peaceful words?

York. For Suffolk's duke — may he be suffocated,
That dims the honour of this warlike isle!
France should have torn and rent my very heart,
Before I would have yielded to this league.
I never read but England's kings have had Large sums of gold, and dowries, with their wives:
And our king Henry gives away his own,
To match with with her that brings no vantages.

Glo. A proper jest, and never heard before,
That Suffolk should demand a whole fifteenth,
For cost and charges in transporting her!
She should have staid in France, and starv'd in France,

Before

Car. My lord of Gloster, now you grow too hot;
It was the pleasure of my lord the king.

Glo. My lord of Winchester, I know your mind;
'Tis not my speeches that you do mislike,
But 'tis my presence that doth trouble you.
Rancour will out: Proud prelate, in thy face
I see thy fury: if I longer stay,
We shall begin our ancient bickerings. —

Lords, farewel; and, say, when I am gone,
I prophesied — France will be lost ere long. [Exit.

Car. So, there goes our protector in a rage.
'Tis known to you, he is mine enemy:
Nay, more, an enemy unto you all;
And no great friend, I fear me, to the king.
Consider, lords, he is the next of blood,
And heir apparent to the English crown;
Had Henry got an empire by his marriage,
And all the wealthy kingdoms of the west,
There's reason he should be displeas'd at it.
Look to it, lords! let not his soothing words
Bewitch your hearts; be wise, and circumspect.
What though the common people favour him,
Calling him — Humphrey, the good duke of Gloster;
Clapping their hands, and crying with loud voice —

2 This speech, crowded with so many circumstances of aggravation.

3 Skirmishings.
Scene I.

KING HENRY VI.

May heaven preserve the good duke Humphrey! I fear me, lords, for all this flattering gloss, He will be found a dangerous protector.

Buck. Why should he then protect our sovereign, He being of age to govern of himself? Cousin of Somerset, join you with me, And all together— with the duke of Suffolk, — We'll quickly hoise duke Humphrey from his seat. Car. This weighty business will not brook delay; I'll to the duke of Suffolk presently. [Exit. Som. Cousin of Buckingham, though Humphrey's pride, And greatness of his place, be grief to us, Yet let us watch the haughty cardinal; His insolence is more intolerable Than all princes in the land beside; If Gloster be displac'd, he'll be protector.

Buck. Or thou, or I, Somerset, will be protector, Despite duke Humphrey, or the cardinal.

[Exeunt Buckingham and Somerset.

Sal. Pride went before, ambition follows him. While these do labour for their own preferment, Be it not for the realm. I never saw But Humphrey duke of Gloster Did bear him like a noble gentleman. Oft have I seen the haughty cardinal— More like a soldier, than a man o'the church, As stout, and proud, as he were lord of all, — Swear like a ruffian, and demean himself Unlike the ruler of a commonweal. — Warwick, my son, the comfort of my age! Thy deeds, thy plainness, and thy house-keeping, Hath won the greatest favour of the commons, Excepting none but good duke Humphrey. — And, brother York, thy acts in Ireland, In bringing them to civil discipline; Thy late exploits, done in the heart of France, When thou wert regent for our sovereign, Have made thee fear'd, and honour'd, of the people: — Join we together, for the public good; In what we can to bridle and suppress The pride of Suffolk, and the cardinal, With Somersets' and Buckingham's ambition; And, as we may, cherish duke Humphrey's deeds, While they do tend the profit of the land.

War. So God help Warwick, as he loves the land, And common profit of his country! York. And so says York, for he hath greatest cause.

Sal. Then let's make haste away, and look unto the main.

[Exeunt Warwick and Salisbury.

York. Anjou and Maine are given to the French; Paris is lost; the state of Normandy Stands on a tickle point, now they are gone: Suffolk concluded on the articles; The peers agreed; and Henry was well pleas'd, To change two dukedoms for a duke's fair daughter. I cannot blame them all; What is't to them? 'Tis thine they give away, and not their own. Pirates may make cheap penny worths of their pillage, And purchase friends, and give to courtiezans, Still dwelling, like lords, till all be gone; While as the silly owner of the goods Weeps over them, and wrings his hapless hands, And shakes his head, and trembling stands aloof, While all is shar'd, and all is borne away; Ready to starve, and dare not touch his own. So York must sit, and fret, and bite his tongue,

While his own lands are bargain'd for, and sold. Methinks, the realms of England, France, and Ireland, Bear that proportion to my flesh and blood, As did the fatal brand Althea burn'd, Unto the prince's heart of Calydon. Anjou and Maine, both given unto the French! Cold news for me; for I had hope of France, Even as I have of fertile England's soil. A day will come, when York shall claim his own; And therefore I will take the Nevils' parts, And make a show of love to proud duke Humphrey, And, when I spy advantage, claim the crown, For that's the golden mark I seek to hit: Nor shall proud Lancaster usurp my right, Nor hold his scepter in his childish fist, Nor wear the diadem upon his head, Whose church-like humours fit not for a crown. Then, York, be still awhile, till time do serve: Watch thou, and wake, when others be asleep, To pry into the secrets of the state; Till Henry, surfeiting in joys of love, With his new bride, and England's dear-bought queen, And Humphrey with the peers be fall'n at jars: Then will I raise aloft the milk-white rose, With whose sweet smell the air shall be perfum'd; And in my standard bear the arms of York, To grapple with the house of Lancaster; And, force perforce, I'll make him yield the crown, Whose bookish rule hath pull'd fair England down. [Exit.

Scene II. — A Room in the Duke of Gloster's House.

Enter Gloster and the Duchess.

Duch. Why droops my lord, like over-ripen'd corn, Hanging the head at Ceres' plenteous load? Why doth the great duke Humphrey knit his brows, As frowning at the favours of the world? Why are thine eyes fix'd to the sullen earth, Gazing on that which seems to dim thy sight? What seest thou there? king Henry's diadem, Enchas'd with all the honours of the world? If so, gaze on, and grovel on thy face, Until thy head be circled with the same. Put forth thy hand, reach at the glorious gold: — What, is't too short? I'll lengthen it with mine: And, having both together heav'd it up, We'll both together lift our heads to heaven; And never more abuses our sight so low, As to vouchsafe one glance unto the ground. Glo. O Nell, sweet Nell, if thou dost love thy lord, Banish the canker of ambitious thoughts: And may that thought, when I imagine ill Against my king and nephew, virtuous Henry, Be my last breathing in this mortal world! My troubous dream this night doth make me sad.

Duch. What dream'd my lord? tell me, and I'll requite it With sweet rehearsal of my morning's dream.

Glo. Methought, this staff, mine office-badge in court, Was broke in twain, by whom, I have forgot, But, as I think, it was by the cardinal; And on the pieces of the broken wand Were plac'd the heads of Edmund duke of Somerset, And William de la Poole first duke of Suffolk. 5 Meleager; whose life was to continue only so long as a certain firebrand should last. His mother Althea having thrown it into the fire, he expired in torment.
This was my dream; what it doth bode, Heaven knows.

Duch. Tut, this was nothing but an argument, That he that breaks a stick of Gloster's grove, Shall lose his head for his presumption. But list to me, my Humphrey, my sweet duke: Methought, I sat in seat of majesty, In the cathedral church of Westminster, And in that chair where kings and queens are crown'd; Where Henry, and dame Margaret, kneel'd to me, And on my head did set the diadem. Glo. Nay, Eleanor, then must I hide outright: Presumptuous dame, ill-nurtur'd Eleanor! Art thou not second woman in the realm? And the protector's wife, belov'd of him? Hast thou not worldly pleasure at command, Above the reach or compass of thy thought? And wilt thou still be hammering treachery, To tumble down thy husband, and thyself, From top of honour to disgrace's feet? Away from me, and let me hear no more.

Duch. What, what, my lord! are you so choleric With Eleanor for telling but her dream? Next time, I'll keep my dreams unto myself, And not be check'd.

Glo. Nay, be not angry, I am pleased again.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord protector, 'tis his highness' pleasure, You do prepare to ride unto Saint Alban's, Whereas the king and queen do mean to hawk.

Glo. I go. — Come, Nell, thou wilt ride with us? Duch. Yes, good my lord, I'll follow presently.

[Exeunt Gloster and Messenger.

Follow I must, I cannot go before,
While Gloster bears this base and humble mind.
Were I a man, a duke, and next of blood,
I would remove these tedious stumbling-blocks,
And smooth my way upon their headless necks:
And, being a woman, I would not be slack
To play my part in fortune's pageant.
Where are you there? sir John? I say, fear not, man,
We are alone; here's none but thee, and I.

Enter Hume.

Hume. May Heaven preserve your royal majesty!

Duch. What say'st thou, majesty! I am but grace.

Hume. But, by the grace of Heaven, and Hume's advice,
Your grace's title shall be multiplied.

Duch. What say'st thou, man? hast thou as yet conferr'd
With Margery Jourdain, the cunning witch;
And Roger Bolingbroke, the informer?
And will they undertake to do me good?

Hume. This they have promised, — to show your highness
A spirit raised from depth of under ground,
That shall make answer to such questions,
As by your grace shall be propounded him.

Duch. It is enough; I'll think upon the questions:
When from Saint Alban's we do make return,
We'll see these things effected to the full.
Here, Hume, take this reward; make merry, man,
With thy confederates in this weighty cause.

[Exit Duchess.

Hume. Hume must make merry with the duchess' gold;
Marry, and shall. But how now, sir John Hume?

Seal up your lips, and give no words but — mum! The business asketh silent secrecy.
Dame Eleanor gives gold, to bring the witch:
Gold cannot come amiss, were she a devil.
Yet have I gold, flies from another coast:
I dare not say from the rich cardinal,
And from the great and new-made duke of Suffolk;
Yet I do find it so: for, to be plain,
They, knowing Eleanor's aspiring humour,
Have hired me to undermine the duchess,
And buzz these conjurations in her brain.
They say, a crafty knave does need no broker;
Yet am I Suffolk and the cardinal's broker.
Hume, if you take not heed, you shall go near
To call them both a pair of crafty knaves.
Well, so it stands: And thus, I fear, at last,
Hume's knavery, will be the duchess' wreck;
And her attainute will be Humphrey's fall:
Sort 8 how it will, I shall have gold for all. [Exit.

SCENE III. — A Room in the Palace.

Enter Peter, and others, with Petitions.

1 Pet. My masters, let's stand close; my lord protector will come this way by-and-by, and then we may deliver our supplications in the quill. 9

2 Pet. Marry, the lord protect him, for he's a good man! Heaven bless him!

Enter Suffolk, and Queen Margaret.

1 Pet. Here 'a comes, methinks, and the queen with him: I'll be the first, sure.

2 Pet. Come back, fool; this is the duke of Suffolk, and not my lord protector.

Suf. How now, fellow? wouldstany thing with me?

1 Pet. I pray my lord, pardon me! I took ye for my lord protector.

Q. Mar. [Reading the superscription.] To my lord protector! are your supplications to his lordship? Let me see them: What is thine?

1 Pet. Mine is, an't please your grace, against John Goodman, my lord cardinal's man, for keeping my house, and lands, and wife and all, from me.

Suf. Thy wife too? that is some wrong, indeed. — What's yours? — What's here! [Reads.] Against the duke of Suffolk, for enclosing the commons of Melford. — How now, sir knave?

2 Pet. Alas, sir, I am but a poor petitioner of our whole township.

Peter. [Presenting his petition.] Against my master, Thomas Horner, for saying, That the duke of York was rightful heir to the crown.

Q. Mar. What say'st thou? Did the duke of York say, he was rightful heir to the crown?

Peter. That my master was? No, forsooth: my master said, That he was; and that the king was an usurper.

Suf. Who is there? [Enter Servants.] — Take this fellow in, and send for his master with a pursuivant presently: — we'll hear more of your matter before the king. [Enter Servants, with Peter.

Q. Mar. And for you, that love to be protected Under the wings of our protector's grace, Begin your suits anew, and sue to him.

[Exeunt Petitioners.

[Enter Petitioners.]

Away, base cullions! 1 Suffolk, let them go.

All. Come, let's be gone. [Exeunt Petitioners.

8 Happen.

9 With great exactness and observance of form.

1 Scoundrels.
Q. Mar. My lord of Suffolk, say, is this the guise,
Is this the fashion in the court of England?
Is this the government of Britain's isle,
And this the royalty of Albion's king?
What, shall king Henry be a pupil still,
Under the surly Gloster's governance?
Am I a queen in title and in style,
And must be made a subject to a duke?
I tell thee, Poole, when in the city Tours
Thou ran'st a tilt in honour of my love,
And stol'st away the ladies' hearts of France;
I thought king Henry had resembled thee,
In courage, courtship, and proportion:
But all his mind is bent to holiness,
To number Aes-Maries on his heads;
His champions are — the prophets and apostles:
His weapons, holy saws of sacred writ;
His study is his tilt-yard, and his loves
Are brazen images of canonized saints.
I would, the college of cardinals
Would choose him pope, and carry him to Rome,
And set the triple crown upon his head;
That were a state fit for his holiness.
Suf. Madam, be patient: as I was cause
Your highness came to England, so will I
In England work your grace's full content.
Q. Mar. Beside the haughty protector, have we Beaufort,
The imperious churchman; Somerset, Buckingham,
And grumbling York: and not the least of these,
But can do more in England than the king.
Suf. And he of these that can do most of all,
Cannot do more in England than the Nevils:
Salisbury, and Warwick, are no simple peers.
Q. Mar. Not all these lords dovek me half so much,
As that proud dame, the lord protector's wife.
She sweeps it through the court with troops of ladies,
More like an empress than duke Humphrey's wife;
Strangers in court do take her for the queen:
She bears a duke's revenues on her back,
And in her heart she scorches her poverty:
Shall for the duke of York be heang'd as she?
She vaunted 'mongst her minions t'other day,
The very train of her worst wearing-gown
Was better worth than all my father's lands,
Till Suffolk gave two dukedoms for his daughter.
Suf. Madam, myself have lim'd a bush for her;
And plac'd a quire of such enticing birds,
That she will light to listen to the lays,
And never mount to trouble you again.
So, let her rest: and, madam, list to me;
For I am bold to counsel you in this.
Although we fancy not the cardinal,
Yet must we join with him, and with the lords,
Till we have brought duke Humphrey in disgrace.
As for the duke of York, — a late complaint
Will make but little for his benefit:
So, one by one, we'll weed them all at last,
And you yourself shall steer the happy helm.

Enter King Henry, York, and Somerset, conversing with him; Duke and Duchess of Gloster, Cardinal Beaufort, Buckingham, Salisbury, and Warwick.
K. Hen. For my part, noble lords, I care not which;
Or Somerset, or York, all's one to me.
York. If York have ill demean'd himself in France,
Then let him be denay'd the regentship.

Som. If Somerset be unworthy of the place,
Let York be regent, I will yield to him.
War. Whether your grace be worthy, yea, or no,
Dispute not that: York is the worthier.
Car. Ambitious Warwick, let thy betters speak.
War. The cardinal's not my better in the field,
Buck. All in this presence, are thy betters, Warwick.
War. Warwick may live to be the best of all.
Sal. Peace, son; — and show some reason,
Buckingham,
Why Somerset should be preferr'd in this.
Q. Mar. Because the king, forsooth, will have it so.
Glo. Madam, the king is old enough himself
To give his censure: these are no woman's matters.
Q. Mar. If he be old enough, what needs your grace
To be protector of his excellence?
Glo. Madam, I am protector of the realm;
And, at his pleasure, will resign my place.
Suf. Resign it then, and leave thine insolence,
Since thou wert king, (as who is king but thou?)
The commonwealth hath daily run to wreak:
The dauphin hath prevail'd beyond the seas;
And all the peers and nobles of the realm
Have been as bondmen to thy sovereignty.
Car. The commons hast thou rack'd; the clergy's bags
Are lank, and lean with thy extortions.

Som. Thy sumptuous buildings, and thy wife's attire,
Have cost a mass of public treasury.
Buck. Thy cruelty in execution,
Upon offenders, hath exceeded law,
And left thee to the mercy of the law.
Q. Mar. Thy sale of offices, and towns in France,—
If they were known, as the suspect is great, —
Would make thee quickly hop without thy head.
[Exit Gloster. The Queen drops her fan.
Give me my fan: what, minion! can you not?
Gives the Duchess a box on the ear.
I cry you mercy, madam; Was it you?
Duch. Was't I? yea, I was, proud Frenchwoman!
K. Hen. Sweetheart, be quiet: 'twas against her will.
Duch. A woman's heart will! Good king, look to't in time;
She'll hamper thee, and dandle thee like a baby:
But shall not strike dame Eleanor unreveng'd.
[Exit Duchess.
Buck. Lord Cardinal, I will follow Eleanor,
And listen after Humphrey, how he proceeds:
She's tickled now; her fume can need no spurs,
She'll gallop fast enough to her destruction.
[Exit Buckingham.

Re-enter Gloster.
Glo. Now, lords, my choler being over-blown,
With walking once about the quadrangle,
I come to talk of commonwealth affairs.
As for your spiteful false objections,
Prove them, and I lie open to the law:
But Heaven in mercy so deal with my soul,
As I in duty love my king and country!
But, to the matter that we have in hand: —
I say, my sovereign, York is mostest man
To be your regent in the realm of France.
Suf. Before we make election, give me leave
To show some reason, of no little force,
That York is most unmeet of any man.
York. I'll tell thee, Suffolk, why I am unmeet.
First, for I cannot flatter thee in pride:

2 Sayings.
3 i.e. The complaint of Peter, the armourer's man, against his master.
4 Denied.
5 Censure here means simple judgment or opinion.
Next, if I be appointed for the place,
My lord of Somerset will keep me here,
Without discharge, money, or furniture.
Till France be won into the dauphin's hands.
Last time, I danc'd attendance on his will,
Till Paris was besiegd, famish'd, and lost.
War. That I can witness, and a fouler fact
Did never traitor in the land commit.
Suf. Peace, head-strong Warwick!
War. Image of pride, why should I hold my peace?

Enter Servants of Suffolk, bringing in Horner and Peter.
Suf. Because here is a man accus'd of treason:
Pray heaven the duke of York excuse himself!
York. Doth any one accuse York for a traitor?
K. Hen. What mean'st thou, Suffolk? tell me:
What are these?
Suf. Please it your majesty, this is the man
That doth accuse his master of high treason:
His words were these:—That Richard, duke of York,
Was rightful heir unto the English crown;
And that your majesty was an usurper.
K. Hen. Say, man, were these thy words?
Hor. An't shall please your majesty, I never said nor thought any such matter: I am falsely accused by the villain.
Pet. By these ten bones, my lords, [Holding up his hands.] he did speak them to me in the garret one night, as we were scouring my lord of York's armour.
York. Base dunghill villain, and mechanical,
I'll have thy head for this thy traitor's speech:—
I do beseech your royal majesty,
Let him have all the rigour of the law.
Hor. Alas, my lord, hang me, if ever I spake the words. My accuser is my prentice: and when I did correct him for his fault the other day, he did vow upon his knees he would be even with me:
I have good witness of this; therefore, I beseech your majesty, do not cast away an honest man for a villain's accusation.
K. Hen. Uncle, what shall we say to this in law?
Glo. This doom, my lord, if I may judge:—
Let Somerset be regent o'er the French.
Because in York this breeds suspicion:
And let these have a day appointed them
For single combat in convenient place;
For he hath witness of his servant's malice:
This is the law, and this duke Humphrey's doom.
K. Hen. Then be it so. My lord of Somerset,
We make your grace lord regent o'er the French.
Soms. I humbly thank your royal majesty.
Hor. And I accept the combat willingly.
Pet. Alas, my lord, I cannot fight; for heaven's sake, pity my case! the spite of man prevailed against me. I shall never be able to fight a blow:
Oh my heart!
Glo. Sirrah, or you must fight, or else be hang'd.
K. Hen. Away with them to prison, and the day
Of combat shall be the last of the next month.—
Come, Somerset, we'll see thee sent away.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV. — The Duke of Gloster's Garden.

Enter Margery Jourdain, Hume, Southwell, and Bolingbroke.

Hume. Come, my masters; the duchess, I tell you, expects performance of your promises.

Boling. Master Hume, we are therefore provided: will your ladyship behold and hear our exorcisms? 6
Hume. Ay; what else? fear you not her courage.
Boling. I have heard her reported to be a woman of an invincible spirit: but it shall be convenient, master Hume, that you be by her aloft, while we be busy below; and so, I pray you, go, and leave us.
[Exit Hume.] Mother Jourdain, be you prostrate, and grovel on the earth:—John Southwell, read you; and let us to our work.

Enter Duchess, above.
Duch. Well said, my masters; and welcome all.
To this gev? the sooner the better.
Boling. Patience, good lady; wizards know their times:
Deep night, dark night, the silent of the night,
The time of night, when Troy was set on fire;
The time when seereech-owls cry, and ban-dogs 8
howl,
And spirits walk, and ghosts break up their graves,
That time best fits the work we have in hand.
Madam, sit you, and fear not; whom we raise,
We will make fast within a hallow'd verge.

[Here they perform the ceremonies appertaining, and make the circle; Bolingbroke, or Southwell, reads, Conjuro te, &c. It thunders and lightens terribly; then the Spirit riseth.]

Spir. Adsum.
M. Jourd. Asmath, answer that I shall ask;
For, till thou speak, thou shalt not pass from hence.
Spir. Ask what thou wilt:—That I had said and done,
Boling. First of the king. What shall of him become? — [Reading out of a paper.]
Spir. The duke yet lives that Henry shall depose;
But him outlive, and die a violent death.

[As the Spirit speaks, Southwell writes the answer.
Boling. What fate awaits the duke of Suffolk?
Spir. By water shall he die, and take his end.
Boling. What shall befall the duke of Somerset?
Spir. Let him shun castles;
Safer shall he be upon the sandy plains,
Than where castles mounted stand.
Have done! for more I hardly can endure.
Boling. False fiend, avoid!
[Thunder and lightning. Spirit descends.]

Enter YORK and Buckingham, hastily, with their Guards, and others.
York. Lay hands upon these traitors, and their trash.
Bel dame, I think, we watch'd you at an inch,—
What, madam, are you there? the king and commonweal
Are deeply indebted for this piece of pains:
My lord protector will, I doubt it not,
See you well guerdon'd for these good deserts.
Duch. Not half so bad as thine to England's king,
Injurious duke; that threat'st where is no cause.
Buck. True, madam, none at all. What call you this?
[Shewing her the papers.]
Away with them; let them be clapp'd up close,
6 By exorcise, Shakspere invariably means to raise spirits, and not to lay them.
7 Matter or business.
8 Watch-dogs.
9 Rewarded.
SCENE I. — Saint Alban's.

Enter King Henry, Queen Margaret, Gloster, Cardinal, and Suffolk, with Falconers hunting.

Q. Mar. Believe me, lords, for flying at the brook, I saw not better sport these seven years' day: Yet, by your leave, the wind was very high; And, ten to one, old Joan had not gone out.

K. Hen. But what a point, my lord, your falcon made, And what a pitch she flew above the rest! To see how God in all his creatures works! Yes, man and birds, are fain of climbing high.

Suf. No marvel, an it like your majesty, My lord protector's hawks do tower so well; They know their master loves to be aloft, And bears his thoughts above his falcon's pitch.

Glo. My lord, 'tis but a base ignoble mind
That mounts no higher than a bird can soar.

Car. I thought as much; he'd be above the clouds.

Glo. Ay, my lord cardinal; How think you by that? Were it not good, your grace could fly to heaven?

K. Hen. The treasury of everlasting joy!

Car. Thy heaven is on earth; thine eyes and thoughts Beat on a crown, the treasure of thy heart; Pernicious protector, dangerous peer,
That smooth'st it so with king and commonweal!

Glo. What, cardinal, is your priesthood grown peremptory?

Tantum animis caelestibus ira?

Churchmen so hot? good uncle, hide such malice; With such holiness can you do it?

Suf. No malice, sir; no more than well becomes So good a quarrel, and so bad a peer.

Glo. As who, my lord?

Suf. Why, as you, my lord; An't like your lordly lord-protectorship.

Q. Mar. And thy ambition, Gloster.

K. Hen. I prythee, peace, Good queen; and wret not on these furious peers, For blessed are the peacemakers on earth.

Car. Let me blessed for the peace I make, Against this proud protector with my sword!

Glo. 'Faith, holy uncle, 'would 'twere come to that! [Aside to the Cardinal.

Car. Marry, when thou dar'st. [Aside.

Glo. Make up no factious numbers for the matter, In thine own person answer thy abuse. [Aside.

Car. Ay, where thou dar'st not peep: an if thou dar'st, This evening on the east side of the grove. [Aside.

K. Hen. How now, my lords?

Car. Believe me, cousin Gloster, Had not your man put up the fowl so suddenly, We had had more sport — Come with thy two-hand sword. [Aside to Gloster.

Glo. True, uncle.

How i'skome is this musick to my heart! When such strings jar, what hope of harmony? I pray, my lords, let me compound this strife.

Enter an Inhabitant of Saint Alban's, crying, A Miracle!

Glo. What means this noise?

Fellow, what miracle dost thou proclaim?

Inhab. A miracle! a miracle! [Aside.

Suf. Come to the king, and tell him what miracle.

Inhab. Forsooth, a blind man at Saint Alban's shrine,
Within this half hour, hath receiv'd his sight; A man, that ne'er saw in his life before.

K. Hen. Now, God be prais'd! that to believing souls Gives light in darkness, comfort in despair!

Enter the Mayor of Saint Alban's, and hisOfficers; and Simcox, borne between two Persons in a Chair; his Wife, and a great Multitude following.

Car. Here come the townsmen on procession, To present your highness with the man.
K. Hen. Great is his comfort in this earthly vale,
Although by his sight his sin be multiplied.
Glo. Stand by, my masters, bring him near the king,
His highness' pleasure is to talk with him.
K. Hen. Good fellow, tell us here the circumstance,
That we for thee may glorify the Lord.
What, hast thou been long blind, and now restor'd?
Simp. Born blind, 'tis not your grace.
Wife. Ay, indeed was he.
Suf. What woman is this?
Wife. His wife, an't like your worship.
Glo. Hadst thou been his mother, thou couldst have better told.
K. Hen. Where wert thou born?
Simp. At Berwick in the north, an't like your grace.
K. Hen. Poor soul! God's goodness hath been great to thee:
Let never day nor night unhallow'd pass,
But still remember what the Lord hath done.
Q. Mar. Tell me, good fellow, cam'st thou here by chance,
Or of devotion, to this holy shrine?
Simp. God knows, of pure devotion; being call'd
A hundred times, and oft'ner, in my sleep
By good saint Alban; who said, — Simcox come;
Come, offer at my shrine, and I will help thee.
Wife. Most true, forsooth; and many time and oft Myself have heard a voice to call him so.
Car. What, art thou lame?
Simp. Ay, God Almighty help me!
Suf. How cam'st thou so?
Simp. A fall off a tree.
Wife. A plum-tree, master.
Glo. How long hast thou been blind?
Simp. O, born so, master.
Glo. What, and wouldst climb a tree?
Simp. But that in all my life, when I was a youth.
Wife. Too true; and bought his climbing very dear.
Glo. 'Mass, thou lovest plums well, that wouldst venture so.
Simp. Alas, good master, my wife desir'd some damsons,
And made me climb, with danger of my life.
Glo. A subtle knave! but yet it shall not serve. —
Let me see thine eyes: — wink now; — now open them:
In my opinion yet thou seest not well.
Simp. Yes, master, clear as day; I thank God, and saint Alban.
Glo. Say'st thou me so? What colour is this cloak of?
Simp. Red, master; red as blood.
Glo. Why, that's well said: What colour is my gown of?
Simp. Black, forsooth; coal-black, as jet.
K. Hen. Why then, thou know'st what colour jet is of?
Suf. And yet, I think, jet did he never see.
Glo. But cloaks, and gowns, before this day, many.
Wife. Never, before this day, in all his life.
Glo. Tell me, sirrah, what's my name?
Simp. Alas, master, I know not.
Glo. What's his name?
Simp. I know not.
Glo. Nor his?
Simp. No, indeed, master.
Glo. What's thine own name?
Simp. Saunders Simcox, an if it please you, master.
Glo. Then, Saunders, sit thou there, the lyingest knave

In Christendom. If thou hadst been born blind,
Thou might'st as well have known our names, as thus
To name the several colours we do wear.
Sight may distinguish of colours; but suddenly
To nominate them all 's impossible. —
My lords, saint Alban here hath done a miracle;
And would ye not think that cunning to be great?
That could restore this cripple to his legs?
Simp. O, master, that you could!
Glo. My masters of Saint Alban's, have you not beaddles in your town, and things called whips?
May. Yes, my lord, if it please your grace.
Glo. Then send for one presently.
May. Sirrah, go fetch the beadle hither straight.

[Exit an Attendant.
Glo. Now fetch me a stool hither by-and-by. [A stool brought out.]
Now, sirrah, if you mean to save yourself from whipping, leap me over this stool, and run away.
Simp. Alas, master, I am not able to stand alone:
You go about to torture me in vain.

Re-enter Attendant, with the Beadle.
Glo. Well, sir, we must have you find your legs.
Sirrah beadle, whip him till he leap over that same stool.
Bead. I will, my lord. — Come on, sirrah; off with your doublet quickly.
Simp. Alas, master, what shall I do? I am not able to stand.

[Aafter the Beadle hath hit him once, he leaps over the stool, and runs away; and the People follow, and cry, A Miracle!]
K. Hen. O God, seest thou this, and bear'st so long?
Q. Mar. It made me laugh to see the villain run.
Glo. Follow the knave; and take this drab away.
Wife. Alas, sir, we did it for pure need.
Glo. Let them be whipped through every market town, till they come to Berwick, whence they came.

[Exeunt Mayor, Beadle, Wife, &c.
Car. Duke Humphrey has done a miracle to-day.
Suf. True; made the lame to leap, and fly away.
Glo. But you have done more miracles than I;
You made, in a day, my lord, whole towns to fly.

Enter Buckingham.
K. Hen. What tidings with our cousin Buckingham?
Buck. Such as my heart doth tremble to unfold.
A sort 3 of naughty persons, vilely bent, —
Under the countenance and confederacy
Of lady Eleanor, the protector's wife,
The ring-leader and head of all this rout, —
Have practis'd dangerously against your state,
Dealing with witches; and with conjurers:
Whom we have apprehended in the fact;
Raising up wicked spirits from under ground,
Demanding of king Henry's life and death,
And other of your highness' privy council,
As more at large your grace shall understand.
Car. And so, my lord protector, by this means
Your lady is forthcoming yet at London.
This news, I think, hath turn'd your weapon's edge;
'Tis like, my lord, you will not keep your hour.

[Aside to Gloster.
Glo. Ambitious churchman, leave to afflicth my heart!
Sorrow and grief have vanquish'd all my powers:
And, vanquish'd as I am, I yield to thee,
Or to the meanest groom.

3 A company.
Scene II.

K. Hen. Alas, what mischiefs work the wicked ones; Heaping confusion on their own heads thereby!
Q. Mar. Gloster, see here the tenants of thy nest; And, look, thyself be faultless, thou wert best.
Glo. Madam, for myself, to heaven I do appeal, How I love'rd my king, and commonweal, And, for my wife, I know not how it stands; Sorry I am to hear what I have heard: Noble she is; but if she have forgot Honour, and virtue, and convers'd with such As, like to pitch, defile nobility, I banish her my bed and company; And give her, as a prey, to law, and shame, That hath dishonour'd Gloster's honest name.
K. Hen. Well, for this night, we will repose us here: To-morrow, toward London, back again, To look into this business thoroughly, And call these foul offenders to their answers; And poise 4 the cause in justice' equal scales, Whose beam stands sure, whose rightful cause prevails. [Flourish. Exeunt. 4 Weigh.

Enter York, Salisbury, and Warwick.

York. Now, my good lords of Salisbury and Warwick, Our simple supper ended, give me leave, In this close walk, to satisfy myself, In craving your opinion of my title, Which is infallible to England's crown.
Sal. My lord, I long to hear it at full.
War. Sweet York, begin: and if thy claim be good, The Nevils are thy subjects to command.
York. Then thus: — Edward the Third, my lords, had seven sons: The first, Edward the Black Prince, prince of Wales; The second, William of Hatfield; and the third, Lionel, duke of Clarence; next to whom, Was John of Gaunt, the duke of Lancaster: The fifth, was Edmund Langley, duke of York; The sixth, was Thomas of Woodstock, duke of Gloster; William of Windsor was the seventh, and last. Edward, the Black Prince, died before his father; And left behind him Richard, his only son, Who, after Edward the Third's death, reign'd as king; Till Henry Bolingbroke, duke of Lancaster, The eldest son and heir of John of Gaunt, Crown'd by the name of Henry the Fourth, Seiz'd on the realm; depos'd the rightful king; Sent his poor queen to France, from whence she came, And him to Pomfret; where, as all know, Harmless Richard was murder'd traitorously.
War. Father, the duke hath told the truth; Thus got the house of Lancaster the crown.
York. Which now they hold by force, and not by right; For Richard, the first son's heir being dead, The issue of the next son should have reign'd.
Sal. But William of Hatfield died without an heir.
York. The third son, duke of Clarence, (from whose line I claim the crown,) had issue — Philip, a daughter, Who married Edmund Mortimer, earl of March: Edmund had issue — Roger, earl of March: Roger had issue — Edmund, Anne, and Eleanor.

Sal. This Edmund, in the reign of Bolingbroke As I have read, laid claim unto the crown; And, but for Owen Glendower, had been king, Who kept him in captivity till he died.
But, to the rest.
York. His eldest sister, Anne, My mother, being heir unto the crown, Married Richard, earl of Cambridge; who was son To Edmund Langley, Edward the Third's fifth son. By her I claim the kingdom; she was heir To Roger, earl of March; who was the son Of Edmund Mortimer; who married Philippe, Solc daughter unto Lionel, duke of Clarence: So, if the issue of the elder son Succeed before the younger, I am king.
War. What plain proceedings are more plain Than this?
Henry both claim the crown from John of Gaunt, The fourth son; York claims it from the third. Till Lionel's issue fails, his should not reign: It fails not yet; but flourishes in thee, And in thy sons, fair slips of such a stock. — Then, father Salisbury, kneel we both together; And, in this private plot 5, be we the first, That shall salute our rightful sovereign With honour of his birthright to the crown.
Both. Long live our sovereign Richard, England's king!
York. We thank you, lords. But I am not your king.
Till I be crown'd: and that my sword be stain'd With heart-blood of the house of Lancaster. And that's not suddenly to be perform'd; But with advice, and silent secrecy.
Do you, as I do, in these dangerous days, Wink at the duke of Suffolk's insolence, At Beaufort's pride, at Somerset's ambition, At Buckingham, and all the crew of them, Till they have snatch'd the shepherd of the flock, That virtuous prince, the good duke Humphrey: 'Tis that they seek; and they, in seeking that, Shall find their deaths, if York can prophesy.
Sal. My lord, break we off; we know your mind at full.
War. My heart assures me, that the earl of War- wick Shall one day make the duke of York a king.
York. And, Nevil, this I do assure myself, — Richard shall live to make the earl of Warwick The greatest man in England, but the king. [Exeunt. 5 Sequestered spot.

Scene III. — A Hall of Justice.

Trumpets sounded. Enter King Henry, Queen Margaret, Gloster, York, Suffolk, and Salisbury; the Duchess of Gloster, Margery Jourdain, Southwell, Humph, and Bolingbroke, under guard.

K. Hen. Stand forth, dame Eleanor Cobham, Gloster's wife: In sight of God, and all ye guilty are great; Receive the sentence of the law for sin. — You four, from hence to prison back again; [To Jourdain, &c. From thence unto the place of execution: The witch in Smithfield shall be burn'd to ashes, And you three shall be strangled on the gallows. — You, madam, for you are more nobly born, Despoiled of your honour in your life.
Shall, after three days' open penance done,
Live in your country here, in banishment,
With sir John Stanley, in the Isle of Man.

Duch. Welcome is banishment, welcome were my death.

Glo. Eleanor, the law, thou scest, hath judged thee;
I cannot justify whom the law condemns. —

[Exeunt the Duchess, and the other Prisoners, guarded.

Mine eyes are full of tears, my heart of grief.
Ah, Humphrey, this dishonour in thine age
Will bring thy head with sorrow to the ground!
I beseech your majesty, give me leave to go;
Sorrow would solace, and mine age would ease.

K. Hen. Stay, Humphrey duke of Gloster: ere
You go, give up thy staff; Henry will to himself
Protect his; and God shall be my hope,
My stay, my guide, and lantern to my feet;
And go in peace, Humphrey; no less belov'd,
Than when thou wert protector to thy king.

Q. Mar. I see no reason why a king of years
Should be to be protected like a child. —
God and king Henry govern England's helm:
Give up your staff, sir, and the king his realm.

Glo. My staff? — here, noble Henry, is my staff;
As willingly do I the same resign,
As 'er thy father Henry made it mine;
And even as willingly at thy feet I leave it,
As others would ambitiously receive it.

Farewell, good king: When I am dead and gone,
May honourable peace attend thy throne!

[Exeunt.

Q. Mar. Why, now is Henry king, and Margaret queen;
And Humphrey, duke of Gloster, scarce himself,
That bears so shrewd a main; two pulls at once, —
His lady banish'd, and a limb lopp'd off;
This staff of honour raught? — There let it stand,
Where it best fits to be, in Henry's hand.

Suf. Thus droops this lofty pine, and hangs his sprays;
Thus Eleanor's pride dies in her youngest days.

York. Lords, let him go. — Please it your majesty,
This is the day appointed for the combat;
And ready are the appellant and defendant,
The armourer and his man, to enter the lists,
So please your highness to behold the fight.

Q. Mar. Ay, good my lord; for purposely therefore Left I the court, to see this quarrel tried.

K. Hen. Then let us see the lists and all things fit;
Here let them end it, God defend the right!

York. I never saw a fellow worse bested,
Or more afraid to fight, than is the appellant,
The servant of this armourer, my lords.

Enter, on one side, Horner, and his Neighbours, drinking to him so much that he is drunk; and he enters bearing his staff with a sand-bag fastened to it; a drum before him: at the other side, Peter, with a drum and a similar staff; accompanied by Prentices drinking to him.

1 Neigh. Here, neighbour Horner, I drink to you in a cup of sack; And fear not, neighbour, you shall do well enough.

2 Neigh. And here, neighbour, here's a cup of chumceo.

3 Neigh. And here's a pot of good double beer, neighbour: drink, and fear not your man.

6 Wishes for;
7 Resolved.
8 In a worse plight.
9 A sort of sweet wine.

Hor. Let it come, i'faith, and I'll pledge you all; And a fig for Peter!

1 Prent. Here, Peter, I drink to thee; and be not afraid.

2 Prent. Be merry, Peter, and fear not thy master; fight for credit of the prentices.

Peter. I thank you all: drink, and pray for me,
I pray you; for, I think, I have taken my last drught in this world. — Here, Robin, an if I die,
I give thee my apron; and, Will, thou shalt have my hammer: — and here, Tom, take all the money that I have. O Lord, bless me; I am never able to deal with my master, be hath learnt so much fence already.

Sal. Come, leave your drinking, and fall to blows. —
Sirrah, what's thy name?

Peter. Peter, forsooth,

Sal. Peter! what more?

Peter. Thump.

Sal. Thump! then see thou thump thy master well.

Hor. Masters, I am come hither, as it were, upon my man's instigation, to prove him a knave, and myself an honest man: and touching the duke of York, — will take my death, I never meant him any ill, nor the king, nor the queen: And, therefore,
Peter, have at thee with a downright blow, as Bevis of Southampton fell upon Ascanari.

York. Despatch: — this knave's tongue begins to double.

Sound trumpets, alarum to the combatants.

[Alarum. They fight, and Peter strikes down his Master.

Hor. Hold, Peter, hold! I confess, I confess treason.

[Dies.

York. Take away his weapon: — Fellow, thank the good wine in thy master's way.

Peter. O Heaven! have I overcome mine enemies in this presence? O Peter, thou hast prevailed in right!

K. Hen. Go, take hence that traitor from our sight;
For, by his death, we do perceive his guilt:
And heaven in justice, hath reveal'd to us
The truth and innocence of this poor fellow,
Which he had thought to have murder'd wrongfully. —

Come, fellow, follow us for thy reward.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV. — A Street.

Enter GLOSTER and Servants, in mourning Cloaks.

Glo. Thus, sometimes, hath the brightest day a cloud;

And, after summer, ever more succeeds
Barren winter, with his wrathful nipping cold:
So cares and joys abound as seasons fleet. —
Sirs, what's o'clock?

Sero. Ten, my lord.

Glo. Ten is the hour that was appointed me,
To watch the coming of my punish'd duchess:
Unearth! may she endure the flinty streets,
To tread them with her tender-feeling feet.
Sweet Nell, ill can thy noble mind abrook
The abject people, gazing on thy face,
With envious looks, still laughing at thy shame;
That erst did follow thy proud chariot wheels,
When thou didst ride in triumph through the streets.
But, soft! I think, she comes; and I'll prepare
My tear-stain'd eyes to see her miseries.

1 Not easily.
Enter the Duchess of Gloucester, in a white sheet, with papers pin'd upon her back, her feet bare, and a taper burning in her hand; Sir John Stanley, a Sheriff, and Officers.

Serv. So please your grace, we'll take her from the sheriff.

Glo. No, stir not, for your lives; let her pass by.
Duck. Come you, my lord, to see my open shame? Now thou dost penance too. Look, how they gaze! See, how the giddy multitude do point, And nod their heads, and throw their eyes on thee! Ah, Gloster, hide thee from their hateful looks: And, in thy closet pent up, rue my shame, And ban 2 thine enemies, both mine and thine.

Glo. Be patient, gentle Nell; forget this grief.

Duch. Ah, Gloster, teach me to forget myself: For, whilst I think I am thy married wife, And thou a prince, protector of this land, Methinks, I should not thus be led along, Mail'd up in shame, with papers on my back; And follow'd with a rabble, that rejoice To see my tears, and here my deep-felt groans. The ruthless flint doth cut my tender feet: And, when I start, the envious people laugh, And bid me be advised how I tread. Ah, Humphrey, can I bear this shameful yoke? Trow'st thou, that e'er I'll look upon the world, Or count them happy, that enjoy the sun? No; dark shall be my light, and night my day; To think upon my pomp, shall be my hell. Sometime I'll say, I am duke Humphrey's wife; And he a prince, and ruler of the land: Yet so he rul'd, and such a prince he was, As he stood by, whilst I, his forlorn duchess, Was made a wonder, and a pointing-stock, To every idle rascal follower. But be thou mild, and blush not at my shame; Nor stir at nothing, till the axe of death Hang over thee, as, sure, it shortly will. For Suffolk, — he that can do all in all With her, that hateth thee, and hates us all, — And York, and impious Beaufort, that false priest, Have all lim'd bushes to betray thy wings, And, fly thou how thou canst, they'll tangle thee: But fear not thou, until thy foot be snar'd, Nor ever seek prevention of thy foes.

Glo. Ah, Nell, forbear; thou almost all awry; I must offend, before I be attainted; And had I twenty times so many foes, And each of them had twenty times their power, All these could not procure me any scathe 4. So long as I am loyal, true, and crimeless, Wouldnst have me rescue thee from this reproach? Why, yet thy scandal were not wip'd away, But I in danger for the breach of law. Thy greatest help is quiet, gentle Nell.

I pray thee, sort thy heart to patience! These few days' wonder will be quickly worn.

Enter a Herald.

Her. I summon your grace to his majesty's parliament, holden at Bury the first of this next month.

Glo. And my consent ne'er ask'd herein before! This is close dealing. — Well, I will be there. [Exit Herald.
My Nell, I take my leave: — and, master sheriff, Let not her penance exceed the king's commission.
Sher. An't please your grace, here my commis-sion stays:
And sir John Stanley is appointed now,
To take her with him to the Isle of Man.

Glo. Must you, sir John, protect my lady here? Stan. So am I given in charge, may't please your grace.

Glo. Entreat her not the worse, in that I pray You use her well; the world may laugh again; And I may live to do you kindness, if You do it her. And so, sir John, farewell.

Duch. What, gone, my lord; and bid me not farewell?

Glo. Witness my tears, I cannot stay to speak.

[Exeunt Gloster and Servants.

Duch. Art thou gone too? All comfort go with thee!

For none abides with me; my joy is death; Death, at whose name I oft have been afeard, Because I wish'd this world's eternity. —

Stanley, I pr'ythee, go, and take me hence; I care not whither, for I beg no favour, Only convey me where thou art commanded.

Stan. Why, madam, that is to the Isle of Man; There to be used according to your state.

Duch. That's bad enough, for I am but reproach: And shall I then be used reproachfully?

Stan. Like to a duchess, and duke Humphrey's lady,

According to that state you shall be used.

Duch. Sheriff, farewell, and better than I fare; Although thou hast been conduct 5 of my shame!
Sher. It is my office, madam, pardon me.

Duch. Ay, ay, farewell, thy office is discharg'd. —
Come, Stanley, shall we go?

Stan. Madam, your penance done, throw off this sheet,

And go we to attend you for our journey.

Duch. My shame will not be shifted with my sheet:

No, it will hang upon my richest robes, And show itself, attire me how I can.

Go, lead the way; I long to see my prison. [Exeunt.
ACT III.

 scen e i. — the abbey at bury.

enter to the parliament, king henry, queen margaret, cardinal beaufort, suffolk, york, buckingham, and others.

k. hen. i must, my lord of gloster is not come:
'tis not his wont to be the hindmost man, whate'er occasion keeps him from us now.
q. mar. can you not see? or will you not observe the strangeness of his alter'd countenance?
with what a majesty he bears himself;
how insolent of late he is become,
how proud, peremptory, and unlike himself?
we know the time since he was mild and affable;
and, if we did but glance a far-off look,
immediately he was upon his knee,
that all the court admir'd him for submission:
but meet him now, and, be it in the morn,
when every one will give the time of day,
he knits his brow, and shows an angry eye,
and passeth by with stiff unbowed knee,
disdaining duty that to us belongs.
small curs are not regarded, when they grin;
but great men tremble when the lion roars;
and humphrey is no little man in england.
first, note, that he is near you in descent;
and should you fall, he is the next will mount.
me seemeth, then, it is no policy,— respecting what a ravenous mind he bears, and his advantage following your decease,—
that he should come about your royal person, or be admitted to your highness' council.
by flattery hath he won the commons' heart;
and, when he please to make commotion,
'tis to be fear'd, they all will follow him.
now 'tis the spring, and weeds are shallow-rooted;
suffer them now, and they'll o'ergrow the garden,
and choke the herbs for want of husbandry.
the reverent care, i bear unto my lord,
made me collect these dangers in the duke.
if it be fond, call it a woman's fear:
which fear, if better reasons can supplant,
will i subscribe and say,—i wrong'd the duke.
my lord of suffolk,—buckingham,—and york,— reprove my allegation, if you can;
or else conclude my words effectual.
suf. well hath your highness seen into this duke;
and, had i first been put to speak my mind,
think, i should have told your grace's tale.
The duchess, by his subornation,
upon my life, began her devilish practices:
or if he were not privy to those faults,
yet by repeating of his high descent?
(as next the king, he was successive heir,) and such high vaunts of his nobility, did instigate the bedlam brain-sick duchess,
by wicked means to frame our sovereign's fall.
smooth runs the water where the brook is deep;
and in his simple show he harbours treason.
the fox barks not, when he would steal the lamb.
no, no, my sovereign; gloster is a man
unsounded yet, and full of deep deceit.

6 wonder. 7 i. e. observe. 8 foolish.

[aside.]

car. did he not, contrary to form of law, device strange deaths for small offences done?
york. and did he not, in his protectorship,
levy great sums of money through the realm,
for soldiers' pay in france, and never sent it?
by means whereof, the towns each day revolted.
buck. tut! these are petty faults to faults unknown,
which time will bring to light in smooth duke humphrey.

k. hen. my lords, at once: the care you have of us,
tow dowm thorns that would annoy our foot,
is worthy praise: but shall i speak my conscience?
our kinsman gloster is as innocent from meaning treason to our royal person, as is the sucking lamb, or harmless dove:
The duke is virtuous, mild; and too well given,
to dream on evil, or to work my downfall.
q. mar. ah, what's more dangerous than this fond affiance!
seems he a dove? his feathers are but borrow'd,
for he's disposed as the hateful raven.
is he a lamb? his skin is surely lent him,
for he's inclin'd as are the ravenous wolves.
who cannot steal a shape, that means deceit?
take heed, my lord; the welfare of us all hangs on the cutting short that fraudulent man.

enter somerset.

som. all health unto my gracious sovereign!
k. hen. welcome, lord somerset. what news from france?

som. that all your interest in those territories is utterly bereft you; all is lost.
k. hen. cold news, lord somerset: but god's will be done!
york. cold news for me; for i had hope of france,
as firmly as i hope for fertile england.
thus are my blossoms blasted in the bud,
and caterpillars eat my leaves away;
but i will remedy this gear: ere long,
or sell my title for a glorious grave. [aside.

enter gloster.

glo. all happiness unto my lord the king!
pardon, my liege, that i have staid so long.
suf. nay, gloster, know, that thou art come too soon,
unless thou wert more loyal than thou art:
i do arise, a man of high treason here.
glo. well, suffolk, yet thou shalt not see me blush,
nor change my countenance for this arrest;
A heart unspotted is not easily daunted.
The purest spring is not so free from mud,
as i am clear from treason to my sovereign:
who can accuse me? wherein am i guilty?
york. 'tis thought, my lord, that you took bribes of france,
and, being protector, stayed the soldiers' pay:
by means whereof, his highness hath lost france.
glo. is it but thought so? what are they that think it?

1 gear was a general word for things or matters.
I never robb’d the soldiers of their pay,
Nor ever had one penny bribe from France.
So help me God, as I have watch’d the night,—
Ay, night by night,—in studying good for England!
That doth that e’er I wrested from the king,
Or any great I hoarded to my use,
Be brought against me at my trial day!
No! many a pound of mine own proper store,
Because I would not tax the needy commons,
Have I disbursed to the garrisons,
And never ask’d for restitution.

Car. It serves you well, my lord, to say so much.
Glo. I say no more than truth, so help me God! York. In your protectorship, you did devise Strange tortures for offenders, never heard of;
That England was defam’d by tyranny.

Glo. Why, ’tis well known, that whiles I was protector,
Pity was all the fault that was in me;
For I should melt at an offender’s tears,
And lowly words were rancose for their fault.
Unless it were a bloody murderer,
Or foul felonious thief that fleece’d poor passengers,
I never gave them condign punishment:
Murder, indeed, that bloody sin, I tortured
Above the felon, or what trespass else.

Suf. My lord, these faults are easy; quickly answer’d:
But mightier crimes are laid unto your charge,
Whereof you cannot easily purge yourself.
I do arrest you in his highness’ name;
And here commit you to my lord cardinal
To keep, until your further time of trial.

K. Hen. My lord of Gloster, ’tis my special hope,
That you will clear yourself from all suspects;
My conscience tells me, you are innocent.

Glo. Ah, gracious lord, these days are dangerous!
Virtue is chok’d with foul ambition,
And charity chas’d hence by rancour’s hand;
Foul subornation is predominant,
And equity exil’d your highness’ land.
I know not how to save my life;
And, if my death might make this island happy,
And prove the period of their tyranny,
I would expend it with all willingness:
But mine is made the prologue to their play:
For thousands more, that yet suspect no peril,
Will not conclude their plotted tragedy.
Beaufort’s red sparkling eyes blab his heart’s malice,
And Suffolk’s cloudy brow his stormy hate;
Sharp Buckingham unbear’d with his tongue
The envious load that lies upon his heart;
And dogged York, that reaches at the moon,
Whose overweening arm I have pluck’d back,
By false accese doth my life;—
And you, my sovereign lady, with the rest,
Causeless have laid disgrace on my head?
And, with your best endeavour, have stirr’d up
My liegest liege to be mine enemy; —
Ay, all of you have laid your heads together,
Myself had notice of your conventicles.
I shall not want false witness to condemn me,
Nor store of treasons to augment my guilt;
The ancient proverb will be well affected,—
A staff is quickly found to beat a dog.

Car. My liege, his railing is intolerable:
If those that care to keep your royal person
From treason’s secret knives, and traitors’ rage,
Be thus upbraided, chid, and rated at,

Suf. Hath he not twit our sovereign lady here,
With ignominiou words, though clerkly couched;
As if she had suborned some to swear
False allegations to o’erthrow his state?
Q. Mar. But I can give the lesser leave to chide.
Glo. Far truer spoken, than meant: I lose, indeed; —
Bespreh the winners, for they played me false!
And well such losers may have leave to speak.

Buck. He’ll wrest the sense, and hold us here all day: —
Lord cardinal, he is your prisoner.

Car. Sirs, take away the duke, and guard him sure.
Glo. Ah, thus king Henry throws away his crutch,
Before his legs be firm to bear his body:
Thus is the shepherd beaten from thy side,
And wolves are gnarling who shall gnaw thee first.
Ah, that my fear were false! ah, that it were!
For, good king Henry, thy decay I fear.

[Exeunt Attendants, with Gloster.
K. Hen. My lords, what to your wisdoms seconoth best,
Do, or undo, as if ourself were here.

Q. Mar. What, will your highness leave the parliament?

K. Hen. Ay, Margaret; my heart is drown’d with sweat,
Whose flood begins to flow within mine eyes;
My body round engirt with misery;
For what’s more miserable than discontent?
Ah, uncle Humphrey! in thy face I see
The map of honour, truth, and loyalty;
And yet, good Humphrey, is the hour to come,
That e’er I prove false, or fear’d thy faith.
What low’ring star now envies thy estate,
That these great lords, and Margaret our queen,
Do seek subversion of thy harmless life?
Thou never didst them wrong, nor man wrong;
And as the butcher takes away the calf,
And binds the wretch, and beats it when it strays,
Bearing it to the block, to shaughter-house;
Even so remorseless have they borne him hence.
And as the dam runs lowing up and down,
Looking the way her harmless young one went,
And can do nought but wail her darling’s loss;
Even so myself bewails good Gloster’s case,
With sad unhelpful tears; and with dim’d eyes
Look after him, and cannot do him good;
So mighty are his vowed enemies.
His fortunes I will weep; and, ’twixt each groan,
Say,—Who’s a traitor, Gloster he is none.

[Exit. Q. Mar. Free lords, cold snow melts with the sun’s hot beams.

Henry my lord, do I live in great affairs,
Too full of foolish pity; and Gloster’s show
Beguiles him as the mournful crocodile
With sorrow snares relenting passengers;
Or as the snake, roll’d in a flowing bank,
With shining check’rd slough, doth sting a child,
That, for the beauty, thinks it excellent.
Believe me, lords, were none more wise than I,
(And yet, herein, I judge mine own wit good,)
This Gloster should be quickly rid the world,
To rid us from the fear we have of him.

Car. That he should die, is worthy policy:
But yet we want a colour for his death.
’Tis meet he be condemn’d by course of law.

Suf. But, in my mind, that were no policy:
The king will labour still to save his life,
The commons haply rise to save his life;
And yet we have but trivial argument,
More than mistrust, that shows him worthy death.
York. So that, by this, you would not have him die.
Suf. Ah, York, no man alive so fain as I.
York. 'Tis York that hath more reason for his death.
But, my lord cardinal, and you, my lord of Suffolk,—
Say as you think, and speak it from your souls,—
We're not all one, an empty eagle were set
To guard the chicken from a hungry kite,
As place duke Humphrey for the king's protector?
Q. Mar. So the poor chicken should be sure of death.
Suf. Madam, 'tis true: And 'wer't not madness then,
To make the fox surveyor of the fold?
Who being accus'd a crafty murderer,
His guilt should be but idly posted over,
Because his purpose is not executed.
No; let him die, in that he is a fox,
By nature prov'd an enemy to the flock,
Before his chaps be stain'd with crimson blood:
As Humphrey, prov'd by reasons, to my liege.
And do not stand on quiblets how to slay him:
Be it by gins, by snares, by subtily,
Sleeping or waking, 'tis no matter how,
So he be dead; for that is good deceit
Which mates him first, that first intends deceit.
Q. Mar. Thrice-noble Suffolk,'tis resolutely spoke.
Suf. Not resolute, except so much were done;
For things are often spoke, and seldom meant:
But, that my heart accordeth with my tongue,—
Seeing the deed is meritorious,
And to preserve my sovereign from his foe,—
Say but the word, and I will be his priest.
Car. But I would have him dead, my lord of Suffolk,
Ere you can take due orders for a priest:
Say, you consent, and censure well the deed,
And I'll provide his executioner,
I tender so the safety of my liege.
Suf. Here is my hand, the deed is worthy doing.
Q. Mar. And so say I.
York. And I: and now we three have spake it,
It skills not greatly 6 who impugns our doom.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Great lords, from Ireland am I come again,
To signify — that rebels there are up,
And put the Englishmen unto the rage betime,
Send succours, lords, and stop the rage betime,
Before the wound do grow incurable;
For, being green, there is great hope of help.
Car. A breach, that craves a quick expeditious stop! stop!
What counsel give you in this weighty cause?
York. That Somerset be sent as regent thither:
'Tis meet, that lucky ruler be employ'd;
Witness the fortune he hath had in France.
Som. If York, with all his far-felt 8 policy,
Had been the regent there instead of me,
He never would have staid in France so long.
York. No, not to lose it all, as thou hast done: I rather would have lost my life betimes,
Than bring a burden of dishonour home,
By staying there so long, till all were lost.
Show me one scar character'd on thy skin:
Men's flesh preserv'd so whole, do seldom win.

Q. Mar Nay then, this spark will prove a raging fire,
If wind and fuel be brought to feed it with: —
No more, good York; — sweet Somerset, be still; —
Thy fortune, York, hast thou been regent there, Might happily have prov'd far worse than his.
York. What worse than naught? say, then a shame take all!
Som. And, in the number, thee, that wishest shame!
Car. My lord of York, try what your fortune is.
The uncivil kerns 9 of Ireland are in arms,
And temper clay with blood of Englishmen:
To Ireland will you lead a band of men,
Collected choice, from each county some,
And try your help against the Irishmen?
York. I will, my lord, so please his majesty.
Suf. Why, our authority is his consent;
And, what we do establish, he confirms:
Then, noble York, take thou this task in hand.
York. I am content: Provide me soldiers, lords,
While I take order for mine own affairs.
Suf. A charge, lord York, that I will see perform'd.
But now return we to the falcon Humphrey.
Car. No more of him; for I will deal with him,
That, henceforth, he shall trouble us no more.
And so break off; the day is almost spent:
Lord Suffolk, you and I must talk of that event.
York. My lord of Suffolk, within fourteen days,
At Bristol I expect my soldiers;
For there I'll ship them all for Ireland.
Suf. I'll see it truly done, my lord of York.

[Exeunt all but York.

York. Now, York, or never, steel thy fearful thoughts,
And change mis doubt to resolution:
Be that thou hop'st to be; or what thou art
Resign to death, it is not worth the enjoying:
Let pale-face'd fear keep with the mean-born man,
And find no harbour in a royal heart.
Faster than spring-time showers, comes thought on thought;
And not a thought, but thinks on dignity.
My brain, more busy than the labouring spider,
Weaves tedious snares to trap mine enemies.
Well, nobles, well, 'tis politicly done,
To send me packing with an host of men:
I bear me, you but warm the starved snake,
Who, cherish'd in your breasts, will sting your hearts.
'Twas men I lack'd, and you will give them me:
I take it kindly; yet, be well assured
You put sharp weapons in a mankind's hands.
Whiles I in Ireland nourish a mighty band,
I will stir up in England some black storm,
And this fell tempest shall not cease to rage
Until the golden circuit on my head,
Like to the glorious sun's transparent beams,
Do calm the fury of this mad-bred flaw. 1
And for a minister of my intent,
I have seduc'd a head-strong Kentishman,
John Cade of Ashford,
To make commotion, as full well he can,
Under the title of John Mortimer.
In Ireland have I seen this stubborn Cade
Oppose himself against a troop of kerns;
And fought so long, till that his thighs with darts
Were almost like a sharp-guil'd porcupine;
And, in the end being resuced, I have seen him
Caper upright like a wild Môrisco 2,

5 Matches. 6 It is of no importance. 7 Expeditious. 8 Far-fetched. 9 Irish foot-soldiers, light-armed. 1 A violent gust of wind. 2 A Moor in a morris dance.
SCENE II. — Bury. A Room in the Palace.

Enter certain Murderers, hastily.

MUR. Run to my lord of Suffolk; let him know,
We have despatch'd the duke as he commanded.

SUFT. O, that it were to do! — What have we done?
Didst ever hear a man so penitent?

Enter Suffolk.

MUR. Here comes my lord.

SUFT. Now, sirs, have you despatch'd this thing?

MUR. Ay, my good lord, he's dead.

SUFT. Why, that's well said. Go, get you to your house;
I will reward you for this venturous deed.
The king and all the peers are here at hand:
Have you laid fair the bed? are all things well,
According as I gave directions?

MUR. 'Tis, my good lord.

SUFT. Away, be gone! [Exeunt Murderers.

Enter King Henry, Queen Margaret, Cardinal Beaufort, Somerset, Lords, and others.

K. Hen. Go, call my uncle to our presence straight:
Say, we intend to try his grace to-day,
If he be guilty, as 'tis published.

SUFT. I'll call him presently, my noble lord. [Exit. K. Hen. Lords, take your places; — And, I pray you all,
Proceed no straiter 'gainst our uncle Gloster,
Than from true evidence, of good esteem,
He be approv'd in practice culpable.

Q. Mar. Heaven forbid any malice should prevail,
That faultless may condemn a nobleman!
Pray God, he may acquit himself of suspicion!
K. Hen. I thank thee, Margaret; these words content me much.

Re-enter Suffolk.

How now? why look'st thou pale? why tremblest thou?
Where is our uncle? what is the matter, Suffolk?

SUFT. Dead in his bed, my lord: Gloster is dead.

Q. Mar. Marry, God forev'nd! Carl: Heaven's secret judgment: — I did dream to-night,
The duke was dumb, and could not speak a word. [The King swoons.

Q. Mar. How fares my lord? — Help, lords! the king is dead.

Som. Rear up his body.

Q. Mar. Run, go, help, help! — O, Henry, ope thine eyes!

SUFT. He doth revive again; — Madam, be patient.

K. Hen. O heavenly God!

Q. Mar. How fares my gracious lord?

SUFT. Comfort, my sovereign! graciously Henry, comfort!

K. Hen. What, doth my lord of Suffolk comfort me now?

Came he right now to sing a raven's note,
Whose dismal tune bereft my vital powers;
And thinks he, that the chirping of a wren,
By crying comfort from a hollow breast,
Can chase away the first-conceived sound?
Hide not thy poison with such sugar'd words,
Lay not thy hands on me; forbear, I say;
Their touch affrights me, as a serpent's sting.
Thou baleful messenger, out of my sight!
Upon thy eye-balls murderous tyranny
Sits in grim majesty, to fright the world.
Look not upon me, for thine eyes are wounded:
Yet do not go away; — Come, basilk,
And kill the innocent gazer with thy sight:
For in the shade of death I shall find joy!
In life, but double death now Gloster's dead.

Q. Mar. Why do you rate my lord of Suffolk thus?
Although the duke was enemy to him,
Yet he, most christian-like, laments his death:
And for myself, — foe as he was to me,
Might liquid tears, or heart-offending groans,
Or blood-consuming sighs recall his life,
I would be blind with weeping, sick with groans,
Look pale as primrose, with blood-drinking sighs,
And all to have the noble duke alive.
What know I how the world may deem of me?
For it is known, we were but hollow friends;
It may be judg'd, I made the duke away;
So shall my name with slander's tongue be wounded,
And princes' courts be fill'd with my reproach.
This got I by his death: Ah me, unhappy!
To be a queen, and crown'd with infamy!

K. Hen. Ah, woe is me for Gloster, wretched man!

Q. Mar. Be woe for me, more wretched than he is.

What, dost thou turn away, and hide thy face?
Is all thy comfort shut in Gloster's tomb?
Why, then dame Margaret was no' er thy joy;
Erect his statue then, and worship it,
And make my image but an idle sign.
Was I for this, nigh wreck'd upon the sea;
And twice by awkward wind from England's bank
Drove back again unto my native clime?
What boded this, but well-forewarning wind
Did seem to say, — Seek not a scorpion's nest,
Nor set no footing on this unkind shore?
What did I then, but curs'd the gentle gusts,
And he that loos'd them from their brazen caves;
And bid them blow towards England's blessed shore,
Or turn our stern upon a dreadful rock?
Yet Eolus would not be a murderer,
But left that hateful office unto me,
The pretty vaulting sea refus'd to drown me;
Knowing, that thou wouldst have me drown'd on shore,

With tears as salt as sea through thy unkindness;
The splitting rocks cow'd in the sinking sands,
And would not dash me with their ragged sides;
Because thy flinty heart, more hard than they,
Might in thy palace perish Margaret.
As far as I could ken thy chalky cliffs,
When from the shore the tempest beat us back
I stood upon the hatches in the storm:
And when the dusky sky began to rob
My earnest-gaping sight of thy land's view,
I took a costly jewel from my neck,—
A heart it was, bound in with diamonds,
And threw it towards thy land;—the sea receiv'd it;
And I call'd it, not out of my heart;
And even with this, I lost fair England's view,
And bid mine eyes be packing with my heart;
And call'd them blind and dusky spectacles,
For losing ken of Albion's wished coast.
How often have I tempted Suffolk's tongue
(The agent of thy foul inconstancy,)
To sit and watch me, as Ascanius did,
When he to madding Dido would unfold
His father's acts, commen'd in burning Troy?
Am I not witch'd like her? or thou not false like him?
Ah me, I can no more! Die, Margaret!
For Henry weeps, that thou dost live so long.
Noise within. Enter WARWICK and SALISBURY.
The Commons press to the door.
War. It is reported, mighty sovereign,
That good duke Humphrey traitorously is murder'd
By Suffolk and the cardinal Beaufort's means.
The commons, like an angry hive of bees,
That want their leader, scatter up and down,
And care not who they sting in his revenge.
Myself have calmly their spleenful mutiny,
Until they hear the order of his death.
K. Hen. That he is dead, good Warwick, 'tis too true;
But how he died, God knows, not Henry:
Enter his chamber, view his breathless corpse,
And comment then upon his sudden death.
War. That I shall do, my liege: — Stay, Salisbury,
With the rude multitude, till I return.
[Warwick goes into an inner Room, and Salisbury retires.
K. Hen. O Soul that judgest all things, stay my thoughts:
My thoughts, that labour to persuade my soul,
Some violent hands were laid on Humphrey's life!
If my suspect be false, forgive me, God;
For judgment only doth belong to thee!
Pain would I go to chafe his pallid lips
With twenty thousand kisses, and to drain
Upon his face an ocean of salt tears;
To tell my love unto his dumb deaf trunk,
And with my fingers feel his hand unfeeling:
But all in vain are these mean obsequies;
And, to survey his dead and earthy image,
What were it but to make my sorrow greater?
The folding doors of an inner chamber are thrown open, and GLOSTER is discovered dead in his bed: Warwick and others standing by it.
War. Come hither, gracious sovereign, view this body.
K. Hen. That is to see how deep my grave is made:
For, with his soul fled all my worldly solace;
For seeing him, I see my life in death. 3
3 i.e. I see my life endangered by his death.
War. As surely as my soul intends to live
With that dread King that took our state upon him
To free us from his Father's wrathful curse,
I do believe that violent hands were laid
Upon the life of this thrice-famed duke.
Suf. A dreadful oath, sworn with a solemn tongue!
What instance gives lord Warwick for his vow?
War. See how the blood is settled in his face!
Oft have I seen a timely-parted ghost, 4
Of ashy semblance, meagre, pale, and bloodless,
Being all descended to the labouring heart;
Who, in the conflict that it holds with death,
Attracts the soul's unwearied arms against the enemy;
Which with the heart there cools and never returneth
To blush and beautify the cheek again.
But, see, his face is black, and full of blood;
His eye-balls further out than when he liv'd,
Staring full ghastly like a strangled man:
His hair unpair'd, his nostrils stretch'd with struggling;
His hands abroad display'd, as one that grasp'd
And tug'd for life, and was by strength subdu'd.
Look on the sheets, his hair, you see, is sticking;
His well-proportioned beard mak'd rough and rugged,
Like to the summer's corn by tempest lodg'd.
It cannot be, but he was murder'd here;
The least of all these signs were probable.
Suf. Why, Warwick, who should do the duke to death?
Myself, and Beaufort, had him in protection;
And we, I hope, sir, are no murderers.
War. But both of you were vow'd duke Humphrey's foes;
And you, forsooth, had the good duke to keep:
'Tis like, you would not feast him like a friend;
And 'tis well seen he found an enemy.
Q. Mar. Then you, belike, suspect these noblemen
As guilty of duke Humphrey's timeless death.
War. Who finds the heifer dead, and bleeding fresh,
And sees fast by a butcher with an axe,
But will suspect, 'twas he that made the slaughter?
Who finds the partridge in the putock's nest,
But may imagine how the bird was dead,
Although the kite soar with unbleeded beak?
Even so suspicious is this tragedy.
Q. Mar. Are you the butcher, Suffolk; where's your knife?
Is Beaufort term'd a kite? where are his talons?
Suf. I wear no knife, to slaughter sleeping men;
But here's a veneful sword, rusted with ease,
That shall be scour'd in his rancorous heart,
That shall slay me with murder's crimson badge: —Say, if thou dar'st, proud lord of Warwickshire,
That I am faulty in duke Humphrey's death.
[Execut CARDINAL, SOM. and others.
War. What dares not Warwick, if false Suffolk dare him?
Q. Mar. He dares not calm his contumelious spirit,
Nor cease to be an arrogant controller,
Though Suffolk dare him twenty thousand times.
War. Madam, be still; with reverence may I say;
For every word, you speak in his behalf,
Is slander to your royal dignity.
Suf. Blunt-witted lord, ignoble in demeanour!
If ever lady wrong'd her lord so much,
Thy mother took into her shameful bed
Some stern untutor'd churl, and noble stock
4 The body of one who had died a natural death.
Was graft with crab-tree slip; whose fruit thou art, And never of the Nevis’s noble race.

War. But that the guilt of murder bucklers thee, And I should rob the deathsmen of his fee, Quitting thee thereby of ten thousand shames, And that my sovereign’s presence makes me mild, I would, false murderous coward, on thy knee Make thee beg pardon for thy passed speech, And say — it was thy mother that thou mean’st, That thou thyself wast born in bastardy; And, after all this fearful homage done, Give thee thy hire, and send thy soul to hell, Pernicious bloody cur of sleeping men!

Suf. Thou shalt be waking, while I shed thy blood, If from this presence thou dar’st go with me.

War. Away even now, or I will drag thee hence: Unworthy though thou art, I’ll cope with thee, And do some service to duke Humphrey’s ghost.

[Exit Suffolk and Warwick.]

K. Hen. What stronger breast-plate than a heart untainted? Thrice is he arm’d, that hath his quarrel just; And he but naked, thoughlock’d up in steel, Whose conscience with injustice is corrupted.

[Noise of a Crowd within. Re-enter Suffolk and Warwick, with their weapons drawn.]

K. Hen. Why, how now, lords? your wrathful weapons drawn

Here in our presence? dare you be so bold? — Why, what tumultuous clamour have we here? Suf. The traitorous Warwick, with the men of Bury, Set all upon me, mighty sovereign.

[Noise of a Crowd within. Re-enter Salisbury.]

Suf. Sirs, stand apart; the king shall know your mind. — [Speaking to those within.]

Dread lord, the commons send you word by me, Unless false Suffolk straight be done to death, Or banished fair England’s territories, They will by violence tear him from your palace, And torture him with grievous ringing death. They say, by him the good duke Humphrey died; They say, in him they fear your highness’ death; And mere instinct of love, and loyalty, — Free from a stubborn opposite intent, As being thought to contradict your liking, — Makes them thus forward in his banishment. They say, in care of your most royal person, That, if your highness should intend to sleep, And change — that no man should disturb your rest, In pain of your dislike, or pain of death; Yet notwithstanding such a strat edict, Were there a serpent seen, with forked tongue, That slyly glided towards your majesty, It were but necessary, you were wak’d; Lest, being suffer’d, in that harmful slumber, The mortal worm might make the sleep eternal: And therefore so they cry, though you forbid, That they will guard you, whe’re you will, or no, From such fell serpents as false Suffolk is; With whose envenomed and fatal sting, Your loving uncle, twenty times his worth, They say, is shamefully bereft of life.

Commons. [Within.] An answer from the king, my lord of Salisbury.

Suf. 'Tis like the commons, rude unpolish’d hinds,
Though standing naked on a mountain top,
Where biting cold would never let grass grow,
And think it but a minute spent in sport.

Q. Mar. O let me entreat thee, cease! Give me thy hand,
That I may dwell it with my mournful tears;
Nor let the rain of heaven wet this place,
To wash away my woeful monuments.
O, could this kiss be printed in thy hand;
That thou might'st think upon these by the seal,
Through whom a thousand sighs are breath'd for thee!
So, get thee gone, that I may know my grief;
'Tis but surmise'd whilst thou art standing by,
I will repeal thee, or, be well assured,
Adventure to be banished myself:
And banished I am, if but from thee.
Go, speak not to me; even now be gone. —
O, go not yet! — Even thus two friends condemn'd
Embrace, and kiss, and take ten thousand leaves,
Loather a hundred times to part than die.
Yet now farewell; and farewell life with thee!

Suf. Thus is poor Suffolk ten times banished,
Once by the king, and three times thrice by thee.
'Tis not the land I care for, wert thou hence;
A wilderness is populous enough,
So Suffolk had thy heavenly company:
For where thou art, there is the world itself,
With every several pleasure in the world;
And where thou art not, desolation.
I can no more: — live thou to joy thy life;
Myself no joy in nought, but that thou liv'st.

Enter Vaux.

Q. Mar. Whither goes Vaux so fast? what news I pr'ythee?

Vaux. To signify unto his majesty,
That cardinal Beaufort is at point of death:
For suddenly a grievous sickness took him,
That makes him gasp, and stare, and catch the air,
Blaspheming God, and cursing men on earth.
Sometimes, he talks as if duke Humphrey's ghost
Were by his side; sometime, he calls the king,
And whispers to his pillow, as to him,
The secret of his overcharged soul;
And I am sent to tell his majesty,
That even now he cries aloud for him.

Q. Mar. Go, tell this heavy message to the king.

[A exit Vaux.

Ah me! what is this world? what news are these?
But wherefore grieve I at an hour's poor loss,
Omitting Suffolk's exile, my soul's treasure?
Why only, Suffolk, mourn I not for thee,
And with the southern clouds contend in tears;
 THEIRS for the earth's increase, mine for my sorrows?
Now, get thee hence: The king, thou know'st, is coming:

If thou be found by me, thou art but dead.

Suf. If I depart from thee, I cannot live:
And in the sight to die, what were it else,
But like a pleasant slumber in thy lap?
Here could I breathe my soul into the air,
As mild and gentle as the cradle-babe,
Dying with mother's tear between its lips:
Where 8, from thy sight, I should be raging mad,

And cry out for thee to close up mine eyes,
To have thee with thy lips to stop my mouth;
So shouldst thou either turn my flying soul,
Or I should breathe it so unto thy body,
And then it liv'd in sweet Elysium.

To die by thee, were but to die in jest;
From thee to die, were torture more than death:
O, let me stay, befall what may befall.

Q. Mar. Away! though parting be a fretful corrosive,

It is applied to a deathful wound.
To France, sweet Suffolk: let me hear from thee;
For whereasour thou art in this world's globe,
I'll have an Iris that shall find thee out.

Suf. I go.

Q. Mar. And take my heart with thee.

Suf. A jewel, lock'd into the woefulst cask
That ever did contain a thing of worth.
Even as a splitted bark, so sunder we;
This way fall I to death.

Q. Mar. This way for me.

[Exeunt severally.

Enter King Henry, Salisbury, Warwick, and others. The Cardinal in bed; Attendants with him.

K. Hen. How fares my lord? speak, Beaufort, to thy sovereign.

Car. If thou be'st death, I'll give thee England's treasure,
Enough to purchase such another island,
So thou wilt let me live, and feel no pain.

K. Hen. Ah, what a sign it is of evil life,
When death's approach is seen so terrible!

War. Beaufort, it is thy sovereign speaks to thee.

Car. Bring me unto my trial when you will.

Died he not in his bed? where should he die?
Can I make men live, whe'er they will or no?

O! torture me no more, I will confess.

Alive again? then show me where he is;
I'll give a thousand pound to look upon him.
He hath no eyes, the dust hath blinded them.

Comb down his hair! look! look! it stands upright,
Like lime-twigs set to catch my winged soul!

Give me some drink; and bid the apothecary
Bring the strong poison that I bought of him.

K. Hen. O thou eternal Mover of the heavens,
Look with a gentle eye upon this wretch!

O, beat away the busy meddling fiend,
That lays strong siege unto this wretch's soul,
And from his bosom purge this black despair!

War. See how the pangs of death do make him grin.

Sal. Disturb him not, let him pass peaceably.

K. Hen. Peace to his soul, if God's good pleasure be!

Lord cardinal, if thou think'st on heaven's bliss,
Hold up thy hand, make signal of thy hope.
He dies, and makes no sign; O God, forgive him!

War. So bad a death argues a monstrous life.

K. Hen. Forbear to judge, for we are sinners all.

Close up his eyes, and draw the curtain close;
And let us all to meditation.

[Exeunt.]
SCENE I.—Kent. The Sea-shore near Dover.

Firing heard at Sea. Then enter from a Boat a Captain, a Master, a Master's Mate, Walter Whitmore, and others; with them Suffolk and other Gentlemen, Prisoners.

Cap. The gaudy, blabbing, and remorseful 9 day Is crept into the bosom of the sea; And now loud-howlng wolves and nase the jades That drag the tragick melancholy night; Who with their drowsy, slow, and flagging wings Clip dead men's graves, and from their misty jaws Breathe foul contagious darkness in the air. Therefore, bring forth the soldiers of our prize; For, whilst our pinnace anchors in the Downs, Here shall they make their ransom on the sand, Or with their blood stain this discoul'd shore. — Master, this prisoner freely give I thee; — And thou that art his mate, make boot of this; — The other, [Pointing to Suffolk.] Walter Whitmore, is thy share.

1 Gent. What is my ransom, master? let me know.
Mast. A thousand crowns, or else lay down your head.
Mate. And so much shall you give, or off goes yours.
Cap. What, think you much to pay two thousand crowns, And bear the name and port of gentlemen? — Cut both the villains' throats; — for die you shall: The lives of those which we have lost in fight, Cannot be counterpois'd with such a petty sum.

1 Gent. I'll give it sir; and therefore spare my life.
2 Gent. And so will I, and write home for it straight.
Whit. I lost mine eye in laying the prize aboard, And therefore to revenge it, shalt thou die; —
Suffolk.

And so should these, if I might have my will.
Cap. Be not so rash; take ransom, let him live.
Suf. Look on my George, I am a gentleman; Rate me at what thou wilt, thou shalt be paid.
Whit. And so am I; — my name is —- Walter Whitmore.

How now? why start'st thou? what, doth death affirmative?

Suf. Thy name allrights me, in whose sound is death.
A cunning man did calculate my birth, And told me — that by Water I should die: Yet let not this make thee be bloody minded; Thy name is — Guatlier, being rightly sounded. Whit. Guatlier, or Walter, which it is, I care not; Ne'er yet did base dishonour blur our name, But with our sword we wip'd away the blot; Therefore, when merchant-like I sell revenge, Broke be my sword, my arms torn and defac'd, And I proclaim'd a coward through the world!

[Leas hold on Suffolk.

Suf. Stay, Whitmore: for thy prisoner is a prince, The duke of Suffolk, William de la Pole.
Whit. The duke of Suffolk, muffled up in rags!
Suf. Ay, but these rags are no part of the duke; Jove sometime went disguis'd, and why not I?
Cap. But Jove was never slain, as thou shalt see. Suf. Obscure and lowly swain, king Henry's blood, The honourable blood of Lancaster, Must not be shed by such a jaded groom. 1

9 Prelud. 1 A low fellow.

Hast thou not kiss'd thy hand, and held my stirrup? Bare-headed plodded by my foot-cloth mule, And thought thee happy when I shook my head? How often hast thou waited at my cup, Fed from my trencher, kneel'd down at the board, When I have feasted with queen Margaret? Remember it, and let it make thee crest-fallen; Ay, and allay this thy abortive pride: How in our voiding lobby hast thou stood, And duly waited for my coming forth? This hand of mine hath writ in thy behalf, And therefore shall it charm thy riotous tongue.

Whit. Speak, captain, shall I stab the forlorn swain?
Cap. First let my words stab him, as he hath me.
Suf. Base slave! thy words are blunt, and so art thou.
Cap. Convey him hence, and on our long-boat's side
Strike off his head.

Suf. Thou dar'st not for thy own.
Cap. Yes, Poole.
Suf. Poole?
Cap. Poole? Poole? sir Poole?
Whose filth and dirt
Troubles the silver spring where England drinks.
Now will I dam up this thy yawning mouth, For swallowing the treasure of the realm;
Thy lips that kiss'd the queen, shall sweep the ground; And thou, that smil'dst at good duke Humphrey's death,
Against the senseless winds shall grin in vain,
Who, in contempt, shall hiss at thee again;
And wedded be thou to the bags of hell,
For daring to affy 4 a mighty lord Unto the daughter of a worthless king.
Having neither subject, wealth, nor diadem. By thee Anjou and Maine were sold to France: The false revolting Normans, thorough thee, Disdain to call us lord; and Picardy Hath slain their governors, surpriz'd our forts,
And sent the ragged soldiers wounded home.
The princely Warwick, and the Nevils all, —
Whose dreadful swords were never drawn in vain,
As hating thee, are rising up in arms;
And now the house of York — thrust from the crown, By shameful murder of a guiltless king,
And lofty proud encroaching tyranny — Burns with revenging fire; whose hopeful colours Advance our half-fac'd sun, striving to shine,
Under the which is writ — invita nubibus.
The commons here in Kent are up in arms:
And, to conclude, reprouse and beggary
Is crept into the palace of our king,
And all by thee: — Away; convey him hence.
Suf. O that I were a god, to shoot forth thunder Upon these paltry, servile, abject drudges! Small things make base men proud: this villain here, Being captain of a pinnace 5, threatens more Than Bargulus the strong Illyrian pirate.
Drones suck not eagles' blood, but rob bee-hives.
It is impossible, that I should die
By such a lowly vassal as thyself.
Thy words move rage, and not remorse, in me:

4 To betroth in marriage. 5 A ship of small burden.
I go of message from the queen to France;
I charge thee, waft me safely cross the channel.
Cap. Walter, —
White. Come, Suffolk, I must waft thee to thy death.
White. Thou shalt have cause to fear, before I leave thee.

What, are ye daunted now? now will ye stoop?

1 Gent. My gracious lord, entreat him, speak him fair.

Suffolk. Suffolk's imperial tongue is stern and rough,
Us'd to command, untaught to plead for favour.
Far be it, we should honour such as these
With humble suit: no, rather let my head
Stoop to the block, than these knees bow to any Save to the God of heaven, and to my king;
And sooner dance upon a bloody pole,
Than stand uncover'd to the vulgar groom.
True nobility is exempt from fear:

More can I bear, than you dare execute.
Cap. Hail him away, and let him talk no more.
Suffolk. Come, soldiers, show what cruelty ye can,
That this my death may never be forgot! —
Great men oft die by vile bezonians: —
A Roman sworder and banditto slave,
Murder'd sweet Tully; Brutus' bastard hand
Stabb'd Julius Caesar; savage islanders,
Pompey the great: and Suffolk dies by pirates.

[Exit Suff. with Whirt. and others.]
Cap. And as for these whose ransoms we have set,
It is our pleasure one of them depart: —
Therefore come you with us, and let him go.

[Exit all but the first Gentleman.

Re-enter Whitmore, with Suffolk's Body.
White. There let his head and lifeless body lie,
Until the queen his mistress bury it.
1 Gent. O barbarous and bloody spectacle!
His body will I bear unto the king:
If he revenge it not, yet will his friends;
So will the queen, that living held him dear.

[Exit, with the Body.

SCENE II. — Blackheath.

Enter George Bevis and John Holland.
Geo. Come, and get thee a sword, though made of a lath; they have been up these two days.
John. They have the more need to sleep now then.
Geo. I tell thee, Jack Cade the clothier means to dress the commonwealth, and turn it, and set a new nap upon it.
John. So he had need, for 'tis threadbare. Well,
I say, it was never merry world in England, since gentlemen came up.
Geo. O miserable age! Virtue is not regarded in handycrafts-men.
John. The nobility think scorn to go in leather aprons.
Geo. Nay more, the king's council are no good workmen.
John. True; And yet it is said, — Labour in thy tocation: which is as much to say, as, — let the magistrates be labouring men; and therefore should we be magistrates.
Geo. Thou hast hit it; for there's no better sign of a brave mind, than a hard hand.
John. I see them! I see them! There's Best's son, the tanner of Wingham; —

Geo. He shall have the skins of our enemies, to make dog's leather of.
John. And Dick the butcher, — Geo. Then is sin struck down like an ox, and iniquity's throat cut like a calf.
John. And Smith the weaver.
Geo. Argus, their thread of life is spun.
John. Come, come, let's fall in with them.

Drum. Enter Cade, Dick the Butcher, Smith the
Weaver, and others in greater number.
Cade. We, John Cade, so termed of our supposed father, —
Dick. Or rather of stealing a cade of herrings. 5
Cade. — for our enemies shall fall before us, inspired with the spirit of putting down kings and princes. — Command silence.
Dick. Silence!
Cade. My father was a Mortimer,— Dick. He was an honest man, and a good brick layer.

Cade. My mother a Plantagenet,—
Dick. I knew her well; she was a midwife.

Cade. My wife descended of the Lacies,— Dick. She was, indeed, a pedlar's daughter, and sold many laces.
Smith. But, now of late, not able to travel with her furred pack, she washes bucks here at home.

Cade. Therefore am I of an honourable house.
Dick. Ay, by my faith, the field is honourable;
And there was he born, under a hedge; for his father had never a house, but the cage.

Cade. Valiant I am.
Smith. 'A must needs; for begging is valiant.

Cade. I am able to to endure much.
Dick. No question of that; for I have seen him whipped three market days together.

Cade. I fear neither sword nor fire.
Smith. He need not fear the sword, for his coat is of proof.

Cade. But, methinks he should stand in fear of fire, being burnt the hand for stealing of sheep.

Cade. Be brave, then; for your captain is brave, and vows reformation. There shall be, in England, seven halfpenny leaves sold for a penny: the three-hooped pot shall have ten hoops; and I will make it folyon, to drink small beer; all the realm shall be in common, and in Cheapside shall my palfry go to grass. And, when I am king, (as king I will be) —

All. God save your majesty!

Cade. I thank you, good people; — there shall be no money; all shall eat and drink on my score; and I will apparel them all in one livery, that they may agree like brothers.

Dick. The first thing we do, let's kill all the lawyers.

Cade. Nay, that I mean to do. Is not this a lamentable thing, that of the skin of an innocent lamb should be made parchment? that parchment, being scribbled o'er, should undo a man? Some say, the bee stings: but I say, 'tis the bee's wax; for I did but seal once to a thing, and I was never mine own man since. How now; who's there?

4 Low men.

5 A barrel of herrings.
Scene II.

KING HENRY VI.

Enter some, bringing in the Clerk of Chatham.

Smith. The clerk of Chatham: he can write and read, and cast accompt.

Cade. O monstrous!

Smith. We took him setting of boys' copies.

Cade. Here's a villain!

Smith. H'as a book in his pocket, with red letters in't.

Cade. Nay, then he is a conjurer.

Dick. Nay, he can make obligations, and write court-hand.

Cade. I am sorry for't: the man is a proper man, on mine honour; unless I find him guilty, he shall not die. — Come hither, sirrah; I must examine thee: What is thy name?

Clerk. Emmanuel.

Dick. They use to write it on the top of letters; 'Twill go hard with you.

Cade. Let me alone: — Dost thou use to write thy name? or hast thou a mark to thyself, like an honest plain-dealing man?

Clerk. Sir, I thank Heaven, I have been so well brought up, that I can write my name.

All. He hath confessed: away with him; he's a villain, and a traitor.

Cade. Away with him, I say: hang him with his pen and inkhorn about his neck.

[Exeunt some with the Clerk.

Enter Michael.

Mich. Where's our general?

Cade. Here I am, thou particular fellow.

Mich. Fly, fly, fly! sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother are hard by, with the king's forces.

Cade. Stand, villain, stand, or I'll fell thee down; He shall be encountered with a man as good as himself: he is but a knight, is 'a?

Mich. No.

Cade. To equal him, I will make myself a knight presently; — Rise up sir John Mortimer. Now have at him.

Enter Sir Humphrey Stafford and William his brother, with Drum and Forces.

Staff. Rebellious hinds, the filth and scum of Kent, Mark'd for the gallows, — lay your weapons down, Home to your cottages, forsake this grom; — The king is merciful, if you revolt.

W. Staff. But angry, wrathful, and inclin'd to blood, If you go forward: therefore yield, or die.

Cade. As for these silken-coated slaves, I pass not; It is to you, good people, that I speak, O'er whom, in time to come, I hope to reign; For I am rightful heir unto the crown.

Staff. Villain, thy father was a platterer; And thou thyself a shearmen, Art thou not?

Cade. And Adam was a gardener.

W. Staff. And what of that?

Cade. Marry, this: — Edmund Mortimer, earl of March, Married the duke of Clarence' daughter; Did he not?

Staff. Ay, sir.

Cade. By her, he had two children at one birth.

W. Staff. That's false.

Cade. Ay, there's the question, but, I say, 'tis true: The elder of them, being put to nurse, Was by a beggar-woman stol'n away; And ignorant of his birth and parentage,

* I pay them no regard.

Became a bricklayer, when he came to age: His son am I; deny it, if you can.

Dick. Nay, 'tis too true; therefore he shall be king.

Smith. Sir, he made a chimney in my father's house, and the bricks are alive at this day to testify it; therefore deny it not.

Staff. And will you credit this base drudge's words, That speaks he knows not what?

All. Ay, marry, will we; therefore get ye gone.

W. Staff. Jack Cade, the duke of York hath taught you this.

Cade. He lies; for I invented it myself. [Aside.

— Go to, sirrah. Tell the king from me, that — for his father's sake, Henry the fifth, in whose time boys went to span-counter for French crowns — I am content he shall reign; but I'll be protector over him.

Dick. And, furthermore, we'll have the lord Say's head for selling the dukedom of Maine.

Cade. And good reason; for thereby is England manied, and fain to go with a staff; but that my puissance holds it up. Follow kings, I tell you, that that lord Say hath manied the commonwealth, and more than that, he can speak French, and therefore he is a traitor.

Staff. O gross and miserable ignorance!

Cade. Nay, answer if you can: The Frenchmen are our enemies: go to, then, I ask but this; Can he, that speaks with the tongue of an enemy, be a good counsellor, or no?

All. No, no; and therefore we'll have his head.

W. Staff. Well, seeing gentle words will not prevail, Assault them with the army of the king.

Staff. I'll go about and, throughout every town, Proclaim them traitors that are up with Cade; That those, which fly before the battle ends, May, even in their wives' and children's sight, Be hang'd up for example at their doors: And you, that be the king's friends, follow me.

[Exeunt the two Staffords, and Forces.

Cade. And you, that love the commons, follow me. —

Now show yourselves men, 'tis for liberty. We will not leave one lord, one gentleman: Spare none, but such as go in clouted shoon? For they are thrify honest men, and such As would (but that they dare not,) take our parts.

Dick. They are all in order, and march toward us.

Cade. But then are we in order, when we are most out of order. Come, march forward. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. — Another part of Blackheath.

Alarms. The two Parties enter and fight, and both the Staffords are slain.

Cade. Where's Dick, the butcher of Ashford?

Dick. Here, sir,

Cade. They fell before thee like sheep and oxen, and thou behavest thyself as if thou hadst been in thine own slaughter-house: therefore thus will I reward thee. — The Kent shall be as long again as it is; and thou shalt have a license to kill for a hundred lacking one.

Dick. I desire no more.

Cade. And, to speak truth, thou deservest no less. This monument of the victory will I bear; and the bodies shall be dragged at my horse's heels, till I do come to London, where we will have the mayor's sword borne before us.

1 Shoos.

K K 2
Dick. If we mean to thrive and do good, break open the gaols, and let out the prisoners.

Cade. Fear not that, I warrant thee. Come, let's march towards London. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. — London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Henry, reading a Supplication; the Duke of Buckingham and Lord Say with him; at a distance, Queen Margaret, mourning over Suffolk's Head.

Q. Mar. Oft have I heard — that grief softens the mind,
And makes it fearful and degenerate;
Think therefore on revenge, and cease to weep.
But who can cease to weep, and look on this?
Here may his head lie on my throbbing breast:
But where's the body that I should embrace?

Buck. What answer makes your grace to the rebels' supplication?

K. Hen. I'll send some holy bishop to entreat:
For God forbid, so many simple souls
Should perish by the sword! And I myself,
Rather than bloody war should cut them short,
Will parley with Jack Cade their general. —
But stay, I'll read it over once again.

Q. Mar. Ah, barbarous villains! hath this lovely face
Rul'd like a wandering planet, over me;
And could it not enforce them to relent,
That were unworthy to behold the same?

K. Hen. Lord Say, Jack Cade hath sworn to have his head.

Say, Ay, but hope, your highness shall have his.

K. Hen. How now, madam? Still Lamenting, and mourning for Suffolk's death;
I fear, my love, if that I had been dead,
Thou wouldst not have mourn'd so much for me.

Q. Mar. My love, I should not mourn, but die for thee.

Enter a Messenger.

K. Hen. How now! what news? why com'st thou in such haste?

Mess. The rebels are in Southwark; Fly, my lord! Jack Cade proclaims himself lord Mortimer, Descended from the duke of Clarence's house:
And calls your grace usurper, openly,
And vows to crown himself in Westminster.
His army is a ragged multitude
Of bands and peasants, rude and merciless;
Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother's death
Hath given them heart and courage to proceed:
All scholars, lawyers, courtiers, gentlemen,
They call — false caterpillars, and intend their death.

K. Hen. O graceless men! they know not what they do.

Buck. My gracious lord, retire to Kenilworth,
Until a power be rais'd to put them down.

Q. Mar. Ah! were the duke of Suffolk now alive,
These Kentish rebels would be soon appeas'd.

K. Hen. Lord Say, the traitors hate thee,
Therefore away with us to Kenilworth.

Say. So might your grace's person be in danger;
The sight of me is odious in their eyes:
And therefore in this city will I stay,
And live alone as secret as I may.

Enter another Messenger.

2 Mess. Jack Cade hath gotten London-bridge;
the citizens
Fly and forsake their houses:

The rascal people, thirsting after prey,
Join with the traitor; and they jointly swear,
To spoil the city, and your royal court.

Buck. Then linger not, my lord; away, take horse.

K. Hen. Come, Margaret; God, our hope, will succour us.

Q. Mar. My hope is gone, now Suffolk is deceas'd.
K. Hen. Farewell, my lord; [To Lord Say.] trust not the Kentish rebels.
Buck. Trust no body, for fear you be betray'd.
Say. The trust I have is in mine innocence,
And therefore am I bold and resolute. [Exeunt.

SCENE V. — The Tower.

Enter Lord Scales, and others, on the Walls. Then enter certain Citizens, below.

Scales. How now? is Jack Cade slain?

1 Cit. No, my lord, nor likely to be slain; for they have won the bridge, killing all those that withstand them: The lord mayor craves aid of your honour from the Tower, to defend the city from the rebels.

Scales. Such aid as I can spare, you shall command;
But I am troubled here with them myself;
The rebels have assay'd to win the Tower.
But get you to Smithfield, and gather head,
And thither I will send you Matthew Gough: Fight for your king, your country, and your lives;
And so farewell, for I must hence again. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI. — Cannon Street.

Enter Jack Cade, and his Followers. He strikes his Staff on London-stone.

Cade. Now is Mortimer lord of this city. And here, sitting upon London-stone, I charge and command, that of the city's cost, the conduit run nothing but claret wine this first year of our reign. And now, henceforward, it shall be treason for any that calls me other than — lord Mortimer.

Enter a Soldier, running.

Sold. Jack Cade! Jack Cade!

Cade. Knock him down there. [They kill him.

Smith. If this fellow be wise, he'll never call you Jack Cade more; I think he hath a very fair warning.

Dick. My lord, there's an army gathered together in Smithfield.

Cade. Come then, let's go fight with them; But, first, go and set London-bridge on fire; and if you can, burn down the Tower too. Come, let's away.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VII. — Smithfield.

Alertum. Enter, on one side, Cade and his Company; on the other, Citizens, and the King's Forces, headed by Matthew Gough. They fight; the Citizens are routed, and Matthew Gough is slain.

Cade. So, sirs: — Now go some and pull down the Savoy; others to the inns of court; down with them all.

Dick. I have a suit unto your lordship.

Cade. Be it a lordship, thou shalt have it for that word.

Dick. Only that the laws of England may come out of your mouth.

John. 'Twill be sore law, then; for he was thrust in the mouth with a spear, and 'tis not whole.

[Aside.
Cade. I have thought upon it; it shall be so. Away, burn all the records of the realm; my mouth shall be the parliament of England.

John. Then we are like to have biting statutes, unless his teeth be pulled out. [Aside.]
Cade. And henceforward all things shall be in common.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, a prize, a prize! here's the lord Say, which sold the towns in France; he that made us pay one and twenty fiftens, and one shilling to the pound, the last subsidy.

Enter George Bevis, with the Lord Say.

Cade. Well, he shall be beheaded for it ten times. — Ah, thou say'st, thou serje, nay, thou buckram lord! now art thou within point-blank of our jurisdiction regal. What canst thou answer to my majesty, for giving up of Normandy unto the dauphin of France? Be it known unto thee that by these presence, even the presence of lord Mortimer, that I am the besom that must sweep the court clean of such filth as thou art. Thou hast most traitorously corrupted the youth of the realm, in erecting a grammar-school: and whereas, before, our forefathers had no other books but the score and the tally, thou hast caused printing to be used; and, contrary to the king, his crown and dignity, thou hast built a paper-mill. It will be proved to thy face, that thou hast men about thee, that usually talk of a noun, and a verb; and such abominable words, as no Christian ear can endure to hear. Thou hast appointed justices of peace, to call poor men before them about matters they were not able to answer. Moreover, thou hast put them in prison, and because they could not read, thou hast hanged them, when, indeed, only for that cause they have been most worthy to live. Thou dost ride on a foot-cloth, dost thou not?

Say. What of that?

Cade. Marry, thou oughtest not to let thy horse wear a cloak, when honest men than thou go in their hose and doublets.

Dick. And work in their shirt too; as myself, for example, that am a butcher.

Say. You men of Kent. —
Dick. What say you of Kent?
Say. Nothing but this: 'Tis bona terra, mala gens. Cade. Away with him, away with him! he speaks Latin.

Say. Hear me but speak, and bear me where you will.

Kent, in the commentaries Caesar writs, Is term'd the civil'ist place of all this isle: Sweet is the country, because full of riches; The people liberal, valiant, active, wealthy; Which makes me hope you are not void of pity. I sold not Maine, I lost not Normandy; Yet, to recover them, would lose my life. Justice with favour have I always done; Prayers and tears have mov'd me, gifts could never. When have I aught exacted at your hands, Kent to maintain, the king, the realm, and you? Large gifts have I bestow'd on learned clerks, Because my book prefer'd me to the king: And — seeing ignorance is the curse of Heaven, a A fifteen was the fifteenth part of all the moveables or personal property of each subject.

8 Say was a kind of serge.
9 i.e. Because they could not claim the benefit of clergy.
A A kind of housing, which covered the body of the horse.

Knowledge the wing wherewith we fly to it. — Unless you be possess'd with devilish spirits, You cannot but forbear to murder me. This tongue hath parley'd unto foreign kings For your behoof, —
Cade. Tut! when struck'st thou one blow in the field?
Say. Great men have reaching hands: oft have I struck Those that I never saw, and struck them dead.
Geo. O monstrous coward! what, to come behind folks?
Say. These cheeks are pale for watching for your good.
Cade. Give him a box o' the ear, and that will make 'em red again.
Say. Long sitting to determine poor men's causes Hath made me full of sickness and diseases.
Cade. Ye shall have a hempen caudle then, and the pap of a hatcher.
Dick. Why dost thou quiver, man?
Say. The palsy, and not fear, provoketh me.
Cade. Nay, he nods at us; as who should say, — I'll be even with you. I'll see if his head will stand steadier on a pole, or no: Take him away, and behead him.
Say. Tell me, wherein I have offended most? Have I affected wealth, or honour; speak? Are my chests fill'd up with extorted gold? Is my apparel sumptuous to behold? Whom have I injur'd, that ye seek my death? These hands are free from guiltless blood-sheeding, This breast from harbouring foul deceitful thoughts. O, let me live!

Cade. I feel remorse in myself with his words: but I'll bridle it; he shall die, an it be but for pleading so well for his life. Away with him! he has a familiar under his tongue; Go, take him away, I say, and strike off his head presently; and then break into his son-in-law's house, sir James Cromer, and strike off his head, and bring them both upon two poles higher.

All. It shall be done.
Say. Ah, countrymen! if when you make your prayers,
God should be so obdurate as yourselves,
How would it fare with your departed souls?
And therefore yet relent, and save my life.
Cade. Away with him, and do as I command ye. [Exeunt some with Lord Say.

The proudest peer in the realm shall not wear a head on his shoulders, unless he pay me tribute; men shall hold of me in capite; and we charge and command, that their wives be as free as heart can wish, or tongue can tell.
Dick. My lord, when shall we go to Cheapside, and take up commodities upon our bills?
Cade. Marry, presently.

All. O brave!

Re-enter Rebels, with the Heads of Lord Say and his Son-in-law.

Cade. But is not this braver? — Let them kiss one another, for they loved well, when they were alive. Now part them again, lest they consult about the giving up of some more towns in France. Soldiers, defier the spoil of the city until night: for with these borne before us, instead of maces, will we ride

3 i.e. Shedding guiltless blood.
4 A daemon who was supposed to attend at call.
through the streets; and, at every corner, have them kiss. — Away!

SCENE VIII. — Southwark.

- Alarum. Enter Cade, and all his Rabblement.
- Cade. Up Fish-street! down Saint Magnus' corner! kill and knock down! throw them into Thames! — [A Parley sounded, then a Retreat.] What noise is this I hear? Dare any be so bold to sound retreat or parley, when I command them kill?

---

Enter Buckingham, and old Clifford, with Forces.

Buck. Ay, here they be that dare and will disturb thee:

Know, Cade, we come ambassadors from the king
Unto the commons, whom thou hast misled;
And here pronounce free pardon to them all,
That will forsake thee, and go home in peace.

Cliff. What say ye, countrymen? will ye relect,
And yield to mercy, whilst 'tis offer'd you;
Or let a valiant head you to your deaths?

Who loves the king, and will embrace his pardon,
Fling up his cap, and say — God save his majesty!
Who hateth him, and honours not his father,
Henry the fifth, that made all France to quake,
Shake he his weapon at us, and pass by.

All. God save the king! God save the king!

Cade. What, Buckingham, and Clifford, are ye so brave? — And you, base peasants, do ye believe him? will you needs be hanged with your pardons about your necks? Hath my sword therefore broke through London gates, that you should leave me at the White Hart in Southwark? I thought, ye would never have given out these arms, till you had recovered your ancient freedom; but you are all recreants, and dastards; and delight to live in slavery to the nobility. Let them break your backs with burdens, take your houses over your heads, ravish your wives and daughters before your faces:

For me, — I will make shift for one; and so — A curse 'light upon you all!

---

All. We'll follow Cade, we'll follow Cade.

Cliff. Is Cade the son of Henry the fifth,
That thus you do exclaim — you'll go with him?
Will he conduct you through the heart of France,
And make the meanest of your enemies and dukes?

Alas, he hath no home, no place to fly to;
Nor knows he how to live, but by the spoil,
Unless by robbing of your friends, and us.

Wel't not a shame, that whilst you live at jar,
The fearful French, whom you late vanquished,
Should make a start o'er seas and vanquish you? Methinks, already, in this civil broil,
I see them lording it in London streets,
Crying — Villagéois! unto all they meet.
Better, ten thousand base-born Cades miscarry,
Than you should stoop unto a Frenchman's mercy.
To France, to France, and get what you have lost;
Spare England, for it is your native coast;
Henry hath money, you are strong and manly:
God on our side, doubt not of victory.

---

All. A Clifford! a Clifford! we'll follow the king, and Clifford.

Cade. Was ever feather so lightly blown to and fro, as this multitude? the name of Henry the fifth hailes them to an hundred mischiefs, and makes them leave me desolate. I see them lay their heads together, to surprize me: my sword make way for me, for here is no staying. — Have through the very midst of you! and honour be witness, that no want of resolution in me, but only my followers' base and ignominious treasons, makes me betake me to my heels.

Buck. What, is he fled? go, some and follow him; And he, that brings his head unto the king, Shall have a thousand crowns for his reward. —

---

Enter King Henry, Queen Margaret, and Somerset, on the Terrace of the Castle.

K. Hen. Was ever king that joy'd an earthly throne,
And could command no more content than I?
No sooner was I crept out of my cradle,
But I was made a king at nine months old:
Was never subject long'd to be a king,
As I do long and wish to be a subject.

---

Enter Buckingham and Clifford.

Buck. Health, and glad tidings, to your majesty! K. Hen. Why, Buckingham, is the traitor, Cade, surpriz'd?

Or is he but retir'd to make him strong?

---

Enter, below, a great number of Cade's Followers, with Halters about their Necks.

Cliff. He's fled, my lord, and all his powers do yield;
And humbly thus, with halters on their necks,
Expect your highness' doom of life, or death.

K. Hen. Then, heaven, setope thy everlasting gates,
To entertain my vows of thanks and praise!
Soldiers, this day have you redeem'd your lives,
And show'd how well you love your prince and country:
Continue still in this so good a mind,
And Henry, though he be unfortunate,
Assure yourselves, will never be unkind:
And so, with thanks and pardon to you all,
I do dismiss you to your several countries.

---

All. God save the king! God save the king!

---

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Please it your grace to be advertised,
The duke of York is newly come from Ireland:
And with a puissant, and a mighty power,
Of gallowglassers, and stout kernes,
Is marching hitherward in proud array;
And still proclaimeth, as he comes along,
His arms are only to remove from thee
The duke of Somerset, whom he terms a traitor.

K. Hen. Thus stands my state, 'twixt Cade and York distress'd;
Like to a ship, that, having 'scap'd a tempest,
Is straightforward calm'd and boarded with a pirate:
But now is Cade driven back, his men dispers'd; And now is York in arms to second him. — I pray thee, Buckingham, go forth and meet him;
And ask him, what's the reason of these arms.
Tell him, I'll send due Edmund to the Tower; —
And, Somerset, we will commit thee thither,
Until his army be dismiss'd from him.

Som. My lord, I'll yield myself to prison willingly,
Or unto death, to do my country good.

---

**Two orders of foot-soldiers among the Irish.
** Only just now.
Scene X.

K. Hen. In any case, be not too rough in terms; for he is fierce, and cannot brook hard language.

Buck. I will, my lord; and doubt not so to deal, as all things should redound unto your good.

K. Hen. Come, wife, let's in, and learn to govern better; for yet may England curse my wretched reign.

[Exit.

Scene X. — Kent. Iden's Garden.

Enter Cade.

Cade. Fye on ambition! fye on myself; that have a sword, and yet am ready to famish! These five days have I hid me in these woods; and durst not peep out, for all the country is lay'd for me; but now am I so hungry, that if I might have a lease of my life for a thousand years, I could stay no longer. Wherefore, on a brick-wall have I climbed into this garden; to see if I can eat grass, or pick a sallet another while, which is not amiss to cool a man's stomach this hot weather. And, I think, this word sallet was born to do me good: for, many a time, but for a sallet, my brain-pain had been cleft with a brown bill; and, many a time, when I have been dry, and bravely marching, it hath served me instead of a quart-pot to drink in; and now the word sallet must serve me to feed on.

Enter Iden, with Servants.

Iden. Lord, who would live turmoiled in the court, and may enjoy such quiet walks as these? This small inheritance, my father left me, Conteneth me, and is worth a monarchy. I seek not to wax great by others' waning; or gather wealth, I care not with what envy; Sufficeth, that I have maintains my state, and sends the poor well pleased from my gate.

Cade. Here's the lord of the soil come to seize me for a stray, for entering his fee-simple without leave. Ah, villain, thou wilt betray me, and get a thousand crowns of the king for carrying my head to him; but I'll make thee eat iron like an ostrich, and swallow my sword like a great pin, ere thou and I part.

Iden. Why, rude companion, whatsoe'er thou be, I know thee not; why then should I betray thee? Is't not enough, to break into my garden, and, like a thief, to come to rob my grounds, Climbing my walls in spite of me, the owner, But thou wilt brave me with these saucy terms?

Cade. Brave thee? ay, by the best blood that ever was broached, and heard thee too. Look on me well: I have eat no meat these five days; yet, come thou and thy five men, and if I do not leave you all as dead as a door-nail, may I never eat grass more.

Iden. Nay, it shall never be said while England stands, that Alexander Iden, an esquire of Kent, took odds to combat a poor famish'd man. Oppose thy steadfast-gazing eyes to mine, see if thou canst outface me with thy looks. Set limb to limb, and thou art far the lesser; Thy hand is but a finger to my fist; Thy leg a stick compared with this truncheon; My foot shall fight with all the strength thou hast; and if mine arm be heaved in the air, Thy grave is digg'd already in the earth.

As for more words, whose greatness answers words, let this my sword report what speech forbears.

Cade. By my valour, the most complete champion that ever I heard.—Steel, if thou turn the edge, or cut not out the burly-boned elbow in chines of beef ere thou sleep in thy sheath, mayest thou be turned to hobnails. [They fight. Cadet falls.] O, I am slain! famine, and no other, hath slain me; let ten thousand devils come against me, and give me but the ten meals I have lost, and I'd defy them all.

Wither, garden: and be henceforth a burying-place to all that do dwell in this house, because the unconquered soul of Cade is fled.

Iden. Is't Cade that I have slain, that monstrous traitor?

Sword, I will hallow thee for this thy deed, and hang thee o'er my tomb when I am dead. Ne'er shall this blood be wiped from thy point; But thou shalt wear it as a herald's coat, To embellise the honour that thy master got.

Cade. Iden, farewell; and be proud of thy victory: Tell Kent from me, she hath lost her best man, and exhort all the world to be cowards; for I, that never feared any, am vanquish'd by famine, not by valour.

[Dies.

Iden. How much thou wrong'st me, heaven be my judge.

Hence will I drag thee headlong by the heels Unto a dunghill, which shall be thy grave, and there cut off thy most ungracious head; Which I will bear in triumph to the king.

[Exit, dragging out the Body.

Act V.

Scene I. — Near Saint Alban's.

The King's Camp on one side. On the other, enter York attended, with Drum and Colours: his Forces at some distance.

York. From Ireland thus comes York, to claim his right, and pluck the crown from feeble Henry's head; ring, bells, aloud; burn, bonfires, clear and bright, to entertain great England's lawful king.

Ah, sancta majestas! who would not buy thee dear? Let them obey, that know not how to rule!

A kind of helmet.

This hand was made to handle nought but gold: I cannot give due action to my words, except a sword, or scepter, balance it.

A scepter shall it have, have I a soul; on which I'll toss the flower-de-luce of France.

Enter Buckingham.

Whom have we here? Buckingham, to disturb me. The king hath sent him, sure; I must discharge.

Buck. York, if thou meanest well, I greet thee well.

York. Humphrey of Buckingham, I accept thy greeting.

Art thou a messenger, or come of pleasure?
Buck. A messenger from Henry, our dread liege,
To know the reason of these arms in peace;
Or why, thou — being a subject as I am, —
Against thy oath and true allegiance sworn,
Shouldst raise so great a power without his leave
Or dare to bring thy force so near the court.
York. Scarce can I speak, my choler is so great.
O, I could hew up rocks, and fight with flint,
I am so angry at these abject terms;
And now, like Ajax Telamonius,
On sheep or oxen could I spend my fury!
I am far better born than is the king;
More like a king, more kingly in my thoughts:
But I must make fair weather yet a while,
Till Henry be more weak, and I more strong. —

Aside. O Buckingham, I pr'ythee, pardon me,
That I have given no answer all this while;
My mind was troubled with deep melancholy,
The cause why I have brought this army hither,
Is — to remove proud Somerset from the king,
Seditious to his grace, and to the state.
Buck. That is too much presumption on thy part:
But if thy arms be to no other end,
The king hath yielded unto thy demand;
The duke of Somerset is in the Tower.
York. Upon thine honour, is he prisoner?
Buck. Upon mine honour, he is prisoner.
York. Then Buckingham, I do dismiss my powers. —

Soldiers, I thank you all: disperse yourselves;
Meet me to-morrow in Saint George's field,
You shall have pay, and every thing you wish.
And let my sovereign, virtuous Henry,
Command my eldest son, — nay, all my sons,
As pledges of my fealty and love,
I'll send them all as willing as I live;
Lands, goods, horse, armour, any thing I have
Is his to use, so Somerset may die.
Buck. York, I commend this kind submission:
We twain will go into his highness' tent.

Enter King Henry, attended.

K. Hen. Buckingham, doth York intend no harm to us,
That thus he marcheth with thee arm in arm?
York. In all submission and humility,
York doth present himself unto your highness.
K. Hen. Then what intend these forces thou dost bring?
York. To heave the traitor Somerset from hence;
And fight against that monstrous rebel, Cade,
Who since I heard to be discomfited.

Enter Iden, with Cade's Head.

Iden. If one so rude, and of so mean condition,
May pass into the presence of a king,
Lo, I present your grace a traitor's head,
The head of Cade, whom I in combat slew.
K. Hen. The head of Cade? — Great God, how just art thou! —
O, let me view his visage being dead,
That living wrought me such exceeding trouble.
Tell me, my friend, art thou the man that slew him?
Iden. I was, an't like your majesty.
K. Hen. How art thou call'd? and what is thy degree?

Iden. Alexander Iden, that's my name;
A poor esquire of Kent, that loves his king.
Buck. So please it you, my lord, 'twere not amiss
He were created knight for his good service.
K. Hen. Iden, kneel down; [He kneels.] Rise up a knight.
We give thee for reward a thousand marks;
And will, that thou henceforth attend on us.
Iden. May Iden live to merit such a bounty,
And never live but true unto his liege!
K. Hen. See, Buckingham! Somerset comes with the queen;
Go, bid her hide him quickly from the duke.

Enter Queen Margaret and Somerset.

Q. Mar. For thousand Yorks he shall not hide
His head,
But boldly stand, and front him to his face.
York. How now! Is Somerset at liberty?
Then, York, unloose thy long-imprison'd thoughts,
And let thy tongue be equal with thy heart.
Shall I endure the sight of Somerset? —
False king! why hast thou broken faith with me,
Knowing how hardly I can brook abuse?
King did I call thee? no, thou art not king;
Not fit to govern and rule multitudes,
Which dar'st not, no, nor canst not rule a traitor.
That head of thine doth not become a crown;
Thy hand is made to grasp a palmer's staff,
And not to grace an awful princely scepter.
That gold must round engirt these brows of mine;
Whose smile and frown, like to Achilles' spear,
Is able with the change to kill and cure.
Here is a hand to hold a scepter up,
And with the same to act controlling laws.
Give place; by heaven, thou shalt rule no more
O'er him, whom heaven created for thy ruler.
Som. O monstrous traitor! — I arrest thee, York,
Of capital treason 'gainst the king and crown:
Obey, audacious traitor; kneel for grace.
York. Wouldst have me kneel? first let me ask of these.
If they can brook I bow a knee to man. —
Sirrah, call in my sons to be my bail;
[Exit an Attendant.
I know, ere they will have me go to ward*,
They'll pawn their swords for my enfranchisement.
Q. Mar. Call hither Clifford; bid him come again,
To say, if that the bastard boys of York
Shall be the surety for their traitor father.
York. O blood-bespotted Neapolitan,
Outcast of Naples, England's bloody scourge!
The sons of York, thy better in their birth,
Shall be their father's bail; and bane to those
That for my surety will refuse the boys.

Enter Edward and Richard Plantagenet, with Forces, at one side; at the other, with Forces also, old Clifford, and his Son.
See, where they come; I'll warrant they'll make it good.
Q. Mar. And here comes Clifford, to deny their bail.
Clif. Health and all happiness to my lord the king!
[Kneels.
York. I thank thee, Clifford: Say, what news with thee?
Nay, do not fright us with an angry look;

* Custody, confinement.
SCENE I.  KING HENRY VI.

We are thy sovereign, Clifford, kneel again;
For thy mistake, we pardon thee.

Clif. This is my king, York, I do not mistake;
But thou mistak'st me much, to think I do:
To Bedlam with him! is the man grown mad?

K. Hen. Ay, Clifford; a bedlam and ambitious humour

Makes him oppose himself against his king.

Clif. He is a traitor; let him to the Tower,
And chop away that factious pate of his.

Q. Mar. He is arrested, but will not obey;
His sons, he says, shall give their words for him.

York. Will you not, sons?

Eduw. Ay, noble father, if our words will serve.

Rich. And if words will not, then our weapons shall.

Clif. Why, what a brood of traitors have we here?

York. Look in a glass, and call thy image so;
I am thy king, and thou a false-heart traitor.

Call lither to the stake my two brave bears,
That, with the very shaking of their chains,
They may astonish these fell lurking curs;
Bid Salisbury, and Warwick, come to me.

Drums. Enter Warwick and Salisbury, with Forces.

Clif. Are these thy bears? we'll bait thy bears to death,
And maneacle the bearward in their chains,
If thou dar'st bring them to the baiting-place.

Rich. Oft have I seen a hot o'erwearing cur
Run back and bite, because he was withheld;
Who, being suffer'd with the bear's fell paw,
Hath clapp'd his tail between his legs, and cry'd:
And such a piece of service will you do;
If you oppose yourselves to match lord Warwick.

Clif. Hence, heap of wrath, foul indigested lump,
As crooked in thy manners as thy shape!

York. Nay, we shall heat you thoroughly anon.

Clif. Take heed, lest by your heat you burn yourselves.

K. Hen. Why, Warwick, hath thy knee forgot to bow? —

Old Salisbury,—shame to thy silver hair,
Thou mad misleader of thy brain-sick son! —

What, wilt thou on thy death-bed play the ruffian,
And seek for sorrow with thy spectacles?

O, where is faith? O, where is loyalty?
If it be banish'd from the frosty head.
Where shall it find a harbour in the earth?
Wilt thou go dig a grave to find out war,
And shame thine honourable age with blood?
Why art thou old, and want'st experience?
Or wherefore dost abuse it, if thou hast it?
For shame! in duty bend thy knee to me,
That bows unto the grave with miggle age.

Sal. My lord, I have consider'd with myself
The title of this most renowned duke;
And in my conscience do repute his grace
The rightful heir to England's royal seat.

K. Hen. Hast thou not sworn allegiance unto me?

Sal. I have.

K. Hen. Canst thou dispense with heaven for such an oath?

Sal. It is great sin, to swear unto a sin;
But greater sin, to keep a sinful oath.
Who can be bound by any solemn vow
To do a murderous deed, to rob a man,

9 The Nevils, earls of Warwick, had a bear and ragged staff for their crest.
1 Bear-keeper.

To force a spotless virgin's chastity,
To reave the orphan of his patrimony,
To wring the widow from her custom'd right;
And have no other reason for this wrong,
But that he was bound by a solemn oath?

Q. Mar. A subtle traitor needs no sophister.

K. Hen. Call Buckingham, and bid him arm himself.

York. Call Buckingham, and all the friends thou hast,
I am resolved for death or dignity.

Clif. The first I warrant thee, if dreams prove true.

War. You were best to go to bed, and dream again,
To keep thee from the tempest of the field.

Clif. I am resolv'd to bear a greater storm,
Than any thou canst conjure up to-day;
And that I'll write upon thy burgonet,
Might I but know thee by thy household badge.

War. Now, by my father's badge, old Neville's crest,
The rampant bear chain'd to the ragged staff,
This day I'll wear aloft my burgonet,
(As on a mountain-top the cedar shows,
That keeps his leaves in spite of any storm,)
Even to afflict thee with the view thereof.

Clif. And from thy burgonet I'll rend thy bear,
And tread it underfoot with all contempt,
Despight the bear-ward that protects the bear.

Y. Clif. And so to arms, victorious father,
To quell the rebels, and their 'complices.

SCENE II. — Saint Alban's.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter Warwick.

War. Clifford of Cumberland, 'tis Warwick calls!
And if thou dost not hide thee from the bear,
Now, when the angry trumpet sounds alarm,
And dead men's cries do fill the empty air,
Clifford, I say, come forth and fight with me!

Proud northern lord, Clifford of Cumberland,
Warwick is hoarse with calling thee to arms.

Enter York.

How now, my noble lord? what, all a foot?

York. The deadly-handed Clifford slew my steed;
But match for match I have encounetered him,
And made a prey for carrion kites and crows,
Even of the bonny beast he lov'd so well.

Enter Clifford.

War. Of one or both of us the time is come.

York. Hold, Warwick, seek thee out some other chase,
For I myself must hunt this deer to death.

War. Then, nobly, York; 'tis for a crown thou fight'st.—

As I intend, Clifford, to thrive to-day,
It grieves my soul to leave thee unassail'd.

Clif. What seest thou in me, York? why dost thou pause?

York. With thy brave bearing should I be in love,
But that thou art so fast mine enemy.

Clif. Nor should thy prowess want praise and esteem,
But that 'tis shown ignobly, and in treason.

York. So let it help me now against thy sword,
As I in justice and true right express it!

Clif. My soul and body on the action both! —
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI.

To give the enemy way: and to secure us
By what we can, which can no more but fly.
[Alarum afar off.

If you be ta'en, we then should see the bottom
Of all our fortunes: but if we haply scape,
(As well we may, if not through your neglect,)
We shall to London get; where you are lov'd;
And where this breach, now in our fortunes made,
May readily be stopp'd.

Enter Young Clifford.

Y. Cliff. But that my heart's on future mischief set,
I would speak blasphemy ere bid you fly;
But fly you must; uncurable discomfit
Reigns in the hearts of all our present parts; 5
Away, for your relief! and we will live
To see their day, and them our fortune give:
Away, my lord, away! [Exeunt.

SCENE III. — Fields near Saint Alban's.

Alarum: Retreat. Flourish; then enter York,
Richard Plantagenet, Warwick, and Soldiers, with Drum and Colours.

York. Of Salisbury, who can report of him;
That winter lion, who, in rage, forgets
Aged contusions and all brush of time 6 ;
And, like a gallant in the brow of youth, 7
Repairs him with occasion? this happy day
Is not itself, nor have we won one foot,
If Salisbury be lost.

Rich. My noble father,
Three times to-day I holp him to his horse,
Three times bestrid him, thrice I led him off,
Persuaded him from any further act:
But still, where danger was, still there I met him;
And like rich hangings in a homely house,
So was his will in his old feeble body:
But, noble as he is, look, where he comes.

Enter Salisbury.

Sal. Now, by my sword, well hast thou fought to-day;
By the mass, so did we all. — I thank you, Richard:
God knows, how long it is I have to live;
And it hath pleas'd him, that three times to-day
You have defended me from imminent death.
— Well, lords, we have got that which we have 8 ;
'Tis not enough our foes are this time fled,
Being opposites of such repairing nature. 9
York. I know, our safety is to follow them;
For, as I hear, the king is fled to London,
To call a present court of parliament.

Let us pursue him, ere the writs go forth: —
What says lord Warwick? shall we after them: 8
War. After them! nay, before them, if we can.
Now by my faith, lords, 'twas a glorious day:
Saint Alban's battle, won by famous York,
Shall be eterniz'd in all age to come. —
Sound, drums and trumpets: — and to London all:
And more such days as these to us befall! [Exeunt.

5 For parties.  6 i.e. The gradual detrition of time.
7 i.e. The height of youth; the brow of a hill is its summit.
8 i.e. We have not secured that which we have acquired.
9 i.e. Being enemies that are likely so soon to rally and recover themselves from this defeat.
THIRD PART OF

Soldiers, and other Attendants on King Henry and King Edward, Messengers, Watchmen, &c.

Lords on King Henry's side.

SCENE, during part of the third act, in France; during all the rest of the play, in England.

War. I wonder, how the king escap'd our hands.

York. While we pursu'd the horsemen of the north,

He sily stole away, and left his men:
Whereat the great lord of Northumberland,
Whose warlike ears could never brook retreat,
Cheer'd up the drooping army; and himself,
Lord Clifford, and lord Stafford, all a-breast,
Charg'd our main battle's front, and, breaking in,
Were by the swords of common soldiers slain.

Edw. Lord Stafford's father, duke of Buckingham,

Is either slain, or wounded dangerous:

I cleft his beaver with a downright blow;
That this is true, father, behold his blood.

[Showing his bloody Sword.

Mont. And, brother, here's the earl of Wiltshire's blood,
[To York, showing his.

Whom I encounter'd as the battles join'd.

Rich. Speak thou for me, and tell them what I did.

[Throwing down the Duke of Somerset's Head.

York. Richard hath best deserv'd of all my sons. —
What, is your grace dead, my lord of Somerset?

Norf. Such hope have all the line of John of Gaunt!

Rich. Thus do I hope to shake king Henry's head.

War. And so do I. — Victorious prince of York,
Before I see thee seated in that throne
Which now the house of Lancaster usurps,
I vow by heaven, these eyes shall never close.

This is the palace of the fearful king,
And this the regal seat: possess it, York: For this is thine, and not king Henry's heirs'. York. Assist me then, sweet Warwick, and I will; For either we have broken in by force. Norf. We'll all assist you; he that files, shall die. York. Thanks, gentle Norfolk,—Stay by me, my lords;— And, soldiers, stay, and lodge by me this night. War. And, when the king comes, offer him no violence, Unless he seek to thrust you out by force.

[They retire.]

York. The queen, this day, here holds her parliament. But little thinks we shall be of her council: By words, or blows, here let us win our right. Rich. Arm'd as we are, let's stay within this house. War. The bloody parliament shall this be call'd, Unless Plantagenet, duke of York, be king: And bashful Henry depos'd, whose cowardice Hath made us by-words to our enemies. York. Then leave me not, my lords; be resolute; I mean to take possession of my right. War. Neither the king, nor he that loves him best, The proudest he that holds up Lancaster, Dares stir a wing, if Warwick shake his bells. 1 I'll plant Plantagenet, root him up who dares:—Resolve thee, Richard; claim the English crown.

[Warwick leads York to the Throne, who seats himself.]

Flourish. Enter King Henry, Clifford, Northumberland, Westmoreland, Exeter, and others, with red Roses in their Hats.

K. Hen. My lords, look where the sturdy rebel sits, Even in the chair of state! belike, he means, (Back'd by the power of Warwick, that false peer,) To aspire unto the crown, and reign as king. — Earl of Northumberland, he slew thy father; — And thine, lord Clifford; and you both have vow'd revenge On him, his sons, his favourites, and his friends. North. If I be not, heavens be reveng'd on me! Clift. The hope thereof makes Clifford mourn in steel. West. What, shall we suffer this? let's pluck him down: My heart for anger burns, I cannot brook it. K. Hen. Be patient, gentle earl of Westmoreland, Clift. Patience is for poltroons, and such as he; He durst not sit there had your father liv'd. My gracious lord, here in the parliament Let us assail the family of York. North. Well hast thou spoken, cousin, be it so. K. Hen. Ah, know you not, the city favours them, And they have troops of soldiers at their beck? Clift. But when the duke is slain, they'll quickly fly. K. Hen. Far be the thought of this from Henry's heart To make a shambles of the parliament-house! Cousin of Exeter, frown's, words, and threats, Shall be the war that Henry means to use. — [They advance to the Duke.] Thou factious duke of York, descend my throne, And kneel for grace and mercy at my feet; I am thy sovereign.

1 Hawks had sometimes little bells hung on them, perhaps to scare the birds; that is, to frighten them from rising.

York. Thou art deceiv'd, I am thine. Eze. For shame, come down; he made thee duke of York. York. 'Twas my inheritance, as the earldom was. Eze. Thy father was a traitor to the crown. War. Exeter, thou art a traitor to the crown, In following this usurping Henry. Clift. Whom should be follow, but his natural king? War. True, Clifford; and that's Richard, duke of York.

K. Hen. And shall I stand, and thou sit in my throne? York. It must and shall be so. Content thyself. War. Be duke of Lancaster, let him be king. West. He is both king and duke of Lancaster; And that the lord of Westmoreland shall maintain. War. And Warwick shall disprove it. You forget, That we are those, which chas'd you from the field, And slew your fathers, and with colours spread March'd through the city to the palace gates. North. Yes, Warwick, I remember it to my grief; And, by his soul, thou and thy house shall rue it. West. Plantagenet, of thee, and these thy sons Thy kinsmen, and thy friends I'll have more lives, Than drops of blood were in my father's veins. Clift. Urge it no more; lest that, instead of words, I send thee, Warwick, such a messenger, As shall revenge his death, before I stir. War. Poor Clifford! how I scorn his worthless threats! York. Will you, we show our title to the crown? If not, our swords shall plead it in the field. K. Hen. What title hast thou, traitor, to the crown? Thy father was, as thou art, duke of York; Thy grandfather, Roger Mortimer, earl of March; I am the son of Henry the fifth, Who made the dauphin and the French to stoop, And seiz'd upon their towns and provinces. War. Talk not of France, sith thou hast lost it all. K. Hen. The lord protector lost it, and not I; When I was crown'd, I was but nine months old. Rich. You are old enough now, and yet methinks you lose: — Father, tear the crown from the usurper's head. Edu. Sweet father, do so; set it on your head. Mont. Good brother, [To York.] as thou lov'st and honour'st arms, Let's fight it out, and not stand cavilling thus. Rich. Sound drums and trumpets, and the king will fly. York. Sons, peace! K. Hen. Peace thou! and give king Henry leave to speak. War. Plantagenet shall speak first: — hear him, lords; And be you silent and attentive too, For he, that interrupts him, shall not live. K. Hen. Think'st thou, that I will leave my kingly throne, Wherein my grandsire, and my father, sat? No: first shall war unpeople this my realm; Ay, and their colours — often borne in France; And now in England, to our heart's great sorrow, — Shall be my winding sheet. — Why faint you, lords? My title's good, and better far than this. War. But prove it, Henry, and thou shalt be king. K. Hen. Henry the Fourth by conquest got the crown.
Scene I.

KING HENRY VI.

York. 'Twas by rebellion against his king.
K. Hen. I know not what to say; my title's weak.
Tell me, may not a king adopt an heir?
York. What then?
K. Hen. An if he may, then am I lawful king:
For Richard, in the view of many lords,
Resign'd the crown to Henry the Fourth;
Whose heir my father was, and I am his.
York. He rose against him, being his sovereign,
And made him to resign his crown perforce.
War. Suppose, my lords, he did it unconstrain'd,
Think you, 'twere prejudicial to his crown?
Exe. No; for he could not so resign his crown,
But that the next heir should succeed and reign.
K. Hen. Art thou against us, duke of Exeter?
Exe. His is the right, and therefore pardon me.
York. Why whisper you, my lords, and answer not?
Exe. My conscience tells me, he is lawful king.
K. Hen. All will revolt from me, and turn to him.
North. Plantagenet, for all the claim thou lay'st,
Think not, that Henry shall be so depose'd.
War. Depose'd he shall be, in despite of all.
North. Thou art deceiv'd: 'tis not thy southern power,
Of Essex, Norfolk, Suffolk, nor of Kent,—
Which makes thee thus presumptuous and proud,—
Can set the duke up in despite of me.
Clif. King Henry, be thy title right or wrong,
Lord Clifford vows to fight in thy defence;
May that ground gape, and swallow me alive,
Where I shall kneel to him that slew my father!
K. Hen. O Clifford, how thy words revive my heart!
York. Henry of Lancaster, resign thy crown:—
What matter you, or what conspire you, lords?
War. Do right unto this princely duke of York:
Or I will fill the house with armed men,
And o'er the chair of state where now he sits,
Write up his title with usurping blood.
[He stamps, and the Soldiers show themselves.
K. Hen. My lord of Warwick, hear me but one word;
Let me, for this my life-time, reign as king.
York. Confirm the crown to me, and to mine heirs,
And thou shalt reign in quiet while thou liv'st.
K. Hen. I am content: Richard Plantagenet,
Enjoy the kingdom after my decease.
Clif. What wrong is this unto the prince your son?
War. What good is this to England and himself?
West. Base, fearful, and despairing Henry!
Clif. How hast thou injur'd both thyself and us?
West. I cannot stay to hear these articles.
North. Nor I.
Clif. Come, cousin, let us tell the queen these news.
West. Farewell, faint-hearted and degenerate king,
In whose cold blood no spark of honour hides!
North. Be thou a prey unto the house of York,
And die in bands for this unmanly deed!
Clif. In dreadful war mayst thou be overcame!
Or live in peace, abandon'd and despis'd!
[Exeunt Northumberland, Clifford, and Westmoreland.
War. Turn this way, Henry, and regard them not.
Exe. They seek revenge, and therefore will not yield.
K. Hen. Ah, Exeter!
War. Why should you sigh, my lord?

K. Hen. Not for myself, lord Warwick, but my son,
Whom I unnaturally shall disinherit.
But, be it as it may:—I here entail
The crown to thee, and to thine heirs for ever;
Conditionally, that here thou take an oath
To cease this civil war, and, whilst I live,
To honour me as thy king and sovereign;
And neither by treason, nor hostility,
To seek to put me down, and reign thyself.
York. This oath I willingly take, and will perform.
[Coming from the Throne.
War. Long live king Henry!—Plantagenet embrace him.
K. Hen. And long live thou, and these thy forward sons!
York. Now York and Lancaster are reconcil'd.
Exe. Accurs'd be he, that seeks to make them foes!
[The Lords come forward.
York. Farewell, my gracious lord; I'll to my castle.
War. And I'll keep London, with my soldiers.
Norf. And I to Norfolk, with my followers.
Mont. And I unto the sea, from whence I came.
[Exeunt York, and his Sons, Warwick, Norf., Montague, Soldiers, and Attendants.
K. Hen. And I, with grief and sorrow, to the court.

Enter QUEEN MARGARET, and the Prince of WALES.
Exe. Here comes the queen, whose looks bewray her anger:
I'll steal away.
Q. Mar. Nay, go not from me, I will follow thee.
K. Hen. Be patient, gentle queen, and I will stay.
Q. Mar. Who can be patient in such extremes?
Ah, wretched man! 'twould I had died a maid,
And never seen thee, never borne thee son,
Seeing thou hast prov'd so unnatural a father!
Hath he deserv'd to lose his birthright thus?
Hadst thou but lov'd him half so well as I;
Or felt that pain, which I did for him once;
Or nourish'd him, as I did with my blood?
Thou would'st have left thy dearest heart-blood there,
Rather than made that savage duke thine heir,
And disinherit thine only son.
Prince. Father, you cannot disinherit me:
If you be king, why should not I succeed?
K. Hen. Pardon me, Margaret;—pardon me, sweet son;—
The earl of Warwick and the duke enforce'd me.
Q. Mar. Enforce'd thee! art thou king, and wilt be for'd?
I shalme to hear thee speak. Ah, timorous wretch!
Thou hast undone thyself, thy son, and me;
And given unto the house of York such head,
As thou shalt reign but by their sufferance.
To entail him and his heirs unto the crown,
What is it, but to make thy sepulchre,
And creep into it far before thy time?
Warwick is chancellor, and the lord of Calais;
Stern Falconbridge commands the narrow seas;
The duke is made protector of the realm;
And yet shalt thou be safe? such safety finds
The trembling lamb, environed with wolves.
Had I been there, which am a silly woman,
The soldiers should have toss'd me on their pikes,
Before I would have granted to that act.
But thou preferrest thy life before thine honour: And seeing thou dost, I here divorce myself, Both from thy table, Henry, and thy bed, Until that act of parliament be repeal'd, Whereby my son is disinherited. The northern lords, that have forsworn thy colours, Will follow mine, if once they see them spread: And spread they shall be; to thy foul disgrace, And utter ruin of the house of York.

Thus do I leave thee: — Come, son, let's away; Our army's ready; come, we'll after them.

Peck.

Q. Mar. Thou hast spoke too much already; get thee gone.
Peck.

K. Hen. Stay, gentle Margaret, and hear me speak.
Peck.

Q. Mar. Ay, to be murder'd by his enemies.
Prince. When I return with victory from the field, I'll see your grace: till then, I'll follow her.
Peck.

Q. Mar. Come, son, away; we may not linger thus.

[Exeunt QUEEN MARGARET and the PRINCE.]

K. Hen. Poor queen! how love to me, and to her son, Hath made her break out into terms of rage! Reven'd may she be on that hateful duke; Whose haughty spirit, winged with desire, Will cost my crown, and, like an empty eagle, Tire's on the flesh of me, and of my son! The loss of those three lords torments my heart; I'll write unto them, and entreat them fair; — Come, cousin, you shall be the messenger.

Eve. And I, I hope, shall reconcile them all.
Peck.

SCENE II. — A Room in Sandal Castle, near Wakefield, in Yorkshire.

Enter Edward, Richard, and Montague.

Rich. Brother, though I be youngest, give me leave.
Edw. No, I can better play the orator.
Mont. But I have reasons strong and forcible.
Peck.

Enter YORK.

York. Why, how now, sons and brother, at a strife?
What is your quarrel? how began it first?
Edw. No quarrel, but a slight contention.
York. About what?
Rich. About that which concerns your grace, and us;
The crown of England, father, which is yours.
Rich. Your right depends not on his life, or death.
Edw. Now you are heir, therefore enjoy it now: By giving the house of Lancaster leave to breathe, It will outrun you, father in the end.
York. I took an oath that he should quietly reign.
Edw. I'd break a thousand oaths, to reign one year.
Rich. No; God forbid, your grace should be forsworn.
York. I shall be, if I claim by open war.
Rich. I'll prove the contrary, if you'll hear me speak.
York. Thou canst not, son; it is impossible.
Rich. An oath is of no moment, being not took Before a true and lawful magistrate, That hath authority over him that swears; Henry had none, but did usurp the place;

3 Of sound judgment.

Then, seeing 'twas he that made you to depose, Your oath, my lord, is vain and frivolous. Therefore, to arms. And, father, do but think, How sweet a thing it is to wear a crown; Within whose circuit is Elysium. And all that poets feign of bliss and joy. Why do we linger thus? I cannot rest, Until the white rose, that I wear, be dyed Even in the lukewarm blood of Henry's heart.
York. Richard, enough; I will be king, or die. — Brother, thou shalt to London presently, And whet on Warwick to this enterprise. — Thou, Richard, shalt unto the duke of Norfolk, And tell him privately of our intent. — You, Edward, shalt unto my lord Cobham, With whom the Kentishmen will willingly rise: In them I trust; for they are soldiers, Witty and courteous, liberal, full of spirit. — While you are thus employ'd, what resteth more, But that I seek occasion how to rise; And yet the king not privy to my drift, Nor any of the house of Lancaster?

Enter a Messenger.

But, stay; What news? Why com'st thou in such a post?
Mest. The queen, with all the northern earls and lords, Intend here to besiege you in your castle: She is hard by with twenty thousand men; And therefore fortify your hold, my lord.
York. Ay, with my sword. What! think'st thou, that we fear them? — Edward and Richard, you shall stay with me; — My brother Montague shall post to London: Let noble Warwick, Cobham, and the rest, Whom we have left protectors of the king, With powerful policy strengthen themselves, And trust not simple Henry, nor his oats.
Mont. Brother, I go; I'll win them, fear it not: And thus most humbly I do take my leave.
Exit.

Enter Sir John and Sir Hugh Mortimer.

York. Sir John, and sir Hugh Mortimer, mine uncles! You are come to Sandal in a happy hour; The army of the queen mean to besiege us.
Sir John. She shall not need, we'll meet her in the field.
York. What, with five thousand men?
Rich. Ay, with five hundred, father, for a need.
A woman's general; What should we fear?
Peck.

[A March after off.]

Edw. I hear their drums; let's set our men in order; And issue forth, and bid them battle straight.
York. Five men to twenty! — though the odds be great, I doubt not, uncle, of our victory. Many a battle have I won in France, When as the enemy hath been ten to one; Why should I not now have the like success?
Alarum. Exeunt.

SCENE III. — Plains near Sandal Castle.
Alarums: Excursions. Enter Rutland, and his Tutor.

Rut. Ah, whither shall I fly to 'scape their hands! Ah, tutor! look, where bloody Clifford comes!
Scene IV.

Enter Clifford, and Soldiers.

Clif. Chaplain, away! thy priesthood saves thy life.
As for the brat of this accursed duke,
Whose father slew my father,—he shall die.
Tut. And I, my lord, will bear him company.
Clif. Soldiers, away with him.
Tut. Ah, Clifford! murder not this innocent child,
Lest thou be hated both of God and man.

[Exit, forced off by Soldiers]

Clif. How now! is he dead already? Or, is it fear,
That makes him close his eyes?—I'll open them.

Rut. So looks the pent-up lion o'er the wretch
That trembles under his devouring paws:
And so he walks, insulting o'er his prey;
And so he comes to rend his limbs asunder.
Ah, gentle Clifford, kill me with thy sword,
And not with such a cruel threatening look.
Sweet Clifford, hear me speak before I die;
I am too mean a subject for thy wrath,
Be thou reveng'd on men, and let me live.

Clif. In vain thou speakest; poor boy; my father's blood
Hath stopp'd the passage where thy words should enter.

Rut. Then let my father's blood open it again;
He is a man, and, Clifford, cope with him.

Clif. Had I thy brethren here, their lives and thine,
Were not revenge sufficient for me?
No, if I digg'd up thy forefathers' graves,
And hung their rotten coffins up in chains,
It could not slake mine ire, nor ease my heart.

The sight of any of the house of York
Is as a fury to torment my soul;
And till I root out their accursed line,
And leave not one alive, I live in hell.

Therefore—

[Clifford lifts his Hand]

Rut. O, let me pray before I take my death:—
To thee I pray; Sweet Clifford, pity me!

Clif. Such pity as my rapier's point affords.

Rut. I never did thee harm; Why wilt thou slay me?

Clif. Thy father hath.

Rut. But 'twas ere I was born.
Thou hast one son, for his sake pity me;
Lest, in revenge thereof,—sith God is just,—
He be as miserably slain as I.
Ah, let me live in prison all my days;
And when I give occasion of offence,
Then let me die, for now thou hast no cause.

Clif. No cause?

Thy father slew my father; therefore, die.

Clif. [to Soldiers] Stab him.

Rut. Dii faciant, laudis summà sit ista tua!

[Dies]

Clif. Plantagenet! I come, Plantagenet!
And this thy son's blood cleaving to my blade,
Shall rust upon my weapon, till thy blood,
Congeal'd with this, do make me wipe off both.

[Exit]

Scene IV. — The same.

Alarum. Enter York.

York. The army of the queen hath got the field:
My uncles both are slain in rescuing me;
And all my followers to the eager foe
Turn back, and fly, like ships before the wind,
Or lambs pursu'd by hunger-starved wolves.

My sons — Heaven knows, what hath bechaned them:
But this I know — they have deman'd themselves
Like men born to renown, by life, or death.
Three times did Richard make a lane to me;
And thrice cried,—Courage, father! fight it out!
And full as oft came Edward to my side,
With purple faulchion, painted to the hilt,
In blood of those that had encounter'd him:
And when the hardiest warriors did retire,
Richard cried,—Charge! and give no foot of ground!
And cried, — A crown, or else a glorious tomb!
A scepter, or an earthly sepulchre!

With this, we charg'd again: but, out, alas!
We bodg'd'g again; as I have seen a swan
With bootless labour swim against the tide,
And spend her strength with overmatching waves.

[Alarum within, Ah, hark! the fatal followers do pursue:
And I am faint, and cannot fly their fury:
And, were I strong, I would not shun their fury:
The sands are number'd that make up my life;
Here must I stay, and here my life must end.

Enter Queen Margaret, Clifford, Northumberland, and Soldiers.

Come, bloody Clifford, — rough Northumberland;—
I dare your quenchless fury to more rage;
I am your butt, and I abide your shot.

North. Yield to our mercy, proud Plantagenet.
Clif. Ay, to such mercy, as his ruthless arm,
With downright payment shou'd unto my father.
Now Phaeton hath tumbled from his car,
And made an evening at the noontide point.
York. My ashes, as the Phoenix, may bring forth
A bird that will revenge upon you all:
And, in that hope, I throw mine eyes to heaven,
Scorning whate'er you can affliet me with.

Why come you not? what! multitudes, and fear?
Clif. So cowards fight, when they can fly no further;
So doves do peck the falcon's piercing talons;
So desparate thieves, all hopeless of their lives,
Breathe out invites 'gainst the officers.

York. O Clifford, but bethink thee once again,
And in thy thought o'er-run my former time:
And, if thou canst for blushing, view this face;
And bite thy tongue, that slanders him with cowardice.
Whose brown hath made thee faint and fly ere this.
Clif. I will not bandy with thee word for word;
But buckle with thee blows twice two for one.

[Draws]

Q. Mar. Hold, valiant Clifford! for a thousand causes,
I would prolong awhile the traitor's life:—
Wrath makes him deaf: speak thou, Northumberland.
North. Hold, Clifford; do not honour him so much
To prick thy finger, though to wound his heart:
What valour were it, when a cur doth grin,
For one to thrust his hand between his teeth,
When he might spurn him with his foot away?
It is war's prize to take all vantages;
And ten to one is no impleach of valour.

[They lay hands on York, who struggles]

Clif. Ay, by, so strives the woodcock with the gin.
North. So doth the coney struggle in the net.

[York is taken prisoner]

York. So triumph thieves upon their conquer'd booty;
So true men yield, with robbers so 'er-match'd.

4 Heaven grant that this may be your greatest boast!

Ovid. Epist.

5 i.e. We boggled, failed.
North. What would your grace have done unto him now?

Q. Mar. Brave warriors, Clifford and Northumberland,
Come make him stand upon this molehill here,
That raught 6 at mountains with outstretched arms,
Yet parted but the shadow with his hand. —
What! was it you that would be England's king?
Was't you that revell'd in our parliament,
And made a preaching of your high descent?
Where are your mess of sons to back you now?
The wanton Edward, and the lusty George? And where's that valiant crook-back prodigy,
Dicky your boy, that, with his grumbling voice,
Was wont to cheer his dad in mutinies?
Or, with the rest, where is your darling Rutland?
Look, York; I stain'd this napkin with the blood
That valiant Clifford, with his rapier's point,
Made issue from the bosom of the boy:
And, if thine eyes can water for his death,
I give thee this to dry thy cheeks withal.
Alas, poor York! but that I hate thee deadly,
I should lament thy miserable state.
I pry'thee, grieve, to make me merry, York;
Stamp, rave, and fret, that I may sing and dance.
What, hath thy fiery heart so parch'd thine entrails,
That not a tear can fall for Rutland's death? What art thou patient, man? thou shouldst be mad;
And, if thou make thee mad, do make thee thus.
Thou wouldst be fee'd, I see, to make me sport;
York cannot speak, unless he wear a crown. —
A crown for York; — and, lords, bow low to him. —
Hold you his hands, whilst I do set it on. —

[Putting a paper Crown on his Head.]
Ay, marry, sir, now looks he like a king!
Ay, this is he that took king Henry's chair;
And this is he was his adopted heir. —
But how is it that great Plantagenet
Is crown'd so soon, and broke his solemn oath?
As I behinck me, you should not be king,
Till our king Henry had shook hands with death.
And will you pale? your head, and Henry's glory,
And rob his temples of the diadem, the crown.
Now in his life, against your holy oath?
O, 'tis a fault too, too unpardonable! —
Off with the crown; and, with the crown, his head;
And, whilst we breathe, take time to do him dead.

Cliff. That is my office, for my father's sake.

Q. Mar. Nay, stay; let's hear the orisons he makes.

York. She-wolf of France, but worse than wolves of France,
Whose tongue more poisons than the adder's tooth!
How ill-beseeming is it in thy sex,
To triumph like an Amazonian trull,
Upon their woes, whom fortune captivates?
But that thy face is, visor-like, unchanging,
Made impudent with use of evil deeds,
I would assay, proud queen, to make thee blush:
To tell thee whence thou can'st, of whom deriv'd,
Were shame enough to shame thee, worth thou not shameless.

Thy father bears the type 8 of king of Naples,
Of both the Sicils, and Jerusalem;
Yet not so wealthy as an English yeoman.

6 Reached.
7 Impale, encircle.

Hath that poor monarch taught thee to insult?
It needs not, nor it boots thee not, proud queen;
Unless the adage must be verified, —
That beggars, mounted, run their horse to death.
'Tis beauty, that doth oft make women proud;
But heaven knows, thy share thereof is small:
'Tis virtue that doth make them most admir'd;
The contrary doth make thee wonder'd at:
'Tis government, 9 that makes them seem divine;
The want thereof makes thee abominable:
Thou art as opposite to every good,
As the Antipodes are unto us,
Or as the south to the septentrion.

O, tiger's heart, wrapp'd in a woman's hide!
How couldst thou drain the life-blood of the child,
To bid the father wipe his eyes withal,
And yet be seen to bear a woman's face?
Women are soft, mild, pitiful, and flexible;
Thou stern, obdurate, flinty, rough, remorseless.
Bistl thou me rage? why, now thou hast thy wish:
Wouldst have me weep? why, now thou hast thy will:
For raging wind blows up incessant showers,
And, when the rage allays, the rain begins.
These tears are my sweet Rutland's obsequies;
And every drop cries vengeance for his death, —
'Gainst thee, fell Clifford, — and thee, false Frenchwoman.

North. Beshrew me, but his passions 2 move me so,
That hardly can I check my fountains from tears.

York. That face of his the hungry cannibals
Would not have touch'd, would not have stain'd with blood:
But you are more inhuman, more inexorable, —
O, ten times more, — than tigers of Hyrcania.
See, ruthless queen, a hapless father's tears:
This cloth thou dipp'st in blood of my sweet boy,
And I with tears do wash the blood away.

Keep thou the napkin, and go boast of this:

[He gives back the Handkerchief.]
And if thou tell'st the heavy story right,
Upon my soul, the hearers will shed tears;
Yea, even my foes will shed fast-falling tears,
And wonder, Alas, it was aullet dead!
There, take the crown, and with the crown, my curse;
And, in thy need, such comfort come to thee,
As now I reap at thy too cruel hand! —
Hard-hearted Clifford, take me from the world;
My soul to heaven, my blood upon your heads!

North. Had he been slaughter-man to all my kin,
I should not for my life but weep with him,
To see how inly sorrow grieves his soul.

Q. Mar. What, weeping-rife, my lord Northumberland?

Think but upon the wrong he did us all,
And that will quickly dry thy melting tears.

Cliff. Here's for my oath, here's for my father's death.

Q. Mar. And here's to right our gentle-hearted king.

York. Open thy gate of mercy, gracious God!
My soul flies through these wounds to seek out thee.

[Dies.

Q. Mar. Off with his head, and set it on York gates;
So York may overlook the town of York.

[Exeunt.

9 Regularity of behaviour.
1 The north.
2 Sufferings.
SCENE I.—A Plain near Mortimer's Cross in Herefordshire.

Drums. Enter Edward and Richard, with their Forces, marching.

Edu. I wonder, how our princely father 'scape'd; Or whether he be 'scape'd away or no, From Clifford's and Northumberland's pursuit; Had he been ta'en, we should have heard the news; Had he been slain, we should have heard the news; Or, had he 'scape'd, methinks, we should have heard The happy tiding of his good escape. — How fares my brother? why is he so sad?

Rich. I cannot joy, until I be resolv'd Where our right valiant father is become. I saw him in the battle range about; And watch'd him how he singled Clifford forth. Methought, he bore him in the thickest troop, As doth a lion in a herd of neat: — Or as a bear, encompass'd round with dogs; Who having pinch'd a few, and made them cry, The rest stand all aloof, and bark at him. So far'd our father with his enemies; So fled his enemies my warlike father; Methinks, 'tis prize enough to be his son. See how the morning opes her golden gates, And takes her farewell of the glorious sun! How well resembles it the prime of youth, Trim'd like a younger, prancing to his love!

Edu. Dazzle mine eyes, or do I see three sons? Rich. Three glorious suns, each one a perfect sun? Not separated with the racking clouds, But sever'd in a pale clear-shining sky. See, see! they join, embrace, and seem to kiss, As if they vow'd some league inviolable: Now are they but one lamp, one light, one sun. In this the heaven figures some event.

Edu. 'Tis wondrous strange, the like yet never heard of. I think, it cites us, brother, to the field; That was the sons of brave Plantagenet, Each one already blazing by our meads? Should, notwithstanding, join our lights together, And over-shine the earth, as this the world. Whate'er it bodes, henceforward will I hear Upon my target three fair shining suns.

Enter a Messenger.

But what art thou, whose heavy looks foretell Some dreadful story hanging on thy tongue? Mess. Ah, one that was a woful looker on, When as the noble duke of York was slain, Your princely father, and my loving lord. Edu. O, speak no more! for I have heard too much.

Rich. Say how he died, for I will hear it all.

Mess. Environ'd he was with many foes; And stood against them as the hope of Troy Against the Greeks that would have enter'd Troy. But Hercules himself must yield to odds; And many strokes, though with a little axe Hew down and fell the hardest-timber'd oak. By many hands your father was subdu'd; But only slaughter'd by the ireful arm

Of unrelenting Clifford, and the queen: Who crown'd the gracious duke in high despite; Laugh'd in his face; and, when with grief he wept, The ruthless queen gave him, to dry his cheeks, A napkin steeped in the harmless blood Of sweet young Rutland, by rough Clifford slain: And, after many scars, many foul taunts, They took his head, and on the gates of York They set the same; and there it doth remain, The saddest spectacle that e'er I view'd.

Edu. Sweet duke of York, our prop to lean upon; Now thou art gone, we have no staff, no stay! — O Clifford, boist'rous Clifford, thou hast slain The flower of Europe for his chivalry; And treacherously hast thou vanquish'd him, For, hand to hand, he would have vanquish'd thee! — Now my soul's palace is become a prison: Ah, would she break from hence! that this my body Might in the ground be closed up in rest: For never henceforth shall I joy again, Never, O never, shall I see more joy.

Rich. I cannot weep: for all my body's moisture Scarce serves to quench my furnace-burning heart: Nor can my tongue unload my heart's great burden, For self-same wind, that I should speak withal, Is kindling coals, that fire all my breast, And burn me up with flames, that tears would quench. To weep, is to make less the depth of grief: Tears, then, for babes; blows, and revenge for me! — Richard, I bear thy name, I'll venge thy death, Or die renowned by attempting it.

Edu. His name that valiant duke hath left with thee; His dukedom and his chair with me is left.

Rich. Nay, if thou be that princely eagle's bird, Show thy descent by gazing 'gainst the sun: For chair and dukedom, throne and kingdom say; Or that is thine, or else thou wert not his.

March. Enter Warwick and Montague, with Forces.

War. How now, fair lords? What fare? what news abroad?

Rich. Great lord of Warwick, if we should recount Our baleful news, and, at each word's deliverance, Stab poniards in our flesh till all were told, The words would add more anguish than the wounds. O valiant lord, the duke of York is slain.

Edu. O Warwick! Warwick! that Plantagenet Which held thee dearly, as his very soul, Is by the stern lord Clifford done to death.

War. Ten days ago I drown'd these news in tears: And now, to add more measure to your woes, I come to tell you things since then befell'n. After the bloody fray at Wakefield fought, Where your brave father breath'd his latest gasp, Tidings, as swiftly as the posts could run, Were brought me of your loss, and his depart. I then in London, keeper of the king, Muster'd my soldiers, gather'd flocks of friends, And very well appointed, as I thought, March'd towards Saint Alban's to intercept the queen, Bearing the king in my behalf along: For by my scouts I was advertised, That she was coming with a full intent

L1
To dash our late decree in parliament,
Touching king Henry's oath, and your succession,
Short tale to make,—we at Saint Alban's met,
Our battles join'd, and both sides fiercely fought:
But, whether 'twas the coldness of the king,
Who look'd full gently on his warlike queen,
That robb'd my soldiers of their hated spleen;
Or whether 'twas report of her success;
Or more than common fear of Clifford's rigour,
Who thunders to his captives—blood and death,
I cannot judge: but, to conclude with truth,
Their weapons like to lightning came and went;
Our soldiers—like the night-owl's lazy flight,
Or like a lazy thrasher with a flail,
Fell gently down, as if they struck their friends.
I cheer'd them up with justice of our cause,
With promise of high pay, and great rewards:
But all in vain; they had no heart to fight,
And we, in them no hope to win the day,
So that we fled; the king unto the queen;
Lord George your brother, Norfolk, and myself,
In haste, post-haste, are come to join with you;
For in the marches here, we heard you were,
Making another head to fight again.

_Edu._ Where is the duke of Norfolk, gentle Warwick?

_Auth._ And when came George from Burgundy to England?

_War._ Some six miles off the duke is with the soldiers:
And for your brother,—he was lately sent
From your kind aunt, duchess of Burgundy,
With aid of soldiers to this needful war.

_Rich._ 'Twas odds, belike, when valiant Warwick fled:
Oft have I heard his praises in pursuit,
But ne'er, till now, his scandal of retire.

_War._ Nor now my scandal, Richard, dost thou hear:
For thou shalt know this strong right hand of mine
Can pluck the diadem from faint Henry's head,
And write the awful scepter from his fist;
Were he as famous and as bold in war,
As he is fam'd for mildness, peace and prayer.

_Rich._ I know it well, lord Warwick: blame me not;
'Tis love, I bear thy glories, makes me speak.
But, in this troublous time, what's to be done?
Shall we go throw away our coats of steel,
And wrap our bodies in black mourning-gowns,
Num'ring our Ave-Maries with our beads?
Or shall we on the helmets of our foes
Tell our devotion with revengeful arms?
If for the last, say — Ay, and to it, lords.

_War._ Why, therefore Warwick came to seek you out;
And therefore comes my brother Montague.
Attend me, lords. The proud insulting queen,
With Clifford, and the haughty Northumberland,
And of their feather many more proud birds,
Have wrought the easy melting king like wax.
He swore consent to your succession,
His oath enrolled in the parliament;
And now to London all the crew are gone,
To frustrate both his oath, and what beside
May make against the house of Lancaster.
Their power, I think, is thirty thousand strong:
Now, if the help of Norfolk, and myself,
With all the friends that thou, brave Earl of March,
Amongst the loving Welshmen canst procure,
Will but amount to five and twenty thousand,

Why, _Viu_ to London will we march amain;
And once again bestride our faxing steeds,
And once again cry,—Charge upon our foes!
But never once again turn back and fly.

_Rich._ Ay, now, methinks, I hear great Warwick speak:
Ne'er may he live to see a sunshine day,
That cries—Retire, if Warwick bid him stay.

_Edu._ Lord Warwick, on thy shoulder will I lean;
And when thou fall'st, (as heaven forbid the hour!)
Must Edward fall, which peril heaven forefend!

_War._ No longer earl of March, but duke of York;
The next degree is, England's royal throne:
For king of England shalt thou be proclaimed
In every borough as we pass along:
And he that throws not up his cap for joy,
Shall for the fault make forfeit of his head.
King Edward,—valiant Richard,—Montague,—
Stay we no longer dreaming of renown,
But sound the trumpets, and about our task.

_Rich._ Then, Clifford, were thy heart as hard as steel,
(As thou hast shown it flinty by thy deeds,)
I come to Pierce it, or to give thee mine.

_Edu._ Then strike up, drums;—God, and saint George, for us!

_Enter a Messenger._

_War._ How now? what news?
_Mess._ The duke of Norfolk sends you word by me,
The queen is coming with a puissant host;
And crave's your company for speedy counsel.

_War._ Why then it sorts', brave warriors: Let's away.

_SCENE II._ Before York.

_Enter King Henry, Queen Margaret, the Prince of Wales, Clifford, and Northumberland, with Forces._

_Q. Mar._ Welcome, my lord, to this brave town of York.
Yonder's the head of that arch-enemy,
That sought to be encompass'd with your crown:
Doth not the object cheer your heart, my lord?

_K. Hen._ Ay, as the rocks' cheer them that fear their woe:
To see this sight, it irks my very soul. —
Withhold revenge, great God! 'tis not my fault,
Not willingly have I infringing'd my vow.

_Ciff._ My gracious liege, this too much lenity
And harmful pity, must be laid aside.
To whom do lions cast their gentle looks?
Not to the beast that would usurp their den.
Whose hand is that the forest bear doth lick?
Not his, that spoils her young before her face.
Who 'scapest the lurking serpent's mortal sting?
Not he, that sets his foot upon her back.
The smallest worm will turn, being trodden on;
And doves will peck, in safeguard of their brood.
Ambitious York did level at thy crown,
Thou smiling, while he knits his angry brows:
He but a duke, would have his son a king,
And raise his issue, like a loving sire;
Thou, being a king, bless'd with a goodly son,
Didst yield consent to disinherit him,
Which argued thee a most unloving father.
Unreasonable creatures feed their young:
And though man's face be fearful to their eyes,
Yet in protection of their tender ones,

7 Why then things are as they should be.
KING HENRY VI.

Scene II.

Who hath not seen them (even with those wings Which sometime they have us'd with fearful flight,) Make war with him that climb'd unto their nest, Offering their own lives in their young's defence? For shame, my liege, make them your precedent! Were it not pity that this goodly boy Should lose his birthright by his father's fault; And long hereafter, say unto his child, — What my great-grandfather and granddair got, My careless father fondly gave away? Ah, what a shame were this! Look on the boy; And let his manly face, which promises Successful fortune, steel thy melting heart, To hold thine own, and leave thine own with him.

K. Hen. Full well hath Clifford play'd the orator, Inferring arguments of mighty force. But, Clifford, tell me, didst thou never hear, — That things ill got had ever bad success? I'll leave my son my virtuous deeds behind; And would, my father had left me no more! For all the rest is held at such a value. As brings a thousand-fold more care to keep, Than in possession any jot of pleasure. Ah, cousin York! would thy best friends did know, How it doth grieve me that thy head is here!

Q. Mar. Why, that is spoken like a forward prince.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Royal commanders, be in readiness: For, with a band of thirty thousand men, Comes Warwick, backing of the duke of York; And, in the towns as they do march along, Proclaims him king, and many fly to him: Daraign your battle, for they are at hand.

Cliff. I would your highness would depart the field; The queen hath best success when you are absent.

Q. Mar. Ay, good my lord, and leave us to our fortune.

K. Hen. Why, that's my fortune too; therefore I'll stay.

North. Be it with resolution, then, to fight.

Prince. My royal father, cheer these noble lords, And hearten those that fight in your defence: Unsheath your sword, good father; cry, Saint George!

March. Enter Edward, George, Richard, Warwick, Norfolk, Montague, and Soldiers.

Edw. Now, perjurd Henry! wilt thou kneel for grace, And set thy diadem upon my head; Or ride the merest foal of all the field? Q. Mar. Go, rate thy minions, proud insulting boy! Becomes it thee to be thus bold in terms, Before thy sovereign, and thy lawful king? Edw. I am his king, and he should bow his knee; But I was adopted heir by his consent: Since when, his oath is broke: for, as I hear, You—that are king, though he do wear the crown,—

Have caus'd him, by new act of parliament, To blot out me, and put his own son in.

Cliff. And reason too; Who should succeed the father, but the son? Rich. Are you there, butcher? — O, I cannot speak! Ay, crook-back; here I stand to answer thee, Or any he the proudest of thy sort.

Rich. 'Twas you that kill'd young Rutland, was it not?

Cliff. Ay, and old York, and yet not satisfied.

Rich. For heaven's sake, lords, give signal to the fight.

War. What say'st thou, Henry, wilt thou yield the crown?

Q. Mar. Why, how now, long-tongu'd Warwick? dare you speak?

When you and I met at Saint Alban's last, Your legs did better service than your hands.

War. Then 'twas my turn to fly, and now 'tis thine.

Cliff. You said so much before, and yet you fled. War. This may not your valour, Clifford, drove me thence.

North. No, nor your manhood, that didst make you stay.

Rich. Northumberland, I hold thee reverently; — Break off the parle: for scarce I can refrain The execution of my big-swoln heart Upon that Clifford, that cruel child-killer.

Cliff. I slew thy father: Call'st thou him a child? Rich. Ay, like a dastard, and a treacherous coward, As thou didst kill our tender brother Rutland; But, ere sun-set, I'll make thee curse the deed.

K. Hen. Have done with words, my lords, and hear me speak.

Q. Mar. Defy them then, or else hold close thy lips. K. Hen. I pr'ythee, give no limits to my tongue; I am a king, and privilege'd to speak.

Cliff. My liege, the wound, that bred this meeting here, Cannot be cur'd by words: therefore be still.

Rich. Then, executioner, unsheathe thy sword: By Him that made us all, I am resolv'd, That Clifford's manhood lies upon his tongue.

Edw. Say, Henry, shall I have my right, or no? A thousand men have broke their fasts to-day, That ne'er shall dine, unless thou yield the crown. War. If thou deny, their blood upon thy head; For York in justice puts his armour on.

Prince. If that be right, which Warwick says is right, There is no wrong, but every thing is right.

Rich. Whoever got thee, there thy mother stands; For, well I wot, thou hast thy mother's tongue. Q. Mar. But thou art neither like thy sire, nor dam; But like a foul mis-shapen stigmatiek, Mark'd by the destinies to be avoided, As venom toads, or lizards' dreadful stings. Rich. Iron of Naples, hid with English gilt, Whose father bears the title of a king, (As if a channel should be call'd the sea,) Sham'st thou not, knowing whence thou art ex-tracted, To let thy tongue detect thy base-born heart?

Edw. Helen of Greece was fairer far than thou, Although thy husband may be Menelaus; And ne'er was Agamennon's brother wrong'd By that false woman, as this king by thee. His father revel'd in the heart of France, And tam'd the king, and made the dauphin stoop; 1 It is my firm persuasion. 2 Gilding.
And, had he match’d according to his state,
He might have kept that glory to this day:
But, when he took a beggar to his bed,
And graci’d thy poor sire with his brid’al day;
Even then that sunshine brew’d a shower for him,
That wash’d his father’s fortunes forth of France,
And heap’d sedition on his crown at home.
For what hath broach’d this tumult, but thy pride?
Hadst thou been meek, our title still had slept;
And we, in pity of the gentle king,
Had slipp’d our claim until another age.

Geo. But, when we saw our sunshine made thy spring,
And that thy summer bred no increase,
We set the axe to thy usurping root:
And though the edge hath something hit ourselves,
Yet, know thou, since we have begun to strike,
We’ll never leave, till we have hewn thee down,
Or bath’d thy growing with our heated bloods.

Edw. And, in this resolution, I defy thee;
Not willing any longer conference,
Since thou deny’st the gentle king to speak.
Sound trumpets! — let our bloody colours wave! —
And either victory, or else a grave.

Edw. No, wrangling woman; we’ll no longer stay;
These words will cost ten thousand lives to-day.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. — A Field of Battle between Towton

and Saxton in Yorkshire.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter Warwick.

War. Forspent with toil, as runners with a race,
I lay me down a little while to breathe:
For strokes receiv’d, and many blows repaid,
Have robb’d my strong-knit sinews of their strength.
And, spite of spite, needs must I rest a while.

Enter Edward, running.

Edw. Smile, gentle heaven! or strike, ungentle death:
For this world frowns, and Edward’s sun is clouded.

War. How now, my lord? what hap? what hope of good?

Enter George.

Geo. Our hap is loss, our hope but sad despair;
Our ranks are broke, and ruin follows us:
What counsel give you, whither shall we fly?

Edw. Bootless is flight, they follow us with wings;
And weak we are, and cannot shun pursuit.

Enter Richard.

Rich. Ah, Warwick, why hast thou withdrawn thyself?
Thy brother’s blood the thirsty earth hath drunk,
Broach’d with the steely point of Clifford’s lance:
And in the very pangs of death, he cried,
Like to a dismal clangor heard from far,

Warwick, revenge! brother, revenge my death!
So underneath the belly of their steeds,
That stain’d their fetlocks in his smoking blood,
The noble gentleman gave up the ghost.

War. Then let the earth be drunken with our blood:
I’ll kill my horse, because I will not fly.
Why stand we like soft-hearted women here,
Wailing our losses, whiles the foe doth rage?
And look upon, as if the tragedy
Were play’d in jest by counterfeiting actors?

Here on my knee I vow to God above,
I’ll never pause again, never stand still,
Till either death hath clos’d these eyes of mine,
Or fortune given me measure of revenge.

Edw. O, Warwick, do bend my knee with thine;
And, in this vow, do chain my soul to thine;
And, ere my knee rise from the earth’s cold face,
I throw my hands, mine eyes, my heart to thee,
Thou setter up and plucker down of kings!
Beseeching thee, — if with thy will it stands,
That to my foes this body must be prey, —
Yet that thy brazen gates of heaven may ope,
And give sweet passage to my sinful soul! —
Now, lords, take leave until we meet again,
Where’er it be, in heaven, or on earth.

Rich. Brother, give me thy hand; — and, gentle Warwick,
Let me embrace thee in my weary arms: —
I, that did never weep, now melt with woe,
That winter should cut off our spring-time so.

War. Away, away! Once more, sweet lords, farewell.

Geo. Yet let us all together to our troops,
And give them leave to fly that will not stay;
And call them pillars, that will stand to us;
And if we thrive, promise them such rewards
As victors wear at the Olympian games:
This may plant courage in their quailing breasts;
For yet is hope of life, and victory.
Fore-slow 3 no longer, make we hence amain.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. — The same. Another Part of the Field.

Excursions. Enter Richard and Clifford.

Rich. Now, Clifford, I have singled thee alone:
Suppose, this arm is for the duke of York,
And this for Rutland; both bound to revenge,
Wert thou environ’d with a brazen wall.

Cliff. Now, Richard, I am with thee here alone:
This is the hand, that stabb’d thy father York;
And this the hand that slew thy brother Rutland;
And here’s the heart, that triumphs in their death,
And cheers these hands, that slew thy sire and brother,
To execute the like upon thyself;
And so have at thee.

[They fight. Warwick enters; Clifford flies.

Rich. Nay, Warwick, single out some other chase;
For I myself will hunt this wolf to death.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V. — Another Part of the Field.

Alarum. Enter King Henry.

— K. Hen. This battle fares like to the morning’s war,
When dying clouds contend with growing light;
What time the shepherd, blowing of his nails,
Can neither call it perfect day, nor night.
Now sways it this way, like a mighty sea,
Forc’d by the tide to combat with the wind:
Now sways it that way, like the self-same sea
Forc’d to retire by fury of the wind:
Sometimes, the flood prevails; — and then, the wind;
Now, one the better; then, another best; —
Both tugging to be victors, breast to breast,
Yet neither conqueror, nor conquer’d:
So is the equal poise of this fell war.
Here on this molehill will I sit me down.
To whom God will, there be the victory!

3 Be dilatory.
For Margaret, my queen, and Clifford too,
Have chid me from the battle; swearing both,
They prosper best of all when I am thence.
Would I were dead! if God’s good will were so:
For what is in this world, but grief and woe?
Alas! methinks, it were a happy life,
To be no better than a homely swain;
To sit upon a hill, as I do now, alone;
To carve out disdaining, point by point,
Thereby to see the minutes how they run;
How many make the hour full complete,
How many hours bring about the day
How many days will finish up the year,
How many years a mortal man may live.
When this is known, then to divide the times:
So many hours must I tend my flock;
So many hours must I take my rest;
So many hours must I contemplate;
So many hours must I sport myself;
So many days my ewes have been with young;
So many weeks ere the poor fools will year;
So many weeks ere, I shiver our will fence;
So minutes, hours, days, weeks, months, and years,
Pass’d over to the end they were created,
Would bring white hairs unto a quiet grave.
Ah, what a life were this! how sweet! how lovely!
Gives not the hawthorn bush a sweeter shade
To shepherds, looking on their silly sheep,
Than doth a rich embroider’d canary
To kings, that fear their subjects’ treachery?
O, yes it doth: a thousand fold it doth.
And to conclude, — the shepherd’s homely curds,
His cold thin drink out of his leather bottle,
His wonted sleep under a fresh tree’s shade,
All which secure and sweetly he enjoys,
Is far beyond a prince’s delicacies,
His viands sparkling in a golden cup,
His body couched in a curious bed,
When care, mistrust, and treason, wait on him.

Alarum. Enter A Son that has killed his Father, dragging in the dead Body.

Son. Ill blows the wind, that profits nobody. —
This man, whom hand to hand I slew in flight,
May be possessed with some store of crowns:
And I, that haply take them from him now,
May yet ere night yield both my life and them
To some man else, as this dead man doth me. —
Who’s this? — O Heaven! it is my father’s face,
Whom in this conflict I unawares have kill’d.
O heavy times, begetting such events!
From London by the king was I press’d forth;
My father, being the earl of Warwick’s man,
Came on the part of York, press’d by his master;
And I, who at his hands receiv’d my life,
Have by my hands of life bereaved him: —
Pardon me, God, I knew not what I did! —
And pardon, father, for I knew not thee! —
My tears shall wipe away these bloody marks;
And no more words, till they have flow’d—their fill.

K. Hen. O pitious spectacle! O bloody times!
Whilst lious war, and battle for their dens,
Poor harmless lambs abide their enmity. —
Weep, wretched man, I’ll aid thee tear for tear;
And let our hearts and eyes, like civil war,
Be blind with tears, and break o’ercharg’d with grief.

Enter a Father, who has killed his Son, with the Body in his arms.

Fath. Thou that so stoutly hast resisted me,
Give me thy gold. if thou hast any gold;
For I have bought it with an hundred blows. —
But let me see: — is this our foeman’s face?
Ah, no, no, no, it is mine only son! —
Ah, boy, if any life be left in thee,
Throw up thine eye; see, see, what showers arise,
Blown with the windy tempest of my heart,
Upon thy wounds, that kill mine eye and heart! —
O, pity, God, this miserable age! —
What strategems?, how fell, how butcherly,
Erroneous, mutinous, and unnatural,
This deadly quarrel daily doth beget! —
O boy, thy father gave thee life too soon,
And hath bereft thee of thy life too late!

K. Hen. Woe above woe! grief more than common grief!
O, that my death would stay these ruthless deeds!
O, pity, pity, gentle heaven, pity! —
The red rose and the white are on his face,
The fatal colours of our striving houses:
The one, his purple blood right well resembles;
The other, his pale cheeks, methinks, present:
I can no more; I'll shiver out my will.
If you contend, a thousand lives must wither.

Son. How will my mother, for a father’s death,
Take on with me, and ne’er be satisfied?

Fath. How will my wife, for slaughter of my son,
Shed seas of tears, and ne’er be satisfied?

K. Hen. How will the country, for these woful chances,
Misthink the king, and not be satisfied?

Son. Was ever son, so ru’d a father’s death?

Fath. Was ever father, so bemoan’d a son?

K. Hen. Was ever king, so grieved for subjects’ woe?

Much is your sorrow; mine, ten times so much.
Son. I’ll bear thee hence, where I may weep my fill.

[Exit, with the Body.

Fath. These arms of mine shall be thy winding-sheet;
My heart, sweet boy, shall be thy sepulchre;
For from my heart thine image ne’er shall go.
My sighing breast shall be thy funeral bell;
And so obsequious 5 will thy father be,
Sad for the loss of thee, having no more,
As Piam was for all his valiant sons.
I’ll bear thee hence; and let them fight that will,
For I have murder’d where I should not kill.

[Exit, with the Body.

K. Hen. Sad-hearted men, much overcome with care,
Here sits a king more woful than you are.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter Queen Margaret,
Prince of Wales, and Exeter.

Prince. Fly, father, fly! for all your friends are fled,
And Warwick rages like a chafed bull:
Away! for death doth hold us in pursuit.

Q. Mar. Mount you, my lord, towards Berwi k
post amain:
Edward and Richard, like a brace of greyhounds
Having the fearful flying hare in sight,
With fiery eyes, sparkling for very wrath,
And bloody steel grasping in their ireful hands,
Are at our tracks; and therefore hence amain.

Ere. Away! for vengeance comes along with them:
Nay, stay not to expostulate, make speed;
Or else come after, I’ll away before.

K. Hen. Nay, take me with thee, good sweet
Exeter;

4 i. e. Dreadful events.
5 Careful of obsequies, or funeral rites.

L 1 3
Not that I fear to stay, but love to go
Whither the queen intends. Forward; away!

[Exeunt.

SCENE VI. — The same.

A loud Alarum. Enter Clifford, wounded.

Clif. Here burns my candle out, ay, here it dies, Which, while it lasted, gave king Henry light.
O, Lancaster! I fear thy overthrow,
More than my body's parting with my soul.
My love, and fear, glu'd many friends to thee;
And now I fall, thy tough com mit tures melt.
Impairing Henry, strength'ning mis-proud York,
The common people swarm like summer flies:
And whither fly the gnats, but to the sun?
And who shines now but Henry's enemies?
O Phebus! hadst thou never given consent
That Phaeton should check thy fiery steeds,
Thy burning car never had scorched the earth:
And, Henry, hadst thou sware'd as kings should do,
Or as thy father, and his father did,
Giving no ground unto the house of York,
They never then had sprung like summer flies;
I, and ten thousand in this luckless realm,
Had left no mourning widows for our death,
And thou this day hadst kept thy chair in peace.
For what doth cherish weeds but gentle air?
And what makes robbers bold, but too much lenity?
Bootless are plaints, and curseless are my wounds;
No way to fly, nor strength to hold out flight:
The foe is merciless, and will not pity;
For, at their hands, I have deserve d no pity.
The air hath got into my deadly wounds,
And much effuse of blood doth make me faint:
Rose, York, and Richard, Warwick, and the rest;
I stabb'd your fathers' bosoms, split my breast,

[He faints.

Edw. Now breathe we, lords; good fortune bids us pause,
And smooth the frowns of war with peaceful looks. —
Some troops pursue the bloody-minded queen;
That led calm Henry, though he were a king,
As doth a sail, fill'd with a fretting gust,
Command an argosy to stem the waves.
But think you, lords, that Clifford fled with them?
War. No, 'tis impossible he should escape;
For, though before his face I speak the words,
Your brother Richard mark'd him for the grave:
And, wheresoe'er he is, he's surely dead.

[Clifford groans and dies.

Edw. Whose soul is that which takes her heavy leave?

Edw. See who it is: and, now the battle's ended,
If friend, or foe, let him be gently us'd.
Rich. Revoke that doom of mercy, for 'tis Clifford;
Who not contented that he lopp'd the branch
In hewing Rutland when his leaves put forth,
But set his murdering knife unto the root
From whence that tender spray did sweetly spring,
I mean our princely father, duke of York.
War. From off the gates of York fetch down the head,

Your father's head, which Clifford placed there:
Instead whereof, let this supply the room;
Measure for measure must be answered.

Edw. Bring forth that fatal screech-owl to our house,
That nothing sung but death to us and ours:
Now death shall stop his dismal threatening sound,
And his ill-boding tongue no more shall speak.

[Attendants bring the Body forward.

War. I think his understanding is bereft: —
Speak, Clifford, dost thou know who spakest to thee?—
Dark cloudy death o'ershades his beams of life,
And he nor sees, nor hears us what we say.
Rich. O, 'would he did! and so, perhaps, he doth;
'Tis but his policy to counterfeit,
Because he would avoid such bitter taunts,
Which in the time of death he gave our father.
Geo. If so thou think'st, vex him with eager words.

Rich. Clifford, ask mercy, and obtain no grace.

Edw. Clifford, repent in bootless penitence.

War. Clifford, devise excuses for thy faults.

Geo. While we devise fell tortures for thy faults.

Rich. Thou didst love York, and I am son to York.

Edw. Thou pitied'st Rutland, I will pity thee.

Geo. Where's captain Margaret, to fence you now?
War. They mock thee, Clifford! swear as thou wert wont.

Rich. What, not an oath? nay then the world goes hard,
When Clifford cannot spare his friends an oath: —
I know by that, he's dead; And, by my soul,
If this right hand would buy two hours' life,
That I in all despite might rail at him,
This hand should chop it off; and with the issuing blood
Stifle the villain, whose unstaunched thirst
York and young Rutland could not satisfy.

War. Ay, but he's dead: Off with the traitor's head,
And rear it in the place your father's stands. —
And now to London with triumphant march,
There to be crowned England's royal king;
From whence shall Warwick cut the sea to France,
And ask the lady Bona for thy queen:
So shalt thou sinew both these lands together;
And, having France thy friend, thou shalt not dread
The scatter'd foes, that hopes to rise again;
For though they cannot greatly sti ng to hurt,
Yet look to have them buzz, to offend thine ears.
First, will I see the coronation;
And then to Brittany I'll cross the sea,
To effect this marriage, so it please my lord.

Edw. Even as thou wilt, sweet Warwick, let it be:
For on thy shoulder do I build my seat;
And never will I undertake the thing,
Wherein thy counsel and consent is wanting. —
Rich. Richard, I will create thee duke of Gloster; —
And George, of Clarence — Warwick, as ourself,
Shall do, and undo, as him pleasest best.

Rich. Let me be duke of Clarence; George, of Gloster.

War. For Gloster's dukedom is too ominous.

Rich. Let me be duke of Clarence; George, of Gloster.

[Exeunt.
ACT III.

Enter two Keepers, with Cross-bows in their Hands.

1 Keep. Under this thick-grown brake we'll shroud ourselves;
For through this laun& 7 amon the deer will come;
And in this covert will we make our stand,
Culling the principal of all the deer.

2 Keep. I'll stay above the hill, so both may shoot.
1 Keep. That cannot be; the noise of thy cross-bow
Will scare the herd, and so my shoot is lost.
Here stand we both, and aim we at the best:
And, for the time shall not seem tedious,
I'll tell thee what befell me on a day,
In this self-place where now we mean to stand.

2 Keep. Here comes a man, let's stay till he be past.

Enter King Henry, disguised, with a Prayer-book.

K. Hen. From Scotland am I stol'n, even of pure love,
To greet mine own land with my wishful sight.
No Harry, Harry, 'tis no land of thine;
Thy place is fill'd, thy sceptor wrung from thee,
Thy balm wash'd off, wherewith thou wast anointed:
No bending knee will call thee Caesar now,
No humble suitors press to speak for right,
No, not a man comes for redress of thee,
For how can I help them, and not myself?

1 Keep. Ay, here's a deer whose skin's a keeper's fee:
This is the quodam king; let's seize upon him.

K. Hen. Let me embrace these sour adversities:
For wise men say, it is the wisest course.

2 Keep. Why linger we? let us lay hands upon him.
1 Keep. Forbear a while; we'll hear a little more.

K. Hen. My queen and son, are gone to France for aid;
And, as I hear, the great commanding Warwick
Is thither gone, to crave the French king's sister
To wife for Edward: If this news be true,
Poor queen, and son, your labour is but lost;
For Warwick is a subtle orator,
And Lewis a prince soon won with moving words.
By this account, then, Margaret may win him;
For she's a woman to be pitied much:
Her sighs will make a battery in his breast;
Her tears will pierce into a marble heart;
The tiger will be mild, while she doth mourn;
And Nero will be tainted with remorse,
To hear, and see, her plaints, her brimish tears.
Ay, but she's come to beg; Warwick, to give:
She, on his left side, craving aid for Henry;
He, on his right, asking a wife for Edward.
She weeps, and says — her Henry is depose'd;
He smiles, and says — his Edward is install'd;
That she, poor wretch, for grief can speak no more;
Whilees Warwick tells his titles, smooths the wrong,
Inferrath arguments of mighty strength;
And, in conclusion, wins the king from her,
With promise of his sister, and what else,
To strengthen and support king Edward's place.
O Margaret, thus 'twill be; and thou, poor soul,
Art then forsaken as thou wert forlorn.

2 Keep. Say, what art thou, that talk'st of kings and queens?

K. Hen. More than I seem, and less than I was born to:
A man at least, for less I should not be;
And men may talk of kings, and why not I?

2 Keep. Ay, but thou talk'st as if thou wert a king.

K. Hen. Why, so I am, in mind; and that's enough.

2 Keep. But, if thou be a king, where is thy crown?

K. Hen. My crown is in my heart, not on my head;
Not deck'd with diamonds, and Indian stones,
Nor to be seen: my crown is call'd, content;
A crown it is, that seldom kings enjoy.

2 Keep. Well, if you be a king crown'd with content,
Your crown content, and you, must be contented
To go along with us: for, as we think,
You are the king, king Edward hath depos'd;
And we his subjects, sworn in all allegiance,
Will apprehend you as his enemy.

K. Hen. But did you never swear, and break an oath?

2 Keep. No, never such an oath, nor will now.

K. Hen. Where did you dwell, when I was king of England?

2 Keep. Here in this country, where we now remain.

K. Hen. I was anointed king at nine months old;
My father and my grandfather, were kings;
And you were sworn true subjects unto me:
And, tell me then, have you not broke your oaths?

1 Keep. No;
For we were subjects but while you were king.

K. Hen. Why, am I dead? do I not breathe a man?

Ah, simple men, you know not what you swear.
Look, as I blow this feather from my face,
And as the air blows it to me again,
Obeying with my wind when I do blow,
And yielding to another when it blows,
Commanded always by the greater gust;
Such is the lightness of you common men.
But do not break your oaths; for, of that sin
My mildentreaty shall not make you guilty.
Go where you will, the king shall be commanded;
And be you kings; command and I'll obey.

1 Keep. We are true subjects to the king, king Edward.

K. Hen. So would you be again to Henry,
If he were seated as king Edward is.

1 Keep. We charge you in God's name, and in the king's,
To go with us unto the officers.

K. Hen. In God's name lead; your king's name be obey'd:
And what God will, then let your king perform;
And what he will, I humbly yield unto. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. — London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Edward, Gloucester, Clarence, and Lady Grey.

K. Edu. Brother of Gloster, at Saint Albans' field
This lady's husband, sir John Grey, was slain,

1. A plain extended between wooda.
His lands then seize'd on by the conqueror:
Her suit is now, to repossess those lands;
Which we in justice cannot well deny,
Because in quarrel of the house of York
The worthy gentleman did lose his life.
Glo. You wrongs shall do well to grant her suit;
It were dishonour, to deny it her.
K. Edu. It were no less; but yet I'll make a pause.
Glo. Yea! is it so?
I see, the lady hath a thing to grant,
Before the king will grant her humble suit.
Cla. He knows the game; How true he keeps the wind?
Glo. Silence!
K. Edu. Widow, we will consider of your suit;
And come some other time, to know our mind.
L. Grey. Right gracious lord, I cannot brook delay:
May it please your highness to resolve me now;
And what your pleasure is, shall satisfy me.
Glo. [Aside.] Ay, widow? then I'll warrant you
all your lands,
An if what pleases him, shall pleasure you.
K. Edu. How many children hast thou, widow?
tell me.
L. Grey. Three, my most gracious lord.
K. Edu. 'Twere pity they should lose their father's land.
L. Grey. Be pitiful, dread lord, and grant it then.
K. Edu. Lords, give us leave; I'll try this widow's wit.
Glo. Ay, good leave have you; for you will have leave,
Till youth take leave, and leave you to the crutch.
[GLOSTER and CLARENCE retire to the other side.
K. Edu. Now tell me, madam, do you love your children?
L. Grey. Ay, full as dearly as I love myself.
K. Edu. And would you not do much to do them good?
L. Grey. To do them good, I would sustain some harm.
K. Edu. Then get your husband's lands, to do them good.
L. Grey. Therefore I came unto your majesty.
K. Edu. I'll tell you how these lands are to be got.
L. Grey. So shall you bind me to your highness' service.
K. Edu. What service wilt thou do me, if I give them?
L. Grey. What you command, that rests in me
to do.
K. Edu. But you will take exceptions to my boon.
L. Grey. No, gracious lord, except I cannot do it.
K. Edu. Ay, but thou canst do what I mean to ask.
L. Grey. Why, then I will do what your grace commands.
Glo. He plies her hard; and much rain wears the marble.
[Aside.
Clar. As red as fire! nay, then her wax must melt.
[Aside.
L. Grey. Why stops my lord? shall I not hear my task?
K. Edu. An easy task: 'tis but to love a king,
L. Grey. That's soon perform'd, because I am a subject.
K. Edu. Why then, thy husband's lands I freely give thee.
L. Grey. I take my leave with many thousand thanks.
Glo. The match is made; she seals it with a curt'sy.
K. Edu. But stay thee, 'tis the fruits of love I mean.
L. Grey. The fruits of love I mean, my loving liege.
K. Edu. Ay, but, I fear me, in another sense.
What love, think'st thou, I sue so much to get?
L. Grey. My love till death, my humble thanks,
my prayers;
That love, which virtue begs, and virtue grants.
K. Edu. No, by my troth, I did not mean such love.
L. Grey. Why then you mean not as I thought you did.
K. Edu. But now you partly may perceive my mind.
L. Grey. My mind will never grant what I perceive your highness aim at, if I aim aright.
K. Edu. Why, then thou shalt not have thy husband's lands.
L. Grey. Why, then mine honesty shall be my dower;
For by that loss I will not purchase them.
K. Edu. Therein thou wrong'st thy children mightily.
L. Grey. Herein your highness wrongs both them and me.
But, mighty lord, this merry inclination
Accords not with the sadness of my suit;
Please you, dismiss me, either with ay, or no.
K. Edu. Ay; if thou wilt say ay, to my request:
No; if thou do say no, to my demand.
L. Grey. Then, no, my lord. My suit is at an end.
Glo. The widow likes him not; she knits her brows.
[Aside.
Clar. He is the bluntest wooer in Christendom.
[ Aside.
K. Edu. [Aside.] Her looks do argue her repulse with modesty;
Her words do show her wit incomparable;
All her perfections challenge sovereignty:
One way, or other, she is for a king;
And she shall be my love, or else my queen. —
Say, that king Edward take thee for his queen?
L. Grey. 'Tis better said than done, my gracious
lord;
I am a subject fit to jest withal,
But far unfit to be a sovereign.
K. Edu. Sweet widow, by my state I swear to ythee,
I speak no more than what my soul intends;
And that is to enjoy thee for my love.
L. Grey. And that is more than I will yield unto
I know, I am too mean to be your queen;
And yet too good to be your concubine.
K. Edu. You cauld, widow; I did mean my queen.
L. Grey. 'Twill grieve your grace, my sons should call you — father.
K. Edu. No more, than when thy daughters call thee mother.
Answer no more, for thou shalt be my queen. —
Brothers, you must what chat we two have had.
Glo. The widow likes it not, for she looks sad.
K. Edu. You'd think it strange if I should marry her.
Clar. To whom, my lord?
K. Edu. Why, Clarence, to myself.
Glo. That would be ten days' wonder, at the least.
Clar. That's a day longer than a wonder lasts.
SCENE II.

KING HENRY VI.

Glo. By so much is the wonder in extremes.
K. Edw. Well, jest on, brothers, I can tell you both,
Her suit is granted for her husband's lands.

Enter a Nobleman.

Nob. My gracious lord, Henry your foe is taken,
And brought your prisoner to your palace gate.
K. Edw. See that he be convey'd unto the Tower. —
And go we, brothers, to the man that took him,
To question of his apprehension. —
Widow, go you along; lords, use her honourable.

[Exeunt King Edward, Lady Grey, Clarence, and Lord.]

Glo. Ay, Edward will use women honourably.
'Would he were wasted, marrow, bones, and all.
That from his loins no hopeful branch may spring,
To cross me from the golden time I look for!
And yet, between my soul's desire and me,
(The lustful Edward's title buried,)
Is Clarence, Henry, and his son young Edward,
And all the unlook'd-for issue of their bodies,
To take their rooms, ere I can place myself:
A cold premeditation for my purpose!
Why, then, I do but dream on sovereignty;
Like one that stands upon a promontory,
And spies a far-off shore where he would tread,
Wishing his foot were equal with his eye;
And chides the sea that sunders him from thence,
Saying — he'll lade it dry to have his way:
So do I wish the crown, being so far off;
And so I chide the means that keep me from it;
And so I say — I'll cut the causes off;
Flattering me with impossibilities. —
My eye's too quick, my heart o'erweenes too much,
Unless my hand and strength could equal them.
Well, say there is no kingdom then for Richard;
What other pleasure can the world afford?
I'll deck my body in gay ornaments,
And witch sweet ladies with my words and looks.
O miserable thought! and more unlikely,
Than to accomplish twenty golden crowns!
Why, love foresware me in my mother's womb:
And for I should not deal in her soft laws
She did corrupt frail nature with some bribe
To shrink mine arm up like a wither'd shrub;
To make an envious mountain on my back;
Where sits deformity to mock my body;
To shape my legs of an unequal size;
To disproportion me in every part,
Like to a chaos, or an unlick'd bear-whelp,
That carries no impression like the dam.
And am I then to be my own?
O, monstrous fault, to harbour such a thought!
Then, since this earth affords no joy to me,
But to command, to check, to o'erbear such
As are of better person than myself,
I'll make my heaven — to dream upon the crown;
And, whiles I live, to account this world but hell,
Until my mis-shap'd trunk, that bears this head,
Be round impale'd 8 with a glorious crown.
And yet I know not how to get the crown,
For many lives stand between me and home:
And I, — like one lost in a thorny wood,
That meets the thorns, and is rent with the thorns;
Seeking a way, and straying from the way;
Not knowing how to find the open air,
But toiling desperately to find it out, —

Torment myself to catch the English crown:
And from that torment I will free myself,
Or hew my way out with a bloody axe.
Why, I can smile, and murder while I smile;
And cry, content, to that which grieves my heart
And wet my cheeks with artificial tears,
And frame my face to all occasions.
I'll drown more sailors than the mermaid shall;
I'll shay more gazers than the basilisk;
I'll play the orator as well as Nestor,
Decive more slyly than Ulysses could,
And, like a Simon, take another Troy.
I can add colours to the cameleon;
Change shapes, with Proteus, for advantages,
And set the mur'drous Machiavel to school.
Can I do this, and cannot get a crown?
Tut! were it further off, I'd pluck it down. [Exit.

SCENE III. — France. A Room in the Palace.

Flourish. Enter Lewis the French King, and Lady Bona, attended; the King takes his state. Then enter Queen Margaret, Prince Edward her Son, and the Earl of Oxford.

K. Lew. Fair queen of England, worthy Margaret, [ Rising,
Sit down with us; it ill befits thy state,
And birth, that thou shouldst stand, while Lewis doth sit.

Q. Mar. No, mighty king of France; now Margaret
Must strike her sail, and learn a while to serve,
Where kings command. I was, I must confess,
Great Albion's queen in former golden days:
But now mischance hath trod my title down,
And with dishonour laid me on the ground,
Where I must take like seat unto my fortune,
And to my humble seat conform myself.

K. Lew. Why, say, fair queen, whence springs the deep repair?
Q. Mar. From such a cause as fills mine eyes
With tears,
And stops my tongue, while heart is drown'd in cares.

K. Lew. Whate'er it be, be thou still like thyself,
And sit thee by our side: yield not thy neck
[ Seats her by him.
To fortune's yoke, but let thy dauntless mind
Still ride in triumph over all mischance.
Be plain, queen Margaret, and tell thy grief;
It shall be eas'd, if France can yield relief.
Q. Mar. Those gracious words revive my drooping thoughts,
And give my tongue-stuck sorrows leaves to speak.
Now, therefore, be it known to noble Lewis,
That Henry, sole possessor of my love,
Is, of a king, become a banish'd man,
And for'd to live in Scotland a forlorn;
While proud ambitious Edward duke of York,
Usurps the regal title, and the seat
Of England's true-anointed lawful king.
This is the cause, that I, poor Margaret,
With this my son, prince Edward, Henry's heir,
Am come to crave thy just and lawful aid;
And, if thou fail us, all our hope is done:
Scotland hath will to help, but cannot help;
Our people and our peers are both misled
Our treasure seiz'd, our soldiers put to flight,
And, as thou seest, ourselves in heavy plight.
K. Lew. Renowned queen, with patience calm
While we both think a means to break it off.
Q. Mar. The more we stay, the stronger grows our foe.
K. Lew. The more I stay, the more I'll succour thee.
Q. Mar. O, but impatience waiteth on true sorrow:
And see, where comes the breeder of my sorrow.

Enter Warwick, attended.
K. Lew. What's he, approacheth boldly to our presence?
K. Lew. Welcome, brave Warwick! What brings thee to France?

[Descending from his state. Queen Margaret rises.

Q. Mar. Ay, now begins a second storm to rise;
For this is he, that moves both wind and tide.
War. From worthy Edward, king of Albion,
My lord and sovereign, and thy vowed friend,
I come,—in kindness, and unfeigned love,—
First, to do greetings to thy royal person;
And, then, to crave a league of amity;
And, lastly, to confirm that amity
With nuptial knot, if thou vouchsafe to grant
That virtuous lady Bona, thy fair sister,
To England's king in lawful marriage.

Q. Mar. If that go forward, Henry's hope is done.
War. And, gracious madam, [To Bona.] in our king's behalf,
I am commanded, with your leave and favour,
Humly to kiss your hand, and with my tongue
To tell the passion of my sovereign's heart:
Where fame, late entering at his heedful ears,
Hath plac'd thy beauty's image, and thy virtue.
Q. Mar. King Lewis,—and lady Bona,—hear me speak,
Before you answer Warwick. His demand
Springs not from Edward's well-meant honest love,
But from descent, bred by necessity;
For how can tyrants safely govern home,
Unless abroad they purchase great alliance?
To prove him tyrant, this reason may suffice,—
That Henry liveth still: but were he dead,
Yet here prince Edward stands, king Henry's son.
Look therefore, Lewis, that by this league and marriage
Thou draw not on thy danger and dishonour:
For though usurpers sway the rule awhile,
Yet heavens are just, and time suppresseth wrongs.
War. Injurious Margaret.
Prince. And why not queen?
War. Because thy father Henry did usurp;
And thou no more art prince, than she is queen.

Osf. Then Warwick dissanuils great John of Gaunt,
Which did subdue the greatest part of Spain;
And after John of Gaunt, Henry the Fourth,
Whose wisdom was a mirror to the wisest;
And, after that wise prince, Henry the Fifth,
Who by his prowess conquered all France:
From these our Henry lineally descends.
War. Oxford, how haps it, in this smooth discourse,
You told not, how Henry the Sixth hath lost
All that which Henry the Fifth had gotten?
Methinks, these peers of France should smile at that.
But for the rest,—You tell a pedigree
Of threescore and two years; a silly time
To make prescription for a kingdom's worth.

Osf. Why, Warwick, canst thou speak against thy liege?
Whom thou mayest thirty and six years,
And not bewray thy treason with a blush?
War. Can Oxford, that did ever fence the right,
Now buckler falsehood with a pedigree?
For shame, leave Henry, and call Edward king.
Osf. Call him my king, by whose injurious doom
My elder brother, the lord Aubrey Vere,
Was done to death? and more than so my father,
Even in the downfall of his mellow'd years,
When nature brought him to the door of death?
No, Warwick, no; while life upholds this arm,
This arm upholds the house of Lancaster.
War. And I the house of York.
K. Lew. Queen Margaret, prince Edward, and Oxford,
Vouchsafe, at our request, to stand aside,
While I use further conference with Warwick.
Q. Mar. Heaven grant that Warwick's words bewitch him not!

[Retiring with the Prince and Oxford.
K. Lew. Now, Warwick, tell me, even upon thy conscience,
Is Edward thy true king? for I was loath,
To link with him that were not lawful chosen.
War. Thereon I pawn my credit and mine honour.
K. Lew. But is he gracious in the people's eye?
War. The greater, that Henry was unfortunate.
K. Lew. Then further,—all dissembling set aside,
Tell me for truth the measure of his love
Unto our sister Bona.
War. Such it seems,
As may beseeam a monarch like himself.
Myself have often heard him say, and swear,—
That this his love was an eternal plant;
Whereof the root was fix'd in virtue's ground,
The leaves and fruit maintain'd with beauty's sun.
Exempt from envy, but not from disdain,
Unless the lady Bona quit his pain.
K. Lew. Now, sister, let us hear thy firm resolve.
Bona. My lover, or your denial, shall be mine:
Yet I confess, [To War.] that often this day,
When I have heard your king's desert recounted,
Mine ear hath tempted judgment to desire.
K. Lew. Then, Warwick, thus,—Our sister shall be Edward's;
And now forthwith shall articles be drawn
Touching the jointure that your king must make,
Which with her dowry shall counterpois'd:
Draw near, queen Margaret; and be a witness,
That Bona shall be wife to the English king.
Prince. To Edward, but not to the English king.
Q. Mar. Dearful Warwick! it was thy device
By this alliance to make void my suit;
Before thy coming, Lewis was Henry's friend.
K. Lew. And still is friend to him and Margaret.
But if your title to the crown be weak,
As may appear by Edward's good success,
Then 'tis but reason, that I be releas'd
From giving aid, which late I promised.
Yet shall you have all kindness at my hand,
That your estate requires, and mine can yield.
War. Henry now lives in Scotland, at his ease;
Where having nothing, nothing he can lose.
And as for you yourself, our quadam queen,
You have a father able to maintain you;
And better were you troubled him than France.
Q. Mar. Peace, impudent and shameless Warwick, peace;
Proud setter-up and puller-down of kings! I will not hence, till with my talk and tears, Both full of truth, I make king Lewis behold Thy sly conveyance, and thy lord's false love; For both of you are birds of self-same feather.

[A Horn sounded within.]

K. Lew. Warwick, this is some post to us, or thee.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord ambassador, these letters are for you; Sent from your brother, marquis Montague. These from our king unto your majesty. — And, madam, these for you; from whom I know not.

[To Margaret. They all read their Letters.]

Osf. I like it well, that our fair queen and mistress Smiles at her news, while Warwick frowns at his. Prince. Nay, mark, how Lewis stamps as he were nettled; I hope all's for the best.

K. Lew. Warwick, what are thy news? and yours, fair queen?

Q. Mar. Mine, such as fill my heart with unhoped joys.

War. Mine, full of sorrow, and heart's discontent.

K. Lew. What! has your king married the lady Grey? And now, to soothe your forgery and his, Sends me a paper to persuade me patience? Is this the alliance that he seeks with France? Dare he presume to scorn us in this manner?

Q. Mar. I told your majesty as much before; This proveth Edward's love, and Warwick's honesty.

War. King Lewis, I here protest, — in sight of heaven, And by the hope I have of heavenly bliss, — That I am clear from this misdeed of Edward's; No more my king, for he dishonours me; But most himself, if he could see his shame. — Did I forget, that by the house of York My father came untimely to his death? Did I let pass the abuse done to my niece? Did I impale him with the regal crown? Did I put Henry from his native right; And am I guerdon'd 1 at the last with shame? Shame on himself! for my desert is honour. And to repair my honour lost for him, I here renounce him, and return to Henry: My noble queen, let former grudges pass, And henceforth I am thy true servitor; I will revenge his wrong to lady Bona, And replant Henry in his former state.

Q. Mar. Warwick, these words have turn'd my hate to love; And I forgive and quite forget old faults, And joy that thou becom'st king Henry's friend.

War. So much his friend, ay, his unfeigned friend, That, if king Lewis vouchsafe to furnish us With some few bands of chosen soldiers, I'll undertake to land them on our coast, And force the tyrant from his seat by war. 'Tis not his new-made bride shall succour him: And as for Clarence, — as my letters tell me, He's very likely now to fall from him; For matching more for wanton lust than honour, Or than for strength or safety of our country.

Bona. Dear brother, how shall Bona be reveng'd, But by thy help to this distressed queen?

Q. Mar. Renowned prince, how shall poor Henry live, Unless thou rescue him from foul despair? Bona. My quarrel, and this English queen's, are one. War. And mine, fair lady Bona, joins with yours. K. Lew. And mine, with hers, and thine, and Margaret's.

Therefore at last, I firmly am resolv'd, You shall have aid.

Q. Mar. Let me give humble thanks for all at once. K. Lew. Then England's messenger, return in post; And tell false Edward, thy supposed king, — That Lewis of France is sending over maskers, To revel it with him and his new bride: Thou seest what's past, go fear thy king withal. Bona. Tell him, In hope he'll prove a widower shortly, I'll wear the willow garland for his sake. Q. Mar. Tell him, My mourning weeds are laid aside, And I am ready to put armour on. War. Tell him from me, That he hath done me wrong; And therefore I'll uncrown him ere't be long. There's thy reward; be gone.

[Exit Mess. K. Lew. But, Warwick, thou, And Oxford, with five thousand men, Shall cross the seas, and bid false Edward battle; And, as occasion serves, this noble queen And prince shall follow with a fresh supply. Yet, er thou go, but answer me one doubt; — What pledge have we of thy firm loyalty?

War. This shall assure my constant loyalty; — That if our queen and this young prince agree, I'll join mine eldest daughter, and my joy, To him forthwith in holy wedlock hands.

Q. Mar. Yes, I agree, and thank you for your motion: — Son Edward, she is fair and virtuous, Therefore delay not, give thy hand to Warwick; And, with thy hand, thy faith irrevocable, That only Warwick's daughter shall be thine. Prince. Yes, I accept her, for she well deserves it: And here to pledge my vow, I give my hand.

[He gives his hand to Warwick. K. Lew. Why stay we now? These soldiers shall be levied, And thou, lord Bourbon, our high admiral, Shall waft them over with our royal fleet. — I long, till Edward fall by war's mischance, For mocking marriage with a dame of France.

[Exeunt all but Warwick. War. I came from Edward as ambassador, But I return his sworn and mortal foe: Matter of marriage was the charge he gave me, But dreadful war shall answer his demand. Had he none else to make a stale, 2 but me 3 Then none but I shall turn his jest to sorrow. I was the chief that rais'd him to the crown, And I'll be chief to bring him down again: Not that I pity Henry's misery, But seek revenge on Edward's mockery.

3 Frighten. 2 A stalking-horse, a pretence.

9 Juggling. 1 Rewarded.
ACT IV.

Enter Gloster, Clarence, Somerset, Montague, and others.

Glo. Now tell me, brother Clarence, what think you
Of this new marriage with the lady Grey?
Hath not our brother made a worthy choice?
Clar. Alas, you know, 'tis far from hence to France;
How could he stay till Warwick made return?
Som. My lords, forbear this talk; here comes the king.

Flourish. Enter King Edward, attended; Lady
Grey, as Queen; Pembroke, Stafford, Hastings, and others.

Glo. And his well-chosen bride.
Clar. I mind to tell him plainly what I think.
K. Edw. Now, brother of Clarence, how like you our choice,
That you stand pensive, as half malcontent?
Clar. As well as Lewis of France, or the earl of Warwick;
Which are so weak of courage, and in judgment,
That they'll take no offence at our abuse.
K. Edw. Suppose they take offence without a cause,
They are but Lewis and Warwick; I am Edward,
Your king and Warwick's, and must have my will.
Glo. And you shall have your will, because our king:
Yet hasty marriage seldom proveth well.
K. Edw. Yea, brother Richard, are you offended too?
Glo. Not I:
No; God forbid, that I should wish them sever'd
Whom be hath join'd together: ay, and 'twere pity,
To sunder them that yoke so well together.
K. Edw. Setting your scorns, and your mislike,
aside,
Tell me some reason, why the lady Grey
Should not become my wife, and England's queen: —
And you too, Somerset, and Montague,
Speak freely what you think.
Clar. Then this is my opinion, — that king Lewis Becomes your enemy, for mocking him
About the marriage of the lady Bona.
Glo. And Warwick, doing what you gave in charge,
Is now dishonour'd by this new marriage.
K. Edw. What, if both Lewis and Warwick be appeas'd,
By such invention as I can devise?
Mont. Yet to have join'd with France in such alliance,
Would more have strengthen'd this our commonwealth
'Gainst foreign storms, than any home-bred marriage.
Hast. Why, knows not Montague, that of itself
England is safe, if true within itself?
Mont. Yes; but the safer, when 'tis back'd with France.
Hast. 'Tis better using France, than trusting
France:
Let us be back'd with heaven, and with the seas,
Which God hath given for fence impregnable,
And with their helps only defend ourselves;
In them, and in ourselves, our safety lies.

Clar. For this one speech, lord Hastings well deserves
To have the heir of the lord Hungerford.
K. Edw. Ay, what of that? it was my will, and grant;
And, for this once, my will shall stand for law.
Glo. And yet, methinks, your grace hath not done well,
To give the heir and daughter of lord Scales
Unto the brother of your loving bride;
She better would have gratified me, or Clarence:
But in your bride you bury brotherhood.
Clar. Or else you would not have bestowed the heir
Of the lord Bonville on your new wife's son,
And leave your brothers to go speed elsewhere.
K. Edw. Alas, poor Clarence! is it for a wife,
That thou art malcontent? I will provide thee.
Clar. In choosing for yourself, you show'd your judgment;
W'thich being shallow, you shall give me leave
To play the broker in mine own behalf;
And, to that end, I shortly mind to leave you.
K. Edw. Leave me, or tarry, Edward will be king,
And not be tied unto his brother's will.
Q. Eliz. My lords, before it please his majesty
To raise my state to title of a queen,
Do me but right, and you must all confess
That I was not ignoble of descent,
And meaner than myself have had like fortune.
But as this title honours me and mine,
So your dislikes, to whom I would be pleasing,
Do cloud my joys with danger and with sorrow.
K. Edw. My love, forbear to fawn upon their frowns:
What danger, or what sorrow can befal thee,
So long as Edward is thy constant friend,
And their true sovereign, whom they must obey?
Nay, whom they shall obey, and love thee too,
Unless they seek for hatred at my hands:
Which if they do, yet will I keep thee safe,
And they shall feel the vengeance of my wrath.
Glo. I hear, yet say not much, but think the more.

Enter a Messenger.

K. Edw. Now, messenger, what letters, or what news,
From France?
Mess. My sovereign liege, no letters; and few words.
But such as I without your special pardon,
Dare not relate.
K. Edw. Go to, we pardon thee: therefore, in brief,
Tell me their words as near as thou canst guess them.
What answer makes king Lewis unto our letters?
Mess. At my depart these were his very words;
Go tell false Edward, thy supposed king, —
That Lewis of France is sending over maskers,
To reveal it with him and his new bride.
K. Edw. Is Lewis so brave? belike, he thinks me Henry.
But what said lady Bona to my marriage?
Mess. These were her words, utter'd with mild disdain:

[Aside]
Tell him, in hope he'll prove a widower shortly,
I'll wear the willow garland for his sake.

K. Edw. I blame not her, she could say little less;
She had the wrong. But what said Henry's queen?
For I have heard that she was there in place.

Mess. Tell him, quoth she, my mourning steeds
Are ready to put armour on.

K. Edw. Belike, she minds to play the Amazon.
But what said Warwick to these injuries?

Mess. He, more incensed against your majesty
Than all the rest, discharg'd me with these words;
Tell him from me, that he hath done me wrong,
And therefore, I'll uncrown him, ere't be long.

K. Edw. Ha! dost the traitor breathe out so proud words?
Well, I will arm me, being thus forewarn'd:
They shall have wars, and pay for their presumption.
But say, is Warwick friends with Margaret?

Mess. Ay, gracious sovereign; they are so link'd in friendship,
That young prince Edward marries Warwick's daughter.

Carr. Belike, the elder; Clarence will have the younger.
Now, brother king, farewell, and sit you fast,
For I will hence to Warwick's other daughter;
That, though I want a kingdom, yet in marriage
I may not prove inferior to yourself. —
You, that love me and Warwick, follow me.

[Exit CLARENCE, and SOMERSET follows.

Glo. Not I:
My thoughts aim at a further matter; I
Stay not for love of Edward, but the crown. [Aside.

K. Edw. Clarence and Somerset both gone to Warwick!
Yet am I arm'd against the worst can happen;
And haste is needful in this desperate case. —
Pembroke, and Stafford, you in our behalf
Go levy men, and make prepare for war;
They are already, or quickly will be landed:
Myself in person will straight follow you.

[Exit PEMBROKE and STAFFORD.

But, ere I go, Hastings —
Resolve my doubt. You twain, of all the rest,
Are near to Warwick, by blood, and by alliance:
Tell me, if you love Warwick more than me?
If it be so, then both depart to him;
I rather wish you foes than hollow friends;
But if you mind to hold your true obedience,
Give me assurance with some friendly vow,
That I may never have you in suspect.

Mont. So God help Montague, as he proves true!

Hast. And Hastings, as he favours Edward's cause!

K. Edw. Now, brother Richard, will you stand by us?

Glo. Ay, in despite of all that shall withstand you.

K. Edw. Why so? then am I sure of victory.
Now therefore let us hence; and lose no hour,
Till we meet Warwick with his foreign power.

[Exit.

SCENE II. — A Plain in Warwickshire.

Enter Warwick and Oxford, with French and other Forces.

War. Trust me, my lord, all hitherto goes well;
The common people by numbers swarm to us,

Enter Clarence and Somerset.

But, see, where Somerset and Clarence come; —
Speak suddenly, my lords, are we all friends?

Clar. Fear not that, my lord.

War. Then, gentle Clarence, welcome unto Warwick;
And welcome, Somerset: — I hold it cowardice,
To rest mistrustful where a noble heart.
Hath pawn'd an open hand in sign of love;
Else might I think, that Clarence, Edward's brother,
Were but a feigned friend to our proceedings:
But welcome, Clarence; my daughter shall be thine.
And now what rests, but, in night's coverture,
Thy brother being carelessly encamp'd,
His soldiers lurking in the towns about,
And but attended by a simple guard,
We may surprise and take him at our pleasure?
Our scouts have found the adventure very easy:
That as Ulysses, and stout Diomedes,
With slight and manhood stole to Rhesus' tents,
And brought from thence the Thracian fatal steeds;
So well we could with the night's black mantle,
At unwary Warwick may beat down Edward's guard,
And seize himself; I say not — slaughter him,
For I intend but only to surprise him.
You, that will follow me to this attempt,
Applaud the name of Henry, with your leader.

[They all cry Henry! Why, then, let's on our way in silent sort:
For Warwick and his friends, God and saint George!

[Exeunt.

SCENE III. — Edward's Camp near Warwick.

Enter certain Watchmen, to guard the King's Tent.

1 Watch. Come on, my masters, each man take his stand;
The king by this, is set him down to sleep.

2 Watch. What, will he not to bed?

1 Watch. Why, no: for he hath made a solemn vow
Never to lie and take his natural rest,
Till Warwick, or himself, be quite suppress'd.

2 Watch. To-morrow then, belike, shall be the day,
If Warwick be so near as men report.

3 Watch. But say, I pray, what nobleman is that,
That with the king here resteth in his tent?

1 Watch. 'Tis the lord Hastings, the king's chiefest friend.

3 Watch. O, is it so? But why commands the king,
That his chief followers lodge in towns about him,
While he himself keepeth in the cold field?

2 Watch. 'Tis the more honour, because more dangerous.

3 Watch. Why; but give me worship and quietness,
I like it better than a dangerous honour.
If Warwick knew in what estate he stands,
'Tis to be doubted, he would waken him.

1 Watch. Unless our halberds did shut up his passage.

2 Watch. Ay; wherefore else guard we his royal tent,
But to defend his person from night-foes?

Enter Warwick, Clarence, Oxford, Somerset, and Forces.

War. This is his tent; and see, where stand his guard.

Courage, my masters; honour now, or never!
But follow me, and Edward shall be ours.
I Watch. Who goes there?
2 Watch. Stay, or thou diest.

[Warwick and the rest, cry all — Warwick! Warwick! and set upon the guard; who fly, crying — Arm! Arm! Warwick, and the rest, following them.

The Drum beating, and Trumpets sounding, re-enter Warwick, and the rest, bringing the King out in a Gown, sitting in a Chair; Gloster and Hastings, fly.

Som. What are they that fly there?
War. Richard, and Hastings: let them go, here's the duke.

K. Edw. The duke; why, Warwick, when we parted last, Thou call'dst me king.
War. Ay, but the case is alter'd:

When you disgrac'd me in my embassy,
Then I degraded you from being king,
And come now to create you duke of York.
Alas! how should you govern any kingdom,
That know not how to use ambassadors;
Nor how to be contented with one wife;
Nor how to use your brothers brotherly;
Nor how to study for the people's welfare;
Nor how to shroud yourself from enemies?

K. Edw. Yea, brother of Clarence, art thou here too?
Nay, then I see, that Edward needs must down. —
Yet, Warwick, in despite of all mischance,
Of thee thyself, and all thy complices,
Edward will always bear himself as king:
Though fortune's malice overthrow my state,
My mind exceeds the compass of her wheel.

War. Then, for his mind,
be Edward England's king:

But Henry now shall wear the English crown,
And be true king indeed; thou but the shadow.

— My lord of Somerset, at my request,
See that forthwith duke Edward be convey'd
Unto my brother, archbishop of York.
When I have fought with Pembroke and his fellows,
I'll follow you, and tell what answer
Lewis, and the lady Bona, send to him:
Now, for a while, farewell, good duke of York.

K. Edw. What fates impose, that men must needs abide;
It boots not to resist both wind and tide.

[Exit King Edward, led out; Somerset with him.

Off. What now remains, my lords, for us to do,
But march to London with our soldiers?

War. Ay, that's the first thing that we have to do:
To free king Henry from imprisonment,
And see him seated in the regal throne.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV. — London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Queen Elizabeth and Rivers.

Riv. Madam, what makes you in this sudden change?
Q. Eliz. Why, brother Rivers, are you yet to learn,
What late misfortune is befall'n king Edward?
Riv. What, loss of some pitch'd battle against Warwick?
Q. Eliz. No, but the loss of his own royal person.
Riv. Then is my sovereign slain?
Q. Eliz. Ay, almost slain, for he is taken prisoner;
Either betray'd by falsehood of his guard,

* i.e. In his mind; as far as his own mind goes.

Or by his foe surpriz'd at unawares:
And, as I further have to understand,
Is new committed to the bishop of York,
Fell Warwick's brother, and by that our foe.

Riv. These news, I must confess, are full of grief:
Yet, gracious madam, bear it as you may;
Warwick may lose, that now hath won the day.
Q. Eliz. Till then, fair hope must hinder life's decay.
And I the rather wean me from despair,
For love of Edward's offspring in my womb:
This is it that makes me bridle passion,
And bear with mildness my misfortune's cross;
Ay, ay, for this I draw in many a tear,
And stop the rising of blood-sucking sighs,
Lest with my sighs or tears I blast or drown
King Edward's fruit, true heir to the English crown.
Riv. But, madam, where is Warwick then become?
Q. Eliz. I am informed, that he comes towards London,
To set the crown once more on Henry's head:
Guess thou the rest; king Edward's friends must down.
But to prevent the tyrant's violence,
(For trust not him that hath once, broken faith,)
I'll hence forthwith unto the sanctuary,
To save at least the heir of Edward's right;
There shall I rest secure from force, and fraud.
Come therefore, let us fly, while we may fly;
If Warwick take us, we are sure to die.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V. — A Park near Middleham Castle in Yorkshire.

Enter Gloster, Hastings, Sir William Stanley,
and others.

Glo. Now, my lord Hastings, and sir William Stanley,
Leave off to wonder why I drew you hither,
Into this chiepest thicket of the park.
Thus stands the case: You know, our king, my brother,
Is prisoner to the bishop here, at whose hands
He hath good usage and great liberty;
And often, but attended with weak guard,
Comes hunting this way to disport himself.
I have advértis'd him by secret means,
That if about this hour, he make this way,
Under the colour of his usual game,
He shall here find his friends, with horse and men,
To set him free from his captivity.

Enter King Edward, and a Huntsman.

Hunt. This way, my lord; for this way lies the game.

K. Edw. Nay, this way, man; see, where the huntsmen stand. —
Now, brother of Gloster, lord Hastings, and the rest,
Stand you thus close, to steal the bishop's deer?
Glo. Brother, the time and ease requireth haste;
Your horse stands ready at the park corner.

K. Edw. But whither shall we then?
Hast. To Lynn, my lord, and slip from thence to Flanders.
Glo. Well guess'd, believe me; for that was my meaning.

K. Edw. Stanley, I will requite thy forwardness.
Glo. But wherefore stay we? 'tis no time to talk.
Scene VI.

KING HENRY VI.

Hunt. Better do so, than tarry and be hang'd.

Glo. Come then away; let's have no more ado.

K. Edu. Bishop, farewell; shield thee from Warwick's frown;

And pray that I may repose the crown. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI. — A Room in the Tower.

Enter King Henry, Clarence, Warwick, Somerset, Young Richmond, Oxford, Montague, Lieutenant of the Tower, and Attendants.

K. Hen. Master lieutenant, now that God and friends

Have shaken Edward from the regal seat;

And turn'd my captive state to liberty,

My fear to hope, my sorrows unto joys;

At our enlargement what are thy due fees

Lieut. Subjects may challenge nothing of their sovereigns;

But, if an humble prayer may prevail,

I then crave pardon of your majesty.

K. Hen. For what, lieutenant? for well using me?

Nay, be thou sure, I'll well requite thy kindness,

For that it made my imprisonment a pleasure;

Ay, such a pleasure as incaged birds

Conceive, when, after many moody thoughts,

At last, by notes of household harmony,

They quite forget their loss of liberty.

But, Warwick, after God, thou set'st me free,

And chiefly therefore I thank God and thee;

He was the author, thou the instrument.

Therefore, that I may conquer fortune's spite,

By living low where fortune cannot hurt me;

And that the people of this blessed land

May not be punish'd with my thwarting stars;

Warwick, although my head still wear the crown,

I here resign my government to thee,

For thou art fortunate in all thy deeds.

War. Your grace hath still been fam'd for virtuous;

And now may seem as wise as virtuous,

By spoiling and avoiding fortune's malice,

For few men rightly temper with the stars:

Yet in this one thing let me blame your grace,

For choosing me, when Clarence is in place.

Clar. No, Warwick, thou art worthy of the sway,

To whom the heavens, in thy nativity,

Adjug'd an olive branch, and laurel crown,

As likely to be blest in peace, and war;

And therefore I yield thee my free consent.

War. And I choose Clarence only for protector.

K. Hen. Warwick, and Clarence, give me both your hands;

Now join your hands, and with your hands, your hearts,

That no dissension hinder government:

I make you both protectors of this land;

While I myself will lead a private life,

And in devotion spend my latter days,

To sin's rebuke, and my Creator's praise.

War. What answers Clarence to his sovereign's will?

Clar. That he consents, if Warwick yield consent;

For on thy fortune I repose myself.

War. Why then, though loath, yet must I be content:

We'll yoke together, like a double shadow

Few men conform their temper to their destiny.

Clar. What else? and that succession be determin'd.

War. Ay, therein Clarence shall not want his part.

K. Hen. But, with the first of all your chief affairs,

Let me entreat, (for I command no more,) That Margaret your queen, and my son Edward, Be sent for, to return from France with speed:

For, till I see them here, by doubtful fear My joy of liberty is half eclips'd.

Clar. It shall be done, my sovereign, with all speed.

K. Hen. My lord of Somerset, what youth is that,

Of whom you seem to have so tender care?

Som. My liege, it is young Henry, earl of Richmond.

K. Hen. Come hither, England's hope: If secret powers, [ lays his hand on his head.

Suggest but truth to my divining thoughts,

This pretty lad? will prove our country's bliss.

His looks are full of peaceful majesty;

His head by nature fram'd to wear a crown,

His hand to wield a scepter; and himself

Likely, in time, to bless a regal throne.

Make much of him, my lords; for this is he,

Must help you more than you are hurt by me.

Enter a Messenger.

War. What news, my friend?

Mess. That Edward is escaped from your brother,

And fled, as he hears since, to Burgundy.

War. Unsavoury news: But how made he escape?

Mess. He was convey'd by Richard duke of Gloster,

And the lord Hastings, who attended him

In secret ambush on the forest side,

And from the bishop's huntsmen rescued him;

For hunting was his daily exercise.

War. My brother was too careless of his charge:—

But let us hence, my sovereign, to provide

A salve for any sore that may betide.

[Exeunt King Henry, War., Clar., Lieut., and Attendants.

Som. My lord, I like not of this flight of Edward's:

For, doubtless, Burgundy will yield him help;

And we shall have more wars, before't be long.

As Henry's late presaging prophecy

Did glad my heart, with hope of this young Richmond;

So doth my heart misgave me, in these conflicts

What may befall him, to his harm, and ours:

Therefore, lord Oxford, to prevent the worst,

Forthwith we'll send him hence to Britain,

Till storms be past of civil enmity.

Oxf. Ay; for, if Edward repose the crown,

'Tis like that Richmond with the rest shall down.

Som. It shall be so; he shall to Britain.

Come therefore, let's about it speedily. [Exeunt.

? Afterward Henry VII.
SCENE VII. — Before York.

Enter King Edward, Gloster, Hastings, and Forces.

K. Edu. Now, brother Richard, lord Hastings, and the rest; Yet thus far fortune maketh us amend, And says — that once more I shall interchange My waned state for Henry's regal crown. Well have we pass'd, and now repass'd the seas, And brought desired help from Burgundy; What then remains, we being thus arriv'd From Ravensburg haven before the gates of York, But that we enter, as into our dukedom? Glo. The gates made fast!—Brother, I like not this; For many men, that stumble at the threshold, Are well forord — that danger lurks within.

K. Edu. Tush, man! abdements must not now affright us; By fair or foul means we must enter in, For hither will our friends repair to us. Hast. My liege, I'll knock once more to summon them.

Enter, on the Walls, the Mayor of York, and his Brethren.

May. My lords, we were forewarned of your coming, And shut the gates for safety of ourselves; For now we owe allegiance unto Henry. K. Edu. But, master mayor, if Henry be your king, Yet Edward, at the least, is duke of York. May. True, my good lord; I know you for no less. K. Edu. Why, and I challenge nothing but my dukedom; As being well content with that alone. Glo. But when the fox hath once got in his nose, He'll soon find means to make the body follow. [Aside. Hast. Why, master mayor, why stand you in a doubt? Open the gates, we are king Henry's friends. May. Ay, say you so? the gates shall then be opened. [Execut from above. Glo. A wise stout captain, and persuadest soon! Hast. The good old man would fain that all were well, So 'twere not long of him: but, being enter'd, I doubt not, I, but we shall soon persuade Both him and all his brothers unto reason.

Re-enter the Mayor and two Aldermen, below.

K. Edu. So, master mayor: these gates must not be shut, But in the night or in the time of war. What! fear not, man, but yield me up the keys; [Takes his keys. For Edward will defend the town and thee, And all those friends that deign to follow me.

Drum. Enter Montgomery, and Forces, marching.

Glo. Brother, this is sir John Montgomery, Our trusty friend, unless I be deceiv'd.

K. Edu. Welcome, sir John! But why come you in arms?

Mont. To help king Edward in his time of storm, As every loyal subject ought to do.

K. Edu. Thanks, good Montgomery; But we now forget Our title to the crown; and only claim Our dukedom, till Heaven please to send the rest.

Mont. Then fare you well, for I will hence again; I came to serve a king and not a duke,— Drummer, strike up, and let us march away. [A March begun.

K. Edu. Nay, stay, sir John, a while; and we'll debate, By what safe means the crown may be recover'd. Mont. What, talk you of debating? in few words, If you'll not here proclaim yourself our king, I'll leave you to your fortune; and be gone, To keep them back that come to succour you: Why should we fight, if you pretend no title? Glo. Why, brother, wherefore stand you on nice points?

K. Edu. When we grow stronger, then we'll make our claim: Till then, 'tis wisdom to conceal our meaning. Hast. Away with scrupulous wit! now arms must rule.

Glo. And fearless minds climb soonest unto crowns. Brother, we will proclaim you out of hand; The brute 8 thereof will bring you many friends. K. Edu. Then be it as you will; for 'tis my right, And Henry but usurps the diadem. Mont. Ay, now my sovereign spakest like himself; And now will I be Edward's champion. Hast. Sound, trumpet; Edward shall be here proclaimed: — Come, fellow-soldier, make thou proclamation. [Gives him a paper. Flourish. Sold. [Reads.] Edward the Fourth, by the grace of God, king of England and France, and lord of Ireland, &c. Mont. And whoso'er gainsays king Edward's right, By this I challenge him to single fight, [Throws down his Gauntlet. All. Long live Edward the Fourth! K. Edu. Thanks, brave Montgomery; — and thanks unto you all. If fortune serve me, I'll requite this kindness. Now for this night, let's harbour here in York; And, when the morning sun shall raise his car Above the border of this horizon, We'll forward towards Warwick, and his mates; For, well I wot 9, that Henry is no soldier. — Ah, froward Clarence! — how evil it beseems thee, To flatter Henry, and forsake thy brother! Yet, as we may, we'll meet both thee and Warwick. — Come on, brave soldiers; doubt not of the day; And, that once gotten, doubt not of large pay. [Execut.

SCENE VIII. — London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Henry, Warwick, Clarence, Montague, Exeter, and Oxford.

War. What counsel, lords? Edward from Belgia, With hasty Germans, and blunt Hollanders, Hath pass'd in safety through the narrow seas, And with his troops doth march amain to London; And many giddy people flock to him. Osf. Let's levy men, and beat him back again. Clar. A little fire is quickly trodden out; Which, being suffer'd, rivers cannot quench. War. In Warwickshire I have true-hearted friends, Not mutinous in peace, yet bold in war;
Act V. Scene I.

KING HENRY VI.

I have not stopp'd mine ears to their demands,
Nor posted off their suits with slow delays;
My pity hath been balm to heal their wounds,
My mildness hath allay'd their swelling griefs,
My mercy dry'd their water-flowing tears:
I have not been desirous of their wealth,
Nor much oppress'd them with great subsidies,
Nor forward of revenge, though they much err'd;
Then why should they love Edward more than me?
No, Exeter, these graces challenge grace:
And, when the lion fawns upon the lamb,
The lamb will never cease to follow him.

[Shout within. A Lancaster! A Lancaster!]

Ere. Hark, hark, my lord! what shouts are these?

Enter King Edward, Gloster, and Soldiers.

K. Edu. Seize on the shame-fac'd Henry, bear him hence,
And once again proclaim us king of England.
— You are the fount, that makes small brooks to flow;
Now stops thy spring; my sea shall suck them dry,
And swell so much the higher by their ebb.
— Hence with him to the Tower; let him not speak.

[Exeunt some with King Henry.

And, lords, towards Coventry bend we our course,
Where peremptory Warwick now remains:
The sun shines hot, and, if we use delay,
Cold biting winter mars our hop'd-for hay.

Glo. Away betimes, before his forces join,
And take the great-grown traitor unawares;
Brave warriors, march amain towards Coventry.

[Exeunt.

SCENE I. — Coventry.

Enter, upon the Walls, Warwick, the Mayor of Coventry, two Messengers, and others.

War. Where is the post that came from valiant Oxford?
How far hence is thy lord, mine honest fellow?
1 Mess. By this at Dunsmore, marching hitherward.

War. How far off is our brother Montague?
Where is the post that came from Montague?

2 Mess. By this at Dainty, with a puissant troop.

Enter Sir John Somerville.

War. Say, Somerville, what says my loving son?
And, by the guess, how nigh is Clarence now?
Som. At Southam I did leave him with his forces,
And do expect him here some two hours hence.

[Drum heard.

War. Then Clarence is at hand, I hear his drum.
Som. It is not his my lord; here Southam lies;
The drum your honour hears, marcheth from Warwick.

War. Who should that be? belike, unlook'd-for friends.

Som. They are at hand, and you shall quickly know.

Drums. Enter King Edward, Gloster, and Forces, marching.

K. Edu. Go, trumpet, to the walls, and sound a parle.

1 Merit.
The king was slyly finger'd from the deck. You left poor Henry at the bishop's palace, And, ten to one, 'twill meet him in the Tower.

K. Edu. 'Tis even so; yet you are Warwick still.

Glo. Come, Warwick, take the time, kneel down, kneel down:

Nay, when? strike now, or else the iron cools.

War. I had rather chop this hand off at a blow, And with the other fling it at thy face, Than bear so low a sail, to strike to thee.

K. Edu. Sail how thou canst, have wind and tide thy friend; This hand, fast wound about thy coal-black hair, Shall, whiles the head is warm, and new cut off; Write in the dust this sentence with thy blood, —

Wind-changing Warwick now can change no more.

Enter Oxford, with Drum and Colours.

War. O cheerful colours! see where Oxford comes!

[Oxford and his Forces enter the City.

Glo. The gates are open, let us enter too.

K. Edu. So other foes may set upon our backs: Stand in good array; for they, no doubt, Will issue out again, and bid us battle. If not, the city, being but of small defence, We'll quickly rouse the traitors in the same.

War. O, welcome, Oxford! for we want thy help.

Enter Montague, with Drum and Colours.

Mont. Montague, Montague, for Lancaster!

[He and his Forces enter the City.

Glo. Thou and thy brother shall buy this treason Even with the dearest blood your bodies bear.

K. Edu. The harder match'd, the greater victory; My mind presageth happy gain, and conquest.

Enter Somerset, with Drum and Colours.

Som. Somerset, Somerset, for Lancaster!

[He and his Forces enter the City.

Glo. Two of thy name, both Dukes of Somerset, Have sold their lives unto the house of York; And thou shalt be the third, if this sword hold.

Enter Clarence, with Drum and Colours.

War. And lo, where George of Clarence sweeps along, Of force enough to bid his brother battle; With whom an upright zeal to right prevails, More than the nature of a brother's love: —

Come, Clarence, come; thou wilt, if Warwick calls.

Clar. Father of Warwick, know you what this means? 'Twixt the red Rose and the blue?

Look here, I throw my infancy at thee: I will not ruinate my father's house, Who gave his blood to lime the stones together, And set up Lancaster. Why, trow'st thou, Warwick, That Clarence is so harsh, so blunt, unnatural, To bend the fatal instruments of war Against his brother, and his lawful king? Perhaps, thou wilt object my holy oath: To keep that oath, were more impiety, I am so sorry for my trespass made, That we deserve well at my brother's hands, I here proclaim myself thy mortal foe; With resolution, wheresoe'er I meet thee, (As I will meet thee, if thou stir abroad.)

Note
1 A pack of cards was formerly termed a deck of cards.
2 Insensible.

To plague thee for thy foul misleading me, And so, proud-hearted Warwick, I defy thee, And to my brother turn my blushing cheeks. Pardon me, Edward, I will make amends; And, Richard, do not frown upon my faults, For I will henceforth be no more unconstant.

K. Edu. Now welcome more, and ten times more belov'd,

Than if thou never hadst deserv'd our hate.

Glo. Welcome, good Clarence; this is brother-like.

War. O passing traitor, perjur'd, and unjust! K. Edu. What, Warwick, wilt thou leave the town, and fight?

Or shall we beat the stones about thine ears?

War. Alas, I am not co'd here for defence: I will away towards Barnet presently, And bid thee battle, Edward, if thou dar'st.

K. Edu. Yes, Warwick, Edward dares, and leads the way: —

Lords, to the field; saint George, and victory.

[March. Exeunt.

SCENE II. — A Field of Battle near Barnet.

Allarums and Excursions. Enter King Edward, bringing in Warwick wounded.

K. Edu. So, lie thou there: die thou, and die our fear; For Warwick was a bug, that fear'd us all. —

Now, Montague, sit fast; I seek for thee, That Warwick's bones may keep thine company.

[Exeunt.

War. Ah, who is nigh? come to me friend, or foe, And tell me, who is victor, York, or Warwick? Why ask I that? my mangled body shows, My blood, my want of strength, my sick heart shows, That I must yield my body to the earth, And, by my fall, the conquest to my foe. Thus yields the cedar to the axe's edge, Whose arms gave shelter to the princely eagle, Under whose shade the ramping lion slept; Whose top-branch overpeer'd Jove's spreading tree, And kept low shrubs from winter's powerful wind. These eyes that now are dimm'd with death's black veil, Have been the piercing as the mid-day sun, To search the secret treasons of the world: The wrinkles in my brows, now fill'd with blood, Were liken'd oft to kingly sepulchres; For who liv'd king, but I could dig his grave? And who durst smile, when Warwick bent his brow? Lo, now my glory smear'd in dust and blood! My parks, my walks, my manors that I had, Even now forsoake I: and, of all my lands, Is nothing left me, but my body's length! Why, what is pomp, rule, reign, but earth and dust? And, live we how we can, yet die we must.

Enter Oxford and Somerset.

Som. Ah, Warwick, Warwick! wert thou as we are, We might recover all our loss again! The queen from France hath brought a puissant power; Even now we heard the news: Ah, couldst thou fly! War. Why, then I would not fly.—Ah, Montague, If thou be there, sweet brother, take my hand, And with thy lips keep in my soul a while! Thou lovest me not; for, brother, if thou didst, Thy tears would wash this cold congealed blood,
SCENE IV. — Plains near Tewksbury.

March. Enter Queen MARGARET, Prince Ed-ward, Somerset, Oxford, and attended.

Q. Mar. Great lords, wise men ne'er sit and wait their loss,
But cheerily seek how to redress their harms.
What though the mast be now blown over-board,
The cable broke, the holding anchor lost,
And half our sailors swallow'd in the flood?
Yet lives our pilot still: 'tis meet that he Should leave the helm, and, like a fearful lad,
With tearful eyes add water to the sea,
And give more strength to that which hath too much;
Whilest, in his moan, the ship splits on the rock,
Which industry and courage might have sav'd?
Ah, what a shame! ah, what a fault were this!
Say, Warwick was our anchor; What of that?
And Montague our top-mast; What of him?
Our slaughter'd friends the tackles; What of these?
Why, is not Oxford here another anchor?
And Somerset another goody mast;
The friends of France our shrouds and tacklings?
And, though unskillful, why not Ned and I

For once allow'd the skilful pilot's charge?
We will not from the helm, to sit and weep;
But keep our course, though the rough wind say — no,
From shelves and rocks that threaten us with wreck.
As good to chide the waves as speak them fair.
And what is Edward, but a ruthless sea?
What Clarence, but a quicksand of deceit?
And Richard, but a ragged fatal rock?
All these the enemies to our poor bark.
Say, you can swim; alas, 'tis but a while;
Tread on the sand; why there you quickly sink:
Beside the rock; the tide will wash you off,
Or else you vanish, which's a threefold death.
This speak I, lords, to let you understand,
In case some one of you should fly from us,
That there's no hop'd-for mercy with the brothers,
More than with ruthless waves, with sands, and rocks.
Why, courage, then! what cannot be avoided,
'Twere childish weakness to lament or fear.

Prince. Methinks, a woman of this valiant spirit
Should, if a coward heard her speak these words,
Infuse his breast with magnanimity,
And make him, naked, foil a man at arms.
I speak not this as doubting any here:
For, did I but suspect a fearful man,
He should have leave to go away betimes;
Lost, in our need, he might infect another
And make him of like spirit to himself.
If any such be here, as heaven forbid!
Let him depart, before we need his help.

Osf. Women and children of so high a courage!
And warriors faint! why, 'twere perpetual shame.
O, brave young prince! thy famous grandfather
Doth live again in thee; Long mayst thou live,
To bear his image, and renew his glories!

Som. And he, that will not fight for such a hope,
Go home to bed, and, like the owl by day,
If he arise, be mock'd and wonder'd at.

Q. Mar. Thanks, gentle Somerset; — sweet Oxford, thanks.

Prince. And take his thanks, that yet hath nothing else.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Prepare you, lords, for Edward is at hand,
Ready to fight; therefore be resolute.

Osf. I thought no less: it is his policy,
To haste thus fast, to find us unprovided.

Som. But he's deceiv'd, we are in readiness.

Q. Mar. This cheers my heart, to see your forwardness.

Osf. Here pitch our battle, hence we will not burst.

March. Enter, at a distance, King Edward, Clarence, Glover, and Forces.

K. Edw. Brave followers, yonder stands the thorny wood,
Which, by the heaven's assistance, and your strength,
Must by the roots be hewn up yet ere night.
I need not add more fuel to your fire,
For, well I wit, ye blaze to burn them out;
Give signal to the fight, and to it, lords.

Q. Mar. Lords, knights, and gentlemen, what I should say,
My tears gainsay; for every word I speak,
Ye see, I drink the water of mine eyes.
Therefore, no more but this: — Henry, your sovereign,
Is prisoner to the foe; his state usurp'd,
^Know.
M in 2
His realm a slaughter-house, his subjects slain,
His statutes cancell'd, and his treasure spent;
And yonder is the wolf that makes this spoil.
You fight in justice: then, in God's name, lords,
Be valiant, and give signal to the fight.

[Exeunt, both Armies.

SCENE V. — Another Part of the same.

Altarums: Excursions: and afterwards a Retreat.
Then enter KIng Edward, Clarence, Gloster, and Forces; with Queen Margaret, Oxford, and Somerset, Prisoners.

Away with Oxford to Hammes' castle straight:
For Somerset, off with his guilty head.
Go, bear them hence; I will not hear them speak.

Exeunt Oxford and Somerset, guarded.

Q. Mar. Nay, never bear me hence, despatch me here;
Here sheth thy sword, I'll pardon thee my death:
What will thou not? — then, Clarence, do it thou.

Clar. By heaven, I will not do thee so much ease.

Q. Mar. Good Clarence, do; sweet Clarence, do thou do it.

Clar. Didst thou not hear me swear, I would not do it?

Q. Mar. Ay, but thou usest to foreswear thyself;
'Twas sin before, but now 'tis charity.
What! wilt thou not? where is that devil's butcher,
Hard-favour'd Richard? Richard, where art thou?
Thou art not here: Murder is thy alms-deed;
Petitioners for blood thou ne'er put'st back.

K. Edu. Away with her; I charge ye bear her hence.
Q. Mar. So come to you, and yours, as to this prince!

[Exit, led out forcibly.

K. Edu. Where's Richard gone?
Clar. To London all in post; and, as I guess,
To make a bloody supper in the Tower.

K. Edu. He's sudden, if a thing comes in his head.
Now march we hence: discharge the common sort
With pay and thanks, and let's away to London,
And see our gentle queen how well she fares;
By this, I hope, she hath a son for me. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI. — London. A Room in the Tower.

KING HENRY is discovered sitting with a Book in his Hand, the Lieutenant attending. Enter Gloster.

Glo. Good day, my lord! What, at your book so hard?

K. Hen. Ay, my good lord: My lord, I should say rather;
'Tis sin to flatter, good was little better;
Good Gloster, and good devil, were alike,
And both preposterous; therefore, not good lord.

Glo. Sirrah, leave us to ourselves: we must confer.

[Exit Lieutenant.

K. Hen. So flies the reckless shepherd from the wolf:
So first the harmless sheep doth yield his fleece,
And next his throat unto the butcher's knife. —
What scene of death hath Roscius now to act?

Glo. Suspicion always haunts the guilty mind;
The thief doth fear each bush an officer.

K. Hen. The bird, that hath been limed in a bush,
With trembling wings misdoubteth every bush:
And I, the hapless male to one sweet bird,
Have now the fatal object in my eye,
Where my poor young was lim'd, was caught, and killed.

* She alludes to the desertion of Clarence.
1 To misdoubt is to suspect danger, to fear.
Scene VI.

KING HENRY VI.

Glo. Why, what a peevish fool was that of Crete,
That taught his son the office of a fowl?
And yet, for all his wings, the fool was down'd.
K. Hen. I, Daedalus; my poor boy, Icarus;
Thy father, Minos, that denied our course;
The sun, that sear'd the wings of my sweet boy,
Thy brother Edward; and thyself, the sea,
Whose envious gulf did swallow up his life.
Ah, kill me with thy weapon, not with words!
My breast can better brook thy dagger's point,
Than can my ears that tragick history. —
But wherefore dost thou come? is't for my life?
Glo. Think'st thou, I am an executioner?
K. Hen. A persecutor, I am sure, thou art;
If murdering innocents be executing,
Why, then thou art an executioner.
Glo. Thy son I kill'd, for his presumption.
K. Hen. Hadst thou been kill'd, when first thou didst presume,
Thou hadst not liv'd to kill a son of mine.
And thus I prophesy, — that many a thousand,
Which now mistrust no parcel of my fear;
And many an old man's sigh, and many a widow's,
And many an orphan's water-standing eye, —
Men for their sons', wives for their husbands' fate,
And orphans for their parents' timeless death, —
Shall rue the hour that ever thou wast born.
The owl shriek'd at thy birth, an evil sign;
The night-crow cried, aboding luckless time;
Dogs howl'd, and hideous tempests shook down trees;
The raven rook'd3 her on the chimney's top,
And chattering pies in dismal discord sung.
Thy mother felt more than a mother's pain,
And yet brought forth less than a mother's hope;
To wit, — an indigest deform'd lump,
Not like the fruit of such a goodly tree.
Teeth hadst thou in thy head, when thou wast born,
To signify, — thou cam'st to bite the world:
And, if the rest be true which I have heard,
Thou cam'st not —
Glo. I'll hear no more; — Die, prophet, in thy speech;
[Stabs him.

For this, amongst the rest, was I ordain'd.
K. Hen. Ay, and for much more slaughter after this,
O God! forgive my sins, and pardon thee!  [Dies.
Glo. What, will the aspiring blood of Lancaster
Sink in the ground? I thought it would mounted.
See, how my sword weeps for the poor king's death!
O, may such purple tears be always shed
From those that wish the downfall of our house! —
If any spark of life be yet remaining,
Down, down to hell; and say — I sent thee thither.
[Stabs him again.
I, that have neither pity, love, nor fear, —
Indeed, 'tis true, that Henry told me so;
As I have often heard my mother say,
I came into the world with my legs forward:
Had I not reason, think ye, to make haste,
And seek their ruin that usurp'd our right?
The midwife wonder'd; and the women cried,
O, Heaven bless us, he is born with teeth!
And so I was; which plainly signified —
That I should snarl, and bite, and play the dog.
Then, since the heavens have shap'd my body so,
Let hell make crook'd my mind to answer it.
I have no brother, I am like no brother:
And this word — love, which greybeards call divine,
Be resident in men like one another,

And not in me; I am myself alone. —
Clarence, beware; thou keep'st me from the light;
But I will sort a pitchy day for thee:
For I will buzz abroad such prophecies,
That Edward shall be fearful of his life;
And then, to purge his fear, I'll be thy death.
King Henry, and the prince his son, are gone:
Clarence, thy turn is next, and then the rest;
Counting myself but bad, till I be best. —
I'll throw thy body in another room,
And triumph, Henry, in thy day of doom.  [Exit.

SCENE VII. — A Room in the Palace.

KING EDWARD is discovered sitting on his Throne;
QUEEN ELIZABETH with the infant Prince, CLA-
RENCE, GLOSTER, HASTINGS, and others, near him.
K. Edw. Once more west in England's royal throne,
Re-purchas'd with the blood of enemies.
What valiant foe-men, like to autumn's corn,
Have we mow'd down, in tops of all their pride?
Three dukes of Somerset, threefold renown'd
For hardy and undoubted champions:
Two Cliffsords, as the father and the son,
And two Northumberland; two braver men
Ne'er spurr'd their coursers at the trumpet's sound:
With them, the two brave bears, Warwick and Mont-

tague,
That in their chains fetter'd the king lion,
And made the forest tremble when they roar'd.
Thus have we swept suspicion from our seat,
And made our footstool of security. —
Come hither, Bess, and let me kiss my boy: —
Young Ned, for thee, thine uncles, and myself,
Have in our armours watch'd the winter's night;
Went all a-foot in summer's scalding heat,
That thou mightst reposess the crown in peace;
And of our labours thou shalt reap the gain.
Glo. I'll blast his harvest, if your head were laid.
For yet I am not look'd on in the world.
This shoulder was ordain'd so thick, to heave;
And heave it shall some weight, or break my back: —
Work thou the way, — and thou shalt execute.  [Aside.
K. Edw. Clarence, and Gloster, love my lovely queen;
And kiss your princely nephew, brothers both.
Clar. The duty, that I owe unto your majesty,
I seal upon the lips of this sweet babe.
K. Edw. Thanks, noble Clarence; worthy brother,
thanks.
Glo. And, that I love the tree from whence thou sprang'st,

Witness the loving kiss I give the fruit. —
K. Edw. Now am I seated as my soul delights,
Having my country's peace, and brothers' loves.
Clar. What will your grace have done with Margaret?
Reignier, her father, to the king of France
Hath pawn'd the Sicils and Jerusalem,
And hither have they set it for her ransom.
K. Edw. Away with her, and waft her hence to France.
And now what rests, but that we spend the time
With stately triumphs, martial comick shows,
Such as beft the pleasures of the court? —
Sound, drums and trumpets! — farewell, sour annoy!
For here, I hope, begins our lasting joy.  [Exeunt.

SCENE,—England.
SCENE I. — London,  A Street.

Enter Gloster.

Glo. Now is the winter of our discontent
Made glorious summer by this sun of York;
And all the clouds, that low'red upon our house,
In the deep bosom of the ocean buried.
Now are our brows bound with victorious wreaths;
Our bruised arms hung up for monuments;
Our stern alarums chang'd to merry meetings,
Our dreadful marches to delightful measures.
Grim-visag'd war hath smooth'd his wrinkled front;
And now, — instead of mounting barbed steeds,
To fright the souls of fearful adversaries,
He capers nimbly in a lady's chamber,
To the lascivious pleasing of a lute.
But I, — that am not shap'd for sportive tricks,
Nor made to court an amorous looking-glass;
I, that am rudely stamp'd, and want love's majesty,

---

To strut before a wanton ambling nymph;
I, that am curtail'd of this fair proportion,
Cheated of feature by dissembling nature,
Deform'd, unfinish'd, sent before my time
Into this breathing world, scarce half made up
And that so lamely and unfinish'd,
That dogs bark at me, as I halt by them; —
Why I, in this weak piping time of peace,
Have no delight to pass away the time;
Unless to spy my shadow in the sun,
And descant on mine own deformity,
And therefore, since I cannot prove a lover,
To entertain these fair well-spoken days,
I am determined to prove a villain,
And hate the idle pleasures of these days,
Plots have I laid, inductions dangerous,
By drunken prophecies, libels, and dreams,
To set my brother Clarence, and the king,
In deadly hate the one against the other:

---

1 Dances
2 Armed.

3 Preparations for mischief.
And, if king Edward be as true and just
As I am subtle, false, and treacherous.
This day should Clarence closely be mew'd up;
About a prophecy, which says — that G
Of Edward's heirs the murderer shall be.
Dive, thoughts, down to my soul! here Clarence comes.

Enter Clarence, guarded, and Brakenbury.

Brother, good day: What means this armed guard
That waits upon your grace?

Clar. His majesty,
Tendering my person's safety, hath appointed
This conduct to convey me to the Tower.

Glo. Upon what cause?

Clar. Because my name is — George.

Glo. Alack, my lord, that fault is none of yours;
He should, for that, commit your godfathers: —
Belike his majesty hath some intent,
That you shall be new christen'd in the Tower.
But what's the matter, Clarence? may I know?

Clar. Yes, Richard, when I know; for I protest,
As yet I do not: But, as I can learn,
He hearkens after prophecies, and dreams;
And from the cross-row plucks the letter G,
And says — a wizard told him, that by G
His issue disinherited should be;
And, for my name of George begins with G,
It follows in his thought that I am he;
These as I learn, and such like toys as these,
Have mov'd his highness to commit me now.

Glo. Why, this is when men are ru'd by women: —
'Tis not the king, that sends you to the Tower;
My lady Grey, his wife, Clarence, 'tis she,
That tempers him to this extremity.
Was it not she, and that good man of worship,
Antony Woodville, her brother there,
That made him send lord Hastings to the Tower;
From whence this present day he is deliver'd?
We are not safe, Clarence, we are not safe.

Clar. By heaven, I think, there is no man secure,
But the queen's kindred, and night-walking heralds
That trudge between the kings and mistresses Shore.
Heard you not what an humble suppliant
Lord Hastings was to her for his delivery?

Glo. Humbly complaining to her deity
Got my lord chamberlain his liberty.
I'll tell you what, — I think, it is our way,
If we will keep in favour with the king,
To be her men, and wear her livery;
The jealous o'er-worn widow, and herself 4,
Since that our brother dub'd them gentlewomen,
Are mighty gossips in this monarchy.

Brak. I beseech your graces both to pardon me;
His majesty hath straitly given in charge,
That no man shall have private conference,
Of what degree soever with his brother.

Glo. Even so? an please your worship, Brakenbury,
You may partake of any thing we say:
We speak no treason, man; — We say, the king
Is wise, and virtuous; and his noble queen
Well struck in years; fair, and not jealous:
We say, that Shore's wife hath a pretty foot,
A cherry lip,
A bonny eye, a passing pleasing tongue;
And the queen's kindred are made gentlefolks:
How say you, sir? can you deny all this?

Brak. With this, my lord, myself, have nought to do,
And I beseech your grace to pardon me; and, withal,
Forbear your conference with the noble duke.

Clar. We know thy charge, Brakenbury, and will obey.

Glo. We are the queen's abjects, and must obey.
Brother, farewell: I will unto the king;
And whatsoever you will employ me in, —
Were it, to call king Edward's widow — sister,—
I will perform it to enfranchise you.
Mean time, this deep disgrace in brotherhood,
Touches me deeper than you can imagine.

Clar. I know it pleaseth neither of us well.

Glo. Well, your imprisonment shall not be long;
I will deliver you, or else lie for you:
Mean time, have patience.

Clar. I must perform; farewell.

Enter Hastings.

Hast. Good time of day unto my gracious lord!

Glo. As much unto my good lord chamberlain!
Well are you welcome to this open air.
How hath your lordship brook'd imprisonment?

Hast. With patience, noble lord, as prisoners must:
But I shall live, my lord, to give them thanks,
That were the cause of my imprisonment.

Glo. No doubt, no doubt; and so shall Clarence
too;
For they, that were your enemies, are his,
And have prevail'd as much on him, as you.

Hast. More pity that the eagle should be mew'd,
While kites and buzzards prey at liberty.

Glo. What news abroad?

Hast. No news so bad abroad, as this at home; —
The king is sickly, weak, and melancholy,
And his physicians fear him mightily.

Glo. Now, by saint Paul, this news is bad indeed.
O, he hath kept an evil diet long,
And over-much consum'd his royal person;
'Tis very grievous to be thought upon.
What, is he in his bed?

Hast. He is.

Glo. Go you before, and I will follow you.

[Exit Hastings.

He cannot live, I hope; and must not die,
Till George be pack'd with post-horse up to heaven.
I'll in, to urge his hatred more to Clarence,
With lies well steel'd with weighty arguments;
And, if I fall not in my deep intent,
Clarence hath not another day to live:
Which done, Heaven take king Edward to hismercy,
And leave the world for me to bustle in!
For then I'll marry Warwick's youngest daughter:
What though I kill'd her husband, and her father?
The readiest way to make the wench amends,
Is — to become her husband, and her father:
The which will I; not all so much for love,
As for another secret close intent,
By marrying her, which I must reach unto,
But yet I run before my horse to market:
Clarence still breathes: Edward still lives, and reigns;
When they are gone, then must I count my gains.

[Exit.
SCENE II. — Another Street.

Enter the Corpse of King Henry the Sixth, borne in an open Coffin; Gentlemen bearing Halberds, to guard it; and Lady Anne as Mournor.

Anne. Set down, set down your honourable load,— If honour may be shrouded in a hearse, — Whilst I a while obsequiously lament The untimely fall of virtuous Lancaster. — Poor keycold figure of a holy king! Pale ashes of the house of Lancaster! Thou bloodless remnant of that royal blood! Be it lawful that I invocate thy ghost, To hear the lamentations of poor Anne, Wife to thy Edward, to thy slaughter'd son, Stabb'd by these same hands that made these wounds! Lo, in these windows, that let forth thy life, I pour the helpless balm of my poor eyes: — O, cursed be the hand that made these holes! Cursed the heart, that had the heart to do it! Cursed the blood, that let this blood from hence! More direful hap betide that hated wretch, That makes us wretched by the death of thee, Than I can wish to adders, spiders, toads, Or any creeping venom'd thing that lives! If ever he have child, abortive be it, Prodigious, and untimely brought to light, Whose ugly and unnatural aspect May fright the hopeful mother at the view; And that be heir to his un hapliness! If ever he have wife, let her be made More miserable by the death of him, Than I am made by my young lord, and thee! — Come, now, toward Chertsey with your holy load, Taken from Paul's to be interred there; And still, as you are weary of the weight, Rest you, whiles I lament king Henry's corse.

[The Bearers take up the Corpse, and advance.

Enter Gloster.

Glo. Stay you that bear the corse, and set it down. Anne. What black magician conjures up this fiend, To stop devoted charitable deeds? Glo. Villains, set down the corse, or, by saint Paul, I'll make a corse of him that disobeys. 1 Gent. My lord, stand back, and let the coffin pass. Glo. Unmanner'd dog: stand thou when I command: Advance thy halberd higher than my breast, Or, by saint Paul, I'll strike thee to my foot, And spurn upon thee, beggar, for thy boldness. [The Bearers set down the Coffin.

Anne. What, do you tremble? are you all afraid? Alas, I blame you not; for you are mortal, And mortal eyes cannot endure the devil. — Avant, thou dreadful minister of hell! Thou badst but power over his mortal body, His soul thou canst not have; therefore, begone. Glo. Sweet saint, for charity, be not so curt. Anne. Foul devil, for heaven's sake, hence, and trouble us not; For thou hast made the happy earth thy hell, Fill'd it with cursing cries, and deep exclains. If thou delight to view thy heinous deeds, Behold this pattern of thy butcheries: — O, gentlemen, see, see! dead Henry's wounds Open their congenial mouths, and bleed afresh! — Blush, blush, thou lump of foul deformity; * With becoming reverence for the dead.

For 'tis thy presence that exhales this blood From cold and empty veins, where no blood dwells; Thy deed, inhuman and unnatural, Provokes this deluge most unnatural. — O Thou, which this blood mad'st, revenge his death! O earth, which this blood drink'st, revenge his death! Either, Heaven, with lightning strike the murderer dead, Or, earth, yarped open wide, and eat him quick; As thou dost swallow up this good king's blood, Which his hell-govern'd arm hath butchered! — Glo. Lady, you know no rules of charity, Which renders good for bad, blessings for curses. Anne. Villain, thou know'st no law of God nor man; No beast so fierce, but knows some touch of pity. Glo. But I know none, and therefore am no beast. Anne. O wonderful, when devils tell the truth! Glo. More wonderful, when angels are so angry.— Vouchsafe, divine perfection of a woman, Of these supposed evils, to give me leave, By circumstance, but to acquit myself. Anne. Vouchsafe, diffus'd infection of a man, For these known evils, but to give me leave, By circumstance, to curse thy cursed self. Glo. Fairer than tongue can name thee, let me have Some patient leisure to excuse myself. Anne. Fouler than heart can think thee, thou canst make No excuse current, but to hang thyself. Glo. By such despair, I should accuse myself. Anne. And, by despairing, shalt thou stand excus'd; For doing worthy vengeance on thyself, That didst unworthy slaughter upon others. Glo. Say, that I slew them not? Anne. Why, then, they are not dead: But dead they are, and, devilish slave, by thee. Glo. I did not kill your husband. Anne. Why, then he is alive. Glo. Nay, he is dead; and slain by Edward's hand. Anne. In thy soul's throat thou liest: queen Margaret saw Thy murder'd face, thou smoking in his blood; The which thou once didst bend against her breast, But that thy brothers beat aside the point. Glo. I was provoked by her sland'rous tongue, That laid their guilt upon my guiltless shoulders. Anne. Thou wast provoked by thy bloody mind, That never dreamt on aught but butcheries; Didst thou not kill this king? Glo. I grant ye. Anne. O, he was gentle, mild, and virtuous. Glo. The fitter for the King of heaven that hath him. Anne. He is in heaven, where thou shalt never come. Glo. Let him thank me, that help to send him thither; For he was fitter for that place, than earth. Anne. And thou unfit for any place but hell. Glo. Yes, one place else, if you will hear me name it. Anne. Some dungeon. Glo. Your bed-chamber. Anne. Ill rest betide the chamber where thou liest! Glo. So will it, madam, till I lie with you. Anne. I hope so. Glo. I know so. — But, gentle lady Anne, — To leave this keen encounter of our wits, — And fall somewhat into a slower method; —
Is not the causer of the timeless deaths
Of these Plantagenets, Henry and Edward,
As blameful as the executioner?
Anne. Thou wast the cause, and most accrild effect.
Glo. Your beauty was the cause of that effect;
Your beauty which did haunt me in my sleep,
To undertake the death of all the world.
Anne. If I thought that, I tell thee, homicide,
These nails should rend that beauty from my cheeks.
Glo. These eyes could not endure that beauty's wreck;
You should not blemish it, if I stood by:
As all the world is cheered by the sun,
So I by that; it is my day, my life.
Anne. Black night o'ershade thy day, and death thy life!
Glo. Curse not thyself, fair creature; thou art both.
Anne. I would I were, to be reveng'd on thee.
Glo. It is a quarrel most unnatural,
To be reveng'd on him that loveth thee.
Anne. It is a quarrel just and reasonable,
To be reveng'd on him that kill'd my husband.
Glo. He that bereft thee, lady, of thy husband,
Did it to help thee to a better husband.
Anne. His better doth not breathe upon the earth.
Glo. He lives, that loves you better than he could.
Anne. Name him.
Glo. Plantagenet.
Anne. Why, that was he.
Anne. The self-same name, but one of better nature.
Anne. Where is he?
Glo. Here: [She spits at him.] Why dost thou spit at me?
Anne. 'Would it were mortal poison, for thy sake!
Glo. Never came poison from so sweet a place.
Anne. Never hung poison on a fouler toad.
Out of my sight! thou dost infect mine eyes.
Glo. Thine eyes, sweet lady, have infected mine.
Anne. Would they were basilisks, to strike thee dead!
Glo. I would they were, that I might die at once;
For now they kill me with a living death.
Those eyes of thine from mine have drawn salt tears,
Sham'd their aspects with store of childish drops,
These eyes, which never shed remorseful tear,—
Nor when my father York and Edward wept,
To hear the piteous moan that Rutland made,
When black-fac'd Clifford shook his sword at him:
Nor when thy warlike father, like a child,
Told the sad story of my father's death;
And twenty times made pause, to sob and weep,
That all the standers-by had wet their cheeks,
Like trees bedash'd with rain: in that sad time,
My manly eyes did scorn an humble tear;
And what these sorrows could not hence exhale,
 Thy beauty hath, and made them blind with weeping.
I never su'd to friend, nor enemy;
My tongue could never learn sweet soothing word;
But now thy beauty is propos'd my fee,
My proud heart sues, and prompts my tongue to speak.
Anne. [She looks scornfully at him.] Teach not thy lip such scorn; for it was made
For kissing, lady, not for such contemp.
If thy remorseful heart cannot forgive,
Lo! here I lend thee this sharp-pointed sword;
Which if thou please to hide in this true breast,
And let the soul forth that adores thee,
I lay it naked to the deadly stroke,
And humbly beg the death upon my knee.
[He lays his Breast open; she offers at it with his Sword.
Nay, do not pause; for I did kill king Henry; —
But 'twas thy beauty that provok'd me.
Nay, now despatch; 'twas I that stabb'd young Edward; — [She again offers at his Breast.
But 'twas thy heavenly face that set me on.
[She lets fall the Sword.
Take up the sword again, or take me up.
Anne. Arise, dissembler: though I wish thy death,
I will not be thy executioner.
Glo. Then bid me kill myself, and I will do it.
Anne. I have already.
Glo. That was in thy rage:
Speak it again, and, even with the word,
This hand, which for thy love, did kill thy love,
Shall, for thy love, kill a far truer love;
To both their deaths shalt thou be necessary.
Anne. I would, I knew thy heart.
Glo. 'Tis figur'd in my tongue.
Anne. I fear me, both are false.
Glo. Then man was never true.
Anne. Well, well, put up your sword.
Glo. Say then, my peace is made.
Anne. That shall you know hereafter.
Glo. But shall I live in hope?
Anne. All men, I hope, live so.
Glo. Vouchsafe to wear this ring.
Anne. To take, is not to give.
Anne. [She puts on the Ring.
Glo. Look, how this ring encompasseth thy finger,
Even so thy breast encloseth my poor heart;
Wear both of them, for both of them are thine.
And if thy poor devoted servant may
But beg one favour at thy gracious hand,
Thou dost confirm his happiness for ever.
Anne. What is it?
Glo. That it may please you leave these sad designs
To him that hath more cause to be a mourner,
And presentily repair to Crosby-place?;
Where —after I have solemnly inter'd,
At Chertsey monast'ry this noble king,
And wet his grave with my repentant tears,—
I will with all expedient duty see you.
For divers unknown reasons, I beseech you,
Grant me this boon.
Anne. With all my heart; and much it joyes me too,
To see you are become so penitent. —
Tressel, and Berkley go along with me.
Glo. Bid me farewell.
Anne. 'Tis more than you deserve; But, since you teach me how to flatter you,
Imagine I have said farewell already.
[Exeunt Lady Anne, Tressel, and Berkley.
Glo. Take up the corse, sirs.
Gent. Towards Chertsey, noble lord? Glo. No, to White Friars; there attend my coming. [Exeunt the rest, with the Corpse.
Was ever woman in this humour wou'd? Was ever woman in this humour won? I'll have her, — but I will not keep her long.
What! I, that kill'd her husband, and his father,
To take her in her heart's extremest hate;
With curses in her mouth, tears in her eyes,
The bleeding witness of her hatred by;
With Heaven, her conscience, and these bars against me,
And I no friends to back my suit whithal,
But the plain devil and dissembling looks,
And yet to win her, — all the world to nothing! Ha!

Hath she forgot already that brave prince,
Edward, her lord, whom I some three months since,
Stabb'd in my angry mood at Tewksbury?
A sweeter and a lovelier gentleman, —
Fram'd in the prodigality of nature,
Young, valiant, wise, and, no doubt, right royal, —
The spacious world cannot again afford:
And will she yet abuse her eyes on me,
That cropp'd the golden prime of this sweet prince,
And made her widow to a woful bed?
On me, whose all not equals Edward's moiety?
On me, that halt, and am misshapen thus?
My dukedom to a beggerly denier,
I do mistake my person all this while:
Upon my life, she finds, although I cannot,
Myself to be a marvellous proper man.
I'll be at charges for a looking glass;
And entertain a score or two of tailors,
To study fashions to adorn my body;
Since I am crept in favour with myself,
I will maintain it with some little cost.
But, first, I'll turn you' fellow in his grave;
And then return lamenting to my love.
Shine out, fair sun, till I have bought a glass,
That I may see my shadow as I pass. [Exit.

SCENE III. — A room in the Palace.

Enter Queen Elizabeth, Lord Rivers, and Lord Grey.

Riv. Have patience, madam; there's no doubt,
His majesty
Will soon recover his accustom'd health.

Grey. In that you break it ill, it makes him worse:
Therefore for his sake, entertain good comfort,
And cheer his grace with quick and merry words.
Q. Eliz. If he were dead, what would betide of me?

Grey. No other harm but loss of such a lord.
Q. Eliz. The loss of such a lord includes all harms.

Grey. The heavens have bless'd you with a goodly son,
To be your comforter, when he is gone.
Q. Eliz. Ah, he is young; and his minority
Is put unto the trust of Richard Gloster,
A man that loves not me, nor none of you.

Riv. Is it concluded, he shall be protector?
Q. Eliz. It is determined, not concluded yet:
But so it must be, if the king miscarry.

Enter Buckingham and Stanley.

Grey. Here come the lords of Buckingham and Stanley.

Buck. Good time of day unto your royal grace!
Stan. Heaven make your majesty joyful as you have been!
Q. Eliz. The countess Richmond, good my lord of Stanley,
To your good prayer will scarcely say — amen.
Yet, Stanley, notwithstanding she's your wife,
And loves not me, be you, good lord, assured,
I hate not you for her proud arrogance.

Stan. I do beseech you, either not believe
The envious slanders of her false accusers;
Or, if she be accus'd on true report,
Bear with her weakness, which, I think, proceeds
From wayward sickness, and no grounded malice.
Q. Eliz. Saw you the king to-day, my lord of Stanley?

Stan. But now the duke of Buckingham, and I,
Are come from visiting his majesty.
Q. Eliz. What likelihood of his amendment, lords?

Buck. Madam, good hope; his grace speaks cheerfully.
Q. Eliz. God grant him health! Did you confer with him?

Buck. Ay, madam, he desires to make atonement
Between the duke of Gloster and your brothers,
And between them and my lord chamberlain;
And sent to warm them to his royal presence.
Q. Eliz. Would all were well! — But that will never be;
I fear, our happiness is at the height.

Enter Gloster, Hastings, and Dorset.

Glo. They do me wrong, and I will not endure it.

Who are they, that complain unto the king,
That I, forsooth, am stern, and love them not?
By holy Paul, they love his grace but lightly,
That fill his ears with such dissentious rumours.
Because I cannot flatter, and speak fair,
Smile in men's faces, smooth, deceive, and cog,
Duck with French nods, and apish courtesy,
I must be held a rancorous enemy.
CANNOT a plain man live, and think no harm,
But thus his simple truth must be abus'd
By silken, sly, insinuating Jacks?

Grey. To whom in all this presence speaks your grace?

Glo. To thee, that hast nor honesty, nor grace.
When have I injur'd thee? when done thee wrong?
Or thee I — or thee? — or any of your faction?
A plague upon you all! His royal grace,
Whom God preserve better than you would wish! —
Cannot be quiet scarce a breathing-while,
But you must trouble him with rude complaints.
Q. Eliz. Brother of Gloster, you mistake the matter:
The king, of his own royal disposition,
And not provok'd by any suitor else:
Aiming, belike, at your interior hatred,
That in your outward action shows itself,
Against my children, brothers, and myself,
Makes him to send; that thereby he may gather
The ground of your ill-will, and so remove it.
Glo. I cannot tell; — The world is grown so bad,
That wrens may prey where eagles dare not perch.
Since every Jack 9 became a gentleman,
There's many a gentle person made a Jack.
Q. Eliz. Come, come, we know your meaning, brother Gloster:
You envy my advancement, and my friends;
Heaven grant, we never may have need of you!
Glo. Meantime, heaven grants that we have need of you!

Our brother is imprison'd by your means,
Myself disgrac'd, and the nobility
Held in contempt; while great promotions
Are daily given, to enoble those 9 Low fellow.

Scene III.

That scarce, some two days since, were worth a noble. 1

Q. Eliz. By him that rais'd me to this careful height.
From that contented hap which I enjoy'd, I never did incense his majesty Against the duke of Clarence, but have been An earnest advocate to plead for him. My lord, you do me shameful injury, Falsely to draw me in these vile suspects.

Glo. You may deny that you were not the cause Of my lord Hastings' late imprisonment.

Riv. She may, my lord; for ——

Glo. She may, lord Rivers? — why, who knows not so?
She may do more, sir, than denying that: She may help you to many fair preferments; And then deny her aiding hand therein, And lay those honours on your high desert. What may she not? She may, — ay, marry may she.

Riv. What, marry, may she?

Glo. What, marry, may she? marry with a king, A bachelor, a handsome stripling too: I wis, your granddam had a worser match.

Q. Eliz. My lord of Gloster, I have too long borne Your blunt upbraiding, and your bitter scoffs: By heaven, I will acquaint his majesty, Of those gross taunts I often have endur'd. I had rather be a country servant-maid, Than a great queen with this condition — To be so baited, scorn'd, and stormed at: Small joy have I in being England's queen.

Enter QUEEN MARGARET, behind.

Q. Mar. And lessen'd be that small, God, I be- seech thee!

Thy honour, state, and seat, is due to me.

Glo. What? threat you me with telling of the king?

Tell him, and spare not: look, what I have said I will avouch, in presence of the king: I dare adventure to be sent to the Tower. 'Tis time to speak, my pains are quite forgot.

Glo. Ere you were queen, ay, or your husband king, I was a pack-horse in his great affairs; A weeder-out of his proud adversaries, A liberal rewarder of his friends; To royalize his blood, I spilt mine own.

Q. Mar. Ay, and much better blood than his, or thine.

Glo. In all which time, you, and your husband Grey, Were factionists for the house of Lancaster? — And, Rivers, so were you: — Was not your hus- band

In Margaret's battle at Saint Alban's slim? Let me put in your minds, if you forget, What you have been ere now, and what you are; Witthaw, what I have been, and what I am.

Q. Mar. A proud'rous villain, and so still thou art.

Glo. Poor Clarence did forsake his father War- wick, Ay, and forswore himself, — Which Jesu pardon! —

Q. Mar. Which God revenge!

Glo. To fight on Edward's party, for the crown; And, for his need, poor lord, he is mew'd up: I would to heaven, my heart were flint like Ed- ward's,

Or Edward's soft and pitiful, like mine; I am too childish-foolish for this world.

Q. Mar. Hie thee to hell for shame, and leave this world.

Riv. My lord of Gloster, in those busy days, Which here you urge to prove us enemies, We follow'd then our lord, our lawful king; So should we you, if you should be our king.

Glo. If I should be? — I had rather be a pedlar. Far be it from my heart, the thought thereof! Q. Eliz. As little joy, my lord, as you suppose You should enjoy, were you this country's king; As little joy you may suppose in me, That I enjoy, being the queen thereof.

Q. Mar. A little joy enjoys the queen thereof; For I am she, and altogether joyless. I can no longer hold me patient. — [Advancing.

Hear me, you wrangling pirates, that fall out In sharing that which you have pill'd 2 from me: Which of you trembles not, that looks on me: If not, that I being queen, you bow like subjects Yet that, by you depos'd, you quake like rebels? — Ah, gentle villain, do not turn away!

Glo. Foul wrinkled witch, what mak'st thou in my sight?

Q. Mar. But repetition of what thou hast marr'd; That will I make, before I let thee go.

Glo. Wert thou not banished on pain of death?

Q. Mar. I was; but I do find more pain in banishment, Than death can yield me here by my abode. A husband, and a son, thou ow'st to me, — And thou, a kingdom; — all of you, allegiance: This sorrow that I have, by right is yours; And all the pleasures you usurp are mine.

Glo. The curse my noble father laid on thee, When thou didst crown his warlike brows with paper, And with thy scorns drew'st rivers from his eyes; And then, to dry them, gaz'st the duke a clout, Steep'd in the faultless blood of pretty Rutland: — His curses, then from bitterness of soul Denou'd against thee, are all fall'n upon thee; And God abhorreth, with plagues thy bloody deeds.

Q. Eliz. So just is God, to right the innocent.

Hast. O, 'twas the foulest deed to slay that babe, And the most merciless, that e'er was heard of.

Riv. Tyrants themselves wept when it was re- ported.

Dors. No man but prophesied revenge for it.

Buck. Northumberland, then present, wept to see it.

Q. Mar. What! were you snarling all, before I came, Ready to catch each other by the throat, And turn you all your hatred now on me? Did York's dread curse prevail so much with heaven, That Henry's death, my lovely Edward's death, Their kingdom's loss, my woful banishment, Could all but answer for that peevish brat? Can curses pierce the clouds, and enter heaven? — Why, then give way, dull clouds, to my quick curses! —

Though not by war, by surfeit die your king, As ours by murder, to make him a king! Edward, thy son, that now is prince of Wales, For Edward, my son, that was prince of Wales,

1 A coin rated at 6s. 8d. 2 Think.
Die in his youth, by like untimely violence!
Thyself a queen, for me that was a queen,
Oultive thy glory like my wretched self!
Long mayst thou live, to wail thy children’s loss;
And see another, as I see thee now,
Deck’d in thy rights, as thou art stail’d in mine!
Long die thy happy days before thy death;
And after many length’d hours of grief;
Die neither mother, wife, nor England’s queen!—
Rivers, — and Dorset, — you were standers by, —
And so wast thou, lord Hastings, — when my son
Was stab’d with bloody daggers; God, I pray him,
That none of you may live your natural age,
But by some unlook’d accident cut off!

Glo. Have done thy charm, thy hateful wither’d hag.

Q. Mar. And leave out thee? stay, dog, for thou shalt hear me.
If heaven have any grievous plague in store,
Exceeding those that I can wish upon thee,
O, let them keep it, till thy sins be ripe,
And then hurl down their indigusion
On thee, the trouble of the poor world’s peace!
The worm of conscience still be gnaw thy soul!
Thy friends suspect for traitors while thou liv’st,
And take deep traitors for thy dearest friends!
No sleep close up that deadly eye of thine,
Unless it be while some tormenting dream
Affrights thee with a hell of ugly devils!
Thou elvish mark’d, abortive, rooting hog!
Thou that wast seal’d in thy nativity
The slave of nature, and the son of hell!
Thy rag of honour! thou detested —

Glo. Margaret.
Q. Mar. Richard!

Glo. Ha?

Q. Mar. I call thee not.
Glo. I cry thee mercy then; for I did think,
That thou hadst call’d me all these bitter names.
Q. Mar. Why, so I did; but look’d for no reply,
O, let me make the period to my curse.

Glo. ’Tis done by me; and ends in — Margaret.
Q. Eliz. Thus have you breath’d your curse
Rif. Against yourself.
Q. Mar. Poor painted queen, vain flourish of my fortune!
Why strew’st thou sugar on that bottled spider,
Whose deadly web ensnareth thee about?
Fool, fool! thou whet’st a knife to kill thyself.
The day will come, that thou shalt wish for me
To help thee curse this pois’nous hunch-back’d toad.
H’st. False-boding woman, end thy frantick curse;
Lest, to thy harm, thou move our patience.
Q. Mar. Foul shame upon you! you have all mov’d mine.

Riv. Were you well serv’d, you would be taught
Your duty.
Q. Mar. To serve me well, you all should do me duty,
Teach me to be your queen, and you my subjects:
O, serve me well, and teach yourselves that duty.

Dors. Dispute not with her, she is lunatick.
Q. Mar. Peace, master marquis, you are malapert;
Your fire-new stamp of honour is scarce current; —
O, that your young nobility could judge,
What twere to lose it and be miserable!
They that stand high, have many blasts to shake them;
And, if they fall, they dash themselves to pieces.

4 Alluding to Glesor’s form and venom.
5 He was just created marquis of Dorset.

Glo. Good counsel, marry; — learn it, learn it, marquis.
Dors. It touches you, my lord, as much as me.
Glo. Ay, and much more: But I was born so high,
Our aery buildeth in the cedar’s top,
And dallies with the wind, and scorns the sun.
Q. Mar. And turns the sun to shade; — alas! alas!

Witness my son, now in the shade of death;
Whose bright out-shining beams thy cloudy wrath
Hath in eternal darkness folded up.
Your aery buildeth in our aery’s nest: —
O God, that seest it, do not suffer it;
As it was won with blood, lost be it so!

Buck. Peace, peace, for shame, if not for charity.
Q. Mar. Urge neither charity nor shame to me;
Uncharitably with me have you dealt,
And shamefully by you my hopes are butcher’d.
My charity is outrage, life my shame, —
And in my shame still live my sorrow’s rage!

Buck. If the moon smilest, —
Q. Mar. O princely Buckingham, I kiss thy hand,
In sign of league and amity with thee:
Now fair befall thee, and thy noble house!
Thy garments are not spotted with our blood,
Nor thou within the compass of my curse.

Buck. Nor no one here; for curses never pass
The lips of those that breathe them in the air.
Q. Mar. I’ll not believe but they ascend the sky
O Buckingham, beware of yonder dog;
Look, when he fawns, he bites; and, when he bites,
His venom tooth will rackle to the death:
Have not to do with him, beware of him;
Sin, death, and hell have set their marks on him;
And all their ministers attend on him:

Glo. What dost thou say, my lord of Buckingham?
Buck. Nothing that I respect, my gracious lord.
Q. Mar. What, dost thou scorn me for my gentle counsel?
And soothe the devil that I warn thee from?
O, but remember this another day,
When he shall split thy very heart with sorrow;
And say, poor Margaret was a prophetess.
Live each of you the subjects to his hate,
And he to yours, and all of you to God’s! [Exit.

Hast. My hair doth stand on end to hear her curses.

Riv. And so doth mine; I muse?, why she’s at liberty.
Glo. I cannot blame her,
She had too much wrong, and I repent
My part thereof, that I have done to her.
Q. Eliz. I never did her any, to my knowledge.
Glo. Yet you have all the vantage of her wrong.
I was too hot to do some body good,
That is too cold in thinking of it now.
Marry, as for Clarence, he is well repaid;
He is frank’d up to fitting for his pains; —
Heaven pardon them that are the cause thereof!

Riv. A virtuous and a christian-like conclusion,
To pray for them that have done scath to us.

Glo. So do I ever, being well advis’d; —
For had I curs’d now, I had curs’d myself. [Aside.

Enter Catesby.

Cates. Madam, his majesty doth call for you; —
And for your grace, — and you, my noble lords.
Q. Eliz. Catesby, I come; — Lords, will you go with me?

6 Nest. 7 Wonder. 8 Put in a sty. 9 Harm.
SCENE IV.  KING RICHARD III.  541.

RIV. Madam, we will attend upon your grace.

[Exeunt all but Gloster.

Glo. I do the wrong, and first begin to brawl.
The secret mischiefs that I set aroin,
I lay unto the grievous charge of others.
Clarence,—whom I, indeed, have laid in darkness,—
I do beweep to many simple gulls;
Namely, to Stanley, Hastings, Buckingham;
And tell them,—'tis the queen, and her allies,
That stir the king against the duke my brother.
Now they believe it; and withal whet me
To be reveng'd on Rivers, Vaughan, Grey:
But then I sigh, and, with a piece of scripture,
Tell them—that God bids us do good for evil:
And thus I clothe my naked villainy
With old odd ends, stoll'n forth of holy writ,
And seem a saint, when most I play the devil.

Enter two Murderers.

But soft, here come my executioners.—
How now, my hardy, stout resolved mates?
Are you now going to despatch this thing?
1 Murd. We are, my lord; and come to have the warrant,
That we may be admitted where he is.

Glo. Well thought upon, I have it here about me:
[Looks the Warrant.
When you have done, repair to his bosky-place.
But, sirs, be sudden in the execution,
Withal obdurate, do not hear him plead;
For Clarence is well spoken, and, perhaps,
May move your hearts to pity, if you mark him.

1 Murd. Tut, tut, my lord, we will not stand to prate,
We go to use our hands, and not our tongues.
Talkers are no good doers; be assur'd.

Glo. Your eyes drop mill-stones, when fools' eyes drop tears:
I like you, lads;—about your business straight;
Go, go, despach.

1 Murd. We will, my noble lord. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.  — A Room in the Tower.

Enter Clarence and Brakenbury.

Brak. Why looks your grace so heavily to day?
 Clar. O, I have pass'd a miserable night,
So full of fearful dreams, of ugly sights,
That as I am a Christian faithful man,
I would not spend another such a night,
Though 'twere to buy a world of happy days;
So full of dismal terror was the time.

Brak. What was your dream, my lord? I pray you, tell me.

Clar. Methought that I had broken from the Tower,
And was embark'd to cross to Burgundy;
And, in my company, my brother Gloster:
Who from my cabin tempted me to walk
Upon the hatches; thence we look'd toward England,
And cited up a thousand heavy times,
During the wars of York and Lancaster
That had befallen us. As we pac'd along
Upon the giddy footing of the hatches,
Methought, that Gloster stumbled; and, in falling,
Struck me, that thought to stay him, overboard,
Into the tumbling billows of the main.
O heaven! methought, what pain it was to drown!
What dreadful noise of water in mine ears!

What sights of ugly death within mine eyes!
Methought, I saw a thousand fearful wrecks;
A thousand men, that fish'd among them;
Wedges of gold, great anchors, heaps of pearl,
Inestimable stones, unvalu'd jewels,
All scattered in the bottom of the sea.
Some lay in dead men's skulls; and, in those holes
Where eyes did once inhabit, there were crept
(As 't were in scorn of eyes) reflecting gems,
That woo'd the slimy bottom of the deep,
And mock'd the dead bones that lay scatter'd by.

Brak. Had you such leisure in the time of death,
To gaze upon these secrets of the deep?

Clar. Methought, I had; and often did I strive
To yield the ghost: but still the envious flood
Kept in my soul, and would not let it forth
To seek the empty, vast, and wand'ring air;
But another'd it within my panting bulk,
Which almost burst to belch it in the sea.

Brak. Awak'd you not with this sore agony?

Clar. O, no, my dream was lengthen'd after life;
O, then began the tempest to my soul!
I pass'd, methought, the melancholy flood,
With that grim ferryman which poets write of,
Unto the kingdom of perpetual night.
The first that there did greet my stranger soul,
Was my great father-in-law, renowned Warwick,
Who cry'd aloud— What scourge for perjury
Can this day monarchy afford false Clarence?
And so he vanish'd: Then came wand'ring by
A shadow like an angel, with bright hair
Dabbled in blood; and he shriek'd out aloud,—
Clarence is come,—false, fleeting, perjur'd Clarence,—
That stabb'd me in the field by Tewksbury;—
Seize on him, furies, take him to your torments!
With that, methought, a legion of foul fiends
Environ'd me, and howled in mine ears
Such hideous cries, that, with the very noise,
I trembling wak'd, and, for a season after,
Could not believe but that I was in hell;
Such terrible impression made my dream.

Brak. No marvel, lord, though it affrighted you;
I am afraid, methinks, to hear you tell it.

Clar. O, Brakenbury, I have done these things,—
That now give evidence against my soul,—
For Edward's sake; and, see, how he requites me!—
O God! if my deep prayers cannot appease thee,
But thou wilt be aveng'd on my misdeeds,
Yet execute thy wrath on me alone:
O, spare my guileless wife, and my poor children!—
I pray thee, gentle keeper, stay by me;
My soul is heavy, and I fain would sleep.

Brak. I will, my lord: God give your grace good rest—
[Clarke reposes himself on a Chair.

Sorrow breaks seasons, and reposing hours,
Makes the night morning, and the noon-tide night,
Princes have but their titles for their glories,
An outward honour for an inward toil;
And, for unfelt imaginations,
They often feel a world of restless cares:
So that between their titles, and low name,
There's nothing differs but the outward fame.

Enter the two Murderers.

1 Murd. Ho! who's here?

Brak. What would'st thou, fellow? and how can'st thou hit her?

1 Murd. I would speak with Clarence, and I came hither on my legs.
Brak. What, so brief?
2 Murd. O, sir, 'tis better to be brief than tedious:
Let him see our commission; talk no more.

[A Paper is delivered to Brakenbury, who reads it.]

Brak. I am, in this, commanded to deliver
The noble duke of Clarence to your hands: —
I will not reason what is meant hereby,
Because I will be guiltless of the meaning.
Here are the keys; — there sits the duke asleep:
I'll to the king; and signify to him,
That I thus have resign'd to you my charge.
1 Murd. You may, sir; 'tis a point of wisdom:
Fare you well. [Exit Brakenbury.

2 Murd. What, shall we stab him as he sleeps?
1 Murd. No; he'll say, 'twas done cowardly, when he wakes.
2 Murd. When he wakes! why, fool, he shall never wake until the great judgment day.
1 Murd. Why, then, he'll say, we stab'd him sleeping.
2 Murd. The urging of that word, judgment, hath bred a kind of remorse in me.
1 Murd. What? art thou afraid?
2 Murd. Not to kill him, having a warrant for it; but to be damn'd for killing him, from which no warrant can defend me.
1 Murd. I thought, thou hadst been resolute.
2 Murd. So I am, to let him live.
1 Murd. I'll back to the duke of Gloster, and tell him so.
2 Murd. Nay, I pr'ythee, stay a little: I hope, this holy humour of mine will change; it was wont to hold me but while one would tell twenty.
1 Murd. How dost thou feel thyself now?
2 Murd. 'Faith some certain dregs of conscience are yet within me.
1 Murd. Remember our reward, when the deed's done.
2 Murd. Come, he dies; I had forgot the reward.
1 Murd. Where's thy conscience now?
2 Murd. In the duke of Gloster's purse.
1 Murd. So when he opens his purse to give us our reward, thy conscience flies out.
2 Murd. 'Tis no matter; let it go; there's few,
or none, will entertain it.
1 Murd. What, if it come to thee again?
2 Murd. I'll not meddle with it, it is a dangerous thing, it makes a man a coward; a man cannot steal, but it accuseth him; a man cannot swear, but it checks him. 'Tis a blushing shame-faced spirit, that mutinies in a man's bosom; it fills one full of obstacles: it made me once restore a purse of gold, that by chance I found; it beggars any man that keeps it: it is turned out of all towns and cities for a dangerous thing; and every man, that means to live well, endeavours to trust to himself,
and live without it.
1 Murd. 'Zounds, it is even now at my elbow, persuading me not to kill the duke.
2 Murd. Take the devil in thy mind, and believe him not: he would insinuate with thee, to make thee sigh.
1 Murd. I am strong-fram'd, he cannot prevail
with me.
2 Murd. Spoke like a tall fellow. that respects his reputation. Come, shall we fall to work?
1 Murd. Take him over the costard 1 with the hilt's of thy sword, and then throw him into the malmsey-butt, in the next room.
2 Murd. O excellent device! and make a sop of him.
1 Murd. Soft! he wakes.
2 Murd. Strike.
1 Murd. No, we'll reason with him.
Clar. Where art thou, keeper? give me a cup of wine.
1 Murd. You shall have wine enough, my lord, anon.
Clar. In God's name, what art thou?
1 Murd. A man, as you are.
Clar. But not, as I am, royal.
1 Murd. Nor you, as we are, loyal.
Clar. Thy voice is thunder, but thy looks are humble.
1 Murd. My voice is now the king's, my looks mine own.
Clar. How darkly, and how deadly dost thou speak!
Your eyes do menace me: Why look you pale?
Who sent you hither? Wherefore do you come?
Both Murd. To, to, to,— Clar. To murder me?
Both Murd. Ay, ay.
Clar. You scarcely have the hearts to tell me so,
And the defian't heart have not the hearts to do it.
Wherein, my friends, have I offended you?
1 Murd. Offended us you have not, but the king.
Clar. I shall be reconcil'd to him again.
2 Murd. Never, my lord; therefore prepare to die.
Clar. Are you call'd forth from out a world of men,
To slay the innocent? What is my offence?
Where is the evidence that doth accuse me?
What lawful quest 2 have given their verdict up
Unto the frowning judge? or who pronounc'd
The bitter sentence of poor Clarence' death?
Before I be convict by course of law,
To threaten me with death is most unlawful.
I charge you, as you hope for any goodness,
By Christ's dear blood shed for our grievous sins
That you depart, and lay no hands on me;
The deed you undertake is damnable.
1 Murd. What we will do, we do upon command.
2 Murd. And he, that hath commanded, is our king.
Clar. Erroneous vassal! the great King of kings
Hath in the table of his law commanded,
That thou shalt do no murder: Wilt thou then
Spurn at His edict, and fulfil a man's?
Take heed; for he holds vengeance in his hand,
To hurl upon their heads that break his law.
2 Murd. And that same vengeance doth he hurl on thee,
For false forswearing, and for murder too:
Thou didst receive the sacrament, to fight
In quarrel 3 of the house of Lancaster.
1 Murd. And like a traitor to the name of God, Didst break that vow; and, with thy treacherous blade,
Unrip'dst the bowels of thy sovereign's son.
2 Murd. Whom thou wast sworn to cherish and defend
How canst thou urge God's dreadful law
to us,
When thou hast broke it in such dear degree?
Clar. Alas! for whose sake did I that ill deed?
For Edward, for my brother, for his sake:
He sends you not to murder me for this;

9 Brave. 1 Head.

2 Inquest, jury. 3 On the part.
For in that sin he is as deep as I.
If God will be avenged for the deed,
O, know you, that he doth it publickly;
Take not the quarrel from his powerful arm;
He needs no indirect nor lawless course,
To cut off those that have offended him.

1 Murd. Who made thee then a bloody minister,
When gallant-springing, brave Plantagenet,
That princely novice, was struck dead by thee?

Clar. My brother's love, the devil, and my rage.

1 Murd. Thy brother's love, our duty, and thy fault,
Provoke us hither now to slaughter thee.

Clar. If thou do love my brother, hate not me;
I am his brother, and I love him well.

If you are hir'd for meed 4, go back again,
And I will send you to my brother Gloster;
Who shall reward you better for my life,
Than Edward will for tidings of my death.

2 Murd. You are deceiv'd, your brother Gloster hesitates you.

Clar. O, no; he loves me, and he holds me dear:
Go you to him from me.

Both Murd. Ay, so we will.

Clar. Tell him, when that our princely father York
Bless'd his three sons with his victorious arm,
And charg'd us from his soul to love each other,
He little thought of this divided friendship:
Bid Gloster think on this, and he will weep.

1 Murd. Ay, mill-stones; as he lesson'd us to weep.

Clar. O, do not slander him, for he is kind.

1 Murd. Right, as snow in harvest.—Come, you deceive yourself;
'Tis he that sends us to destroy you here.

Clar. It cannot be; for he bewept my fortune,
And hugg'd me in his arms, and sworn, with sobs,
That he would labour my delivery.

1 Murd. Why, so he doth, when he delivers you
From this earth's thriftam to the joys of heaven.
2 Murd. Make peace with God, for you must die,
my lord.

Clar. Hast thou that holy feeling in thy soul,
To counsel me to make my peace with God,
And art thou yet to thy own soul so blind,
That thou wilt war with God, by murd'ring me?
Ah, sir, consider, he that set thee on
To do this deed, will hate thee for the deed.

2 Murd. What shall we do?

Clar. Relent, and save your souls.

1 Murd. Relent! 'tis cowardly, and womanish.

Clar. Not to relent, is beastly, savage, devilish. —
Which of you, if you were a prince's son,
Being pent 5 from liberty, as I am now, —
If two such murderers as yourselves came to you,—
Would not entreat for life? —

My friend, I spy some pity in thy looks;
O, if thine eye be not a flatterer,
Come thou on my side, and entreat for me,
As you would beg, were you in my distress,
A begging prince what beggar pities not?

2 Murd. Look behind you, my lord.

1 Murd. Take that, and that; if all this will not do,
[Stabs him.
I'll drown you in the malmsey-butt within.

2 Murd. A bloody deed, and desperately despatch'd!
How fain, like Pilate, would I wash my hands
Of this most grievous guilt; murder done!
Re-enter first Murderer.

1 Murd. How now? what mean'st thou, that thou hast help'd me not?
By heaven, the duke shall know how slack you have been.

2 Murd. I would he knew, that I had sav'd his brother!
Take thou the fee, and tell him what I say;
For I repent me that the duke is slain.
[Exit.
1 Murd. So do not I: go, coward, as thou art. —
Well, I'll go hide the body in some hole,
Till that the duke give order for his burial:
And when I have my meed, I will away;
For this will out, and then I must not stay.
[Exit.

ACT II.

SCENE I. — A Room in the Palace.

Enter King Edward (led in sick), Queen Elizabeth, Dorset, Rivers, Hastings, Buckingham, Grey, and others.

K. Edw. Why, so; now have I done a good day's work; —

You peers continue this united league:
I every day expect an embassage
From my Redeemer to redeem me hence;
And more in peace my soul shall part to heaven,
Since I have made my friends at peace on earth;

Rivers, and Hastings, take each other's hand;
Dissemble not your hatred, swear your love.

Rivs. By heaven, my soul is pur'd from grudging hate!

And with my hand I seal my true heart's love.

Hast. So thrive I, as I truly swear the like!
K. Edw. Take heed, you dally not before your king;
Lest he, that is the supreme King of kings,
Reward.

Confound your hidden falsehood, and award
Either of you to be the other's end.

Hast. So prosper I, as I swear perfect love!
Rivs. And I, as I love Hastings with my heart!
K. Edw. Madam, yourselves are not exempt in this,— Nor your son Dorset,— Buckingham, nor you; —
You have been factious one against the other.

Wife, love lord Hastings, let him kiss your hand;
And what you do, do it unfeignedly.

Q. Eliz. There, Hastings; — I will never more remember

Our former hatred; so thrive I, and mine!
K. Edw. Dorset, embrace him, — Hastings, love lord marquis.

Dor. This interchange of love, I here protest,
Upon my part shall be inviolable.

Hast. And so swear I.  [Embraces Dorset.
K. Edw. Now, princely Buckingham, seal thou this league.

With thy embracements to my wife's allies,
And make me happy in your unity.

* Shut up.
Buck. Whenever Buckingham doth turn his hate
Upon your grace; [To the Queen.] but with all duteous love
Doth cherish you, and yours, Heaven punish me
With hate in those where I expect most love!
When I have most need to employ a friend,
And most assured that he is a friend,
Deep, hollow, treacherous, and full of guile,
Be he unto me! this do I beg of heaven,
When I am cold in love, to you or yours.

K. Edu. A pleasing cordial, princely Buckingham,
Is this thy vow unto my sickly heart.
There wanteth now our brother Gloster here,
To make the blessed period of this peace.
Buck. And, in good time, here comes the noble duke.

Enter Gloster.

Glo. Good morrow to my sovereign king, and queen;
And, princely peers, a happy time of day!

K. Edu. Happy, indeed, as we have spent the day:—
Brother, we have done deeds of charity;
Made peace of enmity, fair love of hate,
Between these swelling wrong-incensed peers.

Glo. A blessed labour, my most sovereign liege.—
Among this princely heap, if any here,
By false intelligence, or wrong surmise,
Hold me a foe;
If I unwittingly, or in my rage,
Have aught committed that is hardly borne
By any in this presence, I desire
To reconcile me to his friendly peace:
'Tis death to me, to be at enmity;
I hate it, and desire all good men's love.

First, madam, I entreat true peace of you,
Which I will purchase with my duteous service;
Of you, my noble cousin Buckingham,
If ever any grudge were lodg'd between us;
Of you, lord Rivers,—and lord Grey, of you,
That all without desert have frown'd on me;—
Dukes, earls, lords, gentlemen; indeed, of all.
I do not know that Englishman alive,
With whom my soul is any jot at odds,
More than the infant that is born to-night;
I thank my God for my humility.

Q. Eliz. A holy-day shall this be kept hereafter:—
I would to heaven all strife was well compounded.—
My sovereign lord, I do beseech your highness
To take our brother Clarence to your grace.

Glo. Why, madam, have I offer'd love for this,
To be so flouted in this royal presence?
Who knows not, that the gentle duke is dead?
[They all start.

You do him injury to scorn his corse.

K. Edu. Who knows not he is dead! who knows
he is?

Q. Eliz. All-seeing heaven, what a world is this Buck. Look I so pale, lord Dorset as the rest?
Dor. Ay, my good lord; and no man in the presence,
But his red colour hath forsook his cheeks.

K. Edu. Is Clarence dead? the order was revers'd.

Glo. But he, poor man, by your first order died.
And that a winged Mercury did bear;

Some tardy cripple bore the countermand,
That came too late to see him buried:—
Heaven grant, that some, less noble, and less loyal,
Nearer in bloody thoughts, and not in blood,
Deserve not worse than wretched Clarence did,
And yet go current from suspicion!

Enter Stanley.

Stan. A boon, my sovereign, for my service done.

K. Edu. I pray thee, peace; my soul is full of sorrow.

Stan. I will not rise, unless your highness hear me.

K. Edu. Then say at once, what is it thou request'st.

Stan. This, sovereign, of my servant's life;
Who slew to-day a riotous gentleman
Lately attendant on the duke of Norfolk.

K. Edu. Have I a tongue to doom my brother's
death,
And shall that tongue give pardon to a slave?
My brother kill'd no man, his fault was thought,
And yet his punishment was bitter death.
Who sued to me for him? who, in my wrath,
Kneel'd at my feet, and bade me be advis'd?
Who spoke of brotherhood? who spoke of love?
Who told me, how the poor soul did forsake
The mighty Warwick, and did fight for me?
Who told me, in the field of Tewksbury,
When Oxford had me down, he rescued me,
And said, Dear brother, live, and be a king?
Who told me, when we both lay in the field,
Frozen almost to death, how he did lap me
Even in his garments; and did give himself,
All thin and naked, to the numb-cold night?
All this from my remembrance brutish wrath
Sinfully pluck'd; and not a man of you
Had so much grace to put it in my mind.
But when your carters or your waiting-vassals,
Have done a drunken slaughter, and defac'd
The precious image of our dear Redeemer,
You straight are on your knees for pardon, pardon;
And I, unjustly too, must grant it you.
But for my brother, not a man would speak,
Nor I (ungracious) speak unto myself
For him, poor soul. — The proudest of you all
Have been beholden to him in his life;
Yet none of you would once plead for his life.

O God! I fear thy justice will take hold
On me, and you, and mine, and yours, for this.

Come, Hastings, help me to my closet. O,
Poor Clarence!

[Exeunt King, Queen, Hastings, Rivers, Dorset, and Grey.

Glo. This is the fruit of rashness! — Mark'd you
not,
How that the guilty kindred of the queen
Look'd pale, when they did hear of Clarence' death?
O! they did urge it still unto the king;
Heaven will revenge it. Come, lords; will you go,
To comfort Edward with our company?

Buck. We wait upon your grace.

SCENE II. — The same.

Enter the Duchess of York, with a Son and Daughter of Clarence.

Son. Good grandam, tell us, is our father dead?

Duch. No, boy.

Daugh. Why do you so weep soft? and beat your breast;—

And cry — O Clarence, my unhappy son!
Scene II.
KING RICHARD III.

Son. Why do you look on us, and shake your head,
And call us — orphans, wretches, cast-aways,
If that our noble father be alive?

Duch. My pretty cousins, you mistake me both.
I do lament the sickness of the king,
As loath to lose him, not your father's death;
It were lost sorrow, to wall one that's lost.

Son. Then, grandam, you conclude that he is dead.
The king my uncle is to blame for this.

Duch. Peace, children, peace! the king doth love you well;
Incapable and shallow innocents,
You cannot guess who caus'd your father's death.

Son. Grandam, we can: for my good uncle Gloster
Told me, the king, provok'd to't by the queen,
Devil's impeachments to imprison him:
And when my uncle told me so, he wept,
And pitied me, and kindly kiss'd my cheek;
Bade me rely on him, as on my father,
And he would love me dearly as his child.

Duch. Ah, that deceit should steal such gentle shapes
And with a virtuous visor hide deep vice!
He is my son, ay, and therein my shame,
Yet from my breast he drew not this deceit.
Son. Think you, my uncle did disseme, grandam?

Duch. Ay, boy.
Son. I cannot think it. Hark! what noise is this?

Enter Queen Elizabeth, distractedly; Rivers and Dorset, following her.

Q. Eliz. Ah! who shall hinder me to wail and weep?
To chide my fortune, and torment myself?
I'll join with black despair against my soul,
And to myself become an enemy.

Duch. What means this scene of rude impatience?

Q. Eliz. To make an act of tragick violence: —
Edward, my lord, thy son, our king, is dead.
Why grow the branches, when the root is gone?
Why wither not the leaves, that want their sap? —
If you will live, lament; if die, be brief;
That our swift-winged souls may catch the king's;
Or, like obedient subjects, follow him
To his new kingdom of perpetual rest.

Duch. Ah, so much interest have I in thy sorrow,
As I had title in thy noble husband!
I have bewept a worthy husband's death,
And liv'd by looking on his images:
But now two mirrors of his princely semblance
Are crack'd in pieces by malignant death;
And I for comfort have but one false glass,
That grieves me when I see my shame in him.
Thou art a widow; yet thou art a mother,
And hast the comfort of thy children left thee:
But death hath snatch'd my husband from my arms,
And pluck'd two crutches from my feeble hands,
Clarence and Edward. O, what cause have I,
(Thine being but a moiety of my grief,)
To over-go thy plagues, and drown thy cries!

Son. Ah, aunt! you wept not for our father's death;

How can we aid you with our kindred tears?

Dough. Our fatherless distress was left unman'd,
Your widow-dour likewise be unwep't!

Q. Eliz. Give me no help in lamentation,
I am not barren to bring forth laments:
All springs reduce their currents to mine eyes,

6 Ignorant.

That I, being govern'd by the wat'ry moon,
May send forth plentiful tears to drown the world!
Ah, for my husband, for my dear lord Edward!

Chil. Ah, for our father, for our dear lord Clarence!

Duch. Alas, for both, both mine, Edward and Clarence!

Q. Eliz. What stay had I, but Edward? and he's gone.
Chil. What stay had we, but Clarence? and he's gone.

Duch. What stays had I, but they? and they are gone.

Q. Eliz. Was never widow, had so dear a loss.
Chil. Were never orphans, had so dear a loss.

Duch. Was never mother, had so dear a loss.
Alas! I am the mother of these griefs;
Their woes are parcel'd, mine are general.
She for an Edward weeps, and so do I;
I for a Clarence weep, so doth not she:
These babes for Clarence weep, and so do I;
I for an Edward weep, so do not they:

Alas! you three, on me, threefold distress'd,
Your all your tears; I am your sorrow's nurse,
And I will pamper it with lamentations.

Dor. Comfort, dear mother; God is much displeas'd;

That you take with unthankfulness his doing;
In common worldly things, 'tis called — ungrateful,
With dull unwillingness to repay a debt,
Which with a bounteous hand was kindly lent;
Much more to be thus opposite with heaven,
For it requires the royal debt it lent you.

Riv. Madam, bethink you, like a careful mother,
Of the young prince your son: send straight for him,
Let him be crown'd; in him your comfort lives:
Drown desperate sorrow in dead Edward's grave,
And plant your joys in living Edward's throne.

Enter Gloster, Buckingham, Stanley, Hastings, Ratcliff, and others.

Glo. Sister, have comfort: all of us have cause
To wail the dimming of our shining star;
But none can cure their harms by wailing them. —
Madam, my mother, I do cry you mercy,
I did not see your grace: — Humbly on my knee
I crave your blessing.

Duch. God bless thee; and put meekness in thy breast,

Love, charity, obedience, and true duty!

Glo. Amen; and make me die a good old man! —
That is the butt-end of a mother's blessing; [Aside.
I marvel that her grace did leave it out.

Buck. You envious princes, and heart-sorlowing peers,

That bear this mutual heavy load of moan,
Now cheer each other in each other's love:
Though we have spent our harvest of this king,
We are to reap the harvest of his son.
The broken rancour of your high-swohn hearts,
But lately splinht, knit, and joint'd together,
Must gently be preserv'd, cherish'd, and kept:
Me seemeth good, that, with some little train,
Forthwith from Ludlow the young prince be fetch'd
Hither to London, to be crown'd our king.

Riv. Why with some little train, my lord of Buckingham?

Buck. Marty, my lord, lest by a multitude,
The new-heal'd wound of malice should break out;

7 Divided.
Which would be so much the more dangerous,
By how much the estate is green, and yet ungovern'd:
Where every horse bears his commanding rein,
And may direct his course as please himself,
As well the fear of harm, as harm apparent,
In my opinion, ought to be prevented.

Glo. I hope, the king made peace with all of us;
And the compact is firm, and true, in me.

Riv. And so in me; and so, I think, in all:
Yet, since it is but green, it should be put
To no apparent likelihood of breach,
Which, haply, by much company might be urg'd:
Therefore I say, with noble Buckingham,
That it is meet so few should fetch the prince.

Hast. And so say I.

Glo. Then be it so; and go we to determine
Who they shall be that straight shall post to Ludlow.
Madam, — and you my mother, — will you go
To give your censures in this weighty business?

[Exeunt all but BUCKINGHAM and GLOSTER.

Duch. My lord, whose wanderings to the prince,
For heaven's sake, let not us two stay at home;
For, by the way, I'll sort occasion,
As index to the story we late talk'd of,
To part the queen's proud kindred from the prince.

Glo. My other self, my counsel's consistory,
My oracle, my prophet! — My dear cousin,
I, as a child, will go by thy direction.
Towards Ludlow then, for we'll not stay behind.

SCENE III. — A Street.

Enter two Citizens, meeting.

1 Cit. Good morrow, neighbour: Whither away so fast?

2 Cit. I promise you, I scarcely know myself:

Hear you the news abroad?

1 Cit. Yes; the king's dead.

2 Cit. Ill news, by'r lady; seldom comes the better:

I fear, I fear, 'twill prove a giddy world.

Enter another Citizen.

1 Cit. Give you good morrow, sir.

3 Cit. Doth the news hold of good king Edward's death?

2 Cit. Ay, sir, it is too true.

3 Cit. Then, masters, look to see a troublesome world.

1 Cit. No, no; by God's good grace, his son shall reign.

3 Cit. Woe to that land, that's govern'd by a child!

2 Cit. In him there is a hope of government;

That in this monarchical council under him,
And, in his full and ripe years, himself,
No doubt, shall then, and till then, govern well.

1 Cit. So stood the state, when Henry the Sixth

Was crown'd in Paris but at nine months old.

3 Cit. Stood the state so? no, no, good friends, not so;

For then this land was famously enrich'd

With politick grave counsel; then the king

Had virtuous uncles to protect his grace.

1 Cit. Why, so hath this, both by his father and mother.

3 Cit. Better it were they all came by his father;

Or, by his father, there were none at all:

For emulation now, who shall be nearest,

Will touch us all too near, if heaven prevent not.

O, full of danger is the duke of Gloster;

8 Opinions. 9 i.e. Preparatory. 1 Minority.

And the queen's sons, and brothers, haught and proud:

And were they to be rul'd, and not to rule,

This sickly land might solace as before.

1 Cit. Come, come, we fear the worst; all will be well.

3 Cit. When clouds are seen, wise men put on their cloaks;

When great leaves fall, then winter is at hand;

When the sun sets, who doth not look for night?

Untimely storms make men expect a death:

All may be well; but, if heaven sort it so,

'Tis more than we deserve, or I expect.

2 Cit. Truly, the hearts of men are full of fear:

You cannot reason as almost with a man

That looks not heavily, and full of dread.

3 Cit. Before the days of change, still is it so:

By a divine instinct, men's minds mistrust

E ensuing danger; as, by proof, we see

The water swell before a boist'rous storm.

But leave it all to heaven. Whither away?

2 Cit. Marry, we were sent for to the justices.

3 Cit. And so was I; I'll bear you company.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV. — A Room in the Palace.

Enter the ARCHBISHOP of YORK, the young DUKE of YORK, QUEEN ELIZABETH, and the DUCHESS of YORK.

Arch. Last night, I heard, they lay at Stony-Stratford;

And at Northampton they do rest to-night:

To-morrow, or next day, they will be here.

Duch. I long with all my heart to see the prince;

I hope, he is much grown since last I saw him.

q. Eliz. But I hear no; they say my son of York

Hath almost over-taken him in his growth.

York. Ay, mother, but I would not have it so.

Duch. Why, my young cousin? it is good to grow

More than my brother; Ay, quoth my uncle Gloster,

Small herbs have grace, great weeds do grow opace:

And since, methinks, I would not grow so fast,

Because sweet flowers are slow, and weeds make haste.

Duch. 'Good faith,' 'good faith,' the saying did not hold

In him that did object the same to thee:

He was the wretched'st thing, when he was young,

So long a growing, and so leisurely,

That, if his rule were true, he should be gracious.

Arch. And so, no doubt, he is, my gracious madam.

Duch. I hope, he is; but yet let mothers doubt.

York. Now, by my troth, if I had been remember'd,

I could have given my uncle's grace a flout,

To touch his growth, nearer than he touch'd mine.

Duch. How, my young York? I pr'ythee, let me hear it.

York. Marry, they say my uncle grew so fast,

That he could gnaw a crust at two hours old;

'It was full two years ere I could get a tooth.

Grandam, this would have been a biting jest.

Duch. I pr'ythee, pretty York, who told you this?

York. Grandam, his nurse.

Duch. His nurse? why, she was dead ere thou wast born.

York. If 'twere not she, I cannot tell who told me.
Welcome destruction, blood, and massacre!
I see, as in a map, the end of all.

_Duch._ Accursed and unquiet wrangling days!
How many of you have mine eyes beheld?
My husband lost his life to get the crown;
And often up and down my sons were tost,
For me to joy and weep, their gain and loss:
And being seated, and domestic broils
Clean over-blown, themselves, the conquerors,
Make war upon themselves; brother the brother,
Blood to blood, self 'gainst self: — O, preposterous
And frantic courage, end thy wicked spleen!
Or let me die, to look on death no more!

Q. _Eliz._ Come, come, my boy, we will to sanctuary.

_Madam, farewell._

_Duch._ Stay, I will go with you.

_Q. Eliz._ You have no cause.

_Arch._ My gracious lady, go,

[To the Queen.]

And thither bear your treasure and your goods.
For my part, I'll resign unto your grace
The seal I keep; And so beside me,
As well I tend you, and all of yours!
Come, I'll conduct you to the sanctuary. [Exeunt.

ACT III.

Enter Hastings.

_Buck._ And in good time, here comes the sweating lord.

_Prince._ Welcome, my lord; What, will our mother come?

_Hast._ On what occasion, heaven knows, not I,
The queen your mother, and your brother York,
Have taken sanctuary: The tender prince
Would fain have come with me to meet your grace,
But by his mother was perforce withheld.

_Buck._ Fye! what an indirect and peevish course
Is this of hers? — Lord cardinal, will your grace
Persuade the queen to send the duke of York,
Unto his princely brother presently?
If she deny, — lord Hastings, go with him,
And from her jealous arms pluck him perforce.

_Card._ My lord of Buckingham, if my weak

Can from his mother win the duke of York,
Anon expect him here; But if she be obdurate
To mild entreaties, God in heaven forbid
We should infringe the holy privilege
Of blessed sanctuary! not for all this land,
Would I be guilty of so deep a sin.

_Buck._ You are too senseless-obstinate, my lord,
Too ceremonious, and traditional:
Weigh it but with the grossness of this age,
You break not sanctuary in seizing him.
The benefit thereof is always granted
To those whose dealings have deserved the place,
And those who have the wit to claim the place:
This prince hath neither claim'd it, nor deserved it,
And therefore, in mine opinion, cannot have it:
Then, taking him from thence, that is not there,
You break no privilege nor charter there.
Oft have I heard of sanctuary men;
But sanctuary children, ne'er till now.

_N n 2_
Card. My lord, you shall o'er-rule my mind for once.—

Come on, lord Hastings, will you go with me?

Hast. I go, my lord.

Prince. Good lords, make all the speedily haste you may. [Exeunt Cardinal and Hastings.

Say, uncle Gloster, if our brother come,
Where shall we sojourn till our coronation?

Glo. Where it seems best unto your royal self.
If I may counsel you, some day or two,
Your highness shall repose you at the Tower:
Then where you please, and shall be thought most fit
For your best health and recreation.

Prince. I do not like the Tower, of any place:—

Did Julius Caesar build that place, my lord?

Glo. He did, my gracious lord, begin that place:
Which,since, succeeding ages have re-edified.

Prince. Is it upon record? or else reported
Successively from age to age he built it?

Buck. Upon record, my gracious lord.

Prince. But say, my lord, it were not register'd;
Methinks, the truth should live from age to age,
As'twere retail'd to all posterity,
Even to the general all-seeing day.

Glo. So wise so young, they say, do never live long. [Aside.

Prince. What say you, uncle?

Glo. I say, without characters, fame lives long.
Thus like the formal vice, Iniquity,
I moralize two meanings in one word. } [Aside.

Prince. That Julius Caesar was a famous man;
With what his valour did enrich his wit,
His wit set down to make his valour live:
Death makes no conquest of this conqueror;
For now he lives in fame, though not in life.—
I'll tell you what, my cousin Buckingham.

Buck. What, my gracious lord?

Prince. An if I live until I be a man,
I'll win our ancient right in France again,
Or die a soldier, as I liv'd a king.

Glo. Short summers lightly 5 have a forward spring. [Aside.

Enter York, Hastings, and the Cardinal.

Buck. Now, in good time, here comes the duke of York.

Prince. Richard of York! how fares our loving brother?

York. Well, my dread lord; so must I call you now.

Prince. Ay, brother; to our grief, as it is yours;
Too late 6 he died, that might have kept that title,
Which by his death hath lost much majesty.

Glo. How fares our cousin, noble lord of York?

York. I thank you, gentle uncle. O, my lord,
You said, that idle weeds are fast in growth:
The prince, my brother, hath outgrown me far.

Glo. He hath, my lord.

York. And therefore is he idle?

Glo. O, my fair cousin, I must not say so.

York. Then is he more beholden to you, than I.

Glo. He may command me, as my sovereign;
But you have power in me as in a kinsman.

York. I pray you, uncle, then, give me this dagger.

Glo. My dagger, little cousin? with all my heart.

Prince. A beggar, brother?

York. Of my kind uncle, that I know will give;
And being but a toy, which is no grief to give.

4 Sensible Vice, the buffoon in the old plays.
3 Commonly.
5 Lately.

Glo. A greater gift than that I'll give my cousin.

York. A greater gift! O, that's the sword to it?

Glo. Ay, gentle cousin, were it light enough.

York. O then, I see, you'll part but with light gifts;

In weightier things you'll say a beggar nay.

Glo. It is too weighty for your grace to wear.

York. I weigh it lightly, were it heavier.

Glo. What, would you have my weapon, little lord?

York. I could, that I might thank you as you call me.

Glo. How?

York. Little.

Prince. My lord of York will still be cross in talk;—

Uncle, your grace knows how to bear with him.

York. You mean, to bear me, not to bear with me:—

Uncle, my brother mocks both you and me;
Because that I am little, like an ape,
He thinks that you should bear me on your shoulders.

Buck. With what a sharp-provided wit he reasons! To mitigate the scorn he gives his uncle,
He Pretenditly and aptly taunts himself:—
So cunning, and so young, is wonderful.

Glo. My gracious lord, will 't please you pass along?

Myself, and my good cousin Buckingham,
Will to your mother; to entreat of her,
To meet you at the Tower, and welcome you.

York. What, will you go unto the Tower, my lord?

Prince. My lord protector needs will have it so.

York. I shall not sleep in quiet at the Tower.

Glo. Why, sir, what should you fear?

York. Marry, my uncle Clarence angry ghost;
My grandam told me, he was murder'd there.

Prince. I fear no uncles dead.

Glo. Nor none that live, I hope.

Prince. An if they live, I hope, I need not fear.

But come, my lord, and, with a heavy heart,
Thinking on them, go I unto the Tower,

[Exeunt Prince, York, Hastings, Cardinal, and Attendants.

Buck. Think you, my lord, this little prating York Was not incensed? by his subtle mother,
To taunt and scorn you thus opprobriously?

York. No doubts, do doubt; O, 'tis a parous boy;
Bold, quick, ingenious, forward, capable;—
He's all the mother's, from the top to toe.

Buck. Well, let them rest. —
Come hither, gentle Catesby; thou art sworn As deeply to effect what we intend,
As closely to conceal what we impart:
Thou know'st our reasons urg'd upon the way;—
What think'st thou, is it not an easy matter
To make William lord Hastings of our mind,
For the instalment of this noble duchy
In the seat royal of this famous isle?

Cate. He for his father's sake so loves the prince,
That he will not be won to aught against him.

Buck. What think'st thou then of Stanley? will not he?

Cate. He will do all in all as Hastings doth.

Buck. Well then, no more but this: Go, gentle Catesby.

And, as it were far off, sound thou lord Hastings,
How he doth stand affected to our purpose;
And summon him to-morrow to the Tower,

7 Incited.
8 Intelligent.
To sit about the coronation.
If thou dost find him tractable to us,
Encourage him, and tell him all our reasons:
If he be leaden, icy, cold, unwilling,
Be thou so too; and so break off the talk,
And give us notice of his inclination:
For we to-morrow hold divided councils,
Wherein thyself shalt highly be employ'd.
Glo. Commend me to lord William: tell him, Catesby,
His ancient kins of dangerous adversaries
To-morrow are let blood at Pomfret-castle;
And bid my friend for joy of this good news,
Give mistress Shore one gentle kiss the more.
Buck. Good Catesby, go, effect this business soundly.
Cate. My good lords both, with all the heed
I can.
Glo. Shall we hear from you, Catesby, ere we sleep?
Cate. You shall, my lord.
Glo. At Crosby-place, there shall you find us both.
[Exit Catesby.
Buck. Now, my lord, what shall we do, if we perceive
Lord Hastings will not yield to our complots?
Glo. Chop off his head, man: — somewhat we will do:
And, look, when I am king, claim thou of me
The earldom of Hereford, and all the movables
Whereof the king my brother was possess'd.
Buck. I'll claim that promise at your grace's hand.
Glo. And look to it yielded with all kindness.
Come, let us sup betimes; that afterwards
We may digest our complots in some form. [Exit.

SCENE III. — Before Lord Hastings's House.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, my lord, —

[Knocking.

Hast. [Within.] Who knocks?

Mess. One from lord Stanley.

Hast. [Within.] What is't o'clock?

Mess. Upon the stroke of four.

Enter Hastings.

Hast. Cannot thy master sleep the tedious nights?
Mess. So it should seem by that I have to say.
First he commends him to your noble lordship.
Hast. And then, —

Mess. And then he sends you word, he doam't
To-night the boar had rased off his helm:
Besides, he says, there are two councils held;
And that may be determin'd at the one,
Which may make you and him to rue at the other.
Therefore he sends to know your lordship's pleasure, —
If presently, you will take horse with him,
And with all speed post with him toward the north,
To shun the danger that his soul divine.

Hast. Go, fellow, go, return unto thy lord;
Bid him not fear the separated councils:
His honour, and myself, are at the one;
And, at the other, is my good friend Catesby;
Where nothing can proceed, that toucheth us,
Whereof I shall not have intelligence.
Tell him, his fears are shallow, wanting instance:
And for his dreams — I wonder, he's so fond!

SCENE III. — Before Lord Hastings's House.

Enter Catesby.

Cate. Many good morrows to my noble lord!
Hast. Good morrow, Catesby; you are early stirring:
What news, what news, in this our tottering state?
Cate. It is a reeling world, indeed, my lord;
And, I believe, will never stand upright,
Till Richard wear the garland of the realm.
Hast. How! wear the garland? dost thou mean the crown?
Cate. Ay, my good lord.
Hast. I'll have this crown of mine cut from my shoulders,
Before I'll see the crown so foul misplace'd.
But canst thou guess that he doth aim at it?
Cate. Ay, on my life; and hopes to find you forward
Upon his party, for the gain thereof;
And, thereupon, he sends you this good news, —
That, this same very day, your enemies,
The kindred of the queen, must die at Pomfret.
Hast. Indeed, I am no mourner for that news,
Because they have been still my adversaries;
But, that, I'll give my voice on Richard's side,
To bar my master's heirs in true descent,
God knows, I will not do it, to the death.
Cate. God keep your lordship in that gracious mind!

Hast. But I shall laugh at this a twelve-month hence,
That they, who brought me in my master's hate,
I live to look upon their tragedy.

Well, Catesby, ere a fortnight make me older,
I'll send some packing, that yet think not on.
Cate. 'Tis a vile thing to die, my glorious lord,
When men are un准备'd, and look not for it.
Hast. O monstrous, monstrous! and so falls it out
With Rivers, Vaughan, Grey: and so 'twill do
With some men else, who think themselves as safe
As thou, and I; who, as thou know'st, are dear
To princely Richard, and to Buckingham.

Cate. The princes both make high account of you,—
For they account his head upon the bridge. [Aside.

Hast. I know, they do; and I have well deserve'd it!

Enter Stanley.

Stan. My lord, good morrow; and good morrow,
Catesby: —

You may jest on, but, by the holy rood, 4
I do not like these several councils, I.
Hast. My lord, I hold my life as dear as yours; And never, in my life, I do protest,
Was it more precious to me than 'tis now:
Think you, but that I know our state secure,
I would be so triumphant as I am?

Stan. The lords at Pomfret, when they rode from London,
Were jocund, and supposed their states were sure,
And they, indeed, had no cause to mistrust;
But yet, you see, how soon the day o'er-cast;
This sudden stab of rancour I misdoubt;
Pray Heaven, I say, I prove a needless coward!
What, shall we toward the Tower? the day is spent.

Host. Come, come, have with you. — Wot y' what, my lord?
To-day, the lords you talk of are beheaded.

Stan. They for their truth, might better wear their heads,
Than some, that have accus'sd them, wear their hats.
But come, my lord, let's away.

_Enter a Pursuivant._

Host. Go on before, I'll talk with this good fellow.
[Exeunt Stanley and Catesby.]

_How now, sirrah, how goes the world with thee?_

Purs. The better that your lordship please to ask.

Host. I tell thee, man, 'tis better with me now,
Than when thou met'st me last where now we meet:
Then was I going prisoner to the Tower,
By the suggestion of the queen's allies;
But now I tell thee, (keep it thyself,)
This day those enemies are put to death,
And I in better state than e'er I was.

Purs. Heaven hold it, to your honour's good content!

Host. Gramercy, fellow: There, drink that for me.
[Throwing him his Purs.'s.]

Purs. I thank your honour.
[Exit Pursuivant.]

_Enter a Priest._

_Pr.* Well met, my lord; I am glad to see your honour.

Host. I thank thee, good sir John, with all my heart.
I am in your debt for your last exercise;
Come the next Sabbath, and I will content you.

_Enter Buckingham._

_Buck.* What, talking with a priest, lord chamberlain?
Your friends at Pomfret, they do need the priest;
Your honour hath no shirving work in hand.

Host. 'Good faith, and when I met this holy man,
The men you talk of came into my mind.
What, go you toward the Tower?

_Buck.* I do, my lord; but long I cannot stay there;
I shall return before your lordship thence.

Host. Nay, like enough, for I stay dinner there.

_Buck.* And supper too, although thou know'st it not.
[Aside.]

Come, will you go?

Host. I'll wait upon your lordship.
[Exeunt.]

_SCENE III._—Pomfret.
Before the Castle.

_Enter Ratcliff, with a Guard, conducting Rivers, Grey, and Vaughan, to Execution._

_Ret.* Come, bring forth the prisoners.

_Riv.* Sir Richard Ratcliff let me tell thee this,—
To-day, shalt thou behold a subject die,
For truth, for duty, and for loyalty.

_Grey.* God keep the prince from all the pack of you!
Vaugh. You live, that shall cry woe for this hereafter.

_Rat.* Despatch; the limit of your lives is out.

_Riv.* O Pomfret, Pomfret! O thou bloody prison,
Fatal and ominous to noble peers!

Within the guilty closure of thy walls,
Richard the Second here was hack'd to death:
And, for more slander to thy dismal seat,
We give thee up our guiltless blood to drink.

_Grey.* Now Margaret's curse is fall'n upon our heads,
When she exclaimed on Hastings, you, and I,
For standing by when Richard stabb'd her son.

_Riv.* Then curs'd she Hastings, curs'd she Bucking-

Then curs'd she Richard: — O, remember, God,
To hear her prayers for them, as now for us!
And for my sister, and her princely sons,—
Be satisfied, great God, with our true bloods,
Which, as thou know'st, unjustly must be spilt!

_Rat.* Make haste, the hour of death is expiate.

_Riv.* Come, Grey,—come, Vaughan,—let us here embrace:
Farewell, until we meet again in heaven.
[Exeunt.]

_SCENE IV._—London.
_A Room in the Tower._

_Buckingham, Stanley, Hastings, the Bishop of Ely, Catesby, Lovel, and others, sitting at a Table: Officers of the Council attending._

Host. Now, noble peers, the cause why we are met—
Is — to determine of the coronation:
In God's name speak, when is the royal day?

_Buck.* Are all things ready for that royal time?

Stan. They are; and wants but nomination.

_Ely.* To-morrow, then, I judge a happy day.

_Buck.* Who knows the lord protector's mind herein?
Who is most inward with the noble duke?

_Ely.* Your grace, we think, should soonest know his mind.

_Buck.* We know each other's faces; for our hearts,—
He knows no more of mine, than I of yours;—
Nor I, of his, my lord, than you of mine:—
Lord Hastings, you and he are near in love.

Host. I thank his grace, I know he loves me well;
But, for his purpose in the coronation,
I have not sounded him, nor he deliver'd
His gracious pleasure any way therein:
But you, my noble lord, may name the time;
And in the duke's behalf '11 give my voice,
Which, I presume, he'll take in gentle part.

_Enter Gloster._

_Ely.* In happy time, here comes the duke himself.

_Glo.* My noble lords and cousins, all, good morrow;
I have been long a sleeper; but, I trust,
My absence doth neglect no great design,
Which by my presence might have been concluded.

_Buck.* Had you not come upon your cue, my lord,
William Lord Hastings had pronounced your part,—
I mean, your voice,—for crowning of the king.

_Glo.* Than my lord Hastings, no man might be bolder;
His lordship knows me well, and loves me well.—
My lord of Ely, when I was last in Holborn,
I saw good strawberries in your garden there;
I do beseech you, send for some of them.

_Ely.* Marry, and will, my lord, with all my heart._

[Exit Ely.]

_Glo.* Cousin of Buckingham, a word with you._
_Catesby hath sounded Hastings in our business;—
And finds the testy gentleman so hot,
That he will lose his head, ere give consent,

[Expiated, completed.]

_Intimate._
His master's child, as worshipfully he terms it, Shall lose the royalty of England's throne.

Buck. Withdraw yourself awhile, I'll go with you.

[Exeunt Gloster and Buckingham.

Stan. We have not yet set down this day of triumph. To-morrow, in my judgment, is too sudden; For I myself am not so well provided, As else I would be were the day prolong'd.

Re-enter Bishop of Ely.

Ely. Where is my lord protector? I have sent For these strawberries.

Hast. His grace looks cheerfully and smooth this morning;

There's some conceit or other likes him well, When he doth bid good morrow with such spirit. I think, there's ne'er a man in Christendom, Can lesser hide his love, or hate, than he;

For by his face straight shall ye know his heart.

Stan. What of his heart perceive you in his face, By any likelihood he show'd to-day?

Hast. Marty, that with no man here he is offended;

For, were he, he had shown it in his looks.

Re-enter Gloster and Buckingham.

Glo. I pray you all, tell me what they deserve, That do conspire my death with devilish plots Of damned witchcraft; and that have prevail'd Upon my body with their hellish charms?

Hast. The tender love I bear your grace, my lord, Makes me most forward in this noble presence To doom the offenders: Whose'er they be, I say, my lord, they have deserved death.

Glo. Then be your eyes the witness of their evil, Look how I am bewitch'd; behold mine arm Is, like a blasted sapling, wither'd up:

And this is Edward's wife, that monstrous witch, Consort'd with that harlot, strumpet Shore, That by their witchcraft thus have marked me.

Hast. If they have done this deed, my noble lord,—

Glo. If! thou protector of this wanton strumpet, Talk'st thou to me of ifs? — Thou art a traitor: — Off with his head: — now, by saint Paul I swear, I will not dine until I see the same. —

Lovell, and Catesby, look that it be done; The rest that love me, rise, and follow me.

[Exeunt Council, with Gloster and Buckingham.

Hast. Woe, woe, for England! not a whit for me; For I, too fond, might have prevented this: Stanley did dream, the boar did raise his helm; But I disdain'd it, and did scorn to fly,

Three times to-day my foot-cloth horse did stumble, And startled, when he look'd upon the Tower, As loath to bear me to the slaughter-house.

O, now I want the priest that spake to me: I now repent I told the pursuivant,

As too triumphing, how mine enemies To-day at Pomfret bloodily were butcher'd, And I myself secure in grace and favour.

O, Margaret, Margaret, now thy heavy curse Is lighted on poor Hastings' wretched head.

Cate. Despatch, my lord, the duke would be at dinner:

Make a short shrift, he longs to see your head.

Hast. O momentary grace of mortal men, Which we more hunt for than the grace of Heaven,
KING RICHARD III.

Act III.

SCENE VI. — A Street.

Enter a Scrivener.

Scriv. Here is the indictment of the good lord
Hastings;
Which in a set hand fairly is engross'd,
That it may be to-day read o'er in Paul's.
And mark how well the sequel hangs together: —
Eleven hours I have spent to write it over,
For yesternight by Catesby it was sent me.
The precedent was full as long a doing:
And yet within these five hours Hastings liv'd,
Untainted, unexamined, free, at liberty.
Here's a good world the while! — Who is so gross,
That cannot see this palpable device?
Yet who so bold, but says — he sees it not?
Bad is the world; and all will come to nought,
When such bad dealing must be seen in thought.

[Exit.

SCENE VII. — Court of Baynard's Castle.

Enter Gloster and Buckingham, meeting.

Glo. How now, how now? what say the citizens?
Buck. The citizens are mum, say not a word.
Glo. Touch'd you the bastardy of Edward's children?
Buck. I did; with his contract with lady Lucy,
And his contract by deputy in France:
The insatiate greediness of his desires,
And his enforcement of the city wives;
His tyranny for trifles; his own bastardy,
As being got, your father then in France;
And his resemblance, being not like the duke.
Withal, I did infer your lineaments,—
Being the right idea of your father,
Both in your form and nobleness of mind:
Laid open all your victories in Scotland,
Your discipline in war, wisdom in peace,
Your bounty, virtue, fair humility;
Indeed, let this thing, fitting for your purpose,
Untouch'd, or slightly handled, in discourse.
And, when my oratory grew to an end,
I bade them, that did love their country's good,
Cry — God save Richard, England's royal king!
Glo. And did they so?
Buck. No, so Heaven help me, they spake not a word;
But like dumb statues, or breathless stones,
Star'd on each other, and look'd deadly pale.
Which when I saw I reprehended them;
And ask'd the mayor, what meant this wilful silence:
His answer was, — the people were not us'd
To be spoke to, but by the recorder.
Then he was urg'd to tell my tale again:
Thus saith the duke, thus hath the duke inferre'd;
But nothing spoke in warrant from himself.
When he had done, some followers of mine own,
At lower end o'the hall, hurl'd up their caps,
And some ten voices cried, God save king Richard!
And thus I took the vantage of those few,
— Thanks, gentle citizens, and friends, quoth I;
This general applause, and cheerful shout,
Argues your wisdom, and your love to Richard;
And even here brake off and came away.
Glo. What tongueless blocks were they? Would they not speak?
Will not the mayor then, and his brethren, come?

* Original draft.
Buck. The mayor is here at hand: intend some fear;
Be not you spoke with, but by mighty suit:
And look you, get a prayer-book in your hand,
And stand between two churchmen, good my lord;
For on that ground I'll make a holy descent:
And be not easily won to our requests.

Glo. I go; and if you plead as well for them,
As I can say nay to thee for myself,
No doubt we'll bring it to a happy issue.
Buck. Go, go, up to the leads; the lord mayor knocks. [Exit Gloster.

Enter the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Citizens.

Welcome, my lord; I dance attendance here;
I think the duke will not be spoke withal. —

Enter, from the Castle, Catesby.

Now, Catesby! what says your lord to my request?

Cate. He doth entreat your grace, my noble lord,
To visit him to-morrow, or next day:
He is within, with two right reverend fathers,
Divinely bent to meditation;
And in no worldly suit would he mov'd,
To draw him from his holy exercise.
Buck. Return, good Catesby, to the gracious duke:
Tell him, myself, the mayor and aldermen,
In deep designs, in matter of great moment,
No less importing than our general good,
Are come to have some conference with his grace.
Cate. I'll signify so much unto him straight.

Buck. Ah, ha, my lord, this prince is not an Edward!
He is not lolling on a wanton bed,
But on his knees at meditation;
Not dallying with a brace of courtezans,
But meditating with two deep divines;
Not sleeping, to engross his idle body,
But praying, to enrich his watchful soul.
Happy were England, would this virtuous prince
Take on himself the sovereignty thereof;
But, sure, I fear, we shall ne'er win him to it.
May. Marry, Heaven forbid, his grace should say us nay!

Buck. I fear, he will: Here Catesby comes again; —

Re-enter Catesby.

Now, Catesby, what says his grace?

Cate. He wonders to what end you have assembled
Such troops of citizens to come to him;
His grace not being warn'd thereof before,
He fears, my lord, you mean no good to him.

Buck. Sorry I am, my noble cousin should Suspect me, that I mean no good to him:
By heaven, we come to him in perfect love;
And so once more return and tell his grace.
[Exit Catesby.

When holy and devout religious men
Are at their beads, 'tis hard to draw them thence;
So sweet is zealous contemplation.

Enter Gloster, in a Gallery above, between two Bishops. Catesby returns.

May. See, where his grace stands 'tween two clergymen!

Buck. Two props of virtue for a christian prince,
To stay him from the fall of vanity:

And, see, a book of prayer in his hand;
True ornaments to know a holy man. —
Famous Plantagenet, most gracious prince,
Lend favourable ear to our requests;
And pardon us the interruption
Of thy devotion, and right-christian zeal.

Glo. My lord, there needs no such apology;
I rather do beseech you pardon me,
Who, earnest in the service of my God,
Neglect the visitation of my friends.
But, leaving this, what is your grace's pleasure?

Buck. Even that, I hope, which pleaseth Heaven above,
And all good men of this ungovern'd isle.

Glo. I do suspect, I have done some offence,
That seems disgraceful in the city's eye;
And that you come to reprehend my ignorance.

Buck. You have, my lord; Would it might please your grace,
On our entreaties to amend your fault!

Glo. Else wherefore breathe I in a christian land?
Buck. Know, then, it is your fault, that you resign
The supreme seat, the throne majestical,
The scepter'd office of your ancestors,
Your state of fortune, and your due of birth,
The lineal glory of your royal house,
To the corruption of a blemish'd stock:
Whilst, in the midst of your sleepless thoughts,
(Which here we waken to our country's good,) The noble isle doth want her proper limbs;
Her face defac'd with scars of infancy,
Her royal stock graft with ignoble plants,
And almost shoulder'd 5 in the swelling gulf
Of dark forgetfulness and deep oblivion.

Which to recure 6, we heartily solicit
Your gracious self to take on you the charge
And kingly government of this your land:
Not as protector, steward, substitute,
Or lowly factor for another's gain:
But as successively, from blood to blood,
Your right of birth, your empery? y own,
For this, contented with the citizens,
Your very worshipful and loving friends,
And by their vehement instigation,
In this just suit come I to move your grace.

Glo. I cannot tell, if to depart in silence,
Or bitterly to speak in your reproof,
Best fitteth my degree, or your condition:
If, not to answer, — you might haply think,
Tongue-tied ambition, not replying, yielded
To bear the golden yoke of sovereignty,
Which fondly you would here impose on me;
If to reprove you for this suit of yours,
So season'd with your faithfull love to me,
Then, on this other side, I check your friends.
Therefore — to speak, and to avoid the first;
And, then in speaking, not to incur the last,—
Definitly thus I answer you.
Your love deserves my thanks; but my desert
Unmeritable, shuns your high request.

First, if all obstacles were cut away,
And that my path were even to the crown,
As the ripe revenue and due of birth;
Yet so much is my poverty of spirit,
So mighty, and so many my defects,
That I would rather hide me from my greatness,—
Being a bark to brook no mighty sea,
Than in my greatness covet to be hid,
And in the vapour of my glory smother'd. 7

5 Thrust into. 6 Recover. 7 Enquire.
But, Heaven be thank'd, there is no need of me; (And much I need to help you, if need were.) The royal tree hath left us royal fruit, Which mellow'd by the stealing hours of time, Will well become the seat of majesty, And make, no doubt, us happy by his reign. On him I lay what you would lay on me, The right and fortune of his happy stars, — Which, God defend, that I should wring from him! Buck. My lord, this argues conscience in your grace; But the respects thereof are nice 9 and trivial, All circumstances well considered. You say, that Edward is your brother's son; So say we too, but not by Edward's wife; For first he was contract to lady Lucy, Your mother lives a witness to his vow; And afterwards by substitute betroth'd To Bona, sister to the king of France. These both put by, a poor petitioner, A care-craz'd mother to a many sons, A beauty-waning and distressed widow, Even in the afternoon of her best days, Made prize and purchase of his wanton eye, Seduced the pitch and height of all his thoughts To base declension and loath'd bigamy: By her, in his unlawful bed, he got This Edward, whom our manners call — the prince. More bitterly could I expostulate, Save that, for reverence to some alive, I give a sparing limit to my tongue; Then, good my lord, take to your royal self This prof'er'd benefit of dignity: If not to bless us and the land withal, Yet to draw forth your noble ancestry From the corruption of abusing time, Unto a lineal true-derived course. May. Do, good my lord; your citizens entreat you. Buck. Refuse not, mighty lord, this prof'er'd love. Cate. O make them joyful, grant their lawful suit. Glo. Alas, why would you heap those cares on me? I am unfit for state and majesty: — I do beseech you, take it not amiss; I cannot, nor I will not, yield to you. Buck. If you refuse it, — as in love and zeal, Loath to depose the child, your brother's son; As well we know your tenderness of heart, And gentle, kind, effeminate remorse, Which we have noted in you to your kindred, And equally, indeed, to all estates, — Yet know, who'er you accept our suit or no, Your brother's son shall never reign our king; But we will plant some other in your throne, To the disgrace and downfall of your house. And, in this resolution, here we leave you; Come, citizens, we will entreat no more. [Exeunt Buckingham and Citizens. Cate. Call them again, sweet prince, accept their suit; If you deny them, all the land will rue it. Glo. Will you enforce me to a world of cares? Well, call them again; I am not made of stone, But penetrable to your kind entreaties, Albeit against my conscience and my soul. — Re-enter Buckingham and the rest. Cousin of Buckingham, — and sage, grave men, Since you will bubble fortune on my back, To bear her burden, whe'er I will, or no, I must have patience to endure the load: But if black scandal, or foul-fac'd reproach, Attend the sequel of your imposition, Your mere enforcement shall acquaintance me From all the impure blot's and stains thereof; For Heaven best knows, and you may partly see, How far I am from the desire of this. May. God bless your grace! we see it, and will say it. Glo. In saying so, you shall but say the truth. Buck. Then I salute you with this royal title, — Long live king Richard, England's worthy king! All. Amen. Buck. To-morrow may it please you to be crown'd? Glo. Even when you please, since you will have it so. Buck. To-morrow then we will attend your grace; And so, most joyfully, we take our leave. Glo. Come, let us to our holy work again: — [To the Bishops. Farewell, good cousin; — farewell, gentle friends. [Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I. — Before the Tower.

Enter, on one side, Queen Elizabeth, Duchess of York, and Marquis of Dorset; on the other, Anne, Duchess of Gloster, leading Lady Margaret Plantagenet, Clarence's young Daughter.

Duch. Who meets us here — my niece Plantagenet Led in the hand of her kind aunt of Gloster? Now, for my life, she's wandering to the Tower, On pure heart's love, to greet the tender prince. — Daughter, well met. Anne. Heaven give your graces both A happy and a joyful time of day! Q. Eliz. As much to you, good sister! Whither away? Anne. No further than the Tower; and, as I guess,

8 Want ability. 9 Minute.

Upon the like devotion as yourselves, To gratulate the gentle princes there. Q. Eliz. Kind sister, thanks; we'll enter all to- gether: Enter Brakenbury. And, in good time, here the lieutenant comes. Master lieutenant, pray you, by your leave, How doth the prince, and my young son of York? Brak. Right well, dear madam: By your patience, I may not suffer you to visit them; The king hath strictly charg'd the contrary. Q. Eliz. The king! who's that? Brak. I mean the lord protector. Q. Eliz. The Lord protect him from that kingly title! Hath he set bounds between their love, and me? I am their mother, who shall bar me from them? 1 Pity.
Scene I.

Duch. I am their father's mother, I will see them.

Anne. Their aunt I am in law, in love their mother:
Then bring me to their sights; I'll bear thy blame,
And take thy office from thee, on thy peril.

Brok. No, madam, no, I may not leave it so;
I am bound by oath, and therefore pardon me,
[Exit Brakenbury.

Enter Stanley.

Stan. Let me but meet you, ladies, one hour hence,
And I'll salute your grace of York as mother,
And reverence looker-on of two fair queens.
Comes, madam, you must straight to Westminster.
[To the Duchess of Gloster.

There to be crowned Richard's royal queen.

Q. Eliz. Ah, cut my lace asunder!
That my pent heart may have some scope to beat,
Or else I swoon with this dead-killing news.

Anne. Despightful tidings! O unpleasing news!

Dor. Be of good cheer: Mother, how fares your grace?

Q. Eliz. O Dorset, speak not to me, get thee gone,
Death and destruction dog thee at the heels;
Thy mother's name is ominous to children:
If thou wilt outstrip death, go cross the seas,
And live with Richmond, from the reach of hell.
Go, hie thee, hie thee, from this slaughter-house,
Lest thou increase the number of the dead;
And make me die the thrall of Margaret's curse,—
Nor mother, wife, nor England's counted queen.

Stan. Full of wise care is this your counsel, madam:
Take all the swift advantage of the hours;
You shall have letters from me to my son
In your behalf, to meet you on the way:
Be not ta'en tardy by unwise delay.

Duch. O ill-dispensing wind of misery!—
O my accursed womb, the bed of death;
A cockatrice hast thou hatch'd to the world,
Whose unavowed eye is murderous!

Stan. Come, madam, come; I in all haste was sent.

Anne. And I with all unwillingness will go.—
O, would to heaven that the inclusive verge
Of golden metal, that must round my brow,
Were red-hot steel, to serve me to the brain!
Anointed let me be with deadly venom;
And die, ere men can say—God save the queen!

Q. Eliz. Go, go, poor soul, I envy not thy glory;
To feed my humour, wish thyself no harm.

Anne. No! why?—When he, that is my husband now,
Came to my heart, I follow'd Henry's corse;
When scarce the blood was well wash'd from his hands,
Which issu'd from my other angel husband,
And that dead saint which I then weeping follow'd;—
O, when, I say, I look'd on Richard's face,
'This was my wish,—Be thou, quoth I, accurs'd,
For making me so young, so old a widow!
And, when thou wert, let sorrow haunt thy bed;
And be thy wife (if any be so mad)
More miserable by the life of thee,
Than thou hast made me by my dear lord's death!
Lo, ere I can repeat this curse again,
Even in so short a space, my woman's heart
Grossly grew captive to his honey words,
And prov'd the subject of mine own soul's curse:
Which ever since hath held mine eyes from rest;

For never yet one hour in his bed
Did I enjoy the golden dew of sleep,
But with his timorous dreams was still awak'd.
Besides, he hates me for my father Warwick;
And will, no doubt, shortly be rid of me.

Q. Eliz. Poor heart, adieu; I pity thy complaining.

Anne. No more than with my soul I mourn for yours.

Dor. Farewell, thou woful welcoming of glory!

Anne. Adieu, poor soul, that tak'st thy leave of it!

Duch. Go thou to Richmond, and good fortune guide thee!—

[To Dorset.

Go thou to Richard, and good angels tend thee!—

[To Anne.

Go thou to sanctuary, and good thoughts possess thee!—

[To Q. Elizabeth.

I to my grave, where peace and rest lie with me!
Eighty odd years of sorrow have I seen,
And each hour's joy wreck'd with a week of teen.

Q. Eliz. Stay yet: look back, with me, unto the Tower.

Pity, you ancient stones, those tender babes,
Whom envy hath immur'd within your walls!
Rough cradle for such little pretty ones!
Rude ragged nurse! old sullen play-fellow
For tender princes, use my babies well!
So foolish sorrow bids your stones farewell.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Room of State in the Palace.

Flourish of Trumpets. Richard, as King, upon his Throne; Buckingham, Catesby, a Page, and others.

K. Rich. Stand all apart.—Cousin of Buckingham—

Buck. My gracious sovereign.

K. Rich. Give me thy hand. Thus high, by thy advice,
And thy assistance, is king Richard seated:—
But shall we wear these glories for a day?
Or shall they last, and we rejoice in them?

Buck. Still live they, and for ever let them last!

K. Rich. Ah, Buckingham, now do I play the touch,?
To try if thou be current gold, indeed:—
Young Edward lives;—Think now what I would speak.

Buck. Say on, my loving lord.

K. Rich. Why, Buckingham, I say, I would beking.

Buck. Why, so you are, my thrice-renowned liege.

K. Rich. Ha! am I king? 'Tis so: but Edward lives.

Buck. True, noble prince.

K. Rich. O bitter consequence,
That Edward still should live,—true, noble prince!—
Cousin, thou wast not wont to be so dull:
Shall I be plain? I wish the bastards dead;
And I would have it suddenly perform'd.
What say'st thou now? speak suddenly, be brief.

Buck. Your grace may do your pleasure.

K. Rich. Tut, tut, thou art all ice, thy kindness freezes:
Say, have I thy consent, that they shall die?

Buck. Give me some breath, some little pause,
dear lord,
Before I positively speak in this:
I will resolve your grace immediately.

[Exit Buckingham.

Cates. The king is angry; see, he gnaws his lip.

[Aside.

1 Sorrow.

2 Touchstone.
K. Rich. I will converse with iron-witted fools,
[Descends from his Throne.]

And unrespective 4 boys: none are for me,
That look into me with considerate eyes;
High-reaching Buckingham grows circumspect.

Boy,—

Page. My lord.

K. Rich. Know'st thou not any, whom corrupting gold
Would tempt unto a close exploit 5 of death?

Page. I know a discontented gentleman,
Whose humble means match not his haughty mind:
Gold were as good as twenty orators,
And will, no doubt, tempt him to any thing.

K. Rich. What is his name?

Page. His name, my lord, is — Tyrrel.

K. Rich. I partly know the man; Go, call him hither, boy.
[Exit Page.]

The deep-revolving witty 6 Buckingham
No more shall be the neighbour to my counsels:
Hath he so long held out with me untill’d,
And stops he now for breath? — well, be it so. —

Enter Stanley.

How now, lord Stanley? what’s the news?

Stan. Know, my loving lord,
The marquis Dorset, as I hear, is fled
To Richmond, in the parts where he abides.

K. Rich. Come hither, Catesby: rumour it abroad,
That Anne, my wife, is very grievous sick;
I will take order for her keeping close.

Inquire me out some mean-born gentleman,
Whom I will marry straight to Clarence’s daughter:
The boy is foolish, and I fear not him.  —
Look, how thou dream’st! — I say again, give out,
That Anne my queen is sick, and like to die:
About it; for it stands me much upon?
To stop all hopes, whose growth may damage me. —

[Exit Catesby.]

I must be married to my brother’s daughter,
Or else my kingdom stands on brittle glass:
Murder her brothers, and then marry her!
Uncertain way of gain! But I am in
So far in blood, that sin will pinch on sin.
Tear-falling pity dwells not in this eye. —

Re-enter Page, with Tyrrel.

Is thy name Tyrrel?

Tyr. James Tyrrel, and your most obedient subject.

K. Rich. Art thou, indeed?

Tyr. Prove me, my gracious lord.

K. Rich. Dar’st thou resolve to kill a friend of mine?

Tyr. Please you; but I had rather kill two enemies.

K. Rich. Why, then thou hast it; two deep enemies!

Foes to my rest, and my sweet sleep’s disturbers,
Are they that I would have thee deal 8 upon;
Tyrrel, I mean those bastards in the Tower.

Tyr. Let me have open means to come to them,
And soon I’ll rid you from the fear of them.

K. Rich. Thou sing’st sweet music. Hark, come hither, Tyrrel;

Go, by this token: — Rise, and lend thine ear: —

[Whispers.

There is no more but so; — Say, it is done,
And I will love thee, and prefer thee for it.

Tyr. I will despatch it straight.
[Exit.]

4 Inconsiderate.  5 Secret act.  6 Cunning.  7 It is of great consequence to my designs.  8 Act.

KING RICHARD III.
Act IV.

Re-enter Buckingham.

Buck. My lord, I have considered in my mind
The late demand that you did sound me in.

K. Rich. Well, let that rest. Dorset is fled to Richmond.

Buck. I hear the news, my lord.

K. Rich. Stanley, he is your wife’s son: — Well, look to it.

Buck. My lord, I claim the gift, my due by promise,

For which your honour and your faith is pawn’d;
The earldom of Hereford, and the movables,
Which you have promised I shall possess.

K. Rich. Stanley, look to your wife; if she convey Letters to Richmond, you shall answer it.

Buck. What says your highness to my just request?

K. Rich. I do remember me, — Henry the sixth
Did prophecy, that Richmond should be king,
When Richmond was a little peevish 9 boy.

A king! — perhaps —

Buck. My lord, —

K. Rich. How chance, the prophet could not at that time,
Have told me, I being by, that I should kill him?

Buck. My lord, your promise for the earldom, —
K. Rich. Richmond! — When last I was at Exeter,

The mayor in courtesy show’d me the castle,
And call’d it — Rouge-mont: at which name, I started;
Because a bard of Ireland told me once,
I should not live long after I saw Richmond.

Buck. My lord, —

K. Rich. Ay, what’s o’clock?

Buck. I am thus bold
To put your grace in mind of what you promis’d me.

K. Rich. Well, but what is’t o’clock?

Buck. Upon the stroke
Of ten.

K. Rich. Well, let it strike.

Buck. Why, let it strike?
K. Rich. Because that, like a Jack 1, thou keep’st the stroke
Betwixt thy begging and my meditation.

I am not in the giving vein to-day.

Buck. Why, then resolve me whe’r you will, or no.

K. Rich. Thou troublest me; I am not in the vein.
[Exeunt King Richard and Train.]

Buck. And is it thus? repays he my deep service
With such contempt? made I him king for this?
O, let me think on Hastings; and begone
To Brecknock 2, while my fearful head is on.
[Exit.]

SCENE III. — The same.

Enter Tyrell.

Tyr. The tyrannous and bloody act is done;
The most arch deed of piteous massacre,
That ever yet this land was guilty of.

Dighton and Forrest, whom I did suborn
To do this piece of ruthless butchery,
Albeit they were flesh’d villains, bloody dogs,
Molting with tenderness and mild compassion,
Wept like two children, in their death’s sad story.
O thus, quoth Dighton, lay the gentle babes, —

9 Foolish.

1 A Jack of the clock-house is an image like those at St.
Dunstan’s church in Fleet-street, and was then a common appendage to clocks.

2 His castle in Wales.
KING RICHARD III.

To watch the waning of mine enemies,
A dire induction am I witness to,
And will to France; hoping the consequence
Will prove as bitter, black, and tragical.
Withdraw thee, wretched Margaret! who comes here?

Enter Queen Elizabeth and the Duchess of York.

Q. Eliz. Ah, my poor princes! ah, my tender babes!
My unblown flowers, new-appearing sweets!
If yet your gentle souls fly in the air,
And be not fix'd in doom perpetual,
Hover about me with your airy wings,
And hear your mother's lamentation!

Q. Mar. Hover about her; say, that right for right
Hath dimm'd your infant morn to aged night.

Duch. So many miseries have craz'd my voice,
That my woo-weather'd tongue is still and mute,—
Edward Plantagenet, why art thou dead?

Q. Mar. Plantagenet doth quit Plantagenet.
Edward for Edward pays a dying debt.

Duch. Dead life, blind sight, poor mortal-living ghost, Woe's scene, world's shame, grave's due, by life
 usurp'd,
Brief abstract and record of tedious days,
Rest thy unrest on England's lawful earth,

[Sitting down.]

Unlawfully made drunk with innocent blood!
Q. Eliz. Ah, that thou wouldst as soon afford a grave,
As thou canst yield a melancholy seat;
Then would I hide my bones, not rest them here!
Ah, who hath any cause to mourn, but we?

[Sitting down by her.]

Q. Mar. If ancient sorrow be most reverent,
Give mine the benefit of seniority,
And let my griefs frown on the upper hand.
If sorrow can admit society,

[Sitting down with them.]

Tell o'er your woes again by viewing mine:—
I had an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him;
I had a husband, till a Richard kill'd him;
Thou hast an Edward, till a Richard kill'd him;
Thou hast a Richard, till a Richard kill'd him.
Duch. I had a Richard too, and thou didst kill him;
I had a Rutland too, thou holp'st to kill him.

Q. Mar. Thou hast a Clarence too, and Richard kill'd him.

From forth the kennel of thy womb hath crept
A hell-hound, that doth hunt us all to death:
That dog, that had his teeth before his eyes,
To worry lambs, and lap their gentle blood;
That excellent grand tyrant of the earth,
That reigns in galled eyes of weeping souls,
Thy womb let loose, to chase us to our graves.—
O upright, just, and true-disposing God,
How do I thank thee, that this carnal cur
Preys on the issue of his mother's body,
And makes her pew-fellow with others' moan!

Duch. O, Harry's wife, triumph not in my woes;
Heaven witness with me, I have wept for thine.

Q. Mar. Bear with me, I am hungry for revenge,
And now I cloie me with beholding it.
Thy Edward he is dead, that kill'd my Edward;
Thy other Edward dead to quit my Edward;

Scene IV. — Before the Palace.

Enter Queen Margaret.

Q. Mar. So, now prosperity begins to mellow,
And drop into the rotten mouth of death.
Here in these confines silly have I lurk'd,

5 The country in which Richmond had taken refuge.

4 Bishop of Ely.
Young York he is but boot, is, because both they Match not the high perfection of my loss.
Thy Clarence he is dead, that stabb'd my Edward;
And the beholders of this tragick play,
The adulterate Hastings, Rivers, Vaughan. Grey,
Untimely smoother'd in their dusky graves.
Richard yet lives, hell's black intelligence;
Only reserv'd their factor to buy souls,
And send them thither: But at hand, at hand,
Ensues his pitious and un pity'd end:
Earth gapes, hell burns, fiends roar, saints pray,
To have him suddenly convey'd from hence: —
Cancel his bond of life, great God, I pray,
That I may live to say, The dog is dead!

_Q. Eliz._ O, thou didst prophesy the time would come,
That I should wish for thee to help me curse
That bottled spider, that foul bunch-back'd toad.

_Q. Mar._ I call'd thee then, vain flourish of my fortune;
I call'd thee then, poor shadow, painted queen;
The presentation of but what I was,
The flattering index of a dainty pageant,
One hea'd a high, to be hurl'd down below:
A mother only mock'd with two fair babes;
A dream of what thou wast; a garish flag,
To be the aim of every dangerous shot;
A sign of dignity, a breath, a bubble;
A queen in jest, only to fill the scene.
Where is thy husband now? where be thy brothers?
Where be thy two sons? wherein dost thou joy?
Who sue's, and kneels, and says — God save the queen?
Where be the bending peers that flatter'd thee?
Where be the strangling troops that follow'd thee?
Decline all this, and see what now thou art.
For happy wife, a most distrest widow;
For joyful mother, one that wails the name;
For one being sued to, one that humbly sue's;
For queen, a very ciattif crown'd with care;
For one that scorn'd at me, now scorn'd of me;
For one being fear'd of all, now fearing one;
For one commanding all, obey'd of none.
Thus hath the course of justice wheel'd about,
And left thee but a very prey to time;
Having no more but thought of what thou wert,
To torture thee the more, being what thou art.
Thou didst usurp my place; and dost thou not
Usurp the just proportion of my sorrow?
Now thy proud neck bears half my burden'd yoke;
From which even here I slip my weather'd head,
And leave the burden of it all on thee.
Farewell, York's wife, — and queen of sad mischance,—
These English woes shall make me smile in France.

_Q. Eliz._ O thou well skill'd in curses, stay a while,
And teach me how to curse mine enemies!

_Q. Mar._ Forbear to sleep the night, and fast the day;
Compare dead happiness with living woe;
Think that thy babes were fairer than they were,
And he that slew them, fouler than he is:
Bettering thy loss makes the bad-causer worse;
Revolving this will teach thee how to curse.

_Q. Eliz._ My words are dull, O, quicken them with thine!

_Q. Mar._ Thy woes will make them sharp, and pierce like mine.
[Exit Q. MARGARET.

_Duch._ Why should calamity be full of words?

_Q. Eliz._ Windy attornies to their client woes,
Airy succedors of intestine joys,
Poor breathing orators of miseries!
Let them have scope: though what they do impart
Help nothing else, yet do they ease the heart.

_Duch._ If so, then be not tongue-ty'd: go with me,
And in the breath of bitter words let's smother
My cruel son, that thy two sweet sons smother'd.

I hear his drum, — be copious in exclaims.

_Enter KING RICHARD, and his Train, marching._

_K. Rich._ Who intercepts me in my expedition?

_Duch._ O, she, that might have intercepted thee,
By strangling thee in her unhappy womb,
From all the slaughters, wretched, that thou hast done.

_Q. Eliz._ Hid'st thou that forehead with a golden crown,
Where should be branded, if that right were right,
The slaughter of the prince that ow'd that crown,
And the dire death of my poor sons and brothers?
Tell me, thou villain-slave, where are my children?

_Duch._ Thou toad, thou toad, where is thy brother Clarence?
And little Ned Plantagenet, his son?

_Q. Eliz._ Where is the gentle Rivers, Vaughan, Grey?

_Duch._ Where is kind Hastings?

_K. Rich._ A flourish, trumpets! — strike alarum, drums!
Let not the heavens hear these tell-tale women
Rail on the Lord's anointed: Strike, I say, —

[Flourish Alarums.
Either be patient, and entreat me fair,
Or with the clamorous report of war
Thus will I drown your exclamations.

_Duch._ Art thou my son?

_K. Rich._ Ay; I thank heaven, my father, and yourself.

_Duch._ Then patiently hear my impatience.

_K. Rich._ Madam, I have a touch of your condition
That cannot brook the accent of reproof.

_Duch._ O, let me speak.

_K. Rich._ Do, then; but I'll not hear.

_Duch._ I will be mild and gentle in my words.

_K. Rich._ And brief, good mother; for I am in haste.

_Duch._ Art thou so hasty? I have staid for thee,
Heaven knows, in torment and in agony.

_K. Rich._ And came I not at last to comfort you?

_Duch._ No, by the holy rood, I know'st it well,
Thou cam'st on earth to make the earth my hell.
A grievous burden was thy birth to me;
Tetchy and wayward was thy infancy;
Thy school-days, frightful, desperate, wild, and furious;
Thy prime of manhood, daring, bold, and venturous;
Thy age confirm'd, proud, subtle, sly, and bloody,
More mild, but yet more harmful, kind in hatred.
What comfortable hour causeth thou name,
That ever grace'd me in thy company?

_K. Rich._ Faith none, but Humphrey Hour, that call'd thy grace
To breakfast once, forth of my company.
If I be so disgracious in your sight,
Let me march on, and not offend you, madam.

Strike up the drum.

1 Owned.  3 Cross.  2 Disposition.  4 Touchy, fretful.
Scene IV.

KING RICHARD III.

DUCH. | I pr'ythee, hear me speak.
DUCH. | Hear me a word; for I shall never speak to thee again.
DUCH. | Either thou wilt die, by God's just ordinance,
Ere from this war thou turn a conqueror; or I will wight and extreme age shall perish,
And never look upon thy face again.
Therefore, take with thee my most heavy curse;
Which, in the day of battle, tire thee more,
Than all the complete armour that thou wear'st!
My prayers on the adverse party fight;
And there the little souls of Edward's children
Whisper the spirits of thine enemies,
And promise them success and victory.
Bloody thou art, bloody will be thy end;
Shame serves thy life, and doth thy death attend.

[Exit.]

Q. Eliz. | Though far more cause, yet much less spirit to curse
Abides in me; I say amen to her.
K. Rich. | Stay, madam, I must speak a word with you.
Q. Eliz. | I have no more sons of the royal blood,
For thee to murder: for my daughters, Richard,
They shall be praying nuns, not weeping queens;
And therefore level not to hit their lives.
K. Rich. | You have a daughter call'd — Elizabeth,
Virtuous and fair, rival and gracious.
Q. Eliz. | And must she die for this? O, let her live,
And I'll corrupt her manners, stain her beauty;
Slander myself, as false to Edward's bed;
Throw over her the veil of infancy;
So she may live uncour'd of bleeding slaughter,
I will confess she was not Edward's daughter.
K. Rich. | Wrong not her birth, she is of royal blood,
Q. Eliz. | To save her life, I'll say — she is not so.
K. Rich. | Her life is safest only in her birth.
Q. Eliz. | And only in that safety died her brothers.
K. Rich. | Lo, at their births, good stars were opposite.
Q. Eliz. | No, to their lives bad friends were contrary.
K. Rich. | All unavoided 5 is the doom of destiny.
Q. Eliz. | True, when avoided grace makes destiny;
My babes were destin'd to a fairer death,
If grace had bless'd thee with a fairer life.
K. Rich. | You speak, as if that I had slain my cousins.
Q. Eliz. | Cousins, indeed; and by their uncle cozen'd
Of comfort, kingdom, kindred, freedom, life,
Whose hands soever lanc'd their tender hearts,
Thy head, all indirectly, gave direction;
No doubt the murderous knife was dull and blunt,
Till it was whetted on thy stone-hard heart,
To revel in the entrails of my lambs.
But that still 6 use of grief makes wild grief tame,
My tongue should to thy ears no name my boys,
Till that my nails were anchor'd in thine eyes;
And I, in such a desperate bay of death,
Like a poor bark, of sails and tackling reef,
Rush all to pieces on thy rocky bosom.
K. Rich. | Madam, so thrive I in my enterprise,
And dangerous success of bloody wars,
As I intend more good to you and yours,
Than ever you or yours by me were harm'd!

Q. Eliz. | What good is cover'd with the face of heaven,
To be discover'd, that can do me good?
Q. Eliz. | Up to some scaffold, there to lose their heads?
K. Rich. | No, to the dignity and height of fortune,
The high imperial type of this earth's glory,
Q. Eliz. | Flatter my sorrows with report of it;
Tell me, what state, what dignity, what honour,
Canst thou demise? to any child of mine?
K. Rich. | Even all I have; ay, and myself and all,
Will I withal endow a child of thine;
So in the Lethe of thy angry soul
Thou drown the sad remembrance of those wrongs,
Which thou supposest, I have done to thee.
Q. Eliz. | Be brief; lest that the process of thy kindness
Last longer telling than thy kindness' date.
K. Rich. | Then know, that from my soul I love thy daughter.
Q. Eliz. | My daughter's mother thinks it with her soul.
K. Rich. | What do you think?
Q. Eliz. | That thou dost love my daughter from thy soul.
So, from thy soul's love, didst thou love her brothers,
And, from my heart's love, I do thank thee for it.
K. Rich. | Be not so hasty to confound my meaning:
I mean, that with my soul I love thy daughter,
And do intend to make her queen of England.
Q. Eliz. | Well then, who dost thou mean shall be her king?
K. Rich. | Even he, that makes her queen: Who else should be?
Q. Eliz. | What, thou?
K. Rich. | Even so; what think you of it, madam?
Q. Eliz. | How canst thou woo her?
K. Rich. | That I would learn of you,
As one being best acquainted with her humour.
Q. Eliz. | And wilt thou learn of me?
K. Rich. | Madam, with all my heart.
Q. Eliz. | Send to her, by the man that slew her brothers,
A pair of bleeding hearts; thereon engrave,
Edward, and York; then, haply 7 will she weep:
Therefore present to her, — as sometime Margaret Did to thy father, steep'd in Rutland's blood,—
A handkerchief; which, say to her, did drain
The purple sap from her sweet brother's body,
And bid her wipe her weeping eyes withal.
If this inducement move her not to love,
Send her a letter of thy noble deeds;
Tell her, thou mad'st away her uncle Clarence,
Her uncle Rivers; ay, and for her sake,
Mad'st quick conveyance with her good aunt Anne.
K. Rich. | You mock me, madam; this is not the way
To win your daughter.
Q. Eliz. | There is no other way;
Unless thou couldst put on some other shape,
And not be Richard that hath done all this.
K. Rich. | Say, that I did all this for love of her?
Q. Eliz. | Nay, then indeed, she cannot choose but have thee,
Having bought love with such a bloody spoil.
K. Rich. | Look, what is done cannot be now amended;
7 Requiem. 8 Perhaps.
Men shall deal unadvisedly sometimes,
Which after-hours give leisure to repent.
If I did take the kingdom from your sons,
To make amends, I'll give it to your daughter.
A grandam's name is little less in love,
Than is the doting title of a mother!
They are as children, but one step below.
Your children were vexation to your youth,
But mine shall be a comfort to your age.
The loss you have, is but — a son being king,
And, by that loss, your daughter is made queen.
I cannot make you what amends I would,
Therefore accept such kindness as I can.
Dorset, your son, that, with a fearful soul,
Leads discontented steps in foreign soil,
This fair alliance quickly shall call home
To high promotions and great dignity:
The king, that calls your beauteous daughter—wife,
Familiarly shall call thy Dorset—brother;
Again shall you be mother to a king,
And all the ruins of distressful times
Repair'd with double riches of your own.
What! we have many goodly days to see:
The liquid drops of tears that you have shed,
Shall come again, transform'd to orient pearl;
Advantaging their loan, with interest
Of ten-times double gain of happiness.
Go then, my mother, to thy daughter go;
Make bold her bashful years with your experience:
Prepare her ears to hear a wooer's tale:
Put in her tender heart the aspiring flame
Of golden sovereignty; acquaint the princess
That, when this arm of mine hath chastised
The petty rebel, dull-brain'd Buckingham,
Bound with the triumphal garlands will I come,
And lead thy daughter to a conqueror's bed!
To whom I will retail my conquest won,
And she shall be sole vict'ress, Caesar's Caesar.

Q. Eliz. What were I best to say? her father's brother
Would be her lord? Or shall I say, her uncle?
Or, he that slew her brothers and her uncles?
Under what title shall I woo for thee,
That God, the law, my honour, and her love,
Can make seem pleasing to her tender years?

K. Rich. Infer fair England's peace by this alliance.

Q. Eliz. Which shall she purchase with still lasting

K. Rich. Tell her, the king, that may command, entreats.
Q. Eliz. That at her hands, which the king's King forbids.

K. Rich. Say, she shall be a high and mighty queen.
Q. Eliz. To wail the title, as her mother doth.

K. Rich. Say, I will love her everlasting.
Q. Eliz. How long shall that title, ever, last?

Q. Eliz. But how long fairly shall her sweet life last?

K. Rich. As long as heaven, and nature, lengthens it.
Q. Eliz. As long as hell, and Richard, likes of it.

K. Rich. Say, I, her sovereign, am her subject low.
Q. Eliz. But she, your subject, loathes such sovereignty.

K. Rich. Be eloquent, in my behalf, to her.
Q. Eliz. An honest tale speeds best, being plainly told.

K. Rich. Then, in plain terms tell her my loving tale.

Q. Eliz. Plain, and not honest, is too harsh a style.

K. Rich. Your reasons are too shallow, and too quick.

Q. Eliz. O, no, my reasons are too deep and death; —

Too deep and dead, poor infants, in their graves.

K. Rich. Harp not on that string, madam, that is past.

Q. Eliz. Harp on it still shall I, till heart-strings break.

Q. Eliz. Profan'd, dishonour'd, and the third usurp'd.

Q. Eliz. By nothing; for this is no oath.

Thy George, profan'd, hath lost his holy honour;
Thy garter, blemish'd, pawn'd his knightly virtue;
Thy crown, usurp'd, disgrac'd his kingly glory:
If something thou wouldst swear to be belièved,
Swear then by something that thou hast not wrong'd.

K. Rich. Now, by the world —
Q. Eliz. 'Tis full of thy foul wrongs.

K. Rich. My father's death, —
Q. Eliz. Thy life hath that dishonour'd.

K. Rich. Then, by myself, —
Q. Eliz. Thyself is self-misus'd.

K. Rich. Why then, by God, —
Q. Eliz. God's wrong is most of all,
If thou hast fear'd to break an oath by him,
The unity, the king thy brother made,
Had not been broken, nor my brother slain;
If thou hast fear'd to break an oath by him,
The imperial metal, circling now thy head,
Had grace the tender temples of my child;
And both the princes had been breathing here,
Which now, two tender bed-fellows for dust,
Thy broken faith hath made a prey for worms.
What canst thou swear by now?

K. Rich. By the time to come.
Q. Eliz. That thou hast wrong'd in the time o'er-
past;
For I myself have many tears to wash
Hereafter time, for time past, wrong'd by thee.
The children live, whose parents thou hast slaughter'd,
Ungovern'd youth, to walk it in their age:
The parents live, whose children thou hast butcher'd,
Old barren plants, to walk it in their age:
Swear not by time to come; for that thou hast
Misus'd, ere us'd, by times ill-us'd o'er-past.

K. Rich. As I intend to prosper, and repent,
So thrive I in my dangerous attempt
Of hostile arms! myself myself confound!
Heaven, and fortune, bar me happy hours!
Day yield me not thy light; nor, night, thy rest!
Be opposite all planets of good luck
To my proceeding, if, with pure heart's love,
Immaculate devotion, holy thoughts,
I tender not thy beauteous princely daughter!
In her consists my happiness, and thine;
Without her, follows to myself, and thee,
Herself, the land, and many a christian soul,
Death, desolation, ruin, and decay:
It cannot be avoided, but by this;
It will not be avoided, but by this.
Therefore, dear mother, (I must call you so,)
Be the attorney of my love to her.
Plead what I will be, not what I have been;
Not my deserts, but what I will deserve:

1 The ensigns of the Order of the Garter.
Scene IV.

KING RICHARD III.

Urge the necessity and state of times,
And be not peevish * found in great designs.
Q. Eliz. Shall I be tempted of the devil thus?
K. Rich. Ay, if the devil tempt thee to do good.
Q. Eliz. Shall I forget myself to be myself?
K. Rich. Ay, if yourself's remembrance wrong yourself.
Q. Eliz. Shall I go win my daughter to thy will?
K. Rich. And be a happy mother by the deed.
Q. Eliz. I go. —Write to me very shortly,
And you shall understand from me her mind.
K. Rich. Bear her my true love's kiss, and so farewell.
Relenting fool, and shallow, changing — woman!
How now? what news?

Enter Ratcliff; Catesby following.

Rat. Most mighty sovereign, on the western coast
Rideth a puissant navy; to the shore
Throng many doubtful hollow-hearted friends,
Unarm'd, and unresolv'd to beat them back:
'Tis thought that Richmond is their admiral;
And there they hull, expecting but the aid.
Of Buckingham, to welcome them ashore.
K. Rich. Some light-foot friend post to the duke of Norfolk: —
Ratcliff, thyself, — or Catesby; where is he?
Cate. Here, my good lord.
Cate. I will, my lord, with all convenient haste,
K. Rich. Ratcliff, come hither: Post to Salisbury;
When thou com'st thither, — Dull unmindful villain,

[To Catesby.
Why stay'st thou here, and go'st not to the duke?
Cate. First, mighty liege, tell me your highness' pleasure,
What from your grace I shall deliver to him.
K. Rich. O, true, good Catesby; — Bid him levy straight
The greatest strength and power he can make,
And meet me suddenly at Salisbury.
Cate. I go.

[Exit Ratcliff.
K. Rich. My mind is chang'd. — Stanley, what news
with you?
Stan. None good, my liege, to please you with the hearing;
Nor none so bad, but well may be reported.
K. Rich. Heyday, a riddle! neither good nor bad!
That need'st thou run so many miles about,
When thou may'st tell thy tale the nearest way?
Once more, what news?
Stan. Richmond is on the sees.
K. Rich. There let him sink, and be the seas on him!
White-liver'd runagate, what doth he there?
Stan. I know not, mighty sovereign, but by guess.
K. Rich. Well, as you guess?
Stan. Stirr'd up by Dorset, Buckingham, and Morton,
He makes for England, here to claim the crown.
K. Rich. Is the chair empty? is the sword un-sway'd?

Is the king dead? the empire unpossess'd?
What heir of York is there alive, but we?
And who is England's king, but great York's heir?
Then, tell me, what makes he upon the seas?
Stan. Unless for that, my liege, I cannot guess.
K. Rich. Unless for that he comes to be your liege,
You cannot guess wherefore the Welshman comes.
Thou wilt revolt, and fly to him, I fear.
Stan. No, mighty liege; therefore mistrust me not.
K. Rich. Where is thy power then, to beat him back?
Where be thy tenants, and thy followers?
Are they not now upon the western shore,
Safe-conducting the rebels from their ships?
Stan. No, my good lord, my friends are in the north.
K. Rich. Cold friends to me: what do they in the north,
When they should serve their sovereign in the west?
Stan. They have not been commanded, mighty
king:
Pleaseth your majesty to give me leave,
I'll muster up my friends; and meet your grace,
Where, and what time, your majesty shall please.
K. Rich. Ay, ay, thou wouldst be one to join with Richmond:
I will not trust you, sir.
Stan. Most mighty sovereign,
You have no cause to hold my friendship doubtful;
I never was, nor never will be false.
K. Rich. Well, go, muster men. But, hear you, leave behind
Your son, George Stanley; look your heart be firm,
Or else his head's assurance is but frail.
Stan. So deal with him, as I prove true to you.

[Exit Stanley.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My gracious sovereign, now in Devonshire,
As I by friends am well advertised,
Sir Edward Courteney, and the haughty prelate,
Bishop of Exeter, his elder brother,
With many more confederates, are in arms.

Enter another Messenger.

2 Mess. In Kent, my liege, the Guildfords are in arms;
And every hour more competitors* Flock to the rebels, and their power grows strong.

Enter another Messenger.

3 Mess. My lord, the army of great Buckingham — K. Rich. Out on ye, owls! nothing but songs of death? [He strikes him.
There, take thou that, till thou bring better news.
3 Mess. The news I have to tell your majesty,
Is, — that, by sudden floods and fall of waters,
Buckingham's army is dispers'd and scatter'd;
And he himself wander'd away alone,
No man knows whither.
K. Rich. O, I cry you mercy:
There is my purse to cure that blow of thine.
Hath any well-advised friend proclaim'd
Reward to him that brings the traitor in?
3 Mess. Such proclamation hath been made, my liege.

Enter another Messenger.

4 Mess. Sir Thomas Lovel, and lord marquis
Dorset,

* Foolish.
"Tis said, my liege, in Yorkshire are in arms. But this good comfort bring I to your highess,—

The Bretagne navy is dispers'd by tempests:

Richmond, in Dorsetshire, sent out a boat
Unto the shore, to ask those on the banks,
If they were his assistants, yea, or no;
Who answer'd him, they came from Buckingham
Upon his party; he, mistrusting them,
Hois'd sail, and made his course again for Bretagne.

K. Rich. March on, march on, since we are up
in arms;
If not to fight with foreign enemies,
Yet to beat down these rebels here at home.

Enter Catesby.

Cate. My liege, the duke of Buckingham is taken,
That is the best news; That the earl of Richmond
Is with a mighty power landed at Milford,
Is colder news, but yet they must be told.

K. Rich. Away towards Salisbury; while we reason here,
A royal battle might be won and lost:—
Some one take order, Buckingham be brought
To Salisbury;—the rest march on with me.
[Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Salisbury. An open Place.

Enter the Sheriff, and Guard, with Buckingham, led to Execution.

Buck. Will not king Richard let me speak with him?
Sher. No, my good lord; therefore be patient.

Buck. Hastings, and Edward's children, Rivers,
Grey,
Holy king Henry, and thy fair son Edward,
Vaughan, and all that have miscarried
By underhand corrupted foul injustice;
If that your moody discontented souls
Do through the clouds behold this present hour
Even for revenge mock my destruction! —
This is All-Soul's day, fellows, is it not?

Sher. It is, my lord.

Buck. Why, then All-Souls' day is my body's doomsday.

This is the day, which, in king Edward's time,
I wish'd might fall on me, when I was found
False to his children, or his wife's allies:
This is the day, wherein I wish'd to fall
By the false faith of him whom most I trusted;
This, this All-Souls' day to my fearful soul,
Is the determined respite of my wrongs. *

That high All-seer which I dallied with,
Hath turned my reigned prayer on my head,
And given in earnest what I begged in jest.
Thus doth he force the swords of wicked men
To turn their own points on their masters' bosoms:
Thus Margaret's curse falls heavy on my neck,—

When he, quoth she, shall split thy heart with sorrow,
Remember Margaret was a prophetess. —

Come, sirs, convey me to the block of shame;
Wrong hath but wrong, and blame the due of blame.
[Exeunt Buckingham, &c.

SCENE II. — Plain near Tamworth.

Enter, with Drum and Colours, Richmond, Oxford, Sir James Blunt, Sir Walter Herbert, and others, with Forces, marching.

Richm. Fellows in arms, and my most loving friends,
Brui's'd underneath the yoke of tyranny,
Thus far into the bowels of the land
Have we march'd on without impediment;
And here receive we from our father Stanley
Lines of fair comfort and encouragement.

The wretched, bloody, and usurping boar,
That spoil'd your summer fields, and fruitful vines,
Lies now even in the center of this isle,
Near to the town of Leicester, as we learn:
From Tamworth thither, is but one day's march.
In God's name, cheerly on, courageous friends,
To reap the harvest of perpetual peace
By this one bloody trial of sharp war.

Oxf. Every man's conscience is a thousand swords,
To fight against that bloody homicide.

Herb. I doubt not, but his friends will turn to us.

Blunt. He hath no friends, but who are friends for fear;
Which, in his dearest need, will fly from him.

Richm. All for our vantage. Then, in God's name,
march. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. — Bosworth Field.

Enter King Richard, and Forces; the Duke of Norfolk, Earl of Surrey, and others.

K. Rich. Here pitch our tents, even here in Bosworth field. —

My lord of Surrey, why look you so sad?

* Injurious practices.

5 Chaplain to the countess of Richmond.

6 A frank is a sty in which hogs are fattened.
Scene III.

KING RICHARD III.

Sir. My heart is ten times lighter than my looks.
Nor. Here, most gracious liege.
K. Rich. Norfolk, we must have knocks; Ha! must we not?
Nor. We must both give and take, my loving lord.
K. Rich. Up with my tent: Here will I lie to-night.

[Soldiers begin to set up the King's tent.

But where, to-morrow? — Well, all's one for that. —
Who hath described the number of the traitors?
Nor. Six or seven thousand is their utmost power.
K. Rich. Why, our battalia trebles that account:
Besides, the king's name is a tower of strength,
Which they upon the adverse faction want.
Up with the tent. — Come, noble gentlemen,
Let us survey the vantage of the ground; —
Call for some men of sound directions: —
Let's wait no discipline, make no delay;
For, lords, to-morrow is a busy day.

[Exeunt.

Enter, on the other side of the Field, Richmond, Sir William Brandon, Oxford, and other lords.

Some of the soldiers pitch Richmond's Tent.

Rich. The weary sun hath made a golden set,
And, by the bright track of his fiery car,
Gives token of a goodly day to-morrow.
Sir William Brandon, you shall bear my standard.
Give me some ink and paper in my tent; —
I'll draw the form and model of our battle,
Limit each leader to his several charge,
And part in just proportion our small power.
And you, sir Walter Herbert, stay with me:
The earl of Pembroke keeps his regiment; —
Good captain Blunt, bear my good night to him,
And by the second hour in the morning
Desire the earl to see me in my tent: —
Yet one thing more, good captain, do for me;
Where is lord Stanley quarter'd, do you know?
Blunt. Unless I have mista'en his colours much,
(Which, well I am assur'd, I have not done),
His regiment lies half a mile at least
South from the mighty power of the king.
Rich. If without peril it be possible,
Sweet Blunt, make some good means to speak with him,
And give him from me this most needful note.
Blunt. Upon my life, my lord, I'll undertake it;
And so, heaven give you quiet rest to night! —
Rich. Good night, good captain Blunt. Come, gentlemen,
Let us consult upon to-morrow's business;
In to my tent, the air is raw and cold.

[They withdraw into the Tent.

Enter, to his Tent, King Richard, Norfolk, Ratcliff, and Catesby.

K. Rich. What is o'clock?
Cate. It's supper time, my lord:
It's nine o'clock.
K. Rich. I will not sup to-night.
Give me some ink and paper. —
What is my beaver easier than it was? —
And all my armour laid into my tent?
Cate. It is, my liege; and all things are in readiness.
K. Rich. Good Norfolk, bide thee to thy charge;
Use careful watch, choose trusty sentinels.
Nor. I go, my lord.

K. Rich. Stir with the 'lark to-morrow, gentle Norfolk.
Nor. I warrant you, my lord.
K. Rich. Ratcliff, —
Rat. My lord?
K. Rich. Send out a pursuivant at arms
To Stanley's regiment; bid him bring his power
Before sun-rising, lest his son George fall
Into the blind cave of eternal night.
— Fill me a bowl of wine. — Give me a watch? —

[To Catesby.

Saddle white Surrey for the field to-morrow. —
Look that my staves be sound, and not too heavy.
Ratcliff.
Rat. My lord?
K. Rich. Saw'st thou the melancholy lord Northumberland?
Rat. Thomas the earl of Surrey, and himself,
Much about cock-shut time, from troop to troop
Went through the army, cheering up the soldiers.
K. Rich. I am satisfied. Give me a bowl of wine:
I have not that acclivity of spirit,
Nor cheer of mind, that I was wont to have. —
So, set it down. — Is ink and paper ready?
Rat. It is, my lord.
K. Rich. Bid my guard watch; leave me.
About the mid of night, come to my tent,
And help to arm me. — Leave me, I say.

[King Richard retires into his Tent.

[Exeunt Ratcliff and Catesby.

Richmond's Tent opens, and discovers him, and his officers, &c.

Enter Stanley.
Stan. Fortune and victory sit on thy helm! —
Rich. All comfort that the dark night can afford,
Be to thy person, noble father-in-law?
Tell me, how fares our loving mother?
Stan. I, by attorney, bless thee from thy mother,
Who prays continually for Richmond's good:
So much for that. — The silent hours steal on,
And flaky darkness breaks within the east.
In brief, for so the season bids us be,
Prepare thy battle early in the morning;
And put thy fortune to the argument
Of bloody strokes, of mortal-staring war.
I, as I may, (that which I would, I cannot)
With best advantage will deceive the time,
And aid thee in this doubtful shock of arms:
But on thy side I may not be too forward,
Lest, being seen, thy brother tender George
Be executed in his father's sight.
Farewell! The leisure and the fearful time
Cuts off the ceremonious vows of love,
And ample interchange of sweet discourse,
Which so long-sunder'd friends should dwell upon;
Heaven give us leisure for these friendly rites!
Once more, advise: — Be valiant, and speed well.
Rich. Good lords, conduct him to his regiment;
I'll strive, with troubled thoughts, to take a nap;
Lest leader slumber pease! I me down to-morrow,
When I should mount with wings of victory:
Once more, good night, kind lords and gentlemen.

[Exeunt Lords, &c. with Stanley.

O Thou! whose captain I account myself,
Look on my forces with a gracious eye;
Put in their hands thy bruising irons of wrath,
That they may crush down with a heavy fall
7 A watch-light.
8 Wood of the lances.
9 Twilight.
10 Weigh.

O o 2
The usurping helmets of our adversaries!
Make us thy ministers of chastisement,
That we may praise thee in thy victory!
To thee I do commend my watchful soul,
Ere I let fall the windows of mine eyes;
Sleeping, and waking, O, defend me still! [Sleeps.

The Ghost of Prince Edward, son to Henry the Sixth, rises between the two Tents.

Ghost. Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow! [To King Richard.

Think, how thou stab'dst me in my prime of youth.
At Tewksbury; Despair, therefore, and die!—

Be cheerful, Richard; for the wrunged souls
Of butcher'd princes fight in thy behalf:
King Henry's issue, Richard, comforts thee.

The Ghost of King Henry the Sixth rises.

Ghost. When I was mortal, my anointed body
By thee was punched full of deadly holes:
Think on the Tower, and me; Despair, and die!—
Harry the Sixth bids thee despair and die. —
Virtuous and holy, be thou conqueror!

Harry, that prophesied thou shouldst be king,
Doth comfort thee in thy sleep; Live, and flourish!

The Ghost of Clarence rises.

Ghost. Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow! [To King Richard.

I, that was wash'd to death with fulsome wine,
Poor Clarence, by thy guile betray'd to death!
To-morrow in the battle think on me,
And fall thy edgeless sword; Despair, and die!—
Thou offspring of the house of Lancaster.

[To Richmond.

The wronged heirs of York do pray for thee;
Good angels guard thy battle! Live, and flourish!

The Ghosts of Rivers, Grey, and Vaughan, rise.

Riv. Let me sit heavy on thy soul to-morrow,
[To King Richard.

Rivers, that died at Pomfret! Despair, and die!—
Grey. Think upon Grey, and let thy soul despair!
[To King Richard.

Vaugh. Think upon Vaughan; and, with guilty fear,
Let fall thy lance! Despair, and die!—
[To King Richard.

All. Awake! and think, our wrongs in Richard's bosom
[To Richmond.
Will conquer him; — Awake, and win the day!

The Ghost of Hastings rises.

Ghost. Bloody and guilty, guiltily awake;
[To King Richard.

And in a bloody battle end thy days!
Think on lord Hastings; and despair, and die!—
Quiet untroubled soul, awake, awake! —
[To Richmond.

Arm, fight, and conquer, for fair England's sake!

The Ghosts of the two young Princes rise.

Ghosts. Dream on thy cousins smother'd in the Tower;

Let us be lead within thy bosom, Richard,
And weigh thee down to ruin, shame, and death!
Thy nephews' souls bid thee despair, and die. —

Sleep, Richmond, sleep in peace, and wake in joy;
Good angels guard thee from the boar's annoy!
Live, and beget a happy race of kings!
Edward's unhappy sons do bid thee flourish.

The Ghost of Queen Anne rises.

Ghost. Richard, thy wife, that wretched Anne thy wife,
That never slept a quiet hour with thee,
Now fills thy sleep with perturbations:
To-morrow in the battle think on me,
And fall thy edgeless sword; Despair, and die!—
Thou, quiet soul, sleep thou a quiet sleep;

[To Richmond.

Dream of success and happy victory;
Thy adversary's wife doth pray for thee.

The Ghost of Buckingham rises.

Ghost. The first was I, that help'd thee to the crown;
[To King Richard.

The last was I, that felt thy tyranny;
O, in the battle think on Buckingham,
And die in terror of thy guiltiness!
Dream on, dream on, of bloody deeds and death;
Fainting, despair; despairing, yield thy breath! —
I died for hope, ere I could lend thee aid:

[To Richmond.

But cheer thy heart, and be thou not dismay'd:
God, and good angels, fight on Richmond's side;
And Richard falls in height of all his pride.

[The Ghosts vanish. King Richard starts out of his dream.

K. Rich. Give me another horse, — bind up my wounds,
Have mercy, Jesu! — Soft; I did but dream.
O coward conscience, how dost thou afflict me! —
The lights burn blue. — It is now dead midnight.
Cold fearful drops stand on my trembling flesh.
What do I fear? myself? there's none else by:
Richard loves Richard; that is, I am I.
Is there a murderer here? No; — Yes; I am:
Then fly, — What, from myself? Great reason:
Why?
Lest I revenge. What? Myself on myself?
I love myself. Wherefore? for any good,
That I myself have done unto myself?
O, no: alas, I rather hate myself,
For hateful deeds committed by myself.
I am a villain: Yet I lie, I am not.
Fool, of thyself speak well: — Fool, do not flatter.
My conscience hath a thousand several tongues,
And every tongue brings in a several tale,
And every tale condemns me for a villain.
Perjury, perjury, in the high'st degree,
Murder, stern murder, in the dirst degree;
All several sins, all us'd in each degree,
Throng to the bar, crying all, — Guilty! guilty! I shall despair. — There is no creature loves me;
And, if I die, no soul will pity me: —
Nay, wherefore should they? since that I myself Find in myself no pity to myself.
Methought, the souls of all that I had murder'd Came to my tent: and every one did threat To-morrow's vengeance on the head of Richard.

Enter Ratcliff.

Rat. My lord,
K. Rich. Who's there?
Rat. Ratcliff, my lord; 'tis I. The early village cock
Hath twice done salutation to the morn;
Your friends are up, and buckler on their armour.
K. Rich. O, Ratcliff, I have dream'd a fearful dream!
What thinkest thou? will our friends prove all true?
Rat. No doubt, my lord.
K. Rich. Ratcliff, I fear, I fear,—
Rat. Nay, good my lord, be not afraid of shadows.
K. Rich. By the apostle Paul, shadows to-night
Have struck more terror to the soul of Richard,
That can the substance of ten thousand soldiers,
Armed in proof, and led by shallow Richmond.
It is not yet near day. Come, go with me;
Under our tents I'll play the eaves-dropper,
To hear, if any mean to shrink from me.
[Exeunt King Richard and Ratcliff.

Richmond wakes. Enter Oxford and others.

Lords. Good morrow, Richmond.
Richm. Cry mercy, lords, and watchful gentlemen,
That you have taken a tardy sluggard here.
Lords. How have you slept, my lord?
Richm. The sweetest sleep, and fairest-boding dreams,
That ever enter'd in a drowsy head,
Have since your departure had, my lords.
Methought, their souls, whose bodies Richard murdered,
Came to my tent, and cried — On! victory!
I promise you, my heart is very jocund
In the remembrance of so fair a dream.
How far into the morning is it, lords?
Lords. Upon the stroke of four.
Richm. Why, then! With time to them, and give direction.—[He advances to the Troops.
More than I have said, loving countrymen,
The leisure and enforcement of the time
Forbids to dwell on: Yet remember this,—
God, and our good cause, fight upon our side;
The prayers of holy saints, and wronged souls,
Like high-rear'd bulwarks, stand before our faces;
Richard except, those, whom we fight against,
Had rather have us win, than him they follow.
For what is he they follow? truly, gentlemen,
A bloovy tyrant, and a homicide;
One rais'd in blood, and one in blood establish'd;
One that made means to come by what he hath,
And slaughter'd those that were the means to help him;
A base foul stone, made precious by the foil
Of England's chair, where he is falsely set;
One that hath ever been God's enemy:
Then, if you fight against God's enemy,
God will vouchsafe to ward 2 you as his soldiers;
If you do sweat to put a tyrant down,
You sleep in peace, the tyrant being slain;
If you do fight against your country's foes,
Your country's fat shall pay your pains the hire;
If you do fight in safeguard of your wives,
Your wives shall welcome home the conquerors;
If you do free your children from the sword,
Your children's children quit 3 it in your age.
Then, in the name of God, and all these rights,
Advance your standards, draw your willing swords:
For me, the ransom of my bold attempt
Shall be this cold corpse on the earth's cold face;
But if I thrive, the gain of my attempt
The least of you shall share his part thereof.

Sound, drums and trumpets, boldly and cheerfully;
God, and Saint George! Richmond, and victory!
[Exeunt.

Re-enter King Richard, Ratcliff, Attendants, and Forces.

K. Rich. What said Northumberland, as touching Richmond?
Rat. That he was never trained up in arms.
K. Rich. He said the truth: And what said Surrey then?
Rat. He said, and said the better for our purpose.
K. Rich. He was i'the right; and so, indeed, it is.

Tell the clock there. — Give me a calendar.
Who saw the sun to-day?
Rat. Not I, my lord.
K. Rich. Then he disdains to shine; for, by the book,
He should have brar'd the east an hour ago:
A black day will it be to somebody.—
Ratcliff;
Rat. My lord?
K. Rich. The sun will not be seen to-day;
The sky doth frown and lour upon our army.
I would, these dewy tears were from the ground.
Not shine to-day! Why, what is that to me,
More than to Richmond? for the self-same heaven,
That frowns on me, looks sadly upon him.

Enter Norfolk.

Nor. Arm, arm, my lord; the foe vaunts in the field.
K. Rich. Come, bustle, bustle; — Caparison my horse;
Call up lord Stanley, bid him bring his power: —
I will lead forth my soldiers to the plain,
And thus my battle shall be order'd.
My foreward shall be drawn out all in length,
Consisting equally of horse and foot;
Our archers shall be placed in the midst;
John duke of Norfolk, Thomas earl of Surrey,
Shall have the leading of this foot and horse.
They thus directed, we ourselves will follow
In the main battle; whose puissance on either side
Shall be well wing'd; with our chiefest horse.
This, and Saint George to boot! — What think'st thou, Norfolk?
Nor. A good direction, warlike sovereign.
— This found I on my tent this morning.

[Giving a Scroll.
K. Rich. Jacky of Norfolk be not too bold, [Reads.
For Dickon 4 thy master is bought and sold.
A thing devised by the enemy. —
Go, gentlemen, every man unto his charge:
Let not our babbling dreams affright our souls:
Conscience is but a word that cowards use,
Devis'd at first to keep the strong in awe;
Our strong arms be our conscience, swords our law.
March on, join bravely, let us to't pell-mell;
If not to heaven, then hand in hand to hell.—
What shall I say more than I have inferr'd?
Remember whom you are to cope withal; —
A sort 5 of vagabonds, rascals, and run-aways,
A scum of Bretagnes, and base lackey peasants,
Whom their o'er-cloyed country vomits forth
To desperate ventures and assur'd destruction.
You sleeping safe, they bring you to unrest;
You having lands, and bless'd with beau'tious wives,

1 The ancient familiarization of Richard. 5 Company.
They would restrain the one, disdain the other.
And who doth lead them, but a paltry fellow,
Long kept in Bretagne at our mother's cost?
A milk-sop, one that never in his life
Felt so much cold as over shoes in snow?
Let's whip these stragglers o'er the seas again;
Lash hence these over-weening rags of France,
These famish'd beggars, weary of their lives;
Who, but for dreaming on this fond exploit,
For want of means, poor rats, had hang'd themselves:
If we be conquer'd, let men conquer us,
And not these bastard Bretagnes; whom our fathers
Have in their own land beaten, bobb'd, and thump'd,
And, on record, left them the heirs of shame.
Shall these enjoy our lands? lie with our wives?
Ravish our daughters? — Hark, I hear their drum.

Enter a Messenger.

What says lord Stanley? will he bring his power?
Mess. My lord, he doth deny to come.
K. Rich. Off' instantly with his son George's head.
Nor. My lord, the enemy is pass'd the marsh;
After the battle let George Stanley die.
K. Rich. A thousand hearts are great within my bosom:
Advance our standards, set upon our foes;
Our ancient word of courage, fair Saint George,
Inspire us with the spleen of fiery dragons!
Upon them! Victory sits on our helms.

SCENE IV. — Another Part of the Field.

Alarum: Excursions. Enter Norfolk, and Forces; to him Catesby.

Cate. Rescue, my lord of Norfolk rescue, rescue!
The king enacts more wonders than a man,
Daring an opposite to every danger;
His horse is slain, and all on foot he fights,
Seeking for Richmond in the throat of death:
Rescue, fair lord, or else the day is lost!

Alarum. Enter King Richard.

K. Rich. A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse!
Cate. Withdraw, my lord, I'll help you to a horse.
K. Rich. Slave, I have set my life upon a cast,
And I will stand the hazard of the die:
I think there be six Richmonds in the field;
Five have I slain to-day, instead of him: —
A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse!

[Execut.]

Alarum. Enter King Richard and Richmond; and execut fighting. Retreat, and Flourish. Then enter Richmond, Stanley bearing the Crown, with divers other Lords, and Forces.

Richm. God, and your arms, be prais'd, victorious friends;
The day is ours, the bloody dog is dead.
Stan. Courageous Richmond, well hast thou acquit thee!
Lo, here, this long-usurped royalty,
From the dead temples of this bloody wretch
Have I pluck'd off, to grace thy brows withal;
Wear it, enjoy it, and make much of it.

Richm. Great God of heaven, say, amen, to all: —
But, tell me first, is young George Stanley living?
Stan. He is, my lord, and safe in Leicester town,
Whither, if it please you, we may now withdraw us.

Richm. What men of name are slain on either side?
Stan. John duke of Norfolk, Walter lord Ferrers,
Sir Robert Brackenbury, and sir William Brandon.

Richm. Inter their bodies as becomes their births.
Proclaim a pardon to the soldiers fled,
That in submission will return to us;
And, then, as we have ta'en the sacrament,
We will unite the white rose with the red: —
Smile heaven upon this fair conjunction,
That long hath frown'd upon their enmity! —
What traitor hears me, and says not — Amen?
England hath long been mad, and scarr'd herself;
The brother blindly shed the brother's blood,
The father rashly slaughter'd his own son,
The son, compell'd, been butcher to the sire;
All this divided York and Lancaster,
Divided, in their dire division. —
O, now, let Richmond and Elizabeth,
The true successors of each royal house,
By heaven's fair ordinance conjoin together!
And let their heirs, (God, if thy will be so,) Enrich the time to come with smooth-fac'd peace,
With smiling plenty, and fair prosperous days!
Abate the edge of traitors, gracious Lord,
That would reduce these bloody days again,
And make poor England weep in streams of blood!
Let them not live to taste this land's increase,
That would with treason wound this fairland's peace!
Now civil wounds are stopp'd, peace lives again;
That she may long live here, God say — Amen.

[Execut.]
KING HENRY VIII.
PERSONS REPRESENTED.

King Henry the Eighth.
Cardinal Wolsey.
Cardinal Campeius.
Capucius, Ambassador from the Emperor Charles V.
Duke of Norfolk.
Duke of Buckingham.
Duke of Suffolk.
Earl of Surrey.
Lord Chamberlain.
Lord Chancellor.
Gardiner, Bishop of Winchester.
Bishop of Lincoln.
Lord Abergavenny.
Lord Sands.
Sir Henry Guildford.
Sir Thomas Lovell.
Sir Anthony Denny.
Sir Nicholas Vaux.
Secretaries to Wolsey.
Cromwell, Servant to Wolsey.

Griffith, Gentleman-usher to Queen Katharine.
Three other Gentlemen.
Doctor Butts, Physician to the King.
Garter King at Arms.
Surveyor to the Duke of Buckingham.
Brandon, and a Sergeant at Arms.
Door-keeper of the Council-chamber.
Porter and his Man.
Page to Gardiner.
A Crier.

Queen Katharine, Wife to King Henry, afterwards divorced.
Anne Bullen, her Maid of Honour; afterwards Queen.
An old Lady, Friend to Anne Bullen.
Patience, Woman to Queen Katharine.

Several Lords and Ladies in the dumb shows; Women attending upon the Queen; Spirits, which appear to her; Scribes, Officers, Guards, and other Attendants.

Scene, chiefly in London and Westminster; once at Kimbolton.
I come no more to make you laugh; things now,
That bear a weighty and a serious brow,
Sad, high, and working, full of state and woe,
Such noble scenes as draw the eye to flow,
We now present. Those that can pity, here
May, if they think it well, let fall a tear;
The subject will deserve it. Such as give Their money out of hope they may believe,
May here find truth too. Those, that come to see
Only a show or two, and so agree,
The play may pass; if they be still and willing,
I'll undertake, may see away their shilling
Richly in two short hours. Only they,
That come to hear a merry, wanton play,
A noise of targets; or to see a fellow
In a long motley coat, guarded \(^1\) with yellow,

\(^1\) Laced.

Will be deceiv'd; for, gentle hearers, know,
To rank our chosen truth with such a show
As fool and fight is, beside forfeiting
Our own brains, and the opinion that we bring,
(To make that only true we now intend,)
Will leave us never an understanding friend.
Therefore, for goodness' sake, and as you are known
The first and happiest hearers of the town,
Be sad, as we would make ye: Think, ye see
The very persons of our noble story,
As they were living; think you see them great,
And follow'd with the general throng, and sweat,
Of thousand friends: then, in a moment, see
How soon this mightiness meets misery!
And, if you can be merry then, I'll say,
A man may weep upon his wedding day.

\(^2\) Pretend.

Enter the Duke of Norfolk, at one Door; at the other the Duke of Buckingham, and the Lord Abergavenny.

Buck. Good morrow, and well met. How have you done, since last we saw in France?

Nor. I thank your grace:

Healthful; and ever since a fresh admirer

Of what I saw there.

Buck. An untimely age

Stay’d me a prisoner in my chamber, when

Those suns of glory, those two lights of men,
Met in the vale of Arde.

Nor. ‘Twixt Guynes and Arde:

I was then present, saw them salute on horseback;

Beheld them, when they lighted, how they clung

In their embracement, as they grew together;

Which had they, what four thron’d ones could have

Weigh’d

Such a compounded one?

Buck. All the whole time

I was my chamber’s prisoner.

Nor. Then you lost

The view of earthly glory: Men might say, Till this time, pomp was single; but now married To one above itself. Each following day Became the next day’s master, till the last Made former wonders it’s: To-day, the French, All clinant, all in gold, like heathen gods, Shone down the English: and, to-morrow, they Made Britain, India: every man that stood, Show’d like a mine. Their dwarfish pages were As cherubin, all gilt: the madams too, Not us’d to toil, did almost sweat to bear The pride upon them, that their very labour Was to them as a painting: now this mask Was cry’d incomparable; and the ensuing night Made it a fool, and beggar. The two kings, Equal in lustre, were now best, now worst, As presence did present them; him in eye, Still him in praise: and, being present both, ’Twas said, they saw but one; and no discerner Durst wag his tongue in censure. 3 When these suns (For so they phrase them,) by their heralds challenged The noble spirits to arms, they did perform Beyond thought’s compass; that former fabulous story, Being now seen possible enough, got credit, That Bevis 4 was belief’d.

Buck. O, you go fair.

Nor. As I belong to worship, and affect In honour honesty, the tract of every thing Would by a good discoursor lose some life, Which action’s self was tongue to. All was royal; To the disposing of it nought rebell’d, Order gave each thing view; the office did Distinctly his full function.

Buck. Who did guide, I mean, who set the body and the limbs Of this great sport together, as you guess?

1 Henry VIII. and Francis I. king of France.
2 Glittering, shining. 3 In opinion, which was most noble.
4 Sir Bevis, an old romance.
Scene I.

Buck. Why all this business our reverend cardinal carried. 9

Nor. 'Like it, your grace, the state takes notice of the private difference Betwixt you and the cardinal. I advice you, (And take it from a heart that wishes towards you Honour and plenteous safety,) that you read The cardinal's malice and his potency Together: to consider further, that What his high hatred would effect, wants not A minister in his power: You know his nature, That he's revengeful; and I know, his sword Hath a sharp edge: it's long, and, it may be said, It reaches far; and where 'twill not extend, Thither he darts it. Bosom up my counsel, You'll find it wholesome. Lo, where comes that rock, That I advise your shunning.

Enter Cardinal Wolsey, (the Purse borne before him,) certain of the Guard, and two Secretaries with Papers. The Cardinal in his passage fixeth his eye on Buckingham, and Buckingham on him, both full of disdain.

Wol. The duke of Buckingham's surveyor? ha? Where's his examination? I Seer. Here, so please you. Wol. Is he in person ready? I Seer. Ay, please your grace. Wol. Well, we shall then know more; and Buckingham Shall lessen this big look.

Buck. This butcher's cur 1 is venom-mouth'd, and I Have not the power to muzzle him: therefore 'best Not wake him in his slumber. A beggar's book Out-worths a noble's blood.

North. What, are you chaf'd? Ask heaven for temperance; that's the appliance only: Which your disease requires.

Buck. I read in his looks Matter against me; and his eye revil'd Me, as his object: at this instant He bores 8 me with some trick: He's gone to the king;

I'll follow, and out-stare him.

Nor. Stay, my lord, And let your reason with your choler question What 'tis you go about: To climb steep hills Requires slow pace at first: Anger is like A full-hot horse; who being allow'd his way, Self-mettle tires him. Not a man in England Can advise me like you; be to yourself As you would to your friend.

Buck. I'll to the king, And from a mouth of honour quite cry down This Ipswich fellow's insolence; or proclaim, There's difference in no persons.

Nor. Be advis'd: Heat not a furnace for your foe so hot That it do singe yourself: We may out-run, By violent swiftness, that which we run at, And lose by over-running. Know you not, The fire, that mounts the liquor till it run o'er, In seeming to augment it, wastes it? Be advis'd: I say again, there is no English soul More stronger to direct you than yourself;

If with the sap of reason you would quench, Or but allay, the fire of passion.

Buck. Sir, I am thankful to you: and I'll go along By your prescription: — but this top-proud fellow, (Whom from the flow of gall I name not, but From sincere motions,) by intelligence, And proofs as clear as founts in July, when We see each grain of gravel, I do know To be corrupt and treasonous.

Nor. Say not, treasonous. Buck. To the king I'll say't; and make my vouch as strong As shore of rock. Attend. This holy fox, Or wolf, or both, (for he is equal ravenous, As he is subtle; and as prone to mischief, As able to perform it: his mind and place Infecting one another, yea, reciprocally,) Only to show his pomp as well in France As here at home, suggests 3 the king our master To this last costly treaty, the interview, That swallow'd so much treasure, and like a glass Did break i' the rinsing.

Nor. 'Faith, and so it did. Buck. Pray, give me favour, sir. This cunning cardinal The articles 'o the combination drew, As himself pleas'd; and they were ratified, As he cried, Thus let be: to as much end, As give a crutch to the dead: But our count-cardinal Has done this, and 'tis well; for worthy Wolsey, Who cannot err, he did it. Now this follows, (Which, as I take it, is a kind of puppy To the old dam, treason,) — Charles the emperor, Under pretence to see the queen his aunt, (For 'twas, indeed, his colour; but he came To whisper Wolsey,) here makes visitation: His fears were, that the interview, betwixt England and France, might, through their amity, Breed him some prejudice; for from this league Peep'd arms that menace'd him: He privily Deals with our cardinal; and, as I trow, — Which I do well; for, I am sure, the emperor Paid ere he promis'd; whereby his suit was granted, Ere it was ask'd; — but when the way was made, And pav'd with gold, the emperor thus desir'd; — That he would please to alter the king's course And break the aforesaid peace. Let the king know, (As soon he shall by me,) that thus the cardinal Does buy and sell his honour as he pleases, And for his own advantage.

Nor. I am sorry To hear this of him; and could wish, he were Something mistaken in't.

Buck. No, not a syllable; I do pronounce him in that very shape, He shall appear in proof.

Enter Brandon; a Sergeant at Arms before him, and two or three of the Guard.

Brack. Your office, sergeant; execute it.

Serg. My lord the duke of Buckingham, and earl Of Hereford, Stafford, and Northampton, I Arrest thee of high treason, in the name Of our most sovereign king.

Buck. Lo you, my lord, The net has fall'n upon me; I shall perish Under device and practice. 4

KING HENRY VIII.

Act I.

SCENE II. — The Council-chamber.

Cornets. Enter King Henry, Cardinal Wolsey, the Lords of the Council, Sir Thomas Lovell, Officers, and Attendants. The King enters, leaning on the Cardinal’s Shoulder.

K. Hen. My life itself and the best heart of it, Thanks you for this great care: I stood the level Of a full-charg’d confederacy, and give thanks To you that chok’d it. — Let be call’d before us That gentleman of Buckingham’s: in person I’ll hear him his confessions justify; And point by point the treasons of his master He shall again relate.

The King takes his State. The Lords of the Council take their several Places. The Cardinal places himself under the King’s Feet, on his right Side.

A Noise within, crying, Room for the Queen. Enter the Queen, ushered by the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk: she kneels. The King riseth from his State, takes her up, kisses, and placeth her by him.

Q. Kath. Nay, we must longer kneel; I am a suitor.

K. Hen. Arise, and take place by us: — Half your suit
Never name to us; you have half our power: The other moiety, ere you ask, is given;
Repeat your will, and take it.

Q. Kath. Thank your majesty.
That you would love yourself; and in that love, Not unconscion’d leave your honour, nor The dignity of your office, is the point Of my petition.

K. Hen. Lady mine, proceed.

Q. Kath. I am solicited, not by a few,
And those of true condition, that your subjects
Are in great grievance: there hath been commissions
Sent down among them, which hath flaw’d the heart
Of all their affiliations: — wherein, although,
My good lord cardinal, they vent reproaches
Most bitterly on you, as putter-on
Of these exactions, yet the king our master,
(Whose honour heaven shield from soil!) even he escapes not Language unmannerly, yea, such which breaks
The sides of loyalty, and almost appears,
In loud rebellion.

Q. Kath. Not almost appears,
It doth appear; for, upon these exactions,
The clothiers all, not able to maintain
The many to them longings, have put off
The spinsters, carders, fullers, weavers, who,
Unfit for other life, compell’d by hunger
And lack of other means, in desperate manner
Daring the event to the teeth, are all in uproar,
And danger serves among them.

K. Hen. Taxation! Wherein? and what taxation? — My lord cardinal,
You that are blam’d for it alike with us,
Know you of this taxation?

Wol. Please you, sir, I know but of a single part, in aught
Pertains to the state; and front but in that file
Where others tell steps with me.

Q. Kath. No, my lord, You know no more than others: but you frame Things, that are known alike; which are not whole-
Some To those which would not know them, and yet must Perforce be their acquaintance. These exactions, Whereof my sovereign would have note, they are Most pestilent to the hearing; and to bear them, The back is sacrifice to the load. They say, They are devils’ by you; or else you suffer Too hard an exclamation.

K. Hen. Still exaction! The nature of it? In what kind, let’s know
Is this exaction?

Q. Kath. I am much too venturous
In tempting of your patience; but am bolder’d Under your promis’d pardon. The subject’s grief Comes through commissions, which compel from each The sixth part of his substance, to be levied Without delay; and the pretence for this Is nam’d, your wars in France: This makes bold mouths:
Tongues spit their duties out, and cold hearts freeze
Allegiance in them; their curses now,
Live where their prayers did; and it’s come to pass,
That tractable obedience is a slave
To each incensed will. I would, your highness
Would give it quick consideration, for
There is no primer business.

K. Hen. By my life,
This is against our pleasure.

Wol. And for me, I have no farther gone in this, than by a single voice; and that not pass’d me, but
By learned approbation of the judges.
If I am traduc’d by tongues, which neither know My faculties, nor person, yet will be
The chronicles of my doing,— let me say,
’Tis but the fate of place, and the rough brake
That virtue must go through. We must not stint

* Chair of state, thence.

6 I am only one among the other counsellors.
7 More important.
8 Thicket of thorns.
Our necessary actions, in the fear
To cope 9 malicious censurers; which ever,
As ravenous fishes, do a vessel follow
That is new trimm'd; but benefit no further
Than vainly longing. What we oft do best,
By sick interpreters, once 1 weak ones, is
Not ours, or not allow'd 2; what worst, as oft,
Hitting a grosser quality, is cried up
For our best act. If we shall stand still,
In fear our motion will be mock'd or carp'd at,
We should take root here where we sit, or sit
State statutes only.

K. Hen. Things done well,
And with a care, exempt themselves from fear;
Things done without example, in their issue
Are to be fear'd. Have you a precedent
Of this commission? I believe, not any.
We must not rend our subjects from our laws,
And stick them in our will. Sixth part of each?
A trembling contribution! Why, we take,
From every tree, top, bark, and part o' the timber;
And though we leave it with a root, thus hack'd,
The air will drink the sap. To every county,
Where this is question'd, send our letters, with Free pardon to each man that has denied
The force of this commission: Pray, look to't;
I put it to your care.

Wol. A word with you. [To the Secretary.
Let there be letters writ to every shire,
Of the king's grace and pardon. The griev'd commons
Hardly conceive of me; let it be nois'd,
That through our intercession, this revokement
And pardon comes: I shall anon advise you
Further in the proceeding. [Exit Secretary.

Enter Surveyor.

Q. Kath. I am sorry that the duke of Buckingham
Is run in your displeasure.

K. Hen. It grieves many:
The gentleman is learn'd, and a most rare speaker,
To nature none more bound; his training such,
That he may furnish and instruct great teachers,
And never seek for aid out of himself.
Yet see
When these so noble benefits shall prove
Not well dispos'd, the mind growing once corrupt,
They turn to vicious forms, ten times more ugly
Than ever they were fair. This man so complete,
Who was enrol'd 'mongst wonders, and when we,
Almost with ravish'd listening, could not find
His hour of speech a minute; he, my lady,
Hath into monstrous habits put the graces
That once were his, and is become as black
As if besmeard in hell. Sit by us: you shall hear
(This was his gentleman in trust,) of him
Things to strike honour sad. — Bid him recount
The fore-recit'd practices; whereof
We cannot feel too little, hear too much.
Wol. Stand forth; and with bold spirit relate what you,
Most like a careful subject, have collected
Out of the duke of Buckingham.

K. Hen. Speak freely.

Surv. First, it was usual with him, every day
It would infect his speech, That if the king
Should without issue die, he'd carry it so
To make the scepter his: These very words
I have heard him utter to his son-in-law,

Encounter. 1 Sometime. 2 Approved.

Lord Aberg'ny; to whom by oath he menac'd
Revenge upon the cardinal.

Wol. Please your highness, note
This dangerous conception in this point.
Not friended by his wish, to your high person
His will is most malignant; and it stretches
Beyond you, to your friends.

Q. Kath. My learn'd lord cardinal,
Deliver all with charity.

K. Hen. Speak on:

How ground my title to the crown,
Upon our fail? to this point hast thou heard him
At any time speak aught?

Surv. He was brought to this
By a vain prophecy of Nicholas Hopkins.

K. Hen. What was that Hopkins?

Surv. Sir, a Chartreux friar,
His confessor, who fed him every minute
With words of sovereignty.

K. Hen. How know'st thou this?

Surv. Not long before your highness sped to France,
The duke being at the Rose 3; within the parish
Saint Lawrence Poultney, did of me demand
What was the speech amongst the Londoners
Concerning the French journey? I replied,
Men fear'd, the French would prove perfidious,
To the king's danger. Presently the duke
Said, 'Twas the fear, indeed; and that he doubted,
'Twould prove the verity of certain words
Spoke by a holy monk; That oft, says he,
Hath sent to me, wishing me to permit
John ae la Court, my chaplain, a choice hour
To hear from him a matter of some moment:
Whom after under the confession's seal
He solemnly had sworn, that what he spoke,
My chaplain to no creature living, but
To me, should utter, with demure confidence
This pausingly ensu'd, — Neither the king, nor his heirs, (Tell you the duke) shall prosper: bid him strive
To gain the love of the commonalty; the duke
Shall govern England.

Q. Kath. If I know you well,
You were the duke's surveyor, and lost your office
On the complaint o'the tenants: Take good heed,
You charge not in your spleen a noble person,
And spoil your nobler soul! I say, take heed;
Yes, heartily beseech you.

K. Hen. Let him on: —
Go forward.

Surv. On my soul, I'll speak but truth.
I told my lord the duke, by the devil's illusions
The monk might be deceiv'd; and that 'twas dang'rous
for him,
To ruminate on this so far, until
It forg'd him some design, which, being believ'd,
It was much like to do: He answer'd, Tush! I
It can do me no damage: adding further,
That, had the king in his last sickness fail'd,
The cardinal's and sir Thomas Lovell's heads
Should have gone off.

K. Hen. Ha! what, so rank? Ah, ha!
There's mischief in this man: — Canst thou say further?

Surv. I can, my liege.

K. Hen. Proceed.

Surv. Being at Greenwich,
After your highness had reprovd the duke
About sir William Blomer, —

K. Hen. I remember,

* Now Merchant Taylors' School.
KING HENRY VIII.

Act I.

Of such a time; — Being my servant sworn,
The duke retain'd him his. — Buton; What hence?

Surv. If, quoth he, I for this had been committed,
As to the Tower, I thought. — I would have play'd
The part my father meant to act upon.
The usurper Richard: who, being at Salisbury,
Made suit to come in his presence; which if granted,
As he made semblance of his duty, would
Have put his knife into him.

K. Hen. A giant traitor!

Wid. Now, madam, may his highness live in freedom.

And this man out of prison?

Q. Kath. Heaven mend all! —

K. Hen. There's something more would out of thee; What say'st?

Surv. After — the duke his father, — with the knife,—

He stretch'd him, and, with one hand on his dagger,
Another spread on his breast, mounting his eyes,
He did discharge a horrible oath; whose tenour
Was. — Were he evil us'd, he would out-go
His father, by as much as a performance
Does an irresolute purpose.

K. Hen. There's his period,

To sheath his knife in us. He is attach'd;
Call him to present trial: if he may
Find mercy in the law, 'tis his; if none,
Let him not seek't of us: By day and night,
He's traitor to the height.

SCENE III. — A Room in the Palace.

Enter the Lord Chamberlain, and Lord Sands.

Cham. Is it possible, the spells of France should juggle

Men into such strange mysteries?

Sands. New customs, though they be never so ridiculous,

Nay, let them be unmanly, yet are follow'd.

Cham. As far as I see, all the good our English

Have got by the late voyage, if but merely
A fit or two o' the face; but they are shrewd ones;
For when they hold them, you would swear directly,
Their very noses had been counsellors
To Pepin, or Clotharius, they keep state so.

Sands. They have all new legs, and lame ones;

one would take it,

That never saw them pace before, the spavin,
A springhalt 5 reign'd among them.

Cham. Death! my lord,
Their clothes are after such a pagan cut too,
That, sure, they have worn out christendom. How now?

What news, sir Thomas Lovell?

Enter Sir Thomas Lovell.

Lov. 'Faith, my lord, I hear of none but the new proclamation

That's clapp'd upon the court-gate.

Cham. What is't for?

Lov. The reformation of our travell'd gallants,
That fill the court with quarrels, talk, and tailors.

Cham. I am glad, 'tis there; now I would pray

our monseurs
To think an English courtier may be wise,

And never see the Louvre. 6

Lov. They must either

4 Grinace.

5 Disease incident to horses.

For so run the conditions, leave these remnants
Of foul, and feather, that they got in France,
With all their honourable points of ignorance,
Pertaining thercunto, (as fights, and fireworks; Abusing better men than they can be,
Out of a foreign wisdom,) renouncing clean
The faith they have in tennis, and tall stockings,
Short blister'd breeches, and those types of travel,
And understand again like honest men;
Or pack to their old playfellows: there, I take it, They may, cum privilegio’?, wear away
The lag end of their wildness, and be laugh’d at.

Sands. 'Tis time to give them physic, their diseases
Are grown so catching.

Cham. What a loss our ladies

Will have of these trim vanities!

Lov. Ay, marry,

There will be woe indeed.

Sands. I am glad, they're going;

(For, sure, there's no converting of them;) now
An honest country lord, as I am, beaten
A long time out of play, may bring his plain-song,
And have an hour of hearing; and, by'r-lady, held
Current music too.

Cham. Well said, lord Sands;

Your colt's tooth is not cast yet.

Sands. No, my lord;

Nor shall not, while I have a stump.

Cham. Sir Thomas, Whither were you a going?

Lov. To the cardinal's;

Your lordship is a guest too.

Cham. O, 'tis true:

This night he makes a supper, and a great one,
To many lords and ladies; there will be
The beauty of this kingdom, I'll assure you.

Lov. That churchman bears a bounteous mind

indeed,

A hand as fruitful as the land that feeds us;

His dews fall every where.

Cham. No doubt, he's noble;

He had a black mouth, that said other of him.

Sands. He may, my lord, he has wherewithal; in

him,

Sparing would show a worse sin than ill doctrine:
Men of his way should be most liberal,
They are set here for examples.

Cham. True, they are so;

But few now give so great ones. My harge stays;
Your lordship shall along: — Come, good sir Thomas,
We shall be late else; which I would not be,
For I was spoke to, with sir Henry Guildford,

This night to be comptrollers.

Sands. I am your lordship's.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV. — The Presence-Chamber in York-Place.

Hautboys. A small Table under a State for the Cardinal, a longer Table for the Guests. Enter at one Door Anne Bullen, and divers Lords, Ladies, and Gentlemens, as Guests; at another Door, enter Sir Henry Guildford.

Gild. Ladies, a general welcome from his grace
Salutes ye all: This night he dedicates
To fair content, and you; none here, he hopes,
In all this noble bery 7, has brought with her
One care abroad; he would have all as merry

7 With authority.

6 Company.
As first-good company, good wine, good welcome
Can make good people. — O, my lord, you are tardy;

Enter Lord Chamberlain, Lord Sands, and Sir
Thomas Lovell.

The very thought of this fair company
Clapp'd wings to his.

Cham. You are young, sir Harry Guildford.
Sweet ladies, will it please you sit? Sir Harry,
Place you that side, I'll take the charge of this:
His grace is ent'ring. — Nay, you must not freeze;
Two women plac'd together makes cold weather; —
My lord Sands, you are one will keep them wak'ng;
Pray, sit between these ladies.

Sands. By my faith,
And thank your lordship. — By your leave, sweet ladies;

[Seats himself between Anne Bullen and another Lady.]

If I chance to talk a little wild, forgive me;
I had it from my father.

Anne. Was he mad, sir?
Sands. O, very mad, exceeding mad, in love too:
But he would bite none; just as I do now,
He would kiss you twenty with a breath.

[Kisses her.]

Cham. Well said, my lord. —
So, now you are fairly seated: — Gentlemen,
The penance lies on you, if these fair ladies
Pass away frowning.

Sands. For my little cure,
Let me alone.

Hautboys. Enter Cardinal Wolsey, attended; and takes his State.

Wol. You are welcome, my fair guests; that noble lady,
Or gentleman, that is not freely merry,
Is not my friend: This, to confirm my welcome;
And to you all good health.

[Drinks.]

Sands. Your grace is noble; —
Let me have such a bowl may hold my thanks,
And save me so much talking.

Wol. My lord Sands,
I am beholden to you: cheer your neighbours. —
Ladies, you are not merry; — Gentlemen,
Whose fault is this?

Sands. The red wine first must rise
In their fair cheeks, my lord; then we shall have them
Talk us to silence.

Anne. You are a merry gamester,
My lord Sands.

Sands. Yes, if I make my play.

Here's to your ladyship; and pledge it, madam.

[Drum and Trumpets within: Chambers discharged.]

Wol. What's that?
Cham. Look out there, some of you.

[Exit a Servant.]

Wol. What warlike voice?
And to what end is this? — Nay, ladies, fear not;
By all the laws of war you are privil'gd.

Re-enter Servant.

Cham. How now? what is't?
Serv. A noble troop of strangers;
For so they seem; they have left their barge, and landed;

And hither make, as great ambassadors
From foreign princes.

Wol. Good lord chamberlain,
Go, give them welcome, you can speak the French tongue;

And, pray, receive them nobly, and conduct them,
Into our presence, where this heaven of beauty
Shall shine at full up on them; — Some attend him. —

[Exit Chamberlain, attended. All arise, and Tables removed.]

You have now a broken banquet: but we'll mend it.
A good digestion to you all: and, once more,
I shower a welcome on you; — Welcome all.

Hautboys. Enter the King, and twelve others, as Maskers, habited like Shepherds, with sixteen Torch-bearers; ushered by the Lord Chamberlain. They pass directly before the Cardinal, and gracefully salute him.

A noble company! what are their pleasures?

Cham. Because they speak no English, thus they pray'd
To tell your grace: — That, having heard by fame
Of this so noble and so fair assembly,
This night to meet here, they could do no less,
Out of the great respect they bear to beauty,
But leave their flocks; and, under your fair conduct
Craise leave to view these ladies, and entreat
An hour of revels with them.

Wol. Say, lord chamberlain,
They have done my poor house grace; for which I pay them
A thousand thanks, and pray them take their pleasures.

[Ladies chosen for the Dance. The King chooses Anne Bullen.

K. Hen. The fairest hand I ever touched! O, beauty,
Till now I never knew thee.

[Musick. Dance.]

Wol. My lord, —

Your grace?

Wol. Pray tell them thus much from me:
There should be one amongst them, by his person,
More worthy this place than myself; to whom,
If I but knew him, my love and duty
I would surrender it.

Cham.

I will, my lord.

[Cham. goes to the Company, and returns.]

Wol. What say they?

Cham. Such a one, they all confess,
There is, indeed; which they would have your grace,
Find out, and he will take it.

Wol. Let me see, then. —

[Comes from his State.]

By all your good leaves, gentlemen; — Here I'll make
My royal choice.

K. Hen. You have found him, cardinal:

[Unmasking.]

You hold a fair assembly; you do well, lord:
You are a churchman, or, I'll tell you, cardinal,
I should judge now unhappily.

Wol. I am glad,
Your grace is grown so pleasant.

K. Hen. My lord chamberlain,
Pr'ythee, come hither: What fair lady's that?

Cham. An't please your grace, sir Thomas Bullen's daughter,

The viscount Rochford, one of her highness' women.

K. Hen. By heaven, she is a dainty one. —
Sweetheart,

I were unmanners to take you out,

2 Mischievously.
SCENE I. — A Street.

Enter two Gentlemen, meeting.

1 Gent. Whither away so fast?
2 Gent. O, — save you, sir,
Even to the hall, to hear what shall become
Of the great duke of Buckingham.

1 Gent. I'll save you
That labour, sir. All's now done, but the ceremony
Of bringing back the prisoner.

2 Gent. Were you there?
1 Gent. Yes, indeed, was I.
2 Gent. Pray speak, what has happen'd?
1 Gent. You may guess quickly what.
2 Gent. Is he found guilty?
1 Gent. Yes, truly is he, and condemn'd upon it.
2 Gent. I am sorry for't.
1 Gent. So are a number more.
2 Gent. But, pray, how pass'd it?
1 Gent. I'll tell you in a little. The great duke
Came to the bar; where, to his accusations,
He pleaded still not guilty, and alleg'd
Many sharp reasons to defeat the law.
The king's attorney, on the contrary,
Urg'd on the examinations, proofs, confessions
Of divers witnesses; which the duke desir'd
To him brought,
To his face:
At which appear'd against him, his surveyor;
Sir Gilbert Puck, his chancellor; and John Court,
Confessor to him; with that devil-monk,
Hopkins, that made this mischief.

2 Gent. That was he
That fed him with his prophecies?

1 Gent. The same.
All these accus'd him strongly; which he fain
Would have flung from him, but, indeed, he could not:
And so his peers, upon this evidence
Have found him guilty of high treason. Much
He spoke, and learnedly, for life: but all
Was either pitt'd in him, or forgotten.

2 Gent. After all this, how did he bear himself?
1 Gent. When he was brought again to the bar, —
to hear
His knell rung out, his judgment, — he was stirr'd
With such an agony, he sweat extremely,
And something spoke in choler, ill and hasty:
But he fell to himself again, and sweetly,
In all the rest show'd a most noble patience.

2 Gent. I do not think he fears death.
1 Gent. Sure, he does not,
He never was so womanish; the cause
He may a little grieve at.

2 Gent. Certainly,
The cardinal is the end of this.

K. Hen. Lead in your ladies, every one. — Sweet partner;
I must not yet forsake you: Let's be merry; —
Good my lord cardinal, I have half a dozen healths;
To drink to these fair ladies, and a measure
To lead them once again; and then let's dream
Who's best in favour. — Let the musick knock it.
[Execut, with Trumpets.]
Scene I.

Lov. I do beseech your grace, for charity, If ever any malice in your heart Were hid against me, now to forgive me frankly.
Buck. Sir Thomas Lovell, I as free forgive you, As I would be forgiven: I forgive all; There cannot be those numberless offences 'Gainst me, I can't take peace with: no black envy Shall make my grace. — Commend me to his grace; And, if his mark of Buckingham, pray, tell him, You met him half in heaven: my vows and prayers Yet are the king's; and, till my soul forsake me, Shall cry for blessings on him: May he live Longer than I have time to tell his years! Ever belov'd, and loving, may his rule be! And, when old time shall lead him to his end, Goodness and he fill up one monument!
Lov. To the water side I must conduct your grace; Then give my charge up to sir Nicholas Vaux, Who undertakes you to your end.
Vaux. Prepare there, The duke is coming: see, the barge be ready; And furnish it with such furniture, as suits The greatness of his person.

Buck. Nay, sir Nicholas, Let it alone; my state now will but mock me. When I came hither, I was lord high constable, And duke of Buckingham; now, poor Edward Bohun: Yet I am richer than my base accusers, That never knew what truth meant: I now seal it; And with that blood will make them one day groan for't.

My noble father, Henry of Buckingham, Who first rais'd head against usurping Richard, Flying for succour to his servant Banister, Being distress'd, was by that wretch betray'd, And without trial fell; God's peace be with him! Henry the Seventh succeeding, truly pitying My father's loss, like a most royal prince, Restor'd me to my honours, and, out of ruins, Made my name once more noble: Now his son, Henry the Eighth, life, honour, name, and all That made me happy, at one stroke has taken For ever from the world. I had my trial, And, must needs say, a noble one; which makes me A little happier than my wretched father: Yet thus far we are one in fortunes: — Both fell by our servants, by those men we lov'd most; A most unnatural and faithless service! Heaven has an end in all: Yet, you that hear me, This from a dying man receive as certain: Where you are liberal of your loves, and counsels, Be sure, you be not loose; for those you make friends, And give your hearts to, when they once perceive The least rub in your fortunes, fall away Like water from ye, never found again But where they mean to sink ye. All good people, Pray for me! I must now forsake ye; the last hour Of my long weary life is come upon me. Farewell:
And when you would say something that is sad, Speak how I fall. — I have done; and God forgive me! [Exit Buckingham, Man and Train.

1 Gent. O, this is full of pity! — Sir, it calls, I fear, too many curses on their heads, That were the authors.
2 Gent. If the duke be guiltless, 'Tis full of woe: yet I can give you inkling Of an ensuing evil, if it fall, Greater than this.

1 Gent. Good angels keep it from us! Where may it be? you do not doubt my faith, sir? 2 Gent. This secret is so weighty, 'twill require A strong faith to conceal it.
1 Gent. Let me have it;
I do not talk much.
2 Gent. I am confident;
You shall, sir: Did you not of late days hear A buzzing, of a separation Between the king and Katharine?
1 Gent. Yes, but it held not; For when the king once heard it, out of anger He sent command to the lord mayor straight To stop the rumour, and allay those tongues That durst disperse it.
2 Gent. But that slander, sir, Is found a truth now: for it grows again Fresher than e'er it was; and held for certain, The king will venture at it. Either the cardinal, Or some about him near, have, out of malice To the good queen, possess'd him with a scruple That will undo her: To confirm this too, Cardinal Campeius is arriv'd, and lately;
As all think, for this business.
1 Gent. 'Tis the cardinal; And merely to revenge him on the emperor, For not bestowing on him, at his asking, The archbishoprick of Toledo, this is purpos'd.
2 Gent. I think, you have hit the mark: but is't not cruel, That she should feel the smart of this? The cardinal Will have his will, and she must fall.
1 Gent. 'Tis woful.
We are too open here to argue this;
Let's think in private more. [Exit.

SCENE II. — An Ante-chamber in the Palace.

Enter the Lord Chamberlain, reading a Letter.

Cham. My lord, — The horses your lordship sent for, with all the care I had, I saw well chosen, ridden, and furnished. They were young, and handsome; and of the best breed in the north. When they were ready to set out for London, a man of my lord cardinal's, by commission, and main power, took 'em from me; with this reason, — His master would be serv'd before a subject, if not before the king; which stopped our mouths, sir.
I fear, he will, indeed; Well, let him have them: He will have all, I think.

Enter the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk.

Nor. Well met, my good Lord chamberlain.
Cham. Good day to both your graces.
Suf. How is the king employ'd?
Cham. I left him private,
Full of sad thoughts and troubles.
Nor. What's the cause?
Cham. It seems, the marriage with his brother's wife Has crept too near his conscience.
Suf. No, his conscience Has crept too near another lady.
Nor. 'Tis so;
This is the cardinal's doing, the king-cardinal: That blind priest, like the eldest son of fortune, Turns what he lists. The king will know him one day.
Suf. Pray heaven, he do! he'll never know himself else.
Nor. How holly he works in all his business!
And with what zeal! For now he has crack'd the league
Between us and the emperor, the queen's great nephew.
He dives into the king's soul; and there scatters
Dangers, doubts, wringing of the conscience,
Fears, and despairs, and all these for his marriage:
And, out of all these to restore the king,
He counsels a divorce: a loss of her,
That, like a jewel, has hung twenty years
About his neck, yet never lost her lustre;
Of her, that loves him with that excellence
That angels love good men with; even of her
That, when the greatest stroke of fortune falls,
Will bless the king: And is not this course pious?
Cham. Heaven keep me from such counsel! 'Tis most true,
These news are every where; every tongue speaks them,
And every true heart weeps for't: All, that dare
Look into these affairs, see this main end,—
The French king's sister. Heaven will one day open
The king's eyes, that so long have slept upon
This bold bad man.

Suf. And free us from his slavery.
Nor. We had need pray,
And heartily, for our deliverance;
Or this imperious man will work us all
From princes into pages: all men's honours
Lie in one lump before him, to be fashion'd
Into what pitch he please.

Suf. For me, my lords,
I love him not, nor fear him; there's my creed:
As I am made without him, so I'll stand,
If the king please; his curses and his blessings
Touch me alike, they are breath I not believe in.
I knew him, and I know him; so I leave him
To him, that made him proud, the pope.

Nor. Let's in;
And, with some other business, put the king
From these sad thoughts, that work too much upon him: —
My lord, you'll bear us company?

Cham. Excuse me;
The king hath sent me other-where; besides,
You'll find a most unft time to disturb him:
Health to your lordships.

Nor. Thanks, my good lord chamberlain.

[Exit Lord Chamberlain.

NORFOLK opens a Folding-door. The King is dis-covered sitting and reading pensively.

Suf. How sad he looks! sure, he is much afflicted.
K. Hen. Who is there? ha?
Nor. 'Pray heaven he be not angry.
K. Hen. Who's there, I say? How dare you thrust yourselves
Into my private meditations?
Who am I? ha?

Nor. A gracious king, that pardons all offences
Malice ne'er meant: our breach of duty, this way,
Is business of estate; in which, we come
To know your royal pleasure.

K. Hen. You are too bold;
Go to; I'll make ye know your times of business:
Is this an hour for temporal affairs? ha? —

[Enter WOLSEY and CAMPEIUS.

Who's there? my good lord cardinal? — O my Wolsey,

The quiet of my wounded conscience,
Thou art a cure fit for a king. — You're welcome,

[To CAMPEIUS.

Most learned reverend sir, into our kingdom;
Use us, and it: — My good lord, have great car
I be not found a talker.

[To WOLSEY.

Wol. Sir, you cannot.
I would your grace would give us but an hour
Of private conference.

K. Hen. We are busy; go.

[To NORFOLK and SUFFOLK.

Nor. This priest has no pride in him?

Suf. Not to speak of;
I would not be so sick though, for his place;
But this cannot continue.

Nor. If it do,
I'll venture one heave at him.

Suf. I another.

[Exeunt NORFOLK and SUFFOLK.

Wol. Your grace has given a precedent of wisdom
Above all princes, in committing freely
Your scruple to the voice of Christendom:
Who can be angry now? what envy reach you?
The Spaniard, tied by blood and favour to her,
Must now confess, if they have any goodness,
The trial just and noble. All the clerks,
I mean, the learned ones, in Christian kingdoms,
Have their free voices; Rome, the nurse of judgment,
Invited by your noble self, hath sent
One general tongue unto us, this good man,
This just and learned priest, cardinal Campeius;
Whom, once more, I present unto your highness.

K. Hen. And, once more, in mine arms, I bid him welcome,
And thank the holy conclave for their loves;
They have sent me such a man I would have wish'd for.

Cam. Your grace must needs deserve all strangers' loves,
You are so noble: To your highness' hand
I tender my commission; by whose virtue,
(The court of Rome commanding,) — you, my lord
Cardinal of York, are join'd with me their servant,
In the impartial judging of this business.

K. Hen. Two equal men. The queen shall be acquainted
Forthwith, for what you come: — Where's Gardiner?

Wol. I know your majesty has always lov'd her
So dear in heart not to deny her that
A woman of less place might ask by law,
Scholars, allow'd freely to argue for her.

K. Hen. Ady, and the best she shall have; and my favour
To him that does best; God forbid else.
Cardinal, Pr'ythee, call Gardiner to me, my new secretary;
I find him a fit fellow.

[Exit WOLSEY.

Re-enter WOLSEY, with GAR D INER.

Wol. Give me your hand: much joy and favour to you;
You are the king's now.

Gard. But to be commanded
For ever by your grace, whose hand has rais'd me.

K. Hen. Come hither, Gardiner.

[Aside.

Cam. My lord of York, was not one doctor Pace
In this man's place before him?

4 So sick as he is proud.
KING HENRY VIII.

SCENE III. An Ante-chamber in the Queen's Apartments.

Enter Anne BULLEN, and an old Lady.

Anne. Not for that neither; — Here's the pang that pinches;
His highness having liv'd so long with her: and she
So good a lady, that no tongue could ever
Pronounce dishonour of her, — by my life,
She never knew harm-doing; — O now, after
So many courses of the sun enthron'd,
Still growing in a majesty and pomp, — the which
To leave is a thousand-fold more bitter, than
'Tis sweet at first to acquire, — after this process,
To give her the avail! it is a pity
Would move a monster.

Old L. Hearts of most hard temper
Melt and lament for her.

Anne. O! much better,
She ne'er had known pomp: though it be temporal,
Yet, if that quarrel, 6 fortune, do divorce
It from the bearer, 'tis a sufferrance, paining
As soul and body severing.

Old L. Alas, poor lady!

Anne. So much the more
Must pity drop upon her. Verily,
I swear, 'tis better to be lowly born,
And range with humble livers in content,
Than to be perk'd up in a glistening grief,
And wear a golden sorrow.

Old L. Our content
Is our best having?

Anne. By my troth, I vow
I would not be a queen.

Old L. Beshrew me, but I would,
And so would you,
For all this spice of your hypocrisy:
You, that have so fair parts of woman on you,
Have too a woman's heart; which ever yet
Affected eminence, wealth, sovereignty;

Which, to say sooth, 8 are blessings: and which gift,
(Saving your mincing) the capacity
Of your soft cheverell 9 conscience would receive,
If you might please to stretch it.

Anne. Nay, good troth,—
Old L. Yes, troth, and troth,— You would not Be a queen?

Anne. No, not for all the riches under heaven.

Old L. 'Tis strange, a three-pence bow'd 1 would hire me.

Old L. As I am to queen it: But, I pray you,
What think you of a duchess? have you limbs
To bear that load of title?

Anne. No, in truth.

Old L. Then you are weakly made: Pluck off a little;
I would not be a young count in your way.

Anne. How you do talk!

I swear again, I would not be a queen
For all the world.

Old L. In faith, for little England
You'd venture an embalming: I myself
Would for Carnarvonshire, although there 'long'd
No more to the crown but that. Lo, who comes here?

Enter the Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Good morrow, ladies. What wer't worth
To know the secret of your conference?

Anne. My good lord,
Not your demand; it values not your asking:
Our mistresses' sorrows we were pitying.

Cham. It was a gentle business, and becoming
The action of good women: there is hope,
All will be well.

Anne. Now I pray heaven, amen! 2

Cham. You bear a gentle mind, and heavenly blessings
Follow such creatures. That you may, fair lady,
Perceive I speak sincerely, and high note's
Ta'en of your many virtues, the king's majesty
Commends his good opinion to you, and Does purpose honour to you no less flowing
Than mancionship of Pembroke; to which title
A thousand pound a year, annual support,
Out of his grace he adds.

Anne. I do not know,
What kind of my obedience I should tender;
More than my all is nothing: nor my prayers
Are not words duly hallow'd, nor my wishes
More worth than empty vanities; yet prayers, and wishes,
Are all I can return. 'Beseech your lordship,
Vouchsafe to speak my thanks, and my obedience,
As from a blushing handmaid, to his highness;
Whose health, and royalty, I pray for.

Cham. Lady, I shall not fail to approve the fair conceit
The king hath of you. — I have perus'd her well;

Anne. Beauty and honour in her are so mingled,
That they have caught the king: and who knows yet,
But from this lady may proceed a gem,
To lighten all this isle? — I'll to the king,
And say, I spoke with you.

Anne. My honour'd lord.

Old L. Why, this it is; see, see!

Pp

6 Out of the king's presence.
7 Possession.
8 Truth.
9 Kit-skin.
10 Crook'd.
11 Opinion.
I have been begging sixteen years in court, (Am yet a courtier beggarly;) nor could Come betwixt too early and too late,
For any suit of pounds: and you, (O fate!)
A very fresh-fish here, (fye, fye upon
This compell'd fortune!) have your mouth fill'd up,
Before you open it.

Anne. This is strange to me.

Old L. How tastes it? is it bitter? forty pence, no.
There was a lady once, (tis an old story)
That would not be a queen, that would she not,
For all the mud in Egypt: — Have you heard it?

Anne. Come, you are pleasant.

Old L. With your theme, I could O'ermount the lark. The marchioness of Pembroke!
A thousand pounds a year! for pure respect;
No other obligation: By my life,
That promises more thousands: Honour's train
Is longer than his foreskirt. By this time,
I know, your back will bear a duchess; — Say,
Are you not stronger than you were?

Anne. Good lady, Make yourself mirth with your particular fancy,
And leave me out on't. 'Would I had no being,
If this salute my blood a jot; it faints me,
To think what follows.
The queen is comfortless, and we forgetful
In our long absence: Pray, do not deliver
What here you have heard, to her.

Old L. What do you think me?

(Scene. — A Hall in Black-Friars.

Trumpets, Sennets, and Cornets. Enter two Vergers, with short silver Wands; next them, two Scribes in the habits of Doctors; after them the Archbishop of Canterbury, alone; after him, the Bishops of Lincoln, Ely, Rochester, and Saint Asaph; next them, with some small distance, follows a Gentleman bearing the Purse, with the great Seal, and a Cardinal's Hat; then two Priests, bearing each a silver Cross; then a Gentleman-Usher bare-headed, accompanied with a Sergeant at Arms bearing a silver Mace; then two Gentlemen, bearing two great silver Pillars; after them, side by side; the two Cardinals, Wolsey and Campeius; two Noblemen with the Sword and Mace. Then enter the King and Queen, and their Trains. The King takes place under the Cloth of State; the two Cardinals sit under him as Judges. The Queen takes place at some distance from the King. The Bishops place themselves on each side the Court, in manner of a Consistory; between them, the Scribes. The Lords sit next the Bishops. The Crier and the rest of the Attendants stand in convenient order about the Stage.

Wol. Whilst our commission from Rome is read
Let silence be commanded.

K. Hen. What's the need?
It hath already publickly been read,
And on all sides the authority allow'd;
You may then spare that time.

Wol. Be't so: — Proceed.

Scrib. Say, Henry king of England, come into the court.

K. Hen. Here.

Scrib. Say, Katharine queen of England, come into court.

[The Queen makes no answer, rises out of her Chair, goes on the Court, comes to the King, and kneels
at his feet; then speaks.

Q. Kath. Sir, I desire you do me right and justice;
And to bestow your pity on me; for
I am a most poor woman, and a stranger,
Born out of your dominions: having here
No judge indifferant, nor no more assurance
Of equal friendship and proceeding. Alas, sir,
In what have I offended you? what cause
Hath my behaviour given to your displeasure,
That thus you should proceed to put me off,
And take your good grace from me? Heaven witness,
I have been to you a true and humble wife,
At all times to your will conformable:
Ever in fear to kindle your dislike,
Yes, subject to your countenance; glad, or sorry,
As I saw it inel'n. When was the hour
I ever contradicted your desire,
Or made it not mine too? Or which of your friends
Have I not strove to love, although I knew
He were mine enemy? what friend of mine
That had to him deriv'd your anger, did I Continue in my liken? nay, gave notice
He was from thence discharg'd? Sir, call to mind
That I have been your wife, in this obedience,
Upward of twenty years, and have been blest
With many children by you: If, in the course
And process of this time, you can report,
And prove it too, against mine honour aught,
My bond to wedlock, or my love and duty,
Against your sacred person, in God's name,
Turn me away; and let the foul's contempt
Shut door upon me, and so give me up
To the sharpest kind of justice. Please you, sir,
The king, your father, was reputed for
A prince most prudent, of an excellent
And unmatch'd wit and judgment: Ferdinand,
My father, king of Spain, was reckn'd one
The wisest prince, that there had reign'd by many
A year before: It is not to be question'd,
That they had gather'd a wise council to them
Of every realm, that did debate this business,
Who deem'd our marriage lawful: Wherefore

Wol. Beseech you, sir, to spare me, till I may Be by my friends in Spain advis'd; whose counsel
I will implore: If not, t' the name of Heaven,
Your pleasure be fulfill'd!

Wol. You have here, lady,
(And of your choice,) these reverend fathers; men
Of singular integrity and learning.
Yea, the elect of the land, who are assembled
To plead your cause: It shall be therefore bootless,
That longer you desire the court; as well
For your own quiet, as to rectify
What is unsettled in the king.

Cam. His grace
Hath spoken well and justly: Therefore, madam,
It's fit this royal session do proceed;
And that, without delay, their arguments
Be now produc'd and heard.

Q. Kath. Lord cardinal, —
To you I speak.

Wol. Your pleasure, madam?

5 Useless.
KING HENRY VIII.

Scene IV.

Q. Kath. Sir, I am about to weep; but, thinking that We are a queen, (or long have dream'd so,) certain The daughter of a king, my drops of tears I'll turn to sparks of fire.

Wol. Be patient yet.

Q. Kath. I will, when you are humble; nay, before, Or God will punish me. I do believe, Induce'd by potent circumstances, that You are mine enemy; and make my challenge, You shall not be my judge: for it is you Have blown this coal betwixt my lord and me,— Which heaven's dew quench! — Therefore, I say again, I utterly abhor, yea, from my soul, Refuse you for my judge; whom, yet once more, I hold my most malicious foe, and think not At all a friend to truth.

Wol. I do profess You speak not like yourself; who ever yet Have stood to charity, and display'd the effects Of disposition gentle, and of wisdom Overtopping woman's power. Madam, you do me wrong:

I have no spleen against you; nor injustice For you or any: how far I have proceeded, Or how far further shall, is warranted By a commission from the consistory, Yea, the whole consistory of Rome. You charge me, That I have blown this coal: I do deny it: The king is present: if it be known to him, That I gainsay my deed, how may he wound, And worthily, my falsehood? yea, as much As you have done my truth. But if he know That I am free of your report, he knows, I am not of your wrong. Therefore in him It lies, to cure me; and the cure is, to Remove these thoughts from you: The which before His highness shall speak in, I do beseech You, gracious madam, to unthink your speaking, And to say so no more.

Q. Kath. My lord, my lord, I am a simple woman, much too weak To oppose your cunning. You are meek, and humble-mouth'd;

You sign your place and calling, in full seeming, With meekness and humility: but your heart Is cramm'd with arrogance, spleen, and pride. You have by fortune, and his highness' favours, Gone slightly o'er low steps; and now are mounted Where powers are your retainers; and your words, Domesticks to you, serve your will, as't please Yourself pronounce their office. I must tell you, You tender more your person's honour, than Your high profession spiritual: That again I do refuse you for my judge; and here, Before you all, appeal unto the pope, To bring my whole cause 'fore his holiness, And to be judged by him.

[She curtsies to the King, and offers to depart.

Cam. The queen is obstinate, Stubborn to justice, apt to accuse it, and Disdainful to be try'd by it; 'tis not well. She's going away.

K. Hen. Call her again.

Griff. Madam, you are call'd back.

Q. Kath. What need you note it? pray you, keep your way:

When you are call'd, return. — Now the Lord help, They vex me past my patience! — Pray you, passon: I will not tarry: no, nor ever more, Upon this business, my appearance make In any of their courts.

[Exeunt Queen, Griffith, and her other Attendants.

K. Hen. Go thy ways, Kate: That man I the world who shall report he has A better wife, let him not be trusted, For speaking false in that: Thou art, alone, (If thy rare qualities, sweet gentleness, Thy meekness said-like, wife-like government, — Obeying in commanding, — and thy parts Sovereign and pious else, could speak thee out,) The queen of earthly queens: — She is noble born; And, like her true nobility, she has Carried herself towards me.

Wol. Most gracious sir, In humblest manner I require your highness, That it shall please you to declare in hearing Of all these ears, (for where I'm robb'd and bound, There must I be unloos'd; although not there At once and fully satisfied,) whether ever I Did broach this business to your highness; or Laid any treachery in your way, which might Induce you to the question on't? or ever Have you to,— but with thanks to Heaven for such A royal lady, — spake one the least word, might Be to the prejudice of her present state, Or touch of her good person?

K. Hen. My lord cardinal, I do excuse you, yea, upon mine honour, I free you from't. You are not to be taught That you have many enemies, that know not Why they are so, but, like to village curs, Bark when their fellows do: by some of these The queen is put in anger. You are excus'd: But will you be more justified? you ever Have wish'd the sleeping of this business; never Desir'd it to be stirr'd; but oft have hinder'd; oft The passages made to toward it: — on my honour, I speak my good lord cardinal to this point, And thus far clear him. Now, what mov'd me to't,— I will be bold with time and your attention: — Then mark the inducement. Thus it came; — give heed to't.

My conscience first receiv'd a tenderness, Scruple, and pain, on certain speeches utter'd By the bishop of Bayonne, then French ambassador; Who had been hither sent on the debating A marriage, 'twixt the duke of Orleans and Our daughter Mary: I the progress of this business, Ere a determinate resolution, be (I mean the bishop) did require a respite; Wherein he might the king his lord adv'rtise Whether our daughter were legitimate, Respecting this our marriage with the dowager, Sometime our brother's wife. This respite shok'd The bosom of my conscience, enter'd me, Yea, with a splitting power, and made to tremble The region of my breast; which forc'd such way, That many maz'd considerings did throng, And press'd in with this caution. First, metherought, I stood not in the smile of heaven; who had Commanded nature, that my lady's womb, If it conceiv'd a male child by me, should Do no more offices of life to't than The grave does to the dead: for her male issue

6 Closed, or fastened.
KING HENRY VIII.

ACT III.

SCENE I. — Palace at Bridewell.  A Room in the Queen's Apartment.

The QUEEN, and some of her Women at Work.

Q. Kath. Take thy lute, wench: my soul grows sad with troubles;
Sing, and disperse them, if thou canst: leave working.

SONG.

Orpheus with his lute made trees,
And the mountain-tops, that freeze,
Bore themselves, when he did sing:
To his music, plants, and flowers,
Ever sprung; as sun, and showers,
There had been a lasting spring.
Every thing that heard him play,
Even the billows of the sea,
Hung their heads, and then lay by.
In sweet musick is such art;
Killing care, and grief of heart,
Fall asleep, or, hearing, die.

Enter a Gentleman.

Q. Kath. How now?

Gent. An't please your grace, the two great cardinals
Wait in the presence.

Q. Kath. Would they speak with me?

Gent. They will'd me say so, madam.

Q. Kath. Pray their graces
To come near. [Exit Gent.] What can be their business

With me, a poor weak woman, fall'n from favour?
I do not like their coming, now I think on't.
They should be good men; their affairs as righteous;
But all hoods make not monks.

Enter Wolsey and CAMPELLUS.

Wol. Peace to your highness!

Q. Kath. Your graces find me here part of a housewife;
I would be all, against the worst may happen.
What are your pleasures with me, reverend lords?

Wol. May it please you, noble madam, to withdraw
Into your private chamber, we shall give you
The full cause of our coming.

Q. Kath. Speak it here;
There's nothing I have done yet, o' my conscience,
Deserves a corner: 'Would all other women
Could speak this with as free a soul as I do!
My lords, I care not, (so much I am happy Above a number,) if my actions
Were tried by every tongue, every eye saw them,
Envy and base opinion set against them,
I know my life so even: If your business
Seek me out, and that way I am wise in,
Out with it boldly; Truth loves open dealing.

Wol. Tanta est erga te mentis integritas, regina serenisissima. —

Q. Kath. O, good my lord, no Latin;
I am not such a truant since my coming,
As not to know the language I have liv'd in:
A strange tongue makes my cause more strange,
suspicious;

7 Floating without guidance.  8 Waste, or wear away.
9 Presence chamber.

K. Hen. I then mov'd you, My lord of Canterbury; and got your leave
To make this present summons: — Unsolicited
I left no reverend person in this court;
But by particular consent proceeded,
Under your hands and seals. Therefore, go on:
For no dislike i' the world against the person
Of the good queen, but the sharp thorny points
Of my alleged reasons, drive this forward:
Prove but our marriage lawful, by my life,
And kindly dignity, we are contented
To wear our mortal state to come, with her,
Katharine our queen, before the primest creature
That's paragon'd 1 o' the world.

Cam. So please your highness,
The queen being absent, 'tis a needful fitness
That we adjourn this court till further day:
Mean while must be an earnest motion
Made to the queen, to call back her appeal
She intends unto his holiness. [They rise to depart.

K. Hen. I may perceive, [Aside.

These cardinals trifle with me: I abhor
This dilatory sloth, and tricks of Rome.
My learn'd and well-beloved servant, Cranmer,
I pray thee return! with thy approach, I know,
My comfort comes along. Break up the court:
I say, set on. [Exeunt, in manner as they entered.

1 Without compare.
Upon my soul, two reverend cardinal virtues:
But cardinal sins, and hollow hearts, I fear ye:
Mend them for shame, my lords. Is this your comfort?
The cordial that ye bring a wretched lady?
A woman lost among ye, laugh'd at, scorn'd?
I will not wish ye half my miseries,
I have more charity: But say, I warn'd ye;
Take heed, for heaven's sake, take heed, lest at once
The burden of my sorrows fall upon ye.
Wol. Madam, this is a mere distraction;
You turn the good we offer into envy.
Q. Kath. Ye turn me into nothing: Woe upon ye,
And all such false professors! Would ye have me
(If you have any justice, any pity:
If ye be any thing but churchmen's habits,)
Put my sick cause into his hands that hates me?
Alas! he has banish'd me his bed already;
His love, too, long ago: I am old, my lords,
And all the fellowship I hold now with him
Is only my obedience. What can happen
To me, above this wretchedness? all your studies
Make me a curse like this.
Cam. Your fears are worse.
Q. Kath. Have I liv'd thus long — (let me speak myself,
Since virtue finds no friends, — a wife, a true one?
A woman (I dare say, without vain-glory,)
Never yet branded with suspicion?
Have I with all my full affections
Still met the king? lov'd him next heaven? obey'd him?
Been, out of fondness, superstitious to him?
Almost forgot my prayers to content him?
And am I thus rewarded? 'tis not well, lords.
Bring me a constant woman to her husband,
One that ne'er dream'd a joy beyond his pleasure;
And to that woman, when she has done most,
Yet will I add an honour, — a great patience.
Wol. Madam, you wander from the good we aim at.
Q. Kath. My lord, I dare not make myself so guilty,
To give up willingly that noble title
Your master wed me to; nothing but death
Shall e'er divorce my dignities.
Wol. 'Pray, hear me.
Q. Kath. 'Would I had never trod this English earth,
Or felt the flatteries that grow upon it!
Ye have angels' faces, but I Heaven knows your hearts.
What will become of me now, wretched lady?
I am the most unhappy woman living. —
Alas! poor wenches, where are now your fortunes?
[To her Women.]
Shipwreck'd upon a kingdom, where no pity,
No friends, no hope; no kindred weep for me,
Almost no grave allow'd me: — Like the lily,
That once was mistress of the field, and flourish'd,
I'll hang my head and perish.
Wol. If your grace
Could but he brought to know, our ends are honest,
You'd feel more comfort: why should we, good lady,
Upon what cause, wrong you? alas! our places,
The way of our profession is against it;
We are to cure such sorrows, not to sow them.
For goodness' sake, consider what you do;
How you may hurt yourself, ay, utterly
Grow from the king's acquaintance, by this carriage.
The hearts of princes kiss obedience,
So much they love it; but, to stubborn spirits,
They swell, and grow as terrible as storms.
I know, you have a gentle, noble temper,
A soul as even as a calm: Pray, think us
Those we profess, peace-makers, friends, and servants.

Cam. Madam, you'll find it so. You wrong your virtues
With these weak women's fears. A noble spirit,
As yours was put into you, ever casts
Such doubts, as false coin, from it. The king loves
you;
Beware you lose it not: For us, if you please
To trust us in your business, we are ready
To use our utmost studies in your service.

Q. Kath. Do what ye will, my lords: And, pray, forgive me,
If I have us'd myself unmanfully;
You know, I am a woman, lacking wit
To make a seemly answer to such persons.
Pray, do my service to his majesty:
He has my heart yet; and shall have my prayers,
While I shall have my life. Come, reverend fathers,
Bestow your counsels on me: she now begs,
That little thought, when she set footing here,
She should have bought her dignities so dear.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. — Ante-chamber to the King's Apartment.

Enter the Duke of Norfolk, the Duke of Suffolk,
the Earl of Surrey, and the Lord Chamberlain.

Nor. If you will now unite in your complaints,
And force them with a constancy, the cardinal
Cannot stand under them: If you omit
The offer of this time, I cannot promise,
But that you shall sustain more new disgraces,
With these you bear already.

Sur. I am joyful
To meet the least occasion, that may give me
Remembrance of my father-in-law, the duke,
To be reveng'd on him.

Suf. Which of the peers
Have uncontemn'd gone by him, or at least
Strangely neglected? when did he regard
The stamp of nobleness in any person,
Out of himself?

Cham. My lords, you speak your pleasures:
What he deserves of you and me, I know;
What we can do to him, (though now the time Gives way to us,) I much fear. If you cannot Bar his access to the king, never attempt
Any thing on him; for he hath a witchcraft
Over the king in his tongue.

Nor. O, fear him not;
His spell in that is out: the king hath found
Matter against him, that for ever mars
The honey of his language. No, he's settled,
Not to come off, in his displeasure.

Sur. Sir,
I should be glad to hear such news as this Once every hour.

Nor. Believe it, this is true.
In the divorce, his contrary proceedings
Are all unfolded; wherein he appears,
As I could wish mine enemy.

Sur. How came
His practices to light?

Suf. Most strangely.

Sur. O, how, how?

Suf. The cardinal's letter to the pope miscarried,

And came to the eye o'the king: wherein was read,
How that the cardinal did entreat his holiness
To stay the judgment o'the divorce: For if
It did take place, I do, quoth he, perceive
My king is tangled in affection to
A creature of the queen's, lady Anne Bullen.

Sur. Has the king this?

Suf. Believe it.

Sur. Cham. The king in this perceives him how he coasts,
And hedges, his own way. But in this point
All his tricks founder, and he brings his physic
After his patient's death: the king already Hath married the fair lady.

Sur. 'Would he had!

Suf. May you be happy in your wish, my lord!
For, I profess, you have it.

Sur. Now all my joy
Trace 2 the conjunction!

Suf. My amen to't!

Nor. All men's.

Suf. There's order given for her coronation;
Marry, this is yet but young, and may be left
To some ears un remarked: — But, my lords,
She is a gallant creature, and complete
In mind and feature: I persuade me, from her
Will fall some blessing to this land, which shall
In it be memoria'd. 6

Sur. But, will the king
Digest this letter of the cardinal's?
The Lord forbid!

Nor. Marry, amen!

Suf. No, no;
There be more wasps that buzz about his nose,
Will make this sting the sooner. Cardinal Campeius
Is stolen away to Rome; hath ta'en no leave;
Has left the cause o'the king unhandled; and
Is posted, as the agent of our cardinal,
To second all his plot. I do assure you,
The king cry'd, ha! at this.
Cham. Now, heaven incense him,
And let him cry, ha, louder!

Nor. But, my lord,
When returns Crammer?

Suf. He is return'd, in his opinions; which
Have satisfied the king for his divorce,
Together with all famous colleges
Almost in Christendom: shortly, I believe,
His second marriage shall be publish'd, and
Her coronation. Katharine no more
Shall be call'd queen; but princess-dowager,
And widow to prince Arthur.

Nor. This same Crammer 5
A worthy fellow, and hath ta'en much pain
In the king's business.

Suf. He has; and we shall see him
For it, an archbishop.

Nor. So I hear. 'Tis so.

Suf. The cardinal —

Enter Wolsey and Cromwell.

Nor. Observe, observe, he's moody.
Wol. The packet, Cromwell, gave it you the king?
Crom. To his own hand, in his bed-chamber.
Wol. Look'd he o' the inside of the paper?
Crom. Presently.

He did unseal them: and the first he view'd,
SCENE II.

KING HENRY VIII.

He did it with a serious mind; a heed
Was in his countenance: You, he bade
Attend him here this morning.

Wol. Is he ready
To come abroad?

Crom. I think, by this he is.

Wol. Leave me a while. — [Exit Cromwell.

It shall be to the duchess of Alençon.

The French king's sister: she shall marry her.

Anne Bullen! No; I'll no Anne Bullens for him:
There is more in it than fair visage. — Bullen!
No, we'll no Bullens. — Speedily I wish
To hear from Rome. — The marchionship of Pembroke!

Nor. He's discontented.

Suf. May be, he hears the king
Does what his anger to him.

Sur. Sharp enough,

Lord, for thy justice!

Wol. The late queen's gentlewoman; a knight's daughter.

To be her mistress' mistress! the queen's queen!

This candle burns not clear: 'tis I must snuff it;
Then, out it goes. — What though I know her virtuous,

And well-deserving? yet I know her for
A spleeny Lutheran; and not wholesome to
Our cause, that she should lie i' the bosom of
Our hard-ru'd king. Again, there is sprung up
An heretick, an arch one, Cranmer; one
Hath crawl'd into the favour of the king,
And is his oracle.

Nor. He is vex'd at something.

Suf. I would, 'twere something that would fret
the string,
The master-cord of his heart!

Enter the King, reading a Schedule; and Lovell.

Suf. The king, the king.

K. Hen. What piles of wealth hath he accumulated
To his own portion! and what expense by the hour
Seems to flow from him! How, i' the name of thrift,
Does he rack this together? — Now, my lords;
Saw you the cardinal?

Nor. My lord, we have Stood here observing him: Some strange commotion
Is in his brain: he bites his lip, and starts;
 Stops on a sudden, looks upon the ground,
Then, lays his finger on his temple; straight,
Springs out into fast gait; then, stops again,
Strikes his breast hard; and anon, he casts
His eye against the moon: in most strange postures
We have seen him set himself.

K. Hen. It may well be;
There is a mutiny in his mind. This morning
Papers of state he sent me to peruse,
As I requir'd; and was I, what I found
There; on my conscience, put unwittingly?
Forsooth, an inventory, thus importing, —
The several parcels of his plate, his treasure, Rich stuffs and ornamentations of household; which
I find at such proud rate, that it upsurges
Possession of a subject.

Nor. It's heaven's will;
Some spirit put this paper in the packet,
To bless your eye withal.

K. Hen. If we did think
His contemplation were above the earth,
And fix'd on spiritual object, he should still,

Dwell in his musings: but, I am afraid,
His thoughts are below the moon, not worth
His serious considering.

[He takes his Seat, and whispers Lovell, who goes to Wolsey.

Wol. Heaven forgive me!

Ever God bless your highness!

K. Hen. Good, my lord,
You are full of heavenly stuff; and bear the inventory
Of your best graces in your mind: the which
You were now running o'er; you have scarce time
To steal from spiritual leisure a brief span;
To keep your earthly audit: Sure, in that
I deem you an ill husband; and am glad
To have you therein my companion.

Wol. Sir,
For holy offices I have a time; a time
To think upon the part of business, which
I bear i' the state; and nature does require
Her times of preservation, which, perchance,
I, her frail son, amongst my brethren mortal,
Must give my tendance to.

K. Hen. You have said well.

Wol. And ever may your highness yoke together
As I will lend you cause, my doing well
With my well saying!

K. Hen. 'Tis well said again:
And 'tis a kind of good deed, to say well:
And yet words are no deeds. My father lov'd you:
He said, he did; and with his deed did crown
His word upon you. Since I had my office,
I have kept you next my heart; have not alone
Employ'd you where high profits might come home,
But pard my present havings, to bestow
My bounties upon you.

Wol. What should this mean?

Sur. Good heaven increase this business! [Aside.

K. Hen. Have I not made you
The prime man of the state? I pray you, tell me,
If what I now pronounce, you have found true:
And, if you may confess it, say withal,
If you are bound to us, or no. What say you?

Wol. My sovereign, I confess, your royal graces, Shower'd on me daily, have been more, than could
My studied purposes require; which went Beyond all man's endeavours: — my endeavours
Have ever come too short of my desires,
Yet, fil'd with my abilities: Mine own ends
Have been mine so, that evermore they pointed
To the good of your most sacred person, and
The profit of the state. For your great graces
Heap'd upon me, poor undeserver, I
Can nothing render but allegiant thanks;
My prayers to heaven for you; my loyalty,
Which ever has, and ever shall be growing,
Till death, that winter, kill it.

H. Ken. Fairly answer'd;
A loyal and obedient subject is
Therein illustrated: The honour of it
Does pay the act of it; as, 'tis contrary,
The foulest is the punishment. I presume,
That, as my hand has open'd bounty to you,
My heart dropp'd love, my power rain'd honour, more
On you, than any; so your hand, and heart,
Your brain, and every function of your power,
Should, notwithstanding that your bond of duty,
As 'twere in love's particular, be more
To me, your friend, than any.

P. p. 4
KING HENRY VIII.

Act III.

You ask with such a violence, the king,
(Mine and your master,) with his own hand gave me:
Bade me enjoy it, with the place and honours,
During my life; and, to confirm his goodness,
Tied it by letters patents: Now, who'll take it?
Sur. The king, that gave it.
Wol. It must be himself then.
Sur. Thou art a proud traitor, priest.
Wol. Proud lord, thou liest;
Within these forty hours, Surrey durst better
Have burnt that tongue, than said so.
Sur. Thy ambition,
Thou scarlet sin, robb'd this, bewailing land
Of noble Buckingham, my father-in-law:
The heads of all thy brother cardinals,
(With thee, and all thy best parts bound together,)—
Weigh'd not a hair of his. Plague of your policy!
You sent me deputy for Ireland;
Far from his succour, from the king, from all
That might have mercy on the fault thou gav'st him;
Whilst you, your great goodness, out of holy pity,
Absolv'd him with an axe.
Wol. This, and all else
This talking lord can lay upon my credit,
I answer, is most false. The duke by law
Found his deserts: how innocent I was
From any private malice in his end,
His noble jury and foul cause can witness.
If I lov'd many words, lord, I should tell you,
You have as little honesty as honour;
That I, in the way of loyalty and truth
Toward the king, my ever royal master,
Dare mate 6 a sounder man than Surrey can be,
And all that love his follies.
Sur. By my soul,
Your long coat, priest, protects you; thou shouldest feel
My sword? the life-blood of thee else. — My lords,
Can ye endure to hear this arrogance?
And from this fellow? If we live thus tamely,
To be thus jaded 6 by a piece of scarlet,
Farewell nobility; let his grace go forward,
And dare us with his cap, like larks. 4
Wol. All goodness
Is poison to thy stomach.
Sur. Yes, that goodness
Of gleaning all the land's wealth into one,
Into your own hands, cardinal, by extortion;
The goodness of your intercepted packets,
You writ to the pope, against the king, your goodness,
Since you provoke me, shall be most notorious. —
My lord of Norfolk, — as you are truly noble,
As you respect the common good, the state
Of our desis'd nobility, our issues,
Who, if he live, will scarce be gentlemen, —
Produce the grand sum of his sins, the articles
Collected from his life: — I'll startle you
Worse than the sacring bell, lord cardinal.
Wol. How much, methinks, I could despise this man,
But that I am bound in charity against it!
Nor. Those articles, my lord, are in the king's hand:
But, thus much, they are foul ones.
Wol. So much fairer,
And spotless, shall mine innocence arise,
When the king knows my truth.

1 Escher in Surrey.

2 Equal.
3 Ridden down.
4 A cardinal's hat is scarlet, and the method of dashing larks
5 is by small mirrors on scarlet cloth.
This cannot save you:
I thank my memory, I yet remember
Some of these articles; and out they shall.
Now, if you can blush, and cry guilty, cardinal,
You'll show a little honesty.
Wol. Speak on, sir: I dare your worst objections: If I blush
It is, to see a nobleman want manners.
Sur. I'd rather want those, than my head. Have at you.

First, that, without the king's assent, or knowledge,
You wrought to be a legate; by which power
You maim'd the jurisdiction of all bishops,
Nor. Then, that, in all you writ to Rome, or else
To foreign princes, Ego et Rex meus
Was still inscrib'd; in which you brought the king
To be your servant.

Sur. Then, that without the knowledge
Either of king or council, when you went
Ambassador to the emperor, you made bold
To carry into Flanders the great seal.
Sur. Item, you sent a large commission
To Gregory de Cassalis, to conclude,
Without the king's will, or the state's allowance,
A league between his highness and Ferrara.

Sur. That, out of mere ambition, you have caus'd
Your holy hat to be stamp'd on the king's coin.
Sur. Then, that you have sent innumerable substance,
(By what means got, I leave to your own conscience,) To furnish Rome, and to prepare the ways
You have for dignities; to the mere undoing
Of all the kingdom. Many more there are;
Which, since they are of you, and odious,
I will not taint my mouth with.

Cham. O my lord, Press not a falling man too far; 'tis virtue:
His faults lie open to the laws; let them,
Not you, correct him. My heart weeps to see him
So little of his great self.

Sur. Lord cardinal, the king's further pleasure is,— Because all those things, you have done of late
By your power legatine within this kingdom,
Fall into the compass of a praemunire;—
That therefore such a writ be sued against you;
To forfeit all your goods, lands, tenements,
Chattels, and whatsoever, and to be
Out of the king's protection: — This is my charge.
Nor. And so we'll leave you to your meditations
How to live better. For your stubborn answer,
About the giving back the great seal to us,
The king shall know it, and no doubt, shall thank you.

Sur. So fare you well, my little good lord cardinal.

Wol. So farewell to the little good you bear me.
Farewell, a long farewell, to all my greatness!
This is the state of man; to-day he puts forth
The tender leaves of hope, to-morrow blossoms,
And bears his blushing honours thick upon him:
The third day, comes a frost, a killing frost;
And,—when he thinks, good easy man, full sure
His greatness is a ripening,— nips his root,
And then he falls, as I do. I have ventur'd,
Like little wanton boys that swim on bladders,
This many summers in a sea of glory;
But far beyond my depth: my high-blown pride
At length broke under me; and now has left me,
War, and old with service, to the mercy
Of a rude stream, that must for ever hide me.
Vain pomp, and glory of this world, I hate ye;
I feel my heart new open'd: O, how wretched
Is that poor man, that hangs on princes' favours!
There is, betwixt that smile we would aspire to,
That sweet aspect of princes, and their ruin,
More pangs and fears than wars or women have;
And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer,
Never to hope again.—

Enter Cromwell amazedly.

Why, how now, Cromwell?

Crom. I have no power to speak, sir.

Wol. What, amaz'd
At my misfortunes? can thy spirit wonder,
A great man should decline? Nay, an you weep,
I am fallen indeed.

Crom. How does your grace?

Wol. Why, well;
Never so truly happy, my good Cromwell.
I know myself now; and I feel within me
To peace above all earthly dignities,
A still and quiet conscience. The king has cur'd me,
I humbly thank his grace; and from these shoulders,
These ruin'd pillars, out of pity, taken
A load would sink a navy, too much honour;
O, 'tis a burden, Cromwell, 'tis a burden,
Too heavy for a man that hopes for heaven.

Crom. I am glad, your grace has made that right use of it.

Wol. I hope, I have: I am able now, methinks,
(Out of a fortitude of soul I feel)
To endure more miseries, and greater far,
Than my weak-hearted enemies dare offer.

What news abroad?

Crom. That Cranmer is return'd with welcome,
Install'd lord archbishop of Canterbury.

Wol. That's news indeed.

Crom. Last, that the lady Anne,
Whom the king hath in secrecy long married,
This day was view'd in open, as his queen,
Going to chapel; and the voice is now
Only about her coronation.

Wol. There was the weight that pull'd me down.

O Cromwell,
The king has gone beyond me, all my glories
In that one woman I have lost for ever:
No sun shall ever usher forth mine honours,
Or gild again the noble troops that waited
Upon my smiles. Go, get thee from me, Cromwell,
I am a poor fallen man, unworthy now
To be thy lord and master: Seek the king;
That sun, I pray, may never set! I have told him
What, and how true thou art: he will advance thee;
Some little memory of me will stir him
(I know his noble nature,) not to let
7 The chancellor is the guardian of orphans.
Act IV.

SCENE I.—A Street in Westminster.

Enter two Gentlemen, meeting.

1 Gent. You are well met once again.
2 Gent. And so are you.
1 Gent. You come to take your stand here, and behold
The lady Anne pass from her coronation?
2 Gent. 'Tis all my business. At our last encouter,
The duke of Buckingham came from his trial.
1 Gent. 'Tis very true: but that time offer'd sorrow;
This general joy.
2 Gent. 'Tis well: the citizens,
I am sure, have shown at full their royal minds;
As, let them have their rights, they are ever forward
In celebration of this day with shows,
Pageants, and sights of honour.
1 Gent. Never greater,
Nor, I'll assure you, better taken, sir.
2 Gent. May I be bold to ask what that contains,
That paper in your hand?
1 Gent. Yes; 'tis the list
Of those that claim their offices this day,
By custom of the coronation.
The duke of Suffolk is the first, and claims
To be high steward; next, the duke of Norfolk,
He to be earl marshal; you may read the rest.
2 Gent. I thank you, sir; had I not known those customs,
I should have been beholden to your paper.
But, I beseech you, what becomes of Katharine,
The princess-dowager? how goes her business?
1 Gent. That I can tell you too. The archbishop Of Canterbury, accompanied with other
Learned and reverend fathers of his order,
Held a late court at Dunstable, six miles off
From Amphill, where the princess lay; to which
She oft was cited by them, but appear'd not:

By that sin fell the angels; how can man then,
The image of his Maker, hope to win by't?
Love thyself last; cherish those hearts that hate thee;
Corruption wins not more than honesty.
Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace,
To silence envious tongues. Be just, and fear not;
Let all the ends thou aim'st at, be thy country's,
Thy God's, and truth's; then if thou fall'st, O Cromwell,
Thou fall'st a blessed martyr. Serve the king,
And,—Pr'ythee lead me in:
There take an inventory of all I have,
To the last penny: 'tis the king's: my robe,
And my integrity to heaven, is all
I dare now call mine own. O Cromwell, Cromwell,
Had I but serv'd my God with half the zeal
I serv'd my king, he would not in mine age
Have left me naked to mine enemies.
Crom. Good sir, have patience.
Wol. So I have. Farewell,
The hopes of court! my hopes in heaven do dwell.

[Exeunt.]
Scene I.

KING HENRY VIII.

2 Gent. A royal train, believe me,—These I know;—
Who's that, that bears the scepter?
1 Gent. Marquis Dorset:
And that the earl of Surrey, with the rod.
2 Gent. A bold brave gentleman: And that should be
The duke of Suffolk.
1 Gent. 'Tis the same; high-steward.
2 Gent. And that my lord of Norfolk?
1 Gent. Yes.
2 Gent. Heaven bless thee! (Looking on the Queen.)
Thou hast the sweetest face I ever look’d on. —
Sir, as I have a soul, she is an angel;
Our king has all the Indies in his arms,
I cannot blame his conscience.
1 Gent. They, that bear
The cloth of honour over her, are four barons
Of the Cinque-ports.
2 Gent. Those men are happy; and so are all,
Are near her.
I take it, she that carries up the train,
Is that old noble lady, duchess of Norfolk.
1 Gent. It is; and all the rest are countesses.
2 Gent. Their coronets say so. These are stars
indeed.
[Exit Procession, with a great flourish of Trumpets.

Enter a Third Gentleman.

Heaven save you, sir! where have you been broiling?
3 Gent. Among the crowd i’ the abbey; where a finger
Could not be wedg’d in more; and I am stifled
With the mere rankness of their joy.
2 Gent. You saw
The ceremony?
3 Gent. That I did.
1 Gent. How was it?
3 Gent. Well worth the seeing.
2 Gent. Good sir, speak it to us.
3 Gent. As well as I am able. The rich stream
Of lords, and ladies, having brought the queen
To a prepar’d place in the choir, fell off
A distance from her; while her grace sat down
To rest a while, some half an hour, or so,
In a rich chair of state, opposing freely
The beauty of her person to the people.
Believe me, sir, she is the goodliest woman
That ever sat by man: which when the people
Had the full view of, such a noise arose
As the shrouds make at sea in a stiff tempest,
As loud, and to as many tunes: hats, cloaks,
(Doublets, I think,) flew up; and had their faces
Been lose, this day they had been lost. Such joy
I never saw before. No man living
Could say, This is my wife, there; all were woven
So strangely in one piece.
2 Gent. But, 'pray, what follow’d?
3 Gent. At length her grace rose, and with modest paces
Came to the altar; where she knelt’d, and, saint-like,
Cast her fair eyes to heaven, and pray’d devoutly.
Then rose again, and bow’d her to the people:
When by the archbishop of Canterbury
She had all the royal makings of a queen;
As holy oil, Edward Conforcer’s crown,
The rod, and bird of peace, and all such emblems
Laid nobly on her: which perform’d, the choir,
With all the choicest musick of the kingdom,
Together sung Te Deum. So she parted,
And with the same full state paced back again
To York-place, where the feast is held.
1 Gent. Sir, you
Must no more call it York-place, that is past:
For, since the cardinal fell, that title’s lost;
'Tis now the king’s, and call’d — Whitechall.
3 Gent. I know it;
But 'tis so lately alter’d, that the old name
Is fresh about me.
2 Gent. What two reverend bishops
Were those that went on each side of the queen?
3 Gent. Stokesly and Gardiner; the one, of Winchester,
(Newly preferr’d from the king’s secretary,)
The other, London.
2 Gent. He of Winchester
Is held no great good lover of the archbishop’s,
The virtuous Cranmer.
3 Gent. All the land knows that:
However, yet there’s no great breach: when it comes,
Cranmer will find a friend will not shrink from him.
2 Gent. Who may that be, I pray you?
3 Gent. Thomas Cromwell; A man in much esteem with the king, and truly
A worthy friend. — The king
Has made him master o’ the jewel-house,
And one, already, of the privy-council.
2 Gent. He will deserve more.
3 Gent. Yes, without all doubt.
Come, gentlemen, ye shall go my way, which
Is to the court, and there ye shall be my guests;
Something I can command. As I walk thither,
I’ll tell ye more.
Both. You may command us, sir.
[Exeunt.

Scene II. — Kimbolton.

Enter Katharine, Dowager, sick; led between Griﬄe and Patience.

Grif. How does your grace?
Kath. O, Griﬄe, sick to death: My legs, like loaden branches, bow to the earth,
Willing to leave their burden: Reach a chair; —
So, — now methinks, I feel a little ease.
Didst thou not tell me, Griﬄe, as thou led’st me,
That the great child of honour, cardinal Wolsey,
Was dead?
Grif. Yes, madam; but I think, your grace,
Out of the pain you suffer’d, gave no ear to’t.
Kath. Pr’ythee, good Griﬄe, tell me how he died: If well, he stopp’d before me, happily?,
For my example.
Grif. Well, the voice goes, madam: For after the stout earl Northumberland
Arrested him at York, and brought him forward
(As a man sorely tainted,) to his answer,
He fell sick suddenly, and grew so ill
He could not sit his mule.
Kath. Alas! poor man!
Grif. At last, with easy roads, he came to Leicester,
Lodg’d in the abbey; where the reverend abbot,
With all his convent, honourably receiv’d him;
To whom he gave these words, — O, father abbot,
An old man, broken with the storms of state,
Is come to lay his weary bones among ye;
Give him a little earth for charity!
So went to bed: where eagerly his sickness

Haply.
Purs'd him still; and three nights after this, About the hour of eight, (which he himself Foretold should be his last,) full of repentance, Continual meditations, tears, and sorrows, He gave his honours to the world again, His blessed part to heaven, and slept in peace.
Kath. So may he rest; his faults lie gently on him! Yet thus far, Griffith, give me leave to speak him, And yet with charity. — He was a man Of an unbounded stomach, ever ranking Himself with princes; one that by suggestion Ty'd all the kingdom: simony was fair play; His own opinion was his law; 'Tis the presence He would say untruths; and be ever double Both in his words and meaning: He was never, But where he meant to ruin, pitiful: His promises were, as he then was, mighty; But his performance, as he is now, nothing.
Griff. Noble madam, Men's evil manners live in brass; their virtues We write in water. May it please your highness To hear me speak his good now?
Kath. Yes, good Griffith; I were malicious else.
Griff. This cardinal, Though from an humble stock, undoubtedly Was fashion'd to much honour. From his cradle, He was a scholar, and a ripe and good one; Exceeding wise, fair spoken, and persuading: Lofty, and sour, to them that lov'd him not; But, to those men that sought him, sweet as summer. And though he were unsatisfied in getting, (Which was a sin,) yet in bestowing, madam, He was most princely: Ever witness for him Those twins of learning, that he raised in you, Ipswich, and Oxford! one of which fell with him, Unwilling to outlive the good that did it; The other, though unfinish'd, yet so famous, So excellent in art, and still so rising, That Christendom shall ever speak his virtue. His overthrow heap'd happiness upon him; For then, and not till then, he felt himself, And found the blessedness of being little: And, to add greater honours to his age Than man could give him, he died, fearing God.
Kath. After my death I wish no other herald, No other speaker of my living actions, To keep mine honour from corruption, But such an honest chronicler as Griffith. Whom I most hated living, thou hast made me, With thy religious truth, and modesty, Now in his ashes honour: Peace be with him! — Patience, be near me still; and set me lower: I have not long to trouble thee. — Good Griffith, Cause the musicians play me that sad note I nam'd my knell, whilst I sit meditating On that celestial harmony I go to.
Sad and solemn Musick.
Griff. She is asleep: Good wench, let's sit down quiet.
For fear we wake her; — Softly, gentle Patience.
The Vision. — Enter, solemnly tripping one after another, six Personages, clad in white robes, wearing on their heads garlands of bays and golden wands on their faces: branches of bays or palm in their hands. They first congee unto her; then dance; and, at certain changes, the first two hold a spare garland over her head; at which, the other four

1 Of the king.
2 Ipswich
make reverend court'sies; then the two that held the garland, deliver the same to the other next two, who observe the same order in their changes, and holding the garland over her head: which done, they deliver the same garland to the last two, who likewise observe the same order: at which, (as it were by inspiration,) she makes in her sleep signs of rejoicing, and holdeth up her hands to heaven: and so in their dancing they vanish, carrying the garland with them. The musick continues.
Kath. Spirits of peace, where are ye? Are ye all gone? And leave me here in wretchedness behind ye?
Griff. Madam, we are here.
Kath. It is not you I call for: Saw ye none enter, since I slept?
Griff. None, madam.
Kath. No! Saw you not, even now, a blessed troop Invite me to a banquet; whose bright faces Cast thousand beams upon me, like the sun? They promises me eternal happiness; And brought me garlands, Griffith, which I feel I am not worthy yet to wear: I shall, Assuredly.
Griff. I am most joyful, madam, such good dreams Possess your fancy.
Kath. Bid the musick leave, They are harsh and heavy to me. [Musick ceases.
Pat. Do you note, How much her grace is alter'd on the sudden? How long her face is drawn? How pale she looks, And of an earthy cold? Mark you her eyes?
Griff. She is going, wench; pray, pray.
Pat. Heaven comfort her!
Enter a Messenger.
Mess. An't like your grace,—
Kath. You are a saucy fellow:
Deserve we no more reverence?
Griff. You are to blame, Knowing, she will not lose her wonted greatness, To use so rude behaviour: go to, kneel.
Mess. I humbly do entreat your highness' pardon:
My haste made me unmanfully: There is staying A gentleman, sent from the king, to see you.
Kath. Admit him entrance, Griffith: But this fellow Let me ne'er see again.
[Exeunt Griffith and Messenger.
Re-enter Griffith, with Capucius.
If my sight fail not, You should be lord ambassador from the emperor, My royal nephew, and your name Capucius.
Cap. Madam, the same, your servant.
Kath. O, my lord, The times, and titles, now are alter'd strangely With me, since first you knew me. But, I pray you, What is your pleasure with me?
Cap. Noble lady, First, mine own service to your grace; the next, The king's request that I would visit you; Who grieves much for your weakness, and by me Sends you his princely commendations, And heartily entreats you take good comfort.
Kath. O my good lord, that comfort comes too late; 'Tis like a pardon after execution:
That gentle physick, given in time, had cur'd me;
ACT V.

SCENE I. — A Gallery in the Palace.

Enter Gardiner, Bishop of Winchester, a Page with a Torch before him, met by Sir Thomas Lovell.

Gar. It's one o'clock, boy, is't not? Bow. It hath struck.

Gar. These should be hours for necessities, Not for delights; times to repair our nature With comforting repose, and not for us To waste these times. — Good hour of night, sir Thomas!

Whither so late?

Lov. Came you from the king, my lord?

Gar. I did, sir Thomas; and left him at primero With the duke of Suffolk.

Lov. I must to him too, Before he go to bed. I'll take my leave.

Gar. Not yet, sir Thomas Lovell. What's the matter?

It seems, you are in haste: an if there be No great offence belongs to't, give your friend Some touch of your late business: Affairs, that walk (As, they say, spirits do,) at midnight, have In them a wilder nature, than the business That seeks despatch by day.

Lov. My lord, I love you; And durst commend a secret to your ear Much weightier than this work. The queen's in labour, They say, in great extremity; and fear'd, She'll with the labour end.

Gar. The fruit, she goes with, I pray for heartily; that it may find Good time, and live: but for the stock, sir Thomas, I wish it grubb'd up now.

3 Afterwards queen Mary. 4 A game at cards.

And, sure, those men are happy that shall have them, The last is, for my men: — they are the poorest, But poverty could never draw them from me; — That they may have their wages duly paid them, And something over to remember me by; If heaven had pleas'd to have given me longer life, And able means, we had not parted thus. These are the whole contents: — And, good my lord, By that you love the dearest in this world, As you wish Christian peace to souls departed, Stand these poor people's friend, and urge the king To do me this last right.

Lov. Methinks, I could Cry the amen; and yet my conscience says She's a good creature, and, sweet lady, does Deserve our better wishes.

Gar. But, sir, sir, —

 Hear me, sir Thomas: you are a gentleman Of mine own way; I know you wise, religious; And, let me tell you, it will ne'er be well, — 'Twill not, sir Thomas Lovell, take't of me, Till Cranmer, Cromwell, her two hands, and she, Sleep in their graves.

Lov. Now, sir, you speak of two The most remark'd i'the kingdom. As for Cromwell, — Beside that of the jewel-house, he's made master O'the rolls, and the king's secretary: further, sir, Stands in the gap and trade of more preferments, With which the time will load him: The archbishop Is the king's hand, and tongue; And who dare speak One syllable against him?

Gar. Yes, yes, sir Thomas, There are that dare; and I myself have ventur'd To speak my mind of him: and, indeed, this day, Sir, (I may tell it you,) I think, I have Incens'd 5 the lords o'the council, that he is (For so I know he is, they know he is,) A most arch heretick, a pestilence That does infect the land: with which they moved, Have broken with 6 the king; who hath so far Given ear to our complaint, (of his great grace And princely care; foreseeing those fell miscarriages, Our reasons laid before him,) he hath commanded, To-morrow morning to the council-board He be convented. 7 He's a rank weed, sir Thomas, And we must root him out. From your affairs I hinder you too long: good night, sir Thomas.

5 Set on. 6 Toil their minds to. 7 Summoned.
Louv. Many good nights, my lord; I rest your servant. [Exeunt Gardiner and Page.

As Lovell is going out, enter the King and the Duke of Suffolk.

K. Hen. Charles, I will play no more to-night;
My mind's not on't, you are too hard for me.
Suf. I did never win of you before.
K. Hen. But little, Charles; Nor shall not, when my fancy's on my play. —
Now, Lovell, from the queen what is the news? —
Lov. I could not personally deliver to her
What you commanded me, but by her woman
I sent your message; who return'd her thanks
In the greatest humbleness, and desir'd your highness
Most heartily to pray for her,
K. Hen. What say'st thou? ha! To pray for her? what, is she crying out?
Louv. Said so her woman; and that her sufferance
Almost each pang a death.
K. Hen. Alas, good lady!
Suf. God safely quit her of her burden, and
With gentle travail, to the gladding of
Your highness with an heir!
K. Hen. 'Tis midnight, Charles,
Pr'ythee, to bed; and in thy prayers remember
The estate of my poor queen. Leave me alone;
For I must think of that, which company
Will not be friendly to.
Suf. I wish your highness
A quiet night, and my good mistress will Remember in my prayers.
K. Hen. Charles, good night. [Exit Suffolk.

Enter Sir Anthony Denny.

Well, sir, what follows?
Den. Sir, I have brought my lord the archbishop,
As you commanded me.
K. Hen. Ha! Canterbury?
Den. Ay, my good lord.
K. Hen. 'Tis true: Where is he, Denny?
Den. He attends your highness' pleasure.

Louv. This is about that which the bishop spake;
I am happily come hither. [Aside.

Re-enter Denny, with Cranmer.

K. Hen. Avoid the gallery. [Lovell seems to stay.

Ha! — I have said. — Be gone.
What — [Exeunt Lovell and Denny.
Cran. I am fearful: — Wherefore frowns he thus?
Tis his aspect of terror. All's not well.
K. Hen. How now, my lord? You do desire to know
Wherefore I sent for you.
Cran. It is my duty,
To attend your highness' pleasure.
K. Hen. Pray you, arise,
My good and gracious lord of Canterbury.
Come, you and I must walk a turn together;
I have news to tell you: Come, come, give me your hand.
Ah, my good lord, I grieve at what I speak,
And am right sorry to repeat what follows:
I have, and most unwillingly, of late
Heard many grievances, I do say, my lord,
Grievous complaints of you; which, being consider'd,
Have mov'd us and our council, that you shall
This morning come before us; where, I know,
You cannot with such freedom purge yourself,
But that, till further trial, in those charges
Which will require your answer, you must take
Your patience to you, and be well contented
To make your house our Tower: You a brother of us 3,
It fits we thus proceed, or else no witness
Would come against you.
Cran. I humbly thank your highness;
And am right glad to catch this good occasion
Most thoroughly to be winnow'd, where my chaff
And corn shall fly asunder: for, I know,
There's none stands under more calumnious tongues,
Than I myself, poor man.
K. Hen. Stand up, good Canterbury;
Thy truth, and thy integrity, is rooted
In us, thy friend: Give me thy hand, stand up;
Pr'ythee, let's walk. Now, by my holy-dame,
What manner of man are you? My lord, I look'd
You would have given me your petition, that
I should have taken some pains to bring together
Yourself and your accusers; and to have heard you
Without indulgence, further.
Cran. Most dread liege,
The good I stand on is my truth, and honesty;
If they shall fail, I, with mine enemies,
Will triumph o'er my person; which I weigh not,
Being of those virtues vacant. I fear nothing
What can be said against me.
K. Hen. Know you not how
Your state stands i'the world, with the whole world?
Your enemies
Are many, and not small; their practices
Must bear the same proportion: and not ever
The justice and the truth o'the question carries
The due o'the verdict with it: At what ease
Might corrupt minds procure knaves as corrupt
To swear against you? such things have been done.
You are potently oppos'd; and with a malice
Of as great size. Ween 9 you of better treatment,
I mean in perfur'd witness, than your Master,
Whose minister you are, whilsts here he liv'd
Upon this naughty earth? Go to, go to;
You take a precipice for no leap of danger,
And well your own destruction.
Cran. God, and your majesty,
Protect mine innocence, or I fall into
The trap is laid for me!
K. Hen. Be of good cheer;
They shall no more prevail, than we give way to.
Keep comfort to you; and this morning see
You do appear before them: if they shall chance,
In charging you with matters, to commit you,
The best persuasions to the contrary
Fail not to use, and with what vehemency
The occasion shall instruct you: if entreaties
Will render you no remedy, this ring
Deliver them, and your appeal to us
There make before them. — Look, the good man weeps!
He's honest, on mine honour.
I swear, he is true-hearted; and a soul
None better in my kingdom. — Get you gone,
And do as I have bid you. — [Exit Cranmer. He has strangled
His language in his tears.

* One of the council.

* Think.
Enter an old Lady.

Gent. [Within.] Come back; What mean you? Lady. I'll not come back; the tidings that I bring Will make my boldness manners. — Now good angels Fly o'er thy royal head, and shade thy person Under their blessed wings! K. Hen. Now, by thy looks I guess thy message. Is the queen deliver'd? Say, ay; and of a boy.

Lady. Ay, ay, my liege; And of a lovely boy: The God of heaven Both now and ever bless her! — 'tis a girl, Promises boys hereafter. Sir, your queen Desires your visitation, and to be Acquainted with this stranger; 'tis as like you As cherry is to cherry.

K. Hen. Enter Lovell.

Lov. Sir.

K. Hen. Give her an hundred marks. I'll to the queen. [Exit King.

Lady. An hundred marks! by this light, I'll have more. An ordinary groom is for such payment. I will have more, or scold it out of him. Said I for this, the girl is like to him? I will have more, or else unsay't; and now While it is hot, I'll put it to the issue. [Exit.

SCENE II. — Lobby before the Council-Chamber.

Enter Cranmer; Servants, Door-Keeper, &c. attending.

Cran. I hope, I am not too late; and yet the gentleman, That was sent to me from the council, pray'd me To make great haste. All fast? what means this? — Hoa! Who waits there? — Sure you know me? D. Keep. Yes, my lord; But yet I cannot help you. Cran. Why?

D. Keep. Your grace must wait till you be call'd for.

Enter Doctor Butts.

Butts. This is a piece of malice, I am glad I came this way so happily: The king Shall understand it presently. [Exit Butts.

Cran. [Aside.] 'Tis Butts, The king's physician: As he past along, How earnestly he cast his eyes upon me! Pray heaven, he sound not my disgrace! For certain, This is of purpose lay'd, by some that hate me, (God turn their hearts! I never sought their malice,) To quench mine honour: they would shame to make me Wait else at door; a fellow-counsellor, Among boys, grooms, and lackeys. But their pleasures Must be fulfill'd, and I attend with patience.

Enter, at a Window above, the King and Butts.

Butts. I'll show your grace the strangest sight, — K. Hen. What's that, Butts? Butts. I think your highness saw this many a day.

K. Hen. Body o' me, where is it?

Butts. There, my lord; The high promotion of his grace of Canterbury; Who holds his state at door, 'mongst pursuivants, Pages, and foot-boys.

K. Hen. Ha! 'Tis he, indeed: Is this the honour they do one another? 'Tis well, there's one above them yet. I had thought, They had parted so much honesty amongst them, (At least, good manners,) as not thus to suffer A man of his place, and so near our favour, To dance attendance on their lordships' pleasures, And at the door too, like a post with packets. By holy Mary, Butts, there's knavery: Let them alone, and draw the curtain close; We shall hear more anon. — [Exeunt.

The Council-Chamber.

Enter the Lord Chancellor, the Duke of Suffolk, Earl of Surrey, Lord Chamberlain, Gardiner, and Cromwell. The Chancellor places himself at the upper end of the Table, on the left hand; a Seat being left void above him, as for the Archbish-op of Canterbury. The rest seat themselves in order on each side. Cromwell at the lower end, as Secretary.

D. Keep. [Cranmer approaches the Council-Table. Chan. My good lord archbishop, I am very sorry To sit here at this present, and behold That chair stand empty: But we all are men, In our own natures frail; out of which frailty, And want of wisdom, you, that best should teach us, Have misdeem'd yourself, and not a little, Toward the king first, then his laws, in filling The whole realm, by your teaching, and your chap- lains (For so we are inform'd,) with new opinions, Divers and dangerous, which are heresies, And, not reform'd, may prove pernicious. Gar. Which reformation must be sudden too, My noble lords: for those that tame wild horses, Pace them not in their hands to make them gentle; But stop their mouths with stubborn bits, and spur them, Till they obey the manage. If we suffer (Out of our easiness and childish pity To one man's honour) this contagious sickness, Farewell, all physic: And what follows then? Commotions, uproars, with a general taint Of the whole state: as, of late days, our neighbours, The upper Germany, can dearly witness, Yet freshly pitted in our memories. Cran. My good lords, hitherto, in all the progress Both of my life and office, I have labour'd, And with no little study, that my teaching, And the strong course of my authority,
Might go one way, and safely; and the end
Was ever, to do well: nor is there living
(I speak it with a single heart, my lords.)
A man, that more detests, more stirs against,
Both in his private conscience, and his place,
Defacers of a public peace, than I do.
'Pray heaven, the king may never find a heart
With less allegiance in it! Men, that make Envy, and crooked malice, nourishment,
Dare bite the best. I do beseech your lordships,
That, in this case of justice, my accusers,
Be what they will, may stand forth face to face,
And freely urge against me.

Suf.
Nay, my lord,
That cannot be; you are a counsellor,
And, by that virtue, no man dare accuse you.

Gar. My lord, because we have business of more moment,
We will be short with you. 'Tis his highness' pleasure,
And our consent, for better trial of you,
From hence you be committed to the Tower;
Where, being but a private man again,
You shall know many dare accuse you boldly,
More than, I fear, you are provided for.

Cran. Ah, my good lord of Winchester, I thank you,
You are always my good friend; if your will pass,
I shall both find your lordship judge and juror,
You are so meritorious: I see your end,
'Tis my undoing: Love, and meekness, lord,
Become a churchman better than ambition;
Win straying souls with modesty again,
Cast none away. That I shall clear myself,
Lay all the weight ye can upon my patience,
I make as little doubt, as you do conscience,
In doing daily wrongs. I could say more,
But reverence to your calling makes me modest.

Gar. My lord, my lord, you are a sectary,
That's the plain truth; your painted gloss discovers,
To men that understand you, words and weakness.

Cran. My lord of Winchester, you are a little,
By your good favour, too sharp; men so noble,
However faulty, yet should find respect
For what they have been: 'tis a cruelty,
To load a falling man.

Gar. Good master secretary,
I cry your honour mercy; you may, worst
Of all this table, say so.

Crom. Why, my lord?

Gar. Do not I know you for a favourer
Of this new sect? ye are not sound.

Gar. W'ould you were half so honest!
Men's prayers then would seek you, not their fears.

Gar. I shall remember this bold language.

Crom. Do.

Remember your bold life too.

Cham. This is too much;

Forbear, for shame, my lords.

Gar. I have done.

Crom. And I.

Cham. Then thus for you, my lord,—It stands agreed,
I take it, by all voices, that forthwith
You be convey'd to the Tower a prisoner;
There to remain, till the king's further pleasure
Be known unto us: Are you all agreed, lords?

Gar. All. We are.
More out of malice than integrity,
Would try him to the utmost, had ye mean;
Which ye shall never have, while I live.

Cham. Thus far,
My most dread sovereign, may it like your grace
To let my tongue excuse all. What was purposed, Concerning his imprisonment, was rather
(If there be faith in men) meant for his trial,
And fair purgation to the world, than malice;
I am sure, in me.

K. Hen. Well, well, my lords, respect him;
Take him, and use him well, he's worthy of it.
I will say thus much for him, If a prince
May be beholden to a subject, I
Am, for his love and service, so to him.
Make me no more ado, but all embrace him;
Be friends, for shame, my lords. — My lord of Canterbury,
I have a suit which you must not deny me;
That is, a fair young maid that yet wants baptism,
You must be godfather, and answer for her.

Crom. The greatest monarch now alive may glory
In such an honour; How may I deserve it,
That am a poor and humble subject to you?

K. Hen. Come, come, my lord, you'd spare your spoons; you shall have
Two noble partners with you; the old duchess of Norfolk,
And lady marquis Dorset; Will these please you?
Once more, my lord of Winchester, I charge you,
Embrace, and love this man.

Gor. With a true heart,

Crom. And brother-love, I do it.

K. Hen. Good man, those joyful tears show thy true heart.
The common voice, I see, is verified
Of thee, which says thus, Do my lord of Canterbury
A shrewd turn, and he is your friend for ever. —
Come, lords, we trifling time away; I long
To have this young one made a Christian.
As I have made ye one, lords, one remain;
So I grow stronger, you more honour gain.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. — The Palace Yard.

Noise and Tumult within. Enter Porter and his

Man. You'll leave your noise anon, ye rascals:
Do you take the court for Paris-garden 3? ye rude slaves, leave your gaping. 5

[Within.] Good master porter, I belong to the larder.

Port. Belong to the gallows, and be hanged, you rogue: Is this the place to roar in? — Fetch me a dozen crab-tree staves, and strong ones; these are but switches to them. — I'll scratch your heads;
You must be seeing christenings? Do you look for ale and cake here, you rude rascals?

Man. Pray, sir, be patient; 'tis as much impossible
(Unless we sweep them from the door with cannons,)
To scatter them, as 'tis to make them sleep
On May-day morning; which will never be;
We may as well push against Paul's, as stir them.

Port. How got they in, and be hang'd?

1 It was an ancient custom for sponsors to present spoons to their god-children.
2 The bear garden on the Bank-side.
3 Roaring.

Man. Alas, I know not; How gets the tide in?
As much as one sound cudgel of four foot
(You see the poor remainder) could distribute,
I made no spare, sir.

Port. You did nothing, sir.

Man. I am not Samson, nor sir Guy, nor Col-brand 4, to mow them down before me: but, if I spared any, that had a head to hit, either young or old, he or she, let me never hope to see a chine
again.

[Within.] Do you hear, master porter?

Port. I shall be with you presently, good master puppy. — Keep the door close, sirrah.

Man. What would you have me do?

Port. What should you do, but knock them down by the dozens? Is this Moorfields to muster in?

Man. There is a fellow somewhat near the door, he should be a brazier by his face, for, o' my conscience, twenty of the dog-days now reign in's nose; all that stand about him are under the line, they need no other pannage: That fire-drake did I hit three times on the head, and three times was his nose discharged against me; he stands there, like a mortar-piece, to blow us. There was a haberdasher's wife of small wit near him, that railed upon me till her pink'd porringer 5 fell off her head, for kindling such a combustion in the state. I miss'd the meteor 6 once, and hit that woman, who cried out clubs! when I might see from far some forty truncheoners draw to her succour, which were the hope of the Strand, where she was quartered.
They fell on; I made good my place; at length they came to the broom-staff with me, I defied them still; when suddenly a file of boys behind them, loose shot, delivered such a shower of pebbles, that I was fain to draw mine honour in, and let them win the work: The devil was amongst them, I think, surely.

Port. These are the youths that thunder at a play-house, and fight for bitten apples; that no audience, but the Tribulation of Tower-hill, or the limbs of Limehouse, their dear brothers, are able to endure. I have some of them in Limbo Patrum 7, and there they are like to dance these three days;
besides the running banquet of two beadle 8's, that is to come.

Enter the Lord Chamberlair.

Cham. Mercy o' me, what a multitude are here!
They grow still too, from all parts they are coming,
As if we kept a fair here! Where are these porters,
These lazy knaves? — Ye have made a fine hand, fellows.

There's a trim rabble let in: Are all these
Your faithful friends o' the suburbs? We shall have Great store of room, no doubt, left for the ladies,
When they pass back from the christening.

Port. An't please your honour,
We are but men; and what so many may do,
Not being born a pieces, we have done:
An army cannot rule them.

Cham. As I live, If the king blame me for't, I'll lay ye all
By the heels, and suddenly; and on your heads
Clap round fines, for neglect: You are lazy knaves;
And here ye lie baiting of bombards 9, when

4 Guy of Warwick, nor Colbrand the Danish giant.
5 Pink'd cap.
6 The brazier.
7 Place of confinement.
8 A desert of whipping.
9 Black leather vessels to hold beer.
Ye should do service. Hark, the trumpets sound; They are come already from the christening: Go, break among the press, and find a way out To let the troop pass fairly; or I'll find A Marshalsea, shall hold you play these two months.

Port. Make way there for the princess.

Man. Your great fellow, stand close up, or I'll make your head ache.

Port. You i' the camblet, get up o' the rail; I'll pick you o'er the pales else.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV. — The Palace.

Enter Trumpets, sounding; then two Aldermen, Lord Mayor, Garter, Cranmer, Duke of Norfolk, with his Marshal's Staff, Duke of Suffolk, two Noblemen bearing great standing Bowls for the Christening Gifts; then four Noblemen, bearing a Canopy, under which the Duchess of Norfolk, Godmother, bearing the Child richly habitated in a Mantle, &c. Train borne by a Lady; then follows the Marchioness of Dorset, the other Godmother, and Ladies. The Troop pass once about the Stage, and Garter speaks.

Gart. Heaven, from thy endless goodness, send prosperous life, long, and ever happy, to the high and mighty princess of England, Elizabeth.

Flourish. Enter King, and Train.

Cran. [Kneeling.] And to your royal grace, and the good queen, My noble partners, and myself, thus pray: — All comfort, joy, in this most gracious lady, Heaven ever laid up to make parents happy, May hourly fall upon ye! K. Hen. Thank you, good lord archbishop; What is her name? Cran. Elizabeth. K. Hen. Stand up, lord. —

[The King kisses the Child.

With this kiss take my blessing: God protect thee! Into whose hands I give thy life. Cran. Amen. K. Hen. My noble gossips, ye have been too prodigal: I thank ye heartily; so shall this lady, When she has so much English. Cran. Let me speak, sir, For heaven now bids me; and the words I utter Let none think flattery, for they'll find them truth. This royal infant, (Heaven still move about her!) Though in her cradle, yet now promises Upon this land a thousand thousand blessings, Which time shall bring to ripeness: She shall be (But few now living can behold that goodness,) A pattern to all princes living with her, And all that shall succeed: Sheba was never More covetous of wisdom, and fair virtue,

Than this pure soul shall be: all princely graces, That mould up such a mighty piece as this is, With all the virtues that attend the good, Shall still be doubled on her: truth shall nurse her, Holy and heavenly thoughts still counsel her: She shall be lov'd, and fear'd: Her own shall bless her: Her foes shake like a field of beaten corn, And hang their heads with sorrow: Good grows with her:

In her days, every man shall eat in safety Under his own vine, what he plants; and sing The merry songs of peace to all his neighbours. God shall be truly known; and those about her From her shall read the perfect ways of honour, And by those claim their greatness, not by blood. [Nor 5 shall this peace sleep with her: But as when The bird of wonder dies, the maiden Phoenix, Her ashes new create another heir, As great in admiration as herself; So shall she leave her blessedness to one, (When heaven shall call her from this cloud of darkness,) Who, from the sacred ashes of her honour, Shall star-like rise, as great in fame as she was, And so stand fix'd: Peace, plenty, love, truth, terror, That were the servants to this chosen infant, Shall then be his, and like a vine grow to him; Wherever the bright sun of heaven shall shine, His honour and the greatness of his name Shall be, and make new nations: He shall flourish, And, like a mountain cedar, reach his branches To all the plains about him: — Our children's children Shall see this, and bless heaven.

K. Hen. Thou speakest wonders. Cran. She shall be, to the happiness of England, An aged princess; many days shall see her, And yet no day without a deed to crown it. 'Would I had known no more! but she must die, She must, the saints must have her; yet a virgin, A most unsought lily shall she pass To the ground, and all the world shall mourn her. K. Hen. O lord archbishop, Thou hast made me now a man; never, before This happy child, did I get any thing: This oracle of comfort has so pleas'd me, That, when I am in heaven, I shall desire To see what this child does, and praise my Maker. — I thank ye all: — To you, my good lord mayor, And your good brethren, I am much beholden; I have received much honour by your presence, And ye shall find me thankful. Lead the way, lords; Ye must all see the queen, and she must thank ye, She will be sick else. This day, no man think He has business at his house; for all shall stay: This little one shall make it holiday. [Exeunt.

EPILOGUE.

'Tis ten to one, this play can never please All that are here: Some come to take their ease, And sleep an act or two; but those, we fear, We have frightened with our trumpets; so, 'tis clear, They'll say, 'tis naught: others, to hear the city Abus'd extremely, and to cry, — that's witty! Which we have not done neither: that, I fear, All the expected good we are like to hear

1 Pitch. 2 At Greenwich.

For this play at this time, is only in The merciful construction of good women; For such a one we show'd them; If they smile, And say, 'twill do, I know, within a while All the best men are ours; for, 'tis ill hap, If they hold, when their ladies bid them clap.

5 This and the following seventeen lines were probably written by B. Jonson, after the accession of king James.
TROY AND CRESSIDA.

Andromache, Wife to Hector.
Cassandra, Daughter to Priam, a Prophetess.
Cressida, Daughter to Calchas.

Trojan and Greek Soldiers, and Attendants.

SCENE, Troy, and the Grecian Camp before it.
In Troy there lies the scene. From isles of Greece
The princes orgulous ¹, their high blood chaf'd,
Have to the port of Athens sent their ships,
Fraught with the ministers and instruments
Of cruel war: Sixty, and nine, that wore
Their crownets regal, from the Athenian bay
Put forth toward Phrygia: and their vow is made,
To ransack Troy; within whose strong immures
The ravish'd Helen, Menelaus' queen,
With wanton Paris sleeps; and that's the quarrel.

Now on Dardan plains
The fresh and yet unbruiseil Greeks do pitch
Their brave pavilions: Priam's six-gated city,
Dardan, and Tymbria, Ilias, Chetas, Trojan,
And Antenorides, with massy staples,
And corresponsive and fulfilling bolts,
Spear'd up the sons of Troy.
Now, expectation, tickling skittish spirits,
On one and other side, Trojan and Greek
Sets all on hazard: — And hither am I come
A prologue arm'd. — but not in confidence
Of author's pen, or actor's voice; but suited
In like conditions as our argument, —
To tell you, fair beholders, that our play
Leaps o'er the vaunt ² and firstlings of those broils,
'Ginning in the middle; starting thence away
To what may be digested in a play.
Like, or find fault; do as your pleasures are;
Now good, or bad, 'tis but the chance of war.

ACT I.

Enter Troilus armed, and Pandarus.

Tro. Call here my varlet ³; I'll unarm again:
Why should I war without the walls of Troy,
¹ Proud, disdainful. ² Freight. ³ Servant.
That find such cruel battle here within?
Each Trojan, that is master of his heart,
Let him to field; Troilus, alas! hath none.

Pan. Will this geer ⁴ ne'er be mended?

Tro. The Greeks are strong, and skilful to their strength,
⁴ Shut. ¹ Avaunt, what went before. ⁵ Habit.
Fierce to their skill, and to their fierceness valiant;
But I am weaker than a woman's tear,
Tamer than sleep, fonder? than ignorance;
And skill-less as unpractis'd infancy.

Pan. Well, I have told you enough of this: for my part, I'll not meddle nor make no further. He, that will have a cake out of the wheat, must tarry
the grinding.

Tro. Have I not tarry'd?
Pan. Ay, the grinding; but you must tarry the bolting.

Tro. Have I not tarry'd?
Pan. Ay, the bolting; but you must tarry the leavening.

Tro. Still have I tarry'd.
Pan. Ay, to the leavening; but here's yet in the word — hereafter, the kneading, the making of the cake. the heating of the oven, and the baking; nay, you must stay the cooling too, or you may chance to burn your lips.

Tro. Patience herself, what goddess e'er she be,
Doth lesser blink,8 at suffering than I do.
At Priam's royal table do I sit;
And when fair Cressid comes into my thoughts, —
So, traitor! — when she comes! — When is she thence?

Pan. Well, she look'd yesternight fairer than ever
I saw her look, or any woman else.

Tro. I was about to tell thee, — When my heart,
As wedged with a sigh, would rive9 in twain;
Lest Hector or my father should perceive me,
I have (as when the sun doth light a storm,)
Bury'd this sigh in wrinkle of a smile:
But sorrow, that is cou'd in seeming gladness,
Is like that mirth falt turns to sudden sadness.

Pan. An her hair were not somewhat darker than Helen's, (well, go to,) there were no more comparison between the women, — But, for my part,
she is my kinswoman: I would not, as they term it, praise her, — But I would somebody had heard her talk yesterday, as I did. I will not dispraise your sister Cassandra's wit; but —

Tro. O Pandarus! I tell thee, Pandarus, —
When I do tell thee, there my hopes lie drouned,
Reply not in how many fathoms deep
They lie indrench'd. I tell thee, I am mad
In Cressid's love: Thou answer'st, She is fair;
Pour'st in the open ulcer of my heart
Her eyes, her hair, her cheek, her gait, her voice;
Handiest in thy discourse, O, that her hand,
In whose comparison all whites are ink;
Writing their own reproach; to whose soft seizure
The cygnet's down is harsh, and spirit of sense
Hard as the palm of ploughman! This thou tell'st me,
As true thou tell'st me, when I say, — I love her;
But, saying thus, instead of oil and balm,
Thou lay'st in every gash that love hath given me
The knife that made it.

Pan. I speak no more than truth.

Tro. Thou dost not speak so much.

Pan. 'Faith, I'll not meddle in't. Let her be as she is: if she be fair, 'tis the better for her; an she be not, she has the mends in her own hands.

Tro. Good Pandarus! how now, Pandarus?
Pan. I have had my labour for my travel; ill-thought on of her, and ill-thought on of you: gone between and between, but small thanks for my labour.

Tro. What, art thou angry, Pandarus? what, with me?
7 Weaker.
8 Shrink.
9 Split.

Pan. Because she is kin to me, therefore, she's not so fair as Helen: an she were not kin to me, she would be as fair on Friday, as Helen is on Sunday. But what care I? I care not, an she were a black-a-moor; 'tis all one to me.

Tro. Say I, she is not fair?

Pan. I do not care whether you do or no. She's a fool to stay behind her father; let her to the Greeks; and so I'll tell her the next time I see her:
For my part, I'll meddle nor make no more in the matter.

Tro. Pandarus, —

Pan. Not I.

Tro. Sweet Pandarus, —

Pan. Pray you, speak no more to me; I will leave all as I found it, and there an end.

[Exit Pandarus. An Alarum.

Tro. Peace, you ungracious clamours! peace, rude sounds!

Fools on both sides! Helen must needs be fair,
When with your blood you daily paint her thus.
I cannot fight upon this argument;
It is too starv'd a subject for my sword.
But, Pandarus — O gods, how do you plague me!
I cannot come to Cressid, but by Pandar;
And he's as tetchy to be wo'd to woo,
As she is stubborn-chaste against all suit.
Tell me, Apollo, for thy Daphne's love,
What Cressid is, what Pandar, and what we?
Her bed is India; there she lies, a pearl:
Between our Ilium, and where she resides,
Let it be call'd the wild and wandering flood;
Ourself, the merchant; and this sailing Pandar,
Our doubtful hope, our convoy, and our bark.

Alarum. Enter Æneas.

Ænc. How now, prince Troilus? wherefore not a-field?

Tro. Because not there: This woman's answer sorts;
For womanish it is to be from thence.

What news, Æneas, from the field to-day?
Ænc. That Paris is returned home, and hurt.

Tro. By whom?

Ænc. By Menelaus.

Tro. Let him bleed.

[Alarum.

Ænc. Hark! what good sport is out of town today!

Tro. Better at home, if I would, might, were may. —
But, to the sport abroad; — Are you bound thither?
Ænc. In all swift haste.

Tro. Come, go we then together.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. — A Street.

Enter Cressida and Alexander.

Cres. Who were those went by?
Alex. Queen Hecuba, and Helen.
Cres. And whither go they?

Alex. Up to the eastern tower,
Whose height commands as subject all the vale,
To see the battle. Hector, whose patience
Is, as a virtue, fix'd, to-day was mov'd:
He chide Andromache, and struck his armourer;
And, like as there were husbandry in war,
Before the sun rose, he was harness'd light,
And to the field goes he; where every flower, Did, as a prophet, weep what it foresaw In Hector's wrath.

Cres. What was his cause of anger?

Alex. The noise goes, this: There is among the Greeks A lord of Trojan blood, nephew to Hector; They call him Ajax.

Cres. Good; and what of him?

Alex. They say he is a very man per se; And stands alone.

Cres. So do all men; unless they are drunk, sick, or have no legs.

Alex. This man, lady, hath robbed many beasts of their particular additions; he is as valiant as the lion, churlish as the bear, slow as the elephant: a man into whom nature hath so crowded humours, that his valour is crushed into folly, his folly sauced with discretion: there is no man hath a virtue that he hath not a glimpse of; nor any man an attained, but he carries some stain of it: he is melancholy without cause, and merry against the hair: He hath the joints of every thing; but every thing so out of joint, that he is a gouty Briareus, many hands and no use; or purblind Argus, all eyes and no sight.

Cres. But how should this man, that makes me smile, make Hector angry?

Alex. They say, he yesterday coped Hector in the battle, and struck him down; the disdain and shame whereof hath ever since kept Hector fasting and waking.

Enter Pandarus.

Cres. Who comes here?

Alex. Madam, your uncle Pandarus.

Cres. Hector's a gallant man.

Alex. As may be in the world, lady.

Pan. What's that? what's that?

Cres. Good morrow, uncle Pandarus.

Pan. Good morrow, cousin Cressid: what do you talk of? — Good morrow, Alexander. — How do you, cousin? When were you at Ilium?

Cres. This morning, uncle.

Pan. What were you talking of when I came? Was Hector armed, and gone, ere ye came to Ilium? Helen was not up, was she?

Cres. Hector was gone; but Helen was not up.

Pan. E'en so; Hector was stirring early.

Cres. That were we talking of, and of his anger.

Pan. Was he angry?

Cres. So he says, here.

Pan. True, he was so; I know the cause too; he'll lay about him to-day, I can tell them that: and there is Troilus will not come far behind him; let them take heed of Troilus; I can tell them that too.

Cres. What, is he angry, too?

Pan. Who, Troilus? Troilus is the better man of the two.

Cres. O, Jupiter! there's no comparison.

Pan. What, not between Troilus and Hector? Do you know a man, if you see him?

Cres. Ay, if ever I saw him before, and knew him.

Pan. Well, I say, Troilus is Troilus.

Cres. Then you say as I say; for I am sure he is not Hector.

Pan. No, nor Hector is not Troilus, in some degrees.

Cres. 'Tis just to each of them; he is himself.

Pan. Himself? Alas, poor Troilus! I would he were,

Cres. So he is.

Pan. — 'Condition I had gone barefoot to India.

Cres. He is not Hector.

Pan. Himself? no, he's not himself. — 'Would 'a were himself! Well, the gods are above; Time must friend, or end: Well, Troilus, well, — I would my heart were in her body! — No, Hector is not a better man than Troilus.

Cres. Excuse me.

Pan. He is elder.

Cres. Pardon me, pardon me.

Pan. The other's not come to't; you shall tell me another tale, when the other's come to't. Hector shall not have his wit this year.

Cres. He shall not need it, if he have his own.

Pan. Nor his qualities; —

Cres. No matter.

Pan. Nor his beauty.

Cres. 'Twould not become him, his own's better.

Pan. You have no judgment, niece: Helen her self swore the other day, that Troilus, for a brown favour, (for so 'tis, I must confess,) — Not brown neither.

Cres. No, but brown.

Pan. 'Faith, to say truth, brown and not brown.

Cres. To say the truth, true and not true.

Pan. She prais'd his complexion above Paris.

Cres. Why, Paris hath colour enough.

Pan. So he has.

Cres. Then Troilus should have too much: if she praised him above, his complexion is higher than his; he having colour enough, and the other higher, is too flaming a praise for a good complexion. I had as lief Helen's golden tongue had commended Troilus for a copper nose.

Pan. I swear to you, I think Helen loves him better than Paris.

Cres. Then she's a merry Greek, indeed.

Pan. Nay, I am sure she does. She came to him the other day into a compassed window, — and, you know, he has not past three or four hairs on his chin.

Cres. Indeed, a tapster's arithmetick may soon bring his particulars therein to a total.

Pan. Why, he is very young; and yet will be, within three pound, lift as much as his brother Hector.

Cres. Is he so young a man, and so old a lifter? Pan. But, to prove to you that Helen loves him; — she came, and puts me her white hand to his cloven chin, Cres. O, he smiles valiantly.

Pan. Does he not?

Cres. O yes, an 'twere a cloud in autumn.

Pan. Why, go to then: — But to prove to you that Helen loves Troilus, Cres. Troilus will stand to the proof, if you'll prove it so.

Pan. Troilus? why he esteem her no more than I esteem an addle egg.

Cres. If you love an addle egg as well as you love an idle head, you would eat chickens' the shell.

Pan. I cannot choose but laugh, to think how she 7 Thief.

ticked his chin; — Indeed, she has a marvellous white hand, I must needs confess.

Cres. Without the rack.

Pan. And she takes upon her to spy a white hair on his chin.

Cres. Alas, poor chin! many a wart is richer.

Pan. But, there was such laughing; — Queen Hecuba laughed, that her eyes ran o'er.

Cres. With mill-stones. 8

Pan. And Cassandra laughed.

Cres. But there was a more temperate fire under the pot of her eyes; — Did her eyes run o'er too?

Pan. And Hector laughed.

Cres. At what was all this laughing?

Pan. Marry, at the white hair that Helen spied on 'Troilus' chin.

Cres. An't had been a green hair, I should have laughed too.

Pan. They laughed not so much at the hair as at his pretty answer.

Cres. What was his answer?

Pan. Quoth she, Here's but one and fifty hairs on your chin, and one of them is white.

Cres. This is her question.

Pan. That's true; make no question of that. One and fifty hairs, quoth he, and one white: That white hair is my father, and all the rest are his sons. Jupiter! quoth she, which of these hairs is Paris my husband? The forked one, quoth he; pluck it out, and give it him. But, there was such laughing! and Helen so blushed, and Paris so chafed, and all the rest so laughed, that it passed. 9

Cres. So let it now; for it has been a great while going by.

Pan. Well, cousin, I told you a thing yesterday; think on't.

Cres. So I do.

Pan. I'll be sworn, 'tis true; he will weep you an 'twere a man born in April.

Cres. And I'll spring up in his tears, an 'twere a nettle against May. [A Retreat sounded.]

Pan. Hark, they are coming from the field: Shall we stand up here, and see them, as they pass toward Ilium? good niece, do; sweet niece Cressida.

Cres. At your pleasure.

Pan. Here, here, here's an excellent place; here we may see most bravely: I'll tell you them all by their names, as they pass by; but mark Troilus above the rest.

Enough passes over the Stage.

Cres. Speak not so loud.

Pan. That's Enneas; Is not that a brave man? he's one of the flowers of Troy, I can tell you; But mark Troilus; you shall see anon.

Cres. Who's that?

Antenor passes over.

Pan. That's Antenor; he has a shrewd wit, I can tell you; and he's a man good enough; he's one o'the soundest judgments in Troy, whoseover, and a proper man of person: — When comes Troilus? — I'll show you Troilus anon; if he see me, you shall see him nod at me.

Cres. Will he give you the nod? 1

Pan. You shall see.

Cres. If he do, the rich shall have more.

8 A proverbial saying.
9 Went beyond bounds.
1 A term in the game at cards called nodsy.

HECTOR passes over.

Pan. That's Hector, that, that, look you, that; There's a fellow! — Go thy way, Hector; — There's a brave man, niece. — O brave, Hector! — Look, how he looks! there's a countenance: Is't not a brave man?

Cres. — a brave man!

Pan. Is 'a not? It does a man's heart good. — Look you what hacks are on his helmet? look you yonder, do you see? look you there! There's no jesting: there's laying on; ta'k off who will, as they say: there be hacks!

Cres. Be those with swords?

PARIS passes over.

Pan. Swords? any thing, he cares not: an the devil come to him, it's all one: — Yonder comes Paris, yonder comes Paris; look ye yonder, niece; Is't not a gallant man, too, isn't it? — Why, this is brave now. — Who said, he came hurt home to-day? he's not hurt: why this will do Helen's heart good now. Ha! would I could see Troilus now! — you shall see Troilus anon.

Cres. Who's that?

HELENUS passes over.

Pan. That's Helenus, — I marvel, where Troilus is: — That's Helenus; — I think he went not forth to-day: — That's Helenus.

Cres. Can Helenus fight, uncle?

Pan. Helenus? no; — yes, he'll fight indifferent well: — I marvel, where Troilus is! — Hark; do you not hear the people cry, Troilus? — Helenus is a priest.

Cres. What sneaking fellow comes yonder?

TROILUS passes over.

Cres. Peace, for shame, peace!

Pan. Mark him; note him; — O brave Troilus! — look well upon him, niece; look you, how his sword is bloodied, and his helm more hack'd than Hector's; And how he looks, and how he goes! — O admirable youth! he ne'er saw three and twenty. Go thy way, Troilus, go thy way; had I a sister were a grace, or a daughter a goddess, he should take his choice. O admirable man! Paris? — Paris is dirt to him; and, I warrant, Helen, to change, would give an eye to boot.

Forces pass over the Stage.

Cres. Here come more.

Pan. Asses, fools, dolts! chaff and bran, chaff and bran; porridge after meat! I could live and die i'the eyes of Troilus. Ne'er look, ne'er look; the eagles are gone; crows and daws, crows and daws! I had rather be such a man as Troilus, than Aegamemnon and all Greece.

Cres. There is among the Greeks, Achilles; a better man than Troilus.

Pan. Achilles? a drayman, a porter, a very camel.

Cres. Well, well.

Pan. Well, well? — Why, have you any discretion? have you any eyes? Do you know what a man is? Is not birth, beauty, good shape, discourse, manhood, learning, gentleness, virtue, youth, liberality, and such like, the spice and salt that season a man?
Scene III.

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

Cres. Ay, a minc'd man: and then to be baked with no date 2 in the pye, — for then the man's date is out.

Enter Troilus' Boy.

Boy. Sir, my lord would instantly speak with you.

Pan. Where?

Boy. At your own house; there he unasms him.

Pan. Good boy, tell him I come: [Exit Boy.]

I doubt he be hurt. — Fare ye well, good niece.

Cres. Adieu, uncle.

Pan. I'll be with you, niece, by and by.

Cres. To bring, uncle, —

Pan. Ay, a token from Troilus.

Cres. By the same token — you are a pimp. [Exit Pandarus.

Words, vows, griefs, tears, and love's full sacrifice,
He offers in another's enterprise:
But more in Troilus thousand fold I see
Than in the glass of Pandar's praise may be:
Yet hold I off.
That she belov'd knows nought, that knows not this —
Men prize the thing ungain'd more than it is:
That she was never yet that ever knew
Love got so sweet, as when desire did sue:
Therefore this max'm out of love I teach,
Achievement is command; ungain'd, beseech:
Then though my heart's content firm love doth bear,
Nothing of that shall from mine eyes appear. [Exit.

Trumpets. Enter Agamemnon, Nestor, Ulysses, Menelaus, and others.

Agam. Princes, What grief hath set the jaundice on your cheeks? The ample proposition, that hope makes In all designs begun on earth below, Fails in the promis'd largeness; checks and disasters Grow in the veins of actions highest reard; As knots, by the confux of meeting sap, Infect the sound pine, and divert his grain Tortive and errant 3 from his course of growth. Nor, princes, is it matter new to us, That we come short of our suppose so far, That, after seven years' siege, yet Troy walls stand; Sith 4 every action that hath gone before, Whereof we have record, trial did draw Bias and thwart, not answering the aim, And that unboyled figure of the thought That gav'n surpris'd shape, Why then, you princes, Do you with cheeks abash'd behold our works; And think them shames, which are, indeed, nought else.
But the protractive trials of great Jove, To find persistive constancy in men? The fineness of which metal is not found In fortune's love: for them, the bold and coward, The wise and fool, the artist and unread, The hard and soft, seem all affin'd 5 and kin: But, in the wind and tempest of her frown, Distinction, with a broad and powerful fan, Puffing at all, winnows the light away: And what hath mass, or matter, by itself Lies, rich in virtue, and unmingled.

Nest. With due observance of thy godlike seat,
Great Agamemnon, Nestor shall apply
Thy latest words. In the reproof of chance,
Lies the true proof of men: The sea being smooth,
How many shall baluable boats dare sail
Upon her patient breast, making their way
With those of nobler bulk.
But let the rustic Boreas once enrage
The gentle Thetis, and, anon, behold
The strong-riv'ld Barks through liquid mountains cut,
Bounding between the two moist elements,
Like Perseus' horse: Where's then the saucy boat,
Whose weak untimber'd sides but even now
Co-rival'd greatness? either to harbour fled,
Or made a toast for Neptune. Even so
Doth valour's show, and valour's worth, divide,
In storms of fortune: For, in her ray and bright-
ess,
The herd hath more annoyance by the brize 6,
Tian by the tiger: but when the splitting wind
Makes flexible the knees of knotted oaks,
And flies fled under shade, why, then, the thing of Courage, As rous'd with rage, with rage doth sympathize,
And, with an accent 'tnd the self-same key,
Returns to chiding fortune.

Ulyss. Agamemnon,
Thou great commander, nerve and bone of Greece,
Heart of our numbers, soul and only spirit,
In whom the tempers and the minds of all
Should be shut up, — hear what Ulysses speaks.
Besides the applause and approbation,
The which, — most mighty for thy place and sway, — [To Agamemnon.
And thou must reverence for thy stretch'd-out life, —
[To Nestor.
I give to both your speeches, — which were such,
As Agamemnon and the hand of Greece
Should hold up high in brass; and such again,
As venerable Nestor, batch'd in silver,
Should with a bond of air (strong as the axle-tree
On which heaven rides,) knit all the Greekish ears
To his experience'd tongue, — yet let it please both, —
Thou great, — and wise, — to hear Ulysses speak.

Agam. Speak, prince of Ithaca; and be't of less expect?
That matter needless, of importless burden,
Divide thy lips: than we are confident,
When rank Thersites opes his mastiff jaws,
We shall hear music, wit, and oracle.

Ulyss. Troy, yet upon his basis, had been down,
And the great Hector's sword had lack'd a master,
But for the instances.
The specialty of rule 8 hath been neglected:
And, look, how many Grecian tents do stand
Hollow upon this plain, so many hollow factions.
When that the general is not like the hive,
To whom the foragers shall all repair,
What honey is expected? Degree being vizard 9,
The unworthiest shows as fairly in the mask.
The heavens themselves, the planets, and this center,
Observe degree, priority, and place,
Insisture 1, course, proportion, season, form,
Office, and custom, in all line of order;
And therefore is the glorious planet, Sol,
In noble eminence enthron'd and sphere'd
Amidst the other; whose med'cinable eye

3 Dates were an ingredient in ancient pastrty of almost every kind.
4 Since.
5 Twisted and rambling.
6 The gadfly that stings cattle.
7 Expectation.
8 Rights of authority.
9 Masked.
10 Constancy.
Corrects the ill aspects of planets evil,
And posts, like the commandment of a king,
Sans check, to good and bad: But when the planets,
In evil mixture, to disorder wander,
What plagues, and what portents? what mutiny?
What raging of the sea? shaking of earth?
Commotion in the winds? frights, changes, horrors,
Divert and crack, rend and deracinate
The unity and married calm of states
Quite from their fixture? O, when degree is shack'd,
Which is the ladder of all high designs,
The enterprise is sick? How could communities,
In schools, and brotherhoods in cities,
Peaceful commerce from dividable shores,
The premonitive and due of birth,
Prerogative of age, crowns, scepters, laurels,
But by degree, stand in authentick place?
Take but degree away, untune that string,
And, hark, what discord follows! each thing meets
In mere oppugnancy: The bounded waters
Should lift their bosoms higher than the shores,
And make a sop of all this solid globe;
Strength should be lord of imbecility,
And the rude son shall strike his father dead:
Force should be right; or, rather, right and wrong,
(Between whose endless jar justice resides),
Should lose their names, and so should justice too.
Then every thing includes itself in power,
Power into will, will into appetite;
And appetite, an universal wolf,
So doubly seceded with will and power
Must make perforse an universal prey,
And, last, eat up himself. Great Agamemnon,
This chaos, when degree is suffocate,
Follows the choking.
And this neglect in this degree it is,
That by a pace goes backward, with a purpose
It hath to climb. The general's disdain'd
By him one step below; he, by the next;
That next by him beneath: so every step,
Exampt by the first pace that is sick
Of his superior, grows to an envious fever
Of pale and bloodless emulation:
And 'tis this fever that keeps Troy on foot,
Not her own sinews. To end a tale of length,
Troy in our weakness stands, not in her strength.
Next. Most wisely hath Ulysses here discover'd
The fever whereof all our power is sick.
Agam. The nature of the sickness found, Ulysses,
What is the remedy?
Ulyss. The great Achilles,—whom opinion crowns
The sinew and the forehead of our host,—
Having his ear full of his airy fame,
Grows deity of his worth, and in his tent
Lies mocking our designs: With him, Patroclus,
Upon a lazy bed the live-long day
Breaks sullur jests
And with ridiculous and awkward action
(Which, slanderer, he imitation calls),
He pagents us. Sometime, great Agamemnon,
Thy topless? deputation he puts on;
And, like a strutting player,— whose conceit
Lies in his hamstring, and doth think it rich
To hear the wooden dialogue and sound
'Twixt his stretch'd footing and the scaffoldage,
Such to-be-jibbed and o'er-wrested seeming
He acts thy greatness in: and when he speaks,
'Tis like a chime a mending; with terms unsquared,
Which, from the tongue of roaring Typhon dropp'd,
Would seem hyperboles. At this rusty stuff,
The large Achilles, on his press'd bed lolling,
From his deep chest laughs out a loud applause;
Cries — Excellent! 'tis Agamemnon just.
Now play me Nestor; — hem, and stroke thy beard,
As, he being drest to some oration.
That's done; — as near as the extremest ends
Of parallels; as like as Vulcan and his wife:
Yet good Achilles still cries, Excellent!
'Tis Nestor right! Now play him me, Patroclus,
Arming to answer in a night alarm.
And then, forsooth, the faint defects of age
Must be the scene of mirth; to cough and spit,
And with a palsy-fumbling on his gorgor,
Shake in and out the rivet: — and at this sport,
Sir Valour dies; cries, O! — enough, Patroclus; —
Or give me ribs of steel! I shall split all
In pleasure of my spleen. And in this fashion,
All our abilities, gifts, natures, shapes,
Severals and generals of grace exact,
Achievements, plots, orders, preventions,
Examinations to the field, or speech for truce,
Success, or loss, what is, or is not, serves
As stuff for these two to make paradoxes.

Next. And in the imitation of these twain (Whom, as Ulysses says, opinion crowns
With an imperial voice,) many are infect,
Ajax is grown self-will'd; and bears his head
In such a rein, in full as proud a place
As broad Achilles: keeps his tent like him;
Makes factious feasts; rails on our state of war,
Bold as an oracle; and sets Thersites
(A slave, whose gall coins slanders like a mint,)
To match us in comparisons with dirt;
To weaken and discredit our exposure,
How rank soever rounded in with danger.
Ulyss. They tax our policy, and call it cowardice;
Count wisdom as no member of the war;
Forestall prescience, and esteem no act
But that of hand: the still and mental parts,
That do contrive how many hands shall strike,
When fitness calls them on; and know, by measure
Of their observant toil, the enemies' weight,
Why, this hath not a finger's dignity:
They call this — bed-work, mappery, closet-war:
So that the ram, that batters down the wall,
For the great swing and rudeness of his poise,
They place before his hand that made the engine
Or those, that with the fineness of their souls
By reason guide his execution.
Next. Let this be granted, and Achilles' horse
Makes many Thetis' sons. [Trumpets sounded.

Enter Æneas.

Men. From Troy.
Agam. What would you 'fore our tent?

Æne. Is this Great Agamemnon's tent, I pray?

Agam. Even this. Æne. May one that is a herald, and a prince,
Do a fair message to his kingly ears?

Agam. With surety stronger than Achilles' arm
'Fore all the Greekish heads, which with one voice
Call Agamemnon head and general.
Æne. Fair leave and large security. How may
A stranger to those most imperial looks
Know them from eyes of other mortals?
Scene III.

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

Agam. How?

Æne. Ay; I ask, that I might waken reverence, And bid the cheek be ready with a blush Modest as morning when she coldly eyes The youthful Phoebus: Which is that god in office, guiding men? Which is the high and mighty Agamemnon? Agam. This is the Trojan sorns us; or the men of Troy Are ceremonious courtiers. Æne. Courtiers as free, as debonair, unarm'd, As bending angels; that's their fame in peace: But when they would seem soldiers, they have galls, Good arms, strong joints, true swords; and, Jove's accord, Nothing so full of heart. But peace, Æneas, Peace, Trojan; lay thy finger on thy lips! The worthiness of praise disdains his worth, If that the praise'd himself bring the praise forth: But what the repining enemy commends, That breath fame follows; that praise, sole pure, If it transcend. Agam. Sir, you of Troy, call you yourself Æneas? Æne. Ay, Greek, that is my name. Agam. What's your affair, I pray you? Æne. Sir, pardon; 'tis for Agamemnon's ears. Agam. He hears nought privately, that comes from Troy. Æne. Nor I from Troy come not to whisper him: I bring a trumpet to awake his ear: To set his sense on the attentive bent, And then to speak. Agam. Speak frankly, as the wind; It is not Agamemnon's sleeping hour: That thou shalt know, Trojan, he is awake, He tells thee so himself. Æne. Trumpet, blow loud, Send thy brass voice through all these lazy tents;— And every Greek of mettle, let him know, What Troy means fairly, shall be spoken aloud. [Trumpet sounds. We have, great Agamemnon, here in Troy A prince called Hector, (Priam is his father,) Who in this dull and long-continued truce Is rusty grown: he bade me take a trumpet, And to this purpose speak. Kings, princes, lords! If there be one, among the fair'st of Greece, That holds his honour higher than his ease; That seeks his praise more than he fears his peril; That knows his valour, and knows not his fear; That loves his mistress more than in confusion. (With truant vows to her own lips he loves,) And dare avow her beauty and her worth, In other arms than hers, — to him this challenge. Hector, in view of Trojans and of Greeks, Shall make it good, or do his best to do it, He hath a lady, wiser, fairer, truer, Than ever Greek did compass in his arms; And will to-morrow with his trumpet call, Mid-way between your tents and walls of Troy, To rouse a Grecian that is true in love: If any come, Hector shall honour him; If none of them have soul in such a kind, We left them all at home: But we are soldiers; And may that soldier a mere recreant prove,

| That means not, hath not, or is not in love! If then one is, or hath, or means to be, That one meets Hector; if none else, I am he. Nest. Tell him of Nestor, one that was a man When Hector's grandsire suck'd; he is old now; But, if there be not in our Grecian host One noble man, that hath one spark of fire To answer for his love, Tell him from me, — I'll hide my silver beard in a gold beaver, And in my vanthrace I put this wither'd brawn; And, meeting him, will tell him, That my lady Was fairer than his grandame, and as chaste As may be in the world: His youth in flood, I'll prove this truth with my three drops of blood. Æne. Now heaven forbid such scarcity of youth! Ulyss. Amen. Agam. Fair lord Æneas, let me touch your hand; To our pavilion shall I lead you, sir, Achilles shall have word of this intent; So shall each lord of Greece, from tent to tent: Yourself shall feast with us before you go, And find the welcome of a noble foe. [Exeunt all but Ulysses and Nestor. Ulyss. Nestor, or. Nest. What says Ulysses? Ulyss. I have a young conception in my brain, Be you my time to bring it to some shape. Nest. What is't? Ulyss. This 'tis: Blunt wedges rive hard knots: The seeded pride That hath to this maturity blown up In rank Achilles, must or now be cropp'd, Or, shedding, breed a nursery of like evil, To overbulk us all. Nest. Well, and how? Ulyss. This challenge that the gallant Hector sends. However it is spread in general name, Relates in purpose only to Achilles. Nest. The purpose is perspicuous even as substance, Whose grossness little characters sum up: And, in the publication, make no strain, But that Achilles, were his brain as barren As banks of Libya, — though, Apollo knows, 'Tis dry enough, — will with great speed of judgment, Ay, with celerity, find Hector's purpose Pointing on him. Ulyss. And wake him to the answer, think you? Nest. Yes, It is most meet: Whom may you else oppose, That can from Hector bring those honours off, If not Achilles? Though't be a sportful combat, Yet in the trial much opinion dwells; For here the Trojans taste our dear'st repute With their fin'st palate: And trust to me, Ulysses, Our imputation shall be oddly pois'd In this wild action: for the success, Although particular, shall give a scantling Of good or bad unto the general; And in such indexes, although small points To their subsequent volumes, there is seen The baby figure of the giant mass Of things to come at large. It is suppos'd, He, that meets Hector, issues from our choice: And choice, being mutual act of all our souls, Makes merit her election; and doth boil, As 'twere from forth us all, a man distil'd

SCENE I. — Another Part of the Grecian Camp.

Enter Ajax and Thersites.

Ajax. Thersites, learn me the proclamation.
Ther. Thou art proclaimed a fool, I think.
Ajax. I say, the proclamation,
Ther. Thou grumliest and raiest every hour on Achilles; and thou art as full of envy of his greatness, as Cerberus is at Proserpina’s beauty, ay, that thou barkest at him.

Ajax. Mistress Thersites!
Ther. Thou shouldest strike him.
Ajax. Cobloaf!
Ther. He would pun thee into shivers with his fist, as a sailor breaks a biscuit.

Ajax. You cur! [Beating him.]
Ther. Do, do.
Ajax. Thou stool for a witch!
Ther. Ay, do, do; thou sodden-witted lord! thou hast no more brain than I have in mine elbows; an assinge go 4 may tutor thee: Thou scurvy villain ass! thou art here put to trash Trojans; and thou art bought and sold among those of any wit, like a Barbarian slave. If thou use to beat me, I will begin at thy heel, and tell what thou art by inches, thou thing of no bowels, thou!

Ajax. You dog!
Ther. You scurvy lord!
Ther. Mars his idiot! do, rudeness; do, camel, do, do.

Enter Achilles and Patroclus.

Achil. Why, how now, Ajax? wherefore do you thus?
How now, Thersites? what’s the matter, man?
Ther. You see him there, do you?
Achil. Ay; what’s the matter?
Ther. Nay, look upon him.
Achil. So I do; What’s the matter?

Should he ‘scape Hector fair: If he were foil’d,
Why, then we did our main opinion crush
In taint of our best man. No, make a lottery;
And, by device, let blockish Ajax draw
The sort to fight with Hector: Among ourselves,
Give him allowance for the better man,
For that will physic the great Myrmidon,
Who broils in loud applause; and make him fall
His crest, that prouder than blue Iris bends.
If the dull brainless Ajax come safe off,
We’ll dress him up in voices: If he fail,
Yet go we under our opinion still
That we have better men. But, hit or miss,
Our project’s life this shape of sense assumes,—
Ajax, employ’d, plucks down Achilles’ plumes.

Nest. Ulysses,
Now I begin to relish thy advice;
And I will give a taste of it forthwith
To Agamemnon: go we to him straight.
Two curs shall tame each other; Pride alone
Must tarre 8 the mastiffs on, as ’twere their bone.

[Exeunt.

ACT II.

Ther. Nay, but regard him well.
Achil. Well, why I do so.
Ther. But yet you look not well upon him: for whosoever you take him to be, he is Ajax.
Achil. I know that, fool.
Ther. Ay, but that fool knows not himself.
Ajax. Therefore I beat thee.
Ther. Lo, lo, lo, lo, what modicums of wit he utteres! his evasions have ears thus long. I have bobbed his brain, more than he has beat my bones:
This lord, Achilles, Ajax,—who wears his wit in his belly, instead of his head,—I’ll tell you what I say of him.

Achil. What?
Ther. I say this, Ajax——
Achil. Nay, good Ajax.

[ Ajax offers to strike him, Achilles interposes.
Ther. Has not so much wit——
Achil. Nay, I must hold you.
Ther. As will stop the eye of Helen’s needle, for whom he comes to fight.
Achil. Peace, fool!
Ther. I would have peace and quietness, but the fool will not: he there; that he; look you there.
Ajax. O thou cur! I shall——
Achil. Will you set your wit to a fool’s?
Ther. No, I warrant you; for a fool’s will shame it.

Patr. Good words, Thersites.
Achil. What’s the quarrel?
Ajax. I bade the vile owl, go, learn me the tenor of the proclamation, and he rails upon me.
Ther. I serve thee not.
Ajax. Well, go to, go to.
Ther. I serve here voluntary.
Achil. Your last service was sufferance, twas not voluntary; no man is beaten voluntary; Ajax was here the voluntary, and you as under an impress.

Scene II.

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

Weigh you the worth and honour of a king,
So great as our dread father, in a scale
Of common ounces? will you with counters sum
The past-proportion of his infinite?
And buckle-in a waist most fathomless,
With spans and inches so diminutive
As fears and reasons? fye, for godly shame!

Hel. No marble, though you bite so sharp at reasons,
You are so empty of them. Should not our father
Bear the great sway of his affairs with reasons,
Because your speech hath none, that tells him so?

Tro. You are for dreams and slumber, brother priest.
You fur your gloves with reason. Here are your reasons:

You know, an enemy intends you harm;
You know, a sword employ’d is perilous,
And reason flies the object of all harm:
Who marvels then, when Helen beholds
A Grecian and his sword, if he do set
The very wings of reason to his heels;
And fly like chidden Mercury from Jove,
Or like a star disor’d? — Nay, if we talk of reason,
Let's shut our gates and sleep: Manhood and honour
Should have bare hearts, would they but fat their thoughts
With this cram’d reason: reason and respect
Make lives pale, and lusthhood deject.

Hect. Brother, she is not worth what she doth cost
The holding.

Tro. What is aught, but as 'tis valued?
Hect. But value dwells not in particular will;
It holds his estimate and dignity
As well wherein 'tis precious of itself
As in the prizer: 'tis mad idolatry,
To make the service greater than the god;
And the will dotes, that is attributive
To what infectiously itself affects,
Without some image of the affected merit.

Tro. I take to-day a wife, and my election
Is led on in the conduct of my will:
My will enkindled by mine eyes and ears,
Two traded pilots ‘twixt the dangerous shores
Of will and judgment: How may I avoid,
Although my will distaste what it elected,
The wife I chose? there can be no evasion
To banch from this, and to stand firm by honour:
We turn not back the silks upon the merchant,
When we have sold them; nor the remainder viands
We do not throw in unrespective sieve,
Because we now are full. It was thought meet,
Paris should do some vengeance on the Greeks:
Your breath with full consent bellied his sails;
The seas and winds (old wranglers) took a truce,
And did him service: he touch’d the ports desir’d;
And, for an old aunt, whom the Greeks held captive,
He brought a Grecian queen, whose youth and freshness
Wrinkles Apollo’s, and makes pale the morning.
Why keep we her? the Grecians keep our aunt:
Is she worth keeping? why, she is a pearl,
Whose price hath launch’d above a thousand ships,
And turn’d crown’d kings to merchants.
If you’v aouch, ‘twas wisdom Paris went,
(As you must needs, for you all cry’d—Go, go,)
If you’ll confess, he brought home noble prize,
(As you must needs, for you all clapp’d your hands,

Caution.

9 Bitch, hound.
1 Tenths.
And cry'd — Inestimable! — why do you now
The issue of your proper wisdoms rate;
And do a deed that fortune never did,
Beggar the estimation which you priz'd
Richer than sea or land? 'Tis theft most base;
That we have stolen what we do fear to keep!
But, thieves unworthy of a thing so stolen,
That in their country did them that disgrace,
We fear to warrant in our native place!

Cas. [Within.] Cry, Trojans, cry!

Pri. 'What noise? what shriek is this?

Troy, 'tis our mad sister, I do know her voice.

Cas. [Within.] Cry, Trojans!

Hect. It is Cassandra.

Enter Cassandra, roaring.

Cas. Cry, Trojans, cry! lend me ten thousand eyes,
And I will fill them with prophetick tears.

Hect. Peace, sister, peace.

Cas. Virgins and boys, mid-age, and wrinkled elders.

Soft infancy, that nothing canst but cry,
Add to my clamours! let us pay betimes
A moiety of that mass of moan to come.

Cry, Trojans, cry! practise your eyes with tears!
Troy must not be, nor goodly Ilion stand;
Our fire-brand brother, Paris, us all.

Cry, Trojans, cry! a Helen and a woe:
Cry, cry! Troy burns, or else let Helen go.

Hect. Now, youthful Troilus, do not these high strains
Of divination in our sister work
Some touches of remorse? or is your blood
So madly hot, that no discourse of reason,
Nor fear of bad success in a bad cause,
Can qualify the same?

Troy. Why, brother Hector, we may not think the justness of each act
Such and no other than event doth form it;
Nor once deject the courage of our minds,
Because Cassandra's mad; her brain-sick raptures
Cannot distaste the goodness of a quarrel,
Which hath our several honours all engag'd
To make it gracious. For my private part,
I am no more touch'd than all Pram's sons:
And Jove forbid, there should be done amongst us
Such things as might offend the weakest spleen
To fight for and maintain!

Par. Else might the world convince of levy
As well my undertakings as your counsels;
But I attest the gods, your full consent
Gave wings to my propension, and cut off
All fears attending on so dire a project.
For what, alas, can these my single arms?
What propugnation is in one man's valour
To stand the push and emnity of those
This quarrel would excite? Yet, I protest,
Were I alone to pass the difficulties,
And had as ample power as I have will,
Paris should ne'er retract what he hath done,
Nor faint in the pursuit.

Pri. Paris, you speak
Like one besotted on your sweet delights:
You have the honey still, but these the gall;
So to be valiant, is no praise at all.

Par. Sir, I propose not merely to myself
The pleasures such a beauty brings with it;
But I would have the soil of her fair rape
Wip'd off, in honourable keeping her;
What titles were it to the fair Phoebus' queen, —
Disgrace to your great worths, and shame to me,
Now to deliver her possession up,
On terms of base compulsion? Can it be,
That so degenerate a strain as this,
Should once set footing in your generous bosoms?
There's not the meanest spirit on our party,
Without a heart to dare, or sword to draw,
When Helen is defended; nor none so noble,
Whose life were ill bestow'd, or death unfam'd,
Where Helen is the subject; then, I say,
Well may we fight for her, whom, we know well,
The world's large spaces cannot parallel.

Hect. Paris, and Troilus, you have both said well:
And on the cause and question now in hand
Have gloz'd, — but superficially; not much
Unlike young men, whom Aristotle thought
Unfit to hear moral philosophy:
The reasons, you allege, do more conduce
To the hot passion of distemper'd blood,
Than to make up a free determination
'Twixt right and wrong; For pleasure, and revenge,
Have ears for ever deaf unto the voice
Of any true decision. Nature craves,
All dues be render'd to their owners; Now
What nearer debt in all humanity,
Than wife is to the husband? If this law
Of nature be corrupt, through affecion's jet
And that great minds, of partial indulgence
To their benumbed wills, resist the same;
There is a law in each well-order'd nation,
To curb those raging appetites that are
Most disobedient and refractory.

If Helen then be wife to Sparta's king,—
As it is known she is,—these moral laws
Of nature, and of nations, speak aloud
To have her back return'd: Thus to persist
In doing wrong, extenuates not wrong,
But makes it much more heavy. Hector's opinion
Is this, in way of truth: yet ne'ertheless,
My spritely brethren, I propend to you
In resolution to keep Helen offack'd.
For 'tis a cause that hath no mean dependance
Upon our joint and several dignities.

Troy. Why, there you touch'd the life of our design:
Were it not glory that we more affected,
Than the performance of our heaving spleens,
I would not wish a drop of Trojan blood
Spent more in her defence. But, worthy Hector,
She is a theme of honour and renown;
A spur to valiant and magnanimous deeds;
Whose present courage may beat down our foes,
And fame, in time to come, canonize us;
For, I presume, brave Hector would not lose
So rich an advantage of a promis'd glory,
As smiles upon the forehead of this action,
For the wide world's revenue.

Hect. I am yours,
You valiant offspring of great Priamus, —
I have a roisting challenge sent amongst
The dull and factious nobles of the Greeks,
Will strike amazement to their drowsy spirits:
I was advéritis'd, their great general slept,
Whilst emulation in the army crept;
This, I presume, will wake him.

[Exeunt.

8 Commented. 7 Corrupt, change to a worse state. 9 Through.
6 Defence. 8 Elusive. 7 Distemper'd.

Enter Thersites.

Ther. How now, Thersites? what, lost in the labyrinth of thy fury? Shall the elephant Ajax carry it thus? he beats me, and I rail at him: O worthy satisfaction! 'would, it were otherwise; that I could beat him, whilst he railed at me: I'll learn to conjure and raise devils, but I'll see some issue of my spiteful executions. Then there's Achilles, — a rare engineer. If Troy be not taken, till these two undermine it, the walls will stand till they fall of themselves. O thou great thunder-larter of Olympus, forget that thou art Jove the king of gods; and, Mercury, lose all the serpentine craft of thy Caduceus; if ye take not that little less-than-little wit from them that have! which short-armed ignorance itself knows is so abundant scarce, it will not in circumvention deliver a fly from a spider, without drawing their massy irons, and cutting the web. After this, the vengeance on the whole camp! What, ho! my lord Achilles!

Enter Patroclus.

Ther. If I could have remembered a girt counterfeif, thou wouldst not have slipped out of my contemplation; but it is no matter; Thyself upon thyself! The common curse of mankind, folly and ignorance, be thine in great revenue! heaven bless thee from a tutor, and discipline come not near thee! Let thy blood be thy direction till thy death! then if she, that lays thee out, says— thou art a fair corse, I'll be sworn and sworn upon't, she never shrouded any but lazars. Amen. — Where's Achilles?

Patr. What, art thou devout? wast thou in prayer?

Ther. Ay; The heavens hear me!

Enter Achilles.

Achil. Who's there?

Patr. Thersites, my lord.

Achil. Where, where?— Art thou come? Why, my cheese, my digestion, why hast thou not served thyself in to my table so many meals? Come; what's Agamemnon?

Ther. Thy commander, Achilles; — Then tell me, Patroclus, what's Achilles?

Patr. Thy lord, Thersites; Then tell me, I pray thee, what's thyself?

Ther. Thy knower, Patroclus; Then tell me, Patroclus, what art thou?

Patr. Thou mayst tell, that knowest.

Achil. O, tell, tell.

Ther. I'll decline the whole question. Agamemnon commands Achilles; Achilles is my lord; I am Patroclus' knower; and Patroclus is a fool.

Patr. You rascal!

Ther. Peace, fool; I have not done.

Achil. He is a privileged man. — Proceed, Thersites.

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool; Achilles is a fool; Thersites is a fool; and, as aforesaid, Patroclus is a fool.

Achil. Derive this; come.

* The wand of Mercury, which is wreathed with serpents.
* Leprous persons.

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool to offer to command Achilles; Achilles is a fool to be commanded of Agamemnon; Thersites is a fool to serve such a fool; and Patroclus is a fool positive.

Patr. Why am I a fool?

Ther. Make that demand of the prover. — It suffices me, thou art. Look you, who comes here?

Enter Agamemnon, Ulysses, Nestor, Diomedes, and Ajax.

Achil. Patroclus, I'll speak with nobody: —

Come in with me, Thersites. [Exit.]

Ther. Here is such patchery, such juggling, and such knavery! [Exit.]

Agam. Where is Achilles?

Patr. Within his tent; but ill-dispos'd, my lord.

Agam. Let it be known to him, that we are here.

He shent our messengers; and we lay by Our appertainments? visiting of him: Let him be told so; lest, perchance, he think We dare not move the question of our place, Or know not what we are.

Patr. I shall say so to him. [Exit.]

Ulyss. We saw him at the opening of his tent; He is not sick.

Ajax. Yes, lion-sick, sick of proud heart: you may call it melancholy, if you will favour the man; but, by my head, 'tis pride: But why, why? let him show us a cause. — A word, my lord. [Takes Agamemnon aside.]

Nest. What moves Ajax thus to bay at him?

Ulyss. Achilles hath inveigled his fool from him.

Nest. Who? Thersites?

Ulyss. He.

Nest. Then will Ajax lack matter, if he have lost his argument. 8

Ulyss. No; you see, he is his argument, that has his argument; Achilles.

Nest. All the better; their fraction is more our wish, than their faction: But it was a strong composure, a fool could disunite.

Ulyss. The amity that wisdom knits not, folly may easily unite. Here comes Patroclus.

Re-enter Patroclus.

Nest. No Achilles with him.

Ulyss. The elephant hath joints, but none for courtesy: his legs are legs for necessity, not for flexure.

Patr. Achilles bids me say — he is much sorry, If any thing more than your sport and pleasure Did move your greatnesse, and this noble state, To call upon him; he hopes, it is no other, But, for your health and your digestion sake, An after-dinner's breath. 9

Agam. — Hear you, Patroclus; —

We are too well acquainted with these answers: But his evasion, wing'd thus swift with scorn, Cannot outfly our apprehensions. Much attribute he hath; and much the reason Why we ascribe it to him: yet all his virtues, — Not virtuously on his own part beheld, — Do, in our eyes, begin to lose their gloss; Yes, like fair fruit in an unwholesome dish, Are like to rot untasted. Go and tell him, We come to speak with him: And you shall not sin, If you do say — we think him over-proud, And under-honest; in self-assumption greater,

The passage and whole carriage of this action

That, if he overhead his price so much,

Not portable, lie under this report—
Bring action hither, this cannot go to war:
A stirring dwarf we do allowance 4 give

Patr. I shall; and bring his answer presently.

[Exit.]

Agam. In second voice we'll not be satisfied,
We come to speak with him. — Ulysses, enter.

[Exit ULYSSES.

Ajax. What is he more than another?
Agam. No more than what he thinks he is.
Ajax. Is he so much? Do you not think, he thinks himself a better man than I am?
Agam. No question.
Ajax. Will you subscribe his thought, and say —
he is?

Agam. No, noble Ajax; you are as strong, as valiant, as wise, no less noble, much more gentle, and altogether more tractable.
Ajax. Why should a man be proud? How doth pride grow? I know not what pride is.

Agam. Your mind's the clearer, Ajax, and your virtues the fairer. He that is proud, eats up himself; pride is his own glass, his own trumpet, his own chronicle; and whatever praises itself but in the deed, devours the deed in the praise.

Ajax. I do hate a proud man, as I hate the engendering of toads.

Nest. And yet he loves himself: Is it not strange?

[Aside.]

Re-enter Ulysses.

Ulyss. Achilles will not to the field to-morrow.
Agam. What's his excuse?

Ulyss. He doth rely on none; But carries on the stream of his dispose,
Without observation or respect of any,
In will peculiar and in self-admission.

Agam. Why will he not, upon our fair request,
Untent his person, and share the air with us?

Ulyss. Things small as nothing, for request's sake only,
He makes important: Possess'd he is with greatness;
And speaks not to himself, but with a pride
That quarrels at self-breath: imagin'd worth
Holds in his blood such swon and hot discourse,
That, 'twixt his mental and his active parts,
Kingdom'd Achilles in commotion rages,
And batters down himself: What should I say?
He is so plaguy proud, that the death-tokens of it
Cry — No recovery.

Agam. Let Ajax go to him.—

Dear lord, go you and greet him in his tent: 'Tis said, he holds you well; and will be led,
At your request a little from himself.

Ulyss. O Agamemnon, let it not be so!

We'll consecrate the steps that Ajax makes
When they go from Achilles: Shall the proud lord,
That bastes his arrogance with his own seam?;
And never suffers matter of the world
Enter his thoughts, — save such as do revolve
And ruminate himself,— shall he be worship'd
Of that we hold an idol more than he?
No, this thrice worthy and right valiant lord
Must not so stale his palm, nobly acquir'd;
Nor, by my will, assubjugate his merit,
As amply titled as Achilles is,
By going to Achilles:
That were to enlard his fat-already pride;
And add more coals to Cancer, when he burns
With entertaining great Hyperion.
This lord go to him! Jupiter forbid;
And say in thunder — Achilles, go to him.

Nest. O, this is well; he rubs the vein of him.

[Aside.]

Dio. And how his silence drinks up this applause!

[Aside.

Ajax. If I'll go to him, with my arm'd fist I'll push 5

Over the face.

Agam. O, no, you shall not go.

Ajax. An he be proud with me, I'll pheeze? his pride:
Let me go to him.

Ulyss. Not for the worth that hangs upon our quarrel.

Ajax. A paltry, insolent fellow, —

Nest. How he describes Himself! —

[Aside.

Ajax. Can he not be sociable?

Ulyss. The raven

Chides blackness. —

Ajax. I will let his humours blood.

Agam. He'll be physician, that should be the patient.

[Aside.

Ajax. An all men

Were o'my mind, —

Ulyss. Wit would be out of fashion.

[Aside.

Ajax. He should not bear it so,
He should eat swords first: Shall pride carry it?

Nest. An 'twould, you'd carry half.

[Aside.

Ulyss. He'd have ten shares.

[Aside.

Ajax. I'll knead him, I will make him supple; —

Nest. He's not yet thorough warm; force 8 him with praises:

Pour in, pour in; his ambition is dry.

[Aside.

Ulyss. My lord, you feed too much on this dislike.

[To AGAMEMNON.

Nest. O noble general, do not do so.

Dio. You must prepare to fight without Achilles.

Ulyss. Why, 'tis this naming of him does him harm.

Here is a man — But 'tis before his face;
I will be silent.

[Aside.

Nest. Wherefore should you so?
He is not emulous, 3 as Achilles is.

Ulyss. Know the whole world, he is as valiant.

Ajax. A vile dog, that shall palter 1 thus with us!
I would, he were a Trojan!

Nest. What a vice

Were it in Ajax now — —

Ulyss. If he were proud!

Dio. Or covetous of praise?

guide them; especially to you, fair queen! fair thoughts be your fair pillow!
Helen. Dear lord, you are full of fair words.
Pan. You speak your fair pleasure, sweet queen.
— Fair prince, here is good broken musick.
Pan. You have broke it, cousin: and, by my life, you shall make it whole again; you shall piece it out with a piece of your performance: — Nell, he is full of harmony.
Pan. Truly, lady, no.
Helen. O, sir, —
Pan. Rude, in sooth; in good sooth, very rude.
Par. Well said, my lord! well, you say so in fits,
Pan. I have business to my lord, dear queen: —
My lord, will you vouchsafe me a word?
Helen. Nay, this shall not hedge us out: we'll hear you sing certainly.
Pan. Well, sweet queen, you are pleasant with me. — But (marry) thus, my lord, — My dear lord, and most esteemed friend, your brother Troilus, —
Helen. My lord Pandarus; honey sweet lord, —
Pan. Go to, sweet queen, go to: — commends himself most affectionately to you.
Helen. You shall not bob us out of our melody; If you do, our melancholy upon your head!
Pan. Sweet queen, sweet queen; that's a sweet queen, i'faith.
Helen. And to make a sweet lady sad, is a sour offence.
Pan. Nay, that shall not serve your turn; that shall it not, in truth, la. Nay, I care not for such words; no, no. — And, my lord, he desires you, that, if the king call for him at supper, you will make his excuse.
Helen. My lord Pandarus, —
Pan. What says my sweet queen, — my very very sweet queen?
Par. What exploit's in hand? where sups he to-night?
Helen. Nay, but my lord, —
Pan. What says my sweet queen? — My cousin will fall out with you. You must not know where he sups.
Par. I'll lay my life, with my disposer Cressida.
Pan. No, no, no such matter, you are wide; come, your disposer is sick.

ACT III.

SCENE I. — Troy. A Room in Priam's Palace.

Enter Pandarus and a Servant.

Pan. Friend! you! pray you, a word: Do not you follow the young lord Paris?
Serv. Ay, sir, when he goes before me.
Pan. You do depend upon him, I mean?
Serv. Sir, I do depend upon that lord.
Pan. You do depend upon a noble gentleman;
You know me, do you not?
Serv. Faith, sir, superficially.
Pan. Friend, know me better; I am the lord Pandarus.
Serv. I hope, I shall know your honour better.
Pan. Honour and lordship are my titles: —
What musick is this?
Serv. I do but partly know, sir; it is musick in parts.
Pan. Know you the musicians?
Serv. Wholly, sir.
Pan. Who play they to?
Serv. To the hearers, sir.
Pan. At whose pleasure, friend?
Serv. At mine, sir, and theirs that love musick.
Pan. Command, I mean, friend.
Serv. Who shall I command, sir?
Pan. Friend, we understand not one another; I am too courtly, and thou art too cunning: At whose request do these men play?
Serv. That's to't; indeed, sir: Marry, sir, at the request of Paris my lord, who is there in person; with him the mortal Venus, the heart-blood of beauty, love's invisible soul, —
Pan. Who, my cousin Cressida?
Serv. No, sir, Helen; Could you not find out that by her attributes?
Pan. It should seem, fellow, that thou hast not seen the lady Cressida. I come to speak with Paris from the prince Troilus: I will make a complimential assault upon him, for my business seeths.
Serv. Sudden business! there's a stewed phrase, indeed!

Enter Paris and Helen, attended.

Pan. Fair be to you, my lord, and to all this fair company! fair desires, in all fair measure, fairly

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA

Act III.

SCENE II. — Pandarus’ Orchard.

Enter Pandarus and a Servant, meeting.

Pan. How now? where’s thy master? at my cousin Cressida’s?
Serv. No, sir; he stays for you to conduct him thither.

Enter Troilus.

Pan. O, here he comes. — How now, how now?
Tro. Sirrah, walk off. [Exit Servant.
Pan. Have you seen my cousin?
Tro. No, Pandarus: I stalk about her door,
Like a strange soul upon the Stygian banks
Staying for waftage. O, be thou my Charon,
And give me swift transportance. Pandarus,
From Cupid’s shoulder pluck his painted wings,
And fly with me to Cressid!
Pan. Walk here i’ the orchard, I’ll bring her straight.
[Exit Pandarus.
Tro. I am giddy; expectation whirls me round.
The imaginary relish is so sweet
That it enchants my sense; and I do fear
That I shall lose distinction in my joys;
As doth a battle, when they charge on heaps
The enemy flying.

Re-enter Pandarus.

Pan. She’s making her ready, she’ll come straight:
you must be witty now. She does so blush, I’ll fetch her. It is the prettiest villain: — she fetches her breath as short as a new-ta’en sparrow.

Enter Pandarus and Cressida.

Pan. Come, come, what need you blush? shame’s a baby. — Here she is now: swear the oath now to her, that you have sworn to me. — What are you gone again? you must be watched ere you be made tame, must you? Come your ways, come your ways; an you draw backward, we’ll put you in the fills. — Why do you not speak to her?
Tro. You have bereft me of all words, lady.
Pan. Words pay no debts. Come in, come in;
I’ll go get a fire. [Exit Pandarus.
Cres. Will you walk in, my lord?
Tro. O Cressida, how often have I wished me thus?
Cres. Wished, my lord? — The gods grant! — O my lord!
Tro. What should they grant? what makes this pretty abruption? What too curious drug espies my sweet lady in the fountain of our love?
Cres. More dregs than water, if my fears have eyes.
Tro. Fears never see truly.
Cres. Blind fear, that seeing reason leads, finds safer footing than blind reason stumbling without fear: To fear the worst, oft cures the worst.
Tro. O, let my lady apprehend no fear: in all Cupid’s pageant there is presented no monster.
Cres. Nor nothing monstrous neither?

7 Shafts of a carriage.
Scene II.

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

Tro. Nothing, but our undertakings: when we vow to weep seas, live in fire, eat rocks, tame tigers: thinking it harder for our mistress to devise imposition enough, than for us to undergo any difficulty imposed. This is the monstruousity in love, lady.

Cres. They that have the voice of lions, and the act of hares, are they not monsters?

Tro. Are there such things? such are not we: Praise us as we are tasted, allow us as we prove; our head shall go bare, till merit crown it: no perfection in revision shall have a praise in present: we will not name desert, before his birth; and, being born, his addition shall be humble. Few words to fair faith: Troilus shall be such to Cressid, as what envy can say worst, shall be a mock for his truth; and what truth can speak truest, not truer than Troilus?

Cres. Will you walk in, my lord?

Re-enter Pandar.

Pan. What, blushing still?

Cres. Well, uncle, what folly I commit, I dedicate to you.

Pan. I thank you for that; be true to my lord: if he flinch, chide me for it.

Tro. You know now your hostages; your uncle's word, and my firm faith.

Pan. Nay, I'll give my word for her too; our kindred, though they be long ere they are woed, they are constant, being won: they are burs, I can tell you; they'll stick where they are thrown.

Cres. Boldness comes to me now, and brings me heart:—

Prince Troilus, I have lov'd you night and day For many weary months.

Tro. Why was my Cressid then so hard to win?

Cres. Hard to seem won; but I was won, my lord, With the first glance that ever—Pardon me;— If I confess much, you will play the tyrant. I love you now; but not, till now, so much But I might master it:—in faith, I lie; My thoughts were like unbridled children, grown Too headstrong for their mother: See, we fools! Why have I blab'd? who shall be true to us, When we are so unsecret to ourselves? But, though I lov'd you well, I wo'd you not; And yet, good faith, I wish'd myself a man; Or that we women had men's privilege Of speaking first. Sweet, bid me hold my tongue; For, in this rapture, I shall surely speak The thing I shall repent. See, see your silence, Cuming in dumbness, from my weakness draws My very soul of counsel: Stop my mouth.

Tro. And shall, albeit sweet music issues thence.

Pan. Pretty! I pray you, let it.

Cres. My lord, I do beseech you, pardon me; 'Twas not my purpose, thus to beg a kiss: I am ashamed:—Oh heavens! what have I done?— For this time will I take my leave, my lord, Tro. Your leave, sweet Cressid?

Cres. Pray you, content you.

Tro. What offends you, lady?

Cres. Sir, mine own company.

Tro. You cannot shun Yourself.

Cres. Let me go and try: I have a kind of self resides with you; But an unkind self, that itself will leave, To be another's fool. I would be gone: Where is my wit? I know not what I speak.

Tro. Well know they what they speak, that speak so wisely.

Cres. Perchance, my lord, I show more craft than love; And fell so roundly to a large confession, To angle for your thoughts: But you are wise; Or else you love not; for to be wise and love, Exceeds man's might; that dwells with gods above.

Tro. O, that I thought it could be in a woman, (As, if it can, I will presume in you,) To feed for aye her lamp and flames of love; To keep her constancy in plight and youth, Outliving beauty's outward, with a mind That doth renew swifter than blood decays; Or, that persuasion could but thus convince me,— That my integrity and truth to you Might be afforded with the match and weight Of such a winnow'd purity in love; How were I then uplifted! but, alas, I am as true as truth's simplicity, And simpler than the infancy of truth.

Cres. In that I'll war with you.

Tro. O virtuous fight, When right with right wars who shall be most right! True swains in love shall, in the world to come, Approve their truths by Troilus: when their rhymes, Full of protest, of oath, and big compare, Want similes, truth tir'd with iteration,— As true as steel, as plantage to the moon, As sun to day, as turtle to her mate, As iron to adamant, as earth to the center,— Yet, after all comparisons of truth, As truth's authentick author to be cited, As true as Troilus shall crown up the verse, And sanctify the numbers.

Cres. Prophet may you be! If I be false, or swerve a hair from truth, When time is old and hath forgot itself, When waterdrops have worn the stones of Troy, And blind oblivion swallow'd cities up, And mighty states characterless are grated To dusty nothing; yet let memory, From false to false, among false maids in love, Upbraid my falsehood! when they have said—as false As air, as water, wind, or sandy earth, As fox to lamb, as wolf to heifer's calf, Pard to the hind, or stepdame to her son; Yea, let them say, to stick the heart of falsehood, As false as Cressid.

Pan. Go to, a bargain made: seal it, seal it; I'll be the witness. —Here I hold your hand; here, my cousin's. If ever you prove false one to another, since I have taken such pains to bring you together, let all pity goers between be called to the world's end after my name, call them all—Pandars; let all inconstant men be Troiluses, all false women Cressids, and all brokers between Pandars! say, amen.

Tro. Amen.

Cres. Amen.

SCENE III. — The Grecian Camp.

Enter Agamemnon, Ulysses, Diomedes, Nestor, Ajax, Menelaus, and Calchas.

Cal. Now, princes, for the service I have done you, The advantage of the time prompts me aloud To call for recompense. Appear it to your mind,
That, through the sight I bear in things, to Jove
I have abandon'd Troy, left my possession,
Incur'd a traitor's name; expos'd myself,
From certain and posses'd conveniences,
To doubtful fortunes, s'équestring from me all
That time, acquaintance, custom, and condition,
Made tame and most familiar to my nature;
And here, to do you service, am become
As new into the world, strange, unacquainted:
I do beseech you, as in way of taste,
To give me now a little benefit,
Out of those many register'd in promise,
Which, you say, live to come in my behalf.

_Agam._ What wouldst thou of us, Trojan? make demand.

_Cal._ You have a Trojan prisoner call'd Antenor,
Yesterday took; Troy holds him very dear,
Oft have you (often you have thanks therefore,) Desir'd my Cressid in right great exchange,
Withal Troy paid still denied: But this Antenor,
I know, is such a wrest in their affairs,
That their negotiations all must slack,
Wanting his manage; and they will almost
Give us a prince of blood, a son of Priam,
In change of him: let him be sent, great princes,
And he shall buy my daughter: and her presence
Shall quite strike off all service I have done,
In most accepted pain.

_Agam._ Let Diomedes bear him,
And bring us Cressid hither; Calchas shall have
What he requests of us. — Good Diomed,
Furnish you fairly for this interchange:
Withal, bring word — if Hector will to-morrow
Be answer'd in his challenge: Ajax is ready.

_Dio._ This shall I undertake; and 'tis a burden
Which I am proud to bear.

[Exeunt Diomedes and Calchas.

Enter Achilles and Patroclus, before their Tent.

_Ulyss._ Achilles stands, 'tis the entrance of his tent: —
Please it our general to pass strangely 4 by him,
As if he were forgot; and, princes all,
Lay negligent and loose regard upon him:
I will come last: 'Tis like, he'll question me,
Why such unpleasing eyes are bent, why turn'd on
him;
If so, I have derision med'cinable,
To use between your strangeness and his pride,
Which his own will shall have desire to drink;
It may do good: pride hath no other glass
To show itself, but pride; for supple knees
Feed arrogance, and are the proud man's fees.

_Agam._ We'll execute your purpose, and put on
A form of strangeness as we pass along; —
So do each lord; and either greet him not,
Or else disdainfully, which shall shake him more
Than if not look'd on. I will lead the way.

_Achil._ What, comes the general to speak with me?
You know my mind, I'll fight no more 'gainst Troy.

_Agam._ What says Achilles? would he aught with us?

_Nest._ Would you, my lord, aught with the general?

_Achil._ No.

_Nest._ Nothing, my lord.

_Agam._ The better.

[Exeunt Agamemnon and Nestor.

_Achil._ Good day, good day.

_Men._ How do you? how do you?

[Exit Menelaus.

_Achil._ What, does the cuckold scorn me?

_Ajax._ How now, Patroclus?

_Achil._ Good morrow, Ajax.

_Ajax._ Ha?

_Achil._ Good morrow.

_Ajax._ Ay, and good next day too.

_Achil._ What mean these fellows? Know they not Achilles?

_Patr._ They pass by strangely: they were us'd to bend,
To send their smiles before them to Achilles:
To come as humbly, as they us'd to creep
To holy altars.

_Achil._ What, am I poor of late?
'Tis certain, greatness, once fall'n out with fortune,
Must fall out with men too: What the declin'd is,
He shall as soon read in the eyes of others,
As feel in his own fall: for men, like butterflies,
Show not their mealy wings but to the summer;
And not a man, for being simply man,
Hath any honour: but honour for those honours
That are without him, as place, riches, favour,
Prizes of accident as oft as merit:
Which when they fall, as being slippery standers,
The love that lean'd on them as slippery too,
Do one pluck down another, and together
Die in the fall. But 'tis not so with me:
Fortune and I are friends; I do enjoy
At ample point all that I did possess,
Save these men's looks; who do, methinks, find out
Something not worth in me such rich beholding
As they have often given. Here is Ulysses;
I'll interrupt his reading. —

_How now, Ulysses?

_Ulyss._ Now, great Thetis' son?

_Achil._ What are you reading?

_Ulyss._ A strange fellow here
Writes me, That man — how dearly ever parted,
How much in having, or without, or in, —
Cannot make boast to have that which he hath,
Nor feels not what he owes, but by reflection;
As when his virtues shining upon others
Heat them, and they retort that heat again
To the first giver.

_Achil._ This is not strange, Ulysses.
The beauty that is borne here in the face
The bearer knows not, but commends itself
To others' eyes: nor doth the eye itself
(That most pure spirit of sense,) behold itself,
Not going from itself; but eye to eye oppos'd
Salutes each other with each other's form.
For speculation turns not to itself,
Till it hath travell'd, and is married there
Where it may see itself: this is not strange at all.

_Ulyss._ I do not strain at the position,
It is familiar; but at the author's drift:
Who, in his circumstance 5, expressly proves —
That no man is the lord of any thing,
(Though in and of him there be much consisting,) Till he communicate his parts to others:
Nor doth he of himself know them for aught
Till he behold them form'd in the applause
Where they are extended; which, like an arch, reverberates
The voice again; or like a gate of steel
Fronting the sun, receives and renders back
His figure and his heat. I was much rapt in this;
Scene III.

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

And apprehended here immediately
The unknown Ajax.
Heavens, what a man is there! a very horse;
That has he knows not what. Nature, what things there are,
Most abject in regard, and dear in use!
What things again most dear in the esteem,
And poor in worth! now shall we see to-morrow,
An act that very chance doth throw upon him,
Ajax renown'd. O heavens, what some men do,
While some men leave to do!
How some men creep in skittish fortune's hall,
Whiles others play the idiots in her eyes!
How one man eats into another's pride,
While pride is fasting in his wantonness!
To see these Grecian lords! — why, even already
They clap the lubber Ajax on the shoulder;
As if his foot were on brave Hector's breast,
And great Troy shrinking.

Achil. I do believe it: for they pass'd by me,
As hiss by briers: neither gave to me
Good word, nor look:
What, are my deeds forgot?

Ulyss. Time hath, my lord, a wallet at his back,
Wherein he puts alms for oblivion,
A great-sized monster of ingratiations:
Those scraps are good deeds past: which are devour'd
As fast as they are made, forgot as soon
As done: Perséverance, dear my lord,
Keeps honour bright: To have done is to hang Quite out of fashion, like a rusty mail
In monumental mockery. Take the instant way;
For honour travels in a strait so narrow,
Where one blythe base soul is put to the path;
For emulation hath a thousand sons,
That one by one pursu'd: if you give way,
Or hedge aside from the direct forthright,
Like to an enter'd tide they all rush by,
And leave you hindsmost; —
Or, like a gallant horse fallen in first rank,
Lie there for pavement to the abject rear,
O'er-run and trampled on: Then what they do in present,
Though less than yours in past, must o'ertop yours:
For time is like a fashionable host,
That slightly shakes his parting guest by the hand;
And with his arms out-stretch'd, as he would fly,
Grasps in the corner: Welcome ever smiles,
And farewell goes out sighing. O, let not virtue Remuneration for the thing it was;
For beauty, wit,
High birth, vigour of bone, desert in service,
Love, friendship, charity, are subjects all
To envious and calumniating time.
One touch of nature makes the whole world kin,—
That all, with one consent, praise new-born gawds?,
Though they are made and moulded of things past;
And give to dust, that is a little gilt,
More laud than gilt o'er-dusted.
The present eye praises the present object:
Then marvel not, thou great and complete man,
That all the Greeks begin to worship Ajax;
Since things in motion sooner catch the eye,
Than what not stirs. The cry went once on thee,
And still it might; and yet it may again,
If thou wouldst not entomb thyself alive,
And case thy reputation in thy tent;
Whose glorious deeds, but in these fields of late,
Made emulous missions8 amongst the gods themselves,
And drave great Mars to faction.

Achil. Of this my privacy
I have strong reasons.

Ulyss. But 'gainst your privacy
The reasons are more potent and heroical:
'Tis known, Achilles, that you are in love
With one of Priam's daughters.9

Achil. Ha! known?

Ulyss. Is that a wonder?

The providence that's in a watchful state,
Knows almost every grain of Plutus' gold;
Finds bottom in the uncomprehensive deeps;
Keeps place with thought, and almost like the gods,
Does thoughts unveil in their dumb cradles.
There is a mystery (with whom relation Durst never meddle) in the soul of state;
Which hath an operation more divine,
Than breath, or pen, can give express to:
All the commerce that you have had with Troy,
As perfectly as ours, as yours, my lord;
But it must grieve young Pyrrhus now at home,
When fame shall in our islands sound her trump;
And all the Grecian girls shall tripping sing,—
Great Hector's sister did Achilles win;
But our great Ajax bravely beat down him.

Farewell, my lord: I as your lover speak;
The fool slides o'er the ice that you should break.

[Exit.

Patr. To this effect, Achilles, have I mov'd you:
A woman impudent and mannish grown
Is not more loath'd than an effeminate man
In time of action. I stand condemn'd for this;
They think, my little stomach to the war,
And your great love to me, restrains you thus:
Sweet, rouse yourself; and the weak wanton Cupid
Shall from your neck unloose his amorous fold,
And, like a dew-drop from the lion's mane,
Be shook to air.

Achil. Shall Ajax fight with Hector?

Patr. Ay; and, perhaps, receive much honour by him.

Achil. I see, my reputation is at stake;
My fame is shrewdly gord.'

Patr. O, then beware;
Those wounds heal ill, that men do give themselves:
Omission to do what is necessary
Seals a commission to a blank of danger;
And danger, like anague, subtly taints
Even then when we sit idly in the sun.

Achil. Go call Thersites hither, sweet Patroclus:
I'll send the fool to Ajax, and desire him
To invite the Trojan lords after the combat,
To see us here unarm'd: I have a woman's longing,
An appetite that I am sick withal,
To see great Hector in his weeds of peace;
To talk with him, and to behold his visage,
Even to my full of view. A labour sav'd!

Enter Thersites.

Ther. A wonder!

Achil. What?

Ther. Ajax goes up and down the field, asking for himself.

Achil. How so?

Ther. He must fight singly to-morrow with Hector; and is so prophetically proud of an heroicudgelling, that he raves in saying nothing.

ACT IV.

SCENE I. — Troy.  A Street.

Enter, at one side, Æneas and Servant, with a Torch; at the other, PARIS, DELPHINUS, ANTENOR, DIOMEDES, and others, with Torches.

Par. See, ho! who's that there?

Del. 'Tis the lord Æneas.

Æne. Is the prince there?

Dio. Good morrow, lord Æneas.

Par. A valiant Greek, Æneas; take his hand; Witness the process of your speech, wherein You told — how Diomed, a whole week by days, Did haunt you in the field.

Æne. Health to you, valiant sir, During all question of the gentle truce: But when I meet you arm'd, as black defiance, As heart can think, or courage execute.

Dio. The one and other Diomed embraces. Our bloods are now in calm; and, so long, health; But when contention and occasion meet, By Jove, I'll play the hunter for thy life, With all my force, pursuit, and policy.

Æne. And thou shalt hunt a lion, that will fly With his face backward. — In humane gentleness, Welcome to Troy! now, by Anchises' life, Welcome, indeed! By Venus' hand I swear, No man alive can love, in such a sort, The thing he means to kill, more excellently.

Dio. We sympathize: — Jove, let Æneas live, If to my sword his fate be not the glory, A thousand complete courses of the sun!

But, in mine emulous honour, let him die, With every joint a wound: and that to-morrow!
Æne. We know each other well.

Dio. We do; and long to know each other worse.

Par. This is the most despicable gentle greeting, The noblest hateful love, that 'er I heard of. — What business, lord, so early?

Æne. I was sent for to the king; but why, I know not.

Par. His purpose meets you: 'Twas to bring this Greek To Calchas' house; and there to render him, For the enfréed Antenor, the fair Cressida: Let's have your company: or, if you please, Haste there before us: I constantly do think, (Or, rather, call my thought a certain knowledge.) My brother Troilus lodges there to-night; Reuse him, and give him note of our approach, With the whole quality wherefore: I fear We shall be much unwelcome.

Æne. That I assure you; Troilus had rather Troy were borne to Greece, Than Cressid borne from Troy.

Par. There is no help; The bitter disposition of the time Will have it so. On, lord; we'll follow you.

Æne. Good morrow, all.

Par. And tell me, noble Diomed; 'tis true, Even in the soul of sound good-fellowship, —
SCENE II.

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

Who, in your thoughts, merits fair Helen best, Myself, or Menelaus?

Troilus. Both alike:
He merits well to have her, that doth seek her
With such a hell of pain, and world of charge:
And you as well to keep her, that defend her
With such a costly loss of wealth and friends.
She's bitter to her country; Hear me, Paris,—
For every false drop in her wanton veins
A Grecian's life hath sunk; for every scrupe
Of her contaminat coward weight,
A Trojan hath been slain: since she could speak,
She hath not given so many good words breath,
As for her Greeks and Trojans suffer'd death.
Pan. Fair Diomed, you do as chapmen do,
Dispraise the thing that you desire to buy:
But we in silence hold this virtue well,
We'll not commend what we intend to sell.

Herc lies our way.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Court before the House of Pandarus.

Enter Troilus and Cressida.

Troilus. Dear, trouble not yourself; the morn is cold.

Cressida. Then, sweet my lord, I'll call mine uncle down;
He shall unbolt the gates.

Troilus. Trouble him not:
To bed, to bed: Sleep kill the pretty eyes,
And give as soft attachment to thy senses,
As infants' empty of all thought:
Good morrow then.

Cressida. Pr'ythee now, to bed.

Troilus. Are you awearie of me?

Cressida. O Cressida! but that the busy day,
Wak'd by the lark, hath rous'd the ribilad 6 crows,
I would not from thee.

Pr'ythee, tarry then;
You men will never tarry.

O foolish Cressid! — I might have still hold off,
And then you would have tarried. Hark! there's one up.

Pan. Within.) What, are all the doors open here?

Troilus. It is your uncle.

Enter Pandarus.

Cressida. A pestilence on him! now will he be mocking:
I shall have such a life,—

Pan. How now, how now! where's my cousin Cressid?

Cressida. Come, come; beshrue your heart! you'll ne'er be good,
Nor suffer others.

Pan. Ha, ha! Alas, poor wretch! a poor weak

Cressida. Did I not tell you? — 'would be were Who's that at door? good uncle, go and see.—

[Knocking.]

How earnestly they knock! — pray you, come in;
I would not for half Troy have you seen here.

[Exeunt Troilus and Cressida.

Pan. [Going to the door.) Who's there? what's the matter?
How now? what's the matter?

Enter Enneas.

Enneas. Good morrow, lord, good morrow.

6 Noisy.
TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

ACT IV.

Pan. Do, do.

Cres. Tear my bright hair, and scratch my praised cheeks,
Crack my clear voice with sobs, and break my heart
With sounding Troilus. I will not go from Troy.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III. — Before Pandarus' House.

Enter Paris, Troilus, Æneas, Deiphobus, Antenor, and Diomedes.

Par. It is great morning; and the hour prefix'd
Of her delivery to this valiant Greek.
Comes fast upon: — Good my brother Troilus,
Tell you the lady what she is to do,
And haste her to the purpose.

Tro. Walk in to her house;
I'll bring her to the Grecian presently:
And to his hand when I deliver her,
Think it an altar; and thy brother Troilus
A priest, there offering to it his own heart.

[Exit. Par. I know what 'tis to love;
And 'would, as I shall pity, I could help! —
Please you, walk in, my lords.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV. — A Room in Pandarus' House.

Enter Pandarus and Cressida.

Pan. Be moderate, be moderate.
Cres. Why tell you me of moderation?
The grief is fine, full, perfect, that I taste,
And violenteth in a sense as strong
As that which causeth it: How can I moderate it?
If I could temperize with my affection,
Or brew it to a weak and colder palate,
The like allayment could I give my grief:
My love admits no qualifying dross:
No more my grief, in such a precious loss.

Enter Troilus.

Pan. Here, here, here he comes. — Ah, sweet ducks!
Pan. What a pair of spectacles is here! Let me embrace too: — How now, lambs?

Tro. Cressid, I love thee in so strait a purity,
That the best gods — as angry with my fancy,
More bright in zeal than the devotion which
Cold lips blow to their deities, — take thee from me.

Cres. Have the gods envy?
Pan. Ay, ay, ay, ay; 'tis too plain a case.
Cres. And is it true, that I must go from Troy?

Tro. A hateful truth.

Cres. What, and from Troilus too?

Tro. From Troy and Troilus.

Cres. Is it possible?

Tro. And suddenly; where injury of chance Puts back leave-taking, justles roughly by
All time of pause, rudely beguiles our lips
Of all rejoicure, forcibly prevents
Our lock'd embasures, strangles our dear vows
Even in the birth of our own labouring breath:
We two, that with so many thousand sighs
Did buy each other, must poorly sell ourselves
With the rude brevity and discharge of one.
Injurious time now, with a robber's haste,
Crams his rich thievry up, he knows not how:
As many farewells as be stars in heaven,
With distinct breath and consign'd kisses to them,
He fumbles up into a short adieu;
And scant's us with a single famish'd kiss,
Distasted with the salt of broken tears.

Æne. [Within.] My lord! is the lady ready?

Tro. Hark! you are call'd: Some say, the Genius
Cries, Come! to him that instantly must die. —
Bid them have patience: she shall come anon.
Pan. Where are my tears? rain, to lay this wind,
Or my heart will be blown up by the root!

Cres. I must then to the Greeks?

Tro. No remedy.
Cres. A woeful Cressid! 'mongst the merry Greeks!
When shall we see again?

Tro. Hear me, my love! Be thou but true of heart.

Cres. I true! how now? what wicked deem is this?

Tro. Nay, we must use expostulation kindly,
For it is parting from us:
I speak not, be thou true, as fearing thee;
For I will throw my glove to death himself,
That there's no maculation3 in thy heart:
But, be thou true, say I, to fashion in;
My sequent protestation: be thou true,
And I will see thee.

Cres. O, you shall be expos'd, my lord, to dangers
As infinite as imminent! but, I'll be true.

Tro. And I'll grow friend with danger. Wear this sleeve.
Cres. And you this glove. When shall I see you?

Tro. I will corrupt the Grecian sentinels,
To give thee nightly visits.
But yet, be true.

Cres. O heavens! — be true again?

Tro. Hear why I speak it, love;

The Grecian youths are full of quality;
They're loving, well compos'd, with gifts of nature flowing,
And swelling o'er with arts and exercise;
How novelty may move, and parts with person,
Alas, a kind of godly jealousy
(Which, I beseech you, call a virtuous sin)
Makes me afraid.

Cres. O heavens! you love me not.

Tro. Die I a villain then?

In this I do not call your faith in question,
So mainly as my merit; I cannot sing,
Nor hear the high lavolt, nor sweeten talk,
Nor play at subtle games; fair virtues all,
To which the Grecians are most prompt and pregnant:
But I can tell, that in each grace of these
There lurks a still and dumb-discourseful devil,
That tempts most cunningly: but be not tempted.

Cres. Do you think I will?

Tro. No.

But something may be done, that we will not:
And sometimes we are devils to ourselves,
When we will tempt the frailty of our powers,
Presuming on their changeful potency.

Æne. [Within.] Nay, good my lord,

Tro. Come, kiss; and let us part.

Par. [Within.] Brother Troilus!

Tro. Good brother, come you hither;
And bring Æneas, and the Grecian, with you.

Cres. My lord, will you be true?

Tro. Who, I? alas, it is my vice, my fault:

While others fish with craft for great opinion,
I with great truth catch mere simplicity;
When some with cunning gild their copper crowns,
With truth and plainness I do wear mine bare.
Fear not my truth; the moral of my wit
Is — plain, and true — there's all the reach of it.

Enter Æneas, Paris, Antenor, Deiphobus, and Diomedes.
Welcome, sir Diomed! here is the lady,
Which for Antenor we deliver you:
At the port 6 lord, I'll give her to thy hand;
And, by the way, possess 7 thee what she is.
Entreat her fair; and, by my soul, fair Greek,
If e'er thou stand at mercy of my sword,
Name Cressid, and thy life shall be as safe
As Priam is in Ilion.

Dio. Fair lady Cressid, so please you, save the thanks this prince expects:
The lustre in your eye, heaven in your cheek,
Pleads your fair usage; and to Diomed
You shall be mistress, and command him wholly.

Tro. Grecian, thou dost not use me courteously.
To shame the zeal of my petition to thee,
In praising her: I tell thee, lord of Greece,
She is as far high-soaring o'er thy praises,
As thou unworthy to be called her servant.
I charge thee, use her well, even for my charge;
For, by the dreadful Pluto, if thou dost not,
Though the great bulk Achilles be thy guard,
I'll cut thy throat.

Dio. O, be not mov'd, prince Troilus:
Let me be privil'd by my place, and message,
To be a speaker free; when I am hence,
I'll swear to my will: And know you, lord,
I'll nothing do on charge; To her own worth
She shall be priz'd: but that you say — be'st so,
I'll speak it in my spirit and honour, — no.

Tro. Come, to the port. — I'll tell thee, Diomed,
This brave shall oft make thee to hide thy head.
Lady, give me your hand; and, as we walk,
To our own selves bend we our needful talk.
[Exit Troilus, Cressida, and Diomed.
[Trumpet heard.]

Par. Hark! Hector's trumpet.
Æne. How have we spent this morning!
The prince must think I am tardy and remiss,
That I was not to ride before him to the field.
Par. 'Tis Troilus' fault: Come, come to field with him.

Dec. Let us make ready straight.
Æne. Yea, with a bridegroom's fresh alacrity,
Let us address to tend on Hector's heels:
The glory of our Troy doth this day lie,
On his fair worth and single chivalry.
[Exeunt.

Enter Ajax armed; Agamemnon, Achilles, Patroclus, Menelaus, Ulysses, Nestor, and others.
Agam. Here art thou in appointment 8 fresh and fair,
Anticipating time with starting courage.
Give with thy trumpet a loud note to Troy,
Thou dreadful Ajax; that the appalled air
May pierce the head of the great combatant,
And hale him hither.

Ajax. Thou, trumpet, there's my purse.

Now crack thy lungs, and split thy brazen pipe:
Blow, villain, till thy sphere'd bias check
Out-swell the colick of puff'd Aquilon:
Come, stretch thy chest, and let thy eyes spout blood;
Thou blow'st for Hector. [Trumpet sounds.
Ulyss. No trumpet answers.
Achil. 'Tis but early days.
Agam. Is not yon Diomed, with Calchas' daughter?
Ulyss. 'Tis he, I ken the manner of his gait:
He rises on the toe: that spirit of his
In aspiration lifts him from the earth.

Enter Diomed, with Cressida.

Agam. Is this the lady Cressid?
Dio. Even she.
Agam. Most dearly welcome to the Greeks, sweet lady.
Nest. Our general doth salute you with a kiss.
Ulyss. Yet is the kindness but particular;
'Twere better, she were kiss'd in general.
Nest. And very courteously: I'll begin.

So much for Nestor.

Achil. I'll take that winter from your lips, fair lady:
Achilles bids you welcome.

Cres. I am your debtor.

Dio. Lady, a word; — I'll bring you to your father.

[Diomed leads out Cressida.

Nest. A woman of quick sense.
Ulyss. Fye, fye upon her!
Thee's language in her eye, her cheek, her lip,
Nay, her foot speaks; her wanton spirits look out
At every joint and motive 9 of her body.
O, these encounters, so glib of tongue,
That give a coaxing welcome ere it comes,
And wide unclasp the tables of their thoughts
To every ticklish reader! set them down
For sluttish spoils of opportunity,
And daughters of the game.

[Trumpet within.

Achil. The Trojans' trumpet.
Agam. Yonder comes the troop.

Enter Hector, armed; Æneas, Troilus, and other Trojans, with Attendants.

Æne. Hail, all the state of Greece! what shall be done
To him that victory commands? Or do you purpose,
A victor shall be known? will you the knights
Shall to the edge of all extremity
Pursue each other; or shall they be divided
By any voice or order of the field?
Hector bade ask.

Agam. Which way would Hector have it?

Æne. He cares not, he'll obey conditions.
Achil. 'Tis done like Hector; but securely done,
A little proudly, and great deal misprizing
The knight oppos'd.

Æne. If not Achilles, sir,
What is your name?

Achil. If not Achilles, nothing.

Æne. Therefore Achilles: But, whate'er, know this;
In the extremity of great and little,
Valour and pride excel themselves in Hector;
The one almost as infinite as all,
The other blank as nothing. Weigh him well,
And that, which looks like pride, is courtesy.
This Ajax is half made of Hector's blood:
In love wherewith half Hector stays at home;

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

Act IV.

Half heart, half hand, half Hector comes to seek
This blended knight, half Trojan, and half Greek.

Re-enter Diomed.

_Agam._ Here is sir Diomed:—Go, gentle knight,
Stand by our Ajax: as you and lord Æneas
Consent upon the order of their fight,
So be it; either to the uttermost,
Or else a breath: the combatants being kin,
Half stints their strike before their strokes begin.

[Ajax and Hector enter the Lists.]

_Ulyss._ They are oppos'd already.

_Agam._ What Trojan is that same that looks so heavy?

_Ulyss._ The youngest son of Priam, a true knight;
Not yet mature, yet matchless; firm of word;
Speaking in deeds, and deedless in his tongue;
Not soon provok'd, nor, being provok'd, soon calm'd:
His heart and hand both open, and both free;
For what he has, he gives; what thinks, he shows;
Yet gives he not, till judgment guide his bounty,
Nor dignifies an impair thought with breath:
Manly as Hector, but more dangerous;
For Hector, in his blaze of wrath, subscribes
To tender objects; but he, in heat of action,
Is more vindicative than jealous love:
They call him Troilus; and on him erect
A second hope, as fairly built as Hector.
Thus says Æneas: one that knows the youth
Even to his inches, and, with private soul,
Did in great Ilium thus translate 4 him to me. 5

[Alarum. Hector and Ajax fight.]

_Agam._ They are in action.

_Nest._ Now, Ajax, hold thine own!

_Tro._ Hector, thou sleep'st; Awake thee!

_Agam._ His blows are well dispos'd:—there, Ajax!

_Dio._ You must no more. [Trumpets cease.]

_Rœne._ Princes, enough, so please you.

_Ajax._ I am not warm yet, let us fight again.

_Dio._ As Hector pleases.

_Hect._ Why, then, will I no more:—
Thou art, great lord, my father's sister's son,
A cousin-german to great Priam's seed;
The obligation of our blood forbids
A gory emulation 'twixt us twain:
Were thy commission Greek and Trojan so,
That thou couldst say—This hand is Grecian all,
And this is Trojan; the sword of this leg
All Greek, and this all Troy; my mother's blood
Runs on the dexter 5 check, and this sinister 6
Bounded in my father's; by Jove multiplet,
Thou shouldst not bear from me a Greekish member
Wherein my sword had not impressure made
Of our rank feud: But the just gods gainsay,
That any drop thou borrow'st from thy mother,
My sacred aunt, should by my mortal sword
Be drain'd! Let me embrace thee, Ajax:
By him that thunders, thou hast lusty arms;
Hector would have them fall upon him thus:
Cousin, all honour to thee!

_Ajax._ I thank thee, Hector:
Thou art too gentle, and too free a man:
I came to kill thee, cousin, and bear hence
A great addition earned in thy death.

_Hect._ Not Neoptolemus so mirable
(On whose bright crest, Fame with her loud'st 5 O yes Cries, This is he,) could promise to himself

A thought of added honour torn from Hector.

_Aene._ There is expectance here from both the sides,
What further you will do.

_Hect._ We'll answer it;
The issue is embracement:—Ajax, farewell.

_Ajax._ If I might in entreaties find success,
(As seld? I have the chance,) I would desire
My famous cousin to our Grecian tents.

_Dio._ 'Tis Agamemnon's wish: and great Achilles
Doth long to see unarmed the valiant Hector.

_Hect._ Æneas, call my brother Troilus to me:
And signify this loving interview
To the expecters of our Trojan part;
Desire them home.—Give me thy hand, my cousin;
I will go eat with thee, and see your knights.

_Ajax._ Great Agamemnon comes to meet us here.

_Hect._ The worthiest of them tell me name by name;
But for Achilles, my own searching eyes
Shall find him by his large and portly size.

_Agam._ Worthy of arms, as welcome as to one
That would be rid of such an enemy.
But that's no welcome: Understand more clear,
What's past, and what's to come, is strew'd with husks
And formless ruin of oblivion;
But in this extant moment, faith and troth,
Strain'd purely from all hollow bias-drawing
Bids thee, with most divine integrity,
From heart of very heart, great Hector, welcome.

_Hect._ I thank thee, most imperious 8 Agamemnon.

_Agam._ My well-fam'd lord of Troy, no less to you.

[To Troilus.]

_Men._ Let me confirm my princely brother's greeting:—

You brace of warlike brothers, welcome hither.

_Hect._ Whom must we answer?

_Men._ The noble Menelaus.

_Hect._ O you, my lord? by Mars his gauntlet, thanks!

Mock not, that I affect the untraded oath;
Your guardam wife swears still by Venus' glove:
She's well, but bade me not commend her to you.

_Men._ Name her not now, sir; she's a deadly theme.

_Hect._ O pardon; I offend.

_Nest._ I have, thou gallant Trojan, seen thee oft,
Labouring for destiny, make cruel way
Through ranks of Greekish youth: and I have seen thee,
As hot as Perses, spur thy Phrygian steed,
Despising many forfeits and subduements,
When thou hast hung thy advanced sword i' the air,
Not letting it decline on the declin'd;
That I have said to some my standers-by,
Lo, Jupiter is yonder, dealing life!
And I have seen thee pause, and take thy breath,
When that a ring of Greeks have himm'd thee in,
Like an Olympian wrestling: This have I seen;
But this thy countenance, still lock'd in steel,
I never saw till now. I knew thy grandsire, 9
And once fought with him; he was a soldier good;
But, by great Mars, the captain of us all,
Never like thee: Let an old man embrace thee;
And, worthy warrior, welcome to our tents.

_Rœne._ 'Tis the old Nestor.

_Hect._ Let me embrace thee, good old chronicler,
That hast so long walk'd hand in hand with time:—
Most reverend Nestor, I am glad to clasp thee.

7 Scholiast. 8 Imperial. 9 Laomedon.
ACT V.

Enter Achilles and Patroclus.

Achil. 1 I’ll heat his blood with Greekish wine to-night,
Which with my scimitar I’ll cool to-morrow. —
Patr. Here comes Thersites.

[Exeunt.

ACT V.

Enter Thersites.

Achil. How now, thou core of envy!
Thou crusty batch of nature, what’s the news?
Ther. Why, thou picture of what thou seest,
And idol of idiot-worshippers, here’s a letter for thee.
Achil. From whence, fragment?
Ther. Why, thou full dish of fool, from Troy.
Patr. Who keeps the tent now?
Ther. The surgeon’s box, or the patient’s wound.

1 Observed.
2 Forename.
3 Stithy, is a smith’s shop.
4 Feast.
5 Small drums.
Patr. Well said, Adversity! and what need these tricks?

Ther. Pr'ythee be silent, boy; I profit not by thy talk.

Patr. Why, you ruinous butt; you indistinguishable cur.

Ther. Why art thou exasperate, thou idle immaterial skain of sleeve 8 silk, thou green sarcenet flap for a sore eye, thou tassel of a prodigal's purse, thou? Al, how the poor world is pestered with such water-flies; diminutives of nature!

Achil. My sweet Patroclus, I am thwarted quite
From my great purpose in to-morrow's battle,
Here is a letter from queen Hecuba;
A token from her daughter, my fair love;
Both taxing me, and gaging me to keep
An oath that I have sworn. I will not break it:
Fall, Greeks; fall, fame; honour, or go, or stay,
My major vow lies here, this I'll obey.—
Come, come, Thersites, help to trim my tent;
This night in banqueting must all be spent.
Away, Patroclus.

[Exeunt Achilles and Patroclus.

Pat. With too much blood, and too little brain, these two may run mad; but if with too much brain, and too little blood, they do, we'll be a curer of madmen.
Here's Agamemnon,—an honest fellow enough, but he has not so much brain as ear-wax: And the kindly transformation of Jupiter there, his brother, the bull,—the primitive statue, and oblique memorial of cuckolds 9; a thifty shoe-ning-horn in a chain, hanging at his brother's leg,— to what form, but that he is, should wit larded with malice, and malice forced 1 with wit, turn him to? To an ass, were nothing: he is both ass and ox: to an ox, were nothing; he is both ox and ass.
To be a dog, a mule, a cat, a fitchew 8, a toad, a lizard, an owl, a puttock, or a herring without a roe, I would not care: but to be Menelaus,—I would conspire against destiny. Ask me not what I would be, if I were not Thersites; for I care not to be the louse of a Lazar 8, so I were not Menelaus. —Hey-day! spirits and fires!

Enter Hector, Troilus, Ajax, Agamemnon, Ulysses, Nestor, Menelaus, and Diomed, with Lights.

Agam. We go wrong; we go wrong.

Ajax. No, yonder 'tis;

There, where we see the lights.

Hect. I trouble you.

Ajax. No, not a whit.

Ulyss. Here comes himself to guide you.

Enter Achilles.

Achil. Welcome, brave Hector: welcome, princes
all!

Agam. So now, fair prince of Troy, I bid good night.

Ajax commands the guard to tend on you.

Hect. Thanks, and good night to the Greeks' general.

Men. Good night, my lord.

Hect. Good night, sweet Menelaus.

Achil. Good night,

And welcome, both to those that go or tarry.

Agam. Good night.

[Exeunt Agamemnon and Menelaus.

7 Contrariety.
8 Coarse, unwrought.
9 Menelaus.
1 Stuffed.
2 Polecat.
3 A diseased beggar

Achil. Old Nestor tarries; and you too, Diomed,
Keep Hector company an hour or two.

Dio. I cannot, lord; I have important business,
The while whereof is now. — Good night, great Hector.

Hect. Give me your hand.

Ulyss. Follow his torch, he goes
To Calchus' tent; I'll keep you company.

[Dio exits.

Hect. And so good night.

[Exit Diomed; Ulysses and Troilus following.

Achil. Come, come, enter my tent.

[Exeunt Achilles, Hector, Ajax, and Nestor.

Ther. That same Diomed's a false-hearted rogue, a most unjust knave; I will no more trust him when he leers, than I will a serpent when he hisses:
he will spend his mouth, and promise, like Brabler
the hound; but when he performs, astronomers foretell it: it is prodigious, there will come some change; the sun bothers of the moon, when Diomed keeps his word. I will rather leave to see Hector, than not to dog him: they say, he keeps a Ligian drab, and uses the traitor Calchus' tent: Ill after. [Exit.

SCENE II. — Before Calchus' Tent.

Enter Diomedes.

Dio. What are you up here, ho? speak.

Cal. [Within.] Who calls?

your daughter?

Cal. [Within.] She comes to you.

Enter Troilus and Ulysses, at a distance; after them Thersites.

Ulyss. Stand where the torch may not discover us.

Enter Cressida.

Tro. Cressid, come forth to him!

Dio. How now, my charge?

Cres. Now, my sweet guardian! — Hark! a word with you. [Whispers.

Tro. Yea, so familiar!

Ulyss. She will sing any man at first sight.

Ther. And any man may sing her, if he can take her cliff 8; she's noted.

Dio. Will you remember?

Dio. Nay, but do then;
And let your mind be coupled with your words.

Tro. What should she remember?

Ulyss. List!

Cres. Sweet honey Greek, tempt me no more to folly.

Ther. Roguery!

Dio. Nay, then, —

Cres. I'll tell you what:

Dio. Pho, pho! come, tell a pin: You are for-sworn. —

Cres. In faith, I cannot: What would you have me do?

Dio. What did you swear?

Cres. I pr'ythee, do not hold me to mine oath;
Bid me do any thing but that, sweet Greek.

4 Portentous, ominous.
5 Key.
Scene II. TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

Tro. Good night.

Yl. Hold, patience!

Cres. How now, Trojan?

Diom. No, no, good night: I'll be your fool no more.

Tro. Thy better must.

Cres. Hark! one word in your ear.

Diom. O plague and madness!

Yl. You are mov'd, prince; let us depart, I pray you.

Lest your displeasure should enlarge itself
To wrathful terms; this place is dangerous;
The time right deadly; I beseech you, go.

Tro. Behold, I pray you!

Yl. Now, good my lord, go off:
You flow to great destruction: come, my lord.

Tro. I pr'ythee, stay.

Yl. You have not patience: come.

Tro. I pray you, stay; by hell, and all hell's plagues,
I will not speak a word.

Diom. And so, good night.

Cres. Nay, but you part in anger.

Tro. Doth that grieve thee?

O neither'd truth!

Yl. Why, how now, lord?

Tro. By Jove, I will be patient.

Cres. Guardian! — why, Greek!

Diom. Pho, pho! adieu; you palter. —

Cres. In faith, I do not; come hither once again.

Yl. You shake, my lord, at something; will you go?

You will break out.

Tro. She strokes his check!

Yl. Come, come.

Tro. Nay, stay; by Jove, I will not speak a word:
There is between my will and all offences
A guard of patience; — stay a little while.

Diom. But will you then?

Cres. In faith, I will, I; never trust me else.

Diom. Give me some token for the surety of it.

Cres. I'll fetch you one. [Exit.

Yl. You have sworn patience.

Tro. Fear me not, my lord;

I will not be myself, nor have cognition?

Of what I feel; I am all patience.

Re-enter Cressida.

Ther. Now the pledge; now, now, now, now!

Cres. Here, Diomed, keep this sleeve.

Tro. O beauty! where's thy fault?

Yl. My lord, —

Tro. I will be patient; outwardly I will.

Cres. You look upon that sleeve; Behold it well.—

He loved me — O false wench! — Give't me again.

Diom. Who was't?

Cres. No matter, now I have't again.

I will not meet with you to-morrow night:
I pr'ythee, Diomed, visit me no more.

Ther. Now she sharpens; — Well said, wheatsone.

Diom. I shall have it.

Cres. What, this?

Diom. Ay, that.

Cres. O, all you gods! — O pretty, pretty pledge! Thy master now lies thinking in his bed
Of thee and me; and sighs, and takes my glove,
And gives memorial dainty kisses to it,
As I kiss thee. — Nay, do not snatch it from me;
He, that takes that, must take my heart withal.

Dio. I had your heart before, this follows it.

Cres. You shall not have it, Diomed; 'faith you shall not;
I'll give you something else

Diom. I will have this; Whose was it?

Cres. 'Tis no matter.

Diom. Come, tell me whose it was.

Cres. 'Twas one's that loved me better than you will.

But, now you have it, take it.

Diom. Whose was it?

Cres. By all Diana's waiting-women yonder, —

And by herself, I will not tell you whose.

Diom. To-morrow will I wear it on my helm;

And grieve his spirit that dares not challenge it.

Ther. Wert thou the devil, and worst it on thy horn,
It should be challeng'd.

Cres. Well, well, 'tis done, 'tis past; — And yet it is not;

I will not keep my word.

Diom. Why then, farewell;

Thou never shalt mock Diomed again.

Cres. You shall not go: — One cannot speak a word,

But it straight starts you.

Diom. I do not like this fouling.

Ther. Nor I, by Pluto: but that that likes not you, pleases me best.

Diom. What, shall I come? the hour?

Cres. Ay, come: — O Jove! —

Do come: — I shall be plaguid.

Diom. Farewell till then.

Cres. Good night. I pr'ythee, come. —

[Exit Diomedes.

Troilus, farewell! one eye yet looks on thee;

But with my heart the other eye doth see.

Ah! poor our sex! this fault in us I find,

The error of our eye directs our mind:

What error leads, must err; O then conclude,

Minds, sway'd by eyes, are full of turpitude.

Yl. All's done, my lord.

Tro. It is.

Yl. Why stay we then?

Tro. To make a recordation to my soul

Of every syllable that here was spoke.

But, if I tell how these two did co-act,

Shall I not lie in publishing a truth?

Sith yet there is a credence in my heart,

An esperance so obstinately strong:

That doth invert the attest of eyes and ears;

As if those organs had deceptive functions,

Created only to calumniate.

Was Cressid here?

Yl. I cannot conjure, Trojan.

Tro. She was not, sure.

Yl. Most sure she was.

Tro. Why, my negation hath no taste of madness.

Yl. Nor mine, my lord: Cressid was here but now.

Tro. Let it not be believ'd for womanhood!

Think, we had mothers; do not give advantage

To stubborn critics — apt, without a theme,

For depravation, — to square the general sex.

By Cressid's rule: rather think this not Cressid.

Yl. What hath she done, prince, that can soil our mothers?

8 The stars.

9 Remembrance.

1 For the sake of.

2 Cyrus.
TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

Act V.

TROILUS. Nothing at all, unless that this were she.

THER. Will he swagger himself out on's own eyes?

TRO. This she? no, this is Diomed's Cressida:
If beauty have a soul, this is not she;
If souls guide vows, if vows be sanctuary,
If sanctimony be the gods' delight,
If there be rule in unity itself,
This was not she. O madness of discourse,
That cause sets up with and against itself!
Bi-fold authority! where reason can revolt
Without perdition, and loss assume all reason
Without revolt; this is, and is not, Cressid!
Within my soul there doth commence a fight
Of this strange nature, that a thing inseparable
Divides more wider than the sky and earth;
And yet the spacious breadth of this division
Admits no orifice for a point, as subtle
As is Arachne's broken web, to enter.
Instance, O instance! strong as Pluto's gates;
Cressid is mine, tied with the bonds of heaven;
Instance, O instance! strong as heaven itself;
The bonds of heaven are slipp'd, dissolv'd, and loos'd;
And with another knot, five-finger-tied,
The fractions of her faith, oaths of her love,
The fragments, scraps, the bits, and greasy reliques
Of her o'er-eaten faith are bound to Diomed.

ULYSSES. May worthy Troilus be half attach'd
With that which here his passion doth express?
TRO. Ay, Greek; and that shall be divulged well
In characters as red as Mars his heart
Infam'd with Venus: never did young man fancy
With so eternal and so fix'd a soul.
HARK, Greek;— As much as I do Cressid love,
So much by weight hate I her Diomed:
That sleeve is mine, that he'll bear on his helm;
Were it a casque compos'd by Vulcan's skill,
My sword should bite it: not the dreadful spout,
Which shipmen do the hurricano call
Constring'd in mass by the almighty sun
Shall dizz'y with more clamour Neptune's ear
In his descent, than shall my promised sword
Falling on Diomed.

THER. He'll tickle it.
TRO. O Cressid! O false Cressid! false, false, false!
Let all untruths stand by thy stained name,
And they'll seem glorious.
ULYSSES. O, contain yourself;
Your passion draws ears hither.

Enter æneas.

Æneas. I have been seeking you this hour, my lord:
Hector, by this, is arming him in Troy;
Ajax, your guard, stays to conduct you home.
TRO. Have with you, prince:—My courteous lord, adieu:
Farewell, revolted fair!—and, Diomed,
Stand fast, and wear a castle on thy head!
ULYSSES. I'll bring you to the gates.
TRO. Accept distracted thanks.

Exit Troilus, Æneas, and Ulysses.

THER. Would I could meet that rogue Diomed!
I would croak like a raven; I would bode, I would bode.

Enter Hector and Andromache.

Andr. When was my lord so much ungenerly temp'rd,
3 I love.
4 Concerned.

To stop his ears against admonishment?
Unarm, unarm, and do not fight to-day.
HECT. You train me to offend you: get you in:
By all the everlasting gods, I'll go.
AND. My dreams will, sure, prove ominous to the day.
HECT. No more, I say.

Enter caesar.

Cas. Where is my brother Hector?
AND. Here, sister; arm'd, and bloody in intent:
 Consort with me in loud and dear petition,
Pursue we him on knees; for I have dream'd
Of bloody turbulence, and this whole night
Hath nothing been but shapes and forms of slaughter.
Cas. O, it is true.
HECT. Ho! bid my trumpet sound!
Cas. No notes of sandy, for the heavens, sweet brother.
HECT. Begone, I say: the gods have heard me swear.
Cas. The gods are deaf to hot and peevish vows;
They are polluted offerings, more abhorr'd
Than spotted livers in the sacrifice.
AND. O! be persuaded: Do not count it holy
To hurt by being just: it is as lawful,
For we would give much, to use violent thefts,
And rob in the behalf of charity.
Cas. It is the purpose that makes strong the vow;
But vows, to every purpose, must not hold:
Unarm, sweet Hector.

Hec. Hold you still, I say;
Mine honour keeps the weather of my fate:
Life every man holds dear; but the dear man
Holds honour far more precious-dear than life,—

Enter Troilus.

How now, young man mean'st thou to fight to-day?
AND. Cassandra, call my father to persuade.

[Exit Cassandra.

HECT. No, 'faith, young Troilus; dolf thy harrness, youth,
I am to-day 't the vein of chivalry:
Let grow thy sinews till their knots be strong,
And tempt not yet the brushes of the war.
Unarm thee, go; and doubt thou not, brave br,
I'll stand, to-day, for thee, and me, and Troy.
Tro. Brother, you have a vice of mercy in you
Which better fits a lion, than a man.
HECT. What vice is that, good Troilus? chide me for it.
Tro. When many times the captive Grecians fall,
Even in the fan and wind of your fair sword,
You bid them rise, and live.
HECT. O, 'tis fair play.
Tro. Fool's play, by heaven, Hector.
HECT. How now? how now?
Tro. For the love of all the gods,
Let's leave the hermit pitty with our mother;
And when we have our armours buckle on,
The venom'd vengeance ride upon our swords;
Spur them to ruthless work, rein them from ruth.
HECT. Fye, savage, fye!
Tro. Hector, then 'tis wars.
HECT. Troilus, I would not have you fight to-day.
Tro. Who should withstand me?

Not fate, obedience, nor the hand of Mars
Beckoning with fiery truncheon my retire;
Not Priamus and Hecuba on knees,
8 Foolish.
6 Put off.
7 Rueful, woeful.
8 Mercy.
Their eyes o'ergalled with recourse of tears;
Nor you, my brother, with your true sword drawn,
Oppos'd to hinder me, should stop my way,
But by my ruin.

Re-enter Cassandra, with Priam.

Cas. Lay hold upon him, Priam, hold him fast;
He is thy crutch; now if thou lose thy stay,
Thou on him leaning, and all Troy on thee,
Fall all together.

Priam. Come, Hector, come, go back:
Thy wife hath dream'd; thy mother hath visions;
Cassandra doth foresee, and I myself
Am like a prophet suddenly enrapt,
To tell thee — that this day is ominous:
Therefore, come back.

Hec. Æneas is a-field;
And I do stand engag'd to many Greeks,
Even in the faith of valour, to appear
This morning to them.

Priam. But thou shalt not go.

Hec. I must not break my faith.
You know me dutiful; therefore, dear sir,
Let me not shame respect; but give me leave
To take that course by your consent and voice,
Which you do here forbid me, royal Priam.

Cas. O Priam, yield not to him.

Andromache. Do not, dear father.

Hec. Andromache, I am offended with you:
Upon the love you bear me, get you in.

[Exit Andromache.

Tro. This foolish, dreaming, superstitious girl
Makes all these bodeaments.

Cas. O farewell, dear Hector.
Look, how thou diest! look, how thy eye turns pale!
Look, how thy wounds do bleed at many vents!
Hark, how Troy roars! how Hecuba cries out!
How poor Andromache shrills her dolours forth!
Behold, destruction, frenzy, and amazement,
Like witless antsicks, one another meet,
And all cry — Hector! Hector's dead! O Hector!

Tro. Away! — Away!

Cas. Farewell. — Yet soft: — Hector, I take my leave;
Thou dost thyself and all our Troy deceive. [Exeunt.

Hec. You are amaze'd, my liege, at her exclain;
Go in, and cheer the town; we'll forth and fight:
Do deeds worth praise, and tell you them at night.

Priam. Farewell: the gods with safety stand about thee!

[Exeunt severally Priam and Hector.

Alarums: Excursions. Enter Thersites.

Thers. Now they are clapper-clawing one another,
I'll go look on. That disseminating abominable varlet,
Diomed, has got that same scurry doting foolish young knave's sleeve of Troy there, in his helm: I would fain see them meet; that same young Trojan ass, that loves the jilt there, might send that Greckish villain with the sleeve, back to the disembling luxurious drab, on a sleeveless errand. —

O' the other side, The policy of those crafty swearing rascals, — that stale old mouse-eaten dry cheese, Nestor; and that same dog-fox, Ulysses, — is not proved worth a black-berry: — They set me up, in policy, that mongrel cur, Ajax, against that dog of as bad a kind, Achilles: and now is the cur Ajax prouder than the cur Achilles, and will not arm today: Whereupon the Grecians begin to proclaim barbarism, and policy grows into an ill opinion. —

Soft! here come sleeve, and 'other.

Enter Diomedes, Troilus following.

Tro. Fly not; for, shouldst thou take the river Styx,
I would swim after.

Dio. Thou dost miscall retire:

Tro. I do not fly; but advantageous care
Withdrew me from the odds of multitude:
Have at thee!

Thers. Now the sleeve, now the sleeve!

[Exeunt Troilus and Diomedes, fighting.

Enter Hector.

Hec. What art thou, Greek? art thou for Hector's match?
Art thou of blood, and honour?

Thers. No, no: — I am a rascal; a scurry raving knave; a very filthy rogue.

Hec. I do believe thee; — live.

Thers. Jove-a-mercy, that thou wilt believe me; But a plague break thy neck, for frightening me! What's become of the wenching rogues? I think, they have swallowed one another; I would laugh at that miracle. I'll seek them.

[Exit.

Scene V. — The same.

Enter Diomedes and a Servant.

Dio. Go, go, my servant, take thou 'Troilus' horse;
Present the fair steed to my lady Cressid:
Fellow, commend my service to her beauty;
Tell her, I have chastis'd the amorous Trojan,
And am her knight by proof.

Serv. I go, my lord. [Exit Servant.

Enter Agamemnon.

Agam. Renew, renew! The fierce Polydamus
Hath beat down Menon; bastard Margarelon
Hath Doreus prisoner:
And stands colossus-wise, waving his beam,
Upon the pashed 1 corses of the kings
Epistrophus and Cedes: Polixenes is slain;

1 Lance. 2 Brused, crushed.
Amphimachus, and Thoas, deadly hurt;
Patroclus ta'en or slain; and Palamedes
Sore hurt and bruised: the dreadful Sagittary
Appals our numbers; haste we, Diomed,
To reinforcement, or we perish all.

Enter Nestor.

Nest. Go, bear Patroclus' body to Achilles;
And bid the snail-pae'd Ajax arm for shame.—
There is a thousand Hectors in the field.
Now here he fights on Galathe his horse,
And there lacks work; anon, he's there afoot,
And there they fly, or die, like scaled sculls.
Before the belching whale; then is he yonder,
And there the straying Greeks, ripe for his edge,
Fall down before him, like the mower's swath:
Here, there, and every where, he leaves, and takes;
Dexterity so obeying appetite,
That what he will, he does; and does so much,
That proof is call'd impossibility.

Enter Ulysses.

Ulyss. O, courage, courage, princes! great Achilles
Is arming, weeping, cursing, vowing vengeance:
Patroclus' wounds have rous'd his drowsy blood,
Together with his mangled myrmidons,
That noseless, handless, hack'd and chipp'd, come
to him,
Crying on Hector. Ajax hath lost a friend,
And foams at mouth, and he is arm'd, and at it,
Roaring for Troilus; who hath done to-day
Mad and fantastick execution;
Engaging and redeeming of himself,
With such a careless force, and forceless care,
As if that luck, in very spite of cunning,
Bade him win all.

Enter Ajax.

Dio. Ay, there, there.

Nest. So, so, we draw together.

Enter Achilles.

Achil. Where is this Hector?
Come, come, thou boy-queller, show thy face:
Know what it is to meet Achilles angry.
Hector! where's Hector? I will none but Hector.
[Exeunt.

SCENE VI. — Another Part of the Field.

Enter Ajax.

Ajax. Troilus, thou coward Troilus, show thy head!

Enter Diomedes.

Dio. Troilus, I say! where's Troilus?
Ajax. What wouldst thou?
Dio. I would correct him.
Ajax. Were I the general, thou shouldst have my office,
Ere that correction: — Troilus, I say! what, Troilus!

Enter Troilus.

Tro. O traitor Diomed! — turn thy false face, thou traitor,
And pay thy life thou ow'st me for my horse!
Dio. Ha! art thou there?
Ajax. I'll fight with him alone: stand, Diomed.
Dio. He is my prize, I will not look upon.

Tro. Come both, you coggling 3 Greeks; have at you both.
[Exeunt fighting.

Enter Hector.

Hect. Yea, Troilus? O, well fought, my youngest brother!

Enter Achilles.

Achil. Now do I see thee: Ha! — Have at thee, Hector.
Hect. Pause, if thou wilt.
Achil. I do disdain thy courtesy, proud Trojan.
Be happy, that my arms are out of use:
My rest and negligence befriended thee now,
But thou anon shalt hear of me again;
Till when, go seek thy fortune.
[Exit.

Hect. Fare thee well; —
I would have been much more a fresher man,
Had I expected thee. — How now, my brother?

Re-enter Troilus.

Tro. Ajax hath ta'en Æneas; Shall it be?
No, by the flame of yonder glorious heaven,
He shall not carry him; I'll be taken too,
Or bring him off: — Fate, hear me what I say!
I reck 6 not though I end my life to-day.
[Exit.

Enter one in sumptuous Armour.

Hect. Stand, stand, thou Greek? thou art a goodly mark: —
No? wilt thou not? — I like thy armour well;
I'll dress 6 is, and unlock the rivets all,
But I'll be master of it: — Wilt thou not, beast, abide?
Why, then fly on, I'll hunt thee for thy hide.
[Exeunt.

SCENE VII. — The same.

Enter Achilles, with Myrmidons.

Achil. Come here about me, you my Myrmidons,
Mark what I say. — Attend me where I wheel:
Strike not a stroke, but keep yourselves in breath;
And when I have the bloody Hector found,
Empale him with your weapons round about;
In fellerse manner execute your arms.
Follow me, sirs, and my proceedings eye:
It is decreed — Hector the great must die.
[Exeunt.

SCENE VIII. — The same.

Enter Menelaus and Paris, fighting: then Thersites.

Ther. The cuckold, and the cuckold-maker are at it:
Now, bull! now, dog! 'Loo, Paris, 'loo! The bull has the game.
[Exeunt.

SCENE IX. — Another Part of the Field.

Enter Hector.

Hect. Most putrefied core, so fair without,
Thy goodly armour thus hath cost thy life.
Now is my day's work done; I'll take good breath;
Rest, sword; thou hast thy fill of blood and death!
[Plucks off his Helmet, and hangs his Shield behind him.

Enter Achilles and Myrmidons.

Achil. Look, Hector, how the sun begins to set,
How ugly night comes breathing at his heels:

3 Lying. 4 Prevail over. 5 Care. 6 Burst.
TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

SCENE X. — The same.

Enter Agamemnon, Ajax, Menelaus, Nestor, Diomedes, and others, marching. Shouts within.

[Within.] Achilles! Achilles! Hector's slain! Achilles!

Dock. If it be so, yet bragless let it be; Great Hector was as good a man as he.

Agam. March patiently along: — Let one be sent To pray Achilles see us at our tent. — If in his death the gods have us befriended, Great Troy is ours, and our sharp wars are ended.

[Exit marching.

SCENE XI. — Another Part of the Field.

Enter Æneas and Trojans.

Æne. Stand, ho! yet are we masters of the field: Never go home; here starve we out the night.

Troilus. Enter Troilus.

Tro. Hector is slain.

All. Hector? — The gods forbid! Tro. He's dead; and at the murderer's horse's tail, In beastly sort, dragged through the shameful field. — Frown on, you heavens, effect your rage with speed! Sit, gods, upon your thrones, and smile at Troy! I say, at once let your brief plagues be mercy, And linger not our sure destructions on!

Æne. My lord, you do discomfort all the host. Tro. You understand me not, that tell me so: I do not speak of flight, of fear, of death; But dare all imminence, that gods and men, Address their dangers in. Hector is gone! Who shall tell Priam, or, Hecuba? Let him, that will a screech-owl aye be call'd, Go in to Troy, and say there — Hector's dead; There is a word will Priam turn to stone; Make wells and Niobes of the maids and wives, Cold statues of the youth; and, in a word, Scare Troy out of itself. But, march, away; Hector is dead; there is no more to say. Stay yet: — You vile abominable tents, Thus proudly plight! upon our Phrygian plains, Let Titan rise as early as he dare, I'll through and through you! — And thou, great- sized coward! No space of earth shall sunder our two hates: I'll haunt thee like a wicked conscience still, That mouldeth goblins swift as frenzy thoughts. — Strike a free march to Troy! — with comfort go: Hope of revenge shall hide our inward woe.

[Exit Æneas and Trojans.

As Troilus is going out, enter, from the other side, Pandaroes.

Pan. A goodly medic'ne for my aching bones! — O world! world! world! thus is the poor agent despised! O traitors and pimps, how earnestly are you set a' work, and how ill required! [Exit.

TIMON OF ATHENS.

ACT I.

SCENE I. — Athens.
A Hall in Timon’s House.

Enter Poet, Painter, Jeweller, Merchant, and others, at several doors.

Poet.  Good day, sir.

Pain.  I am glad you are well.

Poet.  I have not seen you long; How goes the world?

Pain.  It wears, sir, as it grows.

Poet.  Ay, that’s well known: But what particular rarity? what strange,
Which manifold record not matches? See, Magick of bounty! all these spirits thy power Hath conjur’d to attend. I know the merchant.

Mer.  O, ’tis a worthy lord!

Jew.  Nay, that’s most fix’d.

Mer.  A most incomparable man; breathed, as it were,
To an untirable and continue2 goodness:
He passes. 3

Jew.  I have a jewel here.

Mer.  O, pray, let’s see’t: For the lord Timon, sir?

Jew.  If he will touch the estimate; But, for that —

Poet.  When we for recompence have prais’d the vile,
It stains the glory in that happy verse
Which aptly sings the good.

Mer.  ’Tis a good form.  [Looking at the jewel.

Jew.  And rich: here is a water, look you.

Pain.  You are rapt, sir, in some work, some dedication
To the great lord.

Poet.  A thing slipp’d idly from me,
Our poesy is as a gum, which oozes
From whence ’tis nourislied: The fire i’ the flint
Shows not till it be struck; our gentle flame
Provokes itself, and, like the current, flies
Each bound it chafes. What have you here?

Pain.  A picture, sir. — And when comes you book forth?

Poet.  Upon the heels of my presentment4, sir
Let’s see your piece.

Pain.  ’Tis a good piece.

Poet.  So ’tis: this comes off well and excellent.

Pain.  Indifferent.

Poet.  Admirable: How this grace
Speaks his own standing! what a mental power
This eye shoots forth! how big imagination
Moves in this lip! to the dumbness of the gesture
One might interpret.

Pain.  It is a pretty mocking of the life.
Here is a touch; Is’t good?

Poet.  I’ll say of it,

1 Inured by constant practice.
2 Continual.
3 i e. Exceeds, goes beyond common bounds.
4 As soon as my book has been presented to Timon.
ACT I. SCENE I.

TIMON OF ATHENS.

It tutors nature: artificial strife
Living in these touches, livelier than life.

Enter certain Senators, and pass over.

Pain. How this lord's follow'd I.

Poe. The senators of Athens: — Happy men!

Pain. Look, more!

Poe. You see this confluence, this great flood of visitors.
I have, in this rough work, shap'd out a man,
Whom this beneath world doth embrace and hug
With amplest entertainment: My free drift
Halts not particularly; but moves itself
In a wide sea of wax: no levell'd malice
Infests one comma in the course I hold;
But flies an eagle flight, bold, and forth on,
Leaving no tract behind.

Pain. How shall I understand you?

Poe. I'll unbolt to you.
You see how all conditions, how all minds,
(As well of glib and slippery creatures, as
Of grave and austere quality,) tender down
Their services to lord Timon: his large fortune,
Upon his good and gracious nature hanging,
Subdues and properties to his love and tendance
All sorts of hearts: yea, from the glass-fac'd flatterer?
To Apeamantus, that few things loves better
Than to abhor himself; even he drops down
The knee before him, and returns in peace
Most rich in Timon's nod.

Pain. I saw them speak together.

Poe. Sir, I have upon a high and pleasant hill,
Feign'd Fortune to be thron'd: the base o'the mount
Is rank'd with all deserts, all kind of nature,
That labour on the bosom of this sphere
To propagate their states; amongst them all,
Whose eyes are on this sovereign lady fixed,
One do I personate of lord Timon's frame,
Whom Fortune with her ivory hands wafts to her;
Whose present grace to present slaves and servants
Translates his rivals.

Pain. 'Tis conceiv'd to scope.

This throne, this Fortune, and this hill, methinks,
With one man beckon'd from the rest below,
Bowing his head against the steepy mount
To climb his happiness, would be well express'd
In our condition.

Poe. Nay, sir, but hear me on:
All those which were his fellows but of late,
(Some better than his value,) on the moment
Follow his strides, his lobbies fill with tendance,
Rain sacrificial whisperings in his ear,
Make sacred even his stirrup, and through him
Drink the free air.

Pain. Ay, marry, what of these?

Poe. When fortune in her shift and change of mood,
Spurns down her late belov'd, all his dependants,
Which labour'd after him to the mountain's top,
Even on their knees and hands, let him slip down,
Not one accompanying his declining foot.

Pain. 'Tis common:
A thousand moral paintings I can show
That shall demonstrate these quick blows of fortune
More pregnant than words. Yet you do well,
To show lord Timon that mean eyes have seen
The foot above the head.

Trumpets sound. Enter Timon, attended; the Servant of Ventidius talking with him.

Tim. Imprison'd is he, say you?

Ven. Serv. Ay, my good lord: five talents is his debt;
His means most short, his creditors most strait:
Your honourable letter he desires
To those have shut him up; which failing to him,
Periods his comfort.

Tim. Noble Ventidius! Well; I am not of that feather, to shake off
My friend when he must need me. I do know him,
A gentleman, that well deserves a help,
Which he shall have: I'll pay the debt, and free him.

Tim. Command me to him: I will send his ransom;
And, being enfranchis'd, bid him come to me: —
'Tis not enough to help the feeble up,
But to support him after. — Fare you well.

Ven. Serv. All happiness to your honour! [Exit.

Enter an old Athenian.

Old Agr. Lord Timon, hear me speak.

Tim. Freely, good father.

Old Agr. Thou hast a servant nam'd Lucilius.

Tim. I have so: What of him?

Old Agr. Most noble Timon, call the man before thee.

Tim. Attends he here, or no? — Lucilius!

Enter Lucilius.

Luc. Here, at your lordship's service.

Old Agr. This fellow here, lord Timon, this thy creature,
By night frequents my house. I am a man
That from my first have been inclin'd to thrift,
And my estate deserves an heir more rais'd,
Than one which holds a trencher.

Tim. Well; what further?

Old Agr. One only daughter have I, no kin else,
On whom I may confer what I have got:
The maid is fair, o'the youngest for a bride,
And I have bred her at my dearest cost,
In qualities of the best. This man of thine
Attempts her love: I pr'ythee, noble lord,
Join with me to forbid him her resort;
Myself have spoke in vain.

Tim. The man is honest.

Old Agr. Therefore he will be, Timon;
His honesty rewards him in itself,
It must not bear my daughter.

Tim. Does she love him?

Old Agr. She is young and apt:
Our own precedent passions do instruct us
What levity's in youth.

Tim. [To Lucilius.] Love you the maid?

Luc. Ay, my good lord, and she accepts of it.

Old Agr. If in her marriage my consent be missing,
I call the gods to witness, I will choose
Mine heir from forth the beggars of the world,
And dispossess her all.

Tim. How shall she be endow'd,
If she be mated with an equal husband?

Old Agr. Three talents, on the present; in future, all.

Tim. This gentleman of mine hath serv'd me long;
To build his fortune, I will strain a little,
For 'tis a bond in men. Give him thy daughter; What you bestow, in him I'll counterpoise, And make him weigh with her.

Old Ath. Most noble lord, Pawn me to this your honour, she is his.

Tim. My hand to thee; mine honour on my promise.

Luc. Humbly I thank your lordship: Never may That state or fortune fall into my keeping, Which is not ow'd to you!

[Exeunt Lucilius and old Athenian.]

Poet. Vouchsafe my labour, and long live your lordship!

Tim. I thank you; you shall hear from me anon: Go not away. — What have you there, my friend?

Pain. A piece of painting, which I do beseech Your lordship to accept.

Tim. Painting is welcome. The painting is almost the natural man; For since dishonour trafficks with man's nature, He is but outside: These pencil'd figures are Even such as they give out. I like your work; And you shall find, I like it: wait attendance, Till you hear further from me.

Pain. The gods preserve you!

Tim. Well fare you, gentlemen: Give me your hand:

We must needs dine together. — Sir, your jewel Hath suffer'd under praise.

Jew. What, my lord? disparage?

Tim. A mere satiety of commendations. If I should pay you for't as 'tis extolt'd, It would uncrow me quite.

Jew. My lord, 'tis rated As those, which sell, would give: But you well know, Things of like value, differing in the owners, Are prized by their masters; believe't, dear lord, You mend the jewel by wearing it.

Tim. Well mock'd.

Mer. No, my good lord; he speaks the common tongue, Which all men speak with him.

Tim. Look, who comes here? Will you be chid?

Enter Apemantus.

Jew. We will bear, with your lordship.

Mer. He'll spare none.

Tim. Good morrow to thee, gentle Apemantus! Apem. Till I be gentle, stay for thy good morrow; When thou art Timon's dog, and these knaves honest. Tim. Why dost thou call them knaves? thou know'st them not.

Apem. Are they not Athenians?

Tim. Yes. Apem. Then I repent not.

Jew. You know me, Apemantus.

Apem. Thou knowest, I do; I call'd thee by thy name.

Tim. Thou art proud, Apemantus.

Apem. Of nothing so much, as that I am not like Timon.

Tim. Whither art going?

Apem. To knock out an honest Athenian's brains.

Tim. That's a deed thou'lt die for.

Apem. Right, if doing nothing be death by the law.

Tim. How lifest thou this picture, Apemantus? Apem. The best, for the innocence.

Tim. How dost thou like this jewel, Apemantus? 9 Ruin.

Apem. Not so well as plain dealing, which will not cost a man a doit.

Tim. What dost thou think 'tis worth?

Apem. Not worth my thinking. — How now, poet?

Poet. How now, philosopher?

Apem. Thou liest.

Poet. Art not one?

Apem. Yes.

Poet. Then I lie not.

Apem. Art not a poet?

Poet. Yes.

Apem. Then thou liest: look in thy last work, Where thou hast feign'd him a worthy fellow.

Poet. That's not feign'd, he is so.

Apem. Yes, he is worthy of thee, and to pay thee for thy labour: He, that loves to be flatter'd, is worthy o'the flatterer. Heavens, that I were a lord!

Tim. What would'st do then, Apemantus?

Apem. Even as Apemantus does now, hate a lord with my heart.

Tim. What, thyself?

Apem. Ay.

Tim. Wherefore?

Apem. That I had no angry wit to be a lord, —

Art not thou a merchant?

Mer. Ay, Apemantus.

Apem. Traffick confound thee, if the gods will not!

Mer. If traffick do it, the gods do it.

Apem. Traffick's thy god, and thy god confound thee!

Trumpets sound. Enter a Servant.

Tim. What trumpet's that?

Srv. 'Tis Alcibiades and Some twenty horse, all of companionship.

Tim. Pray, entertain them; give them guide to us. — [Exeunt some Attendants.]

You must needs dine with me: — Go not you hence, Till I have thank'd you; and when dinner's done, Show me this piece. — I am joyful of your sights. —

Enter Alcibiades, with his Company.

Most welcome, sir! [They salute.

Apem. So, so; there! —

Aches contract and starve your supple joints! —

That there should be small love 'mongst these sweet knaves,

And all this court'sy! The strain of man's bred out Into baboon and monkey.

Alcib. Sir, you have sav'd my longing, and I feed Most hungrily on your sight.

Tim. Right welcome, sir: Ere we depart, we'll share a bounteous time

In different pleasures. Pray you, let us in. [Exeunt all but Apemantus.]

Enter two Lords.

1 Lord. What time a day is't, Apemantus?

Apem. Time to be honest.

1 Lord. That time serves still.

Apem. The most accursed thou, that still omit'st it.

2 Lord. Thou art going to lord Timon's feast.

Apem. Ay; to see meat fill knaves, and wine heat fools.

2 Lord. Fare thee well, fare thee well.

Apem. Thou art a fool, to bid me farewell twice.

1 Alluding to the proverb: Plain-dealing is a jewel, but they who use it beggars.
2 Lord. Why, Apemantus?
Apem. Shouldst have kept one to thyself, for I mean to give thee none.

1 Lord. Hang thyself.
Apem. No, I will do nothing at thy bidding; make thy requests to thy friend.

2 Lord. Away, unpeaceable dog, or I'll spurn thee hence.
Apem. I will fly like a dog, the heels of the ass.

1 Lord. He's opposite to humanity. Come, shall we in,
And taste lord Timon's bounty? he outgoes
The very heart of kindness.

2 Lord. He pours it out; Plutus the god of gold
Is but his steward: no meed 2, but he repays
Sevenfold above itself; no gift to him,
But breeds the giver a return exceeding
All use of quittance. 3

1 Lord. The noblest mind he carries,
That ever govern'd man.

2 Lord. Long may he live in fortunes! Shall we in?

1 Lord. I'll keep you company. 4

SCENE II. — A Room of State in Timon's House.

Hautboys playing loud Musick. A great Banquet served in; FLAVIUS and others attending; then enter TIMON, ALCIBIADES, LUCIUS, LUCULLUS, SENEPONTIUS, and other Athenian Senators, with VENTIDIUS, and Attendants. Then comes, dropping after all, APEMANTUS, discontentedly.

Ven. Most honour'd Timon, 't hath pleas'd the gods remember
My father's age, and call him to long peace.
He is gone happy, and has left me rich:
Then, as in grateful virtue I am bound
To your free heart, I do return those talents,
Doubled with thanks, and service, from whose help
I deriv'd liberty.

Tim. O, by no means, Honest Ventidius: you mistake my love;
I gave it freely ever; and there's none
Can truly say, he gives, if he receives:
If our betters play at that game, we must not dare
To imitate them; Faults that are rich, are fair.

Ven. A noble spirit.
[They all stand ceremoniously looking on Timon.

Tim. Nay, my lords, ceremony
Was but devil'd at first, to set a gloss
On faint deeds, hollow welcomes,
Recanting goodness, sorry ere 'tis shown;
But where there is true friendship, there needs none.
Pray sit; more welcome are ye to my fortunes,
Than my fortunes to me. 5

[They sit.

1 Lord. My lord, we always have confess'd it.
Apem. Ho, ho, confess'd it? hang'd it, have you not?

Tim. O, Apemantus! — you are welcome.

Apem. You shall not make me welcome:
I come to have thee thrust me out of doors.

Tim. E'ye, thou art a churl; you have got a humour there
Does not become a man, 'tis much to blame:

They say, my lords, that ira furor brevis est, 4
But yond' man's ever angry.
Go, let him have a table by himself;
For he does neither affect company,
Nor is he fit for it, indeed.

Apem. Let me stay at thine own peril, Timon;
I come to observe, I give thee warning on;
Tim. I take no heed of thee; thou art an Athenian; therefore welcome: I myself would have no power: pr'ythee, let my meat make thee silent.

Apem. I scorn thy meat; 'would choke me, for I should Ne'er flatter thee. — O you gods! what a number
Of men eat Timon, and he sees them not!
It grieves me to see so many dip their meat
In one man's blood; and all the madness is,
He cheers them up too. 5
I wonder men dare trust themselves with men:
Methinks they should invite them without knives;
Good for their meat, and safer for their lives.
There's much example fort'; the fellow, that Sits next him now, parts bread with him, and pledges
The breath of him in a divided draught,
Is the readiest man to kill him; it has been prov'd.
If I were a huge man, I should fear to drink at meals;
Lest they should spy my windpipe's dangerous notes:
Great men should drink with harness 6 on their throats.

Tim. My lord, in heart? and let the health go round.

2 Lord. Let it flow this way, my good lord.

Apem. Flow this way! A brave fellow! — he keeps his tides well. Timon, Those healths will make thee, and thy state, look ill.
Here's that which is too weak to be a sinner, Honest water, which ne'er left man 'tis mine: This, and my food, are equals; there's no odds, Feasts are too proud to give thanks to the gods.

Apemantus's Grace.

Immortal gods, I crave no self;
I pray for no man but myself:
Grant I may never prove so fond 8,
To trust man on his oath or bond;
Or a harlot for her keeping;
Or a dog that seems a sleeping;
Or a keeper with my freedom;
Or my friends, if I should need 'em.

[Eats and drinks.

Much good dish thy good heart, Apemantus! Timon. Captain Alcibiades, your heart's in the field now.

Alicib. My heart is ever at your service, my lord.

Tim. You had rather be at a breakfast of enemies, than a dinner of friends.

Alicib. So they were bleeding-new, my lord, there's no meat like them; I could wish my best friend at such a feast.

Apem. 'Wold all those flatterers were thine enemies then; that then thou mightst kill 'em, and bid me 'em.

1 Anger is a short madness.
2 The allusion is to a pack of hounds trained to pursue, by being gratified with the blood of an animal which they kill; and the wonder is, that the animal, on which they are feeding, cheers them to the chase.
3 Armour. 7 With sincerity. 8 Foolish.
TIMON OF ATHENS.

Act I.

1 Lord. Might we but have that happiness, my lord, that you would once use our hearts, whereby we might express some part of our zeal, we should think ourselves for ever perfect.

Tim. O, no doubt, my good friends, but the gods themselves have provided that I shall have much help from you: How had you been my friends else? why have you that charitable title from thousands, did you not chiefly belong to my heart? I have told more of you to myself, than you can with modesty speak in your own behalf; and thus far I confirm you. O, you gods, think I, what need we have any friends, if we should never have need of them? they were the most needless creatures living, should we ne'er have use for them; and would most resemble sweet instruments hung up in cases, that keep their sounds to themselves. Why, I have often wished myself poorer, that I might come nearer to you. We are born to do benefits: and what better or properer can we call our own, than the riches of our friends? O, what a precious comfort 'tis, to have so many, like brothers, commanding one another's fortunes! O joy, e'en made away ere it can be born! Mine eyes cannot hold out water, methinks: to forget their faults, I drink to you.

Apem. Thou weep'st to make them drink, Timon.

2 Lord. Joy had the like conception in our eyes.

3 Lord. I promise you, my lord, you mov'd me much.

Apem. Much! 9 [Tucket sounded.

Tim. What means that trump? — How now?

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Please you, my lord, there are certain ladies most desirous of admittance.

Tim. Ladies? what are their wills?

Serv. There comes with them a forerunner, my lord, which bears that office, to signify their pleasures.

Tim. I pray, let them be admitted.

Enter Cupid.

Cup. Hail to thee, worthy Timon; — and to all That of his bounties taste! — The five best senses Acknowledge thee their patron; and come freely To gratulate thy plenteous bosom: The ear, Taste, touch, smell, all pleas'd from thy table rise; They only now come but to feast thine eyes.

Tim. They are welcome all; let them have kind admittance:

Musick, make their welcome. [Exit Cupid.

1 Lord. You see, my lord, how ample you are belov'd.

Musick. Re-enter Cupid, with a Masque of Ladies as Amazons, with Lutes in their Hands, dancing, and playing.

Apem. Hey day, what a sweep of vanity comes this way!

They dance! they are mad women.
Like madness is the glory of this life,
As this pomp shows to a little oil, and root.
We make ourselves fools, to disjoint ourselves;
And spend our flatteries.
Who lives, that's not
Depraved, or depraves? who dies, that bears
Not one spurn to their graves of their friends' gift?
I should fear, those, that dance before me now;

Would one day stamp upon me: It has been done;
Men shut their doors against a setting sun.

The Lords rise from Table with much adoring of Timon; and to show their Loves, each singles out an Amazon, and all dance, Men with Women, a lofty Strain or two to the Hautboys, and cease.

Tim. You have done our pleasures much grace, fair ladies,
Set a fair fashion on our entertainment,
Which was not half so beautiful and kind;
You have added worth unto't, and lively lustre,
And entertain'd me with mine own device;
I am to thank you for it.

1 Lady. My lord, you take us even at the best.

Tim. Ladies, there is an idle banquet
Attends you: Please you to dispose yourselves.

All Lad. Most thankfully, my lord.

Tim. Flavius,  —

Flav. My lord.

Tim. The little casket bring me hither.

Flav. Yes, my lord. — More jewels yet!

There is no crossing him in his humour; [Aside.

Else I should tell him. — Well, — is'thith, I should,
When all's spent, he'd be cross'd then, an he could.
'Tis pity, bounty had not eyes behind;
That man might ne'er be wretched for his mind. 2

[Exit, and returns with the Casket.

1 Lord. Where be our men?

Serv. Here, my lord, in readiness.

2 Lord. Our horses.

Tim. O my friends, I have one word
To say to you: — Look you, my good lord, I must Entreat you, honour me so much, as to Advance this jewel;
Accept, and wear it, kind my lord.

1 Lord. I am so far already in your gifts, —

All. So are we all.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. My lord, there are certain nobles of the senate
Newly alighted, and come to visit you.

Tim. They are fairly welcome.

Flav. I beseech your honour, Vouchsafe me a word: it does concern you near.

Tim. Near? why then another time I'll hear thee:
I pr'ythee, let us be provided
To show them entertainment.

Flav. I scarce know how. [Aside.

Enter another Servant.

2 Serv. May it please your honour, the lord Lucius,
Out of his free love, hath presented to you
Four milk-white horses, trapp'd in silver.

Tim. I shall accept them fairly: let the presents

Enter a third Servant.

Be worthily entertain'd. — How now, what news?

3 Serv. Please you, my lord, that honourable gentleman, lord Lucullus, entreats your company to-morrow to hunt with him; and has sent your honour two brace of greyhounds.

Tim. I'll hunt with him; And let them be receiv'd,
Not without fair reward.

1 Shakespeare plays on the word crossed; alluding to the piece of silver money called a cross.

2 For his nobleness of soul.
Act II. Scene I.

TIMON OF ATHENS.

629

Flav. [Aside.] What will this come to?
He commands us to provide, and give great gifts,
And all out of an empty coffer. —
Nor will he know his purse, or yield me this,
To show him what a beggar his heart is,
Being of no power to make his wishes good;
His promises fly so beyond his state,
That what he speaks is all in debt, he owes
For every word; he is so kind, that he now
Pays interest for't; his land's put to their books.
Well, 'would I were gently put out of office,
Before I were forc'd out!
Hapiner is he that has no friend to feed,
Than such as do even enemies exceed.
I bleed inwardly for my lord. [Exit.

Tim. You do yourselves
Much wrong, you bate too much of your own merits:
Here, my lord, a trifle of our love.

2 Lord. With more than common thanks I will receive it.

3 Lord. O, he is the very soul of bounty!
Tim. And now I remember me, my lord, you gave Good words the other day of a bay courser
I rode on: it is yours, because you lik'd it.

2 Lord. I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, in that.

Tim. You may take my word, my lord; I know no man
Can justly raise, but what he does affect:
I weigh my friend's affection with mine own:
I'll tell you true. I'll call on you.

All Lords. None so welcome.

Tim. I take all and your several visitations
So kind to heart, 'tis not enough to give;
Methinks, I could deal kingdoms to my friends,
And ne'er be weary. — Alcibiades,
Thou art a soldier, therefore seldom rich,

It comes in charity to thee: for all thy living
Is 'mongst the dead; and all the lands thou hast
Lie in a pitch'd field.

Alcib. Ay, defiled land, my lord.
1 Lord. We are so virtuously bound, —
Tim. And so

Am I to you.

2 Lord. So infinitely endear'd, —
Tim. All to you. 4 — Lights, more lights.
1 Lord. The best of happiness, Honour, and fortunes, keep with you, lord Timon!
Tim. Ready for his friends.

[Exeunt Alcibiades, Lords, &c.

Apein. What a coil's here!
I doubt whether their legs be worth the sums
That are given for 'em. Friendship's full of dregs:
Methinks, false hearts should never have sound legs.
Thus honest fools lay out their wealth on court'sies.
Tim. Now, Apeimantus, if thou wert not sullen,
I'd be good to thee.

Apein. No, I'll nothing: for,
If I should be brib'd too, there would be none left
To rail upon thee; and then thou wouldst sin the faSTER.

Thou giv'st so long, Timon, I fear me, thou
Wilt give away thyself in paper shortly;
What needs these feasts, pomp's, and vain glories?
Tim. Nay,
An you begin to rail on society once,
I am sworn, not to give regard to you.
Farewell; and come with better musick. [Exit.

Apein. So; —
Thou'll not hear me now, — thou shalt not then, I'll lock
Thy heaven 3 from thee. O, that men's ears should be
To counsel deaf, but not to flattery! [Exit.

ACT II.

SCENE I. — A Room in a Senator's House.

Enter a Senator, with Papers in his Hand.

Sen. And late, five thousand to Varro; and to Isidore
He owes nine thousand; besides his former sum,
Which makes it five and twenty. — Still in motion
Of raging waste? It cannot hold; it will not.
If I want gold, steal but a beggar's dog,
And give it Timon, why, the dog coins gold:
If I would sell my horse, and buy twenty more
Better than he, why, give my horse to Timon,
Ask nothing, give it him, it foals me straight,
And able horses: No porter at his gate;
But rather one that smiles, and still invites
All that pass by. It cannot hold; no reason
Can found his state in safety. Caphis, ho!
Caphis, I say!

Enter Caphis.

Caph. Here, sir; what is your pleasure?
Sen. Get on your cloak, and haste you to lord
Timon;
Impertune him for my monies: be not ceas'd 3
With slight denial; nor then silence, when —
Commend me to your master — and the cap

3 Stopped.

Flav. No care, no stop! so senseless of expense,
That he will neither know how to maintain it,
Nor cease his flow of riot: Takes no account

4 i.e. All happiness to you.

5 By his heaven he means good advice.
TIMON OF ATHENS.

Act II.

How things go from him: nor resumes no care
Of what is to continue: Never mind
Was to be so unwise, to be so kind.
What shall be done? He will not hear, till feel:
I must be round with him now he comes from hunting.
Fye, fye, fye, fye!

Enter CAPHIS, and the Servants of ISIDORE and Caph. Good even, Varro: What, you come for money?

Varro. What, is't not your business too?

Caph. It is; — and yours too, Isidore?

Isid. Serv. It is so.

Caph. 'Would we were all dischard'! I fear it.

Caph. Here comes the lord.

Enter TIMON, ALCIBIADES, and Lords, &c.

Tim. So soon as dinner's done, we'll forth again,

My Alcibäides. — With me? What's your will?

Caph. My lord, here is a note of certain dues.

Tim. Dues? Whence are you?

Caph. Of Athens here, my lord.

Tim. Go to my steward.

Caph. Please it your lordship, he hath put me off
To the succession of new days this month:
My master is awak'd by great occasion,
To call upon his own; and humbly prays you,
That with your other noble parts you'll suit,
In giving him his right.

Tim. Mine honest friend,
I pr'ythee, but repair to me next morning.

Caph. Nay, good my lord,—

Tim. Contain thyself, good friend.

Var. Serv. One Varro's servant, my good lord,—

Isid. Serv. From Isidore;

He humbly prays your speedy payment,—

Caph. If you did know, my lord, my master's wants,

Var. Serv. Twas due, on forfeiture, my lord, six weeks,

And past,—

Isid. Serv. Your steward puts me off, my lord;
And I am sent expressly to your lordship,

Tim. Give me breath:—

I do beseech you, good my lords, keep on.

[Exeunt Alcibiades and Lords.

I'll wait upon you instantly. — Come hither, pray you

[To Flavius.

Flav. Please you, gentlemen,
The time is unagreeable to this business;
Your importunity cease, till after dinner;
That I may make his lordship understand
Wherefore you are not paid.

Tim. Do so, my friends:

See them well entertain'd.

Flav. I pray, draw near.

[Exit Timon.

Var. Serv. I speak not to thee.

Apem. No; 'tis to thyself. — Come away.

[To the Fool.

All Serv. What are we, Apemantus?

Apem. Asses.

All Serv. Why?

Apem. That you ask me what you are, and do not know yourselves. — Speak to 'em, fool.

Fool. How do you, gentlemen?

All Serv. Gramercies, good fool: How does your mistress?

Enter Page.

Fool. Look you, here comes my mistress' page.

Page. [To the Fool.] Why, how now, captain? what do you in this wise company? — How dost thou, Apemantus?

Apem. 'Would I had a rod in my mouth, that I might answer thee profitably. —

Page. Pr'ythee, Apemantus, read me the super-scription of these letters; I know not which is which.

Apem. Canst not read?

Page. No.

Apem. There will little learning die then, that day thou art hanged. This is to lord Timon; this to Alcibiades. Go.

Apem. Even so thou out-run'st grace. Fool, I will go with you to lord Timon's.

Fool. Will you leave me there?

Apem. If Timon stay at home. — You three serve three usurers?

All Serv. Ay; 'would they served us!

Apem. So would I,—as good a trick as ever hangman served thief.

Fool. Are you three usurers' men?

All Serv. Ay, fool.

Fool. I think, no usurer but has a fool to his servant: My mistress is one, and I am her fool. When men come to borrow of your masters, they approach sadly, and go away merry; but they enter my mistress' house merrily, and go away sadly.

Var. Serv. Thou art not altogether a fool.

Fool. Nor thou altogether a wise man:—as much foolery as I have, so much wit thou lackest.

Apem. That answer might have become Ap-emantus.

All Serv. Aside, aside; here comes lord Timon.

Re-enter Timon and Flavius.

Apem. Come, with me, fool, come.

Fool. I do not always follow lover, elder brother, and woman; sometimes, the philosopher.

[Exeunt Apemantus and Fool.

Flav. 'Pray you, walk near; I'll speak with you anon. [Exit Serv.

Tim. You make me marvel: Wherefore, ere this time,

Had you not fully laid my state before me;
That I might so have rated my expense,
As I had leave of means?

Flav. You would not hear me. At many leisures I propos'd.

Tim. Go to:

Percance, some single vantages you took,
When my indisposition put you back;
And that unaptness made your minister,
Thus to excuse yourself.

Flav. O my good lord!

At many times I brought in my accounts,
Laid them before you; you would throw them off,
And say, you found them in mine honesty.
When, for some trifling present, you have bid me
Return so much 5, I have shook my head, and wept;
Yea, 'gainst the authority of manners, pray'd you
To hold your hand more close: I did endure
Not seldom, nor no slight checks; when I have Prompted you, in the ebb of your estate,
And your great flow of debts. My dear-lov'd lord,
Though you hear now, (too late!) yet now's a time,
The greatest of your having lacks a half
To pay your present debts.

Tim. Let all my land be sold.
Flav. 'Tis all engag'd, some forfeited and gone;
And what remains will hardly stop the mouth
Of present dues: the future comes apace:
What shall defend the interim? and at length
How goes our reckoning?

Tim. To Lacedemon did my land extend.
Flav. O my good lord, the world is but a word;
Were it all yours to give it in a breath,
How quickly were it gone?

Tim. You tell me true.
Flav. If you suspect my husbandry, or false-hood,
Call me before the exactest auditors,
And set me on the proof. So the gods bless me,
When all our offices? have been oppress'd
With riotous feeders; when our vaults have wept
With drunken spilt of wine; when every room
 Hath blaz'd with lights, and bray'd with minstrelsy;
I have retir'd me to a wasteful cock,
And set mine eyes at flow.

Tim. Pry'thee, no more,
Flav. Heavens, have I said, the bounty of this lord!
How many prodigal bits have slaves, and peasants,
This night englutted! Who is not Timon's?
What heart, head, sword, force, means, but is lord
Timon's?

Great Timon, noble, worthy, royal Timon?
Ah! when the means are gone, that buy this praise,
The breath is gone whereof this praise is made:
Feast-won, fast-lost; one cloud of winter showers,
These flies are couch'd.

Tim. Come, sermon me no further:
No villainous bounty yet hath pass'd my heart;
Unwisely, not ignobly, have I given.
Why dost thou weep? Canst thou the conscience lack,
To think I shall lack friends? Secure thy heart;
If I would broach the vessels of my love,
And try the argument of hearts by borrowing,
Men, and men's fortunes, could I frankly use,
As I can bid thee speak.

Flav. Assurance bless your thoughts!
Tim. And, in some sort, these wants of mine are crown'd? 6
That I account them blessings; for by these Shall I try friends: You shall perceive, how you
Mistake my fortunes; I am wealthy in my friends.
Within there, ho! — Flaminus, Servilius!

Enter Flaminus, Servilius, and other Servants.
Serv. My lord, my lord, —

* A certain sum. 5 The apartments allotted to culinary offices, &c. 6 Dignified, made respectable.
ACT III

SCENE I. — A Room in Lucullus's House.

FLAMINIUS waiting. Enter a Servant to him.

Serv. I have told my lord of you; he is coming down to you.

Flam. I thank you, sir.

Enter Lucullus.

Serv. Here's my lord.

Lucul. [Aside.] One of lord Timon's men? a gift, I warrant. Why this hits right; I dreamt of a silver bason and ever to-night. Flaminus, honest Flaminus; you are very respectively

Flam. His health is well, sir.

Lucul. I am right glad that his health is well, sir. And what hast thou there, under thy cloak, pretty Flaminus?

Flam. 'Faith, nothing but an empty box, sir; which, in my lord's behalf, I come to entreat your honour to supply; who, having great and instant occasion to use fifty talents, hath sent to your lordship to furnish him; nothing doubting your present assistance therein.

Lucul. La, la, la, la, — nothing doubting, says he? alas, good lord! a noble gentleman 'tis, if he would not up so good a house. Many a time and often I have din'd with him, and told him on't; and come again to supper to him, of purpose to have him spend less: and yet he would embrace no counsel, take no warning by my coming. Every man has his fault, and honesty is his; I have told him on't, but I could never get him from it.

Re-enter Servant with Wine.

Serv. Please your lordship, here is the wine.

Lucul. Flaminus, I have noted thee always wise. Here's to thee.

Flam. Your lordship speaks your pleasure.

Lucul. I have observed thee always for a towardly prompt spirit, — give thee thy due, — and one that knows what belongs to reason; and canst use the time well, if the time use thee well: good parts in thee. — Get you gone, sirrah. — [To the Servant, who goes out.] — Draw nearer honest Flaminus. Thy lord's a bountiful gentleman: but thou art wise; and thou knowest well enough, although thou comest to me, that this is no time to lend money; especially upon bare friendship, without security. Here's three solidares for thee; good boy, wink at me, and say, thou sawest me not. Fare thee well.

Flam. Is't possible, the world should so much differ?

And we alive, that liv'd? Fly, damned baseness, To him that worships thee.

[Throwing the Money away.

Lucul. Ha! Now I see thou art a fool, and fit for thy master. [Exit Lucullus.

Flam. May these add to the number that may scold thee! Thou disease of a friend, and not himself!

Has friendship such a faint and milky heart, It turns in less than two nights? O, you gods, I feel my master's passion!

Unto his honour, has my lord's meat in him: Why should it thrive, and turn to nutriment, When he is turn'd to poison?

O, may diseases only work upon't!

And, when he is sick to death, let not that part of nature Which my lord paid for, be of any power To expel sickness, but prolong his hour! [Exit.

SCENE II. — A publick Place.

Enter Lucius, with three Strangers.

Luc. Who, the lord Timon? he is my very good friend, and an honourable gentleman.

S1 Strat. We know him for no less, though we are but strangers to him. But I can tell you one thing, my lord, and which I hear from common rumours; now lord Timon's happy hours are done and past, and his estate shrinks from him.

Luc. Fye, no, do not believe it: he cannot want for money.

S2 Strat. But believe you this, my lord, that not long ago, one of his men, was with the lord Lucullus, to borrow so many talents; nay, urged extremely for't, and show'd what necessity belonged to't, and yet was denied.

Luc. How?

S2 Strat. I tell you, denied, my lord.

Luc. What a strange case was that? now, before the gods, I am asham'd on't. Denied that honourable man? there was very little honour show'd in't. For my own part, I must needs confess, I have received some small kindnesses from him, as money, plate, jewels, and such like trifles, nothing comparing to his; yet, had he mistook him, and sent to me, I should ne'er have denied his occasion so many talents.

Enter Servilius.

Ser. See, by good hap, yonder's my lord; I have sweet to see his honour. — My honoured lord. —

[Lucius.

Luc. Servilius! your are kindly met, sir. Fare thee well: — Commend me to thy honourable-virtuous lord, my very exquisite friend.

Ser. May it please your honour, my lord hath sent —

Luc. Ha! what has he sent? I am so much endeared to that lord; he's ever sending: How shall I thank him, thinkest thou? And what has he sent now?

Ser. He has only sent his present occasion now, my lord; requesting your lordship to supply his instant use with so many talents.

Luc. I know, his lordship is but merry with me; He cannot want fifty-five hundred talents.

Ser. But in the mean time he wants less, my lord. If his occasion were not virtuous, I should not urge it half so faithfully.

Luc. Dost thou speak seriously, Servilius?

Ser. Upon my soul, 'tis true, sir.

Luc. What a wicked beast was I, to disfigure
SELF. Do you observe this, Hostilius?

[Exit Servilius.]

True, as you said, Timon is shrunk, indeed;
And he, that’s once denied, will hardly speed.

[Exit Lucius.]

1 Str. Do you observe this, Hostilius?
2 Str. Ay, too well.
1 Str. Why this
Is the world’s soul; and just of the same piece
Is every flatterer’s spirit. In my knowing,
The noble Timon has been this lord’s father,
And this his credit with his purse;
Supported his estate; nay, Timon’s money
Has paid his men their wages; He ne’er drinks,
But Timon’s silver treads upon his lip;
And yet, (O, see the monstrousness of man
When he looks out in an ungrateful shape!)
He does deny him, in respect of his,
What charitable men afford to beggars.

3 Str. Religion groans at it.
1 Str.
For mine own part,
I never tasted Timon in my life,
Nor came any of his bounties over me,
To mark me for his friend; yet, I protest,
For his right noble mind, illustrious virtue
And honourable carriage,
Had his necessity made use of me,
I would have put my wealth into donation,
And the best half should have return’d to him,
So much I love his heart: But, I perceive,
Men must learn now with pity to dispense;
For policy sits above conscience. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. — A Room in Sempronius’s House.
Enter Sempronius, and a Servant of Timon’s.

Sem. Must he needs trouble me in’t? ’Bove all others?

He might have tried lord Lucius, or Lucullus;
And now Ventidius is wealthy too,
Whom he redeem’d from prison: All these three Owe their estates unto him.

Serv. O my lord,
They have all been touch’d, and found base metal;
For
They have all denied him!

Sem.
How! have they denied him?
Has Ventidius and Lucullus denied him?
And does he send to me? Three? Humph! —
It shows but little love or judgment in him.
Must I be his last refuge? His friends, like physicians,
Thrive, give him over; Must I take the cure upon me?

He has much disgrac’d me in’t; I am angry at him,
That might have known my place: I see nosensfor’t;
But his occasions might have woo’d me first;
For, in my conscience, I was the first man
That e’er receiv’d gift from him:
And does he think so backwardly of me now,
That I’ll requite it last? No: So it may prove
An argument of laughter to the rest,
And I amongst the lords be thought a fool.
I had rather than the worth of thrice the sum,
He had sent to me first, but for my mind’s sake;
I had such a courage to do him good. But now return,
And with their faint reply this answer join;
Who bates mine honour shall not know my coin.

Serv. Excellent! Your lordship’s a goodly villain.
The devil knew not what he did, when he made man politic; he cross’d himself by’t; and I cannot think, but in the end, the villainies of man will set him clear. How fairly this lord strives to appear fool! takes virtuous copies to be wicked; like those that, under hot ardent zeal, would set whole realms on fire.

Of such a nature is his politic love.
This was my lord’s best hopes; now all are fled,
Save the gods only: Now his friends are dead,
Doors, that were ne’er acquainted with their wards
Many a bounteous year, must be employ’d
Now to guard sure their master.
And this is all a liberal course allows;
Who cannot keep his wealth, must keep his house.

[Exit.

SCENE IV. — A Hall in Timon’s House.
Enter two Servants of Varro, and the Servant of Lucius, meeting Titus, Hortensius, and other
Servants to Timon’s Creditors, waiting his coming out.

Var. Serv. Well met; good morrow, Titus and Hortensius.

Tit. The like to you, kind Varro.

Hor.

Lucius?

What, do we meet together?

Luc. Serv.

Ay, and, I think,

One business does command us all; for mine

Is money.

Tit. So is theirs and ours.

Enter Philotus.

Luc. Serv.

And sir

Philotus too!

Phil. Good day at once.

Luc. Ser.

Welcome, good brother.

What do you think the hour?

Phil.

Labouring for nine.

Luc. Serv.

So much?

Phil.

Is not my lord seen yet?

Luc. Serv.

Not yet.

Phil. I wonder on’t: he was wont to shine at seven.

Luc. Serv.

Ay, but the days are waxed shorter with him:

You must consider, that a prodigal course
Is like the sun’s; but not, like his, recoverable.
I fear,
’Tis deepest winter in lord Timon’s purse;
That is, one may reach deep enough, and yet
Find little.

Phil.

I am of your fear for that.

Tit. I’ll show you how to observe a strange event.

Your lord sends now for money.
Hor. Most true, he does.
Tit. And he wears jewels now of Timon's gift,
For which I wait for money.
Hor. It is against my heart.
Luc. Serv. Mark, how strange it shows,
Timon in this should pay more than he owes;
And e'en as if your lord should wear rich jewels,
And send for money for 'em.
Hor. I am weary of this charge, the gods can witness:
I know, my lord hath spent of Timon's wealth,
And now ingratitude makes it worse than stealth.
1 Var. Serv. Yes, mine's three thousands crowns:
What's yours?
Luc. Serv. Five thousand mine.
1 Var. Serv. 'Tis much deep: and it should seem by the sum,
Your master's confidence was above mine;
Else, surely his had equal'd.

Enter Flaminus.
Tit. One of lord Timon's men.
Luc. Serv. Flaminus! sir, a word: 'Pray, is my lord  eady to come forth?
Flam. No, indeed, he is not.
Tit. We attend his lordship; 'pray, signify so much.
Flam. I need not tell him: he knows you are too diligent.

[Exit Flaminus.

Enter Flavinus in a Cloak, muffled.

Luc. Serv. Ha! is not that his steward muffled so?
He goes away in a cloud: call him, call him.
Tit. Do you hear, sir?
1 Var. Serv. By your leave, sir,—
Flav. What do you ask of me, my friend?
Tit. We wait for certain money here, sir.
Flav. Ay,
If money were as certain as your waiting,
'Twere sure enough. Why then prefer'd you not
Your sums and bills, when your false masters eat
Of my lord's meat? Then they could smile, and fawn
Upon his debts, and take down th' interest.
Into their glutinous maws. You do yourselves
but wrong,
To stir me up; let me pass quietly:
Believ't, my lord and I have made an end:
I have no more to reckon, he to spend.
Luc. Serv. Ay, but this answer will not serve.
Flav. If 'twill not,
'Tis not so base as you; for you serve knives.
1 Var. Serv. How! what does his cashier'd worship ship matter?
2 Var. Serv. No matter what; he's poor, and that's revenge enough. Who can speak broader than he that has no house to put his head in? such may rail against great buildings.

[Exit.

Enter Servilius.

Tit. O, here's Servilius; now we shall know
Some answer.
Serv. If I might beseech you, gentlemen,
To repair some other hour, I should much
Derive from it: for, take it on my soul,
My lord leans wondrously to discontent.
His comfortable temper has forsook him;
He is much out of health, and keeps his chamber.
Luc. Serv. Many do keep their chambers, are not sick:
And, if it be so far beyond his health,
Methinks, he should the sooner pay his debts,
And make a clear way to the gods.
Serv. Good gods!
Tit. We cannot take this for an answer, sir.
Flam. [Within.] Servilius, help!—my lord! my lord!—

Enter Timon, in a rage; Flaminus following.
Tim. What are my doors oppos'd against my passage?
Have I been ever free, and must my house
Be my retentive enemy, my gaol?
The place, which I have feasted, does it now,
Like all mankind, show me an iron heart?
Luc. Serv. Put in now, Titus.
Tit. My lord, here is my bill.
Luc. Serv. Here's mine.
Hor. Serv. And mine, my lord.
Both Var. Serv. And ours, my lord.
Phi. All our bills.
Tim. Knock me down with 'em?: I cleave me to the girdle.
Luc. Serv. Alas! my lord,—
Tim. Cut my heart in sums.
Tit. Mine, fifty talents.
Tim. Tell out my blood.
Luc. Serv. Five thousand crowns, my lord.
Tim. Five thousand drops pays that,—
What yours?—and yours?
1 Var. Serv. My lord,—
2 Var. Serv. My lord,—
Tim. Tear me, take me, and the gods fall upon you!

[Exit.
Hor. 'Faith, I perceive our masters may throw their caps at their money; these debts may well be called desperate ones, for a madman owes 'em.

[Exeunt.

Re-enter Timon and Flavius.
Tim. They have e'en put my breath from me,
the slaves:
Creditors! — devils.
Flav. My dear lord,—
Tim. What if it should be so?
Flav. My lord,—
Tim. I'll have it so: — my steward!
Flav. Here, my lord.
Tim. So fitly? Go, bid all my friends again,
Lucius, Lucullus, and Sempronius; all:
I'll once more feed the rascals.
Flav. O my lord,
You only speak from your distracted soul;
There is not so much left to furnish out
A moderate table.
Tim. Be't not in thy care; go;
I charge thee; invite them all: let in the tide
Of knives once more; my cook and I will provide.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V. — The Senate-House.
The Senate sitting.
Enter Alcibiades, attended.

1 Sen. My lord, you have my voice to it; the fault's
Bloody; 'tis necessary he should die:
Nothing emboldens sin so much as mercy
2 Sen. Most true; the law shall bruise him.
Alcib. Honour, health, and compassion to the senate!
1 Sen. Now, captain?
Alcib. I am an humble suitor to your virtues;

7 Timon gibbles. They present their written bills; he catches at the word, and alludes to bills or bottle-axes.
Scene V.

Timon of Athens.

For pity is the virtue of the law,
And none but tyrants use it cruelly.
It pleases time, and Fortune, to lie heavy
Upon a friend of mine, who in hot blood,
Hath been entangled into the law, which is past depth
To those that, without heed, do plunge into it.
He is a man, setting his fate aside,
Of comely virtues:
Nor did he soil the fact with cowardice;
(An honour in him which buys out his faults,)
But, with a noble fury, and fair spirit,
Seeing his reputation touch’d to death,
He did oppose his foe:
And with such sober and unnoted passion
He did behave 8 his anger, ere ‘twas spent,
As if he had but prov’d an argument.

1 Sen. You undergo too strict a paradox,
Striving to make an ugly deed look fair;
Your words have took such pains, as if they labour’d
To bring manslaughter into form, set quarrelling
Upon the head of valour; which, indeed,
Is valour misbegot, and came into the world
When sects and factions were newly born:
He’s truly valiant, that can wisely suffer
The worst that man can breathe; and make his wrongs
His outsides; wear them like his raiment, carelessly;
And ne’er prefer his injuries to his heart,
To bring it into danger.
If wrongs be evils, and enforce us kill,
What folly’s to hazard life for ill?

Alcib. My lord,
1 Sen. You cannot make gross sins look clear;
To revenge is no valour, but to bear.
Alcib. My lords, then, under favour, pardon me,
If I speak like a captain. —
Why do fond men expose themselves to battle,
And not endure all threatenings? sleep upon it,
And let the foes quietly cut their throats,
Without repugnancy; but if there be Such valour in the bearing, what make we Abroad? why then, women are more valiant,
That stay at home, if bearing carry it;
And th’ ass more than the captain than the lion; the felon,
Loaded with iron, whom does the judge,
If wisdom be in suffering. O my lords,
As you are great, be pitifully good:
Who cannot condemn rashness in cold blood?
To kill, I grant, is sin’s extremest gust; 9
But, in defence, by mercy, ‘tis most just.
To be in anger, is impiety;
But who is man, that is not angry?
Weigh but the crime with this.

2 Sen. You breathe in vain.

Alcib. In vain? his service done
At Lacedæmon, and Byzantium,
Were a sufficient briber for his life.
1 Sen. What’s that?

Alcib. Why, I say, my lords, he’s done fair service,
And slain in fight many of your enemies:
How full of valour did he bear himself
In the last conflict, and made plenteous wounds?
2 Sen. He has made too much plenty with ‘em, he Is a sworn rioter; ’tis a sin that often
Drowns him, and takes his valour prisoner:
If there were no foes, that were enough alone
To overcome him: in that beastly fury
He has been known to commit outrages,
And cherish factions: ’Tis inferred to us,
His days are foul, and his drink dangerous.

1 Sen. He dies.

Alcib. Hard fate! he might have died in war.
My lords, if not for any parts in him,
(Though his right arm might purchase his own time,
And be in him to none,) yet more to move you,
Take my deserts to his, and join them both:
And, for I know, your reverend ages love
Security, I’ll pawn my victories, all
My honour to you, upon his good returns.
If by this crime he owes the law his life,
Why, let the war receive’t in valiant gore;
For law is strict, and war is nothing more.
1 Sen. We are for law, he dies; urge it no more,
On height of our displeasure: Friend, or brother,
He forfeits his own blood, that spills another.
Alcib. Must it be so? it must not be.
My lords, I do beseech you, know me.

2 Sen. How?

Alcib. Call me to your remembrances.
3 Sen. What?

Alcib. I cannot think, but your age has forgot me;
It could not else be, I should prove so base, 1
To sue, and be denied such common grace:
My wounds ache at you.

1 Sen. Do you dare our anger?

‘Tis in few words, but spacious in effect;
We banish thee for ever.

Alcib. Banish your dotage; banish usurpy,
That makes the senate ugly.

1 Sen. I. If, after two days’ shine, Athens contain thee,
Attend our weightier judgment. And, not to swell our spirit,
He shall be executed presently. [Exeunt Senators.

Alcib. Now the gods keep you old enough: that you may live
Only in bone, that none may look on you!
I am worse than mad: I have kept back their foes,
While they have told their money, and let out
Their coin upon large interest; I myself,
Rich only in large hurts; — All those, for this?
Is this the balsam, that the usurping senate
Pours into captains’ wounds? ha! banishment?
It comes not ill; I hate not to be banish’d;
It is a cause worthy my spleen and fury,
That I may strike at Athens. I’ll cheer up
My discontented troops, and lay for hearts; 3
’Tis honour, with most lands to be at odds;
Soldiers should brook as little wrongs, as gods.

[Exit.

Scene VI. — A magnificent Room in Timon’s House.

Musick. Tables set out: Servants attending. Enter divers Lords, at several Doors.

1 Lord. The good time of day to you, sir.

2 Lord. I also wish it to you. I think, this honourable lord did but try us this other day.

1 Lord. Upon that were my thoughts tiring, 2 when we encountered: I hope it is not so low with him, as he made it seem in the trial of his several friends.

2 Lord. It should not be, by the persuasion of his new feasting.

1 Lord. I should think so: He hath sent me an

1 For dishonoured.
2 We should now say — lay out for hearts, i.e. the affections of the people.
3 To tire on a thing meant to be idly employed on it.
earnest inviting, which many my near occasions did urge me to put off; but he hath conjured me beyond them, and I must needs appear.

2 Lord. In like manner was I in debt to my importunate business, but he would not hear my excuse. I am sorry, when he sent to borrow of me, that my provision was out.

1 Lord. I am sick of that grief too, as I understand how all things go.

2 Lord. Every man here’s so. What would he have borrowed of you?

1 Lord. A thousand pieces.

2 Lord. A thousand pieces!

1 Lord. What of you?

3 Lord. He sent to me, sir — Here he comes. [Enter Timon, and Attendants.]

Tim. With all my heart, gentlemen both: — And how fare you?

1 Lord. Ever at the best, hearing well of your lordship.

2 Lord. The swallow follows not summer more willing, than we your lordship. [Aside.] Nor more willingly leaves winter; such summer-birds are men. — Gentlemen, our dinner will not recompense this long stay: feast your ears with the musick awhile; if they will fare so harshly on the trumpet’s sound: we shall to’t presently.

1 Lord. I hope it remains not unkindly with your lordship, that I returned you an empty messenger.

Tim. O, sir, let it not trouble you.

2 Lord. My noble lord, —

Tim. Ah, my good friend, what cheer?

[The Banquet brought in.]

2 Lord. My most honourable lord, I am e’en sick of shame, that, when your lordship this other day sent to me, I was so unfortunate a beggar.

Tim. Think not on’t, sir.

2 Lord. If you had sent but two hours before, —

— Come, bring in all together.

2 Lord. All covered dishes!

1 Lord. Royal cheer, I warrant you.

3 Lord. Doubt not that, if money and the season can yield it.

1 Lord. How do you? what’s the news?

3 Lord. Alcibiades is banished: Hear you of it?

1 & 2 Lord. Alcibiades banished!

3 Lord. ‘Tis so, be sure of it.

1 Lord. How? how?

2 Lord. I pray you, upon what?

Tim. My worthy friends, will you draw near?

3 Lord. I’ll tell you more anon. Here’s a noble feast toward.

2 Lord. This is the old man still.

3 Lord. Will’t hold? will’t hold?

2 Lord. It does: but time will — and so —

3 Lord. I do conceive.

Tim. Each man to his stool, with that spur as he would to the lip of his mistress: your diet shall be in all places alike. Make not a city feast of it, to let the meat cool ere we can agree upon the first place; sit, sit. — The gods require our thanks.
ACT IV.

SCENE I. — Without the Walls of Athens.

Enter Timon.

Tim. Let me look back upon thee, O thou wall,
That girdlest in those wolves! Dive in the earth,
And fence not Athens! Matrons, turn incontinent!
Obedience fail in children! slaves, and fools,
Pluck the grave wrinkled senator from the bench,
And minister in their steads! bankrupts, hold fast;
Rather than render back, out with your knives,
And cut your trusters' throats! bound servants, steal!
Large-handed robbers your grave masters are;
Son of sixteen,
Pluck the lin'd crustch from the old limping sire,
With it beat out his brains! piety, and fear,
Religion to the gods, peace, justice, truth,
Domestick awe, night-rest, and neighbourblood,
Instruction, manners, mysteries, and trades,
Degrees, observances, customs, and laws,
Decline to your confounding contraries,
And yet confusion live! — Plagues, incident to men,
Your potent and infectious fevers heap
On Athens, ripe for stroke! thou cold sciatica,
Cripple our senators, that their limbs may halt
As lamely as their manners! breath infect breath;
That their society, as their friendship, may
Be merely poison! Nothing I'll bear from thee,
But nakedness, thou detestable town!
Take thou that too, with multiplying ban's! 6
Timon will to the woods; where he shall find
The unkindest beast more kinder than mankind.
The gods confound (hear me, ye good gods all,)
The Athenians both within and out that wall!
And grant, as Timon grows, his hate may grow
To the whole race of mankind, high and low! 7

Enter Flavius, with two or three Servants.

1 Serv. Hear you, master steward, where's our master?
Are we undone? cast off? nothing remaining?
Flav. Alack, my fellows, what should I say to you?
Let me be recorded by the righteous gods,
I am as poor as you.

1 Serv. Such a house broke!
So noble a master fallen! All gone! and not
One friend, to take his fortune by the arm,
And go along with him!

2 Serv. As we do turn our backs
From our companion, thrown into his grave;
So his familiars to his buried fortunes
Slink all away; leave their false vows with him,
Like empty purses pick'd: and his poor self,
A dedicated beggar to the air,
With his disease of all-shunn'd poverty,
Walks, like contempt, alone. — More of our fellows.

Enter other Servants.

Flav. All broken implements of a ruin'd house.

3 Serv. Yet do our hearts wear Timon's livery,
That see I by our faces; we are fellows still,
Serving alike in sorrow: Leak'd is our bark;

Enter Timon.

Tim. O blessed breeding sun, draw from the earth
Rotten humidity; below thy sister's orb
Infest the air! Twinn'd brothers of one womb
Whose procreation, residence, and birth,
Scarce is divident, — touch them with several for tunes;
The greater scorns the lesser: Not nature,
To whom all sores lay siege, can bear great fortune,
But by contempt of nature.
Raise me this beggar, and denude that lord;
The senator shall bear contempt hereditary,
The beggar native honour.
It is the pasture lards the brother's sides,
The want that makes him lean. Who dares, who dares,
In purity of manhood stand upright,
And say, This man's a flatterer? If one be,
So are they all; for every grieve of fortune
Is smooth'd by that below: the learned pate
Ducks to the golden fool: All is oblique;
There's nothing level in our cursed natures,
But direct villainy. Therefore be abhor'd
All feast, societies, and throns of men!
His semblable, yea, himself, Timon disclaims;
Destruction fagg! mankind! — Earth, yield me roots!

[Digging.

Who seeks for better of thee, sauce his palate

7 Hasty, precipitate.
8 Propensity, disposition.
9 But by is here used for without.
10 Seize, gripe.
With thy most operant poison! What is here! Gold? yellow, glittering, precious gold? No, gods, I am no idle votaries. Roots, you clear heavens! Thus much of this, will make black, white; foul, fair; Wrong, right; base, noble; old, young; coward, valiant.

Ha, you gods! why this? What this, you gods? Why this Will lug your priests and servants from your sides; Pluck stout men’s pillows from below their heads; This yellow slave
Will knit and break religions; bless the accurs’d; Make the hoar leprous ador’d; place thieves, And give them title, knee, and approbation, With senators on the bench: this is it, That makes the wappen’d widow wed again; [March aftar off.]—Ha? a drum? Thou’rt quick, But yet I’ll bury thee: Thou’l go, strong thief, When gouty keepers of thee cannot stand: — Nay, stay thou out for earnest. [Keeping some Gold. Enter Alcibiades, with Drum and Fife, in warlike manner.

Tim. A beast, as thou art. The canker gnaw thy heart, For showing me again the eyes of man! Alcib. What is thy name? Is man so hateful to thee, That art thyself a man?
Tim. I am misanthropos, and hate mankind. For thy part, I do wish thou wert a dog, That I might love thee something.
Alcib. I know thee well: But in thy fortunes am unlearn’d and strange. Tim. I know thee too; and more, than that I know thee, I not desire to know. Follow thy drum; With man’s blood paint the ground, guiles, guiles: Religious canons, civil laws are cruel; Then what should war be?
Alcib. How came the noble Timon to this change? Tim. As the moon does, by wanting light to give; But then renew I could not, like the moon; That were no suns to borrow of.
Alcib. What friendship may I do thee?
Tim. Noble Timon, Maintain my opinion.
Alcib. What is it, Timon?
Tim. Promise me friendship, but perform none: If thou wilt not promise, the gods plague thee, for Thou art a man! if thou dost perform, confound thee, For thou’rt a man!
Alcib. I have heard in some sort of thy miseries. Tim. Thou saw’st them, when I had prosperity. Alcib. I see them now: then was a blessed time.
I have but little gold of late, brave Timon, The want whereof doth daily make revolt In my penurious band; I have heard, and grieve’d, How cursed Athens, mindless of thy worth, Forgetting thy great deeds, when neighbour states, But for thy sword and fortune, trod upon them,— Tim. I pray thee, beat thy drum, and get thee gone. Alcib. I am thy friend, and pity thee, dear Timon. Tim. How dost thou pity him, whom thou dost trouble? I had rather be alone.

Alcib. Why, fare thee well:
Here’s some gold for thee.
Tim. Keep’t, I cannot eat it.
Alcib. When I have laid proud Athens on a heap,—
Tim. Warr’st thou against Athens?
Alcib. Ay, Timon, and have cause. Tim. The gods confound them all i’thys conquest; and Thee after, when thou hast conquer’d!
Alcib. Why me, Timon?
Tim. That By killing villains, thou wast born to conquer My country.
Put up the gold: Go on,—here’s gold,—go on; Be a planetary plague, when Jove Will o’er some high-vic’d city lang his poison In the sick air: Let not thy sword skip one: Pity not honour’d age for his white beard, He’s an assuror: Strike me the counterfeit matron; It is her habit only that is honest.
Let not the virgin’s cheek Make softhy trechant sword; spare not the babe, Whose dimpled smiles from fools exhaust their mercy;
Think it a bastard 4, whom the oracle Hath doubtfully pronounc’d thy throat shall cut, And miseries. 5 Swear against objects 6:
Put armour on thine ears, and on thine eyes;
Whose proof, nor yells of mothers, maid, nor babes, Nor sight of priests in holy vestments bleeding, Shall pierce a jot. There’s gold to pay thy soldiers.
Make large confusion; and, thy fury spent, Confounded be thyself! speak not, be gone.
Alcib. Hast thou gold yet? I’ll take the gold thou giv’st thee!
Not all thy counsel.
Tim. Dost thou, or dost thou not, heaven’s curse upon thee!
Alcib. Strike up the drum towards Athens. Farewell, Timon! If I thrive well, I’ll visit thee again.
Tim. If I hope well, I’ll never see thee more.
Alcib. I never did thee harm.
Tim. Yes, thou spok’st well of me.
Alcib. Call’s’t thou that harm?
Tim. Men daily find it such. Get thee away.
Alcib. We but offend him. — Strike.

Whose womb unmeasurable, and infinite breast, Teems, and feedeth all; whose self-same mettle, Whereof thy proud child, arrogant man, is puff’d, Engenders the black toad, and adder blue, The gilded newt, and eyeless venom’d worm, With all the abhorred births below crisp heaven Whereon Hyperion’s quickening fire doth shine; Yield him, who all thy human sons doth hate, From forth thy plenteous bosom one poor root! Ensue thy fertile and conception womb, Let it no more bring out ungrateful man! Go great with tigers, dragons, wolves, and bears; Teem with new monsters, whom thy upward face

4 An allusion to the tale of Edipus.
5 Without pity.
6 I. e. Against objects of charity and compassion.
7 The serpent called the blind worm.
8 Curved.
Hath to the marbled mansion all above
Never presented! — O, a root, — Dear thanks!
Dry up thy marrows, vines, and plough-torn leas:
Whereof ingratitude man, with liquorish draughts,
And morsels unctuous, greases his pure mind,
That from it all consideration slips!

Enter Apemantus.

More man? Plague! plague!

Apem. I was directed hither: Men report,
Thou dost affect my manners, and dost use them.

Tim. This then, because thou dost not keep a dog
Whom I would imitate: consumption catch thee!

Apem. This is in thee a nature but affected;
A poor unmanly melancholy, sprung
From change of fortune. Why this spade? this place?
This slave-like habit, and these looks of care?
Thy flatterers yet wear silk, drink wine, lie soft,
Hug their distress’d perfumes, and have forgot
That ever Timon was. Shame not these woods,
By putting on the cunning of a carper.
Be thou a flatterer now, and seek to thrive
By that which has undone thee: hinge thy knee,
And let his very breath, whom thou’lt observe,
Blow off thy cap; praise his most vicious strain,
And call it excellent; thou wast told thus;
Thou gav’st thine ears, like tapsters, that bid welcome,
To knaves, and all approachers: ‘Tis most just,
That thou turn rascal; hadst thou wealth again,
Rascals should have’t. Do not assume my likeness.

Tim. Were I like thee, I’d throw away myself.

Apem. Thou hast cast away thyself, being like thyself;
A madman so long, now a fool: What, think’st
That the bleak air, thy boisterous chamberlain,
Will put thy shirt on warm? Will these moss’d trees,
That have outliv’d the eagle, page thy heels,
And skip when thou point’st out? Will the cold brook,
Candied with ice, caudle thy morning taste,
To cure thy o’er-night surfeit? call the creatures,—
Whose naked lives live in all the spitce
Of wreckful heaven; whose bare unhoused trunks,
To the conflicting elements expos’d,
Answer mere nature, — bid them flatter thee;
O! thou shalt find

A fool of thee: Depart.
Apem. I love thee better now than e’er I did.

Tim. I hate thee worse.

Apem. Why?

Tim. Thou flatt’st misery.
Apem. I flatt’rest not; but say thou art a cautiff.

Tim. Why dost thou seek me out?

Apem. To vex thee.

Tim. Always a villain’s office, or a fool’s.

Dost please thyself in’t?

Apem. Ay.

Tim. What! a knave too?

Apem. If thou didst put this sour cold habit on
To castigate thy pride, ’twere well: but thou
Dost it enforcedly; thou’st courtier be again,
Wilt thou not beggar. Willing misery
Outlives uncertain pomp, is crown’d before 9:
The one is filling still, never complete;
The other, at high wish: Best state, contentless,
Hath a distracted and most wretched being,
Worse than the worst, content.
Thou shouldst desire to die, being miserable.

Tim. Not by his breath! that is more miserable.

9 i.e. Arrives sooner at the completion of its wishes.
1 By his voice, sentence.

Thou art a slave, whom fortune’s tender arm
With favour never clasp’d; but bred a dog.
Hadst thou, like us, from our first swath 8 proceeded,
The sweet degrees that this brief world affords
To such as may the passive drugs of it
Freely command, thou wouldst have plung’d thyself
In gen’ral riot; and have never learn’d
The icy precepts of respect, but follow’d
The sugar’d game before thee. But myself,
Who had the world as my confectionary;
The mouths, the tongues, the eyes and hearts of men
At duty, more than I could frame employment;
That numberless upon me stuck, as leaves
Do on the oak, have with one winter’s brush
Fell from their boughs, and left me open, bare
For every storm that blows; — I to bear this,
That never knew but better, is some burden:
Thy nature did commence in suffering, time
Hath made thee hard n’rt. Why shouldst thou hate men?

They never flatt’r’d thee: What hast thou given?
Poor rogue hereditary. Hence! be gone! —
If thou hadst not been born the worst of men,
Thou hadst been a knave, and flatterer.

Apem. Art thou proud yet?

Tim. Ay, that I am not thee.

Apem. I, that I was No prodigal.

Tim. I, that I am one now;
Were all the wealth I have, shut up in thee,
I’d give thee leave to hang it. Get thee gone. —
That the whole life of Athens were in this!
Thus would I eat it.

[ Eating a Root.

Apem. Here; I will mend thy feast.

[ Offering him something.

Tim. First mend my company, take away thyself.
Apem. So I shall mend mine own, by the lack of thine.

Tim. ’Tis not well mended so, it is but botch’d;
If not, I would it were.

Apem. What wouldst thou have to Athens?

Tim. Thee thither in a whirlwind. If thou wilt Tell them there, I have gold; look, so I have.

Apem. Here is no use for gold.

Tim. The best and truest;
For here it sleeps, and does no hired harm.

Apem. Where ly’ts o’ nights, Timon? —

Tim. Under that’s above me.

Where feed’st thou o’days, Apemantus?

Apem. Where my stomach finds meat; or, rather, where I eat it.

Tim. Would poison were obedient, and knew my mind!

Apem. Where wouldst thou send it?

Tim. To sauce thy dishes.

Apem. The middle of humanity thou never knewest, but the extremity of both ends: When thou wast in thy gilt, and thy perfume, they mocked thee for too much curiosity 3; in thy rags thou knewest none, but art despised for the contrary. There’s a medlar for thee, eat it.

Apem. Dost hate a medlar?

Tim. Ay, though it look like thee.

Apem. An thou hadst hated medlars sooner, thou shouldst have loved thyself better now. What man didst thou ever know unthrift, that was beloved after his means?

3 From infancy. 8 For too much finical delicacy.
Tim. Who, without those means thou talkest of, didst thou ever know beloved?

Apek. Myself.

Tim. I understand thee; thou hast some means to keep a dog.

Apek. What things in the world canst thou nearest compare to thy flatterers?

Tim. Women nearest: but men, men are the things themselves. What wouldst thou do with the world, Apemantus, if it lay in thy power?

Apek. Give it the beasts, to be rid of the men.

Tim. Wouldst thou have thyself fall in the confusion of men, and remain a beast with the beasts?

Apek. Ay, Timon.

Tim. A beastly ambition, which the gods grant thee to attain to! If thou wert the lion, the fox would beguile thee: if thou wert the lamb, the fox would eat thee: if thou wert the fox, the lion would suspect thee, when, peradventure, thou wert accused by the ass: if thou wert the ass, thy dulness would torment thee; and still thou livest: but as a breakfast to the wolf: if thou wert the wolf, thy greediness would afflict thee, and oft thou shouldst hazard thy life for thy dinner: wert thou the unicorn, pride and wrath would confound thee, and make thine own self the conquer of thy fury: wert thou a bear, thou wouldst be killed by the horse: wert thou a horse, thou wouldst be seized by the leopard: wert thou a leopard, thou wert German to the lion, and the spots of thy kindred were jurors on thy life: all thy safety were remotion; and thy defence, absence.

What beast couldst thou be, that were not subject to a beast? and what a beast art thou already, that seest not thy loss in transformation?

Apek. If thou couldst please me with speaking to me, thou mightst have hit upon it here: The Commonwealth of Athens is become a forest of beasts.

Tim. How has the ass broke the wall, that thou art out of the city?

Apek. Yonder comes a poet and a painter: The plague of company light upon thee! I will fear to catch it, and give way: When I know not what else to do, I'll see thee again.

Tim. When there is nothing living but thee, thou shalt be welcome. I had rather be a beggar's dog, than Apemantus.

Apek. Thou art the cap of all the fools alive.

Tim. Away, Thou tedious rogue! I am sorry, I shall lose A stone by thee. [Throwing a Stone at him.]

Apek. Beast!

Tim. Slave!

Apek. Toad!

Tim. Rogue, rogue, rogue! [Apemantus retreats backward, as going.]

I am sick of this false world; and will love nought But even the mere necessities upon it.

Then, Timon, presently prepare thy grave; Lie where the light foam of the sea may beat Thy grave-stone daily: make thine epitaph, That death in me at others' lives may laugh. O thou sweet king-killer, and dear divorce [Looking on the Gold.]

'Twixt natural son and sire! thou bright defiler Of Hymen's purest bed! thou valiant Mars! Thou ever young, fresh, lov'd and delicate woor, Whose blush doth thaw the consecrated snow That lies on Dian's lap; thou visible god,

* Remoteness; the being placed at a distance from the lion.

That soldier's close impossibilities, And mak'st them kiss! that speak'st with every tongue,

To every purpose! O thou touch'd 6 of hearts! Think, thy slave man rebels; and by thy virtue Set them into confounding odds, that beasts May have the world in empire!

Apek. 'Woul'd 'twere so; —

But not till I am dead! — I'll say, thou hast gold.

Thou wilt be throng'd to shortly.

Tim. Throng'd to? Ay.

Apek. Thine back, I pr'ythee. [Exit Apemantus.]

More things like men? — Eat, Timon, and abhor them.

Enter Thieves.

1 Thief. Where should he have this gold? It is some poor fragment, some slender o'th his remainder: The mere want of gold, and the falling-from of his friends, drove him into this melancholy.

2 Thief. It is noised, he hath a mass of treasure.

3 Thief. Let us make the assay upon him: if he care not for't, he will supply us easily; If he covetously reserve it, how shall'st we get it?

2 Thief. True; for he bears it not about him, 'tis hid.

1 Thief. Is not this he?

Thieves. Where?

2 Thief. 'Tis his description.

3 Thief. He; I know him.

Thieves. Save thee, Timon.

Tim. Now, thieves?

Thieves. Soldiers, not thieves.

Tim. Both too; and women's sons.

Thieves. We are not thieves, but men that much do want.

Tim. Your greatest want is, you wantmuch of meat. Why should you want? Behold the earth hath roots; Within this mile break forth a hundred springs: The oxen bear masts, the briars scarlet hips; The bounteous housewife, nature, on each bush Lays her full mess before you. Want? why want?

1 Thief. We cannot live on grass, on berries, water, As beasts, and birds, and fishes.

Tim. Nor on the beasts themselves, the birds, and fishes; You must eat men. Yet thanks I must you con, That you are thieves profess'd; that you work not In holier shapes: for there is boundless theft In limited? professions. Rascal thieves, Here's gold: Go, suck the subtle blood of the grape, Till the high fever seeth your blood to froth, And so 'scape hanging: trust not the physician; His antidotes are poison, and he slays More than you rob: take wealth and lives together Do villainy, do, since you profess to do', Like workmen. I'll example you with thievish: The sun's a thief, and with his great attraction Robs the vast sea: the moon's an arrant thief, And her pale fire she snatches from the sun: The sea's a thief, whose liquid surge resolves The moon into salt tears: each thing's a thief; The laws, your curb and whip, in their rough power Have uncheck'd theft. Love not yourselves: away; Rob one another. There's more gold: Cut throats; All that you meet are thieves: To Athens, go,
Act V. Scene I.

TIMON OF ATHENS.

Break open shops; nothing can you steal,
But thieves do lose it; steal not less, for this
I give you; and gold confound you howsoever!

[Timon retires to his Cave.]

3 Thief. He has almost charmed me from my profession, by persuading me to it.

1 Thief. 'Tis in the malice of mankind, that he thus advises us; not to have us thrive in our mystery.

2 Thief. I'll believe him as an enemy, and give over my trade.

1 Thief. Let us first see peace in Athens: There is no time so miserable, but a man may be true.

[Exit Thieves.

Enter Flavius.

Flav. O you gods! Is you desip'd and ruinous man my lord? Full of decay and failing? O monument And wonder of good deeds evilly betow'd! What an alteration of honour has Desperate want made! What viler thing upon the earth, than friends, Who can bring noblest minds to basest ends! How rarely does it meet with this time's guise, When man was wish'd to love his enemies: Grant, I may ever love, and rather woo Those that would mischief me, than those that do! He has caught me in his eye: I will present My honest grief unto him; and, as my lord, Still serve him with my life. — My dearest master!

Timo

Enter from his Cave.

Tim. Away! what art thou?

Flav. Have you forgot me, sir?

Tim. Why dost ask that? I have forgot all men;
Then if thou grant'st thou'rt man, I have forgot thee.

Flav. An honest poor servant of yours.

Tim. Then

I know thee not: I ne'er had honest man About me, I; all that I kept were knaves, To serve in meat to villains.

Flav. The gods are witness, Ne'er did poor steward wear a truer grief For his undone lord, than mine eyes for you.

Tim. What, dost thou weep? — Come nearer; — then I love thee,
Because thou art a woman, and disclaim'st Flinty mankind; whose eyes do never give,
But thorough lust, and laughter. Pity's sleeping:
Strange times, that weep with laughing, not with weeping!

Flav. I beg of you to know me, good my lord,

To accept my grief, and whilst this poor wealth lasts,
To entertain me as your steward still.

Tim. Had I a steward so true, so just, and now So comfortable? It almost turns
My dangerous nature wild. Let me behold
Thy face. — Surely, this man was born of woman. —
Forgive my general and exceptless rashness,
Perpetual-sober gods! I do proclaim
One honest man, — mistake me not, — but one;
No more, I pray, — and he is a steward. —
How fain would I have hated all mankind,
And thou redeem'st thyself: But all, save thee,
I fell with curses.

Methinks, thou art more honest now, than wise;
For, by oppressing and betraying me,
Thou mightst have sooner got another service:
For many so arrive at second masters,
Upon their first lord's neck. But tell me true,
(For I must ever doubt, though ne'er so sure,)
Is not thy kindness subtle, covetous,
If not a usuring kindness: and as rich men deal gifts,
Expecting in return twenty for one?

Flav. No, my most worthy master, in whose breast
Doubt and suspect, alas, are plac'd too late:
You should have fear'd false times, when you did feast;
Suspect still comes where an estate is least.
That which I show, heaven knows, is merely love,
Duty and zeal to your unmatched mind,
Care of your food and living: and, believe it,
My most honour'd lord,
For any benefit that points to me,
Either in hope, or present, I'd exchange
For this or that. That you had power and wealth,
To requite me, by making rich yourself.

Tim. Look thee, 'tis so! — Thou singly honest man,
Here take: — the gods out of my misery
Have sent thee treasure. Go, live rich, and happy:
But thus condition'd; Thou shalt build from men?; Hate all, curse all: show charity to none;
But let the famish'd flesh slide from the bone,
Ere thou relieve the beggar: give to dogs
What thou deny'st to men; let prisons swallow them,
Debts wither them: Be men like blasted woods,
And may diseases lick up their false bloods;
And so farewell, and thrive.

Flav. O, let me stay,
And comfort you, my master.

Tim. If thou hast
Curses, stay not; fly, whilst thou'rt bless'd and free:
Ne'er see thou man, and let me ne'er see thee.

[Exit several.

ACT V.

Scene I. — Before Timon's Cave.

Enter Poet and Painter; Timon behind, unseen.

Pain. As I took note of the place, it cannot be far where he abides.

Poet. What's to be thought of him? Does the rumour hold for true, that he is so full of gold?

Pain. Certain: Alcibiades reports it; and he enriched poor straggling soldiers with great quantity: 'Tis said, he gave unto his steward a mighty sum.

Poet. Then this breaking of his has been but a try for his friends.

* How happily.

Pain. Nothing else: you shall see him a palm in Athens again, and flourish with the highest. Therefore, 'tis not amiss, we tender our loves to him, in this supposed distress of his: it will show honestly in us; and is very likely to load our purposes with what they travel for, if it be a just and true report that goes of his having.

Poet. What have you now to present unto him?

Pain. Nothing at this time but my visitation: only I will promise him an excellent piece.

Poet. I must serve him so too; tell him of an intent that's coming toward him.

Pain. Good as the best. Promising is the very

Scene II.

TIMON OF ATHENS.

By two of their most reverend senate, greet thee: Speak to them, noble Timon.

Enter Timon.

Tim. Thou sun, that comfort'st, burn! — Speak, and be hang'd:
For each true word, a blister! and each false
Be as a caut'ring to the root o'the tongue,
Consuming it with speaking!

1 Sen. Worthy Timon —

Tim. Of none but such as you, and you of Timon.

2 Sen. The senators of Athens greet thee, Timon.

Tim. I thank them; and would send them back
The plague, Could I but catch it for them.

1 Sen. O, forget
What we are sorry for ourselves in thee.
The senators, with one consent of love,
Entreat thee back to Athens; who have thought
On special dignities, which vacant lie
For thy best use and wearing.

2 Sen. They confess,
Toward thee, forgetfulness too general, gross:
Which now the publick body, — which doth seldom
Play the recanter, — feeling in itself
A lack of Timon's aid, hath sense withal
Of its own fall, restraining aid to Timon:
And send forth us, to make their sorrow'd render,
Together with a recompence more fruitful
Than their offence can weigh down by the dram;
Ay, even such heaps and sums of love and wealth,
As shall to thee blot out what wrongs were theirs,
And write in thee the figures of their love,
Ever to read them thine.

Tim. You witch me in it;
Surprise me to the very brink of tears:
Lend me a fool's heart, and a woman's eyes,
And I'll beweep these comforts, worthy senators.

1 Sen. Therefore, so please thee to return with us,
And of our Athens (thine, and ours,) to take
The captainship, thou shalt be met with thanks,
Allow'd with absolute power, and thy good name
Live with authority: — so soon we shall drive back
Of Alcibiades the approaches wild;
Who, like a boar too savage, doth root up
His country's peace.

2 Sen. And shakes his threatening sword
Against the walls of Athens.

1 Sen. Therefore, Timon, —

Tim. Well, sir, I will; therefore, I will, sir;
Thus,

If Alcibiades kill my countrymen,
Let Alcibiades know this of Timon,
That — Timon cares not. But if he sack fair Athens,
And take our goodly aged men by the beards,
Giving our holy virgins to the stain
Of consumellous, beastly, mad-brain'd war;
Then, let him know, — and tell him, Timon speaks it,
In pity of our aged, and our youth,
I cannot choose but tell him, that — I care not,
And let him take't at worst; for their knives care not
While you have threats to answer: for myself,
There's not a whistle in the unruly camp,
But I do prize it at my love, before
The reverend'st threat in Athens. So I leave you
To the protection of the prosperous' gods,
As thieves to keepers.

Flint. Stay not, all's in vain.

4 Confession.
5 Licensed, uncontrolled.
7 Propitious.

Tim. Why, I was writing of my epitaph,
It will be seen to-morrow; My long sickness
Of health, and living, now begins to mend,
And nothing brings me all things. Go, live still;
Be Alcibiades your plague, you his,
And last so long enough!

1 Sen. We speak in vain.
Tim. But yet I love my country; and am not
One that rejoices in the common wreck,
As commonruit doth put it.

1 Sen. That's well spoke.
Tim. Commend me to my loving countrymen,
And enter in our ears like great triumphers
In their applauding gates.

Tim. Command me to them;
And tell them, that to ease them of their griefs,
Theirs of hostile strokes, their aches, losses,
Their pangs of love, with other incident throes
That nature's fragile vessel doth sustain
In life's uncertain voyage, I will some kindness do them:
I'll teach them to prevent wild Alcibiades' wrath.

2 Sen. I like this well, he will return again.
Tim. I have a tree, which grows here in my close,
That mine own use invites me to cut down,
And shortly must I fell it: Tell my friends,
Tell Athens in the sequence of degree,
From high to low throughout, that whoso please
To stop affliction, let him take his haste,
Come hither, ere my tree hath felt the axe,
And hang himself: — I pray you, do my greeting.
Flint. Trouble him no further, thus you still shall find him.

Tim. Come not to me again: but say to Athens,
Timon hath made his everlasting mansion
Upon the beached verge of the salt flood;
Which once a day with his embossed froth
The turbulent surge shall cover; thither come,
And let my grave-stone be your oracle. —

Lips, let sour words go by, and language end:
What is amiss, plague and infection mend!
Graves only be men's works; and death, their gain!
Sun, hide thy beams! Timon hath done his reign.

[Exeunt Timon.

1 Sen. His discourses are unremovably
Coup'd to nature.

2 Sen. Our hope in him is dead: let us return,
And strain what other means is left unto us
In our dear peril.

1 Sen. It requires swift foot. [Exit.

SCENE III. — The Walls of Athens.

Enter two Senators, and a Messenger.

1 Sen. Thou hast painfully discovered; are his files
As full as thy report?

Mess. I have spoke the least:
Besides, his expedition promises
Present approach.

2 Sen. We stand much hazard, if they bring not Timon.

Mess. I met a courier, one mine ancient friend; —
Whom, though in general part we were oppos'd,
Yet our old love made a particular force,
And made us speak like friends: — this man was riding.

From Alcibiades to Timon's cave,
With letters of entreaty, which imported

6 Report, rumour.
9 Dreadful.

t t 2
His fellowship i'the cause against your city,
In part for his sake mov'd.

Enter Senators from Timon.

1 Sen. Here come our brothers.
2 Sen. No talk of Timon, nothing of him except. —
The enemies' drum is heard, and fearful scouring
Doth choke the air with dust: in and prepare;
Ours is the fall, I fear; our foes, the snare.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV. — The Woods. Timon's Cave, and a Tomb-stone seen.

Enter a Soldier, seeking Timon.

Sol. By all description this should be the place.
Who's here? speak, ho! — No answer? — What is this?
Timon is dead, who hath outstretched his span:
Some beast reared this; there does not live a man.
Dead, sure; and this his grave. —
What's on this tomb I cannot read; the character
I'll take with wax.
Our captain hath in every figure skill;
An ag'd interpreter, though young in days:
Before proud Athens he's set down by this,
Whose fall the mark of his ambition is.

[Exit.}

SCENE V. — Before the Walls of Athens.

Trumpets sound. Enter Alcibiades, and Forces.

Alcib. Sound to this coward and lascivious town
Our terrible approach. [A Parley sounded.

Enter Senators on the Walls.

Till now you have gone on, and fill'd the time
With all licentious measure, making your wills
The scope of justice; till now, myself; and such
As slept within the shadow of your power,
Have wander'd with our traver'sd arms, 1 and breath'd
Our sufferance vainly; Now the time is flush 2,
When crouching marrow, in the bearer strong,
Cries, of itself, No more: now breathless wrong,
Shall sit and pant in your great chairs of ease;
And pursy insolence shall break his wind,
With fear and horrid flight.

1 Sen. Noble and young,
When thy first griefs were but a mere conceit,
Ere thou hast power, or we had cause of fear,
We sent to thee; to give thy rages balm,
To wipe out our ingratitude with loves
Above their quantity.

2 Sen. So did we woo
Transformed Timon to our city's love,
By humble message, and by promis'd means;
We were not all unkind, nor all deserve
The common stroke of war.

1 Sen. These walls of ours
Were not erected by their hands, from whom
You have receiv'd thy griefs: nor are they such,
That these great towers, trophies, and schools should fall
For private faults in them.

2 Sen. Nor are they living
Who were the motives that you first went out;
Shame, that they wanted cunning, in excess
Hath broke their hearts. March, noble lord,
Into our city with thy banners spread:
By decimation, and a tithed death,
(If thy revenues hunger for that food,

Which nature loathes,) take thou the destin'd tenth;
And by the hazard of the spotted die,
Let die the spotted.

1 Sen. All have not offended;
For those for which, it is not square 3 to take,
On those that are, revenges; crimes, like lands,
Are not inherited. Then, dear countryman,
Bring in thy ranks, but leave without thy rage:
Spare thy Athenian cradle, and those kin,
Which, in the blister of thy wrath, must fall
With those that have offended: like a shepherd,
Approach the fold, and call the infected forth,
But kill not all together.

2 Sen. What thou wilt,
Thou rather shalt enforce it with thy smile,
Than bawl to'th with thy sword.

1 Sen. Set but thy foot
Against our rampir'd gates, and they shall ope;
So thou wilt send thy gentle heart before,
To say, thou'lt enter friendly.

2 Sen. Throw thy glove;
Or any token of thine honour else,
That thou wilt use the wars as thy redress,
And not as our confusion, all thy powers
Shall make their harbour in our town, till we
Have seal'd thy full desire.

Alcib. Then there's my glove;
Descend, and open your uncharged ports 4;
Those enemies of Timon's, and mine own,
Whom you yourselves shall set out for reproof,
Fall, and no more: and, — to atone 5 your fears
With my more noble meaning, — not a man
Shall pass his quarter, or offend the stream
Of regular justice in your city's bounds,
But shall be remedied, to your publick laws
At heaviest answer.

Both. 'Tis most nobly spoken.

Alcib. Descend, and keep your words.

The Senators descend, and open the Gates.

Enter a Soldier.

Sol. My noble general, Timon is dead;
Entomb'd upon the very hem o' the sea;
And on his gravestone, this insculpture; which
With wax I brought away, whose soft impression
Interprets for my poor ignorance.

Alcib. [Reads.] Here lies a wretched corse, of wretched soul bereft:
Seek not my name: A plague consume you wicked
caitiff's left!
Here lie I, Timon; who, alive, all living men did hate:
Pass by, and curse thy fill; but pass, and stay not here thy guilt.

These well express in thee thy latter spirits:
Though thou abhorrest in us our human griefs,
Scorn'dst our brain's flow, and those our droplets which
From niggard nature fall, yet rich conceit
Taught thee to make vast Neptune weep for aye
On thy low grave, on faults forgiven.
Dead Is noble Timon; of whose memory
Hereafter more. — Bring me into your city,
And I will use the olive with my sword:
Make war breed peace; make peace stint 6 war;
make each
Prescribe to other, as each other's leech.

Let our drums strike. [Exeunt.

3 Not regular, not equitable.
4 Unattacked gates.
5 Reconcile.
6 Stop.
7 Physician.

SCENE, partly in Rome, and partly in the Territories of the Volscians and Antiates.
SCENE I. — Rome. A Street.

Enter a Company of mutinous Citizens, with Staves, Clubs, and other Weapons.

1 Cit. Before we proceed any further, hear me speak.

Cit. Speak, speak. [Several speaking at once.

1 Cit. You are all resolved rather to die, than to

Cit. Resolved, resolved.

1 Cit. First, you know, Caius Marcius is chief eady to the people.

Cit. We know't, we know't.

1 Cit. Let us kill him, and we'll have corn at our

Cit. No more talking on't; let it be done: away,

2 Cit. One word, good citizens.

1 Cit. We are accounted poor citizens; the pat-tricians, good: What authority surfeits on, would relieve us; if they would yield us but the superfluity, while it were wholesome, we might guess, they relieved us humanely! but they think, we are too dear: the leanness that afflicts us, the object of our misery, is an inventory to particularize their abundance; our sufferance is a gain to them. —

Let us revenge this with our pikes, ere we become rakes: for the gods know, I speak this in hunger for bread, not in thirst for revenge.

2 Cit. Would you proceed especially against Caius

Marcius?

Cit. Against him first; he's a very dog to the commonalty.

1 Rich.

2 Thin as rakes.

2 Cit. Consider you what services he has done for his country?

1 Cit. Very well; and could be content to give him good report for't, but that he pays himself with being proud.

2 Cit. Nay, but speak not maliciously.

1 Cit. I say unto you, what he hath done famously, he did it to that end: though soft conscience'd men can be content to say it was for his country, he did it to please his mother, and to be partly proud;

which he is, even to the altitude of his virtue.

2 Cit. What he cannot help in his nature, you account a vice in him: You must in no way say, he is covetous.

1 Cit. If I must not, I need not be barren of accusations; he hath faults, with surplus, to tire in repetition. [Shouts within.] What shouts are these?

The other side o' the city is risen: Why stay we prating here? to the Capitol.

Cit. Come, come.

1 Cit. Soft; who comes here?

Enter Menenius Agrippa.

2 Cit. Worthy Menenius Agrippa; one that hath always loved the people.

1 Cit. He's one honest enough; 'Would, all the rest were so!

Men. What work's, my countrymen, in hand?

Where go you

With hats and clubs? The matter speak, I pray you.

1 Cit. Our business is not unknown to the senate;

they have had inklings, this fortnight, what we intend to do, which now we'll show 'em in deeds. They say, poor suitors have strong breaths; they shall know, we have strong arms too.

CORIOLANUS.

Act 1.

1. Cit. The former agents, if they did complain,
   What could the belly answer?

   Men. I will tell you;
   If you'll bestow a small (of what you have little;)
   Patience, a while, you'll hear the belly's answer.

   1. Cit. You are long about it.

   Men. Note me this, my good friend;
   Your most grave belly, was deliberate,
   Not rash like his accusers, and thus answer'd:
   True is it, my incorporate friends, quoth he,
   That I receive the general food at first,
   Which you do live upon: and fit it is;
   Because I am the storehouse, and the shop
   Of the whole body: But if you do remember,
   I send it through the rivers of your blood,
   Even to the court, the heart, — to the seat o' the brain;
   And, through the cranks 6 and offices of man,
   The strongest nerves, and small inferior veins,
   From me receive that natural competency
   Whereby they live: and though that all at once,
   You, my good friends, (this is the belly,) mark me —
   1. Cit. Ay, sir, well, well.

   Men. Though all at once cannot See what I do deliver out to each;
   Yet I can make my audit up, that all
   From me do back receive the flower of all,
   And leave me but the bran.

   Pot. What say you to't?

   1. Cit. It was an answer: How apply you this?

   Men. The senators of Rome are this good belly,
   And you the mutinous members: For examine
   Their counsels, and their cares; digest things rightly,
   Touching the weal o' the common; you shall find,
   No publick benefit which you receive,
   But it proceeds, or comes, from them to you,
   And no way from yourselves: What do you think?

   1. Cit. You the great toe of this assembly? —

   Men. For that being one o' the lowest, basest, poorest,
   Of this most wise rebellion, thou go' st foremost:
   Thou rascal, that art worst in blood to run,
   Lead'st first to win some vantage.

   But make you ready your stiff bats and clubs;
   Rome and her rats are at the point of battle,
   The one side must have bale. Hail, noble Marcius!

   Enter CAIUS MARCIUS.

   Mar. Thanks. — What's the matter, you dissentious rogues?

   1. Cit. We have ever your good word.

   Mar. He that will give good words to thee, will flatter

   Beneath abhorring. — What would you have, you curs,
   That like nor peace, nor war? the one affrights you,
   The other makes you proud. He that trusts you,
   Where he should find you lions, finds you hares;
   Where foxes, geese: You are no surer, no,
   Than is the coal of fire upon the ice,
   Or hailstone in the sun. Your virtue is,
   To make him worthy, whose offence subdues him,
   And curse that justice did it. Who deserves great-

   Deserves your hate: and your affections are
   A sick man's appetite, who desires most that
   Which would increase his evil. He that depends Upon your favours, swims with fins of lead,
   And hews down oaks with rushes. Hang ye!
   Trust ye!

   6. Windings.

   7. Rane.

---

Men. Why, masters, my good friends, mine honest neighbours,
Will you undo yourselves?
1. Cit. We cannot, sir, we are undone already.

   Men. Tell you, friends, most charitable care,
   Have the patricians of you. For your wants,
   Your suffering in this dearth, you may as well
   Strike at the heaven with your staves, as lift them
   Against the Roman state; whose course will on
   The way it takes, cracking ten thousand curbs
   Of more strong link asunder, than can ever
   Appear in your impediment: For the dearth,
   The gods, not the patricians, make it; and
   Your knees to them, not arms, must help. Alack,
   You are transported by calamity
   Thither where more attends you; and you slander
   The helms o'the state, who care for you like fathers,
   When you curse them as enemies.

   1. Cit. Care for us! — True, indeed! — They ne'er cared for us yet. Suffer us to famish, and their storehouses crammed with grain; make edicts for usury, to support usurers: repeal daily any wholesome act established against the rich; and provide more piercing statutes daily, to chain up and restrain the poor. If the wars eat us not up, they will; and there's all the love they bear us.

   Men. Either you must Confess yourselves wondrous malicious,
   Or be accus'd of folly. I shall tell you
   A pretty tale; it may be, you have heard it;
   But, since it serves my purpose, I will venture
   To scale't a little more.

   1. Cit. Well, I'll hear it, sir; yet you must not think to fob off our disgrace with a tale: but, an't please you, deliver.

   Men. There was a time, when all the body's members
   Rebel'd against the belly; thus accus'd it: —
   That only like a gulf it did remain
   I' the midst o' the body, idle and inactive,
   Still cupboarding the viand, never bearing
   Like labour with the rest; where 4 the other instruments
   Did see, and hear, devise, instruct, walk, feel,
   And, mutually participate, did minister
   Unto the appetite and affection common
   Of the whole body. The belly answered, —

   1. Cit. Well, sir, what answer made the belly?

   Men. Sir, I shall tell you. — With a kind of smile,
   Which ne'er came from the lungs, but even thus,
   (For, look you, I may make the belly smile,
   As well as speak,) it tauntingly replied
   To the discontented members, the mutinous parts
   That envied his receipt; even so most fitly 5
   As you malign our senators, for that
   They are not such as you.

   1. Cit. Your belly's answer: What
   The kingly-crowned head, the vigilant eye,
   The counsellor heart, the arm our soldier,
   Our steed the leg, the tongue our trumpeter,
   With other muniments and petty helps
   In this our fabric, if that they —

   Men. What then? —
   'Fore me, this fellow speaks? — What then? what then?

   1. Cit. Should by the cormorant belly be re-
   strain'd,
   Who is the sink o' the body, —

   Men. Well, what then? 6

---

Spread it. 4 Whereas. 5 Exactly.
With every minute you do change a mind;
And call him noble, that was now your hate,
Him vile, that was your garland. What's the matter,
That in these several places of the city
You cry against the noble senate, who,
Under the gods, keep you in awe, which else
Would feed on one another? — What's their seeking?

Men. For corn at their own rates; whereof they say,
The city is well stor'd.

Mar. Hang 'em! They say?
They'll sit by the fire, and presume to know
What's done i'the Capitol: who's like to rise,
Who thrives, and who declines: side factions, and give out Conjunctural marriages; making parties strong,
And feebling such as stand not in their liking,
Below their cobbled shoes. They say there's grain enough?
Would the nobility lay aside their ruth,
And let me use my sword, I'd make a quarry
With thousands of these quarter'd slaves, as high
As I could pick 1 my lance.

Men. Nay, these are almost thoroughly per-sued;
For though abundantly they lack discretion,
Yet are they passing cowardly. But I beseech you,
What says the other troop?

Mar. They are dissolved: Hang 'em!
They said they were an hungry; sigh'd forth proverbs;
That, hunger broke stone walls; that, dogs must eat;
That, meat was made for mouths; that, the gods sent not
Corn for the rich men only: — With these shreds
They vented their complaings; which being an-swer'd,
And a petition granted them, a strange one,
(To break the heart of generosity,
And make bold power look pale,) they threw their caps
As they would hang them on the horns o'the moon,
Shouting their emulation.

Men. What is granted them?

Mar. Five tribunes to defend their vulgar wisdoms,
Of their own choice: One's Junius Brutus,
Sicinius Velutus, and I know not — 'Sdeath!
The rabble should have first unroof'd the city,
Ere so prevail'd with me: it will in time
Win upon power, and throw forth greater themes
For insurrection's arguing.

Men. This is strange.

Mar. Go, get you home, you fragments!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Where's Caius Marcius?

Mar. Here, what's the matter?

Mess. The news is, sir, the Volscs are in arms.

Mar. I am glad on't, then we shall have means to vent
Our musty superfluity: — See, our best elders.

Enter COMINIUS, TITUS LARTIUS, and other Senators; JUNIUS BRUTUS, and SICINIUS VELUTUS.

1 Sen. Marcius, 'tis true, that you have lately told us;
The Volscs are in arms.

2 Pitch.

3 Heap of dead.

4 Faction.

Mar. They have a leader,
Tullus Aufidius, that will put you to't.
I sin in envying his nobility:
And were I any thing but what I am,
I would wish me only he,

Com. You have fought together.

Mar. Were half to half the world by the ears, and he
Upon my party, I'd revolt to make
Only my wars with him: he is a lion
That I am proud to hunt.

1 Sen. Then, worthy Marcius,
Attend upon Cominius to these wars.

Com. It is your former promise.

Mar. Sir, it is;
And I am constant. — Titus Lartius, thou
Shalt see me once more strike at Tullus' face:
What, art thou stiff? stand'st out?

Tit. No, Caius Marcius,
I'll lean upon one crutch, and fight with the other,
Ere stay behind this business.

Men. O, true bred!

1 Sen. Your company to the Capitol: where, I know,
Our greatest friends attend us.

Tit. Lead you on:
Follow, Cominius; we must follow you;
Right worthy your priority

Com. Noble Lartius!

1 Sen. Hence! To your homes, be gone

[To the Citizens.]

Mar. Nay, let them follow:
The Volscs have much corn; take these rats thither,
To gnaw their garners: — Worshipful mutineers,
Your valour puts well forth: pray, follow.

Sic. Was ever man so proud as is this Marcius?

Bru. He has no equal.

Sic. When we were chosen tribunes for the people,—

Bru. Mark'd you his lip, and eyes?

Sic. Those, Nay, but his taunts.

Bru. Being mov'd, he will not spare to gird the gods.

Sic. Bemoak the modest moon.

Bru. The present wars devour him: he is grown
Too proud to be so valiant.

Sic. Such a nature,
Tickled with good success, disdains the shadow
Which he treads on at noon: But I do wonder,
His insolence can brook to be commanded
Under Cominius.

Bru. Fame, at the which he aims,—
In whom already he is well gra'd,— cannot Better be held, nor more attain'd than by
A place below the first: for what miscarries
Shall be the general's fault, though he perform
To the utmost of a man; and giddy censure
Will then cry out of Marcius, O, if he

Had borne the business!

Sic. Besides, if things go well,
Opinion, that so sticks on Marcius, shall
Of his demerits rob Cominius.

Bru. Come: Half all Cominius' honours are to Marcius, Though Marcius earn'd them not; and all his faults

3 Granaries.

4 Snee.

5 Demerits and merits had anciently the same meaning.

T t 4
To Marcus shall be honours, though, indeed, In aught he merit not.

Sic. Let's hence, and hear

How the dispatch is made; and in what fashion, More than in singularity, he goes

Upon his present action.

Brut. Let's along. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. — Corioli. The Senate-House.

Enter Tullus Aufidius, and certain Senators.

1 Sen. So, your opinion is, Aufidius, That they of Rome are enter'd in our counsels, And know how we proceed.

Auf. Is it not yours? What ever hath been thought on in this state, That could be brought to bodily act, ere Rome Had circumvention? 'Tis not four days gone, Since I heard thence; these are the words: I think, I have the letter here; yes, here it is: [Reads.

They have press'd a power, but it is not known Whether for east, or west: The dearth is great; The people mutinous: and it is rumour'd, Cominius, Marcus, your old enemy, (Who is of Rome worse hated than of you,) And Titus Lartius, a most valiant Roman, These three lead on this preparation. Whither 'tis bent; most likely, 'tis for you: Consider of it.

1 Sen. Our army's in the field: We never yet made doubt but Rome was ready To answer us.

Auf. Nor did you think it folly, To keep your great pretences vell'd, till when They needs must show themselves; which in the hatching, It seem'd, appear'd to Rome. By the discovery, We shall be shorten'd in our aim; which was, To take in 6 many towns, ere, almost, Rome Should know we were afoot.

2 Sen. Noble Aufidius, Take your commission; hee you to your bands: Let us alone to guard Corioli: If they set down before us, for the remove Bring up your army; but, I think, you'll find They have not prepar'd for us.

Auf. O, doubt not that; I speak from certainties. Nay, more, Some parcels of their powers are forth already, And only hitherward. I leave your honours. If we and Caius Marcus chance to meet, 'Tis sworn between us, we shall never strike Till one can do no more.

All. The gods assist you!

Auf. And keep your honours safe! [Exeunt.

Vol. I pray you, daughter, sing; or express yourself in a more comfortable sort: If my son were my husband, I should freelier rejoice in that absence wherein he won honour, than in the embraces where he would show most love. When yet he was but tender-bodied, and was my only son; when youth with comeliness plucked all gaze his way; when for a day of kings' entreaties, a mother should not sell him an hour from her beholding; I,— considering how honour would become such a person; that it was no better than picture-like to hang by the wall, if renown made it not stir,— was pleased to let him seek danger where he was like to find fame. To a cruel war I sent him; from whence he returned, his brows bound with oak. I tell thee, daughter, — I sprang not more in joy at first hearing he was a man-child, than now, in first seeing he had proved himself a man.

Vir. But had he died in the business, madam? how then?

Vol. Then his good report should have been my son; if Titus would have found issue. Hear me profess sincerely: Had I a dozen sons, — each in my love alike, and none less dear than thine and my good Marcus, — I had rather had eleven die nobly for their country, than one voluptuously surfet out of action.

Enter a Gentlewoman.

Gent. Madam, the lady Valeria is come to visit you.

Vir. 'Beseech you, give me leave to retire myself, Vol. Indeed, you shall not. Methinks, I hear hither your husband's drum; See him pluck Aufidius down by the hair; As children from a bear, the Voiles shunning him: Methinks, I see him stamp thus, and call thus, — Come on, you cowards, you were born in fear, Though you were born in Rome: His bloody brow. With his mail'd hand then wiping, forth he goes; Like to a harvest-man, that's task'd to mow Or all, or lose his hire.

Vir. His bloody brow! O, Jupiter, no blood! Vol. Away, you fool! it more becomes a man, Than gift? his trophy: The breasts of Hecuba, When she did suckle Hector, look'd not lovelier Than Hector's forehead, when it spit forth blood At Grecian swords' contending. — Tell Valeria, We are fit to bid her welcome. [Exit Gent.

Vir. Heavens bless my lord from fell Aufidius! Vol. He'll beat Aufidius' head below his knee, And tread upon his neck.

Re-enter Gentlewoman, with Valeria and her Usher.

Vol. My ladies both, good day to you.

Sweet madam,—

Vir. I am glad to see your ladyship.

Vol. How do you do both? you are manifest housekeepers. What, are you sewing here? A fine spot, in good faith. — How does your little son?

Vir. I thank your ladyship: well, good madam. Vol. He had rather see the swords, and hear a drum, than look upon his school-master.

Vol. O' my word, the father's son: I'll swear, 'tis a very pretty boy. I looked upon him o' Wednesday half an hour together: he would become such a countenance. I saw him run after a gilded butterfly; and when he caught it, he let it go again; and after it again; and over and over he comes, and up again; caught it again; or whether his fall enraged him, or how 'twas, he did so set his teeth, and tear it; O, I warrant, how he mummocked it! Vol. One of his father's moods.

7 Gilding. 8 Torc.
Scene IV. — Before Corioli.

Enter, with Drum and Colours, MARCIUS, TITUS LARTIUS, Officers and Soldiers. To them a Messenger.

Mar. Yonder comes news: — A wager, they have met.

Lart. My horse to yours, no.

Mar. 'Tis done.

Lart. Agreed.

Mar. Say, has our general met the enemy?

Mess. They lie in view; but have not spoke as yet.

Lart. So the good horse is mine.

Mar. I'll buy him of you.

Lart. No, I'll not sell, nor give him: lend you him, I will,

For half a hundred years. — Summon the town.

Mar. How far off lie these armies?

Mess. Within this mile and half.

Mar. Then shall we hear their parley, and they ours.

Now, Mars, I pr'ythee make us quick in work; That we with smoking swords may march from hence,

To help our kindred friends: — Come, blow thy blast.

They sound a Parley. Enter, on the Walls, some Senators, and others.

Tullus Aufidius, is he within your walls?

I Sen. No, nor a man that fears you less than he, That's less than a little. Hark, our drums [Alarum o'er off.

Are bringing forth our youth: We'll break our walls,

Rather than they shall pound us up: our gates,

Which yet seem shut, we have but pinn'd with rushes:

They'll open of themselves. Hark, you, far off;

[Other Alarum.

There is Aufidius; list what work he makes

Amongst your cloven army.

Mar. O, they are at it!

Lart. Their noise be our instruction. — Ladders, ho!

The Voices enter, and pass over the Stage.

Mar. They fear us not, but issue forth their city.

Now put your shields before your hearts, and fight

With hearts more proof than shields. — Advance, brave Titus:

They do disdain us much beyond our thoughts,

Which makes me sweat with wrath. — Come on, my fellows;

He that retires, I'll take him for a Voice,

And he shall feel mine edge.

Alarum, and Exeunt Romans and Volces, fighting.

The Romans are beaten back to their Trenches. Re-enter MARCIUS.

Mar. All the contagion of the south light on you, You shames of Rome! that you may be abhor'd

Further than seen, you coward souls of geese,

That bear the shapes of men, how have you run

From slaves that apes would beat? Pluto and hell! All hurt behind; backs red, and faces pale

With flight and ag'd fear! Mend, and charge home,

Or, by the fires of heaven, I'll leave the foe,

And make my wars on you: look to't: Come on,

If you'll stand fast, we'll beat them to their wives,

As they us to our trenches followed.

Another Alarum. The Volces and Romans re-enter, and the Fight is renewed. The Volces retire into Corioli, and MARCIUS follows them to the Gates.

So, now the gates are ope: — Now prove good seconds:

'Tis for the followers fortune widens them,

Not for the fliers: mark me, and do the like.

[He enters the Gates, and is shut in.

1 Sol. Fool-hardiness; not I.

2 Sol. Nor I.

3 Sol. See, they

Have shut him in. [Alarum continues. All. To the pot, I warrant him.

Enter TITUS LARTIUS.

Lart. What is become of Marcus?

All. Slain, sir, doubtless.

1 Sol. Following the fliers at the very heels,
With them he enters: who, upon the sudden, Clapp'd to their gates; he is himself alone, To answer all the city.

Lart. O noble fellow! Who, sensibly!, outdare's his senseless sword, And, when it bows, stands up! Thou art left, Marcus: A carbuncle entire, as big as thou art, Were not so rich a jewel. Thou wast a soldier Even to Cato's wish, not fierce and terrible Only in strokes; but, with thy grim looks, and The thunder-like percussion of thy sounds, Thou mad'st thine enemies shake, as if the world Were feverous and did tremble.

Re-enter Marcus, bleeding, assaulted by the Enemy. 1 Sol. Look, sir. 'Tis Marcus; Let's fetch him off, or make remain alike. [They fight, and all enter the City.

SCENE V. — Within the Town. A Street.

Enter certain Romans, with Spoils.

1 Rom. This will I carry to Rome. 2 Rom. And I this. 3 Rom. A murrain on't! I took this for silver. [A Marian continues still afar off.

Enter Marcus, and Titus Lartius, with a Trumpet.

Mar. See here these movers, that do prize their hours At a crack'd drachm! Cushions, leaden spoons, Irons of a doit, doublets that hangmen would Buy with those that wore them, these base slaves, Ere yet the fight be done, pack up: — Down with them. — And hark, what noise the general makes! — To him: — There is the man of my soul's hate, Aufidius, Piercing our Romans: Then, valiant Titus, take Convenient numbers to make good the city; Whilst I, with those that have the spirit, will haste To help Cominius.

Lart. Worthy sir, thou bleed'st; Thy exercise hath been too violent for A second course of fight.

Mar. Sir, praise me not: My work hath yet not warm'd me: Fare you well. The blood I drop is rather physical Than dangerous to me: To Aufidius thus I will appear, and fight.

Lart. Now the fair goddess, Fortune, Fall deep in love with thee; and her great charms Misguide thy opposers' swords! Bold gentleman, Prosperity be thy page! Mar. Thy friend no less Than those she placeth highest! So farewell. Lart. Thou worthiest Marcus! [Exit Marcus.

Go, sound thy trumpet in the market place; Call thither all the officers of the town, Where they shall know our mind: Away. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI. — Near the Camp of Cominius.

Enter Cominius and Forces, retreating.

Com. Breathe you, my friends; well fought, we are come off

Like Romans, neither foolish in our stands, Nor cowardly in retire: believe me, sirs, We shall be charg'd again. While we have struck, By interims, and conveying gusts, we have heard The charges of our friends: — The Roman gods, Lead their successes as we wish our own; That both our powers, with smiling fronts encountering,

Enter a Messenger.

May you give thankful sacrifice! — Thy news? Mess. The citizens of Corioli have issued, And given to Lartius and to Marcus battle: I saw our party to their trenches driven, And then I came away.

Com. Though thou speakest truth, Methinks, thou speak'st not well. How long is't since?

Mess. Above an hour, my lord.

Com. 'Tis not a mile; briefly we heard their drums:

How couldst thou in a mile confound 3 an hour, And bring thy news so late?

Mess. Spies of the Volces Held me in chase, that I was forc'd to wheel Three or four miles about; else had I, sir, Half an hour since brought my report.

Enter Marcus.

Who's yonder, That does appear as he were flay'd? O gods! He has the stamp of Marcus; and I have Before-time seen him thus.

Mar. Come I too late?

Com. The shepherd knows not thunder from a tabour.

More than I know the sound of Marcus' tongue From every meaner man's.

Mar. Come I too late?

Com. Ay, if you come not in the blood of others, But mantled in your own.

Mar. O! let me clip you; In arms as sound, as when I wou'd; in heart As merry, as on our nuptial day.

Com. Flower of warriors, How is't with Titus Lartius?

Mar. As with a man busied about decrees; Condemning some to death, and some to exile; Ransoming him, or pitying, threatening the other; Holding Corioli in the name of Rome, Even like a fawning greyhound in the leash, To let him slip at will.

Com. Where is that slave, Which told me they had beat you to your trenches? Where is he? Call him hither.

Mar. Let him alone, He did inform the truth: But for our gentlemen, The common file, (A plague! — Tribunes for them!) The mouse ne'er shunn'd the cat, as they did budge From rascals worse than they.

Com. But how prevail'd you? Mar. Will the time serve to tell? I do not think — Where is the enemy? Are you lords o'the field? If not, why cease you till you are so?

Com. Marcus, We have at disadvantage fought, and did Retire to win our purpose.

Mar. How lies their battle? Know you on which side They have plac'd their men of trust? 6
SCENE VIII.

CORIOLANUS.

Com. As I guess, Marcius,
Their bands in the vaward 4 are the Antiates 5;
Of their best trust: o'er them Aufidius,
Their very heart of hope.

Mar. I do beseech you,
By all the battles wherein we have fought,
By the blood we have shed together, by the vows
We have made to endure friends, that you directly
Set me against Aufidius, and his Antiates:
And that you not delay the present; but,
Filling the air with swords advance, and darts,
We prove this very hour.

Com. Though I could wish
You were conducted to a gentle bath,
And balms applied to you, yet dare I never Deny your asking; take your choice of those
The best can aid your action.

Mar. Those are they
That most are willing: — If any such be here,
(As it were sin to doubt,) that love this painting
Wherein you see me smear'd: if any fear
Lesser his person than an ill report;
If any think, brave death outweighs bad life,
And that his country's dearer than himself;
Let him, alone, or so many, so minded,
Wave thus, [Waving his Hand.] to express his dis-

And follow Marcius.

[They all shout, and wave their Swords: take him up in their Arms, and cast up their Caps.
O me, alone! Make you a sword of me?
If these shows be not outward, which of you
But is four Voices? None of you but is Able to bear against the great Aufidius
A shield as hard as his. A certain number,
Though thanks to all, must I select: the rest,
Shall bear the business in some other fight,
As cause will be obey'd. Please you to march;
And four shall quickly draw out my command,
Which men are best inclin'd.

Com. March on, my fellows:
Make good this ostentation, and you shall Divide in all with us. [Exeunt.}

SCENE VII. — The Gates of Corioli.

Titus Lartius, having set a Guard upon Corioli, going with a Drum and Trumpet towards Comi-lus and Caius Marcius, enters with a Lieutenant, a party of Soldiers, and a Scout.

Lart. So, let the ports be guarded: keep your duties,
As I have set them down. If I do send, despatch
Those centuries 6 to our aid; the rest will serve
For a short holding: if we lose the field,
We cannot keep the town.

Lieut. Fear not our care, sir.

Lart. Hence, and shut your gates upon us.—
Our guider, come; to the Roman camp conduct us. [Exeunt.

SCENE VIII. — A Field of Battle between the Roman and the Volscian Camps.

Alarum. Enter Marcius and Aufidius.

Mar. I'll fight with none but thee; for I do hate
thee
Worse than a promise-breaker.

Auf. We hate alike;
Not Africk owns a serpent, I abhor
More than thy fame and envy: Fix thy foot.

Mar. Let the first wager die the other's slave,
And the gods doom him after!

Auf. If I fly, Marcius,
Halloo me like a hare.

Mar. Within these three hours, Tullus,
Alone I fought in your Coriolis walls,
And made what work I pleas'd; 'Tis not my blood
Wherein thou seest me mask'd: for thy revenge,
Wrench up thy power to the highest.

Auf. Wert thou the Hector,
That was the whip of thy bragg'd progeny,
Thou shouldest not scape me here. —

[They fight, and certain Voices come to the aid of Aufidius.

Officious, and not valiant — you have sham'd me
In your condemned seconds. 1

[Exeunt fighting, driven in by Marcius.}

SCENE IX. — The Roman Camp.

Alarum. A Retreat is sounded. Flourish. Enter, at one side, Cominius, and Romans; at the other side, Marcius, with his Arm in a Scarf, and other Romans.

Com. If I should tell thee o'er this thy day's work,
Thou'lt not believe thy deeds: but I'll report it,
Where senators shall mingle tears with smiles;
Where great patricians shall attend, and shrug,
I' the end, admire; where ladies shall be frightened,
And, gladly quak'd, 2 hear more; where the dull
tribunes,
That, with the fusty plebeians, hate thine honours,
Shall say against their hearts — We thank the gods,
Our Rome hath such a soldier! —
Yet can'st thou to a morsel of this feast,
Having fully dined before.

Enter Titus Lartius, with his Power, from the Pursuit.

Lart. O general,
Here is the steed, we the caparison :
Hast thou beheld ——

Mar. Pray now, no more: my mother,
Who has a charter to extol her blood,
When she does praise me, grieves me. I have done,
As you have done; that's what I can; induc'd
As you have been; that's for my country;
He, that has but effect'd his good will,
Hath overtaken mine act.

Com. You shall not be
The grave of your deserving; Rome must know
The value of her own: 'twere a concealment
Worse than a theft, no less than a traducement,
To hide your doings; and to silence that,
Which to the spire and top of praises vouch'd,
Would seem but modest. Therefore, I beseech you,
(In sign of what you are, not to reward
What you have done,) before our army hear me.

Mar. I have some wounds upon me, and they smart
To hear themselves remember'd.

Com. Should they not,
Well might they fester 'gainst ingratitude,
And tent themselves with death. Of all the horses
(Whereof we have ta'en good, and good store,) of all

1 In affording such ill-timed help.
2 Thrown into grateful trepidation.
The treasure, in this field achiev’d, and city,
We render you the tenth; to be ta’en forth,
Before the common distribution, at
Your only choice.

Mar. I thank you, general;
But cannot make my heart consent to take
A bribe to pay my sword: I do refuse it;
And stand upon my common part with those
That have beheld the doing.

[A long Flourish. They all cry, Marcius! Marcius! cast up their Caps and Lances: COMMINUS and LARTIUStand bare.

Mar. May these same instruments, which you profano, Never sound more! When drums and trumpet shall
I the field prove flatterers, let courts and cities be Made all of false-fac’d soothing: When steel grows
Soft as the parasite’s silk, let him be made
An overture for the wars! No more, I say;
For that I have not wash’d my nose that bled,
Or foil’d some debile wretch,—which, without note,
Here’s many else have done,—you shout me forth
In acclamations hyperbolical;
As if I loved my little should be dictated
In praises sauc’d with lies.

Com. Too modest are you;
More cruel to your good report than grateful.
To us that give you truly: by your patience,
If ’gainst yourself you be incens’d, we’ll put you (Like one that means his proper harm,) in manacles,
Then reason safely with you. — Therefore, be it known,
As to us, to all the world, that Caius Marcius
Wears this war’s garland: in token of the which
My noble steed, known to the camp, I give him,
With all his trim belonging; and, from this time,
For what he did before Corioli, call him,
With all the applause and clamour of the host,
CAIUS MARCIUS CORIOLANUS.—
Bear the addition nobly ever!

[Flourish. Trumpets sound, and Drums.

All. Caius Marcius Corioli! Com.
I will go wash;
And when my face is fair, your shall perceive
Whether I blush, or no: Howbeit, I thank you.
I mean to stride your steed; and, at all times,
To underest your good addition,
To the fairness of my power.

Com. So, to our tent:
Where, ere we do repose us, we will write
To Rome of our success.—You, Titus Lartius,
Must to Corioli back: send us to Rome.
The best *, with whom we may articulate, *
For their own good, and ours.

Lart. I shall, my lord.
Com. The gods begin to mock me. I that now
Refus’d most princely gifts, am bound to beg
Of my lord general.

Com. Take it: ’tis yours.—What is’t?
Com. Sometime lay, here in Corioli,
At a poor man’s house; he us’d me kindly;
He cried to me; I saw him prisoner;
But then Auladius was within my view,
And wrath o’erwhelm’d my pity: I request you
To give my poor host freedom.

Com. O, well begg’d
Were he the butcher of my son, he should Be free, as is the wind. Deliver him, Titus.
Lart. Marcius, his name?
Com. By Jupiter, forgot:—
I am weary; yes, my memory is tir’d.—
Have we no wine here?

Com. Go we to our tent:
The blood upon your visage dries: ’tis time
It should be look’d to: come. [Exeunt.

SCENE X. — The Camp of the Volscs.

A Flourish. Cornets. Enter TULLUS AULIDIUS, bloody, with two or three Soldiers.

Ausz. The town is ta’en!
1 Sol. ’Twill be deliver’d back on good condition.

Ausz. Condition! —
I would, I were a Roman; for I cannot,
Being a Volsc, be that I am. — Condition!
What good condition can a treaty find
I’th part that is at mercy? Five times, Marcius,
I have fought with thee; so often hast thou beat me;
And wouldst do so, I think, should we encounter
As often as we eat. — By the elements,
If e’er again I meet him beard to beard,
He is mine, or I am his: Mine emulation
Hath not that honour in’t, it had; for where
I thought to crush him in an equal force,
(True sword to sword,) I’ll potch at him someway;
Or wrath, or craft, may get him.

1 Sol. He’s the devil.
Ausz. Bolder, though not so subtle: My valour’s poison’d,
With only suffering stain by him; for him
Shall fly out of itself: nor sleep, nor sanctuary,
Being naked, sick: nor fane, nor Capitol,
The prayers of priests, nor times of sacrifice,
Embarquements all of fury, shall lift up
Their rotten privilege and custom ‘gainst
My hate to Marcius: where I find him, were it
At home, upon my brother’s guard, even there
Against the hospitable canon, would I Wash my fierce hand in his heart. Go you to the City;
Learn, how ’tis held; and what they are, that must Be hostages for Rome.

1 Sol. Will not you go?
Ausz. I am attended at the cypress grove:
I pray you,
(’Tis south the city mills,) bring me word thither
How the world goes; that to the pace of it
I may spur on my journey.

1 Sol. I shall, sir. [Exeunt.

8 Whereas. 9 Poke, push. 1 Waited for.
Act II. Scene I.

Coriolanus.

Scene I. — Rome. A publick Place.

Enter Menenius, Sicinius, and Brutus.

Men. The augurer tells me, we shall have news to-night.

Brut. Good, or bad?

Men. Not according to the prayer of the people, for they love not Marcus.

Sic. Nature teaches beasts to know their friends.

Men. Pray you, who does the wolf love?

Sic. The lamb.

Men. Ay, to devour him; as the hungry plebeians would the noble Marcus.

Brut. He's a lamb indeed, that baaes like a bear.

Men. He's a bear indeed, that lives like a lamb.

You two are old men; tell me one thing that I shall ask you.

Both Trib. Well, sir.

Men. In what enormity is Marcus poor, that you two have not in abundance?

Brut. He's poor in no one fault, but stored with all.

Sic. Especially in pride.

Brut. And topping all others in boasting.

Men. This is strange now; Do you two know how you are censured here in the city, I mean of us o'the right hand file? Do you?

Both Trib. Why, how are we censured?

Men. Because you talk of pride now. — Will you not be angry?

Both Trib. Well, well, sir, well.

Men. Why 'tis no great matter; for a very little thief of occasion will rob you of a great deal of patience: give your disposition the reins, and be angry at your pleasures; at the least, if you take it as a pleasure to you, in being so. You blame Marcus for being proud?

Brut. We do it not alone, sir.

Men. I know, you can do very little alone; for your helps are many; or else your actions would grow wondrous single: your abilities are too infant-like, for doing much alone. You talk of pride: O, that you could turn your eyes towards the napes of your necks, and make but an interior survey of your good selves! O, that you could!

Brut. What then, sir?

Men. Why, then you should discover a brace of unmeriting, proud, violent, testy magistrates, (alias fools,) as any in Rome.

Sic. Menenius, you are known well enough.

Men. I am known to be a humorous patrician, and one that loves a cup of hot wine with not a drop of allying Tyber in't; said to be something imperfect, in favouring the first complaint: hasty, and tender-like, upon too trivial motion: what I think, I utter; and spend my malice in my breath: Meeting two such weals-men's as you are (I cannot call you Lycurguses), if the drink you gave me, touch my palate adversely, I make a crooked face at it. I cannot say, your worships have delivered the matter well, when I find the ass in compound with the major part of your syllables: and though I must be content to bear with those that say you are reversend grave men; yet they lie deadly, that tell, you have good faces. If you see this in the map of my microcosm, follows it, that I am known well enough too? What harm can your bisson 3 respectuities glean out of this character, if I be known well enough too?

Brut. Come, sir, come; we know you well enough.

Men. You know neither me, yourselves, nor any thing. You are ambitious for poor knives' caps and legs; you wear out a good wholesome forenoon, in hearing a cause between an orange-wife and a fosset-seller; and then rejourn the controversy of three-pence to a second day of audience.

— When you are hearing a matter between party and party, you dismiss the controversy bleeding, the more entangled by your hearing; all the peace you make in their cause, is, calling both the parties knives: You are a pair of strange ones.

Brut. Come, come, you are well understood to be a perfecter giber for the table, than a necessary bencher in the Capitol.

Men. Our very priests must become mockers, if they shall encounter such ridiculous subjects as you are. When you speak best unto the purpose, it is not worth the wagging of your beards; and your beards deserve not so honourable a grave, as to stuff a botcher's cushion, or to be entombed in an ass's pack-saddle. Yet you must be saying, Marcus is proud; who, in a cheap estimation, is worth all your predecessors, since Deucalion; though, per-adventure, some of the best of them were hereditary hangmen. Good e'en to your worships: more of your conversation would infect my brain, being the herdsmen of the beastly plebeians: I will be bold to take my leave of you.

[Brut. and Sic. retire to the back of the Scene.}

Enter Volumnia, Virgilia, and Valeria, &c.

How now, my as fair as noble ladies, (and the moon was she earthily, no nobler,) whither do you follow your eyes so fast?

Vol. Honourable Menenius; my boy Marcus approaches: for the love of Juno, let's go.

Men. Ha! Marcus coming home?

Vol. Ay, worthy Menenius; and with most prosperous approbation.

Men. Take my cap, Jupiter, and I thank thee: —

Hoo! Marcus coming home?

Two Ladies. Nay, 'tis true.

Vol. Look, here's a letter from him: the state hath another, his wife another; and, I think, there's one at home for you.

Men. I will make my very house reel to-night:

— A letter for me?

Vir. Yes, certain, there's a letter for you; I saw it.

Men. A letter for me? It gives me an estate of seven years' health; in which time I will make a lip at the physician: the most sovereign prescription in Galien is to this preservative, of no better report than a horse-drench. Is he not wounded? he was wont to come home wounded.

Vir. O, no, no, no.

Vol. O, he is wounded, I thank the gods for't.

Men. So do I too, if it be not too much: — Brings

3 Statesmen.
a victory in his pocket? — The wounds become

Vol. On's brows, Menenius: he comes the third time home with the oaken garland.

Men. Has he disciplined Aufidius soundly?

Vol. Titus Lartius writes, — they fought together, but Aufidius got off.

Men. And 'twas time for him too, I'll warrant him that: an he had staid by him, I would not have been so fidious for all the chests in Corioli, and the gold that's in them. Is the senate possessed of this?

Vol. Good ladies, let's go: — Yes, yes, yes:
the senate has letters from the general, wherein he gives my son the whole name of the war: he hath in this action outdone his former deeds doubly.

Vol. In troth, there's wondrous things spoke of him.

Men. Wondrous? ay, I warrant you, and not without his true purchasing.

Vir. The gods grant them true!

Vol. True? pow, wow.

Men. True? I'll be sworn they are true: —
Where is he wounded? — Jove save your good worship! [To the Tribunes, who come forward.]
Marcus is coming home: he has more cause to be proud. — Where is he wounded?

Vol. I the shoulder, and i' the left arm: There will be large cicatrices to show the people, when he shall stand for his place. He received in the repulse of Tarquin, seven hurts i'the body.

Men. One in the neck, and two in the thigh, —
there's nine that I know.

Vol. He had, before this last expedition, twenty-five wounds upon him.

Men. Now it's twenty-seven: every gash was an enemy's grave: [A Shout, and Flourish.] Hark! the trumpets.

Vol. These are the ushers of Marcus: before him
He carries noise, and behind him lie leaves tears;
Death, that dark spirit, his nervous arm doth lie;
Which being advance'd, declines; and then men die.

_A Sennet._

Trumpets sound. Enter _Cominius_ and _Titus Lartius; between them, Coriola-nus, crowned with an oaken Garland; with Captains, Soldiers, and a Herald._

Her. Know, Rome, that all alone Marcus did fight
Within Corioli' gates: where he hath won,
With fame, a name to Caius Marcus; these
In honour follows, Coriolanus:
Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus!

[Flourish.

_All._ Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus!

Cor. No more of this, it does offend my heart;
Pray now, no more.

Com. Look, sir, your mother. —

Cor. You have, I know, petition'd all the gods
For my prosperity. [Knells.

Vol. Nay, my good soldier, up
My gentle Marcus, worthy Caius, and
By deed achieving honour newly nam'd,
What is it? Coriolanus, must I call thee?
But O, thy wife —

Cor. My gracious silence, hush! Wouldst thou have laugh'd, had I come coff'd home,
That weep't to see me triumph? Ah, my dear,

_Flourish on cornets._

Such eyes the widows in Corioli wear,
And mothers that lack sons.

Men. Now the gods crown thee!

Cor. And live you yet? — O my sweet lady, pardon.

_[To Valeria._

Vol. I know not where to turn: — O welcome
home;
And welcome, general; — And you are welcome all.

Men. A hundred thousand welcomes: I could weep,
And I could laugh; I am light, and heavy: Welcome:
A curse begin at very root of his heart,
That is not glad to see thee! — You are three,
That Rome should dote on: yet, by the faith of
men,
We have some old crab-trees here at home, that will not
Be graft'd to your relish. Yet welcome, warriors:
We call a nettle, but a nettle; and
The faults of fools, but folly.

Com. Menenius, ever, ever.

Her. Give way there, and go on.

Cor. Your hand, and yours: [To his Wife and Mother.

Ere in our own house I do shade my head,
The good Patricians must be visited;
From whom I have receiv'd not only greetings,
But with them change of honours.

Vol. I have lived
To see inherited my very wishes,
And the buildings of my fancy: only there
Is one thing wanting, which I doubt not, but
Our Rome will cast upon thee.

Cor. Know, good mother,
I had rather be their servant in my way,
Than sway with them in theirs.

Com. On, to the Capitol.

_[Flourish. Coronets. Exeunt in state, as before. The Tribunes remain._

Bru. All tongues speak of him, and the bleared
Are spectacled to see him: Your prattling nurse
In a rapture lets her baby cry,
While she chats him: the kitchen malkin 6 pins
Her richest lockram? 'bout her recchy 8 neck,
Clambering the walls to eye him: stalls, bulks,
windows,
Are smother'd up, leads fill'd and ridges hors'd
With variable complexions: all agreeing
In earnestness to see him; seld 9 -shown flamens
Do press among the popular thronges, and puff
To win a vulgar station: our well'd dames
Commit the war of white and damask, in
Their nicely-gawded cheeks, to the wanton spoil
Of Phoebus' burning kisses: such a pother,
As if that whatsoever god, who leads him,
Were slily crept into his human powers,
And gave him graceful posture.

_[To._

On the sudden,
I warrant him consul.

Bru. Then our office may,
During his power, go sleep.

_Sic._ He cannot temperately transport his honours
From where he should begin, and end; but will Lose those that he hath won.

Bru. In that there's comfort.

6 Maid. 7 Best linen. 8 Soiled with sweat and smoke
9 Seldom. 1 Priests. 2 Adorned.
SCENE II.  CORIOLANUS.

Sic. Doubt not, the commoners, for whom we stand,
But they, upon their ancient malice, will forget, with the least cause, these his new honours;
Which that he'll give them, make as little question
As he is proud to do.

Bru. I heard him swear,
Were he to stand for consul, never would he appear in the market-place, nor on him put
The napless vesture of humility;
Nor, showing (as the manner is) his wounds
To the people, beg their stinking breaths.

Sic. 'Tis right.

Bru. It was his word: O, he would miss it,
Rather than carry it, but by the suit of the gentry to him,
And the desires of the nobles.

Sic. I wish no better,
Than have him hold that purpose, and put it
In execution.

Bru. 'Tis most like, he will.

Sic. It shall be to him then, as our good wills;
A sure destruction.

Bru. So it must fall out
To him, or our authorities. For an end,
We must suggest the people in what hatred
He still hath held them; that, to his power he Would have made them mules, silenc'd their pleaders, and Disproperti'd their freedoms: holding them,
In human action and capacity,
Of no more soul, nor fitness for the world,
Than camels in their war; who have their provand
Only for bearing burdens, and sore blows
For sinking under them.

Sic. This, as you say, suggested
At some time when his soaring insolence
Shall teach the people, (which time shall not want,
If he be put upon; and that's as easy,
As to set dogs on sheep,) will be his fire
To kindle their dry stubble; and their blaze
Shall darken him for ever.

Enter a Messenger.

Bru. What's the matter?

Mess. You are sent for to the Capitol. 'Tis thought
That Marcius should be consul: I have seen
The dumb men throng to see him, and the blind
To hear him speak: The matrons flung their gloves,
Ladies and maids their scarsfs and handkerchiefs,
Upon him as he pass'd: the nobles bended,
As to Jove's statue; and the commons made
A shower, and thunder, with their caps, and shouts:
I never saw the like.

Bru. Let's to the Capitol;
And carry with us ears and eyes for the time,
But hearts for the event.

Sic. Have with you. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. — The Capitol.

Enter two Officers, to lay Cushions.

1 Off. Come, come, they are almost here: How many stand for consulships?

2 Off. Three, they say: but 'tis thought of every one, Coriolanus will carry it.

1 Off. That's a brave fellow; but he's vengeance proud, and loves not the common people.

A Senet. Enter, with Lictors before them, Cominius, the Consul, Menenius, Corioli-anus, many other Senators, Sicinius, and Brutus. The Senators take their Places; the Tribunes take theirs also by themselves.

Men. Having determin'd of the Voices, and
To send for Titus Lartius, it remains,
As the main point of this our after-meeting,
To gratify his noble service, that
Hath thus stood for his country: Therefore please you,
Most reverend and grave elders, to desire
The present consul, and last general
In our well-found successes, to report
A little of that worthy work perform'd
By Caio Marcius Coriolanus: whom
We meet here, both to thank and to remember
With honours like himself.

1 Sen. Speak, good Cominius:
Leave nothing out for length, and make us think,
Rather our state's defective for requital,
Than we to stretch it out. Masters o' the people,
We do request your kindest ears: and, after,
Your loving motion toward the common body,
To yield what passes here.

Sic. We are convened
Upon a pleasing treaty; and have hearts
Inclivable to honour and advance
The theme of our assembly.

Bru. Which the rather
We shall be bles'd to do, if he remember
A kinder value of the people, than
He hath hereto priz'd them at.

Men. That's off, that's off 6; I would you rather had been silent: Please you
To hear Cominius speak?

Bru. Most willingly;

3 Inform. 4 Provender.

2 Off. There have been many great men that
Have flatter'd the people, who ne'er loved them;
And there be many that they have loved, they know
Not wherefore: so that, if they love they know not Why, they hate upon no better a ground: Therefore, for Corioli-anus neither to care whether they Love or hate him, manifests the true knowledge he has in their disposition; and, out of his noble carelessness, lets them plainly see't.

1 Off. If he did not care whether he had their love, or no, he waved indifferently 'twixt doing them neither good nor harm; but he seeks their hate with greater devotion than they can render it him: and leaves nothing undone, that may fully discover him their opposite. Now, to seem to affect the malice and displeasure of the people, is as bad as that which he dislikes, to flatter them for their love.

2 Off. He hath deserved worthily of his country.
And his ascent is not by such easy degrees as those, who, having been supple and courteous to the people, bonneted 3 without any further deed to have them at all into their estimation and report:
but he hath so planted his honours in their eyes,
and his actions in their hearts, that for their tongues to be silent, and not confess so much, were a kind of ingratitude; to report otherwise were a malice, that, giving itself the lie, would pluck reproof and rebuke from every ear that heard it.

1 Off. No more of him: he is a worthy man:
Make way, they are coming.
CORIOLANUS.

Act II.

But yet my caution was more pertinent,
Than the rebuke you gave it.

Men. He loves your people;
But tie him not to be their bedfellow.—
Worthy Cominius, speak. — Nay, keep your place.

[Coriolanus rises, and offers to go away.

1 Sen. Sit, Coriolanus: never shame to hear
What you have nobly done.

Cor. Your honours' pardon;
I had rather have my wounds to heal again,
Than hear say how I got them.

1 Sen. Sir, I hope,
My words disench'd you not.

Cor. No, sir; yet oft
When blows have made me stay, I fled from words.
You sooth'd not, therefore, hurt not: But, your people,
I love them as they weigh.

Men. Pray now, sit down.
Cor. I had rather have one scratch my head
i'the sun,
When the alarum were struck, than idly sit
To hear my nothings monster'd.

[Exit Coriolanus.

Men. Masters o'the people,
Your multiplying spawn how can he flatter,
(That's thousand to one good one,) when you now see,
He had rather venture all his limbs for honour,
Than one of his ears to hear it? — Proceed, Cominius.

Com. I shall lack voice: the deeds of Coriolanus
Should not be utter'd feebly. — It is held,
That valour is the chiefest virtue, and
Most dignifies the haver: if it be,
The man I speak of cannot in the world
Be singly counterpois'd. At sixteen years,
When Tarquin made a head for Rome, he fought
Beyond the mark of others: our then dictator,
Whom with all praise I point at, saw him fight,
When with his Amazonian chin he drove
The bristled lips before him: he bestrid
An o'errepress'd Roman, and i'the consult's view
Slew three oppressors: Tarquin's self he met,
And struck him on his knee: in that day's feats,
When he might act the woman in the scene,
He prov'd best man i' the field, and for his meed
Was brow-bound with the oak. His pupil age
Man-enter'd thus, he waked like a sea;
And, in the brunt of seventeen battles since,
He lurch'd all swords o' the garland. For this last,
Before and in Corioli, let me say,
I cannot speak him home: He stopp'd the fliers;
And, by his rare example, made the coward
Turn terror into sport: as waves before
A vessel under sail, so men obey'd,
And fell below his stem: his sword (death's stamp)
Where it did mark it took; from face to foot
He was a thing of blood, whose every motion
Was timed with dying cries: alone he enter'd
The mortal gate o'the city, which he painted
With shunless destiny, address came off,
And with a sudden re-enforcement struck
Corioli, like a planet: now all's his:
When by and by the din of war 'gan pierce
His ready sense: then straight his doubled spirit
Re-quicken'd what in flesh was fatig'd, 1
And to the battle came he; where he did

7 Without a beard. 8 Reward. 9 Disappointed.

Run reeking o'er the lives of men, as if
'Twere a perpetual spoil; and, till we call'd
Both field and city ours, he never stood
To ease his breast with panting.

Men. Worthy man!

Com. Our spoils he kick'd at; and Look'd upon things precious, as they were
Than misery it self would give; rewards
His deeds with doing them; and is content
To spend the time to end it.

Men. He's right noble;
Let him be call'd for.

1 Sen. Call for Coriolanus.

Off. He doth appear.

Re-enter Coriolanus.

Men. The senate, Coriolanus, are well pleas'd
To make thee consul.

Cor. I do owe them still
My life, and services.

Men. It then remains,
That you do speak to the people.

Cor. I do beseech you,
Let me o'erleap that custom; for I cannot
Put on the gown, stand naked, and entreat them,
For my wounds' sake, to give their suffrage: please
you,
That I may pass this doing.

Sic. Must have their voices; neither will they bate
One jot of ceremony.

Men. Put them not to't: —
Pray you, go fit you to the custom; and Take to you, as your predecessors have,
Your honour with your form.

Cor. It is a part
That I shall blush in acting, and might well
Be taken from the people.

Bru. Mark you that?

Cor. To brag unto them, — thus I did, and Thus; —
Show them the unaching scars which I should hide,
As if I had receiv'd them for the hire
Of their breath only: —

Men. Do not stand upon. —
We recommend to you, tribunes of the people,
Our purpose to them; and to our noble consul
Wish we all joy and honour.

Sen. To Coriolanus come all joy and honour! [FLOURISH. Then exent Senators.

Bru. You see how he intends to use the people.

Sic. May they perceive his intent! He that will require them,
As if he did content what he requested
Should be in them to give.

Bru. Come, we'll inform them
Of our proceedings here: on the market-place,
I know they do attend us. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. — The Forum.

Enter several Citizens.

1 Cit. Once, if he do require our voices, we ought not to deny him.

2 Cit. We may, sir, if we will.

2 Avarice.
3 Cit. We have power in ourselves to do it, but it is a power that we have no power to do: for if he show us his wounds, and tell us his deeds, we are to put our tongues into those wounds, and speak for them; so, if he tell us his noble deeds, we must also tell him our noble acceptance of them. Ingratitude is monstrous: and for the multitude to be ingratitude, were to make a monster of the multitude; of the which, we being members, should bring ourselves to be monstrous members.

1 Cit. And to make us no better thought of, a little help will serve: for once, when we stood up about the corn, he himself stuck not to call us the many-headed multitude.

3 Cit. We have been called so of many; not that our heads are some brown, some black, some auburn, some bal'd, but that our wits are so diversely coloured: and truly I think, if all our wits were to issue out of one skull, they would fly east, west, north, south; and their consent of one direct way should be at once to all the points o' the compass.

2 Cit. Think you so? Which way, do you judge, my wit would fly?

3 Cit. Nay, your wit will not so soon out as another man's will, 'tis strongly wedged up in a blockhead; but if it were at liberty, 'twould, sure, southward.

2 Cit. Why that way?

3 Cit. To lose itself in a fog; where being three parts melted away with rotten dews, the fourth would return to help to get thee a wife.

2 Cit. You are never without your tricks: — You may, you may.

3 Cit. Are you all resolved to give your voices? But that's no matter, the greater part carries it. I say, if he would incline to the people, there was never a worthier man.

Enter Coriolanus and Menenius.

Here he comes, and in the gown of humility; mark his behaviour. We are not to say all together, but to come by him where he stands, by ones, by twos, and by threes. He's to make his requests by particulars: wherein every one of us has a single honour, in giving him our own voices with our own tongues: therefore, follow me, and I'll direct you how you shall go by him.

All. Content, content.

Men. O sir, you are not right: have you not known
The worthiest men have done it?

Cor. What must I say? —
I pray, sir, — Plague upon't! I cannot bring My tongue to such a pace: — Look, sir; —
my wounds; —
I got them in my country's service, when
Some certain of your brethren roar'd, and ran
From the noise of our own drums.

Men. O me, the gods!
You must not speak of that: you must desire them
To think upon you.

Cor. Think upon me? Hang 'em! I would they would forget me.

Men. You'll mar all;
I'll leave you: Pray you, speak to them, I pray you,
In wholesome manner.

Enter two Citizens.

Cor. Bid them wash their faces,
And keep their teeth clean. — So, here comes a brace. —
You know the cause, sir, of my standing here.
To one that would do thus. — I am half through; The one part suffer’d, the other will I do.

Enter three other Citizens.

Here come more voices, —
Your voices: for your voices I have fought; Watch’d for your voices; for your voices, bear Of wounds two dozen odd; battles thrice six I have seen and heard of; for your voices have Done many things, some less, some more: your voices:
Indeed, I would be consul.

5 Cit. He has done nobly, and cannot go without any honest man’s voice.

6 Cit. Therefore let him be consul: The gods give him joy, and make him good friend to the people!

All. Amen, Amen.

Jove save thee, noble consul! [Exeunt Citizens.

Worthy voices!

Re-enter MENENIUS, with BRUTUS, and SICINIUS.

Men. You have stood your limitation; and the tribunes
Endue you with the people’s voice: Remains,
That, in the official marks invested, you Anon do meet the senate.

Cor. Is this done?

Sic. The custom of request you have discharge’d: The people do admit you; and are summon’d To meet anon, upon your approbation.

Cor. Where? at the senate-house?

Sic. There, Coriolanus.

Cor. May I then change these garments?

Sic. You may, sir.

Cor. That I’ll straight do; and, knowing myself again,
Repair to the senate-house.

Men. I’ll keep you company. — Will you along?

Bru. We stay here for the people.

Sic. Fare you well.

[Exeunt Coriol. and Menen.]

He has it now; and by his looks, methinks,
’Tis warm at his heart.

Bru. With a proud heart he wore
His humble weeds: Will you dismiss the people?

Re-enter Citizens.

Sic. How now, my masters? have you chose this man?

1 Cit. He has our voices, sir.

Bru. We pray the gods, he may deserve your loves,

2 Cit. Amen, sir: To my poor unworthy notice,
He mock’d us, when he begg’d our voices.

3 Cit. Certainly,
He flouted us down-right.

1 Cit. No, ’tis his kind of speech, he did not mock us.

2 Cit. Not amongst us save yourself, but says,
He us’d us scornfully: he should have show’d us His marks of merit, wounds receiv’d for his country.

Sic. Why, so he did, I am sure.

Cit. No; no man saw ’em.

[Several speak.

3 Cit. He said, he had wounds, which he could show in private;
And with his hat, thus waving it in scorn,
I would be consul, says he: aged custom,
But by your voices, will not so permit me;
Your voices therefore: When we granted that,
Here was, — I thank you for your voices, — thank you.

Your most sweet voices: — now you have left your voices,
I have no further with you: — Was not this mockery?

Sic. Why, either, were you ignorant to see’t? Or, seeing it, of such childish friendliness
To yield your voices?

Bru. Could you not have told him,
As you were lesson’d, — When he had no power,
But was a petty servant to the state,
He was your enemy; ever spake against
Your liberties, and the charters that you bear
I the body of the weal; and now, arriving
A place of potency, and sway o’ the state,
If he should still malignantly remain
Fast foot to the plebeii’s, your voices might
Be curses to yourselves? You should have said,
That as his worthy deeds did claim no less
Than what he stood for; so his gracious nature
Would think upon you for your voices, and Translate his malice towards you into love,
Standing your friendly lord.

Sic. Thus to have said,
As you were fore-advis’d, had touch’d his spirit,
And try’d his inclination: from him pluck’d
Either his gracious promise, which you might,
As cause had call’d you up, have held him to;
Or else it would have gall’d his surly nature,
Which easily endures not article
Tying him to aught; so putting him to rage,
You should have ta’en the advantage of his choler,
And pass’d him unselected.

Bru. Did you perceive,
He did solicit you in free contempt,
When he did need your loves; and do you think,
That his contempt shall not be bruising to you,
When he hath power to crush? Why, had your bodies
No heart among you? Or had you tongues, to cry
Against the rectorship of judgment?

Sic. Have you,
Ere now, deny’d the asker? and, now again,
On him, that did not ask, but mock, bestow
Your su’d-for tongues?

3 Cit. He’s not confirm’d, we may deny him yet.

2 Cit. And will deny him:
I’ll have five hundred voices of that sound.

1 Cit. I twice five hundred, and their friends to piece ’em.

Bru. Get you hence instantly: and tell those friends,
They have chose a consul, that will from them take
Their liberties; make them of no more voice
Than dogs, that are as often beat for barking,
As therefore kept to do so.

Sic. Let them assemble;
And, on a safer judgment, all revoke
Your ignorant election: Enforce his pride,
And his old hate unto you: besides, forget not
With what contempt he wore the humble weal;
How in his suit he scorn’d you: but your loves,
Thinking upon his services, took from you
The apprehension of his present portance,
Which gibingly, ungravely he did fashion
After the invertebrate hate he bears you.

Bru. Lay
A fault on us, your tribunes; that we labour’d
(No impediment between) but that you must Cast your election on him.

Sic. Say, you chose him

4 Plebeians, common people.
5 Carriage.
ACT III.

SCENE I. — A Street.

Cornets. Enter Coriolanus, Menenius, Cominius, Titus Lartius, Senators, and Patricians.

Cor. Tullius Aufidius then had made new head?

Lart. He had, my lord; and that it was, which caus'd our swiftest composition.

Cor. So then the Volces stand but as at first; Ready, when time shall prompt them, to make road Upon us again.

Com. They are worn, lord consul, so, That we shall hardly in our ages see Their banners wave again.

Cor. Saw you Aufidius?

Lart. On safe-guard he came to me; and did curse Against the Volces, for they had so vilely Yielded the town: he is retir'd to Antium.

Cor. Spoke he of me?

Lart. He did, my lord,

Cor. How? what?

Lart. How often he had met you, sword to sword: That, of all things upon the earth, he hated Your person most: that he would pawn his fortunes To hopeless restitution, so he might Be call'd your vanquisher.

Cor. At Antium lives he?

Lart. At Antium.

Cor. I wish I had a cause to seek him there, To oppose his hatred fully. — Welcome home.

[To Lartius.

Enter Sicinius and Brutus.

Behold! these are the tribunes of the people; The tongues o' the common mouth. I do despise them: For they do prank them in authority, Against all noble sufferance.

Sic. Pass no further.

Cor. Ha! what is that?

Brut. It will be dangerous to Go on: no further.

Cor. What makes this change? The matter?

To your remembrances: but you have found, Scaling 6 his present bearing with his past, That he's your fixed enemy, and revoke Your sudden approbation.

Brut. Say, you ne'er had done't, (Harp on that still,) but by our putting on: And presently, when you have drawn your number, Repair to the Capitol.

Cit. We will so: almost all [Several speak. Repent in their election.]

[Execut Citizens. Brut. Let them go on; This mutiny were better put in hazard, Than stay, past doubt, for greater: If, as his nature is, he fall in rage With their refusal, both observe and answer The vantage of his anger.

Sic. To the Capitol: Come; we'll be there before the stream o' the people; And this shall seem, as partly 'tis, their own, Which we have goaded onward. [Execut.

ACT III.

Com. Hath he not pass'd the nobles, and the commons?

Brut. Cominius, no.

Cor. Have I had children's voices?

1 Sen. Tribunes, give way: he shall to the market-place.

Brut. The people are incens'd against him.

Sic. Stop, Or all will fall in broil.

Cor. Are these your herd? — Must these have voices, that can yield them now, And straight disclaim their tongues? — What are your offices? You being their mouths, why rule you not their teeth? Have you not set them on?

Men. Be calm, be calm.

Cor. It is a purpos'ed thing, and grows by plot, To curb the will of the nobility: — Suffer it, and live with such as cannot rule, Nor ever will be rul'd.

Brut. Call'd not a plot: The people cry, you mock'd them; and, of late, When corn was given them gratis, you repin'd; Scandal'd the suppliants for the people; call'd them Time-pleasers, flatterers, foes to nobleness.

Cor. Why, this was known before.

Brut. Not to them all.

Cor. Have you inform'd them since?

Brut. How! I inform them!

Cor. You are like to do such business.

Brut. Not unlike, Each way to better yours.

Cor. Why then should I be consul? By yon clouds, Let me deserve so ill as you, and make me Your fellow-tribune.

Sic. You show too much of that, For which the people stir: If you will pass To where you are bound, you must inquire your way, Which you are out of, with a gentler spirit; Or never be so noble as a consul, Nor yoke with him for tribune.

Men. Let's be calm.

U u 2
Com. The people are abus'd: — Set on. — This palt'ring?
Becomes not Rome; nor has Coriolanus
Deserv'd so this dishonour'd rub, laid falsely
I the plain way of his merit.
Cor. Tell me of corn!
This was my speech, and I will speak't again; —
Men. Not now, not now.
1 Sen. Not in this heat, sir, now.
Cor. Now, as I live, I will. — My nobler friends, I crave their pardons: —
For the mutable, rank-scented many, let them
Regard me as I do not flatter, and Therein behold themselves: I say again,
In soothing them, we nourish 'gainst our senate
The cockle of rebellion, insolence, sedition,
Which we ourselves have plough'd for, sow'd and scatter'd,
By mingling them with us, the honour'd number;
Who lack not virtue, no, nor power, but that
Which they have given to beggars.
Men. Well, no more.
1 Sen. No more words, we beseech you.
Cor. How! no more.
As for my country I have shed my blood,
Not fearing outward force, so shall my lungs
Coin words till their decay, against those meanzels 8
Which we disdain should utter 9 us, yet sought
The very way to catch them.
Bru. You speak o' the people,
As if you were a god to punish, not
A man of their infirmity.
Sic. Twere well,
We let the people know't.
Men. What, what? his choler?
Cor. Choler!
Were I as patient as the midnight sleep,
By Jove, 'twould be my mind.
Sic. It is a mind,
That shall remain a poison where it is,
Not poison any further.
Cor. Shall remain! —
Hear you this Triton of the minnows? mark you
His absolute shall? 3
Com. ough. 4
Cor. 'Twas from the canon. 1
Men. Shall? 5
O good, but most unwise patricians, why,
You grave, but reckless senators, have you thus
Given Hydra here to choose an officer,
That with his peremptory shall, being but
The horn and noise o' the monsters, wants not spirit
To say, he'll turn your current in a ditch,
And make your channel his? If he have power,
Then vail your ignorance: if none, awake
Your dangerous lenity. If you are learned,
Be not as common fools; if you are not,
Let them have cushions by you. You are plebeians,
If they be senators: and they are no less,
When both your voices blended, the greatest taste
Most palates theirs. They choose their magistrate;
And such a one as he, who puts his shall,
His popular shall, against a graver bench
Than ever frown'd in Greece! By Jove himself,
It makes the consuls base: and my soul aches,
To know, when two authorities are up,
Neither supreme, how soon confusion
May enter 'twixt the gap of both, and take
The one by the other.

7 Shuffling.
8 Lepera.
9 Scab.
1 According to law.

Com. Well — on to the market-place.
Cor. Whoever gave that counsel, to give forth
The corn o' the store-house gratis, as 'twas us'd
Sometime in Greece, —
Men. Well, well, no more of that.
Cor. (Though there the people had more absolute power,)
I say, they nourish'd disobedience, fed
The ruin of the state.
Bru. Why, shall the people give
One, that speaks thus, their voice?
Cor. I'll give my reasons,
More worthier than their voices. They know, the corn
Was not our recompence: resting well assur'd
They ne'er did service for't: Being press'd to the war,
Even when the vitals of the state were touch'd,
They would not thread the gates: this kind of service
Did not deserve corn gratis: being i' the war,
Their mutinies and revolts, wherein they show'd
Most valour, spoke not for them: The accusation
Which they have often made against the senate,
All cause unborn, could never be the native 9
Of our so frank donation. Well, what then?
How shall this bosom multiplied digest
The senate's courtesy? Let deeds express
What's to be their words: — We did request it;
We are the greater poll? and in true fear
They gave us our demands: — Thus we debase
The nature of our seats, and make the rabble
Call our cares, fears: which will in time break open
The locks o' the senate, and bring in the crows
To peck the eagles. —
Men. Come, enough.
Bru. Enough, with over-measure.
Cor. No, take more:
What may be sworn by, both divine and human,
Seal what I end withal! — This double worship,
Where one part does disdain with cause, the other
Insult without all reason; where gentry, title, wisdom
Cannot conclude, but by the yea and no
Of general ignorance, — it must omit
Real necessities, and give way the while
To unstable slightness: purpose so barr'd, it follows,
Nothing is done to purpose: Therefore, beseech you,
You that will be less fearful than discreet;
That love the fundamental part of state,
More than you doubt 4 the change of't; that prefer
A noble life before a long, and wish
To jump 5 a body with a dangerous physick
That's sure of death without it, — at once pluck out
The multitudinous tongue, let them not lick
The sweet which is their poison: your dishonour
Mangles true judgment, and bereaves the state
Of that integrity which should become it;
Not having the power to do the good it would
For the ill which doth control it.
Bru. He has said enough.
Sic. He has spoken like a traitor, and shall answer
As traitors do.
Cor. Thou wretch! despite o'erwhelm thee! —
What should the people do with these bald tribunes?
On whom depending, their obedience fails
To the greater bench: In a rebellion,
When what's not meet, but what must be, was law,
Then were they chosen; in a better hour,

8 Motive, no doubt, was Shakespeare's word.
9 Number.
4 Fear.
5 Risk.
Let what is meet, be said it must be meet,
And throw their power i' the dust.
_Bru._ Manifest treascon.
_Sic._ This a consul? no.
_Bru._ The aediles, ho! — Let him be apprehended.
_Sic._ Go, call the people; [Exit _Brutus._] in whose name, myself
Attach thee, as a traitorous innovator,
A foe to the publick weal: Obey, I charge thee,
And follow to thine answer.
_Cor._ Hence, old goat!
_Sen._ & _Pat._ We'll surely him.
_Corn._ Aged sir, hands off.
_Cor._ Hence, rotten thing, or I shall shake thy bones
Out of thy garments.
_Sic._ Help, ye citizens.

_Re-enter _Brutus, with the _Aediles, and a Rabble of _Citizens._
_Men._ On both sides more respect.
_Sic._ Here's he, that would Take from you all your power.
_Bru._ Seize him, aediles.
_Cit._ Down with him, down with him!
[Several speak.
2 _Sen._ Weapons, weapons, weapons!
[The whole bustle about Coriolanus.
_Tribunes, patricians, citizens! — what, ho! —
Sicinius, Brutus, Coriolanus, citizens!
_Cit._ Peace, peace, peace; stay, hold, peace!
_Cit._ What is about to be? — I am out of breath;
Confusion's near: I cannot speak: — You, tribunes
To the people, — Coriolanus patience: —
Speak, good Sicinius.
_Sic._ Hear me, people; — Peace.
_Cit._ Let's hear our tribune; — Peace, speak, speak
speak.
_Sic._ You are at point to lose your liberties:
Marcius would have all from you; Marcius,
Whom late you have nam'd for consul.
_Men._ Fye, fye, fye!
This is the way to kindle, not to quench.
1 _Sen._ To unbuild the city, and to lay all flat.
_Sic._ What is the city, but the people?
_Cit._ True,
The people are the city.
_Bru._ By the consent of all we were established
The people's magistrates.
_Cit._ You so remain.
_Men._ And so are like to do.
_Cor._ That is the way to lay the city flat;
To bring the roof to the foundation;
And bury all, which yet distinctly ranges,
In heaps and piles of ruin.
_Sic._ This deserves death.
_Bru._ Or let us stand to our authority,
Or let us lose it: — We do here pronounce,
Upon the part o' the people, in whose power
We were elected theirs, Marcius is worthy
Of present death.
_Sic._ Therefore, lay hold of him:
Bear him to the rock Tarpeian's, and from thence
Into destruction cast him.
_Bru._ _Aediles, seize him.
_Cit._ Yield, Marcius, yield.
_Men._ Hear me one word.
_Beed._ Peace, peace.
_Men._ Beshoo thee, tribunes, hear me but a word.

And temperately proceed to what you would
Thus violently redress.
_Bru._ Sir, those cold ways,
That seem like prudent helps, are very poisonous
Where the disease is violent; — Lay hands upon him,
And bear him to the rock.
_Cor._ No; I'll die here.
[Drawing his Sword.
There's some among you have beheld me fighting;
Come, try upon yourselves what you have seen me.
_Men._ Down with that sword; — Tribunes, withdraw a while.
_Bru._ Lay hands upon him.
_Men._ Help Marcius! help,
You that be noble; help him, young and old!
_Cit._ Down with him, down with him!
[In this Mutiny, the Tribunes, the _Aediles, _and the People, are all beat in.
_Men._ Go, get you to your house: begone, away,
All will be taught else.
2 _Sen._ Get you gone.
_Cor._ We have as many friends as enemies.
_Men._ Shall it be put to that?
1 _Sen._ The gods forbid!
I pray thee, noble friend, home to thy house;
Leave us to cure this cause.
_Men._ For 'tis a sore upon us,
You cannot tent yourself: Begone, beseech you.
_Corn._ Come, sir, along with us.
_Cor._ I would they were barbarians, (as they are,
Though in Rome litter'd,) not Romans, (as they are not,
Though calv'd i' the porch o' the Capitol,) —
_Men._ Begone;
Put not your worthy rage into your tongue;
One time will owe another.
_Cor._ On fair ground,
I could beat forty of them.
_Men._ I could myself
Take up a brace of the best of them; yea, the two tribunes.
_Corn._ But now 'tis odds beyond arithmetic;
And mankind is call'd foolery, when it stands
Against a falling fabric. — Will you hence,
Before the tag? return? whose rage doth rend
Like interrupted waters, and o'erbear
What they are us'd to bear.
_Men._ Pray you, begone;
I'll try whether my old wit be in request
With those that have but little; this must be patch'd
With cloth of any colour.
_Corn._ Nay, come away.
1 _Pat._ This man has marr'd his fortune.
_Men._ His nature is too noble for the world;
He would not flatter Neptune for his trident
Or Jove for his power to thunder. His heart's his mouth:
What his breast forges, that his tongue must vent;
And, being angry, does forget that ever
He heard the name of death. [A Noise within.
Here's goodly work!
2 _Pat._ I would they were a-bed!
_Men._ I would they were in Tyber! — What, the vengeance,
Could he not speak them fair?
_Re-enter _Brutus and Sicinius, with the Rabble.
_Sic._ Where is this viper,
? The lowest of the populace, tag, rag, and bobtail.
That would depopulate the city, and
Be every man himself?

Men. You worthy tribunes, —
Sic. He shall be thrown down the Tarpeian rock
With rigorous hands; he hath resisted law,
And therefore law shall scorn him further trial
Than the severity of the publick power,
Which he so sets a nought.

Citi. He shall well know,
The noble tribunes are the people's mouths,
And we their hands.

Citi. He shall, sure on't.

[Several speak together.

Men. Let it
Sic. Peace. Let
Men. Do not cry, havock, where you should but hunt
With modest warrant.

Sic. Sir, how comes it, that you
Have holp to make this rescue?

Men. As I do know the consul's worthiness,
So can I name his faults; —

Sic. Consul? — What consul?

Men. The consul Coriolanus.

Bru. He a consul!

Citi. No, no, no, no, no.

Men. If, by the tribune's leave, and yours, good people,
I may be heard, I'd crave a word or two;
The which shall turn you to no further harm,
Than so much loss of time.

Sic. Speak briefly then;
For we are peremptory, to despatch
This viperous traitor: to eject him hence,
Were but one danger; and, to keep him here,
Our certain death; therefore it is decreed,
He dies to-night.

Men. Now the good gods forbid,
That our renowned Rome, whose gratitude
Towards her deserved 8 children is enroll'd
In Jove's own book, like an unnatural dam
Should now eat up her own!

Sic. He's a disease, that must be cut away.

Men. O, he's a limb, that has but a disease;
Mortal, to cut it off; to cure it, easy.

What has he done to Rome, that's worthy death?
Killing our enemies? The blood he hath lost,
(Which, I dare vouch, is more than that he hath,
By many an ounce,) he dropp'd it for his country:
And, what is left, to lose it by his country,
Were to us all, that do't, and suffer it,
A brand to the end o' the world.

Sic. This is clean kam. 9

Bru. Merely 1 away: when he did love his country,
It honour'd him.

Men. The service of the foot
Being once gangren'd, is not then respected
For what before it was?

Bru. We'll hear no more: —
Pursue him to his house, and pluck him thence;
Lest his infection, being of catching nature,
Spread further.

Men. One word more, one word.
This tiger-footed rage, when it shall find
The harm of unscann'd swiftness 2, will, too late,
The leaden pounds to his heels. Proceed by process;
Lest parties (as he is belov'd) break out,

And sack great Rome with Romans.

Bru. If it were so, —
Sic. What do ye talk?

Men. Consider this; — He has been bred i' the wars
Since he could draw a sword, and is ill school'd
In boulted 3 language; meal and bran together
He throws without distinction. Give me leave,
I'll go to him, and undertake to bring him
Where he shall answer by a lawful form,
(In peace) to his utmost peril.

Sic. Noble tribunes,
It is the humane way: the other course
Will prove too bloody; and the end of it
Unknown to the beginning.

Sic. Noble Menenius,
Be you then as the people's officer:
Masters, lay down your weapons.

Bru. Go not home.

Sic. Meet on the market-place: — We'll attend
You there:
Where, if you bring not Marcius, we'll proceed
In our first way.

Men. I'll bring him to you: —
Let me desire your company. [To the Senators.
He must come,
Or what is worst will follow.

Sic. Pray you, let's to him. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. — A Room in Coriolanus' House.

Enter Coriolanus, and Patricians.

Cor. Let them pull all about mine ears; present me
Death on the wheel, or at wild horses' heels;
Or pile ten hills on the Tarpeian rock,
That the precipitation might down stretch
Below the beam of sight, yet will I still
Be thus to them.

Enter Volumnia.

1 Pat. You do the nobler.

Cor. I must 4, my mother
Does not approve me further, who was wont
To call them wooden vassals, things created
To buy and sell with groats; to show bare heads
In congregations, to yawn, be still, and wonder,
When one but of my ordinance 5 stood up
To speak of peace, or war. I talk of you;

[To Volumnia.

Why did you wish me milder? Would you have me
False to my nature? Rather say, I play
The man I am.

Vol. O, sir, sir, sir,
I would have had you put your power well on,
Before you had worn it out.

Cor. Let go.

Vol. You might have been enough the man you are,
With striving less to be so: Lesser had been
The thwartings of your dispositions, if
You had not show'd them how you were dispos'd,
Ere they lack'd power to cross you.

Cor. Let them hang.

Vol. Ay, and burn too.

Enter Menenius, and Senators.

Men. Come, come, you have been too rough,
Something too rough;
You must return, and mend it.
Scene II.

CORIOLANUS.

I Sen.  There's no remedy;
Unless, by not so doing, our good city
Cleave in the midst and perish.

Vol.  Pray, be counsel'd:
I have a heart as little apt as yours,
But yet a brain, that leads my use of anger,
To better vantage.

Men.  Well said, noble woman:
Before he should thus stoop to the herd, but that
The violent fit o' the time craves it as physic
For the whole state, I would put mine armour on,
Which I can scarcely bear.

Cor.  What must I do?
Men.  Return to the tribunes.

Vol.  What then? what then?
Men.  Repent what you have spoke.
Cor.  For them?—I cannot do it to the gods;
Must I then do't to them?
Vol.  You are too absolute;
Though therein you can never be too noble,
But when extremities speak. I have heard you say,
Honour and policy, like unsever'd friends,
'Tis the war do grow together: Grant that, and tell me,
In peace, what each of them by th' other lose,
That they combine not there.

Cor.  Tush, tush!

Vol.  If it be honour in your wars, to seem
The same you are not, (which, for your best ends,
You adopt your policy,) how is it less or worse,
That it shall hold companionship in peace
With honour as in war; since that to both
It stands in like request?

Cor.  Why force you this?

Vol.  Because that now it lies you on to speak
To the people; not by your own instruction,
Nor by the matter which your heart prompts you to,
But with such words that are but roten
In Your tongue, though but bastards; and syllables
Of no allowance, to your bosom's truth.
Now, this no more dishonours you at all,
Than to take in a town with gentle words,
Which else would put you to your fortune, and
The hazard of much blood. —
I would dissemble with my nature, where
My fortunes, and my friends, at stake, requir'd
I should do so in honour: I am in this,
Your wife, your son, these senators, the nobles;
And you will rather show our general lows
How you can frown, than spend a fawn upon them,
For the inheritance of their loves, and safeguard
Of what that want might ruin.

Men.  Come, go with us; speak fair: you may salve so,
Not what is dangerous present, but the loss
Of what is past.

Vol.  I pr'ythee now, my son,
Go to them, with this bonnet in thy hand;
And thus far having stretch'd it, (here be with them,)
Thy knee bussing the stones, (for in such business
Action is eloquence, and the eyes of the ignorant
More learned than the ears,) waving thy head,
Which often thus correcting thy stout heart,
That humble, as the ripest mulberry,
Now will not hold the handling: Or, say to them,
Thou art their soldier, and being bred in broils,
Hast not the soft way, which, thou dost confess,
Were fit for thee to use, as they to claim.

8 Subdue.  7 Common clowns.

In asking their good loves; but thou wilt frame
Thyself, forsooth, hereafter theirs, so far
As thou hast power, and person.

Men.  This but done,
Even as she speaks, why, all their hearts were yours:
For they have pardons, being ask'd, as free
As words to little purpose.

Vol.  Pr'ythee now,
Go, and be rul'd: although, I know, thou badst rather
Follow thine enemy in a fiery gulf,
Than flatter him in a bower. Here is Cominius.

Enter Cominius.

Com.  I have been i' the market place: and, sir,
'tis fit
You make strong party, or defend yourself
By calumny, or by absence, all's in anger.

Men.  Only fair speech.
Com.  I think, 'twill serve, if he
Can thereto frame his spirit.

Vol.  He must, and will:
Pr'ythee now, say, you will, and go about it.

Cor.  Must I go show them my unbarb'd scouche?
Must I,
With my base tongue, give to my noble heart
A lie, that it must bear? Well, I will do:
Yet were there but this single plot to lose,
The mould of Marcus, they to dust should grind it,
And throw it against the wind. — To the marketplace:
You have put me now to such a part, which never
I shall discharge to the life.

Com.  Come, come, we'll prompt you.

Vol.  I pr'ythee now, sweet son; as thou hast said,
My praises made thee first a soldier, so,
To have my praise for this, perform a part
Thou hast not done before.

Cor.  Well, I must do:
Away, my disposition, and possess me
Some harlot's spirit! My throat of war be turn'd,
Which quired with my drum, into a voice
That babies lulls asleep! The smiles of knives
Tent in my cheeks; and school-boys' tears take up
The glasses of my sight! A beggar's tongue
Make motion through my lips; and my arm'd
Knees,
Who bow'd but in my stirrup, bend like his
That hath receiv'd an alms! — I will not do:
Lest I successe to honour mine own truth,
And by my body's action, teach my mind
A most inherent baseness.

Vol.  At thy choice then:
To beg of thee, it is my more dishonour,
Than thou of them. Come all to ruin; let Thy mother rather feel thy pride, than fear
Thy dangerous stoutness; for I mock at death
With as big heart as thou. Do as thou list.
Thy vailantness was mine, thou suck'dst it from me;
But owe. thy pride thyself.

Cor.  Pray, be content;
Mother, I am going to the market-place;
Chide me no more. I'll mountebank their loves,
Cog their hearts from them, and come home belov'd
Of all the trades in Rome. Look, I am going:
Commend me to my wife. I'll return consul;
Or never trust to what my tongue can do
I' the way of flattery, further.

Vol.  Do thy will. [Exit.

8 Unshaven head.  9 Dwell.  1 Own.
CORIOLANUS.  Act III.

Com. Away, the tribunes do attend you: arm yourself To answer mildly; for they are prepar'd With accusations, as I hear, more strong Than are upon you yet.
Cor. The word is, mildly:—Pray you, let us go; Let them accuse me by invention, I Will answer in mine honour.
Men. Ay, but mildly.
Cor. Well, mildly be it then; mildly. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. — The Forum.
Enter Sicinius and Brutus.

Bru. In this point charge him home, that he affects Tyrannical power: If he evade us there, Enforce him with his envy to the people; And that the spoil, got on the Antiates, Was ne'er distributed.—

Enter an Edile.

What, what will he come?
Ed. He's coming.
Brutus. How accompanied?
Ed. With old Menenius, and those senators That always favour'd him.
Sicinius. Have you a catalogue Of all the voices that we have procur'd, Set down by the poll?
Ed. I have; 'tis ready, here.
Sic. Have you collected them by tribes?
Ed. I have.
Sic. Assemble presently the people hither: And when they hear me say, It shall be so I the right and strength of the commons, be it either For death, for fine, or banishment; then let them, If I say, fine, cry Fine; if death, cry Death: Insisting on the old prerogative And power 't the cause o' the cause.
Ed. I shall inform them.
Brutus. And when such time they have begun to cry, Let them not cease, but with a din confus'd Enforce the present execution Of what we chance to sentence.
Ed. Very well.
Sicinius. Make them be strong, and ready for this hint, When we shall have to give't them.
Brutus. Go about it. — [Exit Edile.

Put him to choler straight: He hath been us'd Ever to conquer, and to have his worth Of contradiction: Being once chaf'd, he cannot Be rein'd again to temperance; then he speaks What's in his heart; and that is there, which looks With us to break his neck.

Enter Coriolanus, Menenius, Cominius, Senators, and Patricians.

Sicinius. Well, here he comes.
Men. Calmly, I do beseech you.
Cor. Ay, as an ostler, that for the poorest piece Will bear the knave by the volume.—The honour'd gods Keep Rome in safety, and the chairs of justice Supplied with worthy men! plant love among us! Throng our large temples with the shows of peace, And not our streets with war!
1 Sen. Amen, amen!
Men. A noble wish.

Re-enter Edile, with Citizens.

Sicinius. Draw near, ye people.
Edile. List to your tribunes; audience: Peace, I say.
Cor. First, hear me speak.
Both Trib. Well, say. — Peace, ho.
Cor. Shall I be charg'd no further than this present? Must all determine here?
Sicinius. I do demand,
If you submit to the people's voices, Allow their officers, and are content To suffer lawful censure for such faults As shall be prov'd upon you?
Cor. Men. Lo, citizens, he says, he is content: The warlike service he has done, consider; Think on the wounds his body bears, which show Like graves i' the holy churchyard.
Cor. What is the matter,
That being pass'd for consul with full voice, I am so dishonour'd, that the very hour You take it off again?
Sicinius. Answer to us.
Cor. Say then: 'tis true, I ought so.
Sicinius. We charge you, that you have contriv'd to take From Rome all season's 4 office, and to wind Yourself into a power tyrannical; For which, you are a traitor to the people.
Cor. How! Traitor?
Cor. The fires! the lowest hell fold in the people! Call me their traitor! — Thou injurious tribune! Within thine eyes sat twenty thousand deaths, In thy hands clutched as many millions, in Thy lying tongue both numbers, I would say, Thou liest, unto thee, with a voice as free As I do pray the gods.
Sicinius. Mark you this, people?
Caius. To the rock with him; to the rock with him! Sicinius. Peace.

We need not put new matter to his charge: What you have seen him do, and heard him speak, Beating your officers, cursing yourselves, Opposing laws with strokes, and here defying Those whose great power must try him; even this, So criminal, and in such capital kind, Deserves the extremest death.

But since he hath Serv'd well for Rome, — Self-righteousness.
Cor. What do you prate of service?
Brutus. I talk of that, that know it.
Cor. Men. Is this
The promise that you made your mother?
Caius. To the rock with him, to the rock with him!

I pray you, —

Cor. I'll know no further:
Let them pronounce the steep Tarpeian death, Vigilant exile, flaying: Pente to linger But with a grain a day, I would not buy

3 Malice.
4 Of long standing.
Their mercy at the price of one fair word;
Nor check my courage for what they can give,
To have't without saying, Good morrow.

Cor. For that he has
(As much as in him lies) from time to time
Envy'd against the people, seeking means
To pluck away their power; as now at last
Given hostile strokes, and that not in the presence
Of dreaded justice, but on the ministers
That do distribute it: In the name o' the people,
And in the power of us the tribunes, we,
Even from this instant, banish him our city;
In peril of precipitation
From off the rock Tarpeian, never more
To enter our Rome's gates: I the people's name,
I say, it shall be so.

CIt. It shall be so,
It shall be so; let him away: he's banish'd,
And so it shall be.

Com. Hear me, my masters, and my common friends; —
Sic. He's sentenc'd: no more hearing.

Com. Let me speak:
I have been consul, and can show from Rome,
Her enemies' marks upon me. I do love
My country's good, with a respect more tender,
More holy, and profound, than mine own life,
My dear wife's estimate,
than if I would Speak that —

Sic. We know your drift: Speak what?

Bru. There's no more to be said, but he is banish'd,
As enemy to the people, and his country:
It shall be so.

ACT IV.

SCENE I. — Before a Gate of the City.

Enter Coriolanus, Volumnia, Virginia, Menenius, Cominius, and several young Patricians.

Cor. Come leave your tears; a brief farewell: — the least
With many heads butts me away. — Nay, mother,
Where is your ancient courage? you were us'd
To say, extremity was the trier of spirits;
That common chances common men could bear;
That, when the sea was calm, all boats alike
Show'd mastership in floating: fortune's blows,
When most struck home, being gentle wounded,
Craves
A noble cunning: you were us'd to load me
With precepts, that would make invincible
The heart that conn'd them.

Vir. O heavens! O heavens!

Cor. Nay, I pr'ythee, woman, —

Vol. Now the red pestilence strike all trades in Rome,
And occupations perish!

Cor. What, what, what!
I shall be lov'd when I am lack'd! Nay, mother,
Resume that spirit, when you were wont to say,
If you had been the wife of Hercules,
Six of his labours you'd have done and sav'd
Your husband so much sweat. Cominius,

Droop not; adieu: — Farewell, my wife! my mother!

1 Showed hatred. 6 Not only. 7 For. 9 Value.
SCENE II. — A Street near the Gate.

Enter Sicinius, Brutus, and an Edile.

Sic. Bid them all home; he's gone, and we'll no further. —

The nobility are vex'd, who, we see, have sided In his behalf.

Brutus. Now we have shown our power,

Let us seem humbler after it is done,

Then when it was a doing.

Sic. Bid them home:

Say, their great enemy is gone, and they Stand in their ancient strength.

Brutus. Dismiss them home. [Exit Edile.

Enter Volumnia, Virgilia, and Menenius.

Here comes his mother.

Sic. Let's not meet her.

Brutus. Why?

Sic. They say, she's mad.

Brutus. They have ta'en note of us:

Keep on your way. Vol. O, you're well met: The hoarded plague — o' the gods Requite your love!

Men. Peace, peace; be not so loud. Vol. If that I could for weeping, you should hear, — Nay, and you shall hear some. — Will you be gone? [To Brutus. Virgilia. You shall stay too: [To Sicinius.] I would, I had the power To say so to my husband.

Sic. Are you mankind?

Vol. Ay, fool; is that a shame? — Note but this fool. — Was not a man my father? Hadst thou foxship To banish him that struck more blows for Rome, Than thou hast spoken words?

Sic. O blessed heavens!

Vol. More noble blows, than ever thou wise words; And for Rome's good. — I'll tell thee what; — Yet go: — Nay but thou shalt stay too: — I would my son Were in Arabia, and thy tribe before him, His good sword in his hand. Sic. What then? Virgilia. What then? He'd make an end of thy posterity.

Vol. Good man, the wounds that he does bear for Rome! Men. Come, come, peace.
SCENE V.

Rom. The day serves well for them now. I have heard it said, the fittest time to corrupt a man's wife, is when she's fallen out with her husband. Your noble Tullus Aufidius will appear well in these wars, his great opposer, Coriolanus, being now in no request of his country.

Vol. He cannot choose. I am most fortunate, thus accidentally to encounter you: You have ended my business, and I will merrily accompany you home.

Rom. I shall, between this and supper, tell you some strange things from Rome; all tending to the good of their adversaries. Have you an army ready, say you?

Vol. A most royal one: the centurions, and their charges, distinctly billeted, already in the entertainment, and to be on foot at an hour's warning.

Rom. I am joyful to hear of their readiness, and am the man, I think, that shall set them in present action. So, sir, heartily well met, and most glad of your company.

Vol. You take my part from me, sir; I have the most cause to be glad of yours.

Rom. Well, let us go together. [Exeunt.

Enter Coriolanus, in mean Apparel, disguised and muffled.

Cor. A goodly city is this Antium: City, 'Tis I that made thy widows; many an heir Of these fair edifices 'fore my wars. Have I heard groan, and drop: then know me not; Lest that thy wives with spits, and boys with stones, Enter a Citizen.

In puny battle slay me. — Save you, sir.

Cit. And you.

Cor. Direct me, if it be your will, Where great Aufidius lies: Is he in Antium? Cit. He is, and feasts the nobles of the state, At his house this night.

Cor. Which is his house, 'beseech you? Cit. This, here, before you.

Cor. Thank you, sir; farewell. [Exit Citizen.

O, world, thy slippery turns! Friends now fast sworn, Whose double bosoms seem to wear one heart, Whose hours, whose bed, whose meal, and exercise, Are still together, who twin, as 'twere, in love Unseparable, shall within this hour, On a dissension of a doit; break out To bitterest enmity: So, fallest foes, Whose passions and whose plots have broke their sleep To take the one the other, by some chance, Some trick not worth an egg, shall grow dear friends, And interjoin their issues. So with me: — My birth-place hate I, and my love's upon This enemy town. — I'll enter: if he slay me, He does fair justice: if he give me way, I'll do his country service. [Exit.

SCENE V. — A Hall in Aufidius's House.

Music within. Enter a Servant.

1 Serv. Wine, wine, wine! What service is here! I think our fellows are asleep. [Exit.

Enter another Servant.

Enter Coriolanus.

Cor. A goodly house: The feast smells well: but I Appear not like a guest.

Re-enter the first Servant.

1 Serv. What would you have, friend? Whence are you? Here's no place for you: Pray, go to the door.

Cor. I have deserved no better entertainment, In being Coriolanus.

Re-enter second Servant.

2 Serv. Whence are you, sir? Has the porter his eyes in his head, that he gives entrance to such companions? Pray, get you out.

Cor. Away!

2 Serv. Away? Get you away.

Cor. Now thou art troublesome.

1 Serv. Are you so brave? I'll have you talked with anon.

Enter a third Servant. The first meets him.

3 Serv. What fellow's this? 1 Serv. A strange one as ever I looked on: I cannot get him out o' the house; Pr'ythee, call my master to him.

3 Serv. What have you to do here, fellow? Pray you, avoid the house.

Cor. Let me but stand; I will not hurt your hearth.

3 Serv. What are you?

Cor. A gentleman.

3 Serv. A marvellous poor one.

Cor. True, so I am.

3 Serv. Pray you, poor gentleman, take up some other station; here's no place for you; pray you, avoid: come.

Cor. Follow your function, go! And batten on cold bits. [Pushes him away.

3 Serv. What, will you not? Pr'ythee, tell my master what a strange guest he has here.

2 Serv. And I shall. 3 Serv. Where dwellest thou. Cor. Under the canopy.

3 Serv. Under the canopy? Cor. Ay.

3 Serv. Where's that?

Cor. I' the city of kites and crows.

3 Serv. I' the city of kites and crows? — What an ass it is! — Then thou dwellest with daws too? Cor. No, I serve not thy master.

3 Serv. How, sir! Do you meddle with my master?

Cor. Thou pract'st, and pract'st; serve with thy treacher, hence! [Beats him away.

Enter Aufidius, and the second Servant.

Aufe. Where is this fellow? 2 Serv. Here, sir; I'd have beaten him like a dog, but for disturbing the lords within.

Cor. If, Tullus, [Unmuffling. Not yet thou know'st me, and seeing me, dost not Think me for the man I am, necessity Commands me name myself.

Autf. What is thy name?

Cor. A name unmusical to the Volscians' ears, And harsh in sound to thine.

Autf. Say, what's thy name?

Thou hast a grim appearance, and thy face Bears a command in't; though thy tackle's torn, Thou show'st a noble vessel: What's thy name? Cor. Prepare thy brow to frown: Know'st thou me yet?

Autf. I know thee not: — Thy name?

Cor. My name is Calus Marcius, who hath done To thee particularly, and to all the Volces, Great hurt and mischief; thereto witness may My surname, Coriolanus: The painful service, The extreme dangers, and the drops of blood Shed for my thankless country, are requited But with that surname; a good memory, And witness of the malice and displeasure Which thou shouldst bear me: only that name remains;

The cruelty and envy of the people, Permitted by our dastard nobles, who Have all forsook me, hath devou'd the rest; And suffer'd me by the voice of slaves to be Whop'd out of Rome. Now, this extremity Hath brought me to thy hearth; not out of hope, Mistake me not, to save my life; for if I had fear'd death, of all the men in the world I would have 'voided thee: but in mere spite, To be full quit of those thy banishers, Stand I before thee here. Then if thou hast A heart of wreak in thee, that will revenge Thine own particular wrongs, and stop those maims Of shame seen through thy country, speed thee straight,

And make my misery serve thy turn; so use it, That my revengeful services may prove As benefits to thee; for I will fight Against my canker'd country with the spleen Of all the under fiends. But if so be Thou dar'st not this, and that to prove more fortunes Thou art fit't, then, in a word, I also am Longer to live most weary, and present My throat to thee, and to thy ancient malice; Which not to cut, would show thee but a fool; Since I have ever follow'd thee with hate, Drawn tuns of blood out of thy country's breast, And cannot live but to thy shame, unless It be to do thee service.

Autf. O Marcius, Marcius, Each word thou hast spoke hath weed'd from my heart A root of ancient envy. If Jupiter Should from you cloud speak divine things, and say, 'Tis true; I'd not believe them more than thee, All name Marcius — O me twine Mine arms about that body, where against My grained ash an hundred times hath broke, And scar'd the moon with splinters! Here I clip The anvil of my sword; and do contest As hotly and as nobly with thy love, As ever in ambitious strength I did Contend against thy valour. Know thou first,

I love the maid I married; never man Sigh'd truer breath; but that I see thee here, Thou noble thing! more dances my rapt heart, Than when I first my wedded mistress saw Beside my threshold. Why, thou Mars! I tell thee, We have a power on foot; and I had purpose Once more to hew thy target from thy brawn, Or lose mine arm for't: Thou hast beat me out Twelve several times, and I have nightly since Dreamt of encounters 'twixt my self and thee; We have been down together in my sleep, Unbuckling helms, fisting each other's throat, And wak'd half dead with nothing. Worthy Marcius, Had we no quarrel else to Rome, but that Thou art hence banish'd, we would muster all From twelve to seventy; and, pouring war Into the bowels of ungrateful Rome, Like a bold flood o'er-beat. O, come, go in, And take our friendly senators by the hands; Who now are here, taking their leaves of me, Who am prepar'd against your territories, Though not for Rome itself.

Cor. You bless me, gods!

Autf. Therefore, most absolute sir, if thou wilt have The leading of thine own revenges, take The one half of my commission; and set down, — As best thou art experience'd, since thou know'st Thy country's strength and weakness, — thine own ways: Whether to knock against the gates of Rome, Or rudely visit them in parts remote, To fright them, ere destroy. But come in: Let me command thee first to those, that shall Say, yea, to thy desires. A thousand welcomes! And more a friend than e'er an enemy: Yet, Marcius, that was much. Your hand! Most welcome!

[Exeunt Coriolanus and Aufidius.

1 Serv. [Advancing.] Here's a strange alteration! 2 Serv. By my hand, I had thought to have strucken him with a cudgel; and yet my mind gave me, his clothes made a false report of him.

1 Serv. What an arm he has! He turned me about with his finger and his thumb, as one would set up a top.

2 Serv. Nay, I knew by his face that there was something in him: He had, sir, a kind of face, methought; — I cannot tell how to term it.

1 Serv. He had so: looking, as it were, — 'Would I were hanged, but I thought there was more in him than I could think.

2 Serv. So did I, I'll be sworn: He is simply the rarest man i' the world.

1 Serv. I think, he is: but a greater soldier than he, you wot? one.

2 Serv. Who? my master?

1 Serv. Nay, it's no matter for that.

2 Serv. Worth six of him.

1 Serv. Nay, not so neither; but I take him to be the greater soldier.

2 Serv. ' Faith, lord you, one cannot tell how to say that: for the defence of a town, our general is excellent.

1 Serv. Ay, and for an assault too.

Re-enter third Servant.

3 Serv. O, slaves, I can tell you news; news, you rascals.

1, 2 Serv. What, what, what? let's partake.

Arm. Full. Know.
Scene VI.

CORIOLANUS.

1 Serv. I would not be a Roman, of all nations; I had as lieve be a condemned man.
2 Serv. Wherefore? wherefore?
3 Serv. Why, here's he that was wont to thwack our general. — Caius Marcius.
1 Serv. Why do you say, thwack our general?
3 Serv. I do not say, thwack our general; but he was always good enough for him.
2 Serv. Come, we are fellows and friends: he was ever too hard for him; I have heard him say so himself.
3 Serv. He was too hard for him directly, to say the truth on't: before Coriolanus, he scorched him and notched him like a carbado.1
2 Serv. An he had been cannibally given, he might have broiled and eaten him too.
1 Serv. But, more of thy news?
3 Serv. Why, he is so made on here within, as if he were son and heir to Mars; set at upper end of the table: no question asked him by any of the senators, but they stand bald before him: Our general himself makes a mistress of him; sanctifies himself with his hand, and turns up the white o' the eye to his discourse. But the bottom of the news is, our general is cut the middle, and but one half of what he was yesterday; for the other has half by the entreaty and grant of the whole table. He'll go, he says, and soon2 the porter of Rome gates by the ears: He will mow down all before him, and leave his passage polled.3
2 Serv. And he's as like to do't, as any man I can imagine.
3 Serv. Do't? he will do't: For, look you, sir, he has as many friends as enemies: which friends, sir, as (it were,) durst not (look you, sir,) show themselves (as we term it) his friends, whilst he's in directitude.
1 Serv. Directitude! what's that?
3 Serv. But when they shall see, sir, his crest up again, and the man in blood, they will out of their burrows, like rabbits after rain, and revel all with him. 1 Serv. But when goes this forward?
3 Serv. To-morrow; to-day; presently. You shall have the drum struck up this afternoon: 'tis, as it were, a parcel of their feast, and to be executed ere they wipe their lips.
2 Serv. Why then shall we have a stirring world again. This peace is nothing, but to rust iron, increase tailors, and breed ballad-makers.
1 Serv. Let me have war, say I; it exceeds peace, as far as day does night; its sprightly, waking, audible, and full of vent.4 Peace is a very apoplexy, lethargy; mulled5, deaf, sleepy, insensible.
2 Serv. 'Tis so.
1 Serv. Ay, and it makes men hate one another.
3 Serv. Reason; because they then less need one another. The wars, for my money. I hope to see Romans as cheap as Volscians. They are rising, they are rising.
All. In, in, in, in.  [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. — Rome. A publick Place.

Enter Sicinius and Brutus.

Sic. We hear not of him, neither need we fear him: His remedies are tame 't the present peace And quietness o' the people, which before Were in wild hurry. Here do we make his friends

Blush, that the world goes well; who rather had, Though they themselves did suffer by't, behold Dissentious numbers pestering streets, than see Our tradesmen singing in their shops, and going About their functions friendly.

Enter Menenius.

Bru. We stood to't in good time. Is this Menenius?
Sic. 'Tis he, 'tis he: O, he is grown most kind Of late. — Hail, sir!
Men. Hail to you both!
Sic. Your Coriolanus, sir, is not much miss'd, But with his friends: the commonwealth doth stand; And so would do, were he more angry at it.
Men. All's well; and might have been much better, if He could have temporiz'd.
Sic. Where is he, hear you? Men. Nay, I hear nothing; his mother and his wife Hear nothing from him.

Enter three or four Citizens.

Cit. The gods preserve you both!
Sic. Good e'en, our neighbours.
Bru. Good e'en to you all, good e'en to you all.
1 Cit. Ourselves, our wives, and children, on our knees, Are bound to pray for you both.
Sic. Live and thrive!
Bru. Farewell, kind neighbours: we wish'd Coriolanus Had lov'd you as we did.
Sic. This is a happier and more comely time, Than when these fellows ran about the streets, Crying, Confusion.
Bru. Caius Marcius was A worthy officer 't the war; but insolent, Overcome with pride, ambitions past all thinking, Self-loving, —
Sic. And affecting one sole throne, Without assistance.6
Men. I think not so.
Sic. We should by this, to all our lamentation, If he had gone forth consul, found it so.
Bru. The gods have well prevented it, and Rome Sits safe and still without him.

Enter Ædile.

Æd. Worthy tribunes, There is a slave, whom we have put in prison, Reports, — the Volscus with two several powers Are enter'd in the Roman territories; And with the deepest malice of the war Destroy what lies before them.
Men. 'Tis Aufidius, Who, hearing of our Marcius' banishment, Thrusts forth his horns again into the world: Which were inshëll'd, when Marcius stood for Rome, And durst not once peep out.
Sic. Come, what talk you Of Marcius?
Bru. Go see this rumourer whipp'd. — It cannot be, The Volscus dare break with us.
Men. Cannot be!
We have record, that very well it can;
And three examples of the like have been Within my age. But reason with the fellow,
Before you punish him, where he heard this:
Lest you should chance to whip your information,
And beat the messenger who bids beware
Of what is to be dreaded.

Sic. I know this cannot be.

Bru. Not possible.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The nobles, in great earnestness, are going
All to the senate house: some news is come,
That turns their countenances.

Sic. 'Tis this slave;—
Go whip him 'fore the people's eyes:— his raising!
Nothing but his report!

Mess. Yes, worthy sir,
The slave's report is seconded; and more,
More fearful is deliver'd.

Sic. What more fearful?

Mess. It is spoke freely out of many mouths,
(How probable, I do not know,) that Marcius,
Join'd with Aufidius, leads a power 'gainst Rome;
And vows revenge as spacious, as between
The young'st and oldest thing.

Sic. This is most likely!

Bru. Rais'd only, that the weaker sort may wish
Good Marcius home again.

Sic. The very trick on't.

Men. This is unlikely:
He and Aufidius can no more stone?
Than violentest contrariety.

Enter another Messenger.

Mess. You are sent for to the senate:
A fearful army, led by Ca JULUS Marcius,
Associated with Aufidius, ranges
Upon our territories; and have already,
O'erborne their way, consum'd with fire, and took
What lay before them.

Enter COMINUS.

Com. O, you have made good work!

Men. What news? what news?

Com. You have holp to ravish your own daughters,
and
To melt the city leads upon your pates;
To see your wives dishonour'd to your noses;—

Men. What's the news? what's the news?

Com. Your temples burn'd in their cement; and
Your franchises, whereon you stood, confin'd
Into an augre's bore.

Men. Pray now, your news?—
You have made fair work, I fear me;— Pray, your news?

If Marcius should be join'd with Volscians,

Com. If!

He is their god; he leads them like a thing
Made by some other deity than nature,
That shapes man better: and they follow him,
Against us brats, with no less confidence,
Than boys pursuing summer butterflies,
Or butchers killing flies.

Men. You have made good work,
You, and your apron men; you that stood so much Upon the voice of occupation, and
The breath of garlick-eaters!

Com. He will shake
Your Rome about your ears.

* Unite.  # Mechanicks.

Men. As Hercules
Did shake down mellow fruit: You have made fair work!

Bru. But is this true, sir?

Com. Ay; and you'll look pale
Before you find it other. All the regions
Do smilingly revolt; and, who resist,
Are only mock'd for valiant ignorance,
And perish constant fools. Who is't can blame him?
Your enemies, and his, find something in him.

Men. We are all undone, unless
The noble man have mercy.

Com. Who shall ask it?

The tribunes cannot do for shame: the people
Deserve such pity of him, as the wolf
Does of the shepherds: for his best friends, if they Should say, Be good to Rome, they charg'd him even
As those should do that had deserv'd his hate,
And therein show'd like enemies.

Men. 'Tis true:
If he were putting to my house the brand
That should consume it, I have not the face
To say, Beseech you cease. — You have made fair hands,
You and your crafts! you have crafted fair!

Com. You have brought
A trembling upon Rome, such as was never
So incapable of help.

Tri. Say not, we brought it.

Men. How! Was it we? We lov'd him; but, like beasts,
And cowardly nobles, gave way to your clusters,
Who did hoot him out o' the city.

Com. But, I fear
They'll roar him in again. Tullus Aufidius
The second name of men, obeys his points
As if he were his officer: — Desperation
Is all the policy, strength, and defence,
That Rome can make against them.

Enter a Troop of Citizens.

Men. Here come the cluster.—
And is Aufidius with him? — You are they
That made the air unwholesome, when you cast
Your old and greasy caps, in hooting at Coriolanus' exile. Now he's coming;
And not a hair upon a soldier's head,
Which will not prove a whip; as many coxcombs,
As you threw caps up, will be tumble down,
And pay you for your voices. 'Tis no matter;
If he could burn us all into one coal,
We have deserv'd it.

Cit. 'Faith, we hear fearful news.

1 Cit. For mine own part,
When I said, banish him, I said, 'twas pity.

2 Cit. And so did I.

3 Cit. And so did I; and, to say the truth, so did very many of us: That we did, we did for the best: and though we willingly consented to his banishment, yet it was against our will.

Com. You are goodly things, you voices!

Men. You have made
Good work, you and your cry! — Shall us to the Capitol?

Com. O, ay; what else? [Exeunt COM and MEN.

Sic. Go, masters, get you home, be not dismay'd;
These are a side, that would be glad to have
This true, which they so seem to fear. Go home,
And show no sign of fear.

* Pack; alluding to a pack of hounds.
Act V. Scene I.

1 Cor. The gods be good to us! Come, masters, let's home. I ever said, we were 't the wrong, when we banished him.

2 Cor. So did we all. But come, let's home. [Exeunt Citizens.

Bru. I do not like this news.

Sic. Nor I.

Bru. Let's to the Capitol: — Would half my wealth Would buy this for a lie.

Sic. Pray, let us go. [Exeunt.

Scene VII. — A Camp; at a small distance from Rome.

Enter Aufidius, and his Lieutenant.

Auf. Do they still fly to the Roman?

Lieu. I do not know what witchcraft's in him; but Your soldiers use him as the grace 'fore meat, Their talk at table, and their thanks at end; And you are darken'd in this action, sir, Even by your own.

Auf. I cannot help it now; Unless, by using means, I lame the foot Of our design. He bears himself more prouder Even to my person, than I thought he would, When first I did embrace him: Yet his nature In that's no changing; and I must excuse What cannot be amended.

Lieu. Yet I wish, sir, (I mean for your particular,) you had not Join'd in commission with him: but either Had borne the action of yourself, or else To him had left it solely.

Auf. I understand thee well; and be thou sure, When he shall come to his account, he knows not What I can urge against him. Although it seems, And so he thinks, and is no less apparent To the vulgar eye, that he bears all things fairly, And shows good husbandry for the Volscian state;

Fights dragon-like, and does achieve as soon As draw his sword: yet he hath left undone That, which shall break his neck, or hazard mine, Whene'er we come to our account.

Lieu. Sir, I beseech you, think you he'll carry Rome?

Auf. All places yield to him ere he sits down; And the nobility of Rome are his: The senators, and patricians, love him too. The tribunes are no soldiers; and their people Will be as rash in the repeal, as hasty To expel him thence. I think, he'll be to Rome, As is the osprey to the fish, who takes it By sovereignty of nature. First he was A noble servant to them; but he could not Carry his honours even: whether 'twas pride, Which out of daily fortune ever taints The happy man; whether defect of judgment, To fail in the disposing of those chances Which he was lord of; or whether nature, Not to be other than one thing, not moving From the casque to the cushion, but commanding peace Even with the same austerity and garb As he control'd the war; but, one of these, (As he hath spices of them all, not all 5,) For I dare so far free him,) made him fear'd, So lated, and so banish'd: But he has a merit, To choke it in the utterance. So our virtues Lie in the interpretation of the time; And power, unto itself most commendable, Hath not a tomb so evident as a chair To extol what it hath done. One fire drives out one fire; one nail, one nail; Rights by rights fouler, strengths by strengths do fail. Come, let's away. When, Caius, Rome is thine, Thou art poor'st of all; then shortly art thou mine. [Exeunt.

Scene I. — Rome. A publick Place.

Enter Menenius, Cominius, Sicinius, Brutus, and others.

Men. No, I'll not go: you hear, what he hath said, Which was sometime his general; who lov'd him In a most dear particular. He call'd me father: But what o' that? Go, you that banish'd him, A mile before his tent fall down, and kneel The way unto his mercy: Nay, if he coy'd 1 To hear Cominius speak, I'll keep at home. Com. He would not seem to know me.

Men. Do you hear?

Com. Yet one time he did call me by my name: I urg'd our old acquaintance, and the drops That we have bled together. Coriolanus He would not answer to: forbid all names; He was a kind of nothing, titleless, Till he had forg'd himself a name i' the fire Of burning Rome.

Men. Why, so; you have made good work: A pair of tribunes that have rack'd for Rome, To make coals cheap 6; A noble memory!

Com. I minded him, how royal 'twas to pardon When it was less expected: He replied, It was a bare petition of a state To one whom they had punish'd.

Men. Could he say less?

Com. I offer'd to awaken his regard For his private friends: His answer to me was, He could not stay to pick them in a pile Of noisome, musty chaff: He said, 'twas folly, For one poor grain or two, to leave unburnt, And still to nose the offence.

Men. For one poor grain Or two? I am one of those; his mother, wife, His child, and this brave fellow too, we are the grains:

Men. Very well:

Com. I offer'd to awaken his regard For his private friends: His answer to me was, He could not stay to pick them in a pile Of noisome, musty chaff: He said, 'twas folly, For one poor grain or two, to leave unburnt, And still to nose the offence.

1 Condescended unwillingly.

2 An eagle that preys on fish.

3 Helmet.

4 The chair of civil authority.

5 Not all in their full extent.

6 i.e. Have managed so well for Rome as to get the town burnt to save the expense of coals.
CORIOLANUS.  Act V.

Men.  Good my friends,
If you have heard your general talk of Rome,
And of his friends there, it is lots 7 to blanks,
My name hath touch'd your ears: it is Menenius.
1 G.  Be it so; go back: the virtue of your name
Is not here passable.
Men.  I tell thee, fellow,
Thy general is my lover 8: I have been
The book of his good acts, whence men have read
His fame unparallel'd, haply, amplified;
For I have ever verified my friends,
(Of whom he's chief,) with all the size that verity
Would without lapsing suffer: nay, sometimes,
Like to a bowl upon a subtile 9 ground,
I have tumbled past the throw; and in his praise
Have almost stamp'd the leasing 1: Therefore, fellow,
I must have leave to pass.
1 G.  Sir, if you had told as many lies in his behalf, as you have uttered words in your own,
you should not pass here: no, though it were as virtuous to lie, as to live chastely.  Therefore, go back.
Men.  Pr'ythee, fellow, remember my name is Menenius, always factionary on the party of your general.
2 G.  Howsoever you have been his liar, (as you say, you have,) I am one that, telling true under him, must say, you cannot pass.  Therefore, go back.
Men.  Has he dined, can'tst thou tell for I would not speak with him till after dinner.
1 G.  You are a Roman, are you?
Men.  I am as thy general is.
1 G.  Then you should hate Rome, as he does.
Can you, when you have pushed out your gates the very defender of them, and, in a violent popular ignorance, given your enemy your shield, think to front his revenges with the easy groans of old women, the virginal palms of your daughters, or with the palsied intercession of such a decayed dotant 2 as you seem to be? Can you think to blow out the intended fire your city is ready to flame in, with such weak breath as this? No, you are deceived; therefore, back to Rome, and prepare for your execution: you are condemned, our general has sworn you out of reprieve and pardon.
Men.  Sirrah, if thy captain knew I were here, he would use me with estimation.
2 G.  Come, my captain knows you not.
Men.  I mean, thy general.
1 G.  My general cares not for you. Back, I say;
go, lest I let forth your half pint of blood: —
back, — that's the utmost of your having: — back.
Men.  Nay, but fellow, fellow. ———
Enter Coriolanus and Aufidius.
Cor.  What's the matter?
Men.  Now, you companion 3, I'll say an errand for you; you shall know now that I am in estimation; you shall perceive that a Jack 4 guardian cannot office me from my son Coriolanus: guess, but by my entertainment with him, if thou stand'st not 't the state of hanging, or of some death more long in spectatorship, and crueler in suffering; behold now presently, and swoon for what's to come upon thee. — The glorious gods sit hourly synod about thy particular prosperity, and love thee

Scene III.

Coriolanus.

no worse than thy old father Menenius does! O, my son! my son! thou art preparing fire for us; look thee, here’s water to quench it. I was hardly moved to come to thee; but being assured, none but myself could move thee, I have been blown out of your gates with sighs; and conjure thee to pardon Rome, and thy petitionary countrymen. The good gods assure thy wrath, and turn the dregs of it upon this varlet here; this, who, like a block, hath denied my access to the

Cor. Away!

Men. How! away?

Cor. Wife, mother, child, I know not. My affairs Are servantcd to others: Though I owe My revenge properly, my remission lies In Volscian breasts. That we have been familiar, Ingrate forgetfulness shall poison, rather Than pity note how much. — Therefore, begone. Mine ears against your suits are stronger, than Your gates against my force. Yet, for I lov’d thee, Take this along; I writ it for thy sake, And would have sent it. Another word, Menenius, I will not hear thee speak. — This man, Auffidius, Was my beloved in Rome: yet thou beholdst——

Auv. You keep a constant temper.

[Exeunt Coriol. and Auffid.]

1 G. Now, sir, is your name Menenius.

2 G. ’Tis a spell, you see, of much power: You know the way home again.

1 G. Do you hear how we are shent 6 for keeping your greatness back?

2 G. What cause, do you think, I have to swoon?

Men. I neither care for the world, nor your general: for such things as you, I can scarce think there is any, you are so slight. He that hath a will to die by himself, fears it not from another. Let your general do his worst. For you, be that you are, long; and your misery increase with your age! I say to you, as I was said to, Away! [Exit.

1 G. A noble fellow, I warrant him.

2 G. The worthy fellow is our general: He is the rock, the oak not to be wind-shaken. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. — The Tent of Coriolanus.

Enter Coriolanus, Auffidius, and others.

Cor. We will before the walls of Rome to-morrow Sgj down our host. — My partner in this action, You must report to the Volscian lords, how plainly I have borne in this business.

Auv. Only their ends You have respected; stopp’d you ears against The general suit of Rome; never admitted A private whisper, no, not with such friends That thought them sure of you.

Cor. This last old man, Whom with a crack’d heart I have sent to Rome, Loved me above the measure of a father; Nay, godded me, indeed. Their latest refuge Was to send him: for whose old love, I have (Though I show’d sourly to him,) once more offer’d The first conditions, which they did refuse, And cannot now accept, to grace him only, That thought he could do more; a very little I have yielded too: Fresh embassies, and suits,

6 Because.

7 Openly.

Nor from the state, nor private friends, hereafter Will I lend ear to. — Ha! what shout is this?

[Shout within.

Shall I be tempted to infringe my vow In the same time ’tis made? I will not.

Enter in mourning Habits, Virgilia, Volumnia, leading young Marcius, Valeria, and Attendants.

My wife comes foremost; then the honour’d mould Wherein this trunk was fram’d, and in her hand The grandchild to her blood. But, out, affection! All bond and privilege of nature, break! Let it be virtuous, to be obstinate. — What is that curst’y worth? or those doves’ eyes, Which can make gods forsworn? — I melt, and am not

Of stronger earth than others. — My mother bows; As if Olympus to a molehill should In supplication nod: and my young boy Hath an aspect of intercession, which Great nature cries, Deny not, — Let the Volces Plough Rome, and harrow Italy; I’ll never Be such a gosling to obey instinct; but stand, As if a man were author of himself, And knew no other kin.

Vir. My lord and husband!

Cor. These eyes are not the same I wore in Rome.

Vir. The sorrow that delivers us thus chang’d, Makes you think so.

Cor. Like a dull actor now, I have forgot my part, and I am out, Even to a full disgrace. Best of my flesh, Forgive my tyranny; but do not say, For that, Forgive our Romans. — O, a kiss Long as my exile, sweet as my revenge! Now by the jealous queen 8 of heaven, that kiss I carried from thee; and my true lip Hath virgin’d it e’er since. — You gods! I prate And the most noble mother of the world Leave unsaluted: Sink, my knee i’ the earth; [Kneels.

Of thy deep duty more impression show Than that of common sons.

Vol. O, stand up bless’d!

Whilst with no softer cushion than the flint, I kneel before thee; and improperly Show duty, as mistaken all the while Between the child and parent. [Kneels.

Cor. What is this? Your knees to me? to your corrected son? Then let the pebbles on the hungry beach Fillip the stars; then let the mutinous winds Strike the proud cedars ’gainst the fiery sun; Murdering impossibility, to make What cannot be, slight work.

Vol. Thou art my warrior; I help to frame thee. Do you know this lady?

Cor. The noble sister of Publicola, The moon of Rome; chaste as the icicle, That’s curdled by the frost from purest snow, And hangs on Dian’s temple: Dear Valeria! Vol. This is a poor epitome of yours, Which by the interpretation of full time May show like all yourself.

Cor. The god of soldiers, With the consent of supreme Jove, inform Thy thoughts with nobleness; that thou may’st prove 8 Juno.

X x
To shame unvulnerable, and stick i' the wars
Like a great sea-mark, standing every flaw;
And seeing those that eye thee!

Vol.

Cor. That's my brave boy.

Vol. Even he, your wife, this lady, and myself,
Are suitors to you.

Cor. I beseech you, peace:
Or, if you'd ask, remember this before;
The things, I have foistern to grant, may never
Be held by you denials. Do not bid me
Dismiss my soldiers, or capitate
Again with Rome's mechnicks: — Tell me not Wherein I seem unnatural: Desire not
To alay my rages and revenges, with
Your colder reasons.

Vol. O, no more, no more!
You have said, you will not grant us any thing;
For we have nothing else to ask, but that
Which you deny already: Yet we will ask;
That, if you fail in our request, the blame
May hang upon your hardness: therefore hear us.

Cor. Aufidius, and you Volscers, mark; for we'll Hear nought from Rome in private.— Your request?
Vol. Should we be silent and not speak, our raiment,
And state of bodies would bewray what life
We have led since thy exile. Think with thyself,
How more unfortunate than all living women
Are we come hither: since that thy sight, which Should
Make our eyes flow with joy, hearts dance with comforts,
Constrains them weep, and shake with fear and
sorrow;
Making the mother, wife, and child, to see
The son, the husband, and the father, tearing
His country's bowels out. And to poor we,
Thine enmity's most capital: thou barr'st us
Our prayers to the gods, which is a comfort
That all but we enjoy: For how can we,
Whose heart's are ours, the public pray,
Whereeto we are bound; together with thy victory,
Whereeto we are bound? Alack! or we must lose
The country, our dear nurse: or else thy person,
Our comfort in the country. We must find
An evident calumny, though we had
Our wish, which side should win: for either thou
Must, as a foreign recreant, be led
With manacles through our streets, or else
Triumphantly tread on thy country's ruin;
And bear the palm, for having bravely shed
Thy wife and children's blood. For myself, son,
I purpose not to wait on fortune, till
These wars determine: if I cannot persuade thee
Rather to show a noble grace to both parts,
Then seek the end of one, thou shalt not sooner
March to assault thy country, than to tread,
(Trust to't thou shalt not,) on thy mother's womb,
That brought thee to this world.

Vir. Ay, and on mine,
That brought you forth this boy, to keep your name
Living to time.

Boy. He shall not tread on me;
I'll run away, till I am bigger, but then I'll fight.

Cor. Not of a woman's tenderness to be,
Requires nor child nor woman's face to see.
I have sat too long. [Rising.

Vol. Nay, go not from us thus.

Act V.

If it were so, that our request did tend
To save the Romans, thereby to destroy
The Volscs whom you serve, you might condemn us,
As poisonous of your honour: No; our suit
Is, that you reconcile them: while the Volscs
May say, This mercy we have show'd: the Romans,
This we receiv'd; and each in either side
Give the all-hail to thee, and cry, Be bless'd
For making up this peace! Thou know'st, great son,
The end of war's uncertain; but this certain,
That, if thou conquer Rome, the benefit
Which thou shalt thereby reap, is such a name,
Whose repetition will be dogg'd with curses;
Whose chronicle thus writ, — The man was noble,
But with his last attempt, he sigh'd it out;
Destroy'd his country; and his name remains
To the ensuing age, abhor'd. Speak to me, son:
Thou hast affected the fine strains of honour,
To imitate the graces of the gods;
To tear with thunder the wide cheeks o' the air,
And yet to charge thy sulphur with a bolt
That should but rive an oak. Why dost not speak?
Think'st thou it honourable for a noble man
Still to remember wrongs? — Daughter, speak you:
He cares not for thy weeping. — Speak thou, boy:
Perhaps, thy childishness will move him more
Than can our reasons.— There is no man in the
More bound to his mother; yet here he lets me prate
Like one i' the stocks. Thou hast never in thy life
Show'd thy dear mother any courtesy;
When she (poor hen!) fond of no second brood,
Has cluck'd thee to the wars, and safely home,
Loaden with honour. Say, my request's unjust,
And spurn me back: But, if it be not so,
Thou art not honest; and the gods will plague thee,
That thou restrain'st from me the duty, which
To a mother's part belongs. — He turns away:
Down, ladies; let us shame him with our knees.
To his surname Coriolanus longs more pride,
Than pity to our prayers. — Down; an end:
This is the world; — So we will return to Rome
And die among our neighbours. — Nay, behold us:
This boy, that cannot tell what he would have,
But kneels, and holds up hands, for fellowship,
Does reason our petition with more strength
Than thou hast to deny t. — Come, let us go;
This fellow had a Volscian to his mother;
His wife is in Corioli, and his child
Like him by chance: — Yet give us our despatch:
I am hush'd until our city be aire,
And then I'll speak a little.

Cor. O mother, mother! [Holding VOLUMNIA by the hands, silent.
What have you done? Behold, the gods do ope,
The gods look down, and this unnatural scene
They laugh at. O my mother, mother! O!
You have won a happy victory to Rome:
But, for your son, — Believe it, O, believe it,
Most dangerously you have with him prevail'd,
If not most mortal to him. But, let it come:
Aufidius, though I cannot make true wars,
I'll frame convenient peace. Now, good Aufidius,
Were you in my stead, say, would you have heard
A mother less? or granted less, Aufidius?

Auf. I was mov'd withal.

Cor. I dare be sworn, you were:
And, sir, it is no little thing, to make
Mine eyes to sweat compassion. But, good sir,
What peace you'll make, advise me: For my part,
I'll not to Rome, I'll back with you; and pray you, Stand to me in this cause.—O mother! wife!

Auy. I am glad thou hast set thy mercy and thy honour At difference in thee: out of that I'll work Myself a former fortune. [Aside.

[The Ladies make signs to Coriolanus.

Cor. [Auy. by and by;

[To Volumnia, Virgilia, &c.

But we will drink together; and you shall bear A better witness back than words, which we, On like conditions, will have counter-seal'd.

Come, enter with us. Ladies, you deserve To have a temple built you: all the swords In Italy, and her confederate arms, Could not have made this peace. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—Rome. A publick Place.

Enter Menenius and Sicinius.

Men. See you yond' coign o' the Capitol: yond' corner stone?

Sic. Why, what of that?

Men. If it be possible for you to displace it with your little finger, there is some hope the ladies of Rome, especially his mother, may prevail with him. But I say, there is no hope in't; our throats are sentenced, and stay upon execution.

Sic. Is't possible, that so short a time can alter the condition of a man?

Men. There is difference between a grub, and a butterfly; yet your butterfly was a grub. This Marcius is grown from man to dragon: he has wings; he's more than a creeping thing.

Sic. He loved his mother dearly.

Men. So did he me: and he no more remembers his mother now, than an eight year old horse. The tartness of his face sours ripe grapes. When he walks, he moves like an engine, and the ground shrinks before his treading. He is able to pierce a corset with his eye; talks like a knell, and his hum is a battery. He sits in his state, as a thing made for Alexander. What he bids be done, is finished with his bidding. He wants nothing of a god but eternity, and a heaven to throne in.

Sic. Yes, mercy, if you report him truly.

Men. I paint him in the character. Mark what mercy his mother shall bring from him: There is no more mercy in him, than there is milk in a male tiger; that shall our poor city find: and all this is 'long of you.

Sic. The gods be good unto us!

Men. No, in such a case the gods will not be good unto us. When we banished him, we respected not them: and, he returning to break our necks, they respect not us.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Sir, if you'd save your life, fly to your house; The plebeians have got your fellow-tribune, And hate him up and down; all swearing, if The Roman ladies bring not comfort home, They'll give him death by inches.

Enter another Messenger.

Sic. What's the news?

Mess. Good news, good news;—The ladies have prevail'd,

The Volces are dislodg'd, and Marcius gone:

A merrier day did never yet greet Rome,
No, not the expulsion of the Tarquins.

Sir. Friend, Art thou certain this is true? is it most certain?

Mess. As certain as I know the sun is fire:
Where have you lurk'd, that you make doubt of it? Ne'er through an arch so hurried the blown tide, As the recomforted through the gates. Why, hark and you.

[Trumpets and hautboys sounded, and Drums beaten, all together. Shouting also within.

The trumpets, hautboys, psalters, and fifes, Tabors, and cymbals, and the shouting Romans, Make the sun dance. Hark you! [Shouting again.

Men. This is good news: I will go meet the ladies. This Volumnia Is worth of consuls, senators, patricians, A city full; of tribunes, such as you, A sea and land full: You have prayed well to-day; This morning, for ten thousand of your throats I'd not have given a doit. Hark, how they joy!

Sic. First, the gods bless you for their tidings; next,
Accept my thankfulness.

Mess. Sir, we have all Great cause to give great thanks.

Sic. They are near the city?

Mess. Almost at point to enter.

Sic. We will meet them, And help the joy. [Going.

Enter the Ladies, accompanied by Senators, Patricians, and People. They pass over the Stage.

1 Sen. Behold our patroness, the life of Rome: Call all your tribes together, praise the gods, And make triumphant fires; stew flowers before them: Unshout the noise that banish'd Marcius, Repeal him with the welcome of his mother; Cry,—Welcome, ladies, welcome!—

All. Welcome, ladies! Welcome! [A Flourish with Drums and Trumpets. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Antium. A publick Place.

Enter Tullius Aufidius, with Attendants.

Auy. Go tell the lords of the city, I am here: Deliver them this paper: having read it, Bid them repair to the market-place; where I, Even in theirs and in the commons' ears, Will vouche the truth of it. Him I accuse, The city ports by this hath enter'd, and Intends to appear before the people, hoping To purge himself with words: Despatch.

[Exeunt Attendants.

Enter three or four Conspirators of Aufidius' Faction.

Most welcome! 1 Con. How is it with our general?

Auy. Even so, As with a man by his own alms empaison'd, And with his charity slain.

2 Con. Most noble sir, If you do hold the same intent wherein You wish'd us parties, we'll deliver you Of your great danger.

Auy. Sir, I cannot tell; We must proceed, as we do find the people.

1 Con.

[Recall.

6 Gates.
Enter Coriolanus, with Drums and Colours; a Crowd of Citizens with him.

Cor. Ha! lords! I am return'd your soldier;
No more infected with my country's love,
Than when I parted hence, but still subsisting
Under your great command. You are to know,
That prosperously I have attempted, and
With bloody passage, led your wars, even to The gates of Rome. Our spoils we have brought home,
Do more than counterpoise, a full third part,
The charges of the action. We have made peace,
With no less honour to the Antiates,
Than shame to the Romans: And we here deliver,
Subscirib'd by the consuls and patricians,
Together with the seal o' the senate, what
We have compounded on.

Ausc. Read it not, noble lords;
But tell the traitor, in the highest degree
He hath abus'd your powers.

Cor. Traitor! — How now?
Ausc. Ay, traitor Marcius.
Cor. Marcius! Marcius!
Ausc. Ay, Marcius, Caius Marcius; Dost thou think
I'll grace thee with that robbery, thy stol'n name
Coriolanus in Corioli? —
You lords and heads of the state, perfidiously
He has betray'd your business, and given up,
For certain drops of salt, your city Rome,
(I say, your city,) to his wife and mother:
Breaking his oath and resolution, like
A twist of rotten silk; never admitting
Council o' the war; but at his nurse's tears
He whin'd and roar'd away your victory;
That pages blush'd at him, and men of heart
Look'd wondering each at other.

Cor. Hear'st thou, Mars?
Ausc. Name not the god, thou boy of tears,
Cor. Ha!
Ausc. No more.
Cor. Measureless liar, thou hast made my heart
Too great for what contains it. Boy! O slave! —
Pardon me, lords, 'tis the first time that ever
I was forc'd to scold. Your judgments, my grave
lords,
Must give this cur the lie: and his own notion (Who wears my stripes impress'd on him; that must bear
My beating to his grave;) shall join to thrust
The lie unto him.

1 Lord. Peace, both, and hear me speak.
Cor. Cut me to pieces, Volces; men and lads,
Stain all your edges on me. — Boy! False hound!
If you have writ your annals true, 'tis there,
That like an eagle in a dove-cote, I
Flutter'd your Volces in Corioli;
Alone I did it. — Boy!

Ausc. Why, noble lords, Will you be put in mind of his blind fortune,
Which was your shame, by this unholy braggart,
'Fore your own eyes and ears?

Con. Let him die for't. [Several speak at once.
Cit. [Speaking promiscuously.] Tear him to pieces, do it presently. He killed my son; — my daughter; — He killed my cousin Marcus; — He killed my father. —

2 Lord. Peace, ho; — no outrage; — peace.
The man is noble, and his name folds in
This orb o' the earth. His last offence to us

3 Con. The people will remain uncertain, whilst 'Twist you there's difference; but the fall of either
Makes the survivor heir of all.

Ausc. I know it;
And my pretext to strike at him admits
A good construction. I raised him, and I pawn'd
Mine honour for his truth: Who being so heighten'd,
He water'd his new plants with dews of flattery,
Seducing so my friends: and, to this end,
He bow'd his nature, never known before
But to be rough, unwavering, and free.

3 Con. Sir, his stoutness,
When he did stand for consul, which he lost
By lack of stooping, —

Ausc. That I would have spoke of:
Being banish'd for't, he came unto my hearth;
Presented to my knife his throat: I took him
Made him joint servant with me; gave him way
In all his own desires; nay, let him choose
Out of my files, his projects to accomplish,
My best and freshest men; serv'd his designs
In mine own person; holp to reap the fame,
Which he did end all his; and took some pride
To do myself this wrong: till, at the last,
I seem'd his follower, not partner; and
He wag'd me with his countenance; as if I had been mercenary.

1 Con. So he did, my lord;
The army marvell'd at it. And, in the last,
When he had carried Rome; and that we look'd
For no less spoil, than glory, —

Ausc. There was it; —
For which my sinews shall be stretch'd upon him.
At a few drops of women's rheum, which are
As cheap as lies, he sold the blood and labour
Of our great action; Therefore shall he die,
And I'll renew me in his fall. But, hark!

[Drums and Trumpets sound, with great
Shouts of the People.

1 Con. Your native town you enter'd like a post,
And had no welcomes home; but he returns,
Splitting the air with noise.

2 Con. And patient fools,
Whose children he hath slain, their base throats tear,
With giving him glory.

3 Con. Therefore, at your vantage,
Ere he express himself, or move the people
With what he would say, let him feel your sword,
Which we will second. When he lies along,
After your way his tale pronounce'd shall bury
His reasons with his body.

Ausc. Say no more;
Here come the lords.

Enter the Lords of the City.

Lords. You are most welcome home.

Ausc. I have not deserv'd it,
But, worthy lords, have you with heed perus'd
What I have written to you?

Lords. We have.

1 Lord. And grieve to hear it.

What faults he made before the last, I think,
Might have found easy fines: but there to end,
Where he was to begin: and give away
The benefit of our levies, answering us
With our own charge; making a treaty, where
There was a yielding; This admits no excuse.

Ausc. He approaches, you shall hear him.

7 Thought me rewarded with good looks. 8 Tears.
9 Rewarding us with our own expenses.
Shall have judicious hearing. — Stand, Aufidius, And trouble not the peace.
Cor. O, that I had him, With six Aufidiuses, or more, his tribe, To use my lawful sword!
Auf. Insolent villain!
Con. Kill, kill, kill, kill him.
[Aufidius and the Conspirators draw, and kill Coriolanus, who falls, and Aufidius stands on him.
Lords. Hold, hold, hold, hold.
Auf. My noble masters, hear me speak.
1 Lord. O Tullus, —
2 Lord. Thou hast done a deed whereat valour will weep.
3 Lord. Tread not upon him. — Masters all, be quiet;
Put up your swords.
Auf. My lords, when you shall know (as in this rage,) Provok’d by him, you cannot,) the great danger
Which this man’s life did owe you, you’ll rejoice
That he is thus cut off. Please it your honours
To call me to your senate, I’ll deliver Myself your loyal servant, or endure Your heaviest censure.
1 Lord. Bear from hence his body, And mourn you for him: let him be regarded As the most noble corse that ever herald Did follow to his urn.
2 Lord. His own impatience Takes from Aufidius a great part of blame. Let’s make the best of it.
Auf. My rage is gone, And I am struck with sorrow. — Take him up: Help, three o’ the chiefest soldiers: I’ll be one. — Beat thou the drum, that it speak mournfully: Trail your steel pikes. — Though in this city he Hath widow’d and unchilded many a one, Which to this hour bewail the injury, Yet he shall have a noble memory. —
Assist. [Exit, bearing the body of Coriolanus.
A dead March sounded.

SCENE, during a great Part of the Play, at Rome: afterwards at Sardis; and near Philippi.
SCENE I.—Rome. A Street.

Enter Flavius, Marullus, and a Rabble of Citizens.

Flau. Hence; home, you idle creatures, get you home;
Is this a holiday? What! know you not,
Being mechanical, you ought not walk,
Upon a labouring day, without the sign
Of your profession?—Speak, what trade art thou?
1 Cü. Why, sir, a carpenter.
Mar. Where is thy leather apron and thy rule?
What dost thou with thy best apparel on?—
You, sir; what trade are you?
2 Cü. Truly, sir, in respect of a fine workman, I am but, as you would say, a cobbler.
2 Cü. A trade, sir, that, I hope, I may use with a safe conscience; which is, indeed, sir, a mender of bad soles.
Mar. What trade, thou knave; thou naughty knave, what trade?
2 Cü. Nay, I beseech you, sir, be not out with me: yet, if you be out, sir, I can mend you.
Mar. What meanest thou by that? Mend me, thou saucy fellow!
2 Cü. Why, sir, cobble you.
Flau. Thou art a cobbler, art thou?
? Cü. Truly, sir, all that I live by is, with the awl:

I meddle with no tradesman's matters, but with awl.
I am, indeed, sir, a surgeon to old shoes; when they are in great danger, I recover them. As proper men as ever trod upon neat's leather, have gone upon my handy-work.

Flau. But wherefore art not in thy shop to-day?
Why dost thou lead these men about the streets?
2 Cü. Truly, sir, to wear out their shoes, to get myself into more work. But, indeed, sir, we make holiday, to see Caesar, and to rejoice in his triumph.
Mar. Wherefore rejoice? What conquest brings he home?

What tributaries follow him to Rome,
To grace in captive bonds his chariot wheels?
You blocks, you stones, you worse than senseless things!
O, you hard hearts, you cruel men of Rome,
Knew you not Pompey? Many a time and oft,
Have you climb'd up to walls and battlements,
To towers and windows, yea, to chimney-tops,
Your infants in your arms, and there have sat
The live-long day, with patient expectation,
To see great Pompey pass the streets of Rome:
And when you saw his chariot but appear
Have you not made an universal shout,
That Tyber trembled underneath her banks,
To hear the replication of your sounds,
Made in her concave shores?
And do you now put on your best attire?
Act I. Scene II. JULIUS CAESAR. 679

And do you now cull out a holiday?
And do you now strew flowers in his way,
That comes in triumph over Pompey's blood?
Begone;
Run to your houses, fall upon your knees,
Pray to the gods to intermit the plague.
That needs must light on this ingratitude.
Flavius. Go, go, good countrymen, and for this fault,
Assemble all the poor men of your sort; 1
Draw them to Tyber banks, and weep your tears
Into the channel, till the lowest stream
Do kiss the most exalted shores of all.
[Exeunt Citizens.
See, who're their basest metal be not mov'd;
They vanish tongue-tied in their guiltiness.
Go you down that way towards the Capitol;
This way will I: Disrobe the images,
If you do find them deck'd with ceremonies.
Mark. May we do so?
You know, it is the feast of Lupercal.
Flavius. It is no matter; let no images
Be hung with Caesar's trophies. I'll about,
And drive away the vulgar from the streets:
So do you too, where you perceive them thick.
These growing feathers pluck'd from Caesar's wing,
Will make him fly an ordinary pitch;
Who else would soar above the view of men,
And keep us all in servile fearfulness. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. — A public Place.

Enter, in procession, with music, Caesar: Antony, for the Course; Calphurnia, Portia, Decius, Cicero, Brutus, Cassius, and Casca; a great crowd following, among them a Soothsayer.

Cassius. Calphurnia,
Casca. Peace, ho! Caesar speaks.
Casca.
Catiline. Here, my lord.
Casca. Stand you directly in Antonius' way,
When he doth run his course. — Antony.
Antony. Caesar, my lord.
Casca. Forget not, in your speed, Antonius,
To touch Calphurnia: for our elders say,
The barren, touched in this holy chase,
Shake off their sterile curse.
Antony. I shall remember:
When Caesar says, Do this, it is perform'd.
Casca. Set on; and leave no ceremony out. [Music.
Sooth. Caesar.
Casca. Ha! who calls?
Casca. Bid every noise be still: — Peace yet again.
[Music.

Casca. Who is it in the press? that calls on me?
I hear a tongue, shriller than all the music,
Cry, Caesar: Speak; Caesar is turn'd to hear.
Sooth. Beware the ides of March.
Casca. What man is that?
Brutus. A soothsayer, bids you beware the ides of March.
Casca. Set him before me, let me see his face.
Casca. Fellow, come from the throng: Look upon Caesar.
Casca. What say'st thou to me now? Speak once again.
Sooth. Beware the ides of March.
Casca. He is a dreamer; let us leave him; — pass.
[Senet. 4 Exeunt all but Brutus and Cassius.

1 Crowd. 2 A ceremony observed at the feast of Lupercalia.

Cassius. Will you go see the order of the course?
Brutus. Not I.
Cassius. I pray you do.
Brutus. I am not gamsome: I do lack some part
Of that quick spirit that is in Antony,
Let me not hinder, Cassius, your desires: I'll leave you,
Cassius. Brutus, I do observe you now of late:
I have not from your eyes that gentleness,
And show of love, as I was wont to have:
You hear too stubborn and too strange a hand
Over your friend that loves you.
Brutus. Cassius,
Be not deceiv'd: if I have veil'd my look,
I turn the trouble of my countenance
Merely upon myself. Vexed I am,
Of late, with passions of some difference,
Conceptions only proper to myself,
Which give some soil, perhaps, to my behaviours;
But let not therefore my good friends be grieved;
(Among which number, Cassius, be you one;) Nor construe any further my neglect,
Than that poor Brutus, with himself at war,
Forgets the shows of love to other men.
Cassius. Then, Brutus, I have much mistook your passion; 4
By means whereof, this breast of mine hath buried
Thoughts of great value, worthy cogitations.
Tell me, good Brutus, can you see your face?
Brutus. No, Cassius; for the eye sees not itself,
But by reflection, by some other things.
Cassius. 'Tis just:
And it is very much lamented, Brutus,
That you have no such mirrors, as will turn
Your hidden worthiness into your eye,
That you might see your shadow. I have heard,
Where many of the best respect in Rome,
(Except immortal Caesar,) speaking of Brutus,
And groaning underneath this age's yoke,
Have wish'd that noble Brutus had his eyes.
Brutus. Into what dangers would you lead me, Cassius,
That you would have me seek into myself
For that which is not in me?
Cassius. Therefore, good Brutus, be prepar'd to hear:
And since you know you cannot see yourself
So well as by reflection, I, your glass,
Will modestly discover to yourself
That of yourself which you yet know not of.
And be not jealous of me, gentle Brutus:
Were I a common laughor, or did use
To stale 6 with ordinary oaths my love
To every new protestor; if you know
That I do fawn on men, and hug them hard,
And after scandal them; or if you know
That I profess myself in banqueting
To all the rout, then hold me dangerous.
[Flourish, and Shot.
Brutus. What means this shouting? I do fear, the people
Choose Caesar for their king.
Cassius. Ay, do you fear it?
Then must I think you would not have it so.
Brutus. I would not, Cassius; yet I love him well: —
But wherefore do you hold me here so long?
What is it that you would impart to me?
If it be sought to the general good,
Set honour in one eye, and death in the other,
And I will look on both indifferently:
5 The nature of your feelings. 6 Make common.
JULIUS CAESAR.

ACT I.

For, let the gods so speed me, as I love
The name of honour more than I fear death.

Caes. I know that virtue to be in you, Brutus,
As well as I do know your outward favour.
Well, honour is the subject of my story.—
I cannot tell, what you and other men
Think of this life; but, for my single self,
I had as lief not be, as live to be
In awe of such a thing as myself.
I was born free as Caesar; so were you:
We both have fed as well: and we can both Endure the winter's cold, as well as he.
For once, upon a raw and gusty day,
The troubled Tyber chafing with her shores,
Cesar said to me, Did'st thou, Cassius, now,
Leap in with me into this angry flood,
And swim to wonder point? Upon the word,
Accorded as I was, I plunged in,
And bade him follow: so, indeed, he did.
The torrent roared; and we did buffet it
With lusty sinews; throwing it aside
And stemming it with hearts of controversy.
But ere we could arrive the point propos'd,
Cesar cry'd, Help me, Cassius, or I sink.
I, as Enneas, our great ancestor,
Did from the flames of Troy upon his shoulder
The child Anchises bear, so did the waves of Tyber
Did I the tired Caesar: And this man
Is now become a god; and Cassius is
A wretched creature, and must bend his body,
If Caesar carelessly but nod on him.
He had a fever when he was in Spain,
And, when the fit was on him, I did mark
How he did shake: 'tis true, this god did shake:
His coward lips did dit from their colour fly;
And that same eye, whose bend doth awe the world,
Did lose his lustre: I did hear him groan:
Ay, and that tongue of his, that bade the Romans
Mark him, and write his speeches in their books,
Alas! it cried, Give me some drink, Titius,
As a sick girl. Ye gods, it doth amaze me,
A man of such a fickle temper? should
So get the start of the majestick world,
And bear the palm alone. [Shout. Flourish.

Bru. Another general shout! I do believe, that these applauses are
For some new honours that are heap'd on Caesar.

Cas. Why, man, he doth bestride the narrow world,
Like a Colossus; and we petty men
Walk under his huge legs, and peep about
To find ourselves dishonourable grave.
Men at some time are masters of their fate;
The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars,
But in ourselves, that we are underlings.
Brutus and Caesar: What should be in that Caesar?
Why should that name be sounded more than yours?
Write them together, yours is as fair a name;
Sound them, it doth become the mouth as well;
Weigh them, it is as heavy; conjure with them,
Brutus will start a spirit as soon as Caesar. [Shout.
Now in the names of all the gods at once,
Upon what meat doth this our Caesar feed,
That he is grown so great? Age, thou art sham'd:
Rome, thou hast lost the breed of noble bloods!
When went there by an age, since the great flood,
But it was fam'd with more than with one man.
When could they say, till now, that talk'd of Rome,
That her wide walks encompass'd but one man?
Now is it Rome indeed, and room enough,

7 Temperament, constitution.

When there is in it but one only man.
O! you and I have heard our fathers say,
There was a Brutus once, that would have brook'd
The eternal devil to keep his state in Rome,
As easily as a king.

Bru. That you do love me, I am nothing jealous;
What you would work me to, I have some a.m. 8
How I have thought of this, and of these times,
I shall recount hereafter; for this present,
I would not, so with love I might entreat you,
Be any further mov'd. What you have said,
I will consider; what you have to say,
I will with patience hear: and find a time
Both meet your charmer: and answer, such high things.
Till then, my noble friend, chuse 9 upon this;
Brutus had rather be a villager,
Than to represent himself a son of Rome
Under these hard conditions as this time
Is like to lay upon us.

Cas. I am glad that my weak words
Have struck but thus much show of fire from Brutus.

Re-enter Caesar, and his Train.

Bru. The games are done, and Caesar is returning.

Cas. As they pass by, pluck Cassa by the sleeve;
And he will, after his sour fashion, tell you
What ha. proceeded, worthy note, to-day.

Bru. I will do so: — But look you, Cassius,
The angry spot doth glow on Caesar's brow,
And all the rest look like a chidden train:
Calphurnia's cheek is pale; and Cicero
Looks with such ferret 1 and such fiery eyes,
As we have seen him in the Capitol,
Being cross'd in conference by some senators.

Cas. Cassa will tell us what the matter is.

Cas. Antonius.

Ant. Caesar.

Cas. Let me have men about me that are fat;
Sleek-headed men, and such as sleep o' nights:
Yond' Cassius has a lean and hungry look;
He thinks too much. Such men are dangerous.

Ant. Fear him not, Caesar, he's not dangerous;
He is a noble Roman, and well given.

Cas. Would he were fatter: — But I fear him not:
Yet if my name were liable to fear,
I do not know the man I should avoid
So soon as that spare Cassius. He reads much;
He is a great observer, and he looks
Quite through the deeds of men: he loves no plays,
As thou dost, Antony; he hears no musick:
Seldom he smiles; and smiles in such a sort,
As if he mock'd himself, and scorn'd his spirit
That could be mov'd to smile at any thing.
Such men as he be never at heart's ease,
While's they behold a greater than themselves;
And therefore are they very dangerous.
I rather tell thee what is to be fear'd,
Than what I fear, for always I am Caesar.

[Exeunt CAESAR and his Train. CASCA stays behind.

Casca. You pull'd me by the cloak; would you speak with me?

Bru. Ay, Cassa; tell us what hath chanc'd to-day,
That Caesar looks so sad.

Casca. Why, you were with him, were you not?

Bru. I should not then ask Cassa what hath chanc'd.
Casca. Why, there was a crown offer'd him: and being offer'd him, he put it by with the back of his hand, thus; and then the people fell a shouting.

Bru. What was the second noise for?

Casca. Why, for that too.

Casca. They shouted thrice; What was the last cry for?

Casca. Why, for that too.

Casca. Ay, marry, was't, and he put it by thrice, every time gentler than other; and at every putting by, mine honest neighbours shouted.

Casca. Who offer'd him the crown?

Casca. Why, Antony.

Bru. Tell us the manner of it, gentle Casca.

Casca. I can as well be hanged as tell the manner of it: it was mere foolery. I did not mark it. I saw Mark Antony offer him a crown; — yet 'twas not a crown neither; 'twas one of these coronets; — and, as I told you, he put it by once; but, for all that, to my thinking, he would fain have had it. Then he offer'd it to him again; then he put it by again: but, to my thinking, he was very loath to lay his fingers off it. And then he offer'd it the third time; he put it the third time by: and still as he refused it, the rabbolment hooted, and clapped their chopped hands, and threw up their night-caps, and uttered such a deal of foul breath because Caesar refused the crown, that it had almost choked Caesar; for he swooned, and fell down at it: And for mine own part, I durst not laugh, for fear of opening my lips, and receiving the bad air.

Cas. But soft, I pray you: What did Caesar say?

Casca. He fell down in the market-place, and foamed at mouth, and was speechless.

Bru. 'Tis very like: he hath the falling-sickness.

Cas. No, Caesar hath it not; but you, and I, And honest Casca, we have the falling-sickness.

Casca. I know not what you mean by that; but, I am sure, Caesar fell down. If the rag-rag people did not clap him, and hiss him, according as he pleased, and displeased them, as they used to do the players in the theatre, I am no true man.

Bru. What said he, when he came unto himself?

Casca. Marry, before he fell down, when he perceived the common herd was glad he refused the crown, he pluck'd me ope his doublet, and offer'd them his throat to cut. — An I had been a man of any occupation, if I would not have taken him at a word, I would I might go to hell among the rogues: — and so he fell. When he came to himself again, he said, If he had done, or said any thing amiss, he desired their wishes to think it was his infirmity. Three or four wenches, where I stood, cried, Alas, good soul! — and forgave him with all their hearts: But there's no heed to be taken of them: if Caesar had stabbed their mothers, they would have done no less.

Bru. And after that, he came, thus sad, away?

Casca. Ay.

Cas. Did Cicero say any thing?

Casca. Ay, he spoke Greek.

Cas. To what effect?

Casca. Nay, an you that, I'll ne'er look you i' the face again: But those that understood him, smiled at one another, and shook their heads; but, for mine own part, it was Greek to me. I could tell you more news too; Marullus and Flavius, for pulling scarfs off Caesar's images, are put to silence.

Fare you well. There was more foolery yet, if I could remember it.

Cas. Will you sup with me to-night, Casca?

Casca. No, I am promised forth.

Cas. Will you dine with me to-morrow?

Casca. Ay, if I be alive, and your mind hold, and your dinner worth the eating.

Cas. Good; I will expect you.

Casca. Do so; Farewell, both. [Exit Casca.

Bru. What a blunt fellow is this known to be; He was quick mettle, when he went to school.

Cas. So is he now, in execution Of any bold or noble enterprise, However he puts on this tardy form, This rudeness is a sauce to his good wit, Which gives men stomach to digest his words With better appetite.

Bru. And so it is. For this time I will leave you: To-morrow, if you please to speak with me, I will come home to you: or, if you will, Come home to me, and I will wait for you.

Cas. I will do so: — till then, think of the world. [Exit Brutus.

Well, Brutus, thou art noble; yet, I see, Thy honourable metal may be wrought From that it is dispos'd of: Therefore 'tis meet That noble minds keep ever with their likes: For who so firm, that cannot be seduc'd? Caesar doth bear me hard; but he loves Brutus: If I were Brutus now, and he were Cassius, He should not humour3 me. I will this night, In several hands, in at his windows throw, As if they came from several citizens, Writings all tending to the great opinion That Rome holds of his name; wherein obscurely Caesar's ambition shall be glanced at: And, after this, let Caesar seat him sure; For we will shake him, or worse days endure.

[Exit.

SCENE III. — A Street.

Thunder and Lightning. Enter, from opposite sides,

Cicero, with his Sword drawn, and Cicero.

Cic. Good even, Casca: Brought you Caesar home?

Why are you breathless? and why stare you so?

Casca. Are not you mov'd, when all the sway of earth

Shakes, like a thing unfirm? O Cicero, I have seen tempests, when the scolding winds Have riv'd the knotty oaks; and I have seen The ambitious ocean swell, and rage, and foam; To be exalted with the threatening clouds: But never till to-night, never till now, Did I go through a tempest dropping fire. Either there is a civil strife in heaven; Or else the world, too saucy with the gods, Incenses them to send destruction.

Cic. Why, saw you any thing more wonderful?

Casca. A common slave (you know him well by sight)

Held up his left hand, which did flame, and burn Like twenty torches joint'd; and yet his hand, Not sensible of fire, remain'd unscorch'd. Besides (I have not since put up my sword), Against the Capitol I met a bawd, Who glar'd upon me, and went surly by, Without annoying me: And there were drawn Upon a heap a hundred ghastly women, Transformed with their fear; who swore, they saw

3 Disposed to.

2 Cajole.
Men, all on fire, walk up and down the streets.
And, yesterday, the bird of night did sit,
Even at noon-day, upon the market-place,
Hooting, and shrieking. When these prodigies
Do so conjointly meet, let not men say,
These are their reasons, — They are natural;
For, I believe they are portentous things
Unto the climate that they point upon.
Cic. Indeed, it is a strange-disposed time:
But men may construe things after their fashion,
Clean from the purpose of the things themselves.
Comes Caesar to the Capitol to-morrow?
Cas. He doth; for he did bid Antonius
Send word to you, he would be there to-morrow.
Cic. Good night then, Casca; this disturbed sky
Is not to walk in.
Casca. Farewell, Cicero.

Enter Cassius.

Cas. Who's there?
Casca. A Roman.
Cas. Casca, by your voice.
Cas. Your ear is good. Cassius, what night is this?
Cas. A very pleasing night to honest men.
Casca. Whoever knew the heavens menace so?
Cas. Those, that have known the earth so full of faults.
For my part, I have walk'd about the streets,
Submitting me unto the perilous night;
And, thus unbraced, Casca, as you see,
Have bar'd my bosom to the thunder-storm:
And, when the cross blue lightning seem'd to open
The breast of heaven, I did present myself
Even in the aim and very flash of it.
Casca. But wherefore did you so much tempt the heavens?
It is the part of men to fear and tremble,
When the most mighty gods, by tokens, send
Such dreadful heralds to astonish us.
Cas. You are dull, Casca; and those sparks of life
That should be in a Roman, you do want,
Or else you use not: You look pale and gaze,
And put on fear, and cast yourself in wonder,
To see the strange impatience of the heavens:
But if you would consider the true cause,
Why all these fires, why all these gliding ghosts,
Why birds and beasts, from quality and kind;
Why old men, fools, and children calculate;
Why all these things change, from their ordinance,
Their natures and pre-formed faculties,
To monstrous quality; why, you shall find,
That heaven hath infused them with these spirits,
To make them instruments of fear, and warning,
Unto some monstrous state. Now could I, Casca,
Name to thee a man most like this dreadful night;
That thunders, lightens, opens graves, and roars
As doth the lion in the Capitol:
A man no mightier than thyself, or me,
In personal action; yet prodigious grown,
And fearful, as these strange eruptions are.
Casca. 'Tis Caesar that you mean: Is it not, Cassius?
Cas. Let it be, who it is: for Romans now
Have thewes 8 and limbs like to their ancestors;
But woe the while! our fathers' minds are dead,
And we are govern'd with our mothers' spirits;
Our yoke and sufferings show us womanish.
Casca. Indeed, they say, the senators to-morrow
4 Why they deviate from quality and nature. 5 Muscles.
Mean to establish Caesar as a king:
And he shall wear his crown by sea and land,
In every place, save here in Italy.
Cas. I know where I will wear this dagger then:
Cassius from bondage will deliver Cassius:
Therein, ye gods, you make the weak most strong;
Therein, ye gods, you tyrants do defeat:
Nor stony tower, nor walls of beaten brass,
Nor airless dungeon, nor strong links of iron,
Can be retentive to the strength of spirit;
But life, being weary of these worldly bars,
Never lacks power to dismiss itself.
If I know this, know all the world besides,
That part of tyranny, that I do bear,
I can shake off at pleasure.
Casca. So can I:
So every bondman in his own hand bears
The power to cancel his captivity.
Cas. And why should Caesar be a tyrant then:
Poor man! I know, he would not be a wolf,
But that he sees the Romans are but sheep:
He were no lion, were not Romans kinds. 6
Those that with haste will make a mighty fire,
Begin it with weak straws: What trash is Rome,
What rubbish, and what offal, when it serves
For the base matter to illuminate
So vital things Cassius? But, O grief!
Where hast thou led me? I, perhaps, speak this Before a willing bondman: then I know
My answer must be made: But I am arm'd,
And dangers are to me indifferent.
Casca. You speak to Casca; and to such a man,
That is no fleeting tell-tale. Hold my hand:
Be factious for redress of all these griefs;
And I will set this foot of mine as far,
As who goes farthest.

Enter Cinna.

Cinna. Stand close awhile, for here comes one in haste.
Cas. 'Tis Cinna, I do know him by his gait;
He is a friend. — Cinna, where haste you so?
Cin. To find out you: Who's that? Metellus Cimber?
Cas. No, it is Cassius; one incorporate
To our attempts. Am I not staid for, Cinna?
Cin. I am glad on't. What a fearful night is this?
There's two or three of us have seen strange sights.
Cas. Am I not staid for, Cinna? Tell me. Yes
You are. O, Cassius, if you could but win
The noble Brutus to our party.
Cas. Be you content: good Cinna, take this paper,
And look you lay it in the pretor's chair,
Where Brutus may but find it; and throw this
In at his window; set this up with wax
Upon old Brutus' statue: all this done,
Repair to Pompey's porch, where you shall find us.
Is Decius Brutus, and Trebonius, there?

6 Deer.
7 Appears.
Act II. Scene I.

JULIUS CAESAR.

Luc. I will, sir.

Bru. The exhalations, whizzing in the air, Give so much light, that I may read by them. [Opens the letter, and reads.

Brutus, thou sleep'st; awake, and see thyself: Shall Rome, &c. Speak, strike, redress! Brutus, thou sleep'st; awake: Such instigations have been often dropp'd Where I have took them up. Shall Rome, &c. Thus, must I piece it out; Shall Rome stand under one man's awe? What! Rome?

My ancestors did from the streets of Rome The Tarquin drive, when he was call'd a king. Speak, strike, redress! - Am I entreated then To speak, and strike? O Rome! I make thee promises, If the redress will follow, thou receivest Thy full petition at the hand of Brutus.

Re-enter Lucius.

Luc. Sir, March has wasted fourteen days. [Knock within.

Bru. 'Tis good. Go to the gate; somebody knocks. [Exit Lucius. Since Cassius first did whet me against Caesar, I have not slept. Between the acting of a dreadful thing And the first motion, all the interim is Like a phantasma; or a hideous dream: The genius, and the mortal instruments, Are then in council; and the state of man, Like to a little kingdom, suffers then The nature of an insurrection.

Re-enter Lucius.

Luc. Sir, 'tis your brother Cassius at the door, Who doth desire to see you.

Bru. Is he alone?

Luc. No, sir, there are more with him.

Bru. No, sir; their hats are pluck'd about their ears, And half their faces buried in their cloaks, That by no means I may discover them By any mark of favour. [Exit Lucius. They are the faction. O conspiracy! Sham'st thou to show thy dangerous brow by night, When evils are most free? O, then, by day, Where wilt thou find a cavern dark enough To mask thy monstrous visage? Seek none, conspiracy;

2 Vision. 3 Countenance.
Hide it in smiles, and affability:
For if thou path, thy native semblance on,
Not Erebuss itself were dim enough
To hide thee from perception.

Enter CASSIUS, CASCA, DECIUS, CINNA, METELLUS CIMBER, and TREBONIUS.

Cass. I think we are too bold upon your rest:
Good morrow, Brutus! Do we trouble you?
Brut. I have been up this hour; awake all night.
Know I these men, that come along with you?
Cas. Yes, every man of them; and no man here,
But honours you: and every one doth wish,
You had but that opinion of yourself,
Which every noble Roman bears of you.
This is Trebonius.

Brut. He is welcome hither.

Cas. This, Decius Brutus.
Brut. He is welcome too.

Cas. This, Casca; this, Cinna;
And this Metellus Cimber.

Brut. They are all welcome.
What watchful cares do interpose themselves
Betwixt your eyes and night?

Cas. Shall I entreat a word? [They whisper.

Dec. Here lies the east: Doth not the day break here?

Casca. No.

Cas. O, pardon, sir, it doth; and yon grey lines,
That fret the clouds, are messengers of day.

Casca. You shall confess, that you are both deceiv'd.

Here, as I point my sword, the sun arises;
Which is a great way growing on the south,
Weighing the youthful season of the year.
Some two months hence, up higher toward the north
He first presents his fire; and the high east
Stands, as the Capitol, directly here.

Brut. Give me your hands all over, one by one.

Cas. And let us swear our resolution.

Brut. No, not an oath: If not the face of men,
The sufferance of our souls, the time's abuse, —
If we be motives weak, break off betimes,
And every man hence to his idle bed;
So let high-sighted tyranny range on,
Till each man drop by lottery. But if these,
As I am sure they do, bear fire enough
To kindle cowards, and to steel with valour
The melting spirits of women; then, countrymen,
What need we any spur, but our own cause,
To prick us to redress? what other bond,
Than secret Romans, that have spoke the word,
And will not palter? and what other oath,
Than honesty to honesty engag'd,
That this shall be, or we will fall for it?
Swear priests, and cowards, and men cautious,
Old feebel witnesses, and such suffering souls
That welcome wrongs; unto bad causes swear
Such creatures as men doubt; but do not stain
The even virtue of our enterprise,
Nor the insuppressible mettle of our spirits,
To think, that, or our cause, or our performance,
Did need an oath; when every drop of blood,
That every Roman bears, and nobly bears,
Is guilty of a several bastardy,
If he do break the smallest particle
Of any promise that hath pass'd from him.

Cas. But what of Cicero? Shall we sound him?
I think, he will stand very strong with us.

Casca. Let us not leave him out.

Cin. No, by no means.

Met. O, let us have him; for his silver hairs
Will purchase us a good opinion,
And buy men's voices to commend our deeds;
It shall be said, his judgment ruleth our hands:
Our youths, and wildness, shall no whit appear,
But all be buried in his gravity.

Brut. O, name him not; let us not break with him;
For he will never follow any thing
That other men begin.

Cas. Then leave him out.

Casca. Indeed, he is not fit.

Dec. Shall no man else be touch'd but only Cassar?

Cas. Decius, well urg'd; — I think it is not meet,
Mark Antony, so well belov'd of Cassar,
Should outlive Cassar. We shall find of him
A shrewd contriver; and, you know, his means,
If he improves them, may well stretch so far,
As to annoy us all: which to prevent,
Let Antony, and Cassar, fall together.

Brut. Our course will seem too bloody, Cajius Caius,
To cut the head off, and then hack the limbs;
Like wath in death, and envy afterwards:
For Antony is but a limb of Cassar.

Let us be sacrificers, but no butchers, Cajius.
We all stand up against the spirit of Cassar;
And in the spirit of men there is no blood;
O, that we then could come by Cassar's spirit,
And not dismember Cassar! But, alas,
Cassar must bleed for it! And, gentle friends,
Let's kill him boldly, but not wrathfully;
Let's carve him as a dish fit for the gods,
Not hew him as a carcase fit for hounds:
And let our hearts, as subtle masters do,
Stir up their servants to an act of rage,
And after seem to chide them. This shall make
Our purpose necessary, and not envious:
Which so appearing to the common eyes,
We shall be call'd purgers, not murderers.
And for Mark Antony, think not of him;
For he can do no more than Cassar's arm,
When Cassar's head is off.

Cas. Yet I do fear him:
For in the ingraved love he bears to Cassar:

Brut. Alas, good Cajius, do not think of him:
If he love Cassar, all that he can do
Is to himself; take thought, and die for Cassar;
And that were much he should; for he is given
To sports, to wildness, and much company.

Treb. There is no fear in him, let him not die;
For he will live, and laugh at this hereafter.

[Clock strikes.

Brut. Peace, count the clock.

Cas. The clock hath stricken three.

Treb. 'Tis time to part.

But it is doubtful yet,

Cas. Wher Cassar will come forth to-day, or no;
For he is superstitious grown of late;
Quite from the main opinion he held once
Of fantasy, of dreams, and ceremonies;
It may be, these apparent prodigies,
The unaccustomed'rd terror of this night,
And the persuasion of his augurers,
May hold him from the Capitol to-day.

Dec. Never fear that: If he be so resolv'd,
I can o'erway him; for he loves to hear,

9 Let us not break the matter to him.

Malice.
That unicorns may be betray'd with trees,
And bears with glasses, elephants with holes,
Lions with toils, and men with flatterers.
But, when I tell him, he hates flatterers,
He says, he does; being then most flattered.
Let me work:
For I can give his humour the true bent;
And I will bring him to the Capitol.
Cas. Nay, we will all of us be there to fetch him.
Bru. By the eighth hour: Is that the uttermost?
Cas. Be that the uttermost, and fail not then.
Met. Caius Ligarius doth bear Caesar hard,
Who rated him for speaking well of Pompejy;
I wonder, none of you have thought of him.
Bru. Now, good Metellus, go along by him:—
He loves me well, and I have given him reasons;
Send him but hither, and I'll fashion him.
Cas. The morning comes upon us: We'll leave you,
And, friends, disperse yourselves: but all remember
What you have said, and show yourselves true
Romans.
Bru. Good gentlemen, look fresh and merrily;
Let not our looks put on our purposes;
But bear it as our Roman actors do,
With untird spirits, and formal constancy:
And so, good morrow to you every one.
[Exeunt all but Brutus.
Boy! Lucius!— Fast asleep? It is no matter;
Enjoy the heavy-dew of slumber;
Thou hast no figures, nor no fantasies,
Which busy care draws in the brains of men;
Therefore thou sleepst so sound.

Enter Portia.
Por. Brutus, my lord?
Bru. Portia, what mean you? Wherefore rise you now?
It is not for your health thus to commit
Your weak condition to the raw-cold morning.
Por. Nor for yours neither. You have urgently,
Stole from my bed: And yesternight, at supper,
You suddenly arose, and walk'd about,
Musing, and sighing, with your arms across:
And when I ask'd you what the matter was,
You star'd upon me with ungentle looks:
I urg'd you further; then you scratch'd your head,
And too impatiently stamp'd with your foot:
Yet I insist'd, yet you answer'd not;
But with an angry wakerture of your hand,
Gave sign for me to leave you: So I did;
Fearing to strengthen that impatience,
Which seem'd too much enkindled; and, withal,
Hoping it was but an effect of humour,
Which sometime hath his hour with every man,
It will not let you eat, nor talk, nor sleep;
And, could it work so much upon your shape
As it hath much prevail'd on your condition:—
I should not know you, Brutus. Dear my lord,
Make me acquainted with your cause of grief.
Bru. I am not well in health, and that is all.
Por. Brutus is wise, and were he not in health,
He would embrace the means to come by it.
Bru. Why, so I do:— good Portia, go to bed.
Por. Is Brutus sick? and is it physical
To walk unbraced, and suck up the humours
Of the dank 5 morning? What, is Brutus sick?
And will he steal out of his wholesome bed,
To dare the vile contagion of the night?
And tempt the rheumy 6 air unpurged
To add unto his sickness? No, my Brutus;
You have some sick offence within your mind,
Which, by the right and virtue of my place,
I ought to know of: And, upon my knees,
I charm you, by my once commend'd beauty,
By all your vows of love, and that great vow
Which did incorporate and make us one,
That you unfold to me, yourself, your half,
Why you are heavy; and what men to-night
Have had resort to you: for here have been
Some six or seven, who did hide their faces
Even from darkness.
Bru. Kneel not, gentle Portia.
Por. I should not need, if you were gentle Brutus.
Within the bond of marriage, tell me, Brutus,
Is it excepted, I should know no secrets
That appertain to you? Am I myself,
But, as it were, in sort, or limitation;
To keep with you at meals, comfort your bed,
And talk to you sometimes? Dwell I but in the suburbs
Of your good pleasure? If it be no more,
Portia is Brutus' harlot, not his wife.
Bru. You are my true and honourable wife;
As dear to me, as are the ruddy drops
That visit my sad heart.
Por. If this were true, then should I know this secret.
I grant, I am a woman, but, withal,
A woman that lord Brutus took to wife:
I grant, I am a woman; but, withal,
A woman well reputed; Cato's daughter.
Think you, I am no stronger than my sex,
Being so father'd, and so husbanded?
Tell me your counsels, I will not disclose them:
I have made strong proof of my constancy,
Giving myself a voluntary wound
Here, in the thigh: Can I bear that with patience,
And not my husband's secrets?
Bru. O ye gods,
Render me worthy of this noble wife!
[Knocking within.
Hark, hark! one knocks: Portia, go in a while;
And by and by thy bosom shall partake
The secrets of my heart.
All my engagements I will construe to thee,
All the charactery of my sad brows:—
Leave me with haste.

Enter Lucius and Ligarius.
Lucius, who is that, knocks?
Luc. Here is a sick man, that would speak with you.
Bru. Caius Ligarius, that Metellus speake of. — Boy, stand aside. — Caius Ligarius! how?
Lig. Vouchsafe good morrow from a feeble tongue.
Bru. O, what a time have you chose out, brave
Caius,
To wear a kerchief? 'Would you were not sick!
Lig. I am not sick, if Brutus have in hand
Any exploit worthy the name of honour.
Bru. Such an exploit have I in hand, Ligarius,
Had you a healthful ear to hear of it.
Lig. By all the gods that Romans bow before,
I here discard my sickness. Soul of Rome!
Brave son, deriv'd from honourable loins!
Thou, like an exorcist, hast conjur'd up

3] By his house.
3] Shapes created by imagination
5] Damp.
My mortified spirits. Now bid me run,
And I will strive with things impossible;
Yes, get the better of them all! What's to do?

Brutus. A piece of work, that will make sick men whole.

Ligarius. But are not some whole, that we must make sick?

Brutus. That must we also. What it is, my Caius,
I shall unfold to thee, as we are going;
To whom it must be done.

Ligarius. Set on your foot;
And, with a heart new fir’d, I follow you,
To do I know not what: but it sufficeth,
That Brutus leads me on.

Brutus. Follow me then. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. — A Room in Caesar’s Palace.

Thunder and Lightning. Enter Caesar, in his Night-gown.

Cæsar. Nor heaven, nor earth, have been at peace to-night:
Thrice hath Calphurnia in her sleep cried out,
Help, ho! they murder Cæsar! Who’s within?

Enter a Servant.

Servant. My lord?

Cæsar. Go bid the priests do present sacrifice,
And bring me their opinions of success.

Servant. I will, my lord. [Exit.

Enter Calphurnia.

Cæsar. What mean you, Cæsar? Think you to walk forth?
You shall not stir out of your house to-day.

Cæsar. Cæsar shall forth; The things that threaten’d me,
Ne’er look’d but on my back; when they shall see
The face of Cæsar, they are vanquish’d.

Cæsar. Cæsar, I never stood on ceremonies?,
Yet now they fright me. There is one within,
Besides the things that we have heard and seen,
Recounts most horrid sights seen by the watch.
A lioness hath whelped in the streets;
And graves have yawn’d, and yielded up their dead;
Fierce fiery warriors fight upon the clouds,
In ranks, and squadrons, and right form of war,
Which drizzled blood upon the Capitol:
The noise of battle hurtled in the air,
Horses did neigh, and dying men did groan;
And ghosts did shrick, and squeal about the streets.
O Cæsar! these things are beyond all use,
And I do fear them.

Cæsar. What can be avoided,
Whose end is purpos’d by the mighty gods?
Yet Cæsar shall go forth: for these predictions
Are to the world in general, as to Cæsar.

Cæsar. When beggars die, there are no comets seen;
The heavens themselves blaze forth the death of princes.

Cæsar. Cowards die many times before their deaths;
The valiant never taste of death but once.
Of all the wonders that I yet have heard,
It seems to me most strange that men should fear;
Seeing that death, a necessary end,
Will come, when it will come.

Re-enter a Servant.

Servant. What say the augurers?

Servant. They would not have you to stir forth to-day.

Plucking the entrails of an offering forth,
They could not find a heart within the beast.

Cæsar. The gods do this in shame of cowardice;
Cæsar should be a beast without a heart,
If he should stay at home to-day for fear.

No, Cæsar shall not: Danger knows full well,
That Cæsar is more dangerous than he.

We were two lions litter’d in one day,
And I the elder and more terrible;
And Cæsar shall go forth.

Cæsar. Alas, my lord, Your wisdom is consum’d in confidence.
Do not go forth to-day: Call it my fear,
That keeps you in the house, and not your own.

Cæsar. We’ll send Mark Antony to the senate-house;
And he shall say, you are not well to-day:
Let me, upon my knee, prevail in this.

Cæsar. Mark Antony shall say, I am not well;
And, for thy humour, I will stay at home.

Enter Decius.

Here’s Decius Brutus, he shall tell them so.

Decius. Caesar, all hail! Good morrow, worthy Caesar;
I come to fetch you to the senate-house.

Cæsar. And you are come in very happy time,
To bear my greeting to the senators,
And tell them, that I will not come to-day:
Cannot, is false; and that I dare not, falser;
I will not come to-day: Tell them so, Decius.

Cæsar. No, he is sick.

Cæsar. Shall Caesar send a lie?
Have I in conquest stretch’d mine arm so far,
To be afraid to tell grey-beards the truth?

Decius. Go tell them, Caesar will not come.

Decius. Most mighty Caesar, let me know some cause,
Lest I be laugh’d at, when I tell them so.

Cæsar. The cause is in my will, I will not come;
That is enough to satisfy the senate.

But, for your private satisfaction,
Because I love you, I will let you know.
Calphurnia here, my wife, stays me at home:
She dreamt to-night she saw my statues,
Which like a fountain with a hundred spouts,
Did run pure blood; and many lusty Romans
Came smiling, and did bathe their hands in it.
And these does she apply for warnings, portents,
And evils imminent; and on her knee
Hath begg’d, that I will stay at home to-day.

Decius. This dream is all amiss interpreted;
It was a vision, fair and fortunate:
Your statute spouting blood in many pipes,
In which so many smiling Romans bath’d,
Signifies that from you great Rome shall suck
Reviving blood; and that great men shall press
For tinctures, stains, relics, and cognizance.
This be Calphurnia’s dream is signified.

Cæsar. And this way have you well expounded it.
Decius. I have, when you have heard what I can say;
And know it now; The senate have concluded
To give, this day, a crown to mighty Caesar.
If you shall send them word, you will not come,
Their minds may change. Besides, it were a mock
Apt to be rendered, for some one to say,
Break up the senate till another time,
When Caesar’s wife shall meet with better dreams.
If Caesar hide himself, shall they not whisper,
Lo, Caesar is afraid?
Pardon me, Caesar; for my dear, dear love
To your proceeding bids me tell you this;
And reason to my love is liable.
SCENE III.

Cæs. How foolish do your fears seem now, Calphurnia? I am ashamed I did yield to them. — Give me my robe, for I will go: —

Enter Publius, Brutus, Ligarius, Metellus, Casca, Trebonius, and Cinna.

And look where Publius is come to fetch me.

Pub. Good morrow, Caesar.

Cæs. Welcome, Publius. — What, Brutus, are you stirr’d so early too? — Good morrow, Casca. — Caius Ligarius, Caesar was never so much your enemy, As that sameague which hath made you lean. — What is’t o’clock?

Brut. Caesar, ’tis strucken eight.

Cæs. I thank you for your pains and courtesy.

Enter Antony.

See! Antony, that revels long o’ nights, Is notwithstanding up: —

Good morrow, Antony. Ant. So to most noble Caesar.

Cæs. Bid them prepare within: — I am to blame to be thus waited for. —

Now, Cinna: — Now Metellus: — What Trebonius!

I have an hour’s talk in store for you; Remember that you call on me to-day: — Be near me, that I may remember you.

Tre. Caesar, I will: — and so near will I be,

That your best friends shall wish I had been further.

Cæs. Good friends, go in, and taste some wine with me; And we, like friends, will straightway go together.

Brut. That every like is not the same, O Caesar, The heart of Brutus yearns 1 to think upon!

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV. — Another Part of the same Street, before the House of Brutus.

Enter Portia and Lucius.

Por. I pr’ythee, boy, run to the senate-house; Stay not to answer me, but get thee gone: Why dost thou stay?

Luc. To know my errand, madam.

Por. I would have had thee there, and here again, Ere I can tell thee what thou shouldst do there. — O constancy, be strong upon my side! Set a huge mountain ’tween my heart and tongue! I have a man’s mind, but a woman’s might. How hard it is for women to keep counsel! Art thou here yet?

Luc. Madam, what should I do? Run to the Capitol, and nothing else?

And so return to you, and nothing else?

Por. Yes, bring me word, boy, if thy lord look well, For he went sickly forth: — And take good note, What Caesar doth, what suitors press to him. Hark, boy! what noise is that?

Luc. I hear none, madam.

Por. Pr’ythee, listen well; I heard a bustling rumour, like a fray, And the wind brings it from the Capitol.

Luc. Sooth 2, madam, I hear nothing.

Enter Soothsayer.

Por. Come hither, fellow: Which way hast thou been?

Sooth. At mine own house, good lady.

Por. What is’t o’clock?

Sooth. About the ninth hour, lady.

Por. Is Caesar yet gone to the Capitol?

Sooth. Madam, not yet; I go to take my stand, To see him pass on to the Capitol?

Por. Thou hast some suit to Caesar, hast thou not?

Sooth. That I have, lady: if it will please Caesar To be so good to Caesar, as to hear me, I shall beseech him to befriend himself.

Por. Why, know’st thou any harm’s intended towards him?

Sooth. None that I know will be, much that I fear may chance.

Good-morrow to you. Here the street is narrow: The throng that follows Caesar at the heels, Of senators, of praetors, common suitors, Will crowd a feeble man almost to death: I’ll get me to a place more void, and there Speak to great Caesar as he comes along. [Exit.

Por. I must go in. — Ah me! how weak a thing The heart of woman is! O Brutus! The heaven speed thee in thy enterprise! Sure, the boy heard me: — Brutus hath a suit, That Caesar will not grant. — O, I grow faint: — Run, Lucius, and commend me to my lord; Say, I am merry: come to me again, And bring me word what he doth say to thee.

[Exeunt

1 Grieves.

2 Envy.
ACT III.

SCENE I.—The Capitol; the Senate sitting.

A CROWD OF PEOPLE in the Street leading to the Capitol: among them ARTEMIDORUS and the Soothsayer. Flourish. Enter CAESAR, BRUTUS, CASSIUS, CASCA, DECIMUS, METELLUS, TREBONIUS, CINNA, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, POPILIUS, PUBLIUS, and others.

CAESAR. The ides of March are come.

Sooth. Ay, Caesar; but not gone.

Art. Hail, Caesar! Read this schedule.

Dec. Trebonius doth desire you to o'er-read, At your best leisure, this his humble suit.

Art. O Caesar, read mine first; for mine's a suit That touches Caesar nearer: Read it, great Caesar.

CAESAR. What touches us ourselves, shall be last serv'd.

Art. Delay not, Caesar; read it instantly.

CAESAR. What is the fellow mad?

Pub. Sirrah, give place.

CAESAR. What, urge you your petitions in the street? Come to the Capitol.

CAESAR enters the Capitol, the rest following.

All the Senators rise.

Pop. I wish your enterprise to-day may thrive.

CAESAR. What enterprise, Popilius?

Pop. Fare you well.

[Advances to Caesar.

Bru. What said Popilius Lena?

CAESAR. He wish'd to-day our enterprise might thrive. I fear, our purpose is discover'd.

Bru. Look, how he makes to Caesar; Mark him.

CAESAR. Casca, be sudden, for we fear prevention. — Brutus, what shall be done? If this be known, Cassius or Caesar never shall turn back; For I will slay myself.

Bru. Cassius, be constant:

Popilius Lena speaks not of our purposes; For, look, he smiles, and Caesar doth not change.

CAESAR. Trebonius knows his time; for look you, Brutus,

He draws Mark Antony out of the way.

[Excitement Antony and Trebonius. Caesar and the Senators take their Seats.

Dec. Where is Metellus Cimber? Let him go, And presently prefer his suit to Caesar.

Bru. He is address'd 4; press near, and second him.

Cin. Casca, you are the first that rears your hand.

Cas. Are we all ready? what is now amiss, That Caesar, and his senate must redress?

Met. Most high, most mighty, and most puissant Caesar,

Metellus Cimber throws before thy seat An humble heart: —

[Kneeling.

CAESAR. I must prevent thee, Cimber.

These couplings, and these lowly courtesies, Might fire the blood of ordinary men, And turn pre-ordination, and first decree, Into the law of children. Be not fond, To think that Caesar bears such rebel blood, That will be thaw'd from the true quality With that which melteth fools; I mean, sweet words, Low-crooked court-spies, and base spaniel fawning. Thy brother by decree is banished; If thou dost bend, and pray, and fawn for him, 4 Ready.

I spurn thee like a cur out of my way. Know, Caesar doth not wrong; nor without cause Will he be satisfied.

Met. Is there no voice more worthy than my own, To sound more sweetly in great Caesar's ear, For the repealing of my banish'd brother?

Bru. I kiss thy hand, but not in flattery, Caesar; Desiring thee, that Publius Cimber may Have an immediate freedom of repeal.

CAESAR. What, Brutus?

Cas. Pardon, Caesar; Caesar, pardon As low as to thy foot doth Cassius fall, To beg enfranchisement for Publius Cimber.

CAESAR. I could be well mov'd, if I were as you; If I could pray to move, prayers would move me: But I am constant as the northern star, Of whose true fix'd and resting quality, There is no fellow in the firmament.

The skies are painted with unnumber'd sparks, They are all fire, and every one doth shine; But there's but one in all doth hold his place: So, in the world; 'tis furnish'd well with men, And men are flesh and blood, and apprehensive; Yet, in the number, I do know but one That unassailable holds on his rank, Unshak'd of motion: and, that I am he: Let me a little show it, even in this; That I was constant, Cimber should be banish'd, And constant do not remain to keep him so.

Cin. O Caesar,—

CAESAR. Hence! Wilt thou lift up Olympus?

Dec. Great Caesar,—

CAESAR. Doth not Brutus bootless 7 kneel? Let Casca, Speak, hands, for me.

[Casca stabs Caesar in the neck. Caesar catches hold of his arm. He is then stabbed by several other Conspirators, and at last by Marcus Brutus.

CAESAR. Et tu, Brutus? 8 — Then, fall, Caesar.

[Dies. The Senators and People retire in confusion.

Cin. Liberty! Freedom! Tyranny is dead! — Run hence, proclaim, cry it about the streets.

Cas. Some to the common pulpits, and cry out, Liberty, freedom, and enfranchisement! Brut. People, and senators! be not affrighted; Fly not; stand still: — ambition's debt is paid.

Casca. Go to the pulpit, Brutus.

Dec. And Cassius too.

Cas. Where's Publius?

Cin. Here, quite confounded with this mutiny.

Met. Stand fast together, lest some friend of Caesar's Should chance —

Bru. Talk not of standing; — Publius, good cheer; There is no harm intended to your person, Nor to no Roman else; so tell them, Publius.

Cas. And leave us, Publius, lest that the people, Rushing on us, should do your age some mischief.

Brut. Do so; — and let no man abide this deed, But we the doers.

Re-enter Trebonius.

Cas. Where's Antony?

5 Intelligent. 6 Solicitation. 7 Unsuccessfully. 8 And thou, Brutus.
Scene I.

JULIUS CAESAR.

Tre. Fled to his house amaz'd:
    Men, wives, and children, stare, cry out, and run,
    As it were doomsday.

Brut. Fates! we will know your pleasures: —
    That shall we die, we know; 'tis but the time,
    And drawing days out, that men stand upon.

Cas. Why, he that cuts off twenty years of life,
    Cuts off so many years of fearing death.

Brut. Grant that, and then is death a benefit:
    So are we Caesar's friends, that have abridg'd
    His time of fearing death. — Stoop, Romans, stoop,
    And let us bathe our hands in Caesar's blood
    Up to the elbows, and besmear our swords:
    Then walk we forth, even to the market-place;
    And, waving our red weapons o'er our heads,
    Let's all cry, Peace! Freedom! and Liberty!

Cas. Stoop, then, and wash. How many ages hence,
    Shall this our lofty scene be acted over,
    In states unborn, and accents yet unknown!

Brut. How many times shall Caesar bleed in sport,
    That now on Pompey's basis lies along,
    No worthier than the dust!

Cas. So oft as that shall be,
    So often shall the knot of us be call'd
    The men that gave our country liberty.

Dec. What, shall we forth?

Cas. Ay, every man away:
    Brutus shall lead; and we will grace his heels
    With the most boldest and best hearts of Rome.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Thus, Brutus, did my master bid me kneel;
    Thus did Mark Antony bid me fall down:
    And, being prostrate, thus he bade me say,
    Brutus is noble, wise, valiant, and honest;
    Caesar was mighty, bold, royal, and loving:
    Say, I love Brutus, and I honour him;
    Say, I fear'd Caesar, honour'd him, and lov'd him;
    If Brutus will vouchsafe, that Antony
    May safely come to him, and be resolv'd
    How Caesar hath deserv'd to lie in death,
    Mark Antony shall not love Caesar dead
    So well as Brutus living; but will follow
    The fortunes and affairs of noble Brutus
    Thorough the hazards of this untried state,
    With all true faith. So says my master Antony.

Brut. Thy master is a wise and valiant Roman;
    I never thought him worse.
    Tell him, so please him come unto this place,
    He shall be satisfied; and, by my honour,
    Depart untouch'd.

Serv. I'll fetch him presently. [Exit.

Brut. I know that we shall have him well to friend.

Cas. I wish we may; but yet have I a mind,
    That fears him much; and my misgiving still
    Falls shrewdly to the purpose.

Re-enter Antony.

Ant. O mighty Caesar! Dost thou lie so low?
    Are all thy conquests, glories, triumphs, spoils,
    Shrunk to this little measure? — Fare thee well. —
    I know not, gentlemen, what you intend,
    Who else must be let blood, who else is rank 9;

9 Grown too high for the publick safety.

If I myself, there is no hour so fit
    As Caesar's death's hour; nor no instrument
    Of half that worth, as those your swords, made rich
    With the most noble blood of all this world.
    I do beseech ye, if you bear me hard,
    Now, whilst your purpled hands do reek and smoke,
    Fulfil your pleasure. Live a thousand years,
    I shall not find myself so apt to die:
    No place will please me so, no mean of death,
    As here by Caesar, and by you cut off,
    The choice and master spirits of this age.

Brut. O Antony! beg not your death of us.
    Though now we must appear bloody and cruel,
    As, by our hands, and this our present act,
    You see we do; yet see you but our hands,
    And this the bleeding business they have done:
    Our hearts you see not, they are pitiful;
    And pity to the general wrong of Rome
    (As fire drives out fire, so pity, pity,)
    Hath done this deed on Caesar. For your part,
    To you our swords have leaden points, Mark Antony:
    Our arms, in strength of malice, and our hearts,
    Of brother's temper, do receive you in
    With all kind love, good thoughts, and reverence.

Cas. Your voice shall be as strong as any man's,
    In the disposing of new dignities.

Brut. Only be patient, till we have appeas'd
    The multitude, beside themselves with fear,
    And then we will deliver you the cause,
    Why I, that did love Caesar when I struck him,
    Have thus proceeded.

Ant. I doubt not of your wisdom.
    Let each man render me his bloody hand:
    First, Marcus Brutus, will I shake with you: —
    Next, Caius Cassius, do I take your hand;
    Now, Decius Brutus, yours; — now yours, Me
tellus;
    Yours, Cinna; — and, my valiant Cassca, yours: —
    Though last, not least in love, yours, good Trebo nius.
    Gentlemen all, — alas! what shall I say?
    My credit now stands on such slippery ground,
    That one of two bad ways you must conceit me,
    Either a coward, or a flatterer. —
    That I did love thee, Caesar, O, 'tis true:
    If then thy spirit look upon us now,
    Shall it not grieve thee, dearer than thy death,
    To see thy Antony making his peace,
    Shaking the bloody fingers of thy foes,
    Most noble! in the presence of thy corse?
    Had I as many eyes as thou hast wounds,
    Weeping as fast as they stream forth thy blood,
    It would become me better, than to close
    In terms of friendship with thine enemies.
    Pardon me, Julius! — Here wast thou bay'd, brave
    heart;
    Here didst thou fall; and here thy hunters stand,
    Sign'd in thy spoil, and crimson'd in thy lethie,
    O world! thou wast the forest to this hart;
    And this, indeed, O world, the heart of thee. —
    How like a deer, stricken by many princes,
    Dost thou here lie!

Cas. Mark Antony, —

Ant. Pardon me, Caius Cassius:
    The enemies of Caesar shall say this;
    Then, in a friend, it is cold modesty.

Cas. I blame you not for praising Caesar so;
    But what compait mean you to have with us?
    Will you be prick'd in number of our friends;
    Or shall we on, and not depend on you?

Y y
Ant. Therefore I took your hands; but was, indeed, Sway'd from the point, by looking down on Cæsar. Friends am I with you all, and love you all; Upon this hope, that you shall give me reasons, Why, and wherein, Cæsar was dangerous.

Br. Or else were this a savage spectacle: Our reasons are so full of good regard, That were you, Antony, the son of Cæsar, You should be satisfied.

Ant. That's all I seek: And am moreover suitor, that I may Produce his body to the market-place; And in the pulpit, as becomes a friend, Speak in the order of his funeral.

Br. You shall, Mark Antony,

Cas. Brutus, a word with you. — You know not what you do; Do not consent, That Antony speak in his funeral:

Know you how much the people may be mov'd — By that which he will utter?

Br. By your pardon; I will myself into the pulpit first, And show the reason of our Cæsar's death: What Antony shall speak, I will protest He speaks by leave and by permission; And that we are contented, Cæsar shall Have all true rites, and lawful ceremonies. It shall advantage more, than do us wrong.

Cas. I know not what may fall; I like it not.

Br. Mark Antony, here, take you Cæsar's body, You shall not in your funeral speech blame us, But speak all good you can devise of Cæsar; And say, you do't by our permission; Else shall you not have any hand at all About his funeral: And you shall speak In the same pulpit whereunto I am going, After my speech is ended.

Ant. Be it so;

Br. I do desire no more.

Ant. O, pardon me, thou bleeding piece of earth, That I am meek and gentle with these butchers! Thou art the spirits of the noblest man, That ever lived in the tide of times; Woe to the hand that shed this costly blood! Over thy wounds now do I prophesy — Which like dumb mouths, do ope their ruby lips, To beg the voice and utterance of my tongue; — A curse shall light upon the limbs of men; Domestick fury, and fierce civil strife, Shall cumber all the parts of Italy: Blood and destruction shall be so in use, And dreadful objects so familiar, That mothers shall but smile, when they behold Their infants quarter'd with the hands of war; All pity chok'd with custom of fell deeds; And Cæsar's spirit, ranging for revenge, With Até by his side, come hot from hell, Shall in these confines, with a monarch's voice, Cry, Havock! 1 and let slip the dogs of war; That this foul deed shall smell above the earth, With carrion men groaning for burial.

Enter a Servant.

You serve Octavius Cæsar, do you not?

Serv. I do, Mark Antony.

Ant. Cæsar did write for him to come to Rome.

1 The signal for giving no quarter.

Serv. He did receive his letters, and is coming; And bid me say to you by word of mouth, O Cæsar! — [Seeing the Body.]

Ant. Thy heart is big, get thee apart and weep. Passion, I see, is catching; for mine eyes Seeing those beads of sorrow stand in thine, Began to water. Is thy master coming?

Serv. He lies to-night within seven leagues of Rome.

Ant. Post back with speed, and tell him what hath chanced: — Here is a mourning Rome, a dangerous Rome, No Rome of safety for Octavius yet; Hie hence, and tell him so. Yet, sit a while; Thou shalt not back, till I have borne this corse Into the market-place: there shall I try, In my oration, how the people take The cruel issue of these bloody men; According to the which, thou shalt discourse To young Octavius of the state of things.

Lend me your hand. [Exit, with Cæsar's Body.]

SCENE II. — The Forum.

Enter Brutus and Cassius, and a Throng of Citizens.

Cit. We will be satisfied; let us be satisfied.

Brut. Then follow me, and give me audience, friends. — Cassius, go you into the other street, And part the numbers. Those that will hear me speak, let them stay here; Those that will follow Cassius, go with him; And pubrick reasons shall be rendered Of Cæsar's death.

1 Cit. I will hear Brutus speak.

2 Cit. I will hear Cassius, and compare their reasons, When severally we hear them rendered. [Exit Cassius, with some of the Citizens. Brutus goes into the Rostrum.]

3 Cit. The noble Brutus is ascended: Silence!

Brut. Be patient till the last. Romans, countrymen, and lovers! 2 hear me for my cause; and be silent that ye may hear; believe me for mine honour; and have respect to mine honour, that you may believe: censure me in your wisdom; and awake your senses that you may the better judge. If there be any in this assembly, any dear friend of Cæsar's, to him I say, that Brutus' love to Cæsar was no less than his. If then that friend demand, why Brutus rose against Cæsar, this is my answer, — Not that I loved Cæsar less, but that I loved Rome more. Had you rather Cæsar were living, and die all slaves; than that Cæsar were dead, to live all free men? As Cæsar loved me, I weep for him; as he was fortunate, I rejoice at it; as he was valiant, I honour him: but, as he was ambitious, I slew him: There is no more guilt in his blood, Than in the soul of mine, which I bear for him, for his love; joy, for his fortune; honour, for his valour; and death, for his ambition. Who is here so base, that would be a bondman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so rude, that would not be a Roman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so vile, that will not love his country? If any, speak; for him have I offended. I pause for a reply.

Cit. None, Brutus, none. [Several speaking at once.]

2 Friends.
Scene II.

JULIUS CAESAR.

Brut. Then none have I offended. I have done no more to Caesar, than you should do to Brutus. The question of his death is enrolled in the Capitol: his glory not extenuated, wherein he was worthy; nor his offences enforced, for which he suffered death.

Enter Antony and others, with Caesar's Body.

Here comes his body, mourned by Mark Antony: Who, though he had no hand in his death, shall receive the benefit of his dying, a place in the commonwealth; As which of you shall not? With this I depart; That as I slew my best lover for the good of Rome, I have the same dagger for myself, when it shall please my country to need my death.

Cæs. Live, Brutus, live! live!

1 Cæs. Bring him with triumph home unto his house.

2 Cæs. Give him a statue with his ancestors.

3 Cæs. Let him be Caesar.

4 Cæs. Caesar's better parts Shall now be crown'd in Brutus.

1 Cæs. We'll bring him to his house with shouts and clamours.

Brut. My countrymen,—

2 Cæs. Peace; silence! Brutus speaks.

1 Cæs. Peace, ho!

Brut. Good countrymen, let me depart alone,

And, for my sake, stay here with Antony:

Do grace to Caesar's corpse, and grace his speech

Tending to Caesar's glories; which Mark Antony,

By our permission, is allow'd to make.

I do entreat you not a man depart,

Save I alone, till Antony have spoke. [Exit.

1 Cæs. Stay, ho! and let us hear Mark Antony.

3 Cæs. Let him go up into the public chair; We'll hear him; — Noble Antony, go up.

Ant. For Brutus' sake, I am beholden to you.

4 Cæs. What does he say of Brutus?

3 Cæs. He says for Brutus' sake, He finds himself beholden to us all.

4 Cæs. 'Twere best he speak no harm of Brutus here.

1 Cæs. This Caesar was a tyrant.

3 Cæs. Nay, that's certain: We are bless'd that Rome is rid of him.

2 Cæs. Peace; let us hear what Antony can say.

Ant. You gentle Romans, —

Cæs. Peace, ho! let us hear him.

Ant. Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears; I come to bury Caesar, not to praise him. The evil, that men do, lives after them; The good is oft interred with their bones; So let it be with Caesar. The noble Brutus Hath told you, Caesar was ambitious; If it were so, it was a grievous fault; And grievously hath Caesar answer'd it. Here, under leave of Brutus, and the rest, (For Brutus is an honourable man; So are they all, all honourable men;) Come I to speak in Caesar's funeral. He was my friend, faithful and just to me: But Brutus says, he was ambitious; And Brutus is an honourable man. He hath brought many captives home to Rome, Whose ransoms did the general coffers fill: Did this in Caesar seem ambitious? When that the poor have cried, Caesar hath wept: Ambition should be made of sterner stuff: Yet Brutus says, he was ambitious; And Brutus is an honourable man.

You all did see, that on the Lupercal, I thrice presented him a kingly crown, Which he did thrice refuse. Was this ambition? Yet Brutus says, he was ambitious; And, sure, he is an honourable man. I speak not to disprove what Brutus spoke, But here I am to speak what I do know. You all did love him once, not without cause; What cause withholdeth you then to mourn for him? O judgment, thou art fled to brutish beasts, And men have lost their reason! — Bear with me; My heart is in the coffin there with Caesar, And I must pause till it come back to me.

1 Cæs. Methinks there is much reason in his sayings.

2 Cæs. If thou consider rightly of the matter, Caesar has had great wrongs.

3 Cæs. Has he, masters? I fear, there will a worse come in his place.

4 Cæs. Mark'd ye his words? He would not take the crown; Therefore, 'tis certain, he was not ambitious.

1 Cæs. If it be found so, some well dare abide it.

2 Cæs. Poor soul! his eyes are red as fire with weeping.

3 Cæs. There's not a nobler man in Rome, than Antony.

4 Cæs. Now mark him, he begins again to speak.

Ant. But yesterday, the word of Caesar might Have stood against the world: now lies he there, And none so poor to do him reverence. O masters! if I were dispos'd to stir Your hearts and minds to mutiny and rage, I should do Brutus wrong, and Cassius wrong, Who, you all know, are honourable men: I will not do them wrong; I rather choose To wrong the dead, to wrong myself, and you, Than I will wrong such honourable men.

But here's a parchment, with the seal of Caesar, I found it in his closet, 'tis his will: Let but the commons hear this testament, (Which, pardon me, I do not mean to read,) And they would go and kiss dead Caesar's wounds, And dip their napkins in his sacred blood; Yea, beg a hair of him for memory, And, dying, mention it within their wills, Bequeathing it, as a rich legacy, Unto their issue.

4 Cæs. We'll hear the will; Read it, Mark Antony. Ant. The will, the will; we will hear Caesar's will.

Ant. Have patience, gentle friends, I must not read it; It is not meet you know how Caesar lov'd you. You are not wood, you are not stones, but men; And being men, hearing the will of Caesar, It will inflame you, it will make you mad: 'Tis good you know not that you are his heirs; For if you should, O, what would come of it! 4 Cæs. Read the will; we will hear it, Antony; You shall read us the will; Caesar's will.

Ant. Will you be patient? Will you stay awhile? I have o'ershot myself, to tell you of it. I fear, I wrong the honourable men, Whose daggers have stabb'd Caesar: I do fear it. 4 Cæs. They were traitors: Honourable men! Ant. The will! the testament! 2 Cæs. They were villains, murderers: The will! read the will! Ant. You will compel me then to read the will? Then make a ring about the corpse of Caesar,
And let me show you him that made the will. Shall I descend? And will you give me leave?

Cæs. Come down.

2 Cæs. Descend. [He comes down from the Pulpit.

3 Cæs. You shall have leave.

1 Cæs. Stand from the hearth; stand from the body.

2 Cæs. Room for Antony; — most noble Antony.

Ant. Nay, press not so upon me; stand far off.

Cæs. Stand back! room! bear back!

Ant. If you have tears, prepare to shed them now.

You all do know this mantle: I remember The first time ever Cæsar put it on; 'Twas on a summer's evening in his tent; That day he overcame the Nervil; — Look! in this place, ran Cassius' dagger through: See, what a rent the envious Cassius made: Through this, the well-beloved Brutus stabb'd; And, as he pluck'd his cursed steel away, Mark how the blood of Cæsar follow'd it; As rushing out of doors, to be resolved! If Brutus so unkindly knock'd, or no; For Brutus, as you know, was Cæsar's angel: Judge, O you gods, how dearly Cæsar lov'd him! This was the most unkindest cut of all: For when the noble Cæsar saw him stab, Ingratitude, more strong than traitor's arms, Quite vanquish'd him: then burst his mighty heart; And, in his mantle muffling up his face, Even at the base of Pompey's statue, Which all the while ran blood, great Cæsar fell. O, what a fall was there, my countrymen! Then I, and all of us, fell down, Whilst bloody treason flourish'd over us. O, now you weep; and, I perceive, you feel The dint of pity: these are gracious drops. Kind souls, what, weep you, when you but behold Our Cæsar's vesture wounded? Look you here, Here is his self, marr'd, as you see, with traitors.

1 Cæs. O piteous spectacle!

2 Cæs. O noble Cæsar!

3 Cæs. O woful day!

4 Cæs. O traitors, villains!

1 Cæs. O most bloody sight!

2 Cæs. We will be reveng'd: revenge; about, seek, — burn, — fire, — kill, — slay! — let not a traitor live.

Ant. Stay, countrymen.

1 Cæs. Peace there: — Hear the noble Antony.

2 Cæs. We'll hear him, we'll follow him, we'll die with him.

Ant. Good friends, sweet friends, let me not stir you up To such a sudden flood of mutiny. They, that have done this deed, are honourable; What private grieves they have, alas, I know not, That made them do it; they are wise and honourable, And will, no doubt, with reasons answer you. I come not, friends, to steal away your hearts; I am no orator, as Brutus is:

But, as you know me all, a plain blunt man, That love my friend; and that they know full well That gave me public leave to speak of him. For I have neither wit, nor words, nor worth, Action, nor utterance, nor the power of speech, To stir men's blood: I only speak right on; I tell you that, which you yourselves do know;

Show you sweet Cæsar's wounds, poor, poor dumb mouths, And bid them speak for me: But were I Brutus, And Brutus Antony, there were an Antony Would ruffle up your spirits, and put a tongue In every wound of Cæsar, that should move The stones of Rome to rise and mutiny.

Cæs. We'll mutiny.

1 Cæs. We'll burn the house of Brutus.

3 Cæs. Away then, come, seek the conspirators.

Ant. Yet hear me, countrymen; yet hear me speak.

Cæs. Peace, ho! Hear Antony, most noble Antony.

Ant. Why, friends, you go to do you know not what: Wherein hath Cæsar thus deserv'd your loves? Alas, you know not: — I must tell you then: — You have forgot the will I told you of.

Cæs. Most true; — the will; — let's stay, and hear the will.

Ant. Here is the will, and under Cæsar's seal.

To every Roman citizen he gives, To every several man, seventy-five drachmas.

2 Cæs. Most noble Cæsar! — we'll revenge his death.

3 Cæs. O royal Cæsar!

Ant. Hear me with patience.

Cæs. Peace, ho!

Ant. Moreover, he hath left you all his walks, His private arbours, and new-planted orchards, On this side Tyber; he hath left them you, And to your heirs for ever; common pleasures, To walk abroad, and recreate yourselves. Here was a Cæsar: When comes such another?

1 Cæs. Never, never: — Come, away, away:

We'll burn his body in the holy place, And with the brands fire the traitors' houses.

Take up the body.

2 Cæs. Go, fetch fire.

3 Cæs. Pluck down benches.

4 Cæs. Pluck down forms, windows, any thing.

[Exeunt Citizens, with the Body.

Ant. Now let it work: Mischief, thou art afoot, Take thou what course thou wilt! — How now, fellow?

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Sir, Octavius is already come to Rome.

Ant. Where is he?

Serv. He and Lepidus are at Cæsar's house.

Ant. And thither will I straight to visit him: He comes upon a wish. Fortune is merry, And in this mood will give us any thing.

Serv. I heard him say, Brutus and Cassius Are rid like madmen through the gates of Rome.

Ant. Belike, they had some notice of the people, How I had mov'd them. Bring me to Octavius.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III. — A Street.

Enter Cinna, the Poet.

Cin. I dreamt to-night that I did feast with Cæsar And things unluckily charge my fantasy: I have no will to wander forth of doors, Yet something leads me forth.

Enter Citizens.

1 Cæs. What is your name?

2 Cæs. Whither are you going?

* Status for statue, is common among the old writers.

* Impression.

* Grievance.

* Near fifty shillings.
ACT IV.

SCENE I. — A Room in Antony’s House.

ANTONY, OCTAVIUS, AND LEPIDUS, seated at a Table.

ANT. These many then shall die; their names are prick’d.

OCT. Your brother too must die; Consent you, Lepidus?

LEP. I do consent.

OCT. Prick him down, Antony.

LEP. Upon condition Publius shall not live, Who is your sister’s son, Mark Antony.

ANT. He shall not live; look, with a spot I damn him.

But, Lepidus, go you to Caesar’s house; Fetch the will hither, and we will determine How to cut off some charge in legacies.

LEP. What, shall I find you here?

OCT. Or here, or at The Capitol.

[Exit Lepidus.

ANT. This is a slight unmeritable man, Meet to be sent on errands: Is it fit, The three-fold world divided, he should stand One of the three to share it?

OCT. So you thought him;
And took his voice who should be prick’d to die, In our black sentence and proscription.

ANT. Octavius, I have seen more days than you; And though we lay these honours on this man, To ease ourselves of divers slanderous loads, He shall but bear them as the ass bears gold, To groan and sweat under the business, Either led or driven, as we point the way; And having brought our treasure where we will, Then take we down this load, and turn him off, Like to the empty ass, to shake his ears, And graze in commons.

OCT. You may do your will;
But he’s a tried and valiant soldier.

ANT. So is my horse, Octavius; and, for that, I do appoint him store of provender. It is a creature that I teach to fight, To wind, to stop, to run directly on; His corporal motion govern’d by my spirit. And, in some taste, is Lepidus but so; He must be taught, and train’d, and bid go forth :

ACT IV.

SCENE II. — Before Brutus’ Tent, in the Camp near Sardis.

DRUM. Enter Brutus, Lucilius, Lucius, and Soldiers: TITINIUS and PINDARUS meeting them.

BRU. Stand here.

LUC. Give the word, ho! and stand.

BRU. What now, Lucilius? is Cassius near?

LUC. He is at hand; and Pindarus is come To do you salutation from his master.

PINDARUS GIVES A LETTER TO BRUTUS.

BRU. He greets me well. — Your master, Pindarus, In his own charge, or by ill offices, Hath given me some worthy cause to wish. Things done, undone: but, if he be at hand, I shall be satisfied.

PIN. I do no doubt. But that my noble master will appear Such as he is, full of regard, and honour.

BRU. He is not doubted. — A word, Lucilius: How he receiv’d you, let me be resolv’d. LUC. With courtesy, and with respect enough; But not with such familiar instances, Nor with such free and friendly conference, As he hath used of old.

BRU. Thou hast describ’d A hot friend cooling: Ever note, Lucilius,

TET. That matter is answered directly.

4 Cn. For your dwelling, — briefly.

Cn. Briefly, I dwell by the Capitol.

4 Cn. Your name, sir, truly.

Cn. Truly, my name is Cinna.

1 Cn. Tear him to pieces, he’s a conspirator.

Cn. I am Cinna the poet, I am Cinna the poet.

4 Cn. Tear him for his bad verses, tear him for his bad verses.

Cn. I am not Cinna the conspirator.

2 Cn. It is no matter, his name’s Cinna; pluck but his name out of his heart, and turn him going.

3 Cn. Tear him, tear him. Come, brands, ho! firebrands. To Brutus’, to Cassius’; burn all. Some to Decius’ house, and some to Casca’s: some to Ligarius’: away; go. [Exeunt.]
When love begins to sicken and decay,
It useth an enforced ceremony.
There are no tricks in plain and simple faith:
But hollow men, like horses hot at hand,
Make gallant show and promise of their mettle:
But when they should endure the bloody spur,
They fall their crests, and, like deceitful jades,
Sink in the trial. Comes his army on?

Luc. They mean this night in Sardis to be quarter'd;
The greater part, the horse in general,
Are come with Cassius. [March within.

Brutus. Hark, he is arriv'd:——
March gently on to meet him.

Enter Cassius and Soldiers.

Cas. Stand, ho!

Brutus. Stand, ho! Speak the word along.

[Within.] Stand.

[Within.] Stand.

Cas. Most noble brother, you have done me wrong.

Brutus. Judge me, you gods! Wrong I mine enemies?
And, if not so, how should I wrong a brother?

Cas. Brutus, this sober form of yours hides wrongs;
And when you do them——

Brutus. Cassius, be content,
Speak your griefs softly, — I do know you well:——
Before the eyes of both our armies here,
Which should perceive nothing but love from us,
Let us not wrangle: Did them move away;
Then in my tent, Cassius, enlarge your griefs,
And I will give you audience.

Pindarus,
Bid our commanders lead their charges off
A little from this ground.

Brutus. Lucilius, do the like; and let no man
Come to our tent, till we have done our conference.
Let Lucius and Titius guard our door. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. — Within the Tent of Brutus.

Lucius and Titinius at some distance from it.

Enter Brutus and Cassius.

Cassius. That you have wrong'd me doth appear in this:
You have condemn'd and noted Lucius Pella,
For taking bribes here of the Sardians;
Wherein my letters, praying on his side,
Because I knew the man, were slighted off.

Brutus. You wrong'd yourself, to write in such a case.

Cassius. In such a time as this, it is not meet
That every nice offence should bear his comment.

Brutus. Let me tell you, Cassius, you yourself
Are much condemn'd to have an itching palm;
To sell and mart your offices for gold,
To undeservers.

Cassius. I am an itching palm?
You know that you are Brutus that speak this,
Or, by the gods, this speech were else your last.

Brutus. The name of Cassius honours this corruption,
And chastisement doth therefore hide his head.

Cassius. Chastisement!

Brutus. Remember March, the ides of March remember!
Did not great Julius bleed for justice' sake?

1 Trifling.

What villain touch'd his body, that did stab,
And not for justice? What, shall one of us,
That struck the foremost man of all this world,
But for supporting robbers; shall we now
Contaminate our fingers with base bribes?
And sell the mighty space of our large honours,
For so much trash, as may be grasped thus? —
I had rather be a dog, and bay the moon,
Than such a Roman.

Cassius. Brutus, bay not me;
I'll not endure it; you forget yourself
To hedge me in; I am a soldier, I,
Older in practice, able than yourself
To make conditions.

Brutus. Go to; you're not, Cassius.

Cassius. I am.

Brutus. I say, you are not.

Cassius. Urge me no more, I shall forget myself;
Have mind upon your health, tempt me no further.

Brutus. Away, slight man!

Cassius. Is't possible?

Brutus. Hear me, for I will speak.

Must I give way and room to your rash cholera?
Shall I be frightened, when a madman scars?

Cassius. O ye gods! ye gods! Must I endure all this?

Brutus. All this? ay, more: Fret, till your proud heart break;
Go show your slaves how cholerick you are,
And make your bondmen tremble. Must I budge?
Must I observe you? Must I stand and crouch
Under your testy humour? By the gods,
You shall digest the venom of your spleen,
Though it do split you: for, from this day forth,
I'll use you for my mirth, yea, for my laughter,
When you are wassip.

Cassius. Is it come to this?

Brutus. You say, you are a better soldier:
Let it appear so; make your vaunting true,
And it shall please me well: For mine own part,
I shall be glad to learn of noble men.

Cassius. You wrong me every way; you wrong me,
Brutus:

I said, an elder soldier, not a better:
Did I say, better?

Brutus. If you did, I care not.

Cassius. When Caesar lived, he durst not thus have mov'd me.

Brutus. Peace, peace; you durst not so have tempted him.

Cassius. I durst not?

Brutus. No.

Cassius. What? durst not tempt him?

Brutus. For your life you durst not.

Cassius. Do not presume too much upon my love,
I may do that I shall be sorry for,

Brutus. You have done that you should be sorry for.

There is no terror, Cassius, in your threats:
For I am arm'd so strong in honesty,
That they pass by me, as the idle wind,
Which I respect not. I did send to you
For certain sums of gold, which you denied me;——
For I can raise no money by vile means:

By heaven, I had rather coin my heart,
And drop my blood for drachmas, than to wring
From the hard hands of peasants their vile trash
By any indirection. I did send
To you for gold to pay my legions,
Which you denied me: Was that done like Cassius?
Should I have answer'd Caius Cassius so?

When Marcus Brutus grows so covetous,
Scene III.

To lock such rascal counters from his friends,
Be ready, gods, with all your thunderbolts,
Dash him to pieces!

Cas. I denied you not.

Brut. You did.

Cas. I did not: — he was but a fool,
That brought my answer back. — Brutus hath riv'd
my heart:
A friend should bear his friend's infirmities,
But Brutus makes mine greater than they are.

Brut. I do not, till you practise them on me.

Cas. You love me not.

Brut. I do not like your faults.

Cas. A friendly eye could never see such faults.

Brut. A flattering's would not, though they do appear
As huge as high Olympus.

Cas. Come, Antony, and young Octavius, come,
Revenge yourselves alone on Cassius,
For Cassius is aweary of the world:
Hated by one he loves; brav'd by his brother;
Check'd like a bondman; all his faults observ'd,
Set in a note-book, learn'd, and conn'd by rote,
To cast into my teeth. O, I could weep
My spirit from mine eyes! — There is my dagger,
And here my naked breast; within, a heart
Dearer than Plutus' mine, richer than gold:
If that thou be'st a Roman, take it forth;
I, that denied thee gold, will give my heart:
Strike, as thou didst at Caesar; for, I know,
When thou didst hate him worst, thou lov'dst him better
Than ever thou lov'dst Cassius.

Brut. Sheathe your dagger:
Be angry when you will, it shall have scope;
Do what you will, dishonour shall be humour.
O Cassius, you are yoked with a lamb
That carries anger, as the flint bears fire;
Who much enforced, shows a hasty spark,
And straight is cold again.

Cas. Hath Cassius liv'd
To be but mirth and laughter to his Brutus,
With grief, and blood ill-temper'd, vexeth him?

Brut. When I spoke that, I was ill-temper'd too.

Cas. Do you confess so much? Give me your hand.

Brut. And my heart too.

Cas. O Brutus! —

Brut. What's the matter?

Cas. Have you not love enough to bear with me,
When that rash humour, which my mother gave me,
Makes me forgetful?

Brut. Yes, Cassius; and henceforth,
When you are over-earnest with your Brutus,
He'll think your mother chides, and leave you so.

[Noise within.]

Poet. [Within.] Let me go in to see the generals:
There is some grudge between them, 'tis not meet
They be alone.

Luc. [Within.] You shall not come to them.

Poet. [Within.] Nothing but death shall stay me.

Enter Poet.

Cas. How now? What's the matter?

Poet. [Fellow.] For shame, you generals: What do you mean?

Love, and be friends, as two such men should be;
For I have seen more years, I am sure, than ye.

Cas. Ha, ha; how vilely doth this cynick rhyme!

Brut. Get you hence, sirrah; saucy fellow, hence.

Cas. Bear with him, Brutus; 'tis his fashion.

Brut. I'll know his humour, when he knows his time:

What should the wars do with these juggling fools?
Compair, hence.

Cas. Away, away, begone. [Exit Poet.

Enter Lucilius and Titinius.

Brut. Lucilius and Titinius, bid the commanders
Prepare to lodge their companies to-night.

Cas. And come yourselves, and bring Messala
with you,
Immediately to us. [Exit Lucilius and Titinius.

Bru. Lucius, a bowl of wine.

Cas. I did not think, you could have been so angry.

Brut. O Cassius, I am sick of many griefs.

Cas. Of your philosophy you make no use,
If you give place to accidental evils.

Brut. No man bears sorrow better: — Portia is dead.

Cas. Ha! Portia?

Brut. She is dead.

Cas. How scap'd I killing, when I cross'd you so? —
O insupportable and touching loss! —

Upon what sickness?

Brut. Inpatient of my absence;
And grief, that young Octavius with Mark Antony
Have made themselves so strong; — for with her death
That tidings came; — With this she fell distract,
And, her attendants absent, swallow'd fire.

Cas. And died so?

Brut. Even so.

Cas. O ye immortal gods!

Enter Lucius, with Wine and Tapers.

Brut. Speak no more of her. — Give me a bowl of wine: —

In this I bury all unkindness, Cassius. [Drinks.

Cas. My heart is thirsty for that noble pledge: —
Fill, Lucius, till the wine o'erwell the cup;
I cannot drink too much of Brutus' love. [Drinks.

Re-enter Titinius, with Messala.

Brut. Come in, Titinius: — Welcome, good Messala. —

Now sit we close about this taper here,
And call in question our necessities.

Cas. Portia, art thou gone?

Brut. No more, I pray you. —

Messala, I have here received letters,
That young Octavius, and Mark Antony,
Come down upon us with a mighty power,
Bending their expedition toward Philippi.

Mes. Myself have letters of the self-same tenour.

Bru. With what addition?

Mes. That by proscription, and bills of outlawry,
Octavius, Antony, and Lepidus,
Have put to death an hundred senators.

Bru. Therein our letters do not well agree;
Mine speak of seventy senators, that died
By their proscriptions, Cicero being one.

Cas. Cicero one?

Mes. Ay, Cicero is dead,
And by that order of proscription. —

Had you your letters from your wife, my lord?
Enter Varro and Claudius.

Var. Calls my lord?

Bru. I pray you, sirs, lie in my tent, and sleep; it may be, I shall raise you by and by

On business to my brother Cassius.

Var. So please you, we will stand, and watch your pleasure.

Bru. I will not have it so: lie down, good sirs; it may be, I shall otherwise bethink me.

Look, Lucius, here's the book I sought for so;
I put it in the pocket of my gown.

[Servants lie down.

Luc. I was sure your lordship did not give it me.

Bru. Bear with me, good boy, I am much forgetful.

Canst thou hold up thy heavy eyes awhile,
And touch thy instrument a strain or two.

Luc. Ay, my lord, an it please you.

Bru. It does, my boy; I trouble thee too much, but thou art willing.

Luc. It is my duty, sir.

Bru. I should not urge thy duty past thy might;
I know, young bloods look for a time of rest.

Luc. I have slept, my lord, already.

Bru. It is well done; and thou shalt sleep again;
I will not hold thee long: if I do live,
I will be good to thee.

[Musick and a Song.

This is a sleepy tune: — O murd'rous slumber!

Lay'st thou thy leaden mace upon my boy,
That plays thee musick? — Gentle knave, good night;
I will not do thee so much wrong to wake thee.
If thou dost nod, thou break'st thy instrument;
I'll take it from thee; and, good boy, good night.
Let me see, let me see; — Is not the leaf turn'd down,
Where I left reading? Here it is, I think.

[He sits down.

Enter the Ghost of Caesar.

How ill this taper burns! — Ha! who comes here?
I think it is the weakness of mine eyes,
That shapes this monstrous apparition.
It comes upon me — art thou any thing?
Art thou some god, some angel, or some devil,
That mak'st my blood cold, and my hair to stare?
Speak to me, what art thou.
Ghost. Thy evil spirit, Brutus.

Bru. Why com'st thou?

Ghost. To tell thee, thou shalt see me at Philippi.

Bru. Well;

Then I shall see thee again.

Ghost. Ay, at Philippi.

[Ghost vanishes.

Sceptre.

Bru. Good night, good brother.

Tit. Mes. Good night, lord Brutus.

Bru. Farewell, every one.

[Exit Cas. Tit. and Mes.

Re-enter Lucius, with the Gown.

Give me the gown. Where is thy instrument?

Luc. Here in the tent.

Bru. What, thou speak'st drowsily?

Poor knave, I blame thee not; thou art o'er-watch'd.

Call Claudius, and some other of my men;
I'll have them sleep on cushions in my tent.

Luc. Varro, and Claudius!

JULIUS CAESAR.
ACT V. SCENE I. — The Plains of Philippi.

Enter Octavius, Antony, and their Army.

Oct. Now, Antony, our hopes are answered: You said the enemy would not come down, But keep the hills and upper regions; It proves not so: their battles are at hand; They mean to warn us at Philippi here, Answering before we do demand of them.

Ant. Tut, I am in their bosoms, and I know, Wherefore do they it: they could be content To visit other places; and come down With fearful bravery, thinking, by this face, To fasten in our thoughts that they have courage; But 'tis not so.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Prepare you, generals: The enemy comes on in gallant show; Their bloody sign of battle is hung out, And something's to be done immediately.

Ant. Octavius, lead your battle softly on, Upon the left hand of the even field.

Oct. Upon the right hand I, keep thou the left.

Ant. Why do you cross me in this exigent?

Oct. I do not cross you; but I will do so.

[March.]

Brum. Enter Brutus, Cassius, and their Army; Lucilius, Titiarius, Messala, and others.

Brum. They stand, and would have parley.

Cas. Stand fast, Titinius: We must out and talk.

Oct. Mark Antony, shall we give sign of battle?

Ant. No, Caesar, we will answer on the charge.

Make forth, the generals would have some words.

Oct. Stir not until the signal.

Brum. Words before blows: Is it so, countrymen?

Oct. Not that we love words better, as you do.

Brum. Good words are better than bad strokes, Octavius.

Ant. In your bad strokes, Brutus, you give good words:

Witness the hole you made in Caesar's heart, Crying, Long live! hail Caesar!

Cas. Antony, The posture of your blows are yet unknown; But for your words, they rob the Hybla bees, And leave them honeyless.

* Summon.

Brum. Sleep again, Lucius. — Sirrah, Claudio!

Fellow thou! awake.

Var. My lord!

Clau. My lord!

Brum. Why did you so cry out, sirs, in your sleep?

Var. Clau. Did we, my lord?

Brum. Ay; Saw you any thing?

Var. No, my lord, I saw nothing.

Clau. Nor I, my lord.

Brum. Go, and commend me to my brother Cassius; Bid him set on his powers betimes before, And we will follow.

Var. Clau. It shall be done, my lord.

[Exeunt.]
This is my birth-day; as this very day
Was Cassius born. Give me thy hand, Messala:
Be thou my witness, that, against my will,
As Pompey was, am I compell'd to set
Upon one battle all our liberties.
You know, that I held Epicurus strong,
And his opinion: now I change my mind,
And partly credit things that do presage.
Coming from Sardis, on our former 7 ensign
Two mighty eagles fell, and there they perch'd,
Gorging and feeding from our soldiers' hands;
Who to Philippi here consorted 8 us;
This morning are they fled away, and gone;
And in their steads, do ravens, crows, and kites,
Fly o'er our heads, and downward look on us,
As we were sickly prey; their shadows seem
A canopy most fatal, under which
Our army lies, ready to give up the ghost.
Mess. Believe not so.
Cas. I but believe it partly;
For I am fresh of spirit, and resolv'd
To meet all perils very constantly.
Bru. Even so, Lucilius.
Cas. Now, most noble Brutus,
The gods to day stand friendly; that we may,
Lovers in peace, lead on our days to age!
But, since the affairs of men rest still uncertain,
Let's reason with the worst that may befall.
If we do lose this battle, then is this
The very last time we shall speak together:
What are you then determined to do?
Bru. Even by the rule of that philosophy,
By which I did blame Cato for the death
Which he did give himself: — I know not how,
But I do find it cowardly and vile,
For fear of what might fall, so to prevent
The time of life: arming myself with patience,
To stay the Providence of some high powers
That govern us below.
Cas. Then, if we lose this battle,
You are contented to be led in triumph
Thorough the streets of Rome?
Bru. No, Cassius: no: think not, thou noble
Roman,
That ever Brutus will go bound to Rome;
He bears too great a mind. But this same day
Must end that work the ide of March begun;
And whether we shall meet again I know not.
Therefore our everlasting farewell take: —
For ever, and for ever, farewell, Cassius!
If we do meet again, why we shall smile;
If not, why then this parting was well made.
Cas. For ever, and for ever, farewell, Brutus!
If we do meet again, we'll smile indeed:
If not, 'tis true, this parting was well made.
Bru. Why then, lead on. — O, that a man might know
The end of this day's business, ere it come!
But it sufficeth, that the day will end,
And then the end is known. — Come, ho! away!
[Exeunt.

SCENE II. — The Field of Battle.

Alarum. Enter Brutus and Messala.
Bru. Ride, ride, Messala, ride, and give these Uns to the legions on the other side: [Loud Alarum.

7 Foremost. 8 Accompanied.

Let them set on at once; for I perceive
But cold demeanour in Octavius' wing,
And sudden push gives them the overthrow.
Ride, ride, Messala: let them all come down.
[Exeunt.

SCENE III. — Another Part of the Field.

Alarum. Enter Cassius and Titinius.
Cas. O, look, Titinius, look, the villains fly:
Myself have to mine own turn'd enemy:
This ensign here of mine was turning back;
I slew the coward, and did take it from him.
Tit. O Cassius, Brutus gave the word too early:
Who having some advantage on Octavius,
Took it too eagerly: his soldiers fell to spoil,
Whilst we by Antony were all enclos'd.

Enter Pindarus.
Pin. Fly further off, my lord, fly further off;
Mark Antony is in your tents, my lord!
Fly therefore, noble Cassius, fly far off.
Cas. This hill is far enough. Look, look, Titinius;
Are those my tents, where I perceive the fire?
Tit. They are, my lord.
Cas. Titinius, if thou livest more,
Mount thou my horse, and hide thy spurs in him,
Till he have brought thee up to yonder troops,
And here again that I may rest assur'd,
Whether yond' troop are friends or enemy.
Tit. I will be here again, even with a thought.
[Exit.

Cas. Go, Pindarus, get higher on that hill;
My sight was ever thick; regard Titinius,
And tell me what thou not'st about the field. —
[Exit Pindarus.

This day I breathed first: time is come round,
And where I did begin, there I shall end;
My life is run his compass. — Sirrah, what news?
Pin. [Above.] O my lord!
Cas. What news?
Pin. Titinius is Enclosed round about with horsemen, that Make to him on the spur; — yet he spurs on.
Now they are almost on him; now, Titinius! —
Now some 'lights: — O, he 'lights too — he's ta'en
—and, hark!
[Shout. They shout for joy.
Cas. Come down, behold no more. —
O, coward that I am, to live so long;
To see my best friend ta'en before my face!
[Exit Pindarus.

Come hither, sirrah; in
In Parthia did I take thee prisoner;
And then I swore thee, saving of thy life,
That whatsoever I did bid thee do,
Thou shouldst attempt it. Come now, keep thine oath!
Now be a Freeman; and, with this good sword,
That ran through Caesar's bowels, search this bosom.
Stand not to answer: Here, take thou the hilt;
And, when my face is cover'd as 'tis now,
Guide thou the sword, — Caesar, thou art reveng'd,
Even with the sword that kill'd thee.
[Dies.
Pin. So here free, yet would not so have been,
Durst I have done my will. O Cassius!
Far from this country Pindarus shall run,
Where never Roman shall take note of him.
[Exit.
SCENE III.

Re-enter Titinius with Messala.

Mes. It is but change, Titinius; for Octavius is overthrown by noble Brutus' power, as Cassius' legions are by Antony.

Tit. These tidings will well comfort Cassius.

Mes. Where did you leave him?

Tit. All disconsolate, with Pindarus his bondman on this hill.

Mes. Is not that he, that lies upon the ground?

Tit. He lies not like the living. O my heart!

Mes. Is not that he?

Tit. No, this was he, Messala. But Cassius is no more. — O setting sun! As in thy red rays thou dost sink to-night, so in his red blood Cassius' day is set; the sun of Rome is set! Our day is gone; clouds, dews, and dangers come; our deeds are done; mistrust of my success hath done this deed.

Mes. Mistrust of good success hath done this deed. O hateful error, melancholy's child! Why dost thou show to the apt thoughts of men The things that are not? O error, soon conceiv'd, Thou never con'st unto a happy birth, But kill'st the mother that engender'd thee.

Tit. What, Pindarus? Where art thou, Pindarus? Mes. Seek him, Titinius: whilst I go to meet the noble Brutus, thrusting this report Into his ears: I may say, thrusting it; for piercing steel, and darts envenomed, Shall be as welcome to the ears of Brutus, as tidings of this sight.

Tit. Hie you, Messala, and I will seek for Pindarus the while. — [Exit Messala.

Why didst thou send me forth, brave Cassius? Did I not meet thy friends, and did not they Put on my brows this wreath of victory, And bid me giv't thee? Didst thou not hear their shouts? Alas! thou hast misconstrued every thing. But hold thee, take this garland on thy brow; Thy Brutus bid me give it thee, and I will do his bidding. — Brutus, come apace, And see how I regarded Caius Cassius. — By your leave, gods: — This is a Roman's part: Come, Cassius' sword, and find Titinius' heart. — [Dies.

Alarum. Re-enter Messala, with Brutus, young Cato, Strato, Volumnius, and Lucilius.

Bru. Where, where, Messala, doth his body lie? Mes. Lo, yonder; and Titinius mourning it.

Bru. Titinius' face is upward.

Cato. He is slain.

Bru. O Julius Caesar, thou art mighty yet! Thy spirit walks abroad, and turns our swords In our own proper entrails. — [Low Alarums. Cato. Brave Titinius! Look, whe'r he have not crowned'd dead Cassius! Bru. Are yet two Romans living such as these? — The last of all the Romans, fare thee well! It is impossible that ever Rome Should breed thy fellow. — Friends, I owe more tears To this dead man, than you shall see me pay. I shall find time, Cassius, I shall find time. — Come, therefore, and to Thassos send his body; His funeral shall not be in our camp, lest it discomfort us. — Lucilius, come; and come, young Cato, let us to the field. —

Labeo, and Flavius, set our battles on: — 'Tis three o'clock; and, Romans, yet ere night We shall try fortune in a second fight. — [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. — Another Part of the Field.

Alarum. Enter, fighting, Soldiers of both Armies: then Brutus, Cato, Lucilius, and others.

Bru. Yet, countrymen, O, yet hold up your heads! Cato. What bastard doth not? Who will go with me? I will proclaim my name about the field: I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho! A foe to tyrants, and my country's friend; I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho! — [Charges the Enemy.

Bru. And I am Brutus, Marcus Brutus, 1; Brutus, my country's friend; know me for Brutus. — [Exit, charging the Enemy. Cato is overpowered, and falls.

Luc. O young and noble Cato, art thou down? Why, now thou diest as bravely as Titinius; And mayst be honour'd, being Cato's son.

1 Sold. Yield, or thou diest.

Luc. Only I yield to die: There is so much that thou wilt kill me straight; — [Offering Money. Kill Brutus, and be honour'd in his death.

1 Sold. We must not. — A noble prisoner! 2 Sold. Room, ho! Tell Antony, Brutus is ta'en.

1 Sold. I'll tell the news. — Here comes the general:

Enter Antony.

Brutus is ta'en, Brutus is ta'en, my lord.

Ant. Where is he?

Luc. Safe, Antony; Brutus is safe enough: I dare assure thee, that no enemy Shall ever take alive the noble Brutus: The gods defend him from so great a shame! When you do find him or alive, or dead, He will be found like Brutus, like himself.

Ant. This is not Brutus, friend; but, I assure you, A prize no less in worth: keep this man safe, Give him all kindness: I had rather have Such men my friends than enemies. Go on, And see whe'r Brutus be alive, or dead; And bring us word, unto Octavius' tent, How every thing is chanc'd. — [Exeunt.

SCENE V. — Another Part of the Field.

Enter Brutus, Dardanius, Cælius, Strato, and Volumnius.

Bru. Come, poor remains of friends, rest on this rock.

Cæli. Statilius shew'd the torch-light; but, my lord, He came not back; he is or ta'en, or slain.

Bru. Sit thee down, Cælius, slaying is the word; It is a deed in fashion. Hark thee, Cælius. — [Whispering.

Cæli. What, I, my lord? No, not for all the world.

Bru. Peace, then, no words.

Cæli. I'll rather kill myself.

Bru. Hark thee, Dardanius! [Whispers him. Dar. I do such a deed?

Cæli. O, Dardanius!

Dar. O, Cælius!

Cæli. What ill request did Brutus make to thee?

Dar. To kill him, Cælius: Look, he meditates.
JULIUS CAESAR.

ACT V.

Cle. Now is that noble vessel full of grief,
That it runs over even at his eyes.
Vol. What says my lord?

Brut. Why, this, Volumnius: The ghost of Cæsar hath appear’d to me
Two several times by night: at Sardis, once;
And, this last night, here in Philipp’l fields.
I know, my hour is come.

Vol. Not so, my lord.

Brut. Nay, I am sure it is, Volumnius.

Thou seest the world, Volumnius, how it goes;
Our enemies have beat us to the pit:
It is more worthy to leap in ourselves,
Than tarry till they push us. Good Volumnius,
Thou know’st, that we two went to school together;
Even for that our love of old I pray thee,
Hold thou my sword-hilts, whilst I run on it.

Vol. That’s not an office for a friend, my lord.

[Alarum still.]

Cle. Fly, fly, my lord; there is no tarrying here.

Brut. Farewell to thee; — and you; — and you,
Volumnius.

Strato, thou hast been all this while asleep;
Farewell to thee, too, Strato. — Countrymen,
My heart doth joy, that yet in all my life,
I found no man, but he was true to me.
I shall have glory by this losing day,
More than Octavius, and Mark Antony,
By this vile conquest shall attain unto.
So fare you well at once; for Brutus’ tongue
Hath almost ended his life’s history:
Night hangs upon mine eyes; my bones would rest,
That have but labour’d to attain this hour.

[Alarum. Cry within; Fly, fly, fly.

Cle. Fly, my lord, fly.

Brut. Hence; I will follow thee.

[Exeunt Clitus, Dardanius, and Volumnius.

I pr’ythee, Strato, stay thou by thy lord:
Thou art a fellow of a good respect;
Thy life hath had some smatch of honour in it:
Hold then my sword and turn away thy face,
While I do run upon it. Wilt thou, Strato?

Strat. Give me your hand first: Fare you well,
my lord.

Brut. Farewell, good Strato.—Cæsar, now be still,
I kill’d not thee with half so good a will.

[He runs on his Sword, and dies.

Alarum. Retreat. Enter Octavius, Antony,
Messala, Lucilius, and their Army.

Oct. What man is that?

Mes. My master’s man. — Strato, where is thy master?

Strat. Free from the bondage you are in, Messala;
The conquerors can but make a fire of him;
For Brutus only overcame himself,
And no man else hath honour by his death.

Luc. So Brutus should be found. — I thank thee,
Brutus,
That thou hast prov’d Lucilius’ saying true.

Oct. All that serv’d Brutus, I will entertain them.
Fellow, wilt thou bestow thy time with me?

Strat. Ay, if Messala will prefer me to you.

Oct. Do so, Messala.

Mes. How died my master, Strato?

Strat. I held the sword, and he did run on it.

Mes. Octavius, then take him to follow thee,
That did the latest service to my master.

Ant. This was the noblest Roman of them all;
All the conspirators, save only he,
Did that they did in envy of great Cæsar;
He only, in a general honest thought,
And common good to all, made one of them.
His life was gentle, and the elements
So mix’d in him, that Nature might stand up,
And say to all the world, This was a man!

Oct. According to his virtue let us use him,
With all respect and rights of burial.
Within my tent his bones to-night shall lie,
Most like a soldier, order’d honourably. —
So, call the field to rest: and let’s away,
To part the glories of this happy day. [Exeunt.

1 Receive into my service. 2 Recommend.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

ACT I.

Enter Demetrius and Philo.

Phi. Nay, but this dotage of our general's, O'erflows the measure: Those his goodwill eyes, That o'er the files and musters of the war Have glow'd like plated Mars, now bend, now turn, The office and devotion of their view. Upon a tawny front: his captain's heart, Which in the scuffles of great fights had burst The buckles on his breast, reneges all temper; And is become the bellows and the fan, To cool a gipsy's will.

Flourish. Enter Antony and Cleopatra, with their Trains; Eunuchs fanning her.

Take but good note, and you shall see in him The triple pillar of the world transform'd Into a strumpet's fool: behold and see.

Cleo. If it be love indeed, tell me how much.

Ant. There's begging in the love that can be reckoned.

Cleo. I'll set a bourn how far to be belov'd.

Ant. Then must thou needs find out new heaven, new earth.

Renounces. Bound or limit.

Enter an Attendant.

Att. News, my good lord, from Rome

Ant. Grates me: — The sun?

Cleo. Nay, hear them, Antony.

Fulvia, perchance, is angry; Or, who knows If the scarce-bearded Caesar have not sent His powerful mandate to you, Do this, or this;

Take in that kingdom, and enfranchise that;

Perform't, or else we damn thee.

Ant. How, my love!

Cleo. Perchance, — nay, and most like, You must not stay here longer, your dismission Is come from Caesar; therefore hear it, Antony.

Where's Fulvia's process? Caesar's, I would say? — Both?

Call in the messengers. — As I am Egypt's queen, Thou blushest, Antony; and that blood of thine Is Caesar's homager: else so thy cheek pays shame. When shrill-tongued Fulvia scolds.

Ant. Let Rome in Tyber melt! and the wide arch Of the rang'd empire fall! Here is my space;

Kingdoms are clay: our dungy earth alike Feeds beast as man: The nobleness of life Is, to do thus; when such a mutual pair [Embracing.

And such a twain can do't, in which, I bind,

On pain of punishment, the world to weep,
We stand up peerless.

Cleo. Excellent falsehood! Why did he marry Fulvia, and not love her? — I'll seem the fool I am not; Antony will be himself.

Ant. But stirr'd by Cleopatra. — Now, for the love of Love, and her soft hours, Let's not confound? the time with conference harsh: There's not a minute of our lives should stretch Without some pleasure now: What sport to-night? Cleo. Hear the ambassadors.

Ant. Fye, wrangling queen! Whom every thing becomes, to chide, to laugh, To weep; whose every passion fully strives To make itself, in thee, fair and admir'd! No messenger; but thine and all alone, To-night, we'll wander through the streets, and note The qualities of people. Come, my queen; Last night you did desire it: — Speak not to us.

[Exeunt Ant. and Cleop. with their Train.

Dem. Is Caesar with Antonius priz'd so slight? Phi. Sir, sometimes, when he is not Antony, He comes too short of that great property Which still should go with Antony.

Dem. I am full sorry, That he approves the common liar, who Thus speaks of him at Rome; But I will hope Of better deeds to-morrow. Rest you happy! — [Exeunt.

SCENE II. — Another Room.

Enter Charmian, Iras, Alexas, and a Soothsayer.

Char. Lord Alexas, sweet Alexas, most any thing Alexas, almost most absolute Alexas, where's the soothsayer that you praised so to the queen? O, that I knew this husband, which, you say, must change his horns with garlands!

Alex. Soothsayer.

Sooth. Your will?

Char. Is this the man? — Is't you, sir, that know things?

Sooth. In nature's infinite book of secrecy, A little I can read.

Alex. Show him your hand.

[Enter Enobarbus.

Eno. Bring in the banquet quickly: wine enough, Cleopatra's health to drink.

Char. Good sir, give me good fortune.

Sooth. I make not, but foresee.

Char. Pray, then, foresee me one.

Sooth. You shall be yet far fairer than you are.

Char. He means, in flesh.

Iras. No, you shall paint when you are old.

Char. Wrinkles forbid!

Alex. Vex not his prescience; be attentive.

Char. Hush!

Sooth. You shall be more beloved, than beloved.

Char. I had rather heat my liver with drinking.

Alex. Nay, hear him.

Char. Good now, some excellent fortune! Let me be married to three kings in a forenoon, and widow them all: find me to marry me with Octavius Caesar, and companion me with my mistress.

Sooth. You shall outline the lady whom you serve.

Char. O excellent! I love long life better than figs.

Sooth. You have seen and proved a fairer former fortune Than that which is to approach.

Char. Nay, come, tell Iras hers.

Alex. We'll know all our fortunes.

Eno. Mine, and most of our fortunes, to-night, shall be — drunk to bed.

Char. Pr'ythee, tell her but a worky-day fortune.

Sooth. Your fortunes are alike.

Sooth. I have said.

Char. Our worser thoughts heavens mend! Alexas, — come, his fortune, his fortune. — O, let him marry, sweet Isis?, I beseech thee! And let her die, and give him a worse! and let worse follow worse, till the worst of all follow him laughing to his grave. Good Isis, hear me this prayer, though thou deny me a matter of more weight; good Isis, I beseech thee!

Iras. Amen. Dear goddess, hear that prayer of the people! Dear Isis, keep decorum, and fortune him accordingly!

Char. Amen.

Char. Not he, the queen.

[Enter Cleopatra.

Cleo. Saw you my lord?

Eno. No lady.

Cleo. Was he not here?

Char. No, madam.

Cleo. He was disposed to mirth; but on a sudden A Roman thought hath struck him. — Enobarbus.

Eno. Madam.

Cleo. Seek him and bring him hither. Where's Alexas?

Alex. Here, madam, at your service. — My lord approaches.

[Enter Antony, with a Messenger and Attendants.

Cleo. We will not look upon him: Go with us.

[Exeunt Cleopatra, Enobarbus, Alexas, Iras, Charmian, Soothsayer, and Attendants.

Mess. Fulvia thy wife first came into the field.

Ant. Against my brother Lucius?

Mess. Ay: But soon that war had end, and the time's state Made friends of them, joining their force 'gainst Caesar;

Whose better issue in the war, from Italy, Upon the first encounter, drave them.

Ant. Well, What worst?

Mess. The nature of bad news infects the teller. Ant. When it concerns the fool, or coward. — On: Things, that are past, are done with me. — 'Tis thus: Who tells me true, though in his tale lie death, I hear him as he flatter'd.

Mess. Labienus (This is still news) hath, with his Parthian force, Extended Asia from Ephrætes; His conquering banner shook, from Syria To Lydia, and to Ionia;

Whilst —

Ant. Antony, thou wouldst say —

Mess. O, my lord! Ant. Speak to me home, mince not the general tongue;

Name Cleopatra as she's call'd in Rome; Rail thou in Fulvia's phrase: and taunt my faults With such full licence, as both truth and malice Have power to utter. O, then we bring forth weeds,

6 Know. 7 Consume. 8 Fame. 9 An Egyptian goddess. 10 Over-run.
SCENE II.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

When our quick winds lie still; and our ills told us, Is as our earing. Fare thee well a while.

Mess. At your noble pleasure. [Exit. Ant. From Sicily how the news? Speak there. 1 Ant. The man from Sicily. — Is there such an one?

2 Att. He stays upon your will.

Ant. Let him appear, — These strong Egyptian fetters I must break,

Enter another Messenger.

Or lose myself in dotage. — What are you?

2 Mess. Fulvia thy wife is dead.

Ant. Where died she?

2 Mess. In Sicily:

Her length of sickness, with what else more serious
Importeth thee to know, this bears. [Gives a Letter. Ant. [Exit Messenger.

There's a great spirit gone! Thus did I desire it:
What our contempts do often hurt from us,
We wish it ours again; the present pleasure,
By revolution lowering, does become
The opposite of itself: she's good, being gone;
The hand could pluck her back, that shov'd her on.
I must from this enchanting queen break off;
Ten thousand harms, more than the ills I know,
My idleness doth hatch. — How now! Enobarbus!

Enter Enobarbus.

Eno. What's your pleasure, sir?

Ant. I must with haste from hence.

Eno. Why then, we kill all our women: We see how mortal an unkindness is to them; if they suffer our departure, death's the word.

Ant. I must be gone.

Eno. Under compelling occasion, let women die:
It were pity to cast them away for nothing; though, between them and a great cause, they should be esteemed nothing. Cleopatra, catching but the least noise of this, dies instantly; I have seen her die twenty times upon far poorer moment.

Ant. She is cunning past man's thought.

Eno. Alack, sir, no; her passions are made of nothing but the finest part of pure love: We cannot call her winds and waters, sighs and tears; they are greater storms and tempests than almanacks can report: this cannot be cunning in her; if it be, she makes a shower of rain as well as Jove.

Ant. 'Would I had never seen her!

Eno. O, sir, you had then left unseen a wonderful piece of work; which not to have been blessed withal, would have discredited your travel.

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Sir?

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Fulvia?

Ant. Dead.

Eno. Why, sir, give the gods a thankful sacrifice.
When it pleases their deities to take the wife of man from him, it shows to man the tailors of the earth; comforting therein, that when old robes are worn out, there are others to make new. If there were no more women but Fulvia, then had you indeed a cut, and the case to be lamented: this grief is crowned with consolation; and, indeed, the tears live in an onion, that should water this sorrow.

Ant. The business she hath broached in the state,
Cannot endure my absence.

Eno. And the business you have broached here, cannot be without you; especially that of Cleopatra's,
which wholly depends on your abode.

Ant. No more light answers. Let our officers
Have notice what we propose. I shall break
The cause of our experience to the queen,
And get her love to part. For not alone
The death of Fulvia, with more urgent touches,
Do strongly speak to us: but the letters too
Of many our contriving friends in Rome
Petition us at home: Sextus Pompeius
Hath given the bare to Caesar, and commands
The empire of the sea: our slippery people (Whose love is never link'd to the deserver, Till his deserts are past,) begin to throw
Pompey the great, and all his dignities,
Upon his son; who, high in name and power,
Higher than both in blood and life, stands up
For the main soldier: whose quality, going on,
The sides o'the world may danger: Much is breeding,
Which, like the courser's hair, hath yet but life,
And not a serpent's poison. Say, our pleasure,
To such whose place is under us, requires
Our quick remove from hence.

Eno. I shall do't. [Exit.

SCENE III.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Alexas.

Cleo. Where is he?

Char. I did not see him since.

Cleo. See where he is, who's with him, what he does: —
I did not send you: — If you find him sad,
Say, I am dancing; if in mirth, report
That I am sudden sick: Quick, and return.

Enter Alexas.

Char. Madam, methinks, if you did love him dearly,
You do not hold the method to enforce
The like from him.

Cleo. What should I do, I do not?

Char. In each thing give him way, cross him in nothing.

Cleo. Thou teasteach like a fool: the way to lose him.
Char. Tempt him not so far: I wish, forbear;
In time we hate that which we often fear.

Enter Antony.

But here comes Antony.

Cleo. I am sick, and sullen.

Ant. I am sorry to give breathing to my purpose. —
Char. Help me away, dear Charmian, I shall fall;
It cannot be thus long, the sides of nature
Will not sustain it.

Ant. Now, my dearest queen, —
Cleo. Pray you, stand further from me.

Ant. What's the matter?

Cleo. I know, by that same eye, there's some good news.

What says the married woman? — You may go;
'Would, she had never given you leave to come!
Let her not say, 'tis I that keep you here,
I have no power upon you; hers you are.

Ant. The gods best know. —
Cleo. O, never, was there queen,

3 In some editions minus.

4 Tilling, ploughing; prepares us to produce good seed.

5 Leave.

6 Look as if I did not send you.
So mightily betray'd! Yet, at the first, I saw the treasons planted.

Ant. Cleopatra, —

Cleo. Why should I think, you can be mine, and true, Though you in swearing shake the throne'd gods, Who have been false to Fulvia? Riotous madness, To be entangled with those mouth-made vows, Which break themselves in swearing! Ant. Most sweet queen,— Cleo. Nay, pray you, seek no colour for your going, But bid farewell, and go: when you sued staying, Then was the time for words: No going then; — Eternity was in our lips, and eyes; Bliss in our brows bent?; none our parts so poor, But was a race of heaven; They are so still, Or thou, the greatest soldier of the world, Art turn'd the greatest liar.

Ant. How now, lady! Cleo. I would, I had thy inches; thou shouldst know, There were a heart in Egypt.

Ant. Hear me, queen: The strong necessity of time commands Our services awhile; but my full heart Remains in use with you. Our Italy Shines o'er with civil swords: Sextus Pompeius Makes his approaches to the port of Rome: Equality of two domestick powers Breeds scrupulous faction: The hated, grown to strength, Are newly grown to love: the condemn'd Pompey, Rich in his father's honour, creeps apace Into the hearts of such as have not thriv'd Upon the present state, whose numbers threaten; And quietness, grown sick of rest, would purge By any desperate change: My more particular, And that which most with you should safe my going, Is Fulvia's death.

Cleo. Though age from folly could not give me freedom, It does from childhood: — Can Fulvia die?

Ant. She's dead, my queen: Look here, and, at thy sovereign leisure, read The garboils she awak'd; at the last, best: See, when, and where she died.

Cleo. O most false love! Where be the sacred vials thou shouldst fill With sorrowful water? Now I see, I see, In Fulvia's death, how mine receiv'd shall be.

Ant. Quarrel no more, but be prepar'd to know The purposes I bear; which are, or cease, As you shall give the advice: Now, by the fire, That quickens Nilus' slime, I go from hence, Thy soldier, servant; making peace, or war, As thou affect'st.

Cleo. Cut my lace, Charmian, come; — But let it be. — I am quickly ill, and well: So Antony loves.

Ant. My precious queen, forbear; And give true evidence to his love, which stands An honourable trial.

Cleo. So Fulvia told me. I pr'ythee, turn aside, and weep for her; Then bid adieu to me, and say, the tears Belong to Egypt?; Good now, play one scene Of excellent dissembling; and let it look Like perfect honour.

Ant. You'll heat my blood; no more.

7 The arch of our eye-brows. 8 Smack or flavour. 9 Gâte. 1 The commotion she occasion'd. 10 To me, the queen of Egypt.

Cleo. You can do better yet; but this is meetly.

Ant. Now by my sword,

Cleo. And target. — Still he mends; But this is not the best: Look, pr'ythee, Charmian, How this Herculean Roman does become The carriage of his chafe.3

Ant. I'll leave you, lady.

Cleo. Courteous lord, one word, Sir, you and I must part, — but that's not it: Sir, you and I have lov'd, — but there's not it; That you know well: Something it is I would,— O, my oblivion 4 is a very Antony, And I am all forgotten. But that your royalty Holds idleness your subject, I should take you For idleness itself.

Cleo. 'Tis sweating labour, To bear such idleness so near the heart As Cleopatra this. But, sir, forgive me; Since my becomings kill me, when they do not Eye well to you: Your honour calls you hence; Therefore be deaf to my unpitied folly, And all the gods go with you! upon your sword Sit laurel'd victory! and smooth success Be strew'd before your feet!

Ant. Let us go.

Cleo. Our separation so abides, and flies, That thou, residing here, go'st yet with me, And I, hence fleeting, here remain with thee.

Away. [Exeunt.

Enter Octavius Cæsar, Lepidus, and Attendants.

Cas. You may see, Lepidus, and henceforth know It is not Cæsar's natural vice to hate One great competitor: From Alexandria This is the news; He fishes, drinks, and wastes The lamps of night in revel: is not more manlike Than Cleopatra; nor the queen Ptolemy More womanly than he: hardly gave audience, or Vouchsaf'd to think he had partners: You shall find there A man, who is the abstract of all faults That all men follow.

Lep. I must not think, there are Evils enough to darken all his goodness: His faults, in him, seem as the spots of heaven, More fiery by night's blackness; hereditary, Rather than purchas'd; what he cannot change, Than what he chooses.

Cas. You are too indulgent: Let us grant, it is not Amiss to press the bed of Ptolemy; To give a kingdom for a mirth; to sit And keep the turn of tippling with a slave; To reel the streets at noon, and stand the buffet With knaves unworthy: say, this becomes him, (As his composure must be rare indeed, Whom these things cannot blemish,) yet must Antony No way excuse his soils, when we do bear So great weight in his lightness. If he fill'd His vacancy with his voluptuousness, Full surfeits, and the dryness of his bones, Call on him for: but, to confound 7 such time, That drums him from his sport, and speaks as loud

3 Rage. 4 Oblivious memory. 5 Procured by his own fault. 6 Visit him. 7 Consume.
ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

SCENE IV. — Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Mardian

Cleo. Charmian,—
Char. Madam.
Cleo. Ha, ha! —
Give me to drink mandragora.4
Char. Why, madam?
Cleo. That I might sleep out this great gap of time,
My Antony is away.
Char. You think of him
Too much.
Cleo. O, treason! —
Char. Madam, I trust, not so.
Cleo. O Charmian,
Where think'st thou he is now? Stands he, or sits he?
Or does he walk? or is he on his horse?
Do bravely, horse! for 'twas thou whom thou mov'st?
The demi-Atlas of this earth, the arm
And burgonet 9 of men. — He's speaking now,
Or murmuring, Where's my serpent of old Nile?
For so he calls me: Now I feed myself
With most delicious poison: — Think on me,
That am with Phæbus' amorous pinches black,
And wrinkled deep in time? Broad-fronted Caesar,
When thou wast here above the ground, I was
A morsel for a monarch: and great Pompey
Would stand, and make his eyes grow in my brow;
There would he anchor his aspect, and die
With looking on his life.

Enter Alexas.

Alex. Sovereign of Egypt, hail!
Cleo. How much unlike art thou Mark Antony?
Yet coming from him, that great medicine hath
With his tinct gilded thee. —
How goes it with my brave Mark Antony?
Alex. Last thing he did, dear queen,
He kiss'd, — the last of many doubled kisses, —
This orient pearl; — His speech sticks in my heart.
Cleo. Mine ear must pluck it thence.
Alex. Good friend, quoth he,
Say, The firm Roman to great Egypt sends
This treasure of an oyster; at whose foot,
To mend the petty present, I will piece
Her opulent throne with kingdoms; All the east,
Say thou, shall call her mistress. So he nodded,
And soberly did mount a termanant 6 stead,
Who neigh'd so high, that what I would have spoke
Was beastly dumb'd by him.
Cleo. What, was he sad, or merry?
Alex. Like to the time o' the year between the extremes
Of hot and cold; he was nor sad, nor merry.
Cleo. O well-divided disposition! — Note him,
Note him, good Charmian, 'tis the man; but note him:
He was not sad: for he would shine on those
That make their looks by his; he was not merry;
Which seem'd to tell them, his remembrance lay
In Egypt with his joy: but between both;
O heavenly mingle! — Be'st thou sad or merry,
The violence of either thee becomes;
So does it no man else. — Met'st thou my posts?

Enter a Messenger.

Lep. Here's more news.
Mess. Thy biddings have been done; and every hour,
Most noble Caesar, shalt thou have report
How 'tis abroad. Pompey is strong at sea;
And it appears, he is belov'd of those
That only have fear'd Caesar: to the ports
The discontents 8 repair, and men's reports
Give him much wrong'd.

Cleo. I should have known no less: —
It hath been taught us from the primal state,
That he, which is, was wish'd, until he were;
And the ebb'd man, ne'er lov'd, till ne'er worth love,
Comes dear'd, by being lack'd. 9 This common body,
Like a vagabond flag upon the stream,
Goes to, and back, lackeying the varying tide,
To rot itself with motion.

Mess. Caesar, I bring thee word,
Menocrates and Menas, famous pirates,
Make the sea serve them; which they ear and wound
With keels of every kind: Many hot inroads
They make in Italy; the borders maritime
Lack blood 1 to think on't, and flush youth revolt;
No vessel can peep forth, but 'tis as soon
Taken as seen; for Pompey's name strikes more,
Than could his war resisted.

Cleo. Antony,
Leave thy lascivious wassels. 2 When thou once
Was beaten from Modena, where thou slew'st
Hirtius and Pansa, consuls, at thy heel
Did famine follow; whom thou fought'st against Though daintily brought up, with patience more
Than savages could suffer: Thou didst drink
What beasts would cough at: thy palate then did deign
The roughest berry on the roudest hedge;
Yea, like the stag, when snow the pasture sheets,
The barks of trees thou brows'dst; on the Alps,
It is reported, thou didst eat strange flesh,
Which some did die to look on: And all this
(It wounds thine honour, that I speak it now,)
Was borne so like a soldier, that thy cheek
So must as lank'd not.

Lep. It is pity of him.
Cleo. Let his shame's quickly
Drive him to Rome: 'Tis time we twain
Did show ourselves i' the field; and, to that end,
Assemble we immediate council: Pompey
Thrives in our idleness.

Lep. To-morrow, Caesar,
I shall be furnish'd to inform you rightly
Both, what by sea and land I can be able,
To front this present time.

Cleo. It is my business too.
Farewell.

Lep. Farewell, my lord: What you shall know time mean
Of stirs abroad, I shall beseech you, sir,
To let me be partaker.

Cleo. Doubt not, sir; I knew it for my bond. [Exeunt.

8 Discontented.
9 Endured by being missed.
1 Turn pale.
2 Feasting; in the old copy it is esautheis, i. e. vassals.
3 My bounden duty.

SCENE V. — Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Mardian

Cleo. Charmian,—
Char. Madam.
Cleo. Ha, ha! —
Give me to drink mandragora.4

Antony and Cleopatra

ACT II.

SCENE I. — Messina.  A Room in Pompey's House.

Enter Pompey, Menecrates, and Menas.

Pom. If the great gods be just, they shall assist The deeds of justest men.

Mene. Know, worthy Pompey, That what they do delay, they not deny.

Pom. Whiles we are suitors to their throne, decays The thing we sue for.

Mene. We, ignorant of ourselves, Beg often our own arms, which the wise powers Deny us for our good; so find we profit, By losing of our prayers.

Pom. I shall do well: The people love me, and the sea is mine; My power's a crescent, and my auguring hope Says, it will come to the full. Mark Antony In Egypt sits at dinner, and will make No wars without doors: Caesar gets money, where He loses hearts: Lepidus flatters both, Of both is flatter'd; but he neither loves, Nor either cares for him.

Men. Caesar and Lepidus Are in the field; a mighty strength they carry.

Pom. Where have you this? 'tis false.

Men. From Silvius, sir.

Pom. He dreams; I know, they are in Rome together, Looking for Antony: But all charms of love, Salt Cleopatra, soften thy wan'd lip! Let witchcraft join with beauty! Tie up the libertine in a field of feasts, Keep his brain fuming; Epicurean cooks, Sharpen with cloyless sauce his appetite; That sleep and feeding may provoke his honour, Even till a Lethe'd dulness. — How now, Varrius?

Enter Varrius.

Var. This is most certain that I shall deliver: Mark Antony is every hour in Rome Expected; since he went from Egypt, 'tis A space for further travel.

Pom. I could have given less matter A better ear. — Menas, I did not think, This amorous surfeiter would have don'd his helm For such a petty war: his soldiery Is twice the other twain: But let us rear The higher our opinion, that our stirring Declined, faded. To. Done on; i.e. put on. Helmet.

Cleo. By Isis, I will give thee bloody teeth, If thou with Caesar paragon again My man of men, Char. By your most gracious pardon, I sing but after you.

Cleo. My salad days; When I was green in judgment: — Cold in blood, To say, as I said then! — But, come, away; Get me ink and paper; he shall have every day A several greeting, or I'll unpeople Egypt.

[Exeunt.

Enter Enobarbus and Lepidus.

Lep. Good Enobarbus, 'tis a worthy deed, And shall become you well, to entreat your captain To soft and gentle speech.

Eno. I shall entreat him To answer like himself: If Caesar move him, Let Antony look over Caesar's head, And speak as loud as Mars. By Jupiter, Were I the wearer of Antonius' beard, I would not shave to-day.

Lep. 'Tis not a time For private stomaching.

Eno. Every time Serves for the matter that is then born in it.

Lep. But small to greater matters must give way. Eno. Not if the small come first.

Lep. Your speech is passion: But, pray you, stir no embers up. Here comes The noble Antony.

Enter Antony and Ventidius.

Eno. And yonder, Caesar.

Enter Caesar, Mecenæs, and Agrippa.

Ant. If we compose well here, to Parthia: Hark you, Ventidius.

Cas. I do not know, Mecenæs; ask Agrippa.

Quarrel. Agree.
Noble friends, that which combin'd us was most great, and let not
A leaner action rend us. What's amiss,
May it be gently heard: When we debate
Our trivial difference loud, we do commit
Murder in healing wounds: Then, noble partners,
(The rather, for I earnestly beseech,) Touch you the sourest points with sweetest terms,
Nor curstness 7 grow to the matter.

Ant. 'Ts spoken well; were we before our armies, and to fight,
I should so thus.

Cas. Welcome to Rome.

Ant. Thank you.

Cas. Sit.

Ant. Sit, sir!

Cas. Nay,

Then —

Ant. I learn, you take things ill, which are not so;
Or, being concerned, you not.

Cas. I must be laugh'd at,
If, or for nothing, or a little, I
Should say myself offended; and with you
Chiefly 't the world: more laugh'd at, that I should Once name you derogately, when to sound your name
It not concern'd me.

Ant. My being in Egypt, Caesar,
What was't to you?

Cas. No more than my residing here at Rome
Might be to you in Egypt: Yet, if you there
Did practise 8 on my state, your being in Egypt
Might be my question.

Ant. How intend you, practis'd?

Cas. You may be pleas'd to catch at mine intent,
By what did here befall me. Your wife, and brother,
Made wars upon me; and their contestation
Was theme for you, you were the word of war.

Ant. You do mistake your business; my brother never
Did urge me in his act: I did enquire it;
And have my learning from some true reports,
That drew their swords with you. Did he not rather Discredit my authority with yours;
And make the wars alike against my stomach,
Having alike your cause? Of this, my letters
Before did satisfy you. If you'll patch a quarrel,
As matter whole you have not to make it with,
It must not be with this.

Cas. You praise yourself
By laying defects of judgment to me; but
You patch'd up your excuses.

Ant. Not so, not so;
I know you could not lack, I am certain on't,
Very necessity of this thought, that I,
Your partner in the cause 'gainst which he fought,
Could not with graceful eyes attend those wars
Which fronted 1 mine own peace. As for my wife,
I would had her spirit in such another:
The third o' the world is yours; which with a snaffle
You may pace easy, but not such a wife.

Eno. Would we had all such wives, that the men might go to wars with the women!

Ant. So much uncurable, her garboils 9 Caesar
Made out of her impatience, (which not wanted Shrewdness of policy too,) I grieving grant,
Did you too much disquiet: for that, you must
But say, I could not help it.

7 Let not ill humour be added. 8 Use bad arts or stratagems. 9 Subject of conversation. 1 Opposed. 2 Commotions.

Cas. I wrote to you,
When rioting in Alexandria; you
Did pocket up my letters, and with taunts
Did give my missive 3 out of audience.

Ant. Sir,
He fell upon me, ere admitted; then
Three kings I had newly feasted, and did want
Of what I was i' the morning: but, next day,
I told him of myself; which was as much
As to have ask'd him pardon: Let this fellow
Be nothing of our strife; if we contend,
Out of our question 4 wipe him.

Cas. You have broken
The article of your oath; which you shall never Have tongue to charge me with.

Lep. Soft, Caesar.

Ant. No, Lepidus, let him speak;
The honour's sacred which he talks on now,
Supposing that I lack'd it: But on, Caesar;
The article of my oath, —

Cas. To lend me arms, and aid, when I requir'd them;
The which you both denied.

Ant. Neglected, rather;
And then, when poison'd hours had bound me up
From mine own knowledge. As nearly as I may,
I'll play the penitent to you: but mine honesty
Shall not make poor my greatness, nor my power
Work without it: Truth is, that Fulvia,
To have me out of Egypt, made wars here;
For which myself, the ignorant motive, do
So far ask pardon, as befits mine honour
To stoop in such a case.

Lep. 'Tis nobly spoken.

Mec. If it might please you, to enforce no further
The griefs 5 between ye: to forget them quite,
Were to remember that the present need
Speaks to atone 6 you.

Lep. Worthy spoke, Mecenas.

Eno. Or, if you borrow one another's love for the instant, you may, when you hear no more words of Pompey, return it again: you shall have time to wrangle in, when you have nothing else to do.

Ant. Thou art a soldier only; speak no more.

Eno. That truth should be silent, I had almost forgot.

Ant. You wrong this presence, therefore speak
no more.

Eno. Go to, then; your considerate stone.

Cas. I do not much dislike the matter, but
The manner of his speech: for it cannot be,
We shall remain in friendship, our conditions
So differing in their acts. Yet, if I knew
What hoop should hold us staunch, from edge to edge
O' the world I would pursue it.

Agr. Give me leave, Caesar, —

Cas. Speak, Agrippa.

Agr. Thou hast a sister by the mother's side,
Admir'd Octavia: great Mark Antony
Is now a widower.

Cas. Say not so, Agrippa;
If Cleopatra heard you, your reproof
Were well deserv'd of rashness.

Ant. I am not married, Caesar: let me hear
Agrippa further speak.

Agr. To hold you in perpetual amity,
To make you brothers, and to knit your hearts
With an unslippering knot, take Antony

Octavius to his wife: whose beauty claims
No worse a husband than the best of men;
Whose virtue, and whose general graces, speak
That which none else can utter. By this marriage,
All little jealousies, which now seem great,
And all great fears, which now import their dangers,
Would then be nothing: truths would be but tales
Where now half tales be truths: her love to both,
Would, each to other, and all loves to both,
Draw after her. Pardon what I have spoke;
For 'tis a studied, not a present thought,
By duty ruminated.

Ant. Will Caesar speak?
Cas. Not till he hears how Antony is touch'd
With what is spoke already.

Ant. What power is in Agrippa,
If I would say, Agrippa, be it so,
To make this good?

Cas. The power of Caesar, and
His power unto Octavia.

Ant. May I never
To this good purpose, that so fairly shows,
Dream of impediment! — Let me have thy hand:
Further this act of grace; and, from this hour,
The heart of brothers govern in our loves,
And sway our great designs!

Cas. There is my hand.
A sister I bequeath you, whom no brother
Did ever love so dearly: Let her live
'To join our kingdoms, and our hearts; and never Fly off our loves again!

Lep. Happily, amen!

Ant. I did not think to draw my sword 'gainst
Pompey;
For he hath laid strange courtesies, and great,
Of late upon me: I must thank him only,
Lest my remembrance suffer ill report;
At heel of that, defy him.

Lep. Time calls upon us:
Of us must Pompey presently be sought,
Or else he seeks out us.

Ant. And where lies he?
Cas. About the Mount Misenum.

Ant. What's his strength
By land?

Cas. Great and increasing: but by sea
He is an absolute master.

Ant. So is the fame.
'Would, we had spoke together! Haste we for it:
Yet, ere we put ourselves in arms, despatch we
The business we have talk'd of.

Cas. With most gladness;
And do invite you to my sister's view,
Whither straight I will lead you.

Lep. Let us, Lepidus,
Not lack your company,

Lep. Noble Antony,
Not sickness should detain me.

Mec. Welcome from Egypt, sir.

Eno. Half the heart of Caesar, worthy Mecenas!
— my honourable friend, Agrippa! —

Agr. Good Enobarbus!

Mec. We have cause to be glad, that matters are so well digested. You staid well by it in Egypt.

Eno. Ay, sir; we did sleep day out of countenance, and made the night light with drinking.

Mec. Eight wild boars roasted whole at a breakfast, and but twelve persons there; Is this true?

Eno. This was but as a fly by an eagle: we had much more monstrous matter of feast, which worthily deserved noting.

Mec. She's a most triumphant lady, if report be square to her.

Eno. When she first met Mark Antony, she pursed up his heart upon the river of Cydnus.

Agr. There she appeared indeed; or my reporter devised well for her.

Eno. I will tell you:
The barge she sat in, like a burnish'd throne,
Burn'd on the water: the poop was beaten gold;
Purple the sails, and so perfum'd, that
The winds were love-sick with them; the oars were silver;
Which to the tune of flutes kept stoped, and made
The water, which they beat, to follow faster,
As amorous of their strokes. For her own person,
It beggar'd all description: she did lie
In her pavilion, (cloth of gold, of tissue,) O'er-picturing that Venus, where we see,
The fancy out-work nature: on each side her,
Stood pretty dimpled boys, like smiling Cupids,
With diverse-colour'd fans, whose wind did seem
To blow the delicate cheek's which they did cool,
And what they undid, did.

Agr. O, rare for Antony!

Eno. Her gentlewomen, like the Nereides,
So many mermaids, tended her t' the eyes,
And made their bends adornings: at the helm
A seeming mermaid steers; the silken tackles
Swell with the touches of those flower-soft hands,
That rarely frame the office. From the barge
A strange invisible perfume hits the sense
Of the adjacent wharfs. The city cast
Her people out upon her; and Antony,
Enthron'd in the market-place, did sit alone,
Whistling to the air; which, but for vacancy,
Had gone to gaze on Cleopatra too,
And made a gap in nature.

Agr. Rare Egyptian!

Eno. Upon her landing, Antony sent to her,
Invited her to supper: she replied,
It should be better, he became her guest;
Which she entreated: Our courteous Antony,
Whom ne'er the word of No woman heard speak,
Being barber'd ten times o'er, goes to the feast;
And, for his ordinary, pays his heart,
For what his eyes eat only.

Agr. Royal wench!

She made great Caesar lay his sword to bed.

Eno. I saw her once
Hop forty paces through the public street;
And having lost her breath, she spoke, and panted,
That she did make defect, perfection,
And, breathless, power breathe forth.

Mec. Now Antony must leave her utterly.

Eno. Never; he will not.

Age cannot wither her, nor custom stale
Her infinite variety: Other women
Clay th' appetites they feed; but she makes hungry
Where most she satisfies. For vilest things
Become themselves in her.

Mec. If beauty, wisdom, modesty, can settle
The heart of Antony, Octavia is
A blessed lottery to him.

Agr. Let us go.

Good Enobarbus, make yourself my guest,
Whilst you abide here.

SCENE III.

Eno. Humbly, sir, I thank you. [Exit.

SCENE III. — A Room in Caesar’s House.

Enter Caesar, Antony, Octavia between them; Attendants and a Soothsayer.

Ant. The world, and my great office, will sometimes Divide me from your bosom.

Octa. All which time Before the gods my knee shall bow in prayers To them for you.

Ant. Good night, sir. — My Octavia, Read not my blemishes in the world’s report; I have not kept my square; but that to come Shall all be done by the rule. Good night, dear lady. —

Octa. Good night, sir.

Cas. Good night. [Exit Caesar and Octavia.

Ant. Now, sirrah! you do wish yourself in Egypt? Sooth. Would I had never come from thence, nor you Thither!

Ant. If you can, your reason?

Sooth. I see’t in My motion, have it not in my tongue: But yet Hie you again to Egypt.

Ant. Say to me, Whose fortunes shall rise higher, Caesar’s, or mine? Sooth. Caesar’s.

Therefore, O Antony, stay not by his side: Thy demon, that’s thy spirit which keeps thee, is Noble, courageous, high, unmatchable, Where Caesar’s is not; but near him, thy angel Becomes a Fear, as being o’erpower’d; therefore Make space enough between you.

Ant. Speak this no more. Sooth. To none but thee; no more, but when to thee.

If thou dost play with him at any game, Thou art sure to lose; and, of that natural luck, He beats thee ’gainst the odds; thy lustre thickens, When he shines by: I say again, thy spirit Is all afraid to govern thee near him; But, he away, ‘tis noble.

Ant. Get thee gone: Say to Ventidius, I would speak with him: [Exit Soothsayer. He shall to Parthia. — Be it art, or hap, He hath spoken true; the very dice obey him; And, in our sports, my better cunning faits Under his chance: if we draw lots, he speeds: His cocks do win the battles still of mine, When it is all to nought; and his quails ever Beat mine, inhoop’d at odds. I will to Egypt: And, though I make this marriage for my peace,

Enter Ventidius.

I the cast my pleasure lies: — O, come, Ventidius, You must to Parthia; your commission’s ready: Follow me, and receive it. [Exit.

SCENE IV. — A Street.

Enter Lepidus, Mezentias, and Agrrippa.

Lep. Trouble yourselves no further: pray you hasten

Your generals after.

1 The ancients used to match quails as we match cocks.

2 Inclosed.

Antony and Cleopatra.
Mess. Will it please you hear me? Cleo. I have a mind to strike thee, ere thou speakest: Yet, if thou say, Antony lives, is well, Or friends with Caesar, or not captive to him, I'll set thee in a shower of gold, and hail Rich pearls upon thee. Cleo. Madam, he's well. Mess. And friends with Caesar. Cleo. Thou'rt an honest man. Mess. Caesar and he are greater friends than ever. Cleo. Make thee a fortune from me. Mess. But yet, madam — Cleo. I do not like but yet, it does allay The good precedence; 'tis upon but yet: But yet is as a gaoler to bring forth Some monstrous malefactor. Pr'ythee, friend, Pour out the pack of matter to mine ear, The good and bad together: He's friends with Caesar; In state of health, thou say'st; and, thou say'st free. Mess. Free, madam! no; I made no such report: He's bound unto Octavia. Cleo. I am pale, Charmian. Mess. Madam, he's married to Octavia. Cleo. The most infectious pestilence upon thee! [Strikes him down. Mess. Good madam, patience. Cleo. What say you? — Hence. [Strikes him again. Horrible villain! or I'll spur thine eyes Like balls before me; I'll unhair thy head; [She hales him up and down. Thou shalt be whipp'd with wire, and strew'd in brine, Snarling in ling'ring pickle. Mess. Gracious madam, I, that do bring the news, made not the match. Cleo. Say, 'tis not so, a province I will give thee, And make thy fortunes proud: the blew thou hadst Shall make thy peace, for moving me to rage; And I will boot thee with what gift beside Thy modesty can beg. Mess. He's married, madam. Cleo. Rogue, thou hast liv'd too long. [Draws a Dagger. Mess. Nay, then I'll run: — What mean you, madam? I have made no fault. [Exit. Char. Good madam, keep yourself within yourself; The man is innocent. Cleo. Some innocents 'scape not the thunderbolt. — Melt Egypt into Nile! and kindly creatures Turn all to serpents! — Call the slave again; Though I am mad, I will not bite him: — Call. Char. He is afraid to come. Cleo. I will not hurt him: — These hands do lack nobility, that they strike A meaner than myself; since I myself Have given myself the cause. — Come hither, sir. Re-enter Messenger. Though it be honest, it is never good To bring bad news: Give to a gracious message An * or mode of tongues; but let ill tidings tell Themselves, when they be felt. Mess. I have done my duty. Cleo. Is he married? I cannot hate thee worse than I do, If thou again say, Yes. 8 Recompense. Mess. He is married, madam. Cleo. The gods confound thee! dost thou hold there still? Mess. Should I lie, madam? Cleo. O, I would, thou didst; So half my Egypt were submerg'd, and made A cistern for seal'd snakes! Go, get thee hence; Hadst thou Narcissus in thy face, to me Thou wouldst appear most ugly. He is married? Mess. I crave your highness' pardon. Cleo. He is married? Mess. Take no offence, that I would not offend you: To punish me for what you make me do, Seems much unequal: He is married to Octavia. Cleo. O, that his fault should make a knife of thee That art not! — What? thou'rt sure of't? — Get thee hence: The merchandize which thou hast brought from Rome Are all too dear for me; Lie they upon thy hand, And be undone by 'em! [Exit Messenger. Char. Good your highness, patience. Cleo. In praising Antony, I have displeased Caesar. Char. Many times, madam. Cleo. I am paid for't now. Lead me from hence, I faint; O Iras, Charmian,— 'Tis no matter: — Go to the fellow, good Alexas; bid him Report the feature of Octavia, her years, Her inclination, let him not leave out The colour of her hair: — bring me word quickly. — [Exit Alexas. Let him for ever go; — Let him not — Charmian, Though he be painted one way like a Gorgon, T'other way he's a Mars: — Bid you Alexas [To Mardian. Bring me word, how tall she is. — Pity me, Charmian, But do not speak to me. — Lead me to my chamber. [Exeunt. SCENE VI. — Near Misenum. Enter Pompey and Menas, at one side, with Drum and Trumpet: at another, Cæsar, Lepidus, Antony, Eubulus, Mæcænas, with Soldiers marching. Pom. Your hostages I have, so have you mine; And we shall talk before we fight. Cas. Most meet, That first we come to words; and therefore have we Our written purposes before us sent; Which, if thou hast consider'd, let us know If 't will tie up thy discontented sword; And carry back to Sicily much tall 9 youth That else must perish here. Pom. To you all three, The senators alone of this great world, Chief factors for the gods, — I do not know, Wherefore my father should revengers want, Having a son, and friends; since Julius Cæsar, Who at Philippi the good Brutus ghosted 1, There saw you labouring for him. What was it, That mov'd pale Cassius to conspire? And what Made the all-honour'd, honest, Roman Brutus, With the arm'd rest, courteous of beauteous freedom, To drench the Capitol; but that they would Have one man but a man? And that is it, Hath made me rig my navy; at whose burden

8 Recompense.

9 Brave. 1 Haunted.
The anger'd ocean foams; with which I meant To scourge the ingratitude that despiteful Rome Cast on my noble father.

Cæs. Take your time.

Ant. Thou canst not fear us, Pompey, with thy sails,
We'll speak with thee at sea; at land, thou know'st How much we do o'er-count thee.

Pom. At land, indeed, Thou dost o'er-count me of my father's house:
But, since the cuckoo builds not for himself, Remain in't as thou mayst.

Lep. Be pleas'd to tell us,
(For this is from the present,) how you take The offers we have sent you.

Cæs. There's the point.

Ant. Which do not be entreated to, but weigh What it is worth embrac'd.

To try a larger fortune.

Pom. You have made me offer Of Sicily, Sardinia; and I must Rid all the sea of pirates; then, to send Measures of wheat to Rome: This 'greed upon, To part with unhack'd edges, and bear back Our targe undinted.

Pom. Know then, I came before you, here, a man prepar'd To take this offer: But Mark Antony Put me to some impatience:— Though I lose The praise of it by telling, You must know, When Caesar and your brothers were at blows, Your mother came to Sicily, and did find Her welcome friendly.

Ant. I have heard it, Pompey; And am well studied for a liberal thanks, Which I do owe you.

Pom. Let me have your hand:
I did not think, sir, to have met you here.

Ant. The beds i' the east are soft; and thanks to you,
That call'd me, timelier than my purpose, hither, For I have gain'd by it.

Cæs. Since I saw you last, There is a change upon you.

Pom. Well, I know not What counts harsh fortune casts upon my face; But in my bosom shall she never come, To make my heart her vassal.

Lep. Well met here.

Pom. I hope so, Lepidus.—Thus we are agreed: I crave our composition may be written, And seal'd between us.

Cæs. That's the next to do.

Pom. We'll feast each other, ere we part; and let us Draw lots who shall begin.

Ant. That will I, Pompey.

Pom. No, Antony, take the lot: but, first, Or last, your fine Egyptian cookery Shall have the fame. I have heard, that Julius Caesar Grew fat with feasting there.

Ant. You have heard much.

Pom. I have fair meanings, sir.

Ant. And fair words to them.

Pom. Then so much have I heard:
And I have heard, Apollodorus carried —

Ant. No more of that:—He did so.

Pom. What, I pray you?

Ant. A certain queen to Caesar in a mattress.

Pom. I know thee now;—How far'st thou, soldier?

Ant. Well:
And well am like to do: for, I perceive, Four feasts are toward.

Pom. Let me shake thy hand;
I never hated thee: I have seen thee fight, When I have envied thy behaviour.

Ant. Sir, I never lov'd you much; but I have prais'd you, When you have well deserv'd ten times as much As I have said you did.

Pom. Enjoy thy plainness, It nothing ill becomes thee.— Aboard my galley, I invite you all: Will you lead, lords?

Cæs. Ant. Lep. Show us the way, sir.

Pom. Come.

[Exeunt Pompey, Caesar, Antony, Lepidus, Soldiers, and Attendants.]

Men. Thy father, Pompey, would ne'er have made this treaty. — [Aside.] You and I have known six sir.

Ant. At sea, I think.

Men. We have, sir.

Ant. You have done well by water.

Men. And you by land.

Ant. I will praise any man that will praise me, though it cannot be denied what I have done by land.

Men. Nor what I have done by water.

Ant. Yes, something you can deny for your own safety: you have been a great thief by sea.

Men. And you by land.

Ant. There I deny my land service. But give me your hand, Menas: If our eyes had authority, here they might take two thieves kissing.

Men. All men's faces are true, whate'er their hands are.

Ant. But there is never a fair woman has a true face.

Men. No slander; they steal hearts.

Ant. We came hither to fight with you.

Men. For my part, I am sorry it is turned to a drinking. Pompey doth this day laugh away his fortune.

Ant. If he do, sure he cannot weep it back again.

Men. You have said, sir. We looked not for Mark Antony here; Pray you, is he married to Cleopatra?

Ant. Caesar's sister is called Octavia. Men. True, sir; she was the wife of Caius Marcellus.

Ant. But she is now the wife of Marcus Antonius. Men. Pray you, sir?

Ant. 'Tis true.

Men. Then is Caesar and he for ever knit together. Ant. If I were bound to divine of this unity, I would not prophesy so.

Men. I think the policy of that purpose made more in the marriage, than the love of the parties.

Ant. I think so too. But you shall find, the band that seems to tie their friendship together, will be the very stranger of their amity: Octavia is of a holy, cold, and still conversation.

Men. Who would not have his wife so?
Eno. Not he, that himself is not so; which is Mark Antony. He will to his Egyptian dish again:
then shall the sighs of Octavia blow the fire up in Caesar and, as I said before, that which is the strength of their amity, shall prove the immediate author of their variance. Antony will use his affectation where it is; he married but his occasion here.
Men. And thus it may be. Come, sir, will you aboard? I have a health for you.
Eno. I shall take it, sir: we have used our throats in Egypt.
Men. Come; let's away. [Exit.

SCENE VII. — On board Pompey's Galley, lying near Misenum.

Music. Enter two or threeServants, with a Banquet.
1 Serv. Here they'll be, man: Some o' their plants? are ill-rooted already; the least wind i' the world will blow them down.
2 Serv. Lepidus is high-coloured.
1 Serv. They have made him drink alms-drink.
2 Serv. As they pinch one another by the disposition, he cries out, No more; reconciles them to his discretion, and himself to the drink.
1 Serv. But it raises the greater war between him and his discretion.
2 Serv. Why this it is to have a name in great men's fellowship: I had as lief have a reed that will do me no service, as a partizan! I could not have 1 Serv. To be called into a huge sphere, and not to be seen to move in't; are the holes where eyes should be, which pitifully disaster the cheeks.
A Servant sounded. Enter Caesar, Antony, Pompey, Lepidus, Agrippa, Menas, Enobarbus,
Menas, with other Captains.
Ant. Thus do they, sir: [To Caesar.] They take the flow o' the Nile
By certain scales i' the pyramid; they know
By the height, the lowness, or the mean, if dearth,
Or poison, follow: The higher Nilus swells,
The more it promises: as it ebbs, the seedsman
Upon the slime and ooze scatters his grain,
And shortly comes to harvest.
Lep. You have strange serpents there.
Ant. Ay, Lepidus.
Lep. Your serpent of Egypt is bred now of your mud by the operation of your sun: so is your crocodile.
Ant. They are so.
Pom. Sit, and some wine. — A health to Lepidus.
Lep. I am not so well as I should be, but I'll ne'er out.
Eno. Not till you have slept; I fear me, you'll be in, till then.
Lep. Nay, certainly, I have heard, the Ptomelis' pyramids are very goddly things; without contradiction, I have heard that.
Men. Pompey, a word. [Aside.
Pom. Say in mine ear: What is't?
Men. Forsake thy seat, I do beseech thee, captain.
And hear me speak a word. [Aside.
Pom. Forbear me till anon. —
This wine for Lepidus.
Lep. What manner o' thing is your crocodile?
Ant. It is shaped, sir, like itself; and it is as broad as it hath breadth: it is just so high as it is, and moves with its own organs: it lives by that which nourisheth it; and the elements once out of it, it transmigrates.
Lep. What colour is it of?
Ant. Of its own colour too.
Lep. 'Tis a strange serpent.
Men. 'Tis so. And the tears of it are wet.
Cas. Will this description satisfy him?
Ant. With the health that Pompey gives him, else he is a very epicure.
Pom. [To Menas aside.] Go, hang, sir, hang!
Tell me of that? away!
Do as I bid you. — Where's this cup I called for?
Men. If for the sake of merit thou wilt hear me,
Rise from thy stool. [Aside.
Pom. I think, thou'rt mad. The matter?
[Rises, and walks aside.
Men. I have ever held my cap off to thy fortunes.
Pom. Thou hast serv'd me with much faith:
What's else to say?
Be jolly, lords. Ant. These quick-sands, Lepidus,
Keep off them, for you sink.
Men. Wilt thou be lord of all the world?
Pom. What say'st thou?
Men. Wilt thou be lord of the whole world?
That's twice.
Pom. How should that be?
Men. But entertain it, and, although thou think me poor, I am the man
Will give thee all the world.
Pom. Hast thou drunk well?
Men. No, Pompey, I have kept me from the cup.
Thou art, if thou dar'st be, the earthly Jove: What 'er the ocean pales, or sky inclips, Is thine, if thou wilt have't.
Pom. Show me which way.
Men. These three world-sharers, these competitors,
Are in thy vessel: Let me cut the cable;
And, when we are put off, fall to their throats:
All there is thine.
Pom. Ah, this thou shouldst have done,
And not have spoke on't in me, 'tis villany;
In thee, it had been good service. Thou must know,
'Tis not my profit that doth lead mine honour;
Mine honour, it. Repent, that e'er thy tongue
Hath so betray'd thine act: Being done unknown,
I should have found it afterwards well done;
But must condemn it now. Desist, and drink.
Men. For this? [Aside.
I'll never follow thy pall'd fortunes more. —
Who seeks, and will not take, when once 'tis offer'd,
Shall never find it more.
Pom. This health to Lepidus.
Ant. Bear him ashore. — I'll pledge it for him,
Pompey.
Eno. Here's to thee, Menas.
Men. Enobarbus, welcome.
Pom. Fill, till the cup be hid.
Eno. There's a strong fellow, Menas.
[Pointing to the Attendant who carries off Lepidus.
Men. Why?
Eno. He bears
The third part of the world, man; Seest not?
Men. The third part then is drunk: Would it were all,
That it might go on wheels!
Eno. Drink thou; increase the reels.
Act III. Scene I.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA. 713

-Pom. This is not yet an Alexandrian feast.

-Ant. It ripens towards it. — Strike the vessels, ho! Here is to Caesar.

-Ces. I could well forbear it. It's monstrous labour when I wash my brain, And it grows fouler.

-Ant. Be a child o' the time.

-Ces. Possess? I'll, I'll make answer: But I had rather fast
From all, four days, than drink so much in one.

-Eno. Ha, my brave emperor! [To Antony.] Shall we dance now the Egyptian Bacchans, And celebrate our drink?

-Pom. Let's ha't, good soldier. Ant. Come, let us all take hands; Till that the conquering wine hath steep'd our sense In soft and delicate Lathe.

-Eno. All take hands. — Make battery to our ears with the loud musick: — The while, I'll place you: Then the boy shall sing; The holding every man shall bear, as loud As his strong sides can volley.

[Musick plays. Enobarbus places them hand in hand.]

SONG.

Come, thou monarch of the vine, Plump'ry Bacchus, with pink eye: 9
In thy vats our cores be drown'd; With thy grape our hairs be crown'd; Cup us, till the world go round; Cup us till the world go round!

ACT III.

SCENE I. — A Plain in Syria.

Enter Ventidius, as after Conquest, with Silius, and other Romans, Officers, and Soldiers; the dead Body of Pacorus borne before him.

Ven. Now, darting Parthia, art thou struck; and now Pless'd fortune does of Marcus Crassus' death Make me revenger. — Bear the king's son's body Before our army: — Thy Pacorus, Orodès 1, Pays this for Marcus Crassus.

-Sil. Noble Ventidius, Whilst yet with Parthian blood thy sword is warm, The fugitive Parthians follow; spur through Media, Mesopotamia, and the shelters whither
The routed fly: so thy grand captain Antony Shall set thee on triumphant chariots, and Put garlands on thy head.

Ven. O Silius, Silius, I have done enough: A lower place, note well, May make too great an act: For learn this, Silius; Better leave undone, than by our deed acquire Too high a fame, when him we serve's away. Caesar, and Antony, have ever won More in their officer, than person: Sossius, One of my place in Syria, his lieutenant, For quick accumulation of renown, Which he achieve'd by the minute, lost his favour: Who does i' the wars more than his captain can,

Becomes his captain's captain; and ambition, The soldier's virtue, rather makes choice of loss, Than gain, which darkens him. I could do more to do Antonius good, But 'twould offend him; and in his offence Should my performance perish.

Sil. Thou hast, Ventidius, That without which a soldier, and his sword, Grants scarce distinction. Thou wilt write to Antony?

Ven. I'll humbly signify what in his name, That magical word of war, we have effected; How, with his banners, and his well-paid ranks, The ne'er-yet-beaten horse of Parthia We have jaded out o' the field.

Sil. Where is he now? Ven. He purposeth to Athens: whither with what haste The weight we must convey with us will permit, We shall appear before him.—On, there; pass along. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. — Rome. An Ante-chamber in Caesar's House.

Enter Agrippa and Enobarbus, meeting.

-Agr. What, are the the brothers parted?

-Eno. They have despatch'd with Pompey; he is gone;

The other three are scaling. Octavia weeps To part from Rome: Caesar is sad; and Lepidus,
Since Pompey's feast, as Menas says, is troubled
With the green-sickness.

Agr. 'Tis a noble Lepidus.

Eno. A very fine one: O, how he loves Caesar!

Agr. Nay, but how dearly he adores Mark Antony!

Eno. Caesar, why he's the Jupiter of men.

Eno. Spake you of Caesar? How? the nonpareil?

Agr. O Antony! O thou Arabian bird! 5

Eno. Would you praise Caesar, say, — Caesar; — go no further.

Agr. Indeed, he ply'd them both with excellent praises.

Eno. But he loves Caesar best; — Yet he loves
Antony:

Ito! hearts, tongues, figures, scribes, bards, poets, cannot

Think, speak, cast, write, sing, number, ho, his love
To Antony. But as for Caesar,
Kneel down, kneel down, and wonder.

Agr. Both he loves.

Eno. They are his shards 4, and he their beetle.

So — [Trumpets.

This is to horse. — Adieu, noble Agrippa.

Agr. Good fortune, worthy soldier; and farewell.

Enter Caesar, Antony, Lepidus, and Octavia.

Ant. No further, sir.

Ces. You take from me a great part of myself;
Use me well in it. — Sister, prove such a wife
As my thoughts make thee, and as my furthest band 5
Shall pass on thy approov. — Most noble Antony,
Let not the piece of virtue 5, which is set
Betwixt us, as the cement of our love,
To keep it builded, be the ram, to batter
The fortress of it; for better might we
Have loved without this mean, if on both parts
This be not cherish'd.

Ant. Make me not offended
In your distrust.

Ces. I have said.

Ant. Though you be therein curious, 5, the least cause
For what you seem to fear: So, the gods keep you,
And make the hearts of Romans serve your ends.
We will here part.

Ces. Farewell, my dearest sister, fare thee well;
The elements be kind to thee, and make
Thy spirits all of comfort! fare thee well.

Octa. My noble brother! —

Ant. The April's in her eyes: It is love's spring,
And these the showers to bring it on. — Be cheerful.

Octa. Sir, look well to my husband's house; and—

Ces. What, Octavia?

Octa. I'll tell you in your ear.

Ant. Her tongue will not obey her heart, nor can
Her heart inform her tongue: the swan's down feather,
That stands upon the swell at full of tide,
And neither way inclines.

Eno. Will Caesar weep? [Aside to Agrippa.

Agr. He has a cloud in's face.

Eno. He were the worse for that, were he a horse;
So is he, being a man.

Agr. Why, Enobarbus?

When Antony found Julius Caesar dead,

3 The phoenix. 4 Wing-cases. Bond.
6 Octavia. 5 Scrupulous.
8 Destroy.

He cried almost to roaring; and he wept,
When at Philippi he found Brutus slain.

Eno. That year, Indeed, he was troubled with a rheum;

What willingly he did confound, 8 he wail'd:
Believe it, till I weep too.

Ces. No, sweet Octavia,
You shall hear from me still: the time shall not
Out-go my thinking on you.

Ant. Come, sir, come;
I'll wrestle with you in my strength of love:
Look, here I have you; thus I let you go,
And give you to the gods.

Ces. Adieu; be happy!

Lep. Let all the number of the stars give light
To thy fair way!

Ces. Farewell, farewell! [Kisses Octavia.

Ant. Farewell! [Trumpets sound. Exeunt.

SCENE III. — Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Alexas.

Cleo. Where is the fellow?

Alex. Half afeard to come.

Cleo. Go to, go to: — Come hither, sir.

Enter a Messenger.

Alex. Good majesty, Herod of Jewry dare not look upon you,
But when you are well pleas'd.

Cleo. That Herod's head
I'll have: But how? when Antony is gone,
Through whom I might command it. — Come thou near.

Mess. Most gracious majesty, —

Cleo. Didst thou behold
Octavia?

Mess. Ay, dread queen.

Cleo. Where?

Mess. Madam, in Rome
I look'd her in the face, and saw her led Between her brother and Mark Antony.

Cleo. Is she as tall as me?

Mess. She is not, madam.

Cleo. Didst hear her speak? Is she shrill-tong'd, or low?

Mess. Madam, I heard her speak; she is low-valc'd.

Cleo. That's not so good: — He cannot like her long.

Char. Like her! O Isis! 'tis impossible.

Cleo. I think so, Charmian: Dull of tongue, and dwarfish! —

What majesty is in her gait? Remember,
If e'er thou look'dst on majesty.

Mess. She creeps;
Her motion and her station are as one: She Shows a body rather than a life;
A statue, than a breather.

Cleo. Is this certain?

Mess. Or I have no observance.

Char. Three in Egypt
Cannot make better note.

Cleo. He's very knowing,
I do perceive't: — There's nothing in her yet: —
The fellow has good judgment.

Char. Excellent.

Cleo. Guess at her years, I pr'ythee.

1 Standing still.
SCENE IV. — Athens. A Room in Antony's House.

Enter Antony and Octavia.

Ant. Nay, nay, Octavia, not only that,—
That were excusable, that, and thousands more
Of semblable import, — but he hath wag'd
New wars 'gainst Pompey; made his will, and read it
To publick ear:
Spoke scantily of me: when perchance he could not
But pay me terms of honour, cold and sickly
He vented them; most narrow measure lent me:
When the best hint was given him, he not took't,
Or did it from his teeth. 3

Octa. O my good lord,
Believe not all; or, if you must believe,
Stomach 4 not all. A more unhappy lady,
If this division chance, ne'er stood between,
Praying for both parts:
And the good gods will mock me presently,
When I shall pray, 0 bless my lord and husband! 5
Undo that prayer, by crying out as loud,
0, bless my brother! Husband win, win brother,
Pray, and destroys the prayer; no midway
'Twixt these extremes at all.

Ant. Let your best love draw to that point, which seeks Best to preserve it: If I lose mine honour,
I lose myself: better I were not yours,
Than yours so branchless. But, as you requested,
Yourself shall go between us: The mean time, lady,
I'll raise the preparation of a war
Shall stain 6 your brother; Make your soonest haste:
So your desires are yours.

Octa. Thanks to my lord.
The Jove of power make me most weak, most weak,
Your reconciler! Wars 'twixt you twain would be

As if the world should cleave, and that slain men
Should solder up the rift.

Ant. When it appears to you where this begins,
Turn your displeasure that way; for our faults
Can never be so equal, that your love
Can equally move with them. Provide your going;
Choose your own company, and command what cost
Your heart has mind to. 7

[Exeunt.

SCENE V. — Another Room in the same.

Enter Enobarbus and Eros, meeting.

Eno. How now, friend Eros?
Eros. There's strange news come, sir.
Eno. What, man?
Eros. Caesar and Lepidus have made wars upon Pompey.
Eno. This is old; What is the success? 8
Eros. Caesar, having made use of him 7 in the wars 'gainst Pompey, presently denied him rivalry 8; would not let him partake in the glory of the action:
and not resting here, accuses him of letters he had formerly wrote to Pompey; upon his own appeal 9, seizes him: So the poor third is up, till death enlarge his confine.

Eno. Then, world, thou hast a pair of chaps, no more;
And throw between them all the food thou hast,
They'll grind the one the other. Where's Antony?
Eros. He's walking in the garden — thus; and spurns
The rush that lies before him; cries, Fool, Lepidus!
And threatens the throat of that his officer,
That murder'd Pompey.
Eno. Our great navy's rigged.
Eros. For Italy, and Caesar. More, Domitius;
My lord desires you presently: my news
I might have told hereafter.

Eno. 'Twill be naught:
But let it be. — Bring me to Antony.
Eros. Come, sir. 7

[Exeunt.

SCENE VI. — Rome. A Room in Caesar's House.

Enter Caesar, Agrrippa, and Mecenas.

Cas. Contemning Rome, he has done all this:
And more;
In Alexandria, — here's the manner of it,—
I the market place, on a tribunal silver'd,
Cleopatra and himself in chairs of gold
Were publicly enthon'd; at the feet, sat
Cesarion, whom they call my father's son;
And all the unlawful issue, that their lust
Since then hath made between them. Unto her
He gave the 'establishment of Egypt; made her
Of lower Syria, Cyprus, Lydia,
Absolute queen.

Mec. This in the publick eye?
Cas. 'Tis the common show-place, where they exercise.
His sons he there proclaim'd, The kings of kings:
Great Media, Parthia, and Armenia,
He gave to Alexander; to Ptolemy he assigned Syria, Cilicia, and Phcenicia: She
In the habitiiments of the goddess Isis
That day appear'd; and oft before gave audience,
As 'tis reported, so.

Mec. Let Rome be thus Inform'd.

6 What follows? 7 i.e. Lepidus. 8 Equal rank. 9 Accusation.
ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

ACT III.

Agr. Who, quassy 1 with his insolence
Already, will their good thoughts call from him.
Cas. The people know it; and have now receiv'd
His accusations.
Agr. Whom does he accuse?
Cas. Caesar: and that, having in Sicily
Sextus Pompeius spoil'd, we had not rated 2 him
His part o' the isle: then does he say, he lent me
Some shipping unrestor'd: lastly, he frets,
That Lepidus of the triumvirate
Should be depos'd; and, being, that we detain
All his revenue.
Agr. Sir, this should be answer'd.
Cas. 'Tis done already, and the messenger gone.
I have told him, Lepidus was grown too cruel;
That he his high authority abus'd,
And did deserve his change; for what I have conquer'd,
I grant him part; but then, in his Armenia,
And other of his conquer'd kingdoms, I
Demand the like.
Mec. He'll never yield to that.
Cas. Nor must not then be yielded to in this.

Enter OCTAVIA.

Octa. Hail, Caesar, and my lord! hail, most dear
Cesar!
Cas. That ever I should call thee, east-away!
Octa. You have not call'd me so, nor have you cause.
Cas. Why have you stol'n upon us thus? You come not
Like Caesar's sister: The wife of Antony
Should have an army for an usher, and
The neighs of horse to tell of her approach,
Long ere she did appear; the trees by the way
Should have borne men; and expectation fainted,
Longing for what it had not: nay, the dust
Should have ascended to the roof of heaven,
Rais'd by your populous troops: But you are come
A market-maid to Rome; and have prevented
The ostent 3 of our love, which, left unshown,
Is often left unlov'd: we should have met you
By sea, and land; supplying every stage
With an augmented greeting.
Octa. Good my lord,
To come thus was I not constrain'd, but did it
On my free-will. My lord, Mark Antony,
Hearing that you prepar'd for war, acquainted
My griev'd ear withal; whereon, I begg'd
His pardon for return.
Cas. Which soon he granted,
Being an obstruct 'tween his lust and him.
Octa. Do not say so, my lord.
Cas. I have eyes upon him,
And his affairs come to me on the wind.
Where is he now?
Octa. My lord, in Athens.
Cas. No, my most wronged sister; Cleopatra
Hath nod'd him to her. He hath given his empire
To Cleopatra; they now are levying
The kings o' the earth for war: He hath assembled
Bocchus, the king of Libya; Archelaus,
Of Cappadoa; Philadelphos, king
Of Paphlagonia; the Thracian king, Adallas:
King Malchus of Arabia; king of Pont;
Herod of Jewry; Mithridates, king
Of Comagene; Polemon and Amintas,

The kings of Mede, and Lycaonia, with a
More larger list of scepters.

Octa. Welcome hither:
Your letters did withhold our breaking forth;
Till we perceive'd both how you were wrong led,
And we in negligent danger. Cheer your heart:
Be you not troubled with the time, which drives
O'er your content these strong necessities;
But let determin'd things to destiny
Hold unbewail'd their way. Welcome to Rome:
Nothing more dear to me. You are abus'd
Beyond the mark of thought: and the high gods,
To do you justice, make them ministers
Of us, and those that love you. Best of comfort;
And ever welcome to us.

Agr. Welcome, lady.
Meo. Welcome, dear madam.
Each heart in Rome does love and pity you:
Only the adulterous Antony, most large
In his abominations, turns you off;
And gives his potent regiment 4 to a trull,
That noises it against us.
Octa. Is it so, sir?
Cas. Most certain. Sister, welcome: Pray you,
Be ever known to patience: My dearest sister!

[Exeunt.

SCENE VII.— Antony's Camp near the Promontory of Actium.

Enter Cleopatra and Enobarbus.

Cleo. I will be even with thee, doubt it not.
Eno. But why, why, why?
Cleo. Thou hast forspoke 5 my being in these wars;
And say'st, it is not fit.
Eno. Well, is it? is it?
Cleo. Is't not? Denounce against us, why should not we
Be there in person?
Eno. Well, I could reply:
Cleo. What is't thou say?
Eno. Your presence needs must puzzle Antony;
Take from his heart, take from his brain, from his time,
What should not then be spar'd. He is already Traduc'd for levity; and 'tis said in Rome,
That Photinius an enunch, and your maids,
Manage this war.
Cleo. Sink Rome; and their tongues rot,
That speak against us! A charge we bear i' the war,
And, as the president of my kingdom, will Appear there for a man. Speak not against it;
I will not stay behind.
Eno. Nay, I have done done:
Here comes the emperor.

Enter Antony and Caiusidus.

Ant. Is't not strange, Caiusidus,
That from Tarentum, and Brundusium,
He could so quickly cut the Ionian sea,
And take in in Toryne.— You have heard on't,
sweet?
Cleo. Celerity is never more admir'd,
Than by the negligent.
Ant. A good reube,
Which might have well become the best of men,

1 Sick, disgusted. 2 Assigned. 3 Show, token. 4 Government. 5 Forbidden. 6 Take, subdue.
SCENE VII.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

To taunt at slackness. — Canidius, we
Will fight with him by sea.

Can. Why will my lord do so?

Ant. For he dares us to't.

Cleo. So hath my lord dar'd him to single fight.

Can. Ay, and to wage this battle at Pharsalia,
Where Caesar fought with Pompey: But these offers,
Which serve not for his vantage, he shakes off;
And so should you.

Cleo. Your ships are not well mann'd:
Your mariners are muleteers, reapers, people,
Ingress's by swift impress; in Caesar's fleet
Are those, that often have 'gainst Pompey fought:
Their ships are yare; yours, heavy. No disgrace
Shall fall you for refusing him at sea,
Being prepar'd for land.

Ant. By sea, by sea.

Cleo. Most worthy sir, you therein throw away
The absolute soldiery you have by land;
Distract your army, which dost most consist
Of war-mark'd footmen; leave unexecuted
Your own renowned knowledge; quite forego
The way which promises assurance: and Give up yourself merely to chance and hazard,
From firm security.

Ant. I'll fight at sea.

Cleo. I have sixty sail's, Caesar none better.

Ant. Our overplus of shipping will we burn;
And, with the rest full-mann'd from the head of Actium
Beat the approaching Caesar. But if we fail,

Enter a Messenger.

We then can do't at land. — Thy business?

Mess. The news is true, my lord; he is descried;
Caesar has taken Teryone.

Ant. Can he be there in person? 'tis impossible;
Strange, that his power should be. — Canidius,
Our nineteen legions thou shalt hold by land,
And our twelve thousand horse: — We'll to our ship;

Enter a Soldier.

Away, my Thetis! — How now, worthy soldier?
Sold. O noble emperor, do not fight by sea;
Trust not to rotten planks: Do you misdoubt
This sword, and these my wounds? Let the Egyptians,
And the Phoenicians, go a ducking; we
Have used to conquer, standing on the earth,
And fighting foot to foot.

Ant. Well, well, away.

[Exeunt Antony, Cleopatra, and Eno-Barbus.

Sold. By Hercules, I think, I am i' the right.

Can. Soldier, thou art: but his whole action grows
Not in the power on't: So our leader's led,
And we are women's men.

Sold. You keep by land
The legions and the horse whole, do you not?

Can. Marcus Octavius, Marcus Justeius,
Publicola, and Callius, are for sea:
But we keep whole by land. This speed of Caesar's
Carries beyond belief.

Sold. While he was yet in Rome,
His power went out in such distractions, as Beguil'd all spies.

Can. Who's his lieutenant, hear you?
Sold. They say, one Taurus.

Can. Well I know the man.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The emperor calls for Canidius.

Can. With news the time's with labour; and throws forth, 4

Each minute, some. [Exeunt.

SCENE VIII. — A Plain near Actium.

Enter Caesar, Taurus, Officers, and others.

Ces. Taurus, —

Taur. My lord.

Ces. Strike not by land; keep whole:
Provoke not battle, till we have done at sea.
Do not exceed the prescript of this scroll:
Our fortune lies upon this jump. 5

[Exeunt.

Enter Antony and Enobarbus.

Ant. Set we our squadrons on yon' side o' the hill,
In eye of Caesar's battle; from which place
We may the number of the ships behold,
And so proceed accordingly. [Exeunt.

Enter Canidius, marching with his Land Army one Way over the Stage; and Taurus, the Lieutenant of Caesar, the other Way. After their going in, is heard the noise of a Sea-Fight.

Alarum. Re-enter Enobarbus.

Eno. Naught, naught, all naught! I can behold no longer:
The Antoniad 6, the Egyptian admiral,
With all their sixty, fly, and turn the rudder;
To see't, mine eyes are blasted.

Enter Scarpus.

Scarp. Gods, and goddesses,
All the whole synod of them!

Eno. What's thy passion?

Scarp. The greater cante 7 of the world is lost
With very ignorance; we have kiss'd away
Kingdoms and provinces.

Eno. How appears the fight?

Scarp. On our side like the token's 8 pestilence,
Where death is sure. Yon' ribald-rid nag of Egypt,
Whom leprosy o'ertake! i' the midst o' the fight,
When vantage like a pair of twins appear'd,
Both as the same, or rather ours the elder,
The brize 9 upon her, like a cow in June,
Hoists sails, and flies.

Eno. That I beheld: mine eyes
Did sicken at the sight on't, and could not Endure a further view.

Scarp. She once being loof'd, 10
The noble ruin of her magic, Antony,
Claps on his sea-wing, and like a doting mallard,
Leaving the fight in height, flies after her:
I never saw an action of such shame;
Experience, manhood, honour, ne'er before
Did violate so itself.

Eno. Akeck, akeck! 11

Enter Canidius.

Can. Our fortune on the sea is out of breath,
And sinks most lamentably. Had our general

4 Brings forth. 5 Hazard. 6 Name of Cleopatra's ship. 7 Corner. 8 Spotted. 9 The gad-fly that stings cattle.

10 Brought close to the wind.
Antony and Cleopatra.  Act III.

Cleo. Ah, stand by.
Eros. The queen, my lord, the queen.
Iras. Go to him, madam, speak to him;
He is unqualified 8 with very shame.
Cleo. Well then. — Sustain me: — O!
Eros. Most noble sir, arise; the queen approaches.

Her head's declin'd, and death will seize her; but 7
Your comfort makes the rescue.
Ant. I have offended reputation;
A most unnoble swerving.

Sir, the queen.
Ant. O, whither hast thou led me, Egypt? See,
How I convey my shame out of thine eyes
By looking back on what I have left behind
'Stroy'd in dishonour.
Cleo. O my lord, my lord!
Forgive my fearful sails! I little thought,
You would have follow'd.
Ant. Egypt, thou know'st too well,
My heart was to thy rudder tied by the strings,
And thou shouldst tow me after: O'er my spirit
Thy full supremacy thou know'st; and that Thy beck might from the bidding of the gods
Command me.
Cleo. O, my pardon.

Now I must
To the young man send humble treaties, dodge
And palter in the shifts of lowness; who
With half the bulk of the world play'd as I pleas'd
Making, and marring fortunes. You did know
How much you were my conqueror; and that My sword, made weak by my affection, would Obey it on all cause.
Cleo. O pardon, pardon.
Ant. Fall not a tear, I say: one of them rates 8
All that is won and lost: Give me a kiss;
Even this repays me. — We sent our schoolmaster
Is he come back? — Love, I am full of lead: —
Some wine, within there, and our viands: — Fort-tune knows,
We scorn her most, when most she offers blows.

[Execute.

SCENE X. — Caesar's Camp in Egypt.

Enter Caesar, Dolabella, Thyreus, and others.

Ces. Let him appear that's come from Antony.—
Know you him?

Dot. Caesar, 'tis his schoolmaster; 9
An argument that he is pluck'd, when hither
He sends so poor a pinion of his wing,
Which had superfluous kings for messengers,
Not many moons gone by.

Enter Euphonius.

Ces. Approach, and speak.
Eup. Such as I am, I come from Antony:
I was of late as petty to his ends,
As is the morn-dew on the myrtle leaf
To his grand sea.

Ces. Be it so; Declare thine office.
Eup. Lord of his fortunes he salutes thee, and Requires to live in Egypt: which not granted,
He lessens his requests: and to thee sues,
To let him breathe between the heavens and earth,
A private man in Athens: This for him.
Next, Cleopatra does confess thy greatness;

Enter Cleopatra, led by Charmian and Iras.

Eros. Nay, gentle madam, to him: — Comfort
him.
Iras. Do, most dear queen.
Char. Do! Why, what else?
Cleo. Let me sit down. O Juno!
Ant. No, no, no, no, no, no.
Eros. See you here, sir?
Ant. O fye, fye, fye.
Char. Madam, — Iras. Madam; O good empress! —
Eros. Sir, sir,—
Ant. Yes, my lord, yes; — He 4, at Philippi, kept
His sword even like a dancer; while I struck
The lean and wrinkled Cassius: and 'twas I,
That the mad Brutus ended: he alone
Dealt on lieutenantry 3, and no practice had
In the brave squares of war: Yet now — No matter.

3 Related, benightened.
4 Fought by his officers.
5 Cesar.
SCENE XI. — Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, ENOBARBUS, CHARMIAN, and IAS.

Cleo. What shall we do, Enobarbus?

Eno. Think, and die.

Cleo. Is Antony, or we, in fault for this?

Eno. Antony only, that would make his will
Of his reason. What although you fled
From that great face of war, whose several ranges
Frighted each other? why should he follow?
The itch of his affection should not then
Have nick’d his captainship; at such a point,
When half to half the world oppos’d, he being
The mered question: ‘Twas a shame no less
Than was his loss, to course your flying flags,
And leave his navy gazing.

Cleo. Prythee, peace.

Enter Antony, with EUPHRONIUS.

Ant. Is this his answer?

Eup. Ay, my lord.

Ant. Shall then have courtesy, so she will yield
Us up.

Eup. He says so.

Ant. Let her know it. —
To the boy Caesar send this grizzled head,
And he will fill thy wishes to the brim
With principalities.

Cleo. That head, my lord?

Ant. To him again; Tell him he wears the rose
Of youth upon him; from which the world should
Note something particular: his coin, ships, legions,
May be a coward’s; whose ministers would prevail
Under the service of a child, as soon
As i’t the command of Caesar: I dare him therefore
To lay his gay caparisons 4 apart,
And answer me declin’d, sword against sword,
Ourselves alone: I’ll write it; follow me.

[Exit Antony and Euphorionus.

Eno. Yes, like enough, high-battled Caesar will Unstate his happiness, and be stag’d to the show,
Against a swordsman. — I see, men’s judgments are
A parcel 6 of their fortunes; and things outward
Do draw the inward quality after them,
To suffer all alike. That he should dream,
Knowing all measures, the full Caesar will Answer his emptiness; — Caesar, thou hast subdu’d
His judgment too.

Enter an Attendant.

Att. A messenger from Caesar.

Cleo. What, no more ceremony? — See, my women! —
Against the blown rose may they stop their nose,
That kneel’d into the buds. — Admit him, sir.

Eno. Mine honesty, and I, begin to square?

[Aside.
The loyalty, well held to fools, does make
Our faith mere folly: — Yet, he that can endure
To follow with allegiance a fallen lord,
Does conquer him that did his master conquer,
And earns a place i’ the story.

Enter Thyrerus.

Thyr. Caesar’s will?

Cleo. Go on: Right royal.

Thyr. He knows, that you embrace not Antony
As you did love, but as you fear’d him.

Cleo. O!

Thyr. The scars upon your honour, therefore, he Does pity, as constrained blemishes.
Not as deserving.

He is a god, and knows
What is most right: Mine honour was not yielded,
But conquer’d merely.

Eno. To be sure of that, [Aside] I will ask Antony. — Sir, thou’rt so leaky,
That we must leave thee to thy sinking, for Thy dearest quit thee.

[Exit Enobarbus.

Thyr. Shall I say to Caesar
What you require of him? for he partly begs
To be desir’d to give. It much would please him,
That of his fortunes you should make a staff
To lean upon: but it would warm his spirits,
To hear from me you had left Antony,
And put yourself under his shrowd,
The universal landlord.

Cleo. What’s your name?

Thyr. My name is Thyrerus.

Cleo. Most kind messenger,
Say to great Caesar this, In disputa 8
I kiss his conquering hand: tell him I am prompt
To lay my crown at his feet, and there to kneel:

1 Diadem, the crown.
2 Conforms himself to this breach of his fortune.
3 The only cause of dispute.
4 Circumstances of splendour.
5 In age and power. 6 Are of a piece with them. 7 Quarrel.
8 Supposed to be an error for disputa, i. e. by proxy.
Tell him, from his all-obeying breath I hear
The doom of Egypt.

Thr. 'Tis your noblest course.
Wisdom and fortune combative together,
If that the former dare but what it can,
No chance may shake it. Give me grace to lay
My duty on your hand.

Cleo. Your Caesar's father,
Oft, when he hath mus'd of taking kingdoms in,
Bestow'd his lips on that unworthy place,
As it rain'd kisses.

Re-enter Antony and Enobarbus.

Ant. Favours, by Jove that thunders! —
What art thou, fellow? —
Thr. One, that but performs
The bidding of the fullest man, and worthiest
To have command obey'd.

Eno. You will be whipp'd.
Ant. Approach, there: — Ay, you kite! — Now gods and devils!
Authority melts from me: Of late, when I cry'd, Ho!
Like boys unto a musk, kings would start forth,
And cry, Your will? Have you no ears? I am

Enter Attendants.

Antony yet. Take hence this Jack, and whip him.

Eno. 'Tis better playing with a lion's whelp,
Than with an old one dying.

Ant. Whip him: — Were't twenty of the greatest tributaries
That do acknowledge Caesar, should I find them
So saucy with the hand of she here, (What's her name
Since she was Cleopatra?) — Whip him, fellows,
Till, like a boy, you see him cringe his face,
And whine alond for mercy: Take him hence.

Thr. Mark Antony, —

Ant. Tug him away: being whipp'd,
Bring him again: — This Jack of Caesar's shall Bear us an errand to him.

[Exeunt. ATTEND. with THYREUS.

You were half blasted ere I knew you: — Ha!
Have I my pillow left unpres'd in Rome,
Forborne the getting of a lawful race,
And by a gem of women, to be abus'd
By one that looks on feeders? 2

Cleo. Good my lord,

Ant. You have been a boggler ever: —
But when we in our vicious grow good,
(O misery on't!) the wise gods see! 6 our eyes;
In our own filth drop our clear judgments; make us
Adore our errors; laugh at us, while we strut
To our confusion.

Cleo. O, is it come to this?

Ant. I found you as a morsel, cold upon
Dead Caesar's trencher: nay, you were a fragment
Of Cneius Pompey's; besides what hotter hours,
Unregister'd in vulgar fame, you have
Luxuriously pick'd out: — For, I am sure,
Though, you can guess what temperance should be,
You know not what it is.

Cleo. Wherefore is this?

Ant. To let a fellow that will take rewards,
And say, God quit you! be familiar with
My playfellow, your hand; this kingly seal,
And plighter of high hearts! —

I have savage cause;
And to proclaim it civilly, were like
A halter'd neck, which does the hangman thank
For being yare? about him. — Is he whipp'd?

Re-enter Attendants, with THYREUS.

1 Att. Soundly, my lord.

Ant. Cry'd he? and begg'd he pardon?

1 Att. He did ask favour.

Ant. If that thy father live, let him repent
Thou was not made his daughter; and be thou sorry
To follow Caesar in his triumph, since
Thou hast been whipp'd for following him: henceforth,
The white hand of a lady fever thee,
Shake thou to look on. — Get thee back to Caesar,
Tell him thy entertainment: Look, thou say,
He makes me angry with him: for he seems
Proud and disdainful; harping on what I am;
Not what he knew I was: He makes me angry;
And at this time most easy 'tis to do;
When my good stars, that were my former guides,
Have empty'd left their orbs, and shot their fires
Into the abyss of hell. If he dislike
My speech, and what is done; tell him, he has Hipparchus, my enfranchis'd bondman, whom
He may at pleasure whip, or hang, or torture,
As he shall like, to quit 8 me: Urge it thou:
Hence, with thy stripes, begone. [Exit THYREUS.

Cleo. Have you done yet?

Ant. Alack, our terrene 9 moon
Is now eclips'd; and it portends alone
The fall of Antony!

Cleo. I must stay his time.

Ant. To flatter Caesar, would you mingle eyes
With one that ties his points?

Cleo. Not know me yet?

Ant. Cold-hearted toward me?

Cleo. Ah, dear, if I be so,
From my cold heart let heaven engender hail,
And poison it in the source; and the first stone
Drop in my neck: as it determines 1, so
Dissolve my life! The next Casarion 3 smite!
Till, by degrees, the memory of myself,
Together with my brave Egyptians all,
By the discanting 4 of this pelleted storm,
Lie graveless; till the flies and gnats of Nile
Have buried them for prey!

Ant. I am satisfied.

Cleo. Caesar sits down in Alexandria; where
I will oppose his fate. Our force by land
Hath nobly held; our sever'd navy too
Have knit again, and fleet 4 threatening most sea-like.

Where last thou been, my heart? — Dost thou hear, lady?

Ant. "If from the field I shall return once more
To kiss these lips, I will appear in blood;
And my sword will earn our chronicle;
There is hope in it yet.

Cleo. That's my brave lord!

Ant. I will be treble-sinew'd, hearted, breath'd,
And fight maliciously: when mine hours
Were nice 5 and lucky, men did ransome lives
Of me for jests; but now, I'll set my teeth,
And send to darkness all that stop me. — Come,
Let's have one other gaudy night: call to me

9 Obeyed. 1 Grant me the favour. 2 Conquering.
3 Scramble. 4 A term of contempt. 5 Servants.
6 Close up.
Act IV. Scene I.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

All my sad captains, fill our bowls; once more
Let's mock the midnight bell.

Cleo. It is my birth-day:
I had thought to have held it poor; but, since my lord
Is Antony again, I will be Cleopatra.

Ant. We'll yet do well.

Cleo. Call all his noble captains to my lord.
Ant. Do so, we'll speak to them; and to-night
I'll force
The wine peep through their scars. — Come on, my queen;
There's sap in't yet. The next time I do fight,
I'll make death love me; for I will contend
Even with his pestilent scythe.

[Exeunt Antony, Cleopatra, and Attendants.

Eno. Now he'll out-stare the lightning. To be furious

Is, to be frightened out of fear: and in that mood,
The dove will peck the estridge: and I see still,
A diminution in our captain's brain
Restores his heart: When valour preys on reason,
It eats the sword it fights with. I will seek
Some way to leave him.

[Exit.

ACT IV.

SCENE I. — Cæsar's Camp at Alexandria.

Enter CAESAR, reading a Letter; AGRIPPA, MECENAS, and others.

Cæs. He calls me, boy; and chides, as he had power
To beat me out of Egypt: my messenger
He hath whipp'd with rods; dares me to personal combat,
Cæsar to Antony: Let the old ruffian know,
I have many other ways to die; mean time,
Laugh at his challenge.

Mec. Cæsar must think,
When one so great begins to rage, he's hunted
Even to falling. Give him no breath, but now
Make boot of his distraction: Never anger

Made good guard for itself.

Cæs. Let our best heads
Know, that to morrow the last of many battles
We mean to fight: — Within our files there are,
Of those that serv'd Mark Antony but late,
Enough to fetch him in. See it be done;
And feast the army: we have store to do't,
And they have earn'd the waste. Poor Antony!

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. — Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter ANTONY, CLEOPATRA, ENOBARBUS, CHARMIAN, IRIAS, ALEXAS, and others.

Ant. He will not fight with me, Domitius.

Eno. No.

Ant. Why should he not?

Eno. He thinks, being twenty times of better fortune,
He is twenty men to one.

Ant. To-morrow, soldier,
By sea and land I'll fight: or I will live,
Or bathe my dying honour in the blood
Shall make it live again. Woot thou fight well?

Eno. I'll strike; and cry, Take all.

Ant. Well said; come on. —

Call forth my household servants; let's to-night

[Enter Servants.

Be bounteous at our meal. — Give me thy hand,
Thou hast been rightly honest; so hast thou; —
And thou, — and thou, — and thou; — you have serv'd me well,
And kings have been your fellows.

* Take advantage.

SCENE III. — Before the Palace.

Enter two Soldiers to their Guards.

1 Sold. Brother, good night: to-morrow is the day.

2 Sold. It will determine one way: fare you well.

Heard you of nothing strange about the streets?

1 Sold. Nothing: What news?

2 Sold. Belike, 'tis but a rumour:

Good night to you.

1 Sold. Well, sir, good night.

2 Sold. Ostrich.

* Reward.
Antony. Who's Lead List, most rare.

Enter two other Soldiers.

2 Sold. Have careful watch.

3 Sold. And you: Good night, good night.

The first two place themselves at their Posts.

4 Sold. Here we: They take their Posts; and if to-morrow

Our navy thrive, I have an absolute hope
Our landmen will stand up.

3 Sold. 'Tis a brave army,

And full of purpose.

[Music of hautboys under the Stage.

4 Sold. Peace, what noise?

1 Sold. List, list!

2 Sold. Hark!

1 Sold. Musick i' the air.

3 Sold. Under the earth.

4 Sold. It signs well, Does't not?

3 Sold. No.

1 Sold. Peace, I say. What should this mean?

2 Sold. 'Tis the god Hercules, whom Antony lov'd,

Now leaves him.

1 Sold. Walk; let's see if other watchmen

Do hear what we do. [They advance to another Post.

How now? do you hear this?

[Several speaking together.

1 Sold. Ay; Is't not strange?

3 Sold. Do you hear, masters? do you hear?

1 Sold. Follow the noise so far we have quarter.

Let's see how't will give off.

Sold. [Several speaking.] Content: 'Tis strange.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV. — A Room in the Palace.

Enter Antony and Cleopatra; Charmian, and others, attending.

Ant. Eros! mine armour, Eros!

Cleo. Sleep a little.

Ant. No, my chuck. — Eros, come; mine armour, Eros!

Enter Eros, with Armour.

[Exeunt.

Cleo. Come, my good fellow, put thine iron on: —
If fortune be not ours to-day, it is Because we brave her. — Come. Cleo.

What's this for?

Ant. Ah, let be, let be! thou art
The armourer of my heart: — False, false; this, this.

Cleo. Sooth, la, I'll help: Thus it must be.

Ant. Well, well;

We shall thrive now. — Seest thou, my good fellow?
Go put on thy defences.

Eros. Briefly, sir.

Cleo. Is not this buckled well?

Ant. Rarely; rarely:

He that unbucks this, till we do please
To doff't 1 for our repose, shall hear a storm. —
Thou fumblest, Eros; and my queen's a squire
More tight 2 at this than thou: Despatch. — O love,
That thou couldst see my wars to-day, and knew'st
The royal occupation! thou should'st see

9 Bodes. 1 Put it off. 2 Handy.

Enter an Officer armed.

A workman in't. — Good morrow to thee; wellcome;
Thou look'st like him that knows a warlike charge:
To business that we love, we rise betime,
And go to it with delight.

1 Off. A thousand, sir,

Early though it be, have on their riveted trim,
And at the port expect you.

Enter other Officers, and Soldiers.

2 Off. The morn is fair. — Good morrow, general.

[Exeunt Antony, Eros, Officers, and Soldiers.

Cleo. Lead me.

He goes forth gallantly. That he and Caesar might Determine this great war in single fight!

Then, Antony, — But now, — Well, on.

SCENE V. — Antony's Camp near Alexandria.

Trumpets sound. Enter Antony and Eros; a Soldier meeting them.

Sold. The gods make this a happy day to Antony.

Ant. Would thou and those thy scars had once prevail'd

To make me fight at land!

Sold. Hadst thou done so,

The kings that have revolted, and the soldier
That has this morning left thee, would have still Follow'd thy heels.

Who's gone this morning?

Ant. One ever near thee: Call for Enobarbus,

He shall not hear thee; or from Caesar's camp
Say, I am none of thine.

Ant. What say'st thou?

Sold. Eros.

Eros. He is with Caesar. Sir, his chests and treasure
He has not with him.

Ant. Is he gone?

Sold. Most certain.

Ant. Go, Eros, send his treasure after; do it;

Detain no jot, I charge thee: write to him
(I will subscribe) gentle adieu, and greetings:
Say, that I wish he never find more cause
To change a master. — O, my fortunes have Corrupted honest men; — Eros, despatch. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI. — Caesar's Camp before Alexandria.

Flourish. Enter Caesar, with Agrippa, Enobarbus, and others.

Caes. Go forth, Agrippa, and begin the fight:
Our will is, Antony be took alive;
Make it so known.
Scene VII.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

Cas. The time of universal peace is near: Prove this a prosperous day, the three-nook'd world Shall bear the olive freely.

Enter a Messenger.

Met. Antony Is come into the field.

Cas. Go, charge Agrippa Plant those that have revolted in the van, That Antony may seem to spend his fury Upon himself. [Exit Caesar and his Train. Eno. Alexas did revolt; and went to Jewry, On affairs of Antony: there did persuade Great Herod to incline himself to Caesar, And leave his master Antony: for this pains, Caesar hath hang'd him. Canidius, and the rest That fall away, have entertainment, but No honourable trust. I have done ill; Of which I do accuse myself so sorely, That I will joy no more.

Enter a Soldier of Caesar's.

Sold. Enobarbus, Antony Hath after thee sent all thy treasure, with His bounty overplus: The messenger Came on my guard, and at thy tent is now, Unloading of his mules.

Eno. I give it you.

Sold. Mock me not, Enobarbus. I tell you true: Best that you sa'ld the bringer Out of the host; I must attend mine office, Or would have done't myself. Your emperor Continues still a Jove. [Exit Soldier. Eno. I am alone the villain of the earth, And feel I am so most. O Antony, Thou mine of bounty, how wouldst thou have paid My better service, when my turpitude Thou dost so crown with gold! This blows 3 my heart: If swift thought break it not, a swifter mean Shall outstrike thought: but thought will do't, I feel. I fight against thee! — No: I will go seek Some ditch, wherein to die; the fool's best fits My latter part of life. [Exit.

Scene VII. — Field of Battle between the Camps.

Alarum. Drums and Trumpets. Enter Agrrippa, and others.

Agr. Retire, we have engaged ourselves too far: Caesar himself has work, and our oppression Exceeds what we expected. [Exit.

Alarum. Enter Antony and Scarus, wounded.

Scar. O my brave emperor, this is fought indeed! Had we done so at first, we had driven them home With clouts about their heads.

Ant. Thou bleed'st space.

Scar. I had a wound here that was like a T, But now 'tis made an H.

Ant. They do retire.

Scar. We'll beat 'em into bench-holes; I have yet Room for six scotches 4 more.

Enter Eros.

Eros. They are beaten, sir; and our advantage serves For a fair victory. 5 Swells. 6 Cuts.

Scene VIII. — Under the Walls of Alexandria.

Alarum. Enter Antony, marching; Scarus, and Forces.

Ant. We have beat him to his camp; Run one before, And let the queen know of our guests.—To-morrow, Before the sun shall see us, we'll spill the blood That has to-day escap'd. I thank you all; For doughty 5-handed are you; and have fought Not as you serv'd the cause, but as it had been Each man's like mine; you have shown all Hectors. Enter the city, clasp your wives, your friends, Tell them your feats; whilst they with joyful tears Wash the congealment from your wounds, and kiss The honour'd gashes whole. — Give me thy hand;

To Scars.

Enter Cleopatra, attended.

To this great fairy 6 I'll commend thy acts, Make her thanks bless thee. — O thou day o' the world, Chain mine arm'd neck; leap thou, attire and all, Through proof of harness 7 to my heart, and there Ride on the pants triumphant.

Cleo. Lord of lords! O infinite virtue! com'st thou smiling from The world's great snare uncaught?

Ant. My nightingale, We have beat them to their beds. What, girl? though grey Do something mingle with our brown; yet have we A brain that nourishes our nerves, and can Get goal for goal of youth. Behold this man Commend unto his lips thy fav'ring hand; Kiss it, my warrior: — He hath fought to-day, As if a god, in hate of mankind, had Destroy'd in such a shape.

Cleo. I'll give thee, friend, An armour all of gold; it was a king's.

Ant. He has serv'd it, were it carbuncled Like holy Phoebus' car. — Give me thy hand; Through Alexandria make a jolly march; Bear our hack'd targets like the men that owe 8 them. Had our great palace the capacity To camp this host, we all would sup together; And drink carouses to the next day's fate, Which promises royal peril. — Trumpeters, With brazen din blast you the city's ear; Make mingle with our rattling tambourines; That heaven and earth may strike their sounds together, Applauding our approach. [Exit.

Scene IX. — Caesar's Camp.

Sentinels on their Post. Enter Enobarbus.

I Sold. If we be not relied 6 within this hour, We must return to the court of guard: The night

3 Brave.

4 Beauty united with power, was the popular characteristick of fairies.

5 Armour of proof.

6 Own.
Is shiny; and, they say, we shall embattle
By the second hour i' th' morn.
2 Sold. This last day was
A shrewd one to us.
Eno. O, bear me witness, night,—
3 Sold. What man is this?
2 Sold. Stand close, and list to him.
Eno. Be witness to me, O thou blessed moon,
When men revolted shall upon record
Bear hateful memory, poor Enobarbus did
Before thy face repent! —
1 Sold. Enobarbus! Peace;
3 Sold. Hark further.
Eno. O sovereign mistress of true melancholy,
The poisonous damp of night dispence upon me;
That life, a very rebel to my will,
May hang no longer on me: Throw my heart
Against the flint and hardness of my fault;
Which, being dried with grief, will break to powder,
And finish all soul thoughts. O Antony,
No bluer than my revolt is infamous,
Forgive me in thine own particular;
But let the world rank me in register
A master-leaver, and a fugitive:
O Antony! O Antony! [Dies.
2 Sold. Let's speak
To him.
1 Sold. Let's hear him, for the things he speaks
May concern Caesar.
3 Sold. Let's do so. But he sleeps.
2 Sold. Swoons rather; for so bad a prayer as his
Was never yet for sleeping.
2 Sold. Go we to him.
3 Sold. Awake, awake, sir; speak to us.
2 Sold. Hear you, sir?
1 Sold. The hand of death hath raught 9 him.
Hark, the drums [Drums afar off:
Demurely wake the sleepers. Let us bear him
To the court of guard; he is of note: our hour
Is fully out.
3 Sold. Come on then;
He may recover yet. [Exeunt with the Body.

SCENE X. — Between the two Camps.
Enter Antony and Scarus, with Forces, marching.
Ant. Their preparation is to-day by sea;
We please them not by land.
Scar. For both, my lord.
Ant. I would, they'd fight i' th' fire, or in the air;
We'd fight there too. But this it is; our foot
Upon the hills ad Joining to the city,
Shall stay with us; order for sea is given;
They have put forth the haven, further on,
Where their appointment we may best discover,
And look on their endeavour. [Exeunt.

Enter Caesar, and his Forces, marching.
Ces. But 1 being charg'd, we will be still by land,
Which, as I tak't, we shall; for his best force
Is forth to man his gallies. To the vales,
And hold our best advantage. [Exeunt.

Re-enter Antony and Scarus.
Ant. Yet they're not join'd: Where yonder pine does stand,
I shall discover all: I'll bring thee word
Straight, how 'tis like to go. [Exit.

Antony and Cleopatra. Act IV.

Scar. Swallows have built
In Cleopatra's sails their nest: the augurers
Say, they know not,—they cannot tell:—look grimly,
And dare not speak their knowledge. Antony
Is valiant, and deflected; and, by starts,
His fretted fortunes give him hope, and fear,
Of what he has, and has not.

Alarum afar off, as at a Sea Fight.

Re-enter Antony.

Ant. All is lost;
This foul Egyptian hath betrayed me:
My fleet hath yielded to the foe: and yonder
They cast their caps up, and carouse together
Like friends long lost. — Triple-turn'd whore! 2 tis thou
Hast sold me to this novice; and my heart
Makes only wars on thee. — Bid them all fly;
For when I am reveng'd upon my charm,
I have done all: — Bid them all fly, begone.
[Exit Scarus.

O sun, thy uprise shall I see no more:
Fortune and Antony part here; even here
Do we shake hands. — All come to this?—The hearts
That spaniel'd me at heels, to whom I gave
Their wishes, do dishandy, melt their sweets
On blossoming Caesar; and this pine is bark'd,
That over-topp'd them all. Betray'd I am:
O this false soul of Egypt! this grave charm,
Whose eye beck'd forth my wars, and call'd them home;
Whose bosom was my crownet, 3 my chief end,
Like a right gipsy, hath, at fast and loose 4,
Beguill'd me to the very heart of loss. —
What, Eros, Eros!

Enter Cleopatra.

Ah! thou spell! Avaunt.

Cleo. Why is my lord enrag'd against his love?
Ant. Vanish: or I shall give thee thy deserving,
And blemish Caesar's triumph. Let him take thee,
And hoist thee up to the shouting plebeians:
Follow his chariot, like the greatest spot
Of all thy sex; most monster-like, be shown
For poor'st diminutives, 5 to dolts; and let Patient Octavia plough thy visage up
With her prepared nails. [Exit Cleo.] 'Tis well thou'rt gone,
If it be well to live: But better 'twere
Thou fell'st into my fury, for one death
Might have prevented many. — Eros, ho! —
The shirt of Nessus is upon me: Teach me,
Alcides, thou mine ancestor, thy rage:
Let me lodge Lichas 6 on the horns o' the moon;
And with those hands that grasp'd the heaviest club,
Subdue my worthiest self. The witch shall die;
To the Roman boy she hath sold me, and I fall
Under this plot: she dies for't. — Eros, ho! [Exit.

SCENE XI. — Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.
Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Mardian.
Cleo. Help me, my women! O, he is more mad
Than Telamon 7 for his shield; the boar of Thessaly
Was never so emboss'd. 8

Cleopatra first belonged to Julius Caesar, then to Antony, and now, as Antony supposes, to Augustus. 3 Finish.
4 A cheating game, at present named pricking at the belt.
5 For the smallest piece of money.
6 The boy that brought the poisoned shirt to Hercules.
7 Ajax Telamon for the shield of Achilles.
8 Foaming at the mouth.
Let us go, and leave this place.

Eros. Ay, my lord.

Ant. That which is now a horse, even with a thought,

The rack 9 dislimns: and makes it indistinct,

As water is in water.

Eros. It does, my lord.

Ant. My good knave, Eros, now thy captain is Even such a body: here I am Antony;

Yet cannot hold this visible shape, my knave.

I made these wars for Egypt; and the queen, —

Whose heart, I thought, I had, for she had mine;

Which, whilst it was mine, had annex'd unto

A million more, now lost, — she, Eros, has

Pack'd cards with Caesar, and false play'd my glory

Unto an enemy's triumph. —

Nay, weep not, gentle Eros; there is left us

Ourselves to end ourselves. — O, thy vile lady!

Enter Mardian.

She has rob'd me of my sword.

Mar. No, Antony; my mistress lov'd thee, and her fortunes mingled

With thine entirely.

Ant. Hence, saucy eunuch; peace;

She hath betray'd me, and shall die the death.

Mar. Death of one person can be paid but once; and

That she has discharg'd: What thou wouldst do,

Is done unto thy hand: the last she spake

Was, Antony! most noble Antony! Then in the midst a tearing groan did break

The name of Antony; it was divided Between her heart and lips: she render'd life,

Thy name so buried in her.

Ant. Dead then? —

Mar. Dead.

Ant. Eros, unarm'd; the long day's task is done,

And we must sleep: — That thou depart'st hence safe,

Does pay thy labour richly; Go. — Off, pluck off; —

[Exit Mardian.

The seven-fold shield of Ajax cannot keep

The battery from my heart. O, cleave, my sides! Heart, once be stronger than thy contenation; Crayck thy frail case! — Apace, Eros, apace. —

9 The fleeting clouds.

10 i.e. The thing that contains thee.

No more a soldier: — bruis'd pieces, go;

You have been nobly borne. — From me a while.

[Exit Eros.

I will o'ertake thee, Cleopatra, and

Weep for my pardon. So it must be, for now

All length is torturing; — Since the torch is out,

Lie down, and stray no further: Now all labour

Mars what it does; yea, very force entangles

Itself with strength: Seal then, and all is done. —

Eros! — I come, my queen: — Eros! Stay for me: Where souls do couch on flowers, we'll hand in hand,

And with our sprightly port make the ghosts gaze:

Dido and her Æneas shall want troops,

And all the haunt be ours. — Come, Eros, Eros!

Re-enter Eros.

Eros. What would my lord?

Ant. Since Cleopatra died, I have liv'd in such dishonour, that the gods

Detest my baseness. I, that with my sword

Quarter'd the world, and o'er green Neptune's back

With ships made cities, condemn myself, to lack

The courage of a woman; less noble mind

Than she, which, by her death, our Caesar tells,

I am conqueror of myself. Thou art sworn, Eros,

That, when the exigent should come, (which now

Is come, indeed,) when I should see behind me

The inevitable prosecution of Disgrace and horror, that, on my command,

Thou then wouldst kill me; do't; the time is come;

Thou strik'rt not me, 'tis Caesar thou defeat'st.

Put colour in thy cheek.

Eros. The gods withhold me!

Shall I do that, which all the Parthian darts,

Though enemy, lost aim, and could not?

Ant. Eros, Wouldst thou be window'd in great Rome, and see

Thy master thus with pleasch'd 4 arms, bending down

His corrigible neck, his face subdued

To penetrative shame; whilst the wheel's seat

Of fortunate Caesar, drawn before him, branded

His baseness that ensued?

Eros. I would not see'.

Ant. Come then; for with a wound I must be cur'd.

Draw that thy honest sword, which thou hast worn

Most useful for thy country.

Eros. O, sir, pardon me.

Ant. When I did make thee free, swor'st thou not then

To do this when I bade thee? Do it at once; Or thy precedent services are all

But accidents unpurpos'd. Draw, and come.

Eros. Turn from me then that noble countenance,

Wherein the worship 5 of the whole world lies.

Ant. Lo thee! — [Turning from him.

Eros. My sword is drawn.

Ant. Then let it do at once

The thing why thou hast drawn it.

Eros. My dear master, My captain, and my emperor! let me say,

Before I strike this bloody stroke, Farewell.

Ant. 'Tis said, man; — and farewell.

Eros. Farewell, great chief. Shall I strike now?

Ant. Now, Eros.

Eros. Why, there then: — [Falls on his sword.] Thus do I escape the sorrow

Of Antony's death.
ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

ACT IV.

I have led you oft; carry me now, good friends, And have my thanks for all. [Exeunt, bearing Antony

SCENE XIII. — A Monument.

Enter above, CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, and IRAS.

CLEO. O, Charmian, I will never go from hence.

CHAR. Be comforted, dear madam.

CLEO. No, I will not; all strange and terrible events are welcome, But comforts we despise; our size of sorrow, Proportion'd to our cause, must be as great

Enter Diomedes.

As that which makes it. — How now? is he dead?

DIO. His death's upon him, but not dead.

Look out o' the other side your monument, His guard have brought him thither.

Enter Antony, borne by the Guard.

CLEO. O thou sun, Burn the great sphere thou mov'st in! — darkling stand The varying shore o' the world! — O Antony! Antony, Antony! — Charmian, help; help, Iras; Help, friends below; Let's draw him hither.

ANT. Not Caesar's valour hath o'ertrown Antony, But Antony's hath triumphed on itself.

CLEO. So it should be, that none but Antony Should conquer Antony; but woe 'tis so! ANT. I am dying, Egypt, dying; only I here impotence death awhile, until Of many thousand kisses the poor last I lay upon thy lips. —

CLEO. I dare not, dear (Dear my lord, pardon,) I dare not, Lest I be taken: not the impierous show Of the full-fortun'd Caesar ever shall Be brooch'd 4 with me; if knife, drugs, serpents, have Edge, sting, or operation, I am safe: Your wife Octavia, with her modest eyes, And still conclusion 5 shall acquire no honour Demurring upon me. — But come, come, Antony,— Help me, my women,— we must draw thee up; — Assist, good friends.

ANT. O, quick, or I am gone.

CLEO. Here's sport indeed! — How heavy weighs my lord! Our strength is all gone into heaviness, That makes the weight: Had I great Juno's power, The strong wing'd Mercury should fetch thee up, And set thee by Jove's side. Yet come a little,— Wishes were ever fools; — O, come, come, come; [They draw Antony up. And welcome, welcome! die, where thou hast liv'd: Quicken 6 with kissing; had my lips that power, Thus would I wear them out.

ALL. A heavy sight.

ANT. I am dying, Egypt, dying: Give me some wine, and let me speak a little.

CLEO. No, let me speak; and let me rail so high, That the false housewife Fortune break her wheel, Provok'd by my offence.

ANT. One word, sweet queen: Of Caesar seek your honour, with your safety. — O! CLEO. They do not go together.

ANT. Gentle, hear me: None about Caesar trust, but Proculeius. 4 Ornamented. 5 Sedate determination. 6 Revive.
ACT V.

SCENE I. — Caesar's Camp before Alexandria.

Enter Caesar, Agrippa, Dolabella, Mecenas, Gallus, Proculeius, and others.

Caesar. Go to him, Dolabella, bid him yield; Being so frustrate, tell him, he mock us by The pauses that he makes.

Dolabella. Caesar, I shall. [Exit Dolabella.

Enter Dercetas, with the Sword of Antony.

Caesar. Wherefore is that? and what art thou, that dar'st Appear thus to us?

Dercetas. I am call'd Dercetas; Mark Antony I serv'd, who best was worthy, Best to be serv'd: whilst he stood up and spake, He was my master: and I wore my life, To spend upon his haters: If thou please To take me to thee, as I was to him I'll be to Caesar; If thou pleastest not, I yield thee up my life.

Caesar. What is't thou say'st?

Dercetas. I say, O Caesar, Antony is dead.

Caesar. The breaking of so great a thing should make A greater crack: The round world should have shook Lions into civil streets, And citizens to their dens. — The death of Antony Is not a single doom; in the name lay A moity of the world.

Dercetas. He is dead, Caesar; Not by a public minister of justice, Nor by a hired knife; but that self hand, Which writ his honour in the acts it did, Hath, with the courage which the heart did lend it, Splitted the heart. — This is his sword, I robb'd his wound of it; behold it stain'd With his most noble blood.

Caesar. Look you sad, friends? The gods rebuke me, but it is a tidings To wash the eyes of kings.

Agrippa. And strange it is, That nature must compel us to lament Our most persisted deeds.

Mecenas. His taints and honours Waged equal with him.

Agrippa. A rarer spirit never Did steer humanity: but you gods will give us Some faults to make us mend. Caesar is touch'd. Mecenas. When such a spacious mirror's set before him, He needs must see himself.

Caesar. I have follow'd thee to this: — But we do lance Diseases in our bodies: I must perfuce Have shown to thee such a declining day, Or look on thine; we could not stall together In the whole world: but yet let me lament, With tears as sovereign as the blood of hearts, That thou, my brother, my competitor In top of all design, my mate in empire, Friend and companion in the front of war, The arm of mine own body, and the heart Where mine his thoughts did kindle, — that our stars, Unreconcileable, should divide Our equalness to this. — Hear me, good friends, — But I will tell you at some meeter season;

Enter a Messenger.

The business of this man looks out of him, We'll hear him what he says. — Whence are you Messengers. A poor Egyptian yet. The queen my mistress, Confin'd in all she has, her monument, Of thy intents desires instruction;

7 Task-work. 8 Ita.
That she preparedly may frame herself
To the way she's forc'd to.

Ces. Bid her have good heart;
She soon shall know of us, by some of ours,
How honourable and how kindly we Determine for her; for Caesar cannot live
To be ungentle.

Mess. So the gods preserve thee! [Exit.
Ces. Come hither, Proculeius; Go, and say,
We purpose her no shame; give her what comforts
The quality of her passion shall require;
Lest, in her greatness, by some mortal stroke
She do defeat us; for her life in Rome
Would be eternal in our triumph: Go,
And, with your speediest, bring us what she says,
And how you find of her.

Pro. Caesar, I shall. [Exit Proculeius.
Ces. Gallus, go you along. — Where's Dolabella,
To second Proculeius? [Exit Gallus.

Agr. Mess. Dolabella!

Ces. Let him alone, for I remember now
How he's employed; he shall in time be ready.
Go with me to my tent; where you shall see
How hardly I was drawn into this war;
How calm and gentle I proceeded still
In all my writings: Go with me and see
What I can show in this.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. — Alexandria. A Room in the Monument.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, and Iras.

Cleo. My desolation does begin to make
A better life: 'Tis paltry to be Caesar;
Not being fortune, he's but fortune's knave,
A minister of her will; and it is great
To do that thing that ends all other deeds;
Which shackles accidents; and bolts up change;
Which sleeps, and never palates more the dung,
The beggar's nurse and Caesar's.

Enter, to the Gates of the Monument, Proculeius,
Gallus, and Soldiers.

Pro. Caesar sends greeting to the queen of Egypt;
And bids thee study on what fair demands
Thou mean'st to have him grant thee.

Cleo. [Within.] What's thy name?

Pro. My name is Proculeius.

Cleo. [Within.] Antony

Did tell me of you, bade me trust you; but
I do not greatly care to be deceiv'd,
That have no use for trusting. If your master
Would have a queen his beggar, you must tell him,
That majesty, to keep decorum, must
No less beg than a kingdom: if he please
To give me conquer'd Egypt for my son,
He gives me so much of mine own, as I
Will kneel to him with thanks.

Pro. Be of good cheer; you are fallen into a princely hand, fear nothing:
Make your full reference freely to my lord,
Who is so full of grace, that it flows over
On all that need: Let me report to him
Your sweet dependancy: and you shall find
A conqueror, that will pray in aid for kindness,
Where he for grace is kneel'd to.

Cleo. [Within.] Pray you, tell him
I am his fortune's vassal, and I send him
The greatness he has got. I hourly learn

A doctrine of obedience; and would gladly
Look him in the face.

Pro. This I'll report, dear lady.
Have comfort; for, I know, your plight is pitied
Of him that caus'd it.

Gal. You see how easily she may be surpris'd;
[Here Proculeius, and two of the Guard,
Ascend the Monument by a Ladder placed against a Window, and having descended, come behind Cleopatra. Some of the Guard unbar and open the Gates.

Guard her till Caesar come.

[To Proculeius and the Guard. Exit]

Cleo. Royal queen!

Char. O Cleopatra! thou art taken, queen! —
Cleo. Quick, quick, good hands.

[Drawing a Dagger.

Pro. Hold, worthy lady, hold:

[Seizes and disarms her.

Do not yourself such wrong, who are in this Reliev'd, but not betray'd.

Cleo. What, of death too
That rids our dogs of languish?

Pro. Cleopatra,

Do not abuse my master's bounty, by
The undoing of yourself: let the world see
His nobleness well acted, which your death
Will never let come forth.

Cleo. Where art thou, death?
Come hither, come! come, come, and take a queen
Worth many babes and beggars!

Pro. O, temperance, lady!

Cleo. Sir, I will eat no meat, I'll not drink, sir;
If idle talk will once be necessary,
I'll not sleep neither: This mortal house I'll ruin,
Do Caesar what he can. Know, sir, that I
Will not wait pinion'd at your master's court:
Nor once be chastis'd with the sober eye
Of dull Octavia. Shall they hoist me up,
And show me to the shouting varlety!

Of censoring Rome? Rather a ditch in Egypt
Be gentle grave to me! rather on Nilus' mud
Lay me stark naked, and let the water-flies
Blow me into abhorring! rather make
My country's high pyramids my gibbet,
And hang me up in chains!

You do extend
These thoughts of horror further than you shall Find cause in Caesar.

Enter Dolabella.

Dol. Proculeius, What thou hast done thy master Caesar knows,
And he hath sent for thee: as for the queen,
I'll take her to my guard.

Pro. So, Dolabella,
It shall content me best: be gentle to her. —
To Caesar I will speak what you shall please.

If you'll employ me to him.

Cleo. Say, I would die

[Exeunt Proculeius and Soldiers.

Dol. Most noble empress, you have heard of me?
Cleo. I cannot tell.

Dol. Assuredly, you know me.
Cleo. No matter, sir, what I have heard or known.
You laugh, when boys, or women, tell their dreams;
Is't not your trick?

Servant.
Scene II.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

Dol. I understand not, madam.

Cleo. I dream'd, there was an emperor Antony;—
O, such another sleep, that I might see
But such another man!

Dol. If it might please you, —

Cleo. His face was as the heavens; and therein
A sun, and moon; which kept their course, and lighted
The little O, the earth.

Dol. Most sovereign creature,—
Cleo. His legs bestrid the ocean: his rear'd arm
Crested the world: his voice was propitiated
As all the tuned spheres, and that to friends;
But when he meant to quail 2 and shake the orb,
He was as rattling thunder. For his bounty,
There was no winter in't; an autumn 'twas,
That grew the more by reaping: In his livery
Walk'd crowns, and crownets; realms and islands
were
As plates 3 dropp'd from his pocket.

Dol. Cleopatra, —

Cleo. Think you, there was, or might be, such a man
As this I dream'd of?

Dol. Gentle madam, no.

Cleo. You lie up to the hearing of the gods.
But, if there be, or ever were one such,
It's past the size of dreaming: Nature wants stuff
To vie strange forms with fancy; yet, to see,
An Antony, were nature's piece 'gainst fancy,
Condemning shadows quite.

Dol. Hear me, good madam:
Your loss is as yourself, great: and you bear it
As answering to the weight: Would I might never O'take pursu'd success, but I do feel,
By the rebound of yours, a grief that shoots
My very heart at root.

Cleo. I thank you, sir.

Know you, what Caesar means to do with me?
Dol. I am loath to tell you what I would you knew.

Cleo. Nay, pray you, sir,—

Dol. Though he be honourable,—

Cleo. He'll lead me then in triumph?

Dol. Madam; he will;
I know it.

[Within.] Make way there, — Caesar.

Enter CAESAR, GALLUS, PROCULEIUS, MECENAS, SELEUCUS, and ATTENDANTS.

Ces. Which is the queen
Of Egypt?

Dol. 'Tis the emperor, madam. [Cleopatra kneels.

Ces. You shall not kneel —
I pray you, rise; rise, Egypt.

Cleo. Sir, the gods
Will have it thus; my master and my lord
I must obey.

Ces. Take to you no hard thoughts:
The record of what injuries you did us,
Though written in our flesh, we shall remember
As things but done by chance.

Cleo. Sole sir c' the world,
I cannot project 4 mine own cause so well
To make it clear; but do confess, I have Been laden with like frailties, which before
Have often shamed our sex.

Ces. Cleopatra, know,
We will extenuate rather than enforce:
If you apply yourself to our intents,
(Which towards you are most gentle,) you shall find
A benefit in this change; but if you seek
To lay on me a cruelty, by taking Antony's course, you shall bereave yourself
Of my good purposes, and put your children
To that destruction which I'll guard them from,
If thereon you rely. I'll take my leave.

Cleo. And may; through all the world: 'tis yours:
and we
Your 'scutcheons, and your signs of conquest, shall Hang in what place you please. Here, my good lord.

Ces. You shall advise me in all for Cleopatra.

Cleo. This is the brief of money, plate, and jewels,
I am posses'd of: 'tis exactly valued:
Not petty things admitted. — Where's Seleucus?
Sel. Here, madam.

Cleo. This is my treasurer; let him speak, my lord,
Upon his peril, that I have reserv'd
To myself nothing. Speak the truth, Seleucus.

Sel. Madam,
I had rather see 5 my lips, than, to my peril,
Speak that which is not.

Cleo. What have I kept back?

Sel. Enough to purchase what you have made known.

Ces. Nay, blush not, Cleopatra; I approve
Your wisdom in the deed.

Cleo. See, Caesar! O, behold,
How pomp is follow'd! mine will now be yours;
And, should we shift estates, yours would be mine
The ingratitude of this Seleucus does
Even make me wild; — O slave, of no more trust
Than love that's hid! — What, goest thou back?
thou shalt
Go back, I warrant thee; but I'll catch thine eyes,
Though they had wings: Slave, soul-less villain, dog!
O rarely base!

Ces. Good queen, let us entreat you.

Cleo. O Caesar, what a wounding shame is this;
That thou, vouchsafing here to visit me,
Doing the honour of thy lordliness
To one so meek, that mine own servant should Parcel 6 the sum of my disgraces by Addition of his envy! Say, good Caesar,
That I some lady trifles have reserv'd,
Immoment toys, things of such dignity
As we vreat modern 7 friends withal: and say,
Some nobler token I have kept apart
For Livia, 8 and Octavia, to induce
Their mediation; must I be unfolded
With one that I have bred! The gods! It smites me
Beneath the fall I have. Pr'ythee, go hence;

Or I shall show the cinders of my spirits
Through the ashes of my chance. — Wert thou a
man,
Thou wouldst have mercy on me.

Ces. Forbear, Seleucus.

Cleo. Be it known, that we, the greatest, are mis-thought
For things that others do; and, when we fall,
We answer others' merits in our name,
Are therefore to be pitied.

8 Sew up.
7 Common.
6 Add to.
5 Common.
4 Shape or form.
Now, noble Charmian, we'll despatch indeed:
And, when thou hast done this charge, I'll give thee leave
To play till doomsday. — Bring our crown and all.
Wherefore's this noise?

Enter one of the Guard.

Guard. Here is a rural fellow,
That will not be denied your highness' presence;
He brings you figs.

Cleo. Let him come in. How poor an instrument

Enter Guard, with a Clown bringing a Basket.

Guard. This is the man.

Cleo. Avoid, and leave him. [Exit Guard.
Hast thou the pretty worm of Nilus there,
That kills and pains not ?

Clown. Truly I have him: but I would not be the party that should desire you to touch him, for his biting is immortal; those, that do die of it, do seldom or never recover.

Cleo. Remember'st thou any that have died on't?

Clown. Very many, men and women too. I heard of one of them no longer than yesterday: a very honest woman, but something given to lie; as a woman should not do, but in the way of honesty: how she died of the biting of it, what pains she felt. — Truly, she makes a very good repent o' the worm: But he that will believe all that they say, shall never be saved by half that they do: But this is most fallible, the worm's an odd worm.

Cleo. Get thee hence; farewell.

Clown. I wish you all joy of the worm.

Cleo. Farewell. [Clown sets down the Basket.

Clown. You must think this, look you, that the worm will do his kind. 9

Cleo. Ay, ay; farewell.

Clown. Look you, the worm is not to be trusted, but in the keeping of wise people; for, indeed, there is no goodness in the worm.

Cleo. Take thou no care; it shall be heeded.

Clown. Very good: give it nothing, I pray you, for it is not worth the feeding.

Cleo. Will it eat me?

Clown. You must not think I am so simple, but I know the devil himself will not eat a woman: I know, that a woman is a dish for the gods, if the devil dress her not.

Cleo. Well, get thee gone; farewell.

Clown. Yes, forsooth; I wish you joy of the worm. [Exit.

Re-enter Iris, with a Robe, Crown, &c.

Cleo. Give me my robe, put on my crown; I have Immortal longings in me: Now no more
The juice of Egypt's grape shall moist this lip: —
Yare, yare! good Iris; quick. — Methinks, I hear Antony call; I see him rouse himself
To praise my noble act; I hear him mock
The luck of Caesar, which the gods give men
To excuse their after wrath: Husband, I come
Now to that name my courage prove my title!

9 Lively.
1 Female characters were played by boys.

Enter Charmian.

Show me, my women, like a queen — Go fetch My best attires; — I am again for Cydnus. To meet Mark Antony; — SIRRAB, Iris, go. —

[Act according to his nature. 2 Make haste.
Scene II.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

I am fire, and air; my other elements
I give to baser life. — So, — have you done?
Come then, and take the last warmth of my lips.
Farewell, kind Charmian; — Iras, long farewell.

Kisses them. [IRAS falls and dies.

Have I the asp in my lips? Dost fall?
If thou and nature can so gently part,
If thus thou vanishest, thou tell'st the world
It is not worth leave-taking.

Char. Dissolve, thick cloud, and rain; that I may say,
The gods themselves do weep!

Cleo. This proves me base:
If she first meet the curled Antony,
He'll make demand of her; and spend that kiss,
Which is my heaven to have. Come, mortal wretch,

[To the Asp, which she applies to her Breast.

With thy sharp teeth this knot instrinsicate
Of life at once untie: poor venomous fool,
Be angry and despatch. O, couldst thou speak!
That I might hear thee call great Caesar, ass unpolicied!

Char. O eastern star! Peace, peace!

Dost thou not see my baby at my breast,
That sucks the nurse asleep?

Char. O, break! O, break!

Cleo. As sweet as balm, as soft as air, as gentle —
O Antony! — Nay, I will take thee too: —

[Applying another Asp to her Arm.

What should I stay — [Falls on a Bed, and dies.

Char. In this wild world? — So, fare thee well. —
Now boast thee, death! in thy possession lies
A less unparalleled: — Downy windows close;
And golden Phæbus never be beheld
Of eyes again so royal! Your crown's awry;
I'll mend it, and then play.

Enter the Guard, rushing in.

1 Guard. Where is the queen?
Char. Speak softly, wake her not.
1 Guard. Caesar hath sent —
Char. Too slow a messenger. [Applies the Asp.

O, come: space, despatch: I partly feel thee.
1 Guard. Approach, ho! All's not well: Caesar's begun'd.

2 Guard. There's Dolabella sent from Caesar; —

Char. What work is here? — Charmian, is this well done?

Char. It is well done, and fitting for a princess
Descended of so many royal kings.
Ah, soldier! [Dies.

Enter Dolabella.

Dol. How goes it here?

2 Guard. All dead.

Dol. Caesar, thy thoughts
Touch their effects in this: Thysel'f art coming
To see perform'd the dreaded act, which thou
So sought'st to hinder.

[Within.]

A way there, way for Caesar!

Enter Caesar and Attendants.

Dol. O, sir, you are too sure an augurer;
That you did fear, is done.

Cas. Bravest at the last:
She levell'd at our purposes, and, being royal,
Took her own way. — The manner of their deaths?
I do not see them bleed.

Dol. Who was last with them?

1 Guard. A simple countryman, that brought her figs;

This was his basket.

Cas. Poison'd then.

1 Guard. O Caesar,
This Charmian liv'd but now; she stood, and spake;
I found her trimming up the diadem
On her dead mistress; trembling she stood,
And on the sudden dropp'd.

Cas. O noble weakness!

If they had swallow'd poison, 'twould appear
By external swelling: but she looks like sleep,
As she would catch another Antony
In her strong toil of grace, 5

Dol. Here, on her breast,

There is a rent of blood, and something blown:
The like is on her arm.

1 Guard. This is an aspik's trail: and these fig-leaves

Have slime upon them, such as the aspik leaves

Upon the caves of Nile.

Cas. Most probable,
That so she died; for her physician tells me,
She hath pursu'd conclusions infinite
Of easy ways to die. — Take up her bed;
And bear her women from the monument: —
She shall be buried by her Antony;
No grave upon the earth shall clip 6 in it
A pair so famous. High events as these Strike those that make them: and their story is
No less in pity than his glory, which Brought them to be lamented. Our army shall,
In solemn show, attend this funeral;
And then to Rome. — Come, Dolabella, see
High order in this great solemnity. [Exeunt.

4 Unpolitic, to leave me to myself.

5 Graceful appearance.

6 Enfold.
Cymbeline.

PERSONS REPRESENTED.

Cymbeline, King of Britain.
Clooten, Son to the Queen by a former Husband.
Leonatus Posthumus, a Gentleman, Husband to Imogen.
Belarius, a banished Lord, disguised under the Name of Morgan.
Guidenius, Sons to Cymbeline, disguised under the Names of Polydore and Canwal, supposed Sons to Belarius.
Philario, Friend to Posthumus. Italians.
Iachimo, Friend to Philario.
A French Gentleman, Friend to Philario.
Caes Lucius, General of the Roman Forces.
A Roman Captain.

Two British Captains.
Pisanno, Servant to Posthumus.
Cornelius, a Physician.
Two Gentlemen.
Two Gaolers.

Queen, Wife to Cymbeline.
Imogen, Daughter to Cymbeline by a former Queen.
Helen, Woman to Imogen.

Lords, Ladies, Roman Senators, Tribunes, Apparitions, a Soothsayer, a Dutch Gentleman, a Spanish Gentleman, Musicians, Officers, Captains, Soldiers, Messengers, and other Attendants.

Scene, sometimes in Britain; sometimes in Italy.
SCENE I. — Britain.  The Garden behind Cymbeline’s Palace.

Enter two Gentlemen.

1 Gent. You do not meet a man but frowns: our bloods

No more obey the heavens, than our courtiers;
Still seem, as does the king’s.

2 Gent. But what’s the matter?

1 Gent. His daughter, and the heir of his kingdom, whom
He purpos’d to his wife’s sole son, (a widow,
That late he married,) hath referred herself
Unto a poor but worthy gentleman: She’s wedded;
Her husband banish’d; she imprison’d: all
Is outward sorrow; though, I think, the king
Be touch’d at very heart.

2 Gent. None but the king?

1 Gent. He, that hath lost her, too: so is the queen,
That most desir’d the match: But not a courtier,
Although they wear their faces to the bent
Of the king’s looks, hath a heart that is not Glad at the thing they scowl at.

2 Gent. And why so?

1 Gent. He that hath miss’d the princess, is a thing
Too bad for bad report: and he that hath her,
(I mean, that married her,) — alack, good man! —
And therefore banish’d, is a creature such
As, to seek through the regions of the earth

For one his like, there would be something failing
In him that should compare. I do not think,
So fair an outward, and such stuff within,
Endows a man but he.

2 Gent. You speak him far. 2

1 Gent. I do extend him, sir, within himself;
Crush him together, rather than unfold
His measure duly. 3

2 Gent. What’s his name, and birth?

1 Gent. I cannot delve him to the root: His father
Was call’d Sicilius, who did join his honour,
Against the Romans, with Cassibelan:
But had his titles by Tenantius 4, whom
He serv’d with glory and admir’d success:
So gain’d the sur-addition, Leonatus:
And had, besides this gentleman in question,
Two other sons, who, in the wars o’ the time,
Died with their swords in hand; for which their father
(Then old and fond of issue) took such sorrow,
That he quit being; and his gentle lady,
Big of this gentleman, our theme, deceas’d
As he was born. The king, he takes the babe
To his protection; calls him Posthumus;
Breeds him, and makes him of his bed-chamber:
Puts him to all the learnings that his time
Could make him the receiver of; which he took,
As we do air, fast as ‘twas minister’d: and

1 Inclination, natural disposition.

2 i.e. You praise him extensively.

3 My praise, however extensive, is within his merit.

4 The father of Cymbeline.
In his spring became a harvest: Liv’d in court
(Which rare it is to do) most prais’d, most lov’d:
A sample to the youngest; to the more mature,
A glass that stead’d them; and to the graver,
A child that guided dotards: to his mistress,
For whom he now is banished,—her own price
Proclaims how she esteem’d him and his virtue;
By her election may be truly read,
What kind of man he is.

2 Gent. I honour him
Even out of your report. But, ’tis pray, tell me,
Is she sole child to the king?
1 Gent. His only child.
He had two sons, (if this be worth your hearing,
Mark it,) the eldest of them at three years old,
I’ the swathing clothes the other, from their nursery
Were stolen: and to this hour, no guess in knowledge
Which way they went.

2 Gent. How long is this ago?
1 Gent. Some twenty years.
2 Gent. That a king’s children should be so convey’d!
So slackly guarded; And the search so slow,
That could not trace them!

1 Gent. Howsoe’r ’tis strange,
Or that the negligence may well be laugh’d at,
Yet is it true, sir.

2 Gent. I do well believe you.
1 Gent. We must forbear; Here comes the gentleman.

The queen and princess. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. — The same.

Enter the Queen, Posthumus, and Imogen.

Queen. No, be assur’d, you shall not find me,
daughter,
After the slander of most step-mothers,
Evil-eyed unto you: you are my prisoner, but
Your gaoler shall deliver you the keys
That lock up your restraint. For you, Posthumus,
So soon as I can win the offended king,
I will be known your advocate: marry, yet
The fire of rage is in him; and ’twere good,
You lean’d unto his sentence, with what patience
Your wisdom may inform you.

Post. Please your highness,
I will from hence to-day.

Queen. You know the peril: —
I’ll fetch a turn about the garden, pitying
The pangs of barr’d affections; though the king
Hath charg’d you should not speak together.

[Exit Queen.

Imo. O
Dissembling courtesy! How fine this tyrant
Can tickle where she wounds! — My dearest husband,
I something fear my father’s wrath; but nothing,
(Always reserv’d my holy duty,) what
His rage can do on me: You must be gone;
And I shall here abide the hourly shot
Of angry eyes; not comforted to live,
But that there is this jewel in the world,
That I may see again.

Post. My queen! my mistress!
O, lady, weep no more; lest I give cause
To be suspected of more tenderness
Than doth become a man! I will remain
The loyal’st husband that did e’er plight troth.

My residence in Rome at one Philario’s;
Who to my father was a friend, to me
Known but by letter; thither write, my queen,
And with mine eyes I’ll drink the words you send,
Though ink be made of gall.

Re-enter Queen.

Queen. Be brief, I pray you:
If the king come I shall incur I know not
How much of his displeasure: Yet I’ll move him
[Aside.
To walk this way: I never do him wrong,
But he does buy my injuries, to be friends;
Pays dear for my offences.
[Exit Post.

Should we be taking leave
As long a term as yet we have to live,
The loathness to depart would grow: Adieu! I

Imo. Nay, stay a little:
Were you but riding forth to air yourself,
Such parting were too petty. Look here, love,
This diamond was my mother’s: take it, heart;
But keep it till you woo another wife.

When Imogen is dead.

Post. How! how! another? —
You gentle gods, give me but this I have,
And sear up* my embraces from a next
With bonds of death! — Remain thou here

[Putting on the Ring.
While sense can keep it on! And sweetest, fairest,
As I my poor self did exchange for you,
To your so infinite loss; so in our triftes
I still win of you: For my sake, wear this;
It is a manacle of love; I’ll place it
Upon this fairest prisoner.

[Putting a bracelet on her Arm.

Imo. O, the gods!
When shall we see again?

Enter Cymbeline, and Lords.

Post. Alack, the king!

Cym. Thou basest thing, avoid! hence, from my sight!
If, after this command, thou fraught? the court
With thy unworthiness, thou diest: Away!
Thou art poison to my blood.

Post. The gods protect you!
And bless the good remainders of the court!
I am gone.

[Exit Imo.

Cym. There cannot be a pinch in death
More sharp than this.

O disloyal thing,
That shouldst repair my youth; thou heapest
A year’s age on me!

Imo. I beseech you, sir,
Harm not yourself with your vexation; I
Am senseless of your wrath; a touch more rare
Subdues all pangs, all fears.

Cym. Past grace? obedience? I

Imo. Past hope, and in despair; that way, past grace.

Cym. That mightst have had the sole son of my queen!

Imo. O bless’d, that I might not! I chose an eagle,
And did avoid a puttock. 9

Cym. Thou took’st a beggar; wouldst have made
My throne
A seat for baseness.

Imo. No; I rather added
A lustre to it.

* Close up.
* A more exquisite feeling.
  9 A kite.
Cymbeline.  2 Lord. No; but he fled forward still, toward your face. [Aside. 1 Lord. Stand you! You have land enough of your own: but he added to your having; gave you some ground. 2 Lord. As many inches as you have oceans: Puppies! [Aside. Clo. I would they had not come between us. 2 Lord. So would I, till you had measured how long a fool you were upon the ground. [Aside. Clo. And that she should love this fellow, and refuse me! 1 Lord. Sir, as I told you always, her beauty and her brain go not together: She’s a good sign, but I have seen small reflection of her wit. 3 2 Lord. She shines not upon fools, lest the reflection should hurt her. [Aside. Clo. Come, I’ll to my chamber: ‘Would there had been some hurt done! 2 Lord. I wish not so; unless it had been the fall of an ass, which is no great hurt. [Aside. Clo. You’ll go with us? 1 Lord. I’ll attend your lordship. Clo. Nay, come, let’s go together. 2 Lord. Well, my lord. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. — A Room in Cymbeline’s Palace.

Enter Imogen and Pisanio.

Imo. I would thou grew’st unto the shores o’ the haven, And question’dst every sail: if he should write, And I not have it, ’twere a paper lost As offer’d mercy is. What was the last That he spake to thee?

Pis. ’Twas, His queen, his queen!

Imo. Then wav’d his handkerchief?

Pis. And kiss’d it, madam.

Imo. Senseless linen! happier therein than I! — And that was all?

Pis. No, madam; for so long As he could make me with this eye or ear Distinguish him from others, he did keep The deck, with glove, or hat, or handkerchief, Still waving, as the fits and stirs of his mind Could best express how slow his soul sail’d on, How swift his ship.

Imo. Thou shouldst have made him As little as a crow, or less, ere left To after-eye him.

Pis. Madam, so I did.

Imo. I would have broke mine eye-strings; crack’d them, but To look upon him; till the diminution Of space had pointed him sharp as my needle: Nay, follow’d him, till he had melted from The smallness of a gnat to air; and then Have turn’d mine eye, and wept. — But, good Pisanio, When shall we hear from him?

Pis. Be assur’d, madam, With his next ’vantage.

Imo. I did not take my leave of him, but had Most pretty things to say: ere I could tell him, How I would think on him, at certain hours, Such thoughts, and such; or I could make him swear 3 To understand the force of this idea, it should be remem- bered that anciently almost every sign had a motto, or some attempt at a witicism underneath it.

4 Opportunity.
The shes of Italy should not betray
Mine interest, and his honour; or have charg'd him,
At the sixth hour of morn, at noon, at midnight,
To encounter me with orisons; for then
I am in heaven for him; or ere I could Give him that parting kiss, which I had set
Betwixt two charming words, comes in my father,
And, like the tyrannous breathing of the north,
Shakes all our buds from growing.

Enter a Lady.

Lady. The queen, madam,
Desires your highness’ company.

Imo. Those things I bid you do, get them de-
spatch’d. —
I will attend the queen.

Pis. Madam, I shall.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V. — An Apartment in Philario’s
House.

Enter Philario, Iachimo, a Frenchman, a Dutchman, and a Spaniard.

Iach. Believe it, sir: I have seen him in Britain;
he was then of a crescent note, expected to prove so worthy, as since he hath been allowed the name of:
but I could then have looked on him without the help of admiration; though the catalogue of his endowments had been tabled by his side, and I to peruse him by items.

Phi. You speak of him when he was less furnished, than now he is, with that which makes him both without and within.

French. I have seen him in France: we had very many there, could behold the sun with as firm eyes as lie.

Iach. This matter of marrying his king’s daughter, (wherein he must be weighed rather by her value, than his own;) words him, I doubt not, a great deal
from the matter.

French. And then his banishment; —

Iach. Ay, and the approbation of those, that weep this lamentable divorce, under her colours, are wonderfully to extend him; be it but to fortify her judgment, that else an easy battery might lay flat, for taking a beggar without more quality. But how comes it, he is to sojourn with you? How creeps acquaintance?

Phi. His father and I were soldiers together; to whom I have been often bound for no less than my life:

[Enter Posthumus.

Here comes the Briton: Let him be so entertained amongst you, as suits with gentlemen of your knowing, to a stranger of his quality. — I beseech you all, be better known to this gentleman; whom I commend to you, as a noble friend of mine: How worthy he is, I will leave to appear hereafter, rather than story him in his own bearing.

French. Sir, we have known together in Orleans.
Post. Since when I have been debtor to you for courtesies, which I will be ever to pay, and yet pay still.

French. Sir, you o'er-rate my poor kindness: I was glad I did alone my countryman and you; it had been pity, you should have put together with so mortal a purpose, as then each bore, upon importance 9 of so slight and trivial a nature.

Post. By your pardon, sir, I was then a young traveller: rather shunn’d to go even with what I heard, than in my every action to be guided by others’ experiences: but, upon my mended judgment, (if I offend not to say it is mended,) my quarrel was not all altogether slight.

French. ’Faith, yes, to be put to the arbitrement of swords; and by such two, that would, by all likelihood, have confounded 1 one the other, or have fallen both.

Iach. Can we, with manners, ask what was the difference?

French. Safely, I think: ’twas a contention in publick, which may, without contradiction, suffer the report. It was much like an argument that fell out last night, where each of us fell in praise of our country mistresses: This gentleman at that time vouching, (and upon warrant of bloody affirmation,) his to be more fair, virtuous, wise, chaste, constant, qualified, and less attemptable, than any the rarest of our ladies in France.

Iach. That lady is not now living; or this gen-tleman’s opinion, by this, worn out.
Post. She holds her virtue still, and I my mind.
Iach. You must not so far prefer her fore ours of Italy.
Post. Being so far provoked as I was in France,
I would abate her nothing; though I profess myself her adorer, not her friend.

Iach. An air, and as good, (a kind of hand-in-hand comparison,) had been something too fair, and too good, for any lady in Britany. If she went before others I have seen, as that diamond of yours out-lustres many I have beheld, I could not but believe she excelled many; but I have not seen the most precious diamond that is, nor you the lady.
Post. I praised her, as I rated her: so do I my stone.

Iach. What do you esteem it at?
Post. More than the world enjoys.
Iach. Either your unparagoned mistress is dead, or she’s outpriz’d by a trifle.
Post. You are mistaken: the one may be sold, or given: if the other were wealth enough for the purchase, or merit for the gift: the other is not a thing for sale, and only the gift of the gods.
Iach. Which the gods have given you?
Post. Which, by their graces, I will keep.
Iach. You may wear her in title yours: but, you know, strange fowl light upon neighbouring ponds.
Your ring may be stolen too: so, of your brace of unprizeable estimations, the one is but frail, and the other casual; a cunning thief, or a that-way accomplished courtier, would hazard the winning both of first and last.
Post. Your Italy contains none so accomplished a courtier, to convince the honour of my mistress; or in the holding or loss of that, you term her frail.
I do nothing doubt, you have store of thieves; notwithstanding I fear not my ring.
Phi. Let us leave here, gentlemen.
Post. Sir, with all my heart. This worthy sig-nior, I thank him, makes no stranger of me; we are familiar at first.
Iach. With five times so much conversation, I should get round of your fair mistress: make her
5 Meet me with reciprocal prayer. 9 Instigation.
6 Increasing in fame. 1 Destroyed.
7 Praise him. 9 Lover.
8 Reconcile. 2 Overcome.
SCENE VI. — Britain. A Room in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Queen, Ladies, and CORNELIUS.

Queen. Whiles yet the dew's on ground, gather those flowers;
Make haste: Who has the note of them?
1 Lady. I, madam.
Queen. Despach. — [Exeunt Ladies.
Now, master doctor; have you brought those drugs?
Cor. Please thy highness, ay: here they are, madam:
[Presenting a small Box.
But I beseech your grace, (without offence;
My conscience bids me ask;) wherefore you have Commanded of me these most poisonous compounds,
Which are the movers of a languishing death;
But, though slow, deadly?

I do wonder, doctor,
Thou ask'st me such a question: Have I not been Thy pupil long? Hast thou not learn'd me how To make perfumes? distil? preserve? yea, so,
That our great king himself doth woo me oft
For my confessions? Having thus far proceeded,
(Unless thou think'st me devilish,) is't not meet
That I did amplify my judgment in
Other conclusions? I will try the forces
Of these thy compounds on such creatures as
We count not worth the hanging, (but none human,) To try the vigour of them, and apply
Allayments to their act; and by them gather
Their several virtues, and effects.

Cor. Your highness
Shall from this practice but make hard your heart:
Besides, the seeing these effects will be
Both noisome and infectious.

Queen. O, content thee. —

Enter PISANIO.

Here comes a flattering rascal; upon him [Aside. I first work: he's for his master,
And en't for his son. — How now, Pisanio? —
Doctor, your service for this time is ended;
Take your own way.

Cor. I do suspect you, madam;
But you shall do no harm. —
[Aside.

Queen. Hark thee, a word. —

[To Pisanio.
Cor. [Aside.] I do not like her. She doth think, she has Strange lingering poisons: I do know her spirit,
And will not trust one of her malice with
A drug of such a nature: Those she has,
Will stuff and dull the sense awhile;
Which first, perchance, she'll prove on cats and dogs;
Then afterward up higher; but there is
No danger in what show of death it makes,
More than the looking up the spirits a time,
To be more fresh, reviving. She is fool'd
With a most false effect; and I the truer,
So to be false with her.

Queen. No further service, doctor,
Until I send for thee.

Cor. I humbly take my leave.

Queen. Weeps she still, say'st thou? Dost thou think, in time
She will not quench; and let instructions enter
Where folly now possesses? Do thou work;
When thou shalt bring me word, she loves my son,

Footnotes:
4 Proot.
5 Recommendation.
I'll tell thee, on the instant, thou art then
As great as is thy master; greater; for
His fortunes all lie speechless, and his name
Is at last grasp: Return he cannot, nor Continue where he is: to shift his being?,
Is to exchange one misery with another;
And every day, that comes, comes to decay
A day's work in him: What shalt thou expect,
To be dependant on a thing that leans?
Who cannot be new built; nor has no friends,
[The Queen drops a Box: Pisanio takes it up.
So much as but to prop him?—Thou tak'st up
Thou know'st not what; but take it for thy labour:
It is a thing I made, which hath the king
Five times redeem'd from death: I do not know
What is more cordial: — Nay, I pr'ythee, take it;
It is an earnest of a further good
That I mean to thee. Tell thy mistress how
The case stands with her; do's, as from myself.
Think what a chance thou changest on; but think
Thou hast thy mistress, still: to boot, my son,
Who shall take notice of thee: I'll move the king
To any shape of thy preference, such
As thou'lt desire; and then myself, I chiefly,
That set thee on to this desert, am bound
To load thy merit richly. Call my women:
Think on my words. [Exit Pisa.] — A sly and constant knave;
Not to be shak'd: the agent for his master;
And the remembrancer of her, to hold
The hand fast to her lord. — I have given him that,
Which, if he take, shall quite unpeople her
Of liegers for her sweet; and which she, after,
Except she bend her humour, shall be assur'd
Re-enter Pisanio and Ladies.
To taste of too. — So, so; — well done, well done:
The violet, cowslips, and the primroses,
Bear to my closet: — Fare thee well, Pisanio;
Think on my words. [Exeunt Queen and Ladies.
Pis. And shall do:
But when to my good lord I prove untrue,
I'll choke myself: there's all I'll do for you.

SCENE VII. — Another Room in the same.

Enter Imogen.

Imo. A father cruel, and a step-dame false;
A foolish suitor to a wedded lady,
That hath her husband banish'd; — O, that husband!
My supreme crown of grief! and those repeated
Vexations of it! Had I been thief-stolen,
As my two brothers, happy! but most miserable
Is the desire that's glorious: Blessed be those,
How mean soe'er, that have their honest wills,
Which seasons comfort. — Who may this be? Fye!

Enter Pisanio and Iachimo.

Pis. Madam, a noble gentleman of Rome;
Comes from my lord with letters.

Iach. Change you, madam?
The worthy Leonatus is in safety,
And greets your highness dearly.

[ Presents a Letter.

Imo. Thanks, good sir:
You are kindly welcome.

Iach. All of her, that is out of door, most rich!

If she be furnish'd with a mind so rare,
She is alone the Arabian bird; and I
Have lost the wager. Boldness be my friend!
Arm me, audacity, from head to foot!
Or, like the Parthian, I shall flying fight;
Rather, directly fly.

Imo. [Reads.] — He is one of the noblest note, to whose kindness I am most infinitely tied. Reflect upon him accordingly, as you value your trust Leonatus.

So far I read aloud:
But even the very middle of my heart
Is warm'd by the rest, and takes it thankfully. —
You are as welcome, worthy sir, as I
Have words to bid you; and shall find it so,
In all that I can do.

Iach. Thanks, fairest lady.
What! are men mad? Hath nature given them eyes
To see this vaulted arch, and the rich crop
Of sea and land, which can distinguish 'twixt
The fiery orbs above, and the twin'd stones
Upon the number'd beach? and can we not Partition make with spectacles so precious
'Twixt fair and foul?

Imo. What makes your admiration?
Iach. It cannot be i' the eye; for apes and monkeys,
'Twixt two much shes, would chatter this way, and Contemn with mows the other: Nor i' the judgment;
For idiots in this case of favour, would
Be wisely definite.

Imo. What's, dear sir?
Thus raps you? Are you well?

Iach. Thanks, madam; well: — 'Beseech you, sir, desire [To Pisanio.
My man's abode where I did leave him: he
Is strange and peevish.

Pis. I was going, sir,
To give him welcome. [Exit Pisanio.

Imo. Continues well my lord? His health 'beseech you?

Iach. Well, madam.

Imo. Is he dispos'd to mirth? I hope he be it.

Iach. Exceeding pleasant; none a stranger there
So merry and so gamesome: he is call'd
The Briton reveller.

Imo. When he was here,
He did incline to sadness; and oft-times
Not knowing why.

Iach. I never saw him sad.
There is a Frenchman his companion, one
An eminent monsieur, that, it seems, much loves
A Gallian girl at home: he furnaces
The thick sighs from him; whiles the jolly Briton (Your lord, I mean,) laughs from his free lungs, cries O!;
Can my sides hold, to think, that man,— who knows
By history, report, or his own proof,
What woman is, yea, what she cannot choose
But must be,— will his free hours languish for Assur'd bondage?

Imo. Will my lord say so?

Iach. Ay, madam; with his eyes in flood with laughter.
It is a recreation to be by,
And hear him mock the Frenchman: But, heavens
know,
Some men are much to blame.

* Shy and foolish.

* Making mouths.

3 B
Imo. Not he, I hope.

Jach. Not he: But yet heaven's bounty towards him might Be us'd more thankfully. In himself, 'tis much
In you, — which I count his, beyond all talents, —
Whilst I am bound to wonder, I am bound
To pity too.

Imo. What do you pity, sir?

Jach. Two creatures, heartily.

Imo. Am I one, sir?

You look on me: What wreck discern you in me,
Deserves your pity?

Jach. Lamentable! What!

To hide me from the radiant sun, and solace
I' the dungeon by a snuff?

Imo. I pray you, sir,
Deliver with more openness your answers
To my demands. Why do you pity me?

Jach. That others do,
I was about to say, enjoy your — But
It is an office of the gods 't o 'venge it,
Not mine to speak on't.

Imo. You do seem to know
Something of me, or what concerns me: 'Pray you (Since doubting things go ill often hurts more Than to be sure they do): For certainties
Either are past remedies; or, timely knowing,
The remedy then born,) discover to me
What both you spur and stop.

Jach. Had I this check
To bathe my lips upon; this hand, whose touch,
Whose every touch, would force the feeler's soul
To the oath of loyalty; this object, which Takes prisoner the wild motion of mine eye,
Fixing it only here: should I then join
With hands made hard with hourly falsehood,
(With falsehood as with labour,) it were fit
That all the plagues of hell should at one time
Encounter such revolt.

Imo. My lord, I fear,
Has forgot Britain.

Jach. And himself. Not I,
Inclin'd to this intelligence, pronounce
The beggary of his change; but 'tis your graces
That, from my mutest conscience, to my tongue,
Charms this report out.

Imo. Let me hear no more.

Jach. O dearest soul! your cause both strike my heart
With pity, that doth make me sick. A lady
So fair, and fasten'd to an empery 5,
Would make the great'st king double! to be partner'd
With tomboys, hir'd with that self-exhibition 4
Which your own coffers yield! O be reveng'd;
Or she, that bore you, was no queen, and you
Recoil from your great stock.

Imo. Reveng'd! How should I be reveng'd? If this be true,
(As I have such a heart, that both mine ears Must not in haste abuse,) if it be true,
How should I be reveng'd?

Jach. Should he make me
Live like Diana's priest? Revenge it, lady!
I dedicate myself to your sweet pleasure;
More noble than that runagate to your bed;
And will continue fast to your affection,
Still close, as sure,

Imo. What ho, Pisanio!

Jach. Let me my service tender on your lips.

Imo. Away! — I do condemn mine ears, that have
So long attended thee. — If thou wert honourable,
Thou wouldst have told this tule for virtue, not
For such an end thou seek'st; as base, as strange.
Thou wrong'st a gentleman, who is as far
From thy report, as thou from honour; and Solicith'st here a lady, that disdains
Thee and the devil alike. — What ho, Pisanio! —
The king my father shall be made acquainted
Of thy assault: if he shall think it fit,
A saucy stranger in his court, to mart
As in a Roman stew, he hath a court
He little cares for, and a daughter whom
He not respects at all. — What ho, — Pisanio! —

Jach. O happy Leonatus! I may say;
The credit that thy lady hath of thee,
Deserves thy trust; and thy most perfect goodness
Her assur'd credit! — Blessed live you long!
A lady to the worthiest sir, the ever
Country call'd his! and you, his mistress, only
For the most worthiest fit! Give me your pardon.
I have spoke this, to know if your affiance
Were deeply rooted; and shall make your lord,
That which he is new o'er: And he is one
The truest manner'd; such a holy witch,
That he enchanteth societies unto him:
Half all men's hearts are his.

Imo. You make amends.

Jach. He sits 'mongst men, like a descended god:
He hath a kind of honour sets him off;
More than a mortal seeming. — Be not angry,
Most mighty princess, that I have adventur'd
To try your taking of a false report; which hath Honour'd with confirmation your great judgment
In the election of a sir so rare,
Which you know, cannot err: The love I bear him
Made me to fan 5 you thus; but the gods made you,
Unlike all others, chaffless. Pray, your pardon.

Imo. All's well, sir: Take my power i' the court
For yours.

Jach. My humble thanks. I had almost forgot
To entreat your grace but in a small request,
And yet of moment too, for it concerns
Your lord; myself, and other noble friends,
Are partners in the business.

Imo. Pray, what is't?

Jach. Some dozen Romans of us, and your lord,
(The best feather of our wing) have mingled sums,
To buy a present for the emperor;
Which I, the factor for the rest, have done
In France: 'Tis plate of rare device; and jewels,
Of rich and exquisite form: their values great;
And I am something curious, being strange,
To have them in safe stowage; May it please you
To take them in protection?

Imo. Willingly;
And pawn mine honour for their safety: since
My lord hath interest in them, I will keep them
In my bed-chamber.

Jach. They are in a trunk,
Attended by my men: I will make bold
To send them to you only for this night:
I must aboard to-morrow.

Imo. O, no, no.

Jach. Yes, I beseech; or I shall short my word,
By lengthening my return. From Gallia

5 What you seem anxious to utter, and yet withhold.
6 Sovereign command.
7 Allowance, pension.
I crossed the seas on purpose, and on promise To see your grace.

Imogen. I thank you for your pains; But not away to-morrow.

Iachimo. O, I must, madam: Therefore, I shall beseech you, if you please To greet your lord with writing, do't to-night:

I have outstood my time; which is material To the tender of our present.

Imogen. I will write. Send your trunk to me! it shall safe be kept, And truly yielded you: You are very welcome. [Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I. — Court before Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter CLOEN, and two Lords.

Cloen. Was there ever man had such luck? when I kissed the jack upon an up-cast,6 to be hit away! I had a hundred pound on't: And then a jack-anapes must take me up for swearing; as if I borrowed mine oaths of him, and might not spend them at my pleasure.

1 Lord. What got he by that? You have broke his pate with your bowl.

2 Lord. If his wit had been like him that broke it, it would have ran all out. [Aside.

Cloen. When a gentleman is disposed to swear, it is not for any standers-by to curtail his oaths: Ha?

2 Lord. No, my lord; nor [Aside.] crop the ears of them.

Cloen. I give him satisfaction? — Would he had been one of my hounds!

2 Lord. To have smelt like a fool. [Aside.

Cloen. I am not more vex'd at any thing in the earth: I had rather not be so noble as I am; they dare not fight with me, because of the queen my mother: every jack-slave hath his belly full of fighting, and I must go up and down like a cock that nobody can match.

1 Lord. It is not fit your lordship should undertake any companion that you give offence to.

Cloen. No, I know that; but it is fit, I should commit offence to my inferiors.

2 Lord. Ay, it is fit for your lordship only.

Cloen. Why, so say.

1 Lord. Did you hear of a stranger that's come to court to-night?

Cloen. A stranger! and I know not on't!

2 Lord. He's a strange fellow himself, and knows it not. [Aside.

1 Lord. There's an Italian come; and, 'tis thought, one of Leonatus' friends.

Cloen. Leonatus! a banish'd rascal; and he's another, whatsoever he be. Who told you of this stranger?

1 Lord. One of your lordship's pages.

Cloen. Is it fit, I went to look upon him? Is there no derogation in't?

1 Lord. You cannot derogate, my lord.

Cloen. Not easily, I think.

2 Lord. You are a fool granted; therefore your issues being foolish, do not derogate. [Aside.

Cloen. Come, I'll go see this Italian: What I have lost to-day at bowls, I'll win to-night of him. Come, go.

2 Lord. I'll attend your lordship.

[Exeunt Cloen and first Lord.

That such a crafty devil as is his mother Should yield the world this ass! a woman, that Bears all down with her brain; and this her son Cannot take two from twenty for his heart, And leave eighteen. Alas, poor princess, Thou divine Imogen, what thou endurest! Betwixt a father by thy step-dame govern'd; A mother hourly coining plots; a wooer More hateful than the foul expulsion is Of thy dear husband, than that horrid act Of the divorces he'd make! The heavens hold firm The walls of thy dear honour; keep unshak'd That temple, thy fair mind; that thou mayst stand, To enjoy thy banish'd lord, and this great land! [Exit.

SCENE II. — A Bed-chamber; in one Part of it a Trunk.

Imogen reading in her Bed; a Lady attending.

Ladi. Who's there? my woman Helen?

Imogen. Almost midnight, madam.

Imogen. I have read three hours, then; mine eyes are weak: —

Fold down the leaf where I have left: To bed: Take not away the taper, leave it burning; And if thou canst awake by four o'clock, I pr'ythee, call me. Sleep hath seiz'd me wholly.

[Exit Lady.

To your protection I commend me, gods! From fairies, and the tempters of the night, Guard me, beseech ye! [Sleeps. Iachimo, from the Trunk.]

Iachimo. The crickets sing, and man's o'er-labour'd sense Repairs itself by rest: Our Tarquin thus Did softly press the rushes, ere he waken'd The chastity he wounded. — Cytherea, How bravely thou becom'st thy bed! fresh lily! And whiter than the sheets! that I might touch! But kiss; one kiss! — Rubies unparagon'd, How dearly they do't! — 'Tis her breathing that Perfumes the chamber thus: The flame o'the taper Bows toward her; and would under-peep her lids, To see the enclosed lights, now canopied Under these windows: White and azure, lace'd With blue of heaven's own tint. — But my design? To note the chamber: — I will write all down: — Such and such pictures: — There the window: — Such The adornment of her bed: — The arras, figures, Why, such, and such: — And the contents o'the story, —
Ah, but some natural notes about her body, Above ten thousand meaner moveables Would testify, to enrich mine inventory: O sleep, thou ape of death, lie dull upon her! And be her sense but as a monument, Thus in a chapel lying! — Come off, come off; — [Taking off her Bracelet.]

As slippery, as the Gordian knot was hard! 'Tis mine; and this will witness outwardly, As strongly as the conscience does within, To the madding of her lord. On her left breast A mole cinque-spotted, like the crimson drops I the bottom of a cowslip: Here's a voucher, Stronger than ever law could make: this secret Will force him think I have prevail'd, and ta'en The treasure of her honour. No more. — To what end?

Why should I write this down, that's riveted, Screw'd to my memory? She hath been reading late The tale of Tereus; here the leaf's turn'd down, Where Philomel gave up; — I have enough: To the trunk again, and shut the spring of it. Swift, swift, you dragons of the night! — that dawn's May bare the raven's eye: I lodge in fear; Though this a heavenly angel, hell is here.

[Clock strikes.]

One, two, three, — Time, time! [Goes into the Trunk. The Scene closes.]

SCENE III. — An Ante-chamber adjoining Imogen's Apartment.

Enter CLOETH AND LORDS.

1 LORD. Your lordship is the most patient man in loss, the most coldest that ever turn'd up ace.

Clo. It would make any man cold to lose.

1 LORD. But not-every man patient, after the noble temper of your lordship: You are most hot, and furious, when you win.

Clo. Winning would put any man into courage: If I could get this foolish Imogen, I should have gold enough: It's almost morning, is't not?

1 LORD. Day, my lord.

Clo. I would this musick would come: I am advised to give her musick o'th' mornings; they say, it will penetrate.

Enter Musicians.

Come on; tune: If you can penetrate her with your fingering, so; we'll try with tongue too: if none will do, let her remain; but I'll never give o'er. First, a very excellent good conceited thing: after a wonderful sweet air, with admirable rich words to it, — and then let her consider.

SONG.

Hark! hark! the lark at heaven's gate sings, And Phoebus' gins arise, His steeds to water at those springs On choric 9 flowers that lies: And winking Mary-buds begin To ope their golden eyes; With every thing that pretty bin: My lady sweet, arise; Arise, arise.

So, get you gone: If this penetrate, I will consider your musick the better; if it do not, it is a vice in her ears, which horse-hairs, and cat-guts, can never amend. [Exit Musicians.

Enter Cymbeline and Queen.

2 LORD. Here comes the king.

Clo. I am glad, I was up so late; for that's the reason I was up so early: He cannot choose but take this service I have done, fatherly. — Good morrow to your majesty, and to my gracious mother.

Cym. Attend you here the door of our stern daughter? Will she not forth?

Clo. I have assailed her with musick, but she vouchsafes no notice.

Cym. The exile of her minion is too new; She hath not yet forgot him: some more time Must wear the print of his remembrance out, And then she's yours.

Queen. You are most bound to the king; Who let's go by no 'vantages, that may Prefer you to his daughter: Frame yourself To orderly solicit; and be friended With aptness of the season: make denials Increase your services: so seem, as if You were inspir'd to do those duties which You tender to her: that you in all obey her, Save when command to your disposition tends, And therein you are senseless.

Clo. Senseless? not so.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. So like you, sir, ambassadors from Rome; The one is Caius Lucius.

Cym. A worthy fellow, Albeit he comes on angry purpose now; But that's no fault of his: We must receive him According to the honour of his sender; And towards himself his goodness forespent on us We must extend our notice. — Our dear son, When you have given good morning to your mistress, Attend the queen, and us; we shall have need To employ you towards this Roman. — Come, our queen.

[Exit Cym. Queen, Lords, and Mess.

Clo. If she be up, I'll speak with her; if not, Let her lie still, and dream. — By your leave, ho! — [Knocks.

I know her women are about her: What If I do line one of their hands? 'Tis gold Which buys admittance; oft it doth; yea, and makes Diana's rangers false themselves, yield up Their deer to the stand of the stealer; and 'tis gold Which makes the true man kill'd, and saves the thief; Nay, sometimes, hangs both thief and true man: What Can it not do, and undo? I will make One of her women lawyer to me; for I yet not understand the case myself. By your leave. [Knocks.

Enter a Lady.

Lady. Who's there, that knocks?

Clo. A gentleman.

Lady. No more?

Clo. Yes, and a gentlewoman's son.

Lady. That's more Than some, whose tailors are as dear as yours, Can justly boast of; What's your lordship's pleasure?

Clo. Your lady's person; is she ready?

Lady. Ay, 'To keep her chamber.
Enter Imogen.

Clo. Good-morrow, fairest sister: Your sweet hand.

Imo. Good-morrow, sir: You lay out too much pains
For purchasing but trouble: the thanks I give,
Is telling you that I am poor of thanks,
And scarce can spare them,

Clo. Still, I swear, I love you.

Imo. If you but said so, 'twere as deep with me:
If you swear still, your recompense is still
That I regard it not.

This is no answer.

Clo. But that you shall not say I yield, being silent,
I would not speak. I pray you, spare me,
I shall unfold equal discourtesy
To your best kindness; one of your great knowing
Should learn, being taught, forbearance.

Clo. To leave you in your madness, 'twere my sin:
I will not.

Imo. Fools are not mad folks.

Clo. Do you call me fool?

Imo. As I am mad, I do;
If you be patient, I'll no more be mad;
That cures us both: I am much sorry, sir,
You put me to forget a lady's manners,
'By being so verbal; and learn now, for all,
That I, which know my heart, do here pronounce
By the very truth of it, I care not for you;
And am so near the lack of charity,
('To accuse myself,' I hate you: which I had rather
You felt, than make't my boast.

Clo. You sin against Obedience, which you owe your father. For
The contract you pretend with that base wretch,
(One, bred of alms, and foster'd with cold dishes,
With o'the court,) it is no contract, none:
And though it be allow'd in meaner parties,
(Yet who, than he, more mean?;) to knit their souls
(On whom there is no more dependency
But brats and beggary) in self-figur'd knot:
Yet you are curb'd from that enlargement by
The consequence o'the crown; and must not soil
The precious note of it with a base slave,
A holding 4 for a livery, a squire's cloth,
A pantler, not so eminent.

Imo. Profane fellow!

Wert thou the son of Jupiter, and no more,
But what thou art, besides, thou wert too base
To be his groom: thou wert dignified enough,
Even to the point of envy, if 'twere made
Comparative for your virtues, to be styl'd
The under-handman of his kingdom; and hated
For being prefer'd so well.

Clo. The south-fog rot him!

Imo. He never can meet more mischance, than come
To be but nam'd of thee. His meanest garment,
That ever hath but clipp'd his body, is dearer,
In my respect, than all the hairs above thee,
Were they all made such men.— How now, Pisanio?

Enter Pisanio.

Clo. His garment? Now, the devil—

Imo. To Dorothy my woman hie thee presently:—

Clo. His garment?

Imo. I am sprightled 5 with a fool:
Frighted, and anger'd worse:— Go, bid my woman
Search for a jewel, that too casually
Hath left mine arm; it was thy master's: 'shrew me,
If I would lose it for a revenue
Of any king's in Europe. I do think,
I saw't this morning: confident I am
Last night 'twas on mine arm; I kiss'd it:
I hope, it be not gone, to tell my lord
That I kiss aught but he.

Pis. 'Twill not be lost.

Imo. I hope so; go, and search. [Exit Pis.

Clo. You have abus'd me:—

His meanest garment?

Imo. Ay; I said so, sir.

If you will make't an action, call witnesses to't.

Clo. I will inform your father.

Imo. Your mother too:
She's my good lady; and will conceive, I hope,
But the worst of me. So I leave you, sir,
To the worst of discontent. [Exit.

Clo. I'll be reveng'd:—

His meanest garment?— Well. [Exit.

Enter Posthumus and Philario.

Post. Fear it not, sir: I would, I were so sure
To win the king, as I am bold, her honour
Will remain hers.

Phil. What means do you make to him?

Post. Not any; but abide the change of time;
Quake in the present winter's state, and wish
That warmer days would come: In these fear'd hopes,
I barely gratify your love; they failing,
I must die much your debtor.

Phil. Your very goodness, and your company
O'erpays all I can do. By this, your king
Hath heard of great Augustus: Caius Lucius
Will do his commission thoroughly. And, I think,
He'll grant the tribute, send the arracades,
Or look upon our Romans, whose remembrance
Is yet fresh in their grief.

Post. I do believe,
(Statist 6 though I am none, nor like to be,) That this will prove a war; and you shall hear
The legions, now in Gallia, sooner landed
In our not-fearing Britain, than have tidings
Of any penny tribute paid. Our countrymen
Are men more order'd, than when Julius Caesar
Smil'd at their lack of skill, but found their courage
Worthy his frowning at: Their discipline
(Now mingled with their courages) will make known
To their approvers?; they are people, such
That mend upon the world.

Enter Iachimo.

Phil. See! Iachimo?

Post. The swiftest harts have posted you by land,
And winds of all the corners kiss'd your sails,
To make your vessel nimble.

Phil. Welcome, sir.

Post. Haunted. 6 Statesmen. 7 To those who try them.
Post. I hope, the briefness of your answer made
The speediness of your return.
Iach. Your lady
Is one the fairest that I have look'd upon.
Post. And therewithal, the best; or let her beauty
Look through a casement to allure false hearts,
And be false with them.
Iach. Here are letters for you.
Post. Their tenour good, I trust.
Iach. 'Tis very like.
Pho. Was Caius Lucius in the Britain court,
When you were there?
Iach. He was expected then,
But not approach'd.
Post. All is well yet.—
Sparkles this stone as it was wont? or is't not Too dull for your good wearing?
Iach. If I had lost it, I should have lost the worth of it in gold.
I'll make a journey twice as far, to enjoy
What was in Britain mine. The ring is won.
Post. The stone's too hard to come by.
Iach. Not a whit,
Your lady being so easy.
Post. Make not, sir, Your loss your sport; I hope, you know that we Must not continue friends.
Iach. Good sir, we must,
If you keep covenant: Had I not brought
The knowledge of your mistress home, I grant
We were to question further: but I now
Proclaim myself the winner of her honour,
Together with your ring; and not the wronger
Of her, or you, having proceeded but
By both your wills.
Post. If you can make't apparent,
The ring is yours: If not, the foul opinion
You had of her pure honour, gains, or loses,
Your sword, or mine; or masterless leaves both
To who shall find them.
Iach. Sir, my circumstances,
Being so near the truth, as I will make them,
Must first induce you to believe: whose strength
I will confirm with oath; which, I doubt not,
You'll give me leave to spare, when you shall find
You need it not.
Post. Proceed.
Iach. First, her bed-chamber,
(Where, I confess, I slept not;) It was hang'd
With tapestry of silk and silver: the story
Proud Cleopatra, when she met her Roman,
And Cydnus swell'd above the banks, or for
The press of boats, or pride: A piece of work
So bravely done, so rich, that it did strive
In workmanship, and value; which, I wonder'd
Could be so rarely and exactly wrought,
Since the true life out was—
Post. This is true; And this you might have heard of here, by me,
Or by some other.
Iach. More particulars
Must justify my knowledge.
Post. So they must,
Or do your honour injury.
Iach. The chimney
Is south the chamber; and the chimney-piece,
Chaste Dian, bathing: never saw I figures
So likely to report themselves: the cutter
Was as another nature, dumb; outwent her,
Motion and breath left out.
Act III. Scene I.

Another stain, as big as hell can hold,
Were there no more but it.

Iach. Will you hear more?
Post. Spare your arithmetic.
Iach. I'll be sworn, —
Post. No swearing.
If you will swear you have not done't, you lie;
And I will kill thee, if thou dost deny
Thou hast made me cuckold.

Iach. I will deny nothing.
Post. O, that I had her here, to tear her limb-meal!
I will go there, and do't; I' the court; before
Her father: — I'll do something —— [Exit.]

Phi. Quite besides
The government of patience! — You have won:
Let's follow him, and pervert the present wrath
He hath against himself.

Iach. With all my heart. [Exeunt.

SCENE V. — Another Room in the same.

Enter Posthumus.

Post. Is there no way for men to be, but women
Must be half-workers? We are bastards all.

I am a counterfeit. Yet my mother seem'd
The Dian of that time: so doth my wife
The nonpareil of this. — O vengeance, vengeance!
I thought her chaste as unsu'mn'd snow. Could I find out
The woman's part in me! For there's no motion
That tends to vice in man, but I affirm
It is the woman's part: Be it lying, note it,
The woman's: flattering, her's; deceiving, her's;
Ambitions, covetings, change of prides, disdain,
Nice longing, slanders, mutability,
All faults that may be nam'd, nay that hell knows,
Why, her's, in part, or all; but, rather, all:
For ev'n to vice
They are not constant, but are changing still
One vice, but of a minute old, for one
Not half so old as that: I'll write against them,
Detest them, curse them: — Yet 'tis greater skill
In a true hate, to pray they have their will:
The very devils cannot plague them better. [Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I. — Britain. A Room of State in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Cymbeline, Queen, Cloten, and Lords, at one Door; and at another, Caius Lucius, and Attendants.

Cym. Now say, what would Augustus Caesar with us?

Luc. When Julius Caesar, (whose remembrance yet
Lives in men's eyes; and will to ears, and tongues,
Be theme, and hearing ever,) was in this Britain,
And conquer'd it, Cassibelan, thine uncle,
(Famous in Caesar's praises, no whit less Than in his feats deserving it,) for him,
And his succession, granted Rome a tribute,
Yearly three thousand pounds; which by thee lately
Is left untender'd.

Queen. And, to kill the marvel,
Shall be ever so.

Clo. There be many Cassars,
Ere such another Julius. Britain is
A world by itself; and we will nothing pay,
For wearing our own noses.

Queen. That opportunity,
Which then they had to take from us, to resume
We have again. — Remember, sir, my liege,
The kings your ancestors; together with
The natural bravery of your isle; which stands
As Neptune's park, ribbed and paled in
With rocks unscaleable, and roaring waters;
With sands, that will not bear your enemies' boats,
But suck them up to the top-mast. A kind of conquest
Cassar made here; but made not here his brag
Of came, and saw, and overcame: with shame
(The first that ever touch'd him,) he was carried
From off our coast, twice beaten; and his shipping
(Poor ignorant bawbles!) on our terrible seas,
Like egg-shells mov'd upon their surges, crack'd
As easily 'gainst our rocks: for joy whereof,

The fam'd Cassibelan, who was once at point
(0, giglot fortune!) to master Caesar's sword,
Made Luc's town with rejoicing fires bright,
And Britons strut with courage.

Clo. Come, there's no more tribute to be paid;
Our kingdom is stronger than it was at that time;
and, as I said, there is no more such Cassars; other of them may have crooked noses; but to owe* such straight arms, none.

Cym. Son, let your mother end.

Clo. We have yet many among us can gripe as hard as Cassibelan: I do not say, I am one; but I have a hand. — Why tribute? why should we pay tribute? If Caesar can hide the sun from us with a blanket, or put the moon in his pocket, we will pay him tribute for light; else, sir, no more tribute, pray you now.

Cym. You must know,
Till the injurious Romans did extort
This tribute from us, we were free: Caesar's ambition,
(Which swell'd so much, that it did almost stretch
The sides o' the world,) against all colour, here
Did put the yoke upon us; which to shake off,
Becomes a warlike people, whom we reckon
Ourselves to be. We do say then to Caesar,
Our ancestor was that Mulmutius, which Ordain'd our laws; (whose use the sword of Caesar Hath too much mangled; whose repair, and franchise,
Shall, by the power we hold, be our good deed,
Though Rome be therefore angry;) Mulmutius
Who was the first of Britain, which did put His brows within a golden crown, and call'd
Himself a king.

Luc. I am sorry, Cymbeline,
That I am to pronounce Augustus Caesar (Cassar, that hath more kings his servants, than Thyself domestic officers,) thine enemy:
Receive it from me, then: — War, and confusion,
In Caesar's name pronounce I 'gainst thee: look

*Own.

3 B 4
You clasp young Cupid's tables. — Good news, gods! [Reads.]

Justice, and your father's wrath, should he take me in his dominion, could not be so cruel to me, as you, O the dearest of creatures, would not even renew me with your eyes. Take notice that I am in Cambria, at Milford-Haven. What your own love will, out of this, advise you, follow. So, he wishes you all happiness, that remains loyal to his vows, and yours, increasing in love, Leonatus Posthumus.

O, for a horse with wings! — Hear'st thou, Pisanio? He is at Milford-Haven: Read, and tell me

How far 'tis thither. If one of mean affairs may plod it in a week, why may not I

Glide thither in a day? — Then, true Pisanio,

(Who long'st, like me, to see thy lord; who long'st —

O, let me bate, — but not like me: — yet long'st —

But in a fainter kind: — O, not like me;

For mine 's beyond beyond,) say, and speak thick 4, (Love's counsellor should fill the bores of hearing,

To the smothering of the sense,) how far it is

To this same blessed Milford: And, by the way

Tell me how Wales was made so happy, as To inherit such a haven: But, first of all,

How we may steal from hence; and, for the gap

That we shall make in time, from our hence going, And our return to excuse: — but first, how get hence:

Why should excuse be born or e'er begot?

We'll talk of that hereafter. Prythee, speak, How many score of miles may we well ride 'Twixt hour and hour?

Pis.

One score, 'twixt sun and sun, Madam, 's enough for you; and too much too.

Imo. Why, one that rode to his execution, man, Could never go so slow: I have heard of riding wagers,

Where horses have been nimbler than the sands That run i' the clock's behalf; — But this is foolery: Go, bid my woman feign a sickness; say She'll home to her father: and provide me, presentely, A riding suit; no costlier than would fit A franklin's 5 housewife.

Pis. Madam, you're best consider.

Imo. I see before me, man, nor here, nor here, Nor what ensues; but have a fog in them, That I cannot look through. Away, I prythee; Do as I bid thee: There's no more to say; Accessible is none but Milford way. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. — Wales. A mountainous Country, with a Cave.

Enter Belarius, Guid'erius, and Arviragus.

Bel. A goodly day not to keep house, with such Whose roof's as low as ours! Stoop, boys: This gate Instructs you how to adore the heavens: and bows you

To morning's holy office: The gates of monarchs Are rich'd so high, that giants may jet through, And keep their impious turbans on, without Good morrow to the sun. — Hail, thou fair heaven! We house I 't the rock, yet use thee not so hardly As prouder lovers do.

Gud. Hail, heaven!

Arm. Hail, heaven!

3 Crowd one word on another, as fast as possible.
4 A freeholder.
5 Strut, walk proudly.
Bel. Now, forour mountain sport: Up to yon hill,
Your legs are young; I'll tread these flats. Consider,
When you above perceive me like a crow,
That it is place which lessons, and sets off;
And you may then revolve what tales I have told
you.
Of courts, of princes, of the tricks in war:
This service is not service, so being done,
But being so allowed: To apprehend thus,
Draws us a profit from all things we see:
And often, to our comfort, shall we find
The sharded beetle in a safer hold
Than is the full-wing'd eagle. O, this life
Is nobler, than attending for a check;
Richer, than doing nothing for a babe;
Prouder, than rustling in unpaid-for silk:
Such gain the cap of him, that makes them fine,
Yet keeps his book uncross'd: no life to ours. 6
Gui. Out of your proof you speak: we, poor un-fold'd,
Have never winn'd from view o' the nest; nor know
not
What air's from home. Haply, this life is best,
If quiet life be best; sweeter to you,
That have a sharper known; well corresponding
With your stiff age: but, unto us, it is
A cell of ignorance; travelling a-bed;
A prison for a debtor, that not dares
To strike a limit. 9

Arb. What should we speak of,
When we are old as you; when we shall hear
The rain and wind beat dark December, how
In this our pinching cave, shall we discourse
The freezing hours away? we have seen nothing:
We are beastly; subtle as the fox, for prey;
Like warlike as the wolf, for what we eat:
Our valour is, to chase what flies; our cage
We make a quire, as doth the prison bird,
And sing our bondage freely.

Bel. How you speak!
Did you but know the city's usuries,
And felt them knowingly: the art o' the court,
As hard to leave, as keep; whose top to climb
Is certain falling, or so slippery, that,
The fear's as bad as falling; the toil of the war,
A pain that only seems to seek out danger
I' the name of fame and honour; which dies i' the search;
And hath as oft a slanderous epitaph,
As record of fair act; nay, many times,
Doth ill deserve by doing well; what's worse,
Must court'sey at the censure: — O, boys, this story
The world may read in me: My body's mark'd
With Roman swords: and my report was once
First with the best of note: Cymbeline lov'd me;
And when a soldier was the theme, my name
Was not far off: There I was a tree,
Whose boughs did bend with fruit: but in one night,
A storm, or robbery, call it what you will,
Shook down my mellow hangings, nay, my leaves,
And left me bare to weather.

Gui. Uncertain favour!
Bel. My fault being nothing, (as I have told you off,) But that two villains, whose false oaths prevail'd
Before my perfect honour, swore to Cymbeline,
I was confederate with the Romans: so
Follow'd my banishment; and, this twenty years,
This rock, and these demesnes, have been my world;
Where I have liv'd at honest freedom; paid
More pitiably, to heaven, than in all
The fore-end of my time. — But, up to the mountains;
This is not hunters' language: — He that strikes
The venison first, shall be the lord o' the feast;
To him the other two shall minister;
And we will fear no poison, which attends
In place of greater state. I'll meet you in the valleys. [Exeunt Gui. and Avy.
How hard it is to hide the sparks of nature!
These boys know little, they are sons to the king;
Nor Cymbeline dreams that they are alive.
They think, they are mine: and, though train'd up thus meanly
I' the cave, wherein they bow, their thoughts do bit
The roofs of palaces; and nature prompts them,
In simple and low things to prince it, much
Beyond the trick of others. This Polydore,
— The heir of Cymbeline and Britain, whom
The king his father call'd Guiderius, — Jove!
When on my three-foot stool I sit, and tell
The warlike feats I have done, his spirits fly out
Into my story: say, — Thus mine enemy fell;
And thus I set my foot on his neck; even then
The princely blood flows in his cheek, he sweats,
Strains his young nerves, and puts himself in posture
That acts my words. The younger brother, Cadwal, (Once, Arviragus,) in as like a figure,
Strike's life into my speech, and shows much more
His own conceiving, Hark! the game is rous'd! —
O Cymbeline! heaven, and my conscience, knows,
Thou didst unjustly banish me: whereon,
At three, and two years old, I stole these babes;
Thinking to bar thee of succession, as Thou reft'st me of my lands. Eurphile, Thou wast their nurse; they took thee for their mother,
And every day do honour to her grave:
Myself, Belarius, that am Morgan call'd,
They take for natural father. The game is up. [Exit.

SCENE IV. — Near Milford-Haven.

Enter Pisanno and Imogen.

Imo. Thou told'st me, when we came from horse,
the place
Was near at hand: — Ne'er long'd my mother so
To see me first, as I have now: — Pisano! Man! Where is Posthumus? What is in thy mind, That makes thee stare thus? Wherefore breaks that sigh
From the inward of thee? One, but painted thus,
Would be interpreted a thing perplex'd
Beyond self-explication: Put thyself
Into a habit of less fear, ere wildness
Vanquish my staider senses. What's the matter? Why tender'st thou that paper to me, with A look untender? If it be summer news,
Smile to't before: if winterly, thou need'st
But keep that countenance still. — My husband's hand,
Detested Italy hath out-craftied him,
And he's at some hard point. — Speak, man; thy tongue
May take off some extremity, which to read
Would be even mortal to me.

1 For behaviour.
Pis. Please you, read;
And you shall find me, wretched man, a thing
The most disdain'd of fortune.
Imo. [Reads.] Thy mistress, Pisario, hath play'd the strumpet in my bed: the testimonies whereby bleeding in me. I speak not out of weak surmises, but from proof as strong as my grief, and as certain as I expect my revenge. That part, thou, Pisario, must act for me, if thy faith be not tainted with the break of hers. Let thine own hands take away her life: I shall give thee opportunities at Milford-Haven: she hath my letter for the purpose: Where, if thou fear to strike, and to make me certain it is done, thou art the pandar to her dishonour, and equally to me disloyal.

Pis. What shall I need to draw my sword? the paper
Hath cut her throat already, — No, 'tis slander;
Whose edge is sharper than the sword; whose tongue
Out-venoms all the worms of Nile; whose breath
Rides on the posting winds, and doth belie
All corners of the world: kings, queens, and states,
Maids, matrons, nay, the secrets of the grave
This viperous slander enters. — What cheer, madam?

Imo. False to his bed! What is it to be false?
To lie in watch there, and to think on him?
To weep 'twixt clock and clock? if sleep charge nature,
To break it with a fearful dream of him,
And cry myself awake? that's false to his bed?
Is it?

Pis. Alas, good lady!

Imo. I false? Thy conscience witness: — Iachimo,
Thou didst accuse him of incontinency
Thou then look'dst like a villain; now, methinks,
Thy favour's good enough. — Some jay of Italy,
Whose mother was her painting; hath betrayed him:
I'oor I am stale, a garment out of fashion;
And, for I am richer than to hang by the walls,
I must be rip'd: — To pieces with me! — O
Men's vows are women's traitors! All good seeming,
By thy revolt, O husband, shall be thought
Put on for villainy; not born, where't grows;
But worn, a bait for ladies.

Pis. Good madam, hear me.

Imo. True honest men being heard, like false

Eneas,
Were, in his time, thought false: and Simon's weeping
Did scandal many a holy tear; took pity
From most true wretchedness: So, thou, Post-hamus,
Wilt lay the leaves on all proper men;
Goodly, and gallant, shall be false and perjurd
From thy great fail. — Come, fellow, be thou honest:
Do thou thy master's bidding: when thou see'st him,
A little witness my obedience: Look!
I draw the sword myself: take it, and hit
The innocent mansion of my love, my heart:
Fear not; 'tis empty of all things, but grief:
Thy master is not there; who was, indeed,
The riches of it: Do his bidding: strike.
Thou may'st be valiant in a better cause;
But now thou seem'st a coward.

Pis. Hence, vile instrument!

Imo. Thou shalt not damn my hand.

Pis. Why, I must die;
And if do not by thy hand, thou art

2 Likeness.

No servant of thy master's: Against self-slaughter
There is a prohibition so divine,
That cowards 3 I must weak hand. Come, here's my

3 Cowards

Imo. Nothing's afore't: — Soft, soft; we'll no defence;
Obedient as the scabbard. — What is here?
The scriptures 4 of the loyal Leonatus,
All turn'd to heresy? Away, away,
Corrupters of my faith! you shall no more
Be stomachers to my heart! Thus may poor fools Believe false teachers: Though those that are betray'd
Do feel the treason sharply, yet the traitor
Stands in worse case of woe.
And thou, Posthæmus, thou that didst set up
My disobedience 'gainst the king my father,
And make me put into contempt the suits
Of princely fellows, shalt thereafter find
It is no act of common passage, but
A strain of raresness: and I grieve myself,
To think, when thou shalt be disged'ed by her
That now thou 'tir'st 5 on, how thy memory
Will then be pang'd by me. — Py'thee, despatch:
The lamb entracts the butcher: Where's thy knife?
Thou art too slow to do thy master's bidding,
When I desire it too.

Pis. O gracious lady,
Since I receiv'd command to do this business,
I have not slept one wink.

Imo. Do't, and to bed then.

Pis. I'll wake mine eye-balls blind first.

Imo. Wherefore then
Did'st undertake it? Why hast thou abus'd
So many miles with a pretence? this place?
Mine action, and thine own? our horses' labour?
The time inviting thee? the perturb'd court?
For my being absent: Whereunto I never Purpose return? Why hast thou gone so far,
To be unbent, when thou hast ta'en thy stand,
The elected deer before thee?

Pis. But to win time
To lose so bad employment: in the which
I have considered of a course; Good lady,
Hear me with patience.

Imo. Talk thy tongue weary; speak:
I have heard, I am a trumpeter; and mine ear,
Theirein false struck, can take no greater wound,
Nor tent to bottom that. But speak.

Pis. Then, madam, I thought you would not back again.

Imo. Bringing me here to kill me.

Pis. Not so, neither:

Imo. No, on my life,
I'll give but notice you are dead, and send him
Some bloody sign of it; for 'tis commanded
I should do so: You shall be mise'd at court,
And that will well confirm it.

Imo. Why, good fellow,
What shall I do the while? Where hide? How live?
Or in my life what comfort, when I am
Dead to my husband?

Pis. If you'll back to the court. —

2 The writings. 3 Feedest or preyst on.
SCENE IV.

CYMBELINE.

Imo. No court, no father; nor no more ado
With that harsh, noble, simple, nothing:
That Cloten, whose love-suit hath been to me
As fearful as a siege.

Pis. If not at court,
Then not in Britain must you bide.

Imo. Where, then? Hath Britain all the sun that shines? Day, night, Are they not but in Britain? I 'tis the world's volume
Our Britain seems as of it, but not in it;
In a great pool, a swan's nest; 'Pray thee, think There's livers out of Britain.

Pis. I am most glad
You think of other place. The ambassador, Lucius the Roman, comes to Milford-Haven
To-morrow: Now, if you could wear a mind
Dark as your fortune is; and but disguise
That, which, to appear itself, must not yet be,
But by self-danger; you should tread a course Pretty, and full of view: yea, happily, near
The residence of Posthumus: so nigh, at least, That though his actions were not visible, yet
Report should render him hourly to your ear,
As truly as he moves.

Imo. O, for such means!
Though peril to my modesty, not death on't,
I would adventure.

Pis. Well then, here's the point
You must forget to be a woman; change Command into obedience; fear, and niceness,
(The handmaids of all women, or, more truly, Woman its pretty self,) to a waggish courage;
Ready in gibes, quick-answered, saucy, and As quarrellous as the weasel: nay, you must Forget that rarest treasure of your cheek, Exposing it (but, O, the harder heart!
Alack no remedy!) to the greedy touch Of common-kissing 'Titan'; and forget Your troublesome and dainty trims, wherein You make great Juno angry.

Imo. Nay, be brief:
I see into thy end, and am almost A man already.

Pis. First, make yourself but like one.
Fore-thinking this, I have already fit,
('Tis in my cloak-bag,) doublet, hat, hose, all
That answer to them: Would you, in their serving,
And with what imitation you can borrow From youth of such a season, 'fore noble Lucius Present yourself, desire his service, tell him Wherein you are happy, (which you'll make him know,
If that his head have ear in musick,) doubtless,
With joy he will embrace you, for he's honourable, And, doubling that, most holy. Your means abroad You have me?, rich; and I will never fail Beginning, nor supplement.

Imo. Thou art all the comfort
The gods will diet me with. 'Pray thee, away:
There's more to be considered; but we'll even All that good time will give us: This attempt I'm soldier to, and will abide it with A prince's courage. Away, I 'prythee.

Pis. Well, madam, we must take a short farewell;
Least, being miss'd, I be suspected of Your carriage from the court. My noble mistress, Here is a box; I had it from the queen;
What's in't is precious; if you are sick at sea,

Or stomach-quality'd at land, a dram of this Will drive away distemper. — To some shade,
And fit you to your manhood: — May the gods Direct you to the best!

Imo. Amen: I thank thee. [Exit.

SCENE V. — A Room in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Cymbeline, Queen, Cloten, Lucius, and Lords.

Cym. Thus far; and so farewell.

Luc. Thanks, royal sir.

My emperor hath wrote; I must from hence;
And am right sorry, that I must report ye
My master's enemy.

Cym. Our subjects, sir,
Will not endure his yoke; and for ourself To show less sovereignty than they, must needs
Appear unkingly.

Luc. So, sir, I desire of you
A conduct over land, to Milford-Haven. —
Madam, all joy befall your grace, and you!

Cym. My lords, you are appointed for that office:
The due of honour in no point omit: —
So, farewell, noble Lucius

Luc. Your hand, my lord.

Cl. Receive it friendly: but from this time forth I wear it as your enemy.

Luc. Sir, the event
Is yet to name the winner; Fare you well.

Cym. Leave not the worthy Lucius, good my lords,
Till he have cross'd the Severn. — Happiness!
[Exit Lucius and Lords.

Queen. He goes hence frowning: but it honours us,
That we have given him cause.

Cl. 'Tis all the better;
Your valiant Britons have their wishes in it.

Cym. Lucius hath wrote already to the emperor
How it goes here. It fits us, therefore, ripely, Our chariots and our horsemen be in readiness: The powers that he already hath in Gallia Will soon be drawn to head, from whence he moves His war for Britain.

Queen. 'Tis not sleepy business;
But must be look'd to speedily, and strongly.

Cym. Our expectation that it would be thus,
Hath made us forward. But, my gentle queen, Where is our daughter? She hath not appear'd
Before the Roman, nor to us hath tender'd
The duty of the day: She looks us like
A thing more made of malice, than of duty:
We have noted it. — Call her here us; for We have been too slight in sufferance.
[Exit an Attendant.

Queen. Royal sir,
Since the exile of Posthumus, most retir'd
Hath her life been; the cure whereof, my lord,
'Tis time must do. 'Beseech your majesty, Forbear sharp speeches to her: she's a lady So tender of rebukes, that words are strokes, And strokes death to her.

Re-enter an Attendant.

Cym. Where is she, sir? How
Can her contempt be answer'd?

Att. Please you, sir,
Her chambers are all lock'd; and there's no answer
That will be given to the loud'st of noise we make.
Queen. My lord, when last I went to visit her, She pray'd me to excuse her keeping close; Whereo constrain'd by her infirmity, She should that duty leave unpaid to you, Which daily she was bound to proffer: this She wish'd me to make known; but our great court Made me to blame in memory.
Cym. Her doors lock'd?
Not seen of late? Grant, heavens, that, which I fear, Prove false!
Queen. Son, I say, follow the king.
Clo. That man of hers, Pisanio, her old servant, I have not seen these two days.
Queen. Look after. — [Exit Cloten.
Pisanio, thou that stand'st so for Posthumus! —
He hath a drug of mine: I pray, his absence Proceed by swallowing that; for he believes It is a thing most precious. But for her, Where is she gone? Haply, despair hath seiz'd her; Or, wing'd with favour of her love, she's flown To her desir'd Posthumus: Gone she is To death, or to dishonour; and my end Can make good use of either: She being down, I have the placing of the British crown.

Re-enter Cloten.
How now, my son?
Clo. 'Tis certain she is fled:
Go in, and cheer the king; he rages; none Dare come about him.
Queen. All the better; May this night forestall him of the coming day!
[Exit Queen.
Clo. I love, and hate her: for she's fair and royal; And that she hath all courtly parts more exquisitely Than lady, ladies, woman #:; from every one The best she hath, and she, of all compounded, Out sells them all: I love her therefore; But, Disdaining me, and throwing favours on The low Posthumus, slanders her judgment, That what's else rare, is chok'd; and, in that point, I will conclude to hate her, nay, indeed, To be reveng'd upon her! For, when fools

Enter Pisanio.
Shall—Who is here? What! are you parking, sirrah? Come hither: Ay, you precious pandar! Villain, Where is thy lady! In a word; or else Thou art straight way with the fiends.
Pis. O, good my lord!
Clo. Where is thy lady? or, by Jupiter
I will not ask again. Close villain, I'll have this secret from thy heart, or rip Thy heart to find it. Is she with Posthumus? From whose so many weights of baseness cannot A draught of worth be drawn.
Pis. Alas, my lord, How can she be with him? When was she missed? He is in Rome.
Clo. Where is she, sir? Come nearer? No further halting: satisfy me home, What is become of her?
Pis. O, my all-worthy lord!
Clo. All-worthy villain!
Discover where thy mistress is, at once, At the next word,— No more of worthy lord,— Speak, or thy silence on the instant is Thy condemnation and thy death.

Then, sir,
This paper is the history of my knowledge
Touching her flight. [Presenting a Letter.
Clo. Let's see: — I will pursue her
Even to Augustus' throne.
Pis. Or this, or perish. She's far enough; and what he learns by this, May prove his travel, not her danger.
Clo.
Pis. 'I'll write to my lord she's dead. O Imogen, Safe may'st thou wander, safe return again! [Aside.
Clo. Sirrah, is this letter true?
Pis. Sir, as I think.
Clo. It is Posthumus' hand; I know't. — Sirrah, if thou wouldst not be a villain, but do me true service; undergo those employments, wherein I should have cause to use thee, with a serious industry,— that is, what villainy so'er I bid thee do, to perform it, directly and truly,— I would think thee an honest man: thou should'st neither want my means for thy relief, nor my voice for thy preferment.
Pis. Well, my good lord.
Clo. Wilt thou serve me? For since patienty and constantly thou hast stuck to the bare fortune of that beggar Posthumus, thou canst not in the course of gratitude but be a diligent follower of mine. Wilt thou serve me?
Pis. Sir, I will.
Clo. Give me thy hand, here's my purse. Hast any of thy late master's garments in thy possession?
Pis. I have, my lord, at my lodgings, the same suit he wore when he took leave of my lady and mistress.
Clo. The first service thou dost me, fetch that suit hither: let it be thy first service: go.
Pis. I shall, my lord. [Exit.
Clo. Meet thee at Milford-Haven: — I forgot to ask him one thing: I'll remember't anon: — Even there, thou villain, Posthumus, will I kill thee. — I would these garments were come. She said upon a time, that she held the very garment of Posthumus in more respect than my noble and natural person, together with the adornment of my qualities. With that suit upon my back, will I ravish her: First kill him, and in her eyes; there shall she see my valour, which will then be a torment to her contempt. She hath despised me rejoicingly, and I'll be merry in my revenge.

Re-enter Pisanio, with the Clothes.
Be those the garments?
Pis. Ay, my noble lord.
Clo. How long is't since she went to Milford-Haven?
Pis. She can scarce be there yet.
Clo. Bring this apparel to my chamber; that is the second thing that I have commanded thee: the third is, that thou shalt be a voluntary mute to my design. Be but duteous, and true preferment shall tender itself to thee. — My revenge is now at Milford; 'Would I had wings to follow it! — Come, and be true. [Exit.
Pis. Thou bids't me to my loss: for true to thee, Were to prove false, which I will never be, To him that is most true — To Milford go, And find not her whom thou pursu'st. Flow, flow, You heavenly blessings, on her! This fool's speed Be cross'd with slowness; labour be his meed! [Exit.
SCENE VI. — Before the Cave of Belarius.

Enter Imogen, in Boy's Clothes.

Imo. I see a man's life is a tedious one; I have tired myself; and for two nights together Have made the ground my bed. I should be sick, But that my resolution helps me. — Milford, When from the mountain-top Pisario show'd thee, Thou wast within a ken: O Jove! I think, Foundations fly the wretched: such, I mean, Where they should be reliev'd. Two beggars told me, I could not miss my way: Will such folks lie, That have afflictions on them? knowing 'tis A punishment, or trial? Yes; no wonder, When rich ones scarce tell true: To lapse in fullness Is sorer, than to lie for need; and falsehood Is worse in kings than beggars. — My dear lord! Thou art one of the false ones: Now I think on thee, My hunger's gone; but even before, I was At point to sink for food. — But what is this? Here is a path to it: 'Tis some savage hold: I were best not call: I dare not call: yet famine, Ere clean it o'erthrew nature, makes it valiant. Plenty, and peace, breeds coward; hardness ever Of hardiness is mother. — Ho! who's here? If any thing that's civil, speak; if savage, Take, or lend. — Ho! — No answer? then I'll enter, Best draw my sword: and if mine enemy But fear the sword like me, he'll scarcely look on't. Such a foe, good heavens! [She goes into the Cave.]

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arrivagus.

Bel. You, Polydore, have prov'd best woodman, and Are master of the feast: Cadwal, and I, Will play the cook and servant; 'tis our match: The sweat of industry would dry, and die, But for the end it works to. Come; our stomachs Will make what's homely, savory: Weariness Can snore upon the flint, when restive sloth Finds the down pillow hard — Now, peace be here, Poor house, that keep'st thyself!

Gui. I am thoroughly weary.

Arr. I am weak with toil, yet strong in appetite.

Gui. There is cold meat 'tis the cave; we'll browse on that, Whilst what we have kill'd be cook'd.

Bel. Stay; come not in: [Looking in.

But that it eats our victuals, I should think
Here were a fairy.

Gui. What's the matter, sir?

Bel. By Jupiter, an angel! or, if not,
An earthly paragon! — Behold divineness
No elder than a boy!

Enter Imogen.

Imo. Good masters, harm me not: Before I enter'd here, I call'd; and thought To have begg'd, or bought, what I have took: Good truth, I have stolen nought; nor would not, though I had found
Gold strew'd o'the floor. Here's money for my meat: I would have left it on the board, so soon As I had made my meal; and parted
With prayers for the provider.

Gui. Money, youth?

Arr. All gold and silver rather turn to dirt!

As 'tis no better reckon'd, but of those
Who worship dirty gods.

Imo. I see you are angry:

Bel. Whither bound?

Imo. To Milford-Haven, sir.

Arr. What is your name?

Imo. Fidele, sir: I have a kinsman, who Is bound for Italy; he embark'd at Milford: To whom being going, almost spent with hunger, I am fallen in this offence.

Gui. Pr'ythee, fair youth, Think us no churls; nor measure our good minds By this rude place we live in. Well encounter'd! 'Tis almost night: you shall have better cheer Ere ye depart: and thanks, to stay and eat it. — Boys, bid him welcome.

Gui. Were you a woman, youth, I should woo hard, but be your groom. — In honesty, I bid for you, as I'd buy.

Arr. I'll make't my comfort, He is a man; I'll love him as my brother: — And such a welcome as I'd give to him, After long absence, such is yours: — Most welcome! Be sprightly, for you fall amongst friends.

Imo. 'Mongst friends If brothers? — 'Would it had been so, that they Had been my father's sons! then had my prize Been less; and so more equal ballasting To thee, Posthumus.

Bel. He wrings at some distress.

Gui. 'Would I could free't! - Or I; what'er it be, What pain it cost, what danger! Gods!

Bel. Hark, boys. [Whispering.

Imo. Great men, That had a court no bigger than this cave, That did attend themselves, and had the virtue Which their own conscience seal'd them, (laying by That nothing gift of differing multitudes,) Could not out-peer these twain. Pardon me, gods! I'd change my sex to be companion with them, Since Leonatus false.

Bel. It shall be so: Boys, we'll go dress our hunt. — Fair youth, come in: Discourse is heavy, fasting; when we have supp'd, We'll mannerly demand thee of thy story, So far as thou wilt speak it.

Gui. Pray, draw near.

Arr. The night to the owl, and morn to the lark, less welcome.

Imo. Thanks, sir.

Arr. I pray draw near. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII. — Rome.

Enter two Senators and Tribunes.

1 Sen. This is the tenour of the emperor's writ: That since the common men are now in action 'Gainst the Pannonians and Dalmatians: And that the legions now in Gallia are Full weak to undertake our wars against The fallen-off Britons; that we do incite The gentry to this business: He creates Lucius pro-consul: and to you the tribunes,

9 Best hunter.

1 Agreement.
SCENE I. — Wales.  The Forest, near the Cave.

Enter CLOTEM.

Clo. I am near to the place where they should meet, if Pisanio have mapped it truly. How fit his garments serve me! Why should his mistress not fit too? Therein I must play the workman. I dare speak it to myself, (for it is not vain-glory, for a man and his glass to confer, — in his own chamber, I mean,) the lines of my body are as well drawn as his; no less young, more strong, not beneath him in fortunes, beyond him in the advantage of the time, above him in birth, alike conversant in general services, and more remarkable in single oppositions: yet this imperserverant thing loves him in my dispute. What mortality is! Posthumus, thy head, which now is growing upon thy shoulders, shall within this hour be off; thy mistress enforced; thy garments cut to pieces before thy face; and all this done, spurn her home to her father: who may, haply, be a little angry for my so rough usage; but my mother, having power of his testiness, shall turn all into my commendations. My horse is tied up safe: Out sword, and to a sore purpose! Fortune! put them into my hand! This is the very description of their meeting-place; and the fellow dares not deceive me. [Exit.

SCENE II. — Before the Cave.

Enter, from the Cave, Belarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, and Imogen.

Bel. You are not well: [To Imogen.] remain here in the cave;
We'll come to you after hunting.

Imo. Brother, stay here: [To Imogen.

Are we not brothers?

Imo. So man and man should be;
But clay and clay differs in dignity,
Whose dust is both alike. — I am very sick.

Guî. Go you to hunting, I'll abide with him.

Imo. So sick I am not; yet I am not well:
But not so citizen a wanton, as
To seem to die, ere sick: So please you leave me;
Stick to your journal: the breach of custom
Is breach of all. I am ill; but your being by me
Cannot amend me: Society is no comfort
To one not sociable: I'm not very sick,
Since I can reason of it. Pray you, trust me here:
I'll rob none but myself; and let me die,
Stealing so poorly.

Guî. I love thee; I have spoke it:
How much the quantity, the weight as much,
As I do love my father.

Bel. What? how? how?

Arv. If it be sin to say so, sir, I yoke me

Bel. Which I have spoke of, whereunto your levy
Must be supplyant: The words of your commission
Will tie you to the numbers and the time
Of their despatch.

Tri. We will discharge our duty.

[Exeunt.

ACT IV.

In my good brother's fault: I know not why
I love this youth; and I have heard you say,
Love's reason's without reason; the hier at door,
And a demand, who is't shall die, I'd say,
My father, not this youth.

Bel. O noble strain! [Aside.

O worthiness of nature! breed of greatness!
Cowards father cowards, and base things sire base:
Nature hath meal, and bran; contempt, and grace.
I am not their father; yet who should this be,
Doth miracle itself, lor'd before me. —
'Tis the ninth hour o'the morn.

Arv. I wish ye sport.

Imo. You health. — So please you, sir.

Imo. [Aside.] These are kind creatures. Gods, what lies I have heard!

Our courtiers say, all's savage, but at court:
Experience, O, thou disprov'st report!

The imperious 7 seas breed monsters; for the dish,
Poor tributary rivers as sweet fish.

I am sick still; heart-sick: — Pisanio,
I'll now taste of thy drug.

Guî. I could not stir him:
He said, he was gentle, but unfortunate;
Dishonestly affliicted, but yet honest.

Arv. Thus did he answer me: yet said, hercafter
I might know more.

Bel. To the field, to the field: —
We'll leave you for this time: go in, and rest.

Arv. We'll not be long away.

Bel. Pray, be not sick,
For you must be our housewife.

Imo. Well, or ill,
I am bound to you.

Bel. And so shalt be ever.

[Exit Imogen.

This youth, how'er distress'd, appears, he hath had Good ancestors.

Arv. How angel-like he sings!

Guî. But his next cookery! He cuts our roots in characters;
And sauc'd our broths, as Juno had been sick,
And he his dieter.

Arv. Nobly he yokes
A smiling with a sigh: as if the sigh
Was that it was, for not being such a smile;
The smile mocking the sigh, that it would fly
From so divine a temple, to connix
With winds that sailors rail at.

Guî. I do note,
That grief and patience, rooted in him both,
Mingle their spurs together.

Arv. Grow, patience! And let the fedler eldest, grief, untwine
His perishing root, with the increasing vine!

7 Imperial. 8 Well-born.

9 Spurs are the roots of trees.

SCENE II.

CYMBELINE.

Bel. It is great morning. Come; away.—Who's there?

Enter Cloten.

Clo. I cannot find those runagates; that villain
Hath mock'd me: — I am faint.

Bel. Those runagates! Means he not us? I parly know him; 'tis Cloten, the son of the queen. I fear some ambush.
I saw him not these many years, and yet
I know 'tis he: — We are held as outlaws: — Hence.

Gui. He is but one: you and my brother search
What companies are near: pray you, away;
Let me alone with him.

[Exeunt Belarius and Arviragus.

Clo. Soft! What are you
That fly me thus? some villain mountaineers?
I have heard of such. — What slave art thou?

Gui. A thing more slavish did I ne'er, than answering
A slave, without a knock.

Clo. Thou art a robber,
A law-breaker, a villain: Yield thee, thief.

Gui. To who? to thee? What art thou? Have not I
An arm as big as thine? a heart as big?
Thy words, I grant are bigger; for I wear not
My dagger in my mouth. Say, what thou art?
Why should I yield to thee?

Clo. Thou villain base,
Know'st me not by my clothes?

Gui. No, nor thy tailor, rascal;
Who is thy grandfather? he made those clothes,
Which, as it seems, make thee.

Clo. Thou precious varlet,
My tailor made them not.

Gui. Hence then, and thank
The man that gave them thee. Thou art some fool;
I am loath to beat thee.

Clo. Thou injurious thief,
Hear but my name, and tremble.

Gui. What's thy name?

Clo. Cloten, thou villain.

Gui. Cloten, thou double villain, be thy name,
I cannot tremble at it; were't toad, or adder, spider,
'Twould move me sooner.

Clo. To thy further fear,
Nay, to thy mere confusion, thou shalt know
I'm son to the queen.

Gui. I'm sorry for't; not seeming
So worthy as thy birth.

Clo. Art not afeard?

Gui. Those that I reverence, those I fear; the wise:
At fools I laugh, not fear them.

Clo. Die the death:
When I have slain thee with my proper hand,
I'll follow those that even now fled hence,
And on the gates of Lud's town set your heads:
Yield, rustic mountaineer. [Exeunt, fighting.

Enter Belarius and Arviragus.

Bel. No company's abroad.

Arv. None in the world: You did mistake him, sure.

Bel. I cannot tell: Long is it since I saw him,
But time hath nothing blur'd those lines of favour
Which then he wore; the snatches in his voice,
And burst of speaking, were as his: I am absolute,
Twas very Cloten.

Arv. In this place we left them;
I wish my brother made good time with him,
You say he is so fell.

Bel. Being scarce made up,
I mean, to man, he had not apprehension
Of roaring terrors; for the effect of judgment
Is oft the cause of fear: But see, thy brother.

Re-enter Guiderius with Cloten's Head.

Gui. This Cloten was a fool; an empty purse,
There was no money in't: not Hercules
Could have knock'd out his brains, for he had none:
Yet I not doing this, the fool had borne
My head, as I do his.

Bel. What hast thou done?

Gui. I am perfect, what: cut off one Cloten's head,
Son to the queen, after his own report;
Who call'd me traitor, mountaineer; and swore,
With his own single hand he'd take us in;
Displace our heads, where (thank the gods!) they grow.

And set them on Lud's town.

Bel. We are all undone.

Gui. Why, worthy father, what have we to lose,
But, that he swore to take, our lives? The law
Protects not us: Then why should we be tender,
To let an arrogant piece of flesh threat us;
Play judge, and executioner, all himself;
For we do fear the law? What company
Discover you abroad?

Bel. No single soul
Can we set eye on, but, in all safe reason,
He must have some attendants. Though his humour
Was nothing but mutation; ay, and that
From one bad thing to worse; not frenzy, not Absolute madness could so far have rav'd,
To bring him here alone: Although, perhaps,
It may be heard at court, that such as we
Cave here, hunt here, are outlaws, and in time
May make some stronger head: the which he hearing,
(As it is like him,) might break out and swear
He'd fetch us in; yet is't not probable
To come alone, either he so undertaking,
Or they so suffering: then on good ground we fear,
If we do fear this body hath a tail
More perilous than the head.

Arv. Let ordinance
Come as the gods foresay it: howso'ever,
My brother hath done well.

Bel. I had no mind
To hunt this day: the boy Fidele's sickness
Did make my way long forth.

Gui. With his own sword,
Which he did wave against my throat, I have ta'en
His head from him: I'll throw't into the creek
Behind our rock; and let it to the sea,
And tell the fishes, he's the queen's son, Cloten:
That's all I reck. [Exit.

Bel. I fear 'twill be reveng'd:
'Would, Polydore, thou hadst not done't! though valour
Becomes thee well enough.

Arv. 'Would I had done't,
So the revenge alone pursued me! — Polydore,
I love thee brotherly; but envy much,
Thou hast robb'd me of this deed: I would, revenges,
That possible strength might meet, would seek us through,
And put us to our answer.

1 Countenance

2 Conquer, subdue.

3 Care.
Bel. Well, 'tis done: —
We'll hunt no more to-day, nor seek for danger
Where there's no profit. I pr'ythee, to our rock;
You and Fidele play the cooks: I'll stay
Till hasty Polydore return, and bring him
To dinner presently.

Arv. Poor sick Fidele!
I'll willingly to him: To gain his colour,
I'd let a parish of such Clotens' blood,
And praise myself for charity. [Exit.

Bel. O thou goddess,
Thou divine Nature, how thyself thou blas'n'st
In these two princely boys! They are as gentle
As zephyrs, blowing below the violet,
Not wagging his sweet head: and yet as rough,
Their royal blood encafl'd, as the rud'st wind,
That by the top doth take the mountain pine,
And make him stoop to the vale. 'Tis wonderful,
That an invisible instinct should frame them
To royalty unlearn'd; honour untaught;
Civility not seen from other; valour,
That wildly grows in them, but yields a crop
As if it had been sow'd! Yet still it's strange
What Cloten's being here to us portends;
Or what his death will bring us.

Re-enter Guiderius.

Gui. Where's my brother?
I have sent Cloten's clot-poll down the stream,
In embassy to his mother; his body's hostage
For his return. [Solemn music.

Bel. My ingenious instrument!
Hark, Polydore, it sounds! But what occasion
Hath Cadwal now to give it motion! Hark!
Gui. Is he at home?

Bel. He went hence even now.
Gui. What does he mean? since death of my dear'st
mother
It did not speak before. All solemn things
Should answer solemn accidents. The matter?
Triumphs for nothing, and lamenting toys,
Is jollity for ares, and grief for boys.
Is Cadwal mad?

Re-enter Arviragus, bearing Imogen as dead, in his arms.

Bel. Look, here he comes,
And brings the dire occasion in his arms,
Of what we blame him for!

Arv. The bird is dead,
That we have made so much on. I had rather
Have skip'd from sixteen years of age to sixty,
Than have seen this.

Gui. O sweetest, fairest lily;
My brother wears not thee one-half so well,
As when thou grew'st thyself.

Bel. O, melancholy!
Who ever yet could sound thy bottom? find
The oze, to show what coast thy sluggish cræ
Might easiest harbour in? — Thou blessed thing!
Jove knows what man thou mightest have made;
but I,
Thou didst, a most rare boy, of melancholy! —
How found you him?

Arv. Stark 6, as you see:
Thus smiling, as some fly had tickled slumber,
Not as death's dart, being laugh'd at: his right cheek
Reposing on a cushion.

4 Trifles. 5 A slow-sailing, unwieldy vessel. 6 Stiff.

Gui. Where?

Arv. 'O the floor;
His arms thus leagu'd: I thought, he slept; and put My clouted brogues 7 from off my feet, whose rude-
ness
Answer'd my steps too loud.

Gui. Why, he but sleeps:
If he be gone, he'll make his grave a bed;
With female fairies will his tomb be haunted,
And worms will not come to thee.

Arv. With fairest flowers,
Whilst summer lasts, and I live here, Fidele,
I'll sweeten thy sad grave: Thou shalt not lack
The flower, that's like thy face, pale primrose; nor
The azur'd hare-bell, like thy veins; nor
The leaf of eglandine, whom not to slander,
Out-sweeten'd not thy breath: the rudduck 8 would,
With charitable bill (O bill, sore-shaming
Those rich-left heirs, that let their fathers lie
Without a monument!) bring thee all this;
Yea, and fur'd moss besides, when flowers are none,
To winter-ground 9 thy corse.

Gui. Pr'ythee, have done
And do not play in wench-like words with that
Which is so serious. Let us bury him,
And not protract with admiration what
Is now due debt. — To the grave.

Arv. Say, where shall'st lay him?
Gui. By good Euriphile, our mother.

Arv. Be't so; And let us, Polydore, though now our voices
Have got the mannish crack, sing him to the ground,
As once our mother; use like note, and words,
Save that Euriphile must be Fidele.

Gui. Cadwal,
I cannot sing: I'll weep, and word it with thee.

Arv. We'll speak it then.

Bel. Great griefs, I see, medicine the less: for Cloten
Is quite forgot. He was a queen's son, boys:
And, though he came our enemy, remember,
He was paid for that: Though mean and mighty rotting
Together, have one dust; yet reverence,
(That angel of the world,) doth make distinction
Of place 'twixt high and low. Our foe was princely
And though you took his life, as being our foe,
Yet bury him as a prince.

Gui. 'Pray you, fetch him hither.

Thersites' body is as good as Ajax,
When neither are alive.

Arv. If you'll go fetch him,
We'll say our song the whilst. — Brother, begin.

Gui. Nay, Cadwal, we must lay his head to the east;
My father hath a reason for't.

Arv. 'Tis true.

Gui. Come on then, and remove him.

Arv. So, — begin.

SONG.

Gui. Fear no more the heat o' the sun,
Nor the furious winter's rage;
Thou worldly task hast done,
Home art gone, and tan' th thy wages:
Golden lads and girls all must,
As chimney-sweepers, come to dust.
7 Shoes plated with iron. 8 The red-breast. 9 Probably a corrupt reading, for, wither round thy corse.
From this most bravest vessel of the world
Struck the main-top! — O, Posthumus! alas,
Where is thy head? where's that? Ah me! where's
that?

Pisanio might have kill'd thee at the heart,
And left this head on. — How should this be? Pi-sanio?

'Tis he, and Cloten: malice and lucre in them
Have laid this woe here. O, 'tis pregnant, pregnant! 6

The drug he gave me, which, he said, was precous
And cordial to me, have I not found it
Murd'rous to the senses? That confirms it home:
This is Pisanio's deed, and Cloten's: O! —
Give colour to my pale cheek with thy blood,
That we the horrid may seem to those
Which chance to find us: O, my lord, my lord!

Enter Lucius, a Captain, and other Officers, and a Soothsayer.

Cap. To them the legions garrison'd in Gallia,
After your will, have cross'd the sea: attending
You here at Milford-Haven, with your ships:
They are here in readiness.

Luc. But what from Rome?

Cap. The senate hath stirr'd up the confiners,
And gentlemen of Italy; most willing spirits
That promise noble service: and they come
Under the conduct of bold Iachimo,
Sienna's brother.

Luc. When expect you them?

Cap. With the next benefit o' the wind.

Luc. This forwardness
Makes our hopes fair. Command, our present numbers
Be muster'd; bid the captains look to't. — Now, sir,
What have you dream'd, of late, of this war's purpose?

Sooth. Last night the very gods show'd me a vision:
(I fast, and pray'd, for their intelligence,) Thus: —
I saw Jove's bird, the Roman eagle, wing'd
From the spongy south to this part of the west,
There vanish'd in the sunbeams: which portends,
(Unless my sins abuse my divination,)
Success to the Roman host.

Luc. Dream often so,
And never false. — Soft, ho! what trunk is here,
Without his top? The ruin speaks, that sometime
It was a worthy building. — How! a page! —
Or dead, or sleeping on him? But dead, rather:
For nature doth abbore to make his bed
With the defunct, or sleep upon the dead. —
Let's see the boy's face.

Cap. He is alive, my lord.

Luc. He'll then instruct us of this body, —
Young one.

Inform us of thy fortunes; for, it seems,
They crave to be demanded: Who is this,
Thou mak'st thy bloody pillow? Or who was he,
That, otherwise than noble nature did,
Hath alter'd that good picture? What's thy interest
In this sad wreck? How came it? Who is it?

What art thou?

Imo. I am nothing: or, if not,
Nothing to be better. This was my master,
A very valiant Briton, and a good,
That here by mountaineers lies slain: — Alas!
There are no more such masters: I may wander
From east to occident, cry out for service,
Try many, all good, serve truly, never Find such another master.

Luc. 'Tis lack, good youth! Thou mov'st no less with thy complaining, than Thy master in bleeding: Say, thy name.

Imo. Fidele. I know it.

Luc. Thou dost approve thyself the very same:
Thy name well fits thy faith; thy faith, thy name.
Wilt take thy chance with me? I will not say,
Thou shalt be so well master'd; but, be sure,
No less belov'd. The Roman emperor's letters,
Sent by a consul to me, should not sooner
Than thine own worth, prefer thee: Go with me.

Imo. I'll follow, sir. But first, an't please the gods,
I'll hide my master from the flies, as deep
As these poor pickaxes can dig: and when
With wild wood-leaves and weeds I have strew'd his grave,
And on it said a century of prayers,
Such as I can, twice 'o'er, I'll weep, and sigh;
And, leaving so his service, follow you,
So please you entertain me.

Luc. Ay, good youth!
And rather father thee, than master thee. —
My friends,
The boy hath taught us manly duties: Let us
Find out the prettiest daisied plot we can,
And make him with our pikes and partizans
A grave: Come, arm him. — Boy, he is prefer'd
By thee to us; and he shall be intern'd,
As soldiers can. Be cheerful; wipe thine eyes:
Some falls are means the happier to arise. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. — A Room in Cymbeline's Palace.

Enter Cymbeline, Lords, and Pisanio.

Cym. Again; and bring me word how 'tis with her.
A fever with the absence of her son;
A madness, of which her life's in danger: —
Heavens,
How deeply you at once do touch me! Imogen,
The great part of my comfort, gone: my queen
Upon a desperate bed; and in a time
When fearful wars point at me; her son gone,
So needful for this present: It strikes me, past
The hope of comfort. — But for thee, fellow,
Who needs must know of her departure, and Dost seem so ignorant, we'll enforce it from thee
By a sharp torture.

Pis. Sir, my life is yours:
I humbly set it at your will: But, for my mistress,
I nothing know where she remains, why gone,
Nor when she purposes return. 'Beseech your highness,
Hold me your loyal servant.

1 Lord. Good my liege,
The day that she was missing, he was here:
I dare be bound he's true, and shall perform
All parts of his subjection loyalty.

For Cloten, —
There wants no diligence in seeking him,
And will, no doubt, be found.

Cym. The time's troublesome:
We'll slip you for a season: but our jealousy

[To Pisanio.

Does yet depend.

1 Lord. So please your majesty,
1 Her fingers.

The Roman legions, all from Gallia drawn,
Are landed on your coast; with a supply
Of Roman gentlemen, by the senate sent.

Cym. Now for the counsel of my son and queen!—
I am amazed with matter. 8

1 Lord. Good my liege,
Your preparation can affront 9 no less
Than what you hear of: come more, for more you're ready:
The want is, but to put those powers in motion,
That long to move.

Cym. I thank you: Let's withdraw:
And meet the time, as it seeks us. We fear not What can from Italy annoy us; but
We grieve at chances here. — Away.

Pis. I heard no letter from my master, since
I wrote him, Imogen was slain: 'Tis strange:
Nor hear I from my mistress, who did promise
To yield me often tidings; Neither know I
What is betid to Cloten; but remain
Perplex'd in all. The heavens still must work:
Wherein I am false, I am honest; not true, to be true.
These present wars shall find I love my country,
Even to the note 1 o'the king, or I'll fall in them.
All other doubts, by time let them be clear'd:
Fortune brings in some boats, that are not steer'd.

[Exit.

SCENE IV. — Before the Cave.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus

Gui. The noise is round about us.

Bel. Let us from it.

Arv. What pleasure, sir, find we in life, to lock it
From action and adventure?

Gui. Nay, what hope
Have we in hiding us? this way, the Romans
Must or for Britons slay us; or receive us
For barbarous and unnatural revolts 2
During their use, and slay us after.

Bel. Sons,
We'll higher to the mountains; there secure us.
To the king's party there's no going: newness
Of Cloten's death (we being not known, not muster'd)
Among the bands) may drive us to a render 3
Where we have liv'd; and so extend from us
That which we've done, whose answer would be death
Drawn on with torture.

Gui. This is, sir, a doubt,
In such a time, nothing becoming you,
Nor satisfying us.

Arv. It is not likely,
That when they hear the Roman horses neigh,
Behold their quarter'd fires, have both their eyes
And ears so cloy'd importantly as now,
That they will waste their time upon our note 4,
To know from whence we are.

Bel. O, I am known
Of many in the army: many years,
Though Cloten then but young, you see, not wore him
From my remembrance. And, besides, the king
Hath not deserv'd my service, nor your loves;
Who find in my exile the want of breeding,
The certainty of this hard life; aye hopeless
To have the courtesy your cradle promis'd,
But to be still hot summer's tanlings, and
The shrinking slaves of winter.

8 Confounded by a variety of business. 9 Encounter.
1 Notice. 2 Revolters. 3 An account. 4 Noticing us.
ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Field between the British and Roman Camps.

Enter Posthumus, with a bloody Handkerchief.

Post. Yea, bloody cloth, I’ll keep thee; for I wish’d Thou shouldst be colour’d thus. You married ones, If each of you would take this course, how many Must murder wives much better than themselves, For wryng but a little—O, Pisanio! Every good servant does not all commands: No bond, but to do just ones.—Gods! if you Should have ta’en vengeance on my faults, I never Had liv’d to put on this: so had you saved The noble Imogen to repent; and struck Me, wretch, more worth your vengeance. But, alack, You snatch some hence for little faults; that’s love, To have them fall no more: you some permit To second ills with ills, each elder worse; And make them drear to do the doer’s thrift. But Imogen is your own: Do your best wills, And make me bless’d to obey!—I am brought hither Among the Italian gentry, and to fight Against my lady’s kingdom: ’Tis enough That, Britain, I have kill’d thy mistress! peace! I’ll give no wound to thee. Therefore, good heavens, Hear patiently my purpose: I’ll disrobe me Of these Italian weeds, and suit myself As does a Briton peasant: so I’ll fight Against the part I come with; so I’ll die For thee, O Imogen, even for whom my life Is, every breath, a death: and thus, unknown, Friended nor hated, to the face of peril Myself I’ll dedicate. Let me make men know More valour in me, than my habits show. Gods put the strength o’ the Leonati in me! To shame the guise o’ the world, I will begin The fashion, less without, and more within! [Exit.

SCENE II. The same.

Enter, at one side, Lucius, Iachimo, and the Roman Army; at the other side, the British Army; Leonatus Posthumus following it, like a poor Soldier. They march over, and go out. Alarums. Then enter again in skirmish, Iachimo and Post-

5 Deviating from the right way.

6 Incite, instigate.

HUMUS; he vanquisheth and disarmeth IACHIMO, and then leaves him.

Iach. The heaviness and guilt within my bosom Takes off my manhood: I have belied a lady, The princess of this country, and the air on’t Revengingly enfeebles me; or could this carl?, A very drudge of nature’s, have subdu’d me, In my profession? Knighthoods and honours, borne As I wear mine, are titles but of scorn. If that thy gentry, Britain, go before This lust, as he exceeds our lords, the odds Is, that we scarce are men, and you are gods. [Exit.

The Battle continues, the Britons fly; Cymbeline is taken: then enter to his rescue, Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel. Stand, stand! We have the advantage of the ground; The lane is guarded: nothing routs us, but The villainy of our fears. Gui. Arv. Stand, stand, and fight! Enter Posthumus, and secedes the Britons. They rescue Cymbeline, and exeunt. Then, enter Lucius, Iachimo, and Imogen.

Luc. Away, boy, from the troops, and save thyself: For friends kill friends, and the disorder’s such As war were hood-wink’d. Iach. ’Tis their fresh supplies. Luc. It is a day turn’d strangely: or betimes Let’s reinforce, or fly. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter Posthumus and a British Lord.

Lord. Cam’st thou from where they made the stand?

Post. I did: Though you, it seems, come from the fliers.

Lord. I did. Post. No blame be to you, sir; for all was lost, But that the heavens fought: The king himself Of his wings destitute, the army broken, And but the backs of Britons seen, all flying Through a strait lane; the enemy full-hearted, Lolling the tongue with slaughtering, having work More plentiful than tools to do’t, struck down Some mortally, some slightly touch’d, some falling

7 Clown.

3 C 2
Merely through fear; that the straight path was damn'd; 8
With dead men, hurt behind, and cowards living
To die with lengthen'd shame.
Lord. Where was this lane?
Post. Close by the battle, ditch'd, and wall'd with turf;
Which gave advantage to an ancient soldier,—
An honest one, I warrant; who deserve'd
So long a breeding, as his white beard came to,
In doing this for his country;—athwart the lane,
He, with two striplings, (lads more like to run
The country base, than to commit such slaughter;
With faces fit for masks, or rather fairer
Than those for preservation cas'd, or shame,)
Made good the passage; cry'd to those that fled,
Our Britain's harts die flying, not our men:
To darkness fleet, souls that fly backwards! Stand;
Or we are Romans, and will give you that
Like beasts, which you shun beastly; and may save,
But to look back in frown: stand, stand. —
These three,
Three thousand confident, in act as many,
(For three performers are the file, when all
The rest do nothing,) with this word, Stand, stand,
Accommodated by the place, more charming,
With their own nobleness, (which could have turn'd
A distaff to a lance,) gilded pale looks,
Part, shame, part, spirit renew'd; that some, turn'd coward.
But by example (O, a sin in war, Foulest in the beginners!) 'gan to look
The way that they did, and to grin like lions
Upon the pikes o' the hunters. Then began
A stop i' the chaser, a retire; anon,
A rout, confusion thick: Forthwith they fly
Chickens, the way which they stoop'd eagles; slaves,
The strides they victors made: and now our cowards
(Like fragments in hard voyages,) became
The life o' the need; having found the back-door open
Of the unguarded hearts, heavens, how they wound!
Some, slain before; some, dying; some, their friends
O'erborne i' the former wave: ten, chas'd by one,
Are now each one, the slaughter-man of twenty:
Those, that would die or ere resist, are grown
The mortal bugs! o' the field.
Lord. This was strange chance:
A narrow lane! an old man, and two boys!
Post. Nay, do not wonder at it: You are made
Rather to wonder at the things you hear,
Than to work any. Will you rhyme upon,
And vent it for a mockery? Here is one:
Two boys, an old man twice a boy, a lane,
Preserv'd the Britons, was the Romans'bane.
Lord. Nay, be not angry, sir.
Post. 'Lack, to what end?
Who dares not stand his foe, I'll be his friend:
For if he'll do, as he is made to do,
I know, he'll quickly fly my friendship too.
You have put me into rhyme.
Lord. Farewell, you are angry.
Post. Still going? — This is a lord! O noble misery!
To be i' the field, and ask, what news of me!
To-day, how many would have given their honours
To have sav'd their carcasses? took heed to do't,
And yet died too? I, in mine own woe charm'd,
Could not find death, where I did hear him groan;
Nor feel him, where he struck: Being an ugly monster,
'Tis strange, he hides him in fresh cups, soft beds,
Sweet words; or hath more ministers than we
That draw his knives i' the war. — Well, I will find
him:
For being now a favourer to the Roman,
No more a Briton, I have resum'd again
The part I came in: Fight I will no more,
But yield me to the veriest hind, that shall Once touch my shoulder. Great the slaughter is Here made by the Roman; great the answer be Britons must take; For me, my ransome's death;
On either side I come to spend my breath;
Which neither here I'll keep, nor bear again,
But end it by some means for Imogen.

Enter two British Captains, and Soldiers.
1 Cap. Great Jupiter be prais'd! Lucius is taken:
'Tis thought the old man and his sons were angels.
2 Cap. There was a fourth man, in a silly habit,
That gave the affront 2 with them.
1 Cap. So 'tis reported:
But none of them can be found. — Stand! who is there?
Post. A Roman; Who had not now been drooping here, if seconds
Had answered him.
2 Cap. Lay hands on him; a dog! A leg of Rome shall not return to tell
What crows have peck'd them here: He brags his service
As if he were of note; bring him to the king.

Enter Cymbeline, attended; Belarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, Pisando, and Roman Captives. The Captains present Posthumus to Cymbeline, who delivers him over to a Gaoler: after which, all go out.

SCENE IV. — A Prison.

Enter Posthumus, and two Gaolers, 1 Gaol. You shall not now be stolen, you have locks upon you;
So, graze, as you find pasture.
2 Gaol. Ay, or a stomach.
[Exit Gaolers.
Post. Most welcome bondage! for thou art a way,
I think, to liberty: Yet am I better
Than one that's sick o' the gout; since he had rather Groan so in perpetuity, than be cur'd
By the sure physician, death; who is the key
To unbar these locks. My conscience I thou art fetter'd
More than my shanks, and wrists: You good gods, give me
The penitent instrument, to pick that bolt,
Then free for ever! Is't enough, I am sorry?
So children temporal fathers do appease;
Gods are more full of mercy. Must I repent?
I cannot do it better than in gyves 5,
Desir'd, more than constrain'd: to satisfy,
If of my freedom 'tis the main part, take,
No stricter render of me than my all.
I know, you are more clement than vile men,
Who of their broken debtors wake a third,
A sixth, a tenth, letting them thrive again
On their abatement; that's not my desire:

[Encounter.

3 Fettera.

[Exit Gaoler.
Solemn Musick. Enter, as an Apparition, Sicilius Leonatus, Father to Posthumus, an old Man, attired like a Warrior; leading in his Hand an ancient Matron, his Wife, and Mother to Posthumus, with Musick before them. Then, after other Musick follow the two young Leonati, Brothers to Posthumus, with Wounds, as they died in the Wars. They circle Posthumus round, as he lies sleeping.

Sici. No more, thou thunder master, show Thy spite on mortal fies: With Mars fall out, with Juno chide, That thy adulteries Rates and revenges. Hath my poor boy done aught but well, Whose face I never saw? I died, whilst in the womb he stay'd Attending Nature's law. Whose father then (as men report, Thou orphans' father art,) Thou shouldst have been, and shielded him From this earth-vexing smart.

Moth. Lucina lent not me her aid, But took me in my throes; That from me was Posthumus ript, Came crying 'mongst his foes, A thing of pity!

Sici. Great nature, like his ancestry, Moulded the stuff so fair, That he deserv'd the praise o' the world, As great Sicilius' heir.

1 Bro. When once he was mature for man, In Britain where was he That could stand up his parallel; Or fruitful object be In eye of Imogen, that best Could deem his dignity?

Moth. With marriage wherefore was he mock'd, To be exil'd and thrown. From Leonati' seat, and cast From her he dearest one, Sweet Imogen?

Sici. Why did you suffer Iachimo, Slight thing of Italy, To taint his nobler heart and brain, With needless jealousy; And to become the geck & scorn 'Twan man and man, they weigh not every stamp; Though light, take pieces for the figure's sake: You rather mine, being yours: And so, great powers, If you will take this audit, take this life, And cancel these cold bonds. O Imogen! I'll speak to thee in silence. [He sleeps.

Sici. Thy crystal window ope; look out; No longer exercise, Upon a valiant race, thy harsh And potent injuries.

Moth. Since, Jupiter, our son is good, Take off his miseries.

Sici. Peep through thy marble mansion; help! Or we poor ghosts will cry To the shining synod of the rest, Against thy deity.

2 Bro. Help, Jupiter; or we appeal, And from thy justice fly.

Jupiter descends in Thunder and Lightning, sitting Upon an Eagle: he throws a Thunder-bolt. The Ghosts fall on their knees.

Jup. No more, you petty spirits of region low, Offend our hearing: hush! — How dare you, ghosts, Accuse the thunderer, whose bolt, you know, Sky-planted, batters all rebelling coasts? Poor shadows of Elysium, hence; and rest Upon your never-withering banks of flowers; Be not with mortal accidents oppress; No care of yours it is, you know 'tis ours. Whom best I love, I cross; to make my gift, The more delayed, delighted. Be content; Your low-laid son our godhead will uplift: His comforts thrive, his trials well are spent. Our jovial star reign'd at his birth, and in Our temple was he married. — Rise, and fade! — He shall be lord of lady Imogen, And happier much by his affliction made. This tablet lay upon his breast; wherein Our pleasure his full fortune doth confine; And so, away: no further with your din Express impatience, lest you stir up mine. — Mount, eagle, to my palace crystalline. [Ascends.

Sici. He came in thunder: his celestial breath Was sulphurous to smell: the holy eagle Stoop'd as to foot us: his ascension is More sweet than our bless'd fields: his royal bird Prunes the immortal wing, and cloys his beak, As when his god is pleas'd.

All. Thanks, Jupiter!

Sici. The marble pavement closes, he is enter'd His radiant roof: — Away! and, to be blest, Let us with care perform his great behest.

[Ghost vanishe.

Post. [Waking.] Sleep, thou hast been a grandsire, and begot A father to me: and thou hast created A mother and two brothers: But (O scorn!) Done! they went hence so soon as they were born. And so I am awake. — Poor wretches that depend On greatness' favour, dream, as I have done; Wake, and find nothing. — But, alas, I swerve: Many dream not to find, neither deserve, And yet are steep'd in favours: so am I, That have this golden chance, and know not why. — What fairies haunt this ground? a book? O, rare one! Be not, as in our fanged world, a garment Nobler than that it covers: let thy effects So follow, to be most unlike our couriers, As good as promise.

[Reads.] When as a lion's whelp should, to himself unknown, without seeking, find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air; and when from a stately

'Tis still a dream; or else such stuff as madmen
Tongue, and brain not: either both, or nothing;
Or senseless speaking, or a speaking such
As sense cannot untie. Be what it is,
The action of my life is like it, which
I'll keep, if but for sympathy.

Re-enter Gaolers.

Gaol. Come, sir, are you ready for death?
Gaol. Hanging is the word, sir; if you be ready for that you are well cooked.
Post. So, if I prove a good repast to the spectators, the dish pays the shot.
Gaol. A heavy reckoning for you, sir: But the comfort is, you shall be called to no more payments, fee no more tavern bills; which are often the sad-ess of parting, as the procuring of mirth: you come in faint for want of meat, depart reeling with too much drink; sorry that you have paid too much, and sorry that you are paid too much; pulse and brain both empty: the brain the heavier for being too light, the pulse too light, being drawn of heaviness: O! of this contradiction you shall now be quit.
O the charity of a penny cord! it sums up thousands in a trice: you have no true debitor and creditor but it; of what's past, is, and to come, the discharge.
Your neck, sir, is pen, book, and court; so the acquaintance follows,
Post. I am merrier to die, than thou art to live.
Gaol. Indeed, sir, he that sleeps not the toothache: But a man that were to sleep your sleep, and a hangman to help him to bed, I think, he would change places with his: officer: for, look you, sir, you know not which way you shall go.
Post. Yes, indeed, do I, fellow.
Gaol. Your death has eyes in 's head then; I have not seen him so pictured: you must either be directed by some that take upon them to know; or take upon yourself that, which I am sure you do not know; or jump

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Knock off his manacles; bring your prisoner to the king.
Post. Thou bringest good news; — I am called to be made free.
Gaol. I'll be hanged then.
Post. Thou shalt be then freer than a gaoler; no bolts for the dead.

[Exeunt Posthumus and Messenger.

Gaol. Unless a man would marry a gallows, and beget young gibbets, I never saw one so prone. But, on my conscience, there are verier knives desire to live, for all he be a Roman: and there be some of them too, that die against their wills; so should I, if I were one. I would we were all of one mind, and one mind good; O, there were desolation of gaolers, and gallows! I speak against my present profit; but my wish hath a preferment in't.

SCENE V. — Cymbeline's Tent.

Enter Cymbeline, Belarius, Guiderius, Arviraguus, Iarino, Lords, Officers, and Attendants.

Cym. Stand by my side, you whom the gods have made
Preservers of my throne. Woe is my heart,
That the poor soldier, that so richly fought,
Whose rags sham'd gilded arms, whose naked breast
Stepp'd before targe? of proof, cannot be found:
He shall be happy that can find him, if
Our grace can make him so.
Bel. I never saw
Such noble fury in so poor a thing;
Such precious deeds in one that promis'd nought
But beggary and poor looks.
Cym. No tidings of him?
Pis. He hath been search'd among the dead and living,
But no trace of him.
Cym. To my grief, I am
The heir of his reward; which I will add
To you, the liver, heart, and brain of Britain.
[To Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.
By whom, I grant, she lives; 'Tis now the time
To ask of whom you are; — report it.
Bel. Sir, in Cambria are we born, and gentlemen:
Further to boast, were neither true nor modest,
Unless I add, we are honest.
Cym. Bow your knees; Arise, my knights o' the battle: I create you
Companions to our person, and will fit you
With dignities becoming your estates.

Enter Cornelius, and Ladies.

There's business in these faces: — Why so sadly
Greet you our victory? you look like Romans,
And not o' the court of Britain.
Cor. Hail, great king! To sour your happiness, I must report
The queen is dead.
Cym. Whom worse than a physician
Would this report become? But I consider,
By medicine life may be prolong'd, yet death
Will seize the doctor too. — How ended she?
Cor. With horror, madly dying, like her life;
Which, being cruel to the world, concluded
Most cruel to herself. What she confess'd,
I will report, so please you: These her women
Can trip me, if I err; who, with wet cheeks,
Were present when she finish'd.
Cym. Pr'ythee, say.
Cor. First, she confess'd she never lov'd you: only Affected greatness got by you, not you:
Married your royalty, was wife to your place;
Abhor'd your person.
Cym. She alone knew this:
And, but she spoke it dying, I would not.
Believe her lips in opening it. Proceed.
Cor. Your daughter, whom she bore in hand to love
With such integrity, she did confess

7 Target, shield.
Scene V.

Cymbeline.

Was as a scorpion to her sight; whose life,
But that her flight prevented it, she had
Ta'en off by poison.

Cym. O most delicate fiend!
Who is 't can read a woman? — Is there more?
Cor. More, sir, and worse. She did confess, she had
For you a mortal mineral; which, being took,
Should by the minute feed on life, and, ling'ring,
By inches waste you: In which time she purpos'd,
By watching, weeping, 'tendance, kissing, to Overcome you with her show: yes, and in time,
(When she had fitted you with her craft,) to work
Her son into the adoption of the crown.
But failing of her end by his strange absence,
Grew shameless desperate; open'd in despite
Of heaven and men, her purposes; repented
The evils she hatch'd were not effect'd; so,
Despairing, died.

Cym. Heard you all this, her women?
Lady. We did so, please your highness.

Cym. Mine eyes
Were not in fault, for she was beautiful;
Mine ears, that heard her flattery; nor my heart,
That thought her like her seeming; it had been vicious,
To have mistrusted her: yet, O my daughter!
That it was folly in me, thou may'st say,
And prove it in thy feeling. Heaven mend all!

Enter Lucius, Iachimo, the Soothsayer, and other Roman Prisoners, guarded; Posthumus, behind, and Imogen.

Thou com'st not, Caius, now for tribute; that
The Britons have raz'd out, though with the loss
Of many a bold one; whose kinsmen have made suit
That their good souls may be appease'd with slaughter
Of you their captives, which ourselves have granted;
So, think of your estate.

Luc. Consider, sir, the chance of war; the day
Was yours by accident; had it gone with us,
We should not, when the blood was cool, have threaten'd
Our prisoners with the sword. But since the gods
Will have it thus, that nothing but our lives
May be call'd ransome, let it come: sufficeth,
A Roman with a Roman's heart can suffer:
Augustus lives to think on 't: And so much
For my peculiar care. This one thing only
I will entreat; My boy, a Briton born,
Let him be ransom'd: never master had
A page so kind, so duteous, diligent,
So tender over his occasions, true,
So feat, so nurse-like: let his virtue join
With my request, which, I'll make bold, your highness
Cannot deny; he hath done none Briton harm,
Though he have serv'd a Roman: save him, sir,
And spare no blood beside.

Cym. I have surely seen him:
His favour is familiar to me. —
Boy, thou hast look'd thyself into my grace,
And art mine own. — I know not why, nor wherefore,
To say, live, boy: ne'er thank thy master: live:
And ask of Cymbeline what boon thou wilt,
Fitting my bounty, and thy state, I'll give it;
Yea, though thou do demand a prisoner,
The noblest ta'en.

Imo. I humbly thank your highness.

Luc. I do not bid thee beg my life, good lad;
And yet, I know, thou wilt.

Imo. No, no: alack,
There's other work in hand; I see a thing
Bitter to me as death: your life, good master,
Must shuffle for itself.

Luc. The boy disdains me.
He leaves me, scorns me: Briefly die their joys,
That place them on the truth of girls and boys. —
Why stands he so perplex'd?

Cym. What wouldst thou, boy?
I love thee more and more: think more and more
What's best to ask. Know'st him thou look'st on?
Speak,
Wilt have him live? Is he thy kin? thy friend?
Imo. He is a Roman; no more kin to me,
Than I to thy highness; who, being born your vassal,
Am something nearer.

Cym. Wherefore ey'st him so?

Imo. I'll tell you, sir, in private, if you please
To give me hearing.

Cym. Ay, with all my heart,
And lend my best attention. What's thy name
Imo. Fidele, sir.

Cym. Thou art my good youth, my page;
I'll be thy master: Walk with me; speak freely.

[CYMBELINE AND IMOGEN converse apart.

Bel. Is not this boy reviv'd from death?

Art. One sand another
Not more resembles: That sweet rosy lad,
Who died, and was Fidele: — What think you?

Gui. The same dead thing alive.

Bel. Peace, peace! see further; he eyes us not;
forbear:

Creatures may be alike: weren't he, I am sure
He would have spoke to us.

Gui. But we saw him dead.

Bel. Be silent; let's see further.

Pis. It is my mistress:

[Aside.

Since she is living, let the time run on,
To good, or bad.

[CYMBELINE AND IMOGEN come forward.

Cym. Come, stand thou by our side;
Make thy demand aloud. — Sir, [To Iach.] step you forth;
Give answer to this boy, and do it freely:
Or, by our greatness, and the grace of it,
Which is our honour, bitter torture shall Winnow the truth from falsehood. — On, speak to him.

Imo. My boon is, that this gentleman may render
Of whom he had this ring.

Post. What's that to him?

[Aside.

Cym. That diamond upon your finger, say,
How came it yours?
Iach. Thou'tt torture me to leave unspoken that
Which, to be spoke, would torture thee.

Cym. How! me?
Iach. I am glad to be constrain'd to utter that which
Torments me to conceal. By villainy
I got this ring; 'twas Leonatus' jewel:
Whom thou didst banish; and (which more may grieve thee,
As it doth me;) a nobler sir ne'er liv'd
'Twixt sky and ground. Wilt thou hear more, my lord?
Cymbeline.

Act V.

Cym. All that belongs to this.

Iach. That paragon, thy daughter,—

For whom my heart drops blood, and my false spirits
Quail! to remember, — Give me leave; I faint.

Cym. My daughter! what of her? Renew thy strength:

I had rather thou shouldst live while nature will,
Than die ere I hear more: strive man, and speak.

Iach. Upon a time, (unhappy was the clock
That struck the hour!) it was in Rome, (accurs'd
The mansion where!) 'twas at a feast, (O, 'would
Our viands had been poison'd! or, at least,
Those which I hea'd to head!) the good Posthumus, (What should I say? he was too good, to be
Where ill men were; and was the best of all
Amongst the rar'est of good ones,) sitting sadly,
Hearing us praise our loves of Italy

For beauty that made barren the swell'd boast
Of him that best could speak: for feature, laming
The shrine of Venus, or straight-pight Minerva;
Fairness which strikes the eye: —

Cym. I stand on fire: Come to the matter.

Iach. All too soon I shall,

Unless thou wouldst grieve quickly. — This Posthumus,
(Most like a noble lord in love, and one
That had a royal lover,) took his hint;
And, not disparising whom we praise'd, (therein
He was as calm as virtue) he began
His mistress' picture; which by his tongue being made,
And then a mind put in't, either our brags
Were crack'd of kitchen trulls, or his description
Prov'd us unspeaking sots.

Cym. Nay, nay, to the purpose.

Iach. Your daughter's chastity. He spake of her
As she alone were pure: Whereat I, wretch!
Made scruple of his praise; and wager'd with him
Pieces of gold, 'gainst this which then he wore
Upon his honour'd finger, to attain
In suit the place of his bed, and win this ring
By her's and mine adultery: he, true knight,
No lesser of her honour confident
Than I did truly find her, stakes this ring;
And would so, had it been a carbuncle
Of Phæbus' wheel; and might so safely, had it
Been all the worth of his car. Away to Britain
Post I in this design: Well may you, sir,
Remember me at court, where I was taught
Of your chaste daughter the wide difference
'Twixt amorous and villainous. Being thus quench'd
Of hope, not longing, mine Italian brain
'Gain in your duller Britain operate
Most vilely; for my 'vantage, excellent;
And, to be brief, my practice so prevail'd,
That I return'd with similar proof enough
To make the noble Leonatus mad,
By wounding his belief in her renown
With tokens thus, and thus; averring notes
Of chamber-hanging, pictures, this her bracelet,
(O, cunning, how I got it!) nay, some marks
Of secret on her person, that he could not
But think her bond of chastity quite crack'd,
I having ta'en the forfeit. Whereupon,—

Post. Ay, so thou dost,

[Coming forward.

Italian fiend! — Ah me, most credulous fool,
1 Sink into dejection.

Egregious murderer, thief, any thing
That's due to all the villains past, in being,
To come! — O, give me cord, or knife, or poison,
Some upright justicer! Thou, king, send out
For torturers ingenious: it is I
That all the abhorred things o' the earth amend,
By being worse than they. I am Posthumus,
That kill'd thy daughter: — villain-like, I lie;
That cause'd a lesser villain than myself,
A sacrilegious thief, to do 't: — the temple
Of virtue was she; yea, and she herself.

Spit, and throw stones, cast mine upon me, set
The dogs o' the street to bay me: every villain
Be call'd Posthumus Leonatus; and
Be villainy less than 'twas! — O Imogen!
My queen, my life, my wife! O Imogen,
Imogen, Imogen!

Imo. Peace, my lord; hear, hear —

Post. Shall 's have a play of this? Thou scornful page,

There lie thy part. [Striking her: she falls.

Pis. O, gentlewoman, help, help

Mine and your mistress: — O, my lord Posthumus!
You ne'er kill'd Imogen till now: — Help, help! —

Mine honour'd lady!

Cym. Does the world go round?

Post. How come these stags on me?

Pis. Wake, my mistress!

Cym. If this be so, the gods do mean to strike me
To death with mortal joy.

Pis. How fares my mistress?

Imo. O, get thee from my sight;

Thou gav'st me poison: dangerous fellow, hence!
Breathe not where princes are.

Cym. The tune of Imogen!

Pis. Lady,
The gods throw stones of sulphur on me, if
That box I gave you was not thought by me
A precious thing; I had it from the queen.

Cym. New matter still?

Imo. It poison'd me.

Cor. O gods! —

I left out one thing which the queen confess'd,
Which must approve thee honest: if Pisario
Have, said she, given his mistress that confection
Which I gave him for a cordial, she is serv'd
As I would serve a rat.

Cym. What's this, Cornelius?

Cor. The queen, sir, very oft import'd me
To temper 2 poisons for her; still pretending
The satisfaction of her knowledge, only
In killing creatures vile, as cats and dogs
Of no esteem: I, dreading that her purpose
Was of more danger, did compound for her
A certain stuff, which, being ta'en, would cease
The present power of life; but, in short time,
All offices of nature should again
Do their due functions. — Have you ta'en of it?

Imo. Most like I did, for I was dead.

Bel. My boys,

There was our error.

Gis. This is sure, Fidele.

Imo. Why did you throw your wedded lady from you?

Think, that you are upon a rock; and now
Throw me again. [Embracing him.

Post. Hang there like fruit, my soul,

Till the tree die! 3

2 Not only the temple of virtue, but virtue herself.
3 Mix, compound.
Scene V.

Cymbeline.

Cym.

How now my flesh, my child?

What, mak'st thou me a dullard in this act?

Wilt thou not speak to me?

Imo.

Your blessing, sir. [Kneeling.]

Bel. Though you did love this youth, I blame you not;

You had a motive for 't.

[To Guiderius and Arviragus.]

Cym.

My tears that fall,

Prove holy water on thee! Imogen,

Thy mother's dead.

Imo.

I am sorry for 't, my lord.

Cym.

O, she was naught; and 'long of her it was,

That we meet here so strangely; But her son

Is gone, we know not how nor where.

Ps.

My lord,

Now fear is from me, I'll speak truth. Lord Cloten,

Upon my lady's missing, came to me

With his sword drawn; foam'd at the mouth, and swore,

If I discover'd not which way she was gone,

It was my instant death: By accident,

I had a feigned letter of my master's

Then in my pocket; which directed him

To seek her on the mountains near to Milford;

Where, in a frenzy, in my master's garments,

Which he incor'd from me, away he posts

With unchaste purpose, and with oath to violate

My lady's honour; what became of him,

I further know not.

Gui.

Let me end the story:

I slew him there.

Cym.

Marry, the gods forfend! I would not thy good deeds should from my lips

Pluck a hard sentence: pr'ythee, valiant youth,

Deny 't again.

Gui.

I have spoke it, and I did it

Cym.

He was a prince.

Gui.

A most uncivil one: The wrongs he did me

Were nothing prince-like; for he did provoke me

With language that would make me spurn the sea,

If it could so roar to me: I cut off's head;

And am right glad, he is not standing here

To tell this tale of mine.

Cym.

I am sorry for thee:

By thine own tongue thou art condemn'd, and must Endure our law: Thou art dead.

Imo.

That headless man

I thought had been my lord.

Cym.

Bind the offender,

And take him from our presence.

Bel.

Stay, sir king:

This man is better than the man he slew,

As well descended as thyself; and hath

More of thee merited, than a band of Clotens

Had ever scar for. — Let his arms alone;

[To the Guard.]

They were not born for bondage.

Cym.

Why, old soldier,

Wilt thou undo the worth thou art unpaid for,

By tasting of our wrath? How of descent

As good as we?

Arv.

In that he spake too far.

Cym.

And thou shalt die for 't.

Bel.

We will die all three:

But I will prove, that two of us are as good

As I have given out him. — My sons, I must,

For mine own part, speak not dangerous speech;

Though, hapily, well for you.

† Forbid.
That, after this strange starting from your orbs, You may reign in them now! — O Imogen, Thou hast lost by this a kingdom.

Imo. No, my lord; I have got two worlds by 't. — O my gentle brother, Have we thus met? O never say hereafter, But I am truest speaker; you call'd me brother When I was but your sister; I you brothers, When you were so indeed.

Cym. Did you o'er meet?

Arv. Ay, my good lord.

Grin. And at first meeting loved; Continued so, until we thought he died.

Cor. By the queen's dram she swallowed.

Cym. O rare instinct!

When shall I hear all through? This fierce abridge ment Hath to it circumstantial branches, which Distinction should be rich in. — Where? how liv'd you? And when came you to serve our Roman captive? How parted with your brothers? how first met them? Why did you from the court? and whither? These, And your three motives to the battle, with I know not how much more, should be demanded; And all the other by-dependencies, From chance to chance; but nor the time, nor place, Will serve long interrogatories. See,
Posthumus anchors upon Imogen;
And she, like harmless lightning, throws her eye On him, her brothers, me, her master; hitting Each object with a joy; the counterchange Is severally in all. Let's quit this ground, And smoke the temple with our sacrifices. — Thou art my brother; So we'll hold thee ever.

[To Belarius.]

Imo. You are my father too; and did relieve me, To see this gracious season. All o'erjoy'd,
Cym. Save these in bonds; let them be joyful too, For they shall taste our comfort.

Imo. I will yet do you service.

Luc. Happy be you!

Cym. The forlorn soldier, that so nobly fought, He would have well become'd this place, and grae'd The thankings of a king.

Post. I am, sir,
The soldier that did company these three In poor beseeing; 'twas a fitment for The purpose I then follow'd; — That I was he, Speak, Iachimo; I had you down, and might Have made you finish.

Iach. I am down again;

[As you did indeed mean to be our brother; Joy'd are we, that you are.

Post. Your servant, princes. — Good my lord of Rome,

Call forth your soothsayer. As I slept, methought, Great Jupiter, upon his eagle back, Appearance'd to me, with other sprightly shows Of mine own kindred: when I wak'd, I found This label on my bosom; whose containing Is so from sense and hardness, that I can Make no collection of it; let him show His skill in the construction.

Luc. Philarmounus, —

Sooths. Here, my good lord.

Luc. Read, and declare the meaning.

Sooth. [Reads.] When as a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopped branches, which, being dead many years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow; then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate; and flourish in peace and plenty.

Thou, Leonatus, art the lion's whelp; The fit and apt construction of thy name, Being Leo-natus, doth impart so much: The piece of tender air, thy virtuous daughter,

[To Cymbeline.]

Which we call mollis aer; and mollis aer
We term it multier: which multier I divine,
Is this most constant wife, who, even now, Answering the letter of the oracle,
Unknown to you, unsought, were clipp'd 7 about This with most tender air.

Cym. This hath some seeming.

Sooth. The lofty cedar, royal Cymbeline, Personates thee: and thy lop'd branches point Thy two sons forth: who, by Belarius stolen, For many years thought dead, are now reviv'd, To the majestick cedar join'd; whose issue Promises Britain peace and plenty.

Cym. Well, My peace we will begin: — And, Calius Lucius, Although the victor, we submit to Caesar, And to the Roman empire; promising To pay our wonted tribute, from the which We were dissuaded by our wicked queen; Whom heavens, in justice, (both on her and hers,) Have laid most heavy hand.

Sooth. The fingers of the powers above do tune The harmony of this peace. The vision Which I made known to Lucius, ere the stroke Of this yet scarce-cold battle, at this instant, Is full accomplish'd: for the Roman eagle, From south to west on wing soaring aloft, Lessen'd herself, and in the beams o' the sun So vanish'd: which foreshow'd our princely eagle, The imperial Caesar, should again unite His favour with the radiant Cymbeline, Which shines here in the west.

Cym. Laud we the gods; And let our crooked smokes climb to their nostrils From our blessed altars! Publish we this peace To all our subjects. Set we forward: Let A Roman and a British ensigne wave Friendly together; so through Lud's town march: And in the temple of great Jupiter Our peace we'll ratify; seal it with feasts. —

6 Ghostly appearances. 7 Embraced.
Scene V.

Set on there: — Never was a war did cease,
Ere bloody hands were wash'd with such a peace.

[Exeunt.

A SONG,

Sung by Guiderius and Arviragus over Fidele,
Supposed to be dead.

By Mr. William Collins

To fair Fidele's grassy tomb,
Soft maids and village hind shall bring
Each opening sweet, of earliest bloom,
And rife all the breathing spring.

No wailing ghost shall dare appear
To vex with shrieks this quiet grove;
But shepherd lads assemble here,
And melting virgins own their love.

No wither'd witch shall here be seen,
No goblins lead their nightly crew:
The female fays shall haunt the green,
And dress thy grave with pearly dew.

The red-breast oft at evening hours
Shall kindly lend his little aid,
With hoary moss, and gather'd flowers,
To deck the ground where thou art laid.

When howling winds, and beating rain,
In tempests shake the sylvan cell;
Or midst the chase on every plain,
The tender thought on thee shall dwell.

Each lonely scene shall thee restore;
For thee the tear be duly shed:
Belov'd, till life could charm no more;
And mourn'd till pity's self be dead.
TITUS ANDRONICUS.

Scene, Rome; and the Country near it.
FAW, MY SONS: SEE, THAT YOU MAKE HER SORRE.

TITUS ANDRONICUS.

ACT I.

SCENE I. — Rome. Before the Capitol.

The Tomb of the Andronici appearing: the Tribunes and Senators aloft, as in the Senate. Enter, below, Saturninus and his Followers, on one Side; and Bassianus and his Followers, on the other; with Drum and Colours.

Sat. Noble patricians, patrons of my right,
Defend the justice of my cause with arms;
And, countrymen, my loving followers,
Plead my successive title 1 with your swords;
I am his first-born son, that was the last
That wore the imperial diadem of Rome;
Then let my father's honours live in me,
Nor wrong mine age with this indignity.

Bus. Romans, — friends, followers, favourers of my right —
If ever Bassianus, Caesar's son,
Were gracious in the eyes of royal Rome,
Keep then this passage to the Capitol;
And suffer not dishonour to approach
The imperial seat, to virtue consecrate,
To justice, continence, and nobility:
But let desert in pure election shine;
And, Romans, fight for freedom in your choice.

Enter Marcus Andronicus aloft, with the Crown.

Marc. Princes that strive by factions, and by friends,

AMBITION for rule and empery,—
Know, that the people of Rome, for whom we stand
A special party, have by their common voice,
In election for the Roman empery,
Chosen Andronicus, surnamed Pius
For many good and great deserts to Rome;
A nobler man, a braver warrior,
Lives not this day within the city walls:
He by the senate is accited 2 home,
From weary wars against the barbarous Goths;
That, with his sons, a terror to our foes,
Hath yok'd a nation strong, train'd up in arms.
Ten years are spent, since first he undertook
This cause of Rome, and chastised with arms
Our enemies' pride: Five times he hath return'd
Bleeding to Rome, bearing his valiant sons
In coffins from the field;
And now at last, laden with honour's spoils,
Returns the good Andronicus to Rome,
Renowned Titus, flourishing in arms.
Let us entreat, — By honour of his name,
Whom, worthyly, you would have now succeed,
And in the Capitol and senate's right,
Whom you pretend to honour and adore,—
That you withdraw you, and abate your strength;
Dismiss your followers, and, as suitors should,
Plead your deserts in peace and humbleness.

Sat. How fair the tribune speaks to calm my thoughts!

1 i.e. My title to the succession.

2 Summoned.
Ad manes fratrum sacrifice his flesh,
Before this earthly prison of their bones;
That so the shadows be not unappeas'd,
Nor we disturb'd with their dear breath. 3

Tit. I give him you; the noblest that survives,
The eldest son of this distressed queen.

Tam. Stay, Roman brethren;— Gracious conqueror,
Victorious Titus, rue the tears I shed,
A mother's tears in passion 4 for her son:
And, if thy sons were ever dear to thee,
O, think my son to be as dear to me,
Sufficeth not, that we are brought to Rome,
To beautify thy triumphs, and return,
Captive to thee, and to thy Roman yoke;
But must my sons be slaughter'd in the streets,
For valiant doings in their country's cause?
O! if to fight for king and common-weal
Were piety in thine, it is in these.
Andronicus, stain not thy tomb with blood:
Wilt thou draw near the nature of the gods?
Draw near them then in being merciful:
Sweet mercy is nobility's true badge;
Thrice noble Titus, spare my first-born son.

Tit. Patient yourself, madam, and pardon me.
These are their brethren, whom you Goths beheld
Alive, and dead; and for their brethren slain,
Religiously they ask a sacrifice:
To this your son is mark'd; and die he must,
To appease their groaning shades that are gone.

Luc. Away with him! and make a fire straight;
And with our swords, upon a pile of wood,
Let's hew his limbs, till they be clean consum'd.

[Exeunt Lucius, Quintus, Martius, and Mutius, with Alarbus.

Tam. O cruel, irreligious piety!
Ch'i. Was ever Scythia half so barbarous?

Dem. Oppose not Scythia to ambitious Rome.

Alarbus goes to rest; and we survive
To tremble under Titus' threatening look.
Then, madam, stand resolv'd; but hope withal,
The self-same gods, that arm'd the queen of Troy
With opportunity of sharp revenge
Upon the Thracian tyrant in his Kent,
May favour Tamora, the queen of Goths,
(When Goths were Goths, and Tamara was queen,) To quit the bloody wrongs upon her foes.

Re-enter Lucius, Quintus, Martius, and Mutius, with their Swords bloody.

Luc. See, lord and father, how we have perform'd
Our Roman rites: Alarbus' limbs are lopp'd,
And entrails feed the sacrificing fire,
Whose smoke, like incense, doth perfume the sky,
Remaineth nought, but to inter our brethren,
And with loud 'larums welcome them to Rome.

Tit. Let it be so, and let Andronicus
Make this his latest farewell to their souls.

[Trumpets sounded, and the Coffins laid in the Tomb.

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons;
Rome's readiest champions, repose you here,
Secure from worldly chances and mishaps!
Here lurks no treason, here no envy, no snares,
Here grow no inward grudges; here are no storms,
No noise, but silence and eternal sleep:

Enter Latinia.

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons!

3 It was supposed that the ghosts of unburied people appeared to solicit the rites of burial.
Titus.  People of Rome, and people's tribunes here,
I ask your voices, and your suffrages;
Will you bestow them friendly on Andronicus?
Trib. To gratify the good Andronicus,
And grateulate his safe return to Rome,
The people will accept whom he admits.
Tit. Tribunes, I thank you: and this suit I make,
That you create your emperor's eldest son,
Lord Saturnine; whose virtues will, I hope,
Reflect on Rome, as Titian's 9 rays on earth,
And name justice in this common-weal:
Then if you will elect by my advice,
Crown him and say, — Long live our emperor!
Marc. With voices and applause of every sort,
Patricians, and plebeians, we create
Lord Saturninus, Rome's great emperor;
And say, — Long live our emperor Saturnine!

Enter Marcus Andronicus, Saturninus,
Bassianus, and others.
Marc. Long live lord Titus, my beloved brother,
Gracious triumpher in the eyes of Rome!
Tit. Thanks, gentle tribune, noble brother Marcus.
Marc. And welcome, nephews, from successful war,
You that survive, and you that sleep in fame.
Fair lords, your fortunes are alike in all,
That in your country's service drew your swords:
But safely triumph is this funeral pomp,
That hath appur't'd to Solon's happiness;
And triumphs over chance, in honour's bed.
Titus Andronicus, the people of Rome,
Whose friend in justice thou hast ever been,
Send thee by me, their tribune, and their trust,
This palliation of white and spotless hue;
And name thee in election for the empire,
With these our late-deceased emperor's sons:
Be candidatus then, and put it on,
And help to set a head on headless Rome.
Tit. A better head her glorious body fits
Than his that shakes for age and feebleness:
What! should I don this robe, and trouble you?
Be chosen with proclamation to-day;
To-morrow yield up rule, resign my life,
And set abroad new business for you all.
Rome, I have been thy soldier forty years,
And led my country's strength successfully,
And buried one-and-twenty valiant sons,
Knighted in field, slain manfully in arms,
In right and service of their noble country:
Give me a staff of honour for mine age,
But not a scepter to control the world:
Upright he held it, lords, that held it last.
Marc. Titus, thou shalt obtain and ask the empery.
Sat. Proud and ambitious tribune, canst thou tell?

Tit. Patience, prince Saturnine.
Sat. Romans, do me right; —
Patricians, draw your swords, and sheath them not Till Saturninus be Rome's emperor: —
Andronicus, 'would thou wert shipp'd to hell,
Rather than rob me of the people's hearts.
Luc. Proud Saturnine, interrupter of the good
That noble-minded Titus means to thee!
Tit. Content thee, prince; I will restore to thee
The people's hearts, and wean them from themselves.
Bas. Andronicus, I do not flatter thee,
But honour thee, and will do till I die;
My faction if thou strengthen with thy friends,
I will most thankful be: and thanks, to men
Of noble minds, is honourable meed.

6 The maxim alluded to is, that no man can be pronounced happy before his death.
7 A robe.
8 i.e. Do on, put it on.

Tit. How, sir? Are you in earnest then, my lord? Bas. Ay, noble Titus; and resolv'd withal,
To do myself this reason and this right.

[The Emperor courts Tamora in dumb show.

8 The sun.
1 Since.
Scene II.

TITUS ANDRONICUS.

Marc. Saturninus is our Roman justice; This prince in justice seizeth but his own. Luc. And that he will, and shall, if Lucius live. Tit. Traitors, avaint! Where is the emperor's guard? Treason, my lord; Lavinia is surpriz'd. Sat. Surpriz'd! by whom? Bas. By him that justly may Bear his brotli'd from all the world away. [Exit Lucius and Bassianus, with Lavinia. Mut. Brothers, help to convey her hence away, And with my sword I'll keep this door safe. [Exeunt Lucius, Quintus, and Martius. Tit. Follow, my lord, and I'll soon bring her back. Mut. My lord, you pass not here. Tit. What, villain boy! Barr'st me my way in Rome? [Titus kills Mutius. Mut. Re-enter Lucius. Luc. My lord, your are unjust; and, more than so, In wrongful quarrel you have slain your son. Tit. Nor thou, nor he, are any sons of mine: My sons would never so dishonour me: Traitor, restore Lavinia to the emperor. Luc. Dead, if you will: but not to be his wife, That is another's lawful proud and love. [Exit. Sat. No, Titus, no; the emperor needs her not, Not her, nor thee, nor any of thy stock: I'll trust, by leisure, him that mocks me once; Thee never, nor thy traitorous haughty sons, Confedereates all thus to dishonour me. Was there none else in Rome to make a stale 2 of, But Saturnine? Full well, Andronicus, Agree these deeds with that proud brag of thine, That said'st, I begg'd the empire at thy hands. Tit. O monstrous! what reproachful words are these? Sat. But, go thy ways; go, give that changing piece To him that flourish'd for her with his sword: A valiant son-in-law thou shalt enjoy; One fit to bandy with thy lawless son. To ruffle 3 in the commonwealth of Rome. Tit. These words are razors to my wounded heart. Sat. And therefore, lovely Tamora, queen of Goths, — That, like the stately Phoeb'e 'mongst her nymphs, Dost overshine the gallant'st dames of Rome, — If thou be pleas'd with this my sudden choice, Behold I choose thee, Tamora, for my bride, And will create thee empress of Rome. Speak, queen of Goths, dost thou applaud my choice? And here I swear by all the Roman gods, — Sith priest and holy water are so near, And tapers burn so bright, and every thing In readiness for Hymeneus stand, — I will not re-salute the streets of Rome, Or climb my palace, till from forth this place I lead espous'd my bride along with me. Tam. And here, in sight of heaven, to Rome I swear, If Saturnine advance the queen of Goths, She will a handmaid be to his desires, A loving nurse, a mother to his youth. Sat. Accend a fair queen, Panthicon: — Lords, accompany Your noble emperor, and his lovely bride, 2 A stalking horse. 3 A ruffler was a bully. Sent by the heavens for prince Saturnine, Whose wisdom hath her fortune conquered; There shall we consummate our spousal rites. [Exeunt Saturninus, and his Followers; Tamora, and her Sons; Aaron, and Gothis. Tit. I am not bid 4 to wait upon this bride; — Titus, when wert thou wont to walk alone, Dishonour'd thus, and challenged of wrongs? Re-enter Marcus, Lucius, Quintus, and Martius. Marc. O, Titus, see, O, see, what thou hast done! In a bad quarrel slain a virtuous son. Tit. No, foolish tribune: no; no son of mine, — Nor thou, nor these confederates in the deed That hath dishonour'd all our family; Unworthy brother, and unworthy sons! Luc. But let us give him burial, as becomes; Give Mutius burial with our brethren. Tit. Traitors, away! be rests not in this tomb. This monument five hundred years hath stood, Which I have sumptuously re-edified: Here none but soldiers, and Rome's servitors, Repose in fame; none basely slain in brawl; — Bury him where you can, he comes not here. Marc. My lord, this is impiety in you: My nephew Mutius' deeds do plead for him; He must be buried with his brethren. Quin. Marc. And shall, or can we will accompany. Tit. And shall? What villain was it spoke that word? Quin. He that would vouch't in any place but here. Tit. What, would you bury him in my despite? Marc. No, noble Titus; but entreat of thee To pardon Mutius, and to bury him. Tit. Marcus, even thou hast struck upon my crest, And, with these boys, mine honour thou hast wounded: My foes I do repute you every one; So trouble me no more, but get you gone. Marc. He is not with himself; let us withdraw. Quin. Not I, till Mutius' bones be buried. Marc. Brother, for in that name doth nature plead. Quin. Father, and in that name doth nature speak. Tit. Speak thou no more, if all the rest will speed. Marc. Renowned Titus, more than half my soul, — Luc. Dear father, soul and substance of us all, — Marc. Suffer thy brother Marcus to inter His noble nephew here in virtue's nest, That died in honour and Lavinia's cause. Thou art a Roman, be not barbarous. The Greeks, upon advice, did bury Ajax That slew himself; and wise Laertes' son Did gracious plea for his funerals. Let not young Mutius then, that was thy joy, Be barr'd his entrance here. Tit. Rise, Marcus, rise: — The dismal'st day is this that e'er I saw, To be dishonour'd by my sons in Rome! — Well, bury him, and bury me the next. [Mutius is put into the Tomb. Luc. There lie thy bones, sweet Mutius, with thy friends, Till we with trophies do adorn thy tomb! All. No man shed tears for noble Mutius: He lives in fame that died in virtue's cause. Marc. My lord, — to step out of these dreary dumps, — 4 Invited.
ACT II.

SCENE I. — Before the Palace.

Enter Aaron.

Aar. Now climb 'Tamora Olympus' top,
Safe out of fortune's shot: and sits aloft,
Secure of thunder's crack, or lightning's flash;
Advanc'd above pale envy's threat'ning reach.

* Forbid.

My lord, be rul'd by me, be won at last,
Dissemble all your griefs and discontent:
You are but newly planted in your throne;
Lest then the people and patricians too,
Upon a just survey, take 'Titus' part,
And so supplant us for ingratitude,
(Which Rome repute's to be a heinous sin,) Yield at entreats, and then let me alone:
I'll find a day to massacre them all,
And raze their faction, and their family,
The cruel father, and his traitorous sons,
To whom I sued for my dear son's life;
And make them know, what 'tis to let a queen
Kneel in the streets, and beg for grace in vain. —

Come, come, sweet emperor,—come, Andronicus,
Take up this good old man, and cheer the heart
That dies in tempest of thy angry frown.

Sat. Rise, Titus, rise; my empress hath prevail'd. Tit. I thank your majesty, and her, my lord:
These words, these looks, infuse new life in me.

Tam. Titus, I am incorporate in Rome,
A Roman now adopted happily,
And must advise the emperor for his good.
This day all quarrels die, Andronicus; —
And let it be mine honour, good my lord,
That I have reconcile'd your friends and you. —
For you, prince Bassianus, I have pass'd
My word and promise to the emperor,
That you will be more mild and tractable.
And fear not, lords, — and you Lavinia; —
By my advice, all humbled on your knees,
You shall ask pardon of his majesty.

Luc. We do, and vow to heaven and to his highness,
That, what we did, was mildly, as we might,
Tendering our sister's honour, and our own.

Marc. That on mine honour here I do protest.

Sat. Away, and talk not; trouble us no more.

Tam. Nay, nay, sweet emperor, we must all be friends:
The tribune and his nephews kneel for grace;
I will not be denied. Sweet heart, look back.

Sat. Marcus, for thy sake, and thy brother's here,
And at my lovely Tamora's entreats,
I do remit these young men's heinous faults.

Stand up.

Lavinia, though you left me like a churl,
I found a friend; and sure as death I swore,
I would not part a bachelor from the priest.
Come, if the emperor's court can feast two brides,
You are my guest, Lavinia, and your friends;
This day shall be a love-day, Tamora.

Tit. To-morrow, an it please your majesty,
To hunt the panther and the hart with me,
With horn and hound, we'll give your grace bonjour.

Sat. Be it so, Titus, and grammar too. [Exeunt.

As when the golden sun salutes the morr,
And, having girt the ocean with his beams,
Gallops the zodiac in his glittering coach,
And overlooks the highest-peering hills;
So Tamora. —

Upon her wit doth earthly honour wait,
And virtue stoops and trembles at her frown.
Then, Aaron, arm thy heart, and fit thy thoughts
Enter Chiron and Demetrius, braving.

Dem. Chiron, thy years want wit, thy wit want sedge, And manners, to intrude where I am grace'd; And may, for aught thou know'st, affected be.

Chi. Demetrius, thou dost overween in all; And so in this to bear me down with braves. 'Ts not the difference of a year, or two, Makes me less gracious, thee more fortunate: I am as able, and as fit, as thou, To serve, and to deserve my mistress' grace; And that my sword upon thee shall approve, And plead my passions for Lavinia's love.

Aar. Clubs, clubs! These lovers will not keep the peace.

Dem. Why, boy, although our mother, unadvised, Gave you a dancing-rapier by your side, Are you so desperate grown, to threaten your friends? Go to; have your lath glued within your sheath, Till you know better how to handle it.

Chi. Mean while, sir, with the little skill I have, Full well shall thou perceive how much I dare.

Dem. Ay, boy, grow ye so brave? [They draw.

Why, how now, lords? So near the emperor's palace dare you draw, And maintain such a quarrel openly? Full well I wot the ground of all this grudge; I would not for a million of gold, The cause were known to them it most concerns: Nor would your noble mother, for much more, Be so dishonour'd in the court of Rome. For shame, put up.

Dem. Not I; till I have sheath'd My rapier in his bosom, and withal, Thrust these reproachful speeches down his throat, That he hath breath'd in my dishonour here.

Chi. For that I am prepar'd and full resolv'd, — Foul-spoken coward! that thunder'st with thy tongue, And with thy weapon nothing dar'st perform.

Aar. Away, I say. — Now by the gods, that warlike Goths adore, This petty brabble will undo us all. — Why, lords, — and think you not how dangerous It is to jut upon a prince's right? What, is Lavinia then become so loose, Or Bassianus so degenerate, That for her love such quarrels may be broach'd, Without controldom, justice, or revenge? Young lords, beware; — an should the empress know This discord round, the musick would not please.

Chi. I care not, I, knew she and all the world; I love Lavinia more than all the world.

Dem. Youngling, learn thou to make some meaner choice.

Lavinia is thine elder brother's hope.

Aar. Why, are ye mad? or know ye not, in Rome How furious and impatient they be, And cannot brook competitors in love? I tell you, lords, you do but plot your deaths

By this device.

Chi. Aaron, a thousand deaths Would I propose, to achieve her whom I love.

Aar. To achieve her! — How?

Dem. Why mak'st thou it so strange? She is a woman, therefore may be woold; She is a woman, therefore may be won; She is Lavinia, therefore must be lov'd. Though Bassianus be the emperor's brother, Better than he have yet worn Vulcan's badge.

Aar. Ay, and as good as Saturninus may.

[Aside.

Dem. Then why should he be despair, that knows to court it

With words, fair looks, and liberality?

What, hast thou not full often struck a doe, And borne her cleanly by the keeper's nose?

Aar. Why, bark ye, bark ye, — And are you such fools,

To square 8 for this? Would it offend you then That both should speed?

Chi. I'faith, not fie.

Dem. Nor me, So I were one.

Aar. For shame, be friends; and join for that you jar.

'Tis policy and stratagem must do That you affect; and so must you resolve; That what you cannot, as you would, achieve, You must perforce accomplish as you may. Take this of me, Lucrece was not more chaste Than this Lavinia, Bassianus' love.

A specdier course than lingering languishment Must we pursue, and I have found the path. My lords, a solemn hunting is in hand; There will the lovely Roman ladies troop: The forest walks are wide and spacious; And many unfrequented plots there are, Fitted by kind 9 for rape and villainy: Single you thither then this dainty doe, And strike her home by force, if not by words: This way, or not at all, stand you in hope. Come, come, our empress, with her sacred wit, To villainy and vengeance consecrate, Will we acquaint with all that we intend; And she shall file our engines with advice, That will not suffer you to square yourselves, But to your wishes' height advance you both. The emperor's court is like the house of fame, The palace full of tongues, of eyes, of ears: The woods are ruthless, dreadful, deaf, and dull; There speak, and strike, shadow'd from heaven's eye, And revel with Lavinia.

Chi. Thy counsel, lad, smells of no cowardice.

Dem. Si fus as nefas, till I find a charm To calm these fits, per Stigis, per manes vehor.

[Exeunt.

Enter Titus Andronicus, with Hunters, &c. Marcus, Lucius, Quintus, and Martius.

Tit. The hunt is up, the morn is bright and grey. The fields are fragrant, and the woods are green:

Quarrel. 9 By nature. 1 Sacred here signifies accursed; a Latinism.
Uncouple here, and let us make a bay,
And wake the emperor and his lovely bride,
And rouse the prince; and ring a hunter's peal,
That all the court may echo with the noise.
Sons, let it be your charge, as it is ours,
To tend the emperor's person carefully:
I have been troubled in my sleep this night,
But dawning day new comfort hath inspir'd.

Horns wind a Peal. Enter Saturninus, Tamora, Bassianus, Lavinia, Chiron, Demetrius, and Attendants.

Tit. Many good-mornings to your majesty; —
Madam, to you as many and as good! —
I promised your grace a hunter's peal.
Sit. And you have rung it lustily, my lords,
Somewhat too early for you ladies.

Lav. I say, do;
I have been broad awake two hours and more.

Sat. Come on then, horse and chariots let us have,
And to our sport: — Madam, now shall ye see
Our Roman hunting. [To Tamora.

Marc. I have dogs, my lord,
Will rouse the proudest panther in the chase,
And climb the highest promontory top.

Tit. And I have horse will follow where the game
Makes way, and run like swallows o'er the plain.

Dem. Chiron, we hunt not, we, with horse nor hound,
But hope to pluck a dainty doe to ground. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. — A desert Part of the Forest.

Enter Aaron, with a Bag of Gold.

Aar. He that had wit, would think that I had none,
To burn so much gold under a tree,
And never after to inherit 2 it.
Let him, that thinks of me so abjectly,
Know, that this gold must coin a stratagem;
Which, cunningly effected, will beget
A very excellent piece of villainy;
And so dispose, sweet gold, for their unrest; 3

[Hides the Gold.

That have their alms out of the emperor's chest.

Enter Tamora.

Tam. My lovely Aaron, wherefore look'st thou sad,
When every thing doth make a gleeful boast?
The birds chaunt melody on every bush;
The snake lies rolled in the cheerful sun;
The green leaves quiver with the cooling wind,
And make a chequer'd shadow on the ground:
Under their sweet shade, Aaron, let us sit,
And — whilst the babbling echo mocks the hounds,
Rephying shrilly to the well-tun'd horns,
As if a double hunt were heard at once, —
Let us sit down, and mark their yelling noise:
Whiles hounds and hounds, and sweet melodious birds,
Be unto us, as is a nurse's song
Of lullaby, to bring her babe asleep.

Aar. Madam, though Venus govern your desires,
Saturn is dominator over mine:
What signifies my deadly-standing eye,
My silence, and my cloudy melancholy?
My fleece of woolly hair that now uncurls,
Even as an adder, when she doth unroll
To do some fatal execution?
Vengeance is in my heart, death in my hand,
Blood and revenge are hammering in my head.

Hark, Tamora, — the empress of my soul,
Which never hopes more heaven than rests in thee,—
This is the day of doom for Bassianus;
His Philomel 4 must lose her tongue to-day:
Thy sons, to pilage of her charity,
And wash their hands in Bassianus' blood.
Seest thou this letter? take it up, I pray thee,
And give the king this fatal-plotted scroll: —
Now question me no more, we are espied;
Here comes a parcel 5 of our hopeful booty,
Which dreads not yet their lives' destruction.

Tam. Ah, my sweet Moor, sweeter to me than life!

Aar. No more, great empress, Bassianus comes:
Be crossed with him: and I'll go fetch thy sons
To back thy quarrels, whatsoever they be. [Exit.

Enter Bassianus and Lavinia.

Bas. Who have we here? Rome's royal empress,
Unfurnish'd of her well-seeeming troop?
Or is it Dian, habited like her;
Who hath abandoned her holy groves,
To see the general hunting in this forest?

Tam. Saucy controller of our private steps?
Had I the power, that, some say, Dian had,
Thy temples should be planted presently
With horns, as was Actaeon's; and the hounds
Should drive upon thy new-transformed limbs,
Unmanfully intruder as thou art!

Lav. Under your patience, gentle empress,
'Tis to be doubted, that your Moor and you
Are single forth to try experiments:

Save shield your husband from his hounds to-day!
'Tis pity they should take him for a stag.

Bas. Believe me, queen, your swarth Cimmerian
Doth make your honour of his body's hue.
Why are you sequester'd from all your train?
Dismounted from your snow-white goodly steed,
And wander'd hither to an obscure plot,
Accompanied with a barbarous Moor?

Lav. My noble lord, I pray you let us hence
And let her Joy her raven-coloured love.

Bas. The king, my brother, shall have note of this.

Lav. Ay, for these slips have made him noted long:
Good king! to be so mightily abus'd!

Tam. Why have I patience to endure all this?

Enter Chiron and Demetrius.

Dom. How now, dear sovereign, and our gracious mother,
Why doth your highness look so pale and wan?

Tam. Have I not reason, think you, to look pale?

These two have 'ticed me hither to this place,
A barren and detested vale, you see it is:
The trees, though summer, yet forlorn and lean,
O'ercome with moss, and baneful misletoe.
Here never shines the sun; here nothing breeds,
Unless the nightly owl, or fatal raven.
And, when they show'd me this abhorred pit,
They told me, her at dead time of the night.
A thousand fiends, a thousand hissing snakes,
Ten thousand swelling toads, as many archins,
Would make such fearful and confused cries,
As any mortal body, hearing it,
Should straight fall mad, or else die suddenly.
No sooner had they told this hellish tale,
But straight they told me, they would bind me here
Unto the body of a dismal yew;
And leave me to this miserable death.

6 Part.
Scene III.

TITUS ANDRONICUS.

And then they call'd me foul adulteress,
Lascivious Goth, and all the bitterest terms
That ever ear did hear to such effect.
And, had you not by wondrous fortune come,
This vengeance on me had been executed:
Revenge it, as you love your mother's life,
Or be ye not henceforth call'd my children.

Dem. This is a witness that I am thy son.

[Stabs Bassianus.]

Chi. And this for me, struck home to show my strength.

[Stabbing him likewise.]

Lav. Ay, come, Semiramis, — nay, barbarous Tamora!
For no name fits thy nature but thy own!

Tam. Give me thy poniard; you shall know, my boys,
Your mother's hand shall right your mother's wrong.

Dem. Stay, madam, here is more belongs to her;
This minion stood upon her chastity,
Upon her nuptial vow, her loyalty,
And with that painted hope braces your mightiness:
And shall she carry this unto her grave?

Chi. Drag hence her husband to some secret hole.

Tam. Let not this wasp outlive, us both to sting.

Chi. I warrant you, madam; we will make that sure.

Lav. O Tamora! Thou baste'st a woman's face.—

Tam. I will not hear her speak; away with her.

Lav. Sweet lords, entreat her hear me but a word.

Dem. Listen, fair madam: Let it be your glory
To see her tears: but be your heart to them,
As unrelenting flint to drops of rain.

Lav. When did the tiger's young ones teach the dam?
O, do not learn her wrath; she taught it thee:
The milk thou suck'dst from her, did turn to marble;
Even at thy teat thou hast thy tyranny.—
Yet every mother breeds not sons alike;
Do thou entreat her shew a woman pity.

[To Chiron.]

Chi. What! would'thou have me prove myself a bastard?

Lav. 'Tis true; the raven doth not hatch a lark:
Yet I have heard, (O could I find it now!) The lion mov'd with pity, did endure To have his princely paws par'd all away.
Some say, that ravens foster forlorn children, The whilst their own birds famish in their nests: O, be to me, though thy hard heart say no, Nothing so kind, but something pitiful! —

Tam. I know not what it means; away with her.

Lav. O, let me teach thee: for my father's sake, That gave thee life, when well he might have slain thee,
Be not obdurate, open thy deaf ears.

Tam. Hadst thou in person ne'er offended me,
Even for his sake am I pitiless: —
Remember, boys, I pour'd forth tears in vain,
To save your brother from the sacrifice; But fierce Andronicus would not relent. Therefore, away with her, and use her as you will; The worse to her, the better love'd of me.

Lav. O Tamora, be call'd a gentle queen, And with thine own hands kill me in this place; For, 'tis not life, that I have begg'd so long; Poor I was slain, when Bassianus died.

Tam. What begg'd'st thou then? fond woman, let me go.

Lav. 'Tis death I beg; O, keep me from what's worse!

And tumble me into some loathsome pit;
Where never man's eye may behold my body:
Do this, and be a charitable murderer.

Tam. So should I rob my sweet sons of their fee.

Dem. Away, for thou hast staid us here too long.

Lav. No grace? No womanhood? Ah, beastly creature!
The blot and enemy to our general name!
Confusion fall —

Chi. Nay, then I'll stop your mouth: — Bring thou her husband;

[Dragging off Lavinia.]

This is the hole where Aaron bid us hide him.

[Exeunt.]

Tam. Farewell, my sons; see that you make her sure.

Ne'er let my heart know merry cheer indeed,
Till all the Andronici be made away. —
Now will I hence to seek my lovely Moor,
And let my spleenful sons this trull defoul. [Exit.]

Scene IV. — The same.

Enter Aaron, with Quintus and Martius.

Aar. Come on, my lords; the better foot before: Straight will I bring you to the loathsome pit, Where I espied the panther fast asleep.

Quin. My sight is very dull, whate'er it bodes.

Mart. And mine, I promise you: we'ret not for shame,
Well could I leave our sport to sleep awhile. [Martius falls into the Pit.]

Quin. What, art thou fallen? What subtle hole is this,
Whose mouth is cover'd with rude-growing briars; Upon whose leaves are drops of new-shed blood, As fresh as morning's dew distill'd on flowers? A very fatal place it seems to me: —

Speak, brother, hast thou hurt thee with the fall?

Mart. O, brother, with the dismallest object: That ever eye, with sight, made heart lament.

Aar. [Aside.] Now will I fetch the king to find them here; That he thereby may give a likely guess, How these were they that made away his brother.

[Exit Aaron.

Mart. Why dost not comfort me, and help me out From this unhallow'd and blood-stained hole? Quin. I am surprised with an uncount fear: A chilling sweat o'er-runs my trembling joints; My heart suspects more than mine eye can see.

Mart. To prove thou hast a true-divining heart, Aaron and thou look down into this den, And see a fearful sight of blood and death.

Quin. Aaron is gone; and my compassionate heart Will not permit mine eyes once to behold The thing whereat it trembles by surmise: O, tell me how it is; for ne'er till now Was I a child, to fear I know not what.

Mart. Lord Bassianus lies embrued here, All on a heap, like to a slaughter'd lamb, In this detested, dark, blood-drinking pit.

Quin. If it be dark, how dost thou know 'tis he?

Mart. Upon his bloody finger he doth wear A precious ring, that lightens all the hole, Which, like a taper in some monument, Doth shine upon the dead man's earthly cheeks And shows the ragged entrails of this pit: So pale did shine the moon on Pyramus,
When he by night lay bath'd in maiden blood.
O brother, help me with thy fainting hand,
If fear hath made thee faint, as me it hath,—
Out of this fell devouring receptacle.
As hateful as Co cyt s' misty month.
Quin. Reach me thy hand, that I may help thee out;
Or, wanting strength to do thee so much good,
I may be pluck'd into the swallowing womb
Of this deep pit, poor Bassianus' grave.
I have no strength to pluck thee to the brink.
Mart. Nor I no strength to climb without thy help.
Quin. Thy hand once more; I will not lose again,
Till thou art here aloft, or I below:
Thou canst not come to me, I come to thee. [Falls in.]

Enter SATURNINE and AARON.
Sat. Along with me:—'Tis I'll see what hole is here.
And what he is, that now is leap'd into it.
Say, who art thou, that lately didst descend
Into this gaping hollow of the earth?
Mart. The unhappy son of old Andronicus;
Brought hither in a most unlucky hour,
To find thy brother Bassianus dead.
Sat. My brother dead? I know thou dost but jest;
He and his lady both are at the lodge,
Upon the north side of this pleasant chase;
'Tis not an hour since I left him there.
Mart. We know not where you left him all alive,
But, out alas! here have we found him dead.

Enter TAMORA, with ATTENDANTS; TITUS ANDRONICUS, and LUCIUS.
Tam. Where is my lord the king?
Sat. Here, Tamora, though griev'd with killing grief.
Tam. Where is thy brother Bassianus?
Sat. Now to the bottom dost thou search my wound;
Poor Bassianus here lies murdered.
Tam. Then all too late I bring this fatal writ,
[Giving a Letter.]
The complot of this timeless tragedy;
And wonder greatly, that man's face can fold
In pleasing smiles such murderous tyranny.
Sat. [Reads.] An if we miss to meet him hand-somely,—
Sweet huntsman, Bassianus 'tis, we mean,—
Do thou so much as dig the grave for him;
Thou know'st our meaning: Look for thy reward Among the nettles at the elder tree,
Which overshares the mouth of that same pit,
Where we decreed to bury Bassianus.
Do this, and purchase us thy lasting friends.
O, Tamora! was ever heard the like?
This is the pit, and this the elder tree:
Look, sirs, if you can find the huntsman out,
That should have murder'd Bassianus here.
Aar. My gracious lord, here is the bag of gold.
[Showing it.]
Sat. Two of thy whelps, [To TR.] fell curs of bloody kind,
Have here bereft my brother of his life:—
Sirs, drag them from the pit unto the prison;
There let them hide, until we have devil's
Some never-heard-of torturing pain for them.
Tam. What, are they in this pit? O wondrous thing!
How easily murder is discover'd!
7 Untimely.

Tit. High emperor, upon my feeble knee
I beg this boon, with tears not lightly shed,
That this fell fault of my accursed sons,
Accursed, if the fault be prov'd in them, —
Snt. If it be prov'd! you see it is apparent, —
Who found this letter? Tamora, was it you?
Tam. Andronicus himself did take it up.
Tit. I did, my lord: yet let me be their bail:
For by my father's reverend tomb, I vow,
They shall be ready at your highness' will,
To answer their suspicion with their lives.
Sat. Thou shalt not bai them: see, thou follow me.
Some bring the murder'd body, some the murderers;
Let them not speak a word, the guilt is plain:
For, by my soul, were there worse end than death.
That end upon them should be executed.
Tam. Andronicus, I will entreat the king;
Fear not thy sons, they shall do well enough.
Tit. Come, Lucius, come; stay not to talk with them. [Exit severally.

SCENE V. — The same.

Enter DEMETRIUS and CHIRON, with LAEVINA; her Hands cut off; and her Tongue cut out.
Dem. So now, go tell, an if thy tongue can speak, Who 'twas that cut thy tongue, and ravish'd thee.
Chi. Writ down thy mind, bewray thy meaning so;
And, if thy stumps will let thee, play the scribe.
Dem. See, how with signs and tokens she can scowl.
Chi. Go home, call for sweet water, wash thy hands.
Dem. She hath no tongue to call, nor hands to wash;
And so let's leave her to her silent walks.
Chi. An 'twere my case, I should go hang myself.
Dem. If thou hadst hands to help thee knit the cord. [Exit DEMETRIUS and CHIRON.

Enter MARCUS.
Marc. Who's this,—my niece, that flies away so fast?
Cousin, a word; Where is your husband? —
If I do dream, 'would all my wealth would wake me!
If I do wake, some planet strike me down,
That I may slumber in eternal sleep! —
Speak, gentle niece, what stern ungentle hands
Have lopp'd, and hew'd, and made thy body bare
Of her two branches? those sweet ornaments,
Whose circling shadows kings have sought to sleep in;
And might not gain so great a happiness,
As half thy love? Why dost not speak to me? —
Alas, a crimson river of warm blood,
Like to a bubbling fountain stirr'd with wind,
Doth rise and fall between thy rosed lips,
Coming and going with thy honey breath.
But, sure, some Tereus hath deflour'd thee:
And, lest thou shouldst detect him, cut thy tongue.
Ah, now thou turn'st away thy face for shame!
And, notwithstanding all this loss of blood,—
As from a conduit with three issuing spouts,—
Yet do thy cheeks look red as Titan's face,
Blushing to be encounter'd with a cloud.
Shall I speak for thee? shall I say, 'tis so?
O, that I knew thy heart; and knew the beast,
That I might raze at him to ease my mind!
ACT III.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Street.

Enter Senators, Tribunes, and Officers of Justice, with Martius and Quintus, bound, passing on to the Place of Execution: Titus going before, pleading.

Tit. Hear me, grave fathers! noble tribunes, stay! For pity of mine age, whose youth was spent In dangerous wars, whilst you securely slept; For all my blood in Rome's great quarrel shed; For all the frosty nights that I have watch'd; And for these bitter tears, which now you see Filling the aged wrinkles in my cheeks; Be pitiful to my condemned sons, Whose souls are not corrupted as 'tis thought! For two and twenty sons I never wept, Because they died in honour's lofty bed. For these, these tribunes, in the dust I write [Throwing himself on the Ground.

My heart's deep languor, and my soul's sad tears. Let my tears stalk the earth's dry appetite; My sons' sweet blood will make it shame and blush.

[Execut Senators, Tribunes, &c. with the Prisoners.
O earth, I will befriend thee more with rain, That shall distil from these two ancient urns, Than youthful April shall with all his showers: In summer's drought, I'll drop upon thee still; In winter, with warm tears I'll melt the snow, And keep eternal spring-time on thy face, So thou refuse to drink my dear sons' blood.

Enter Lucius, with his Sword drawn.
O, reverend tribunes! gentle aged men! Unbind my sons, reverse the doom of death; And let me say, that never wept before, My tears are now prevailing orators.

Luc. O, noble father, you lament in vain; The tribunes hear you not, no man is by, And you recount your sorrows to a stone.

Tit. Ah, Lucius, for thy brothers let me plead: Grave tribunes, once more I entreat of you.

Luc. My gracious lord, no tribune hears you speak.

Tit. Why, 'tis no matter, man: if they did hear, They would not mark me, or, if they did mark, All bootless to them, they'd not pity me. Therefore I tell my sorrows to the stones; Who, though they cannot answer my distress, Yet in some sort they're better than the tribunes, For that they will not intercept my tale: When I do weep, they humbly at my feet Receive my tears, and seem to weep with me;

He would not then have touch'd them for his life: Or, had he heard the heavenly harmony, Which that sweet tongue hath made, He would have dropp'd his knife, and fell asleep, As Cerberus at the Thracian poet's feet. Come, let us go, and make thy father blind: For such a sight will blind a father's eye: One hour's storm will drown the fragrant meads; What will whole months of tears thy father's eyes? Do not draw back, for we will mourn with thee; O, could our mourning ease thy misery! [Exeunt.

And, were they but attired in grave weeds, Rome could afford no tribune like to these: A stone is soft as wax, tribunes more hard than stones: A stone is silent, and offendeth not; And tribunes with their tongues doom men to death. But wherefore stand'st thou with thy weapon drawn? Luc. To rescue my two brothers from their death: For which attempt, the judges have pronounce'd My everlasting doom of banishment. Tit. O happy man! they have befriended thee. Why, foolish Lucius, dost thou not perceive, That Rome is but a wilderness of tigers? Tigers must prey; and Rome affords no prey, But me and mine: How happy art thou then, From these devourers to be banished! But who comes with our brother Marcus here?

Enter Marcus and Lavinia.

Marc. Titus, prepare thy noble eyes to weep; Or, if not so, thy noble heart to break; I bring consuming sorrow to thine age. Tit. Will it consume me? let me see it then. Marc. This was thy daughter. Tit. Why, Marcus, so she is. Luc. Ah me! this object kills me! Tit. Faint-hearted boy, arise, and look upon her: — Speak, my Lavinia, what accursed hand Hath made thee handleless in thy father's sight? What foul hath added water to the sea? Or brought a faggot to bright-burning Troy? My grief was at the height before thou cam'st, And now, like Nilus, it disdainseth bounds, — Give me a sword, I'll chop off my hands too; For they have fought for Rome, and all in vain; And they have nurs'd this woe, in feeding life; In bootless prayer have they been held up, And they have serv'd me to effectless use: Now, all the service I require of them Is, that the one will help to cut the other. — 'Tis well, Lavinia, that thou hast no hands; For hands, to do Rome service, are but vain. Luc. Speak, gentle sister, who hath martyr'd thee? Marc. O, that delightful engine of her thoughts, That blasts them with such pleasing eloquence, Is torn from forth that pretty hollow cage; Where, like a sweet melodious bird, it sung Sweet varied notes, enchanting every ear! Luc. O, say thou for her, who hath done this deed? Marc. O, thus I found her, straying in the park, *Orpheus. *The river Nile.
Seeking to hide herself, as doth the deer, That hath receiv'd some unrecuring wound:
Thy hue, that deer, and they have bounded her,
Hath hurt me more, than had he kill'd me dead:
For now I stand as one upon a rock,
Environ'd with a wilderness of sea;
Who marks the waxing tide grow wave by wave,
Expecting ever when some envious surge
Will in his brinish bowl's swallow him.
This way to death my wretched sons are gone;
Here stands my other son, a banish'd man;
And here my brother, weeping at my woes;
But that, which gives my soul the greatest spurn,
Is dear Lavinia, dearer than my soul.—
Had I but seen thy picture in this plight,
It would have madd'd me; What shall I do
Now I behold thy lovely body so?
Thou hast no hands, to wipe away thy tears;
Nor tongue, to tell me who hath martyr'd thee:
Thy husband he is dead; and, for his death,
Thy brothers are condemn'd, and dead by this:—
Look, Marcus! ah, son Lucius, look on her!
When I did name her brothers, then fresh tears
Stood on her cheeks; as doth the honey dew
Upon a gather'd lily almost wither'd.
Marc. Perchance, she weeps because they kill'd her husband:
Perchance, because she knows them innocent.
Tit. If they did kill thy husband, then be joyful,
Because the law hath ta'en revenge on them.—
No, no, they would not do so foul a deed;
Witness the sorrow that their sister makes.—
Gentle Lavinia, let me kiss thy lips;
Or make some sign how I may doe thee ease:
Shall thy good uncle, and thy brother Lucius,
And thou, and I, sit round about some fountain;
Looking all downwards, to behold our checks
How they are stain'd? like meadows, yet not dry
With mery slime left on them by a flood?
And in the fountain shall we gaze so long,
Till the fresh taste be taken from that clearness,
And made a brine-pit with our bitter tears?
Or shall we cut away our hands, like thine?
Or shall we pluck our tongues, and in dumb shows
Pass the remainder of our hateful days?
What shall we do? let us that have our tongues,
Plot some device of further misery,
To make us wonder'd at in time to come.
Luc. Sweet father, cease your tears; for, at your grief,
See, how my wretched sister sob's and weeps.
Marc. Patience, dear niece:—good Titus, dry thine eyes.
Tit. Ah, Marcus, Marcus! brother, well I wot,
Thy napkin cannot drink a tear of mine;
For thou, poor man, hast drown'd it with thine own.
Luc. Ah, my dear! I will wipe thy cheeks.
Tit. Mark, Marcus, mark! I understand her signs:
Had she a tongue to speak, now would she say
That to her brother which I said to thee;
His napkin, with his true tears all bewet,
Can do no service on her sorrowful cheeks:
O, what a sympathy of woe is this?
As far from help as limb o' the earth is from bliss!

Enter Aaron.

Aar. Titus Andronicus, my lord the emperor
Sends thee this word.— That, if thou love thy sons,
Let Marcus, Lucius, or thyself, old Titus,

Or any one of you, chop off your hand,
And send it to the king: he for the same,
Will send thee hither both thy sons alive;
And that shall be the ransom for their fault.
Tit. O, gracious emperor! O, gentle Aaron!
Did ever raven sing so like a lark,
That gives sweet tidings of the sun's uprise?
With all my heart, I'll send the emperor
My hand:
Good Aaron, wilt thou help to chop it off?
Luc. Stay, father; for that noble hand of thine,
That hath thrown down so many enemies,
Shall not be sent: my hand will serve the turn:
My youth can better spare my blood than you;
And therefore mine shall save my brothers' lives.
Marc. Which of your hands hath not defended Rome,
And rear'd aloft the bloody battle-axe,
Writing destruction on the enemy's castle?
O, none of both but are of high desert:
My hand hath been but idle; let it serve
To ransom my two nephews from their death;
Then have I kept it to a worthy end.
Aar. Nay, come agree, whose hand shall go along,
For fear they die before their pardon come.
Marc. My hand shall go.
Luc. By heaven, it shall not go.
Tit. Sirs, strive no more: such wither'd herbs as these Are meet for plucking up, and therefore mine.
Luc. Sweet father, if I shall be thought thy son,
Let me redeem my brothers both from death.
Marc. And, for our father's sake, and mother's care,
Now let me show a brother's love to thee.
Tit. Agree between you; I will spare my hand.
Luc. Then I'll go fetch an axe.
Marc. But I will use the axe.

[Exit Lucius and Marcus.

Tit. Come hither, Aaron; I'll deceive them both;
Lend me thy hand, and I will give thee mine.
Aar. If that be call'd deceit, I will be honest,
And never, whilst I live, deceive men so:—
But I'll deceive you in another sort,
And that you'll say, ere half an hour can pass.

[Aside.

[He cuts off Titus's Hand.

Enter Lucius and Marcus.

Tit. Now, stay your strife; what shall be, is despatch'd.—
Good Aaron, give his majesty my hand:
Tell him, it was a hand that warded him
From thousand dangers; bid him bury it;
More hath it merited, that let it have.
As for my sons, say, I account of them
As jewels purchas'd at an easy price;
And yet dear too, because I bought mine own.
Aar. I go, Andronicus: and for thy hand,
Look by and by to have thy sons with thee:—
Their heads, I mean. — O, how this villainy

[Aside.

Doth fat me with the very thoughts of it!
Let fools do good, and fair men call for grace,
Aaron will have his soul black like his face. [Exit.
Tit. O, here I lift this one hand up to heaven,
And bow this feeble ruin to the earth:
If any power pities wretched tears,
To that I call; — What, wilt thou kneel with me?

[To Lavinia.]
Scene I.

Titus Andronicus.

Do then, dear heart; for heaven shall hear our prayers;
Or with our sighs we’ll breathe the welkin’s dim,
And stain the sun with fog, as sometime clouds,
When they do hug him in their melting bosoms.

Marc. O! brother, speak with possibilities,
And do not break into these deep extremes.

Tit. Is not my sorrow deep, having no bottom?
Then be my passions 4 bottomless with them.

Marc. But yet let reason govern thy lament.

Tit. If there were reason for these miseries,
Then into limits could I bind my woes;
When heaven doth weep, doth not the earth o’erflow?
If the winds rage, doth not the sea wax mad,
Threat’ning the welkin with his big-swoln face?
And wilt thou have a reason for this coil?
I am the sea; hark, how her signs do blow!
She is the weeping welkin, I the earth:
Then must my sea be moved with her sighs;
Then must my earth with her continual tears
Become a deluge, overflow’d and drown’d.

Enter a Messenger, with two Heads and a Hand.

Mess. Worthy Andronicus, ill art thou repaid
For that good hand thou sent’st the emperor.
Here are the heads of thy two noble sons;
And here’s thy hand, in scorn to thee sent back;
Thy griefs their sports, thy resolution mock’d:
That woe is me to think upon thy woes,
More than remembrance of my father’s death.

Marc. Now let hot Ætna cool in Sicily,
And be my heart an ever-burning fire!
These miseries are more than may be borne!
To weep with them that weep, doth ease some deal,
But sorrow flouted at is double death.

Luc. Ah, that this sight should make so deep a wound,
And yet detested life not shrink thereat!
That ever death should let life bear his name,
Where life hath no more interest but to breathe!

Marc. Alas, poor heart that Æneas is comfortless,
As frozen water to a starved snake.

Tit. When will this fearful sluicer have an end?

Marc. Now, farewell, flattery: Die, Andronicus:
Thou dost not slumber: see, thy sons’ heads;
Thy warlike hand; thy mangled daughter here;
Thy other banish’d son, with this dear sight
Struck pale and bloodless; and thy brother, I,
Even like a stony image, cold and numb.
Ah! now no more will I control thy griefs;
Rend off thy silver hair, thy other hand
Gnawing with thy teeth; and be this dismal sight
The closing up of our most wretched eyes!
Now is a time to storm; why art thou still?

Tit. Ha, ha, ha!

Marc. Why dost thou laugh? it fits not with this hour.

Tit. Why, I have not another tear to shed:
Besides this sorrow is an enemy,
And would usurp upon my wat’ry eyes,
And make them blind with tributary tears;
Then which way shall I find revenge’s cave?
For these two heads do seem to speak to me;
And threat me, I shall never come to bliss,
Till all these mischiefs be return’d again,
Even in their throats that have committed them.
Come, let me see what task I have to do. —

You heavy people, circle me about;
That I may turn me to each one of you,
And swear unto my soul to right your wrongs
The vow is made. — Come, brother, take a head;
And in this hand the other will I hear:
Lavinia, thou shalt be employed in these things;
Bear thou my hand, sweet wrench, between thy teeth.
As for thee, boy, go, get thee from my sight:
Thou art an exile, and thou must not stay:
He to the Goths, and raise an army there:
And, if you love me, as I think you do,
Let’s kiss and part, for we have much to do.

[Exit Titus, Marcus, and Lavinia.

Luc. Farewell, Andronicus, my noble father;
The woeful’st man that ever liv’d in Rome! Farewell, proud Rome! till Lucius come again, He leaves his pledges dearer than his life.
Lavinia, my noble sister; O, ‘twould thou wert as thou ‘torefore hast been!
But now nor Lucius, nor Lavinia lives.
But in oblivion, and hateful griefs,
If Lucius live, he will requite your wrongs;
And make proud Saturninus and his empress
Beg at the gates, like Tarquin and his queen.
Now will I to the Goths, and raise a power,
To be reveng’d on Rome and Saturnine.

[Exit.

Scene II. — A Room in Titus’s House.

A Banquet set out.

Enter Titus, Marcus, Lavinia, and young Lucius, a Boy.

Tit. So, so; now sit: and look you eat no more
Than will preserve just so much strength in us
As will revenge these bitter woes of ours.
Marcus, unknit that sorrow-wreathen knot;
Thy niece and I, poor creatures, want our hands
And cannot prosecute our tenfold grief
With folded arms. This poor right hand of mine
Is left to tyrannize upon my breast;
And when my heart, all mad with misery,
Beats in this hollow prison of my flesh,
Then thus I thump it down.
Thou map of woe, that thus dost talk in signs!

[Lavinia kisses him.

Marcus. Alas, poor heart that Æneas is comfortless,
As frozen water to a starved snake.

Tit. Why, Marcus, no man should be mad but I,
What violent hands can she lay on her life!
Ah, wherefore dost thou urge the name of hands;
To bid Æneas tell the tale twice o’er,
How Troy was burnt, and he made miserable?
O, handle not the theme, to talk of hands;
Lest we remember still, that we have none.

Fye, fye, how frantically I square my talk!
As if we should forget we had no hands,
If Marcus did not name the word of hands!
Come, let’s fall to; and, gentle girl, eat this:
Here is no drink! Hark, Marcus, what she says;
I can interpret all her martyr’d signs; —

To Lavinia.

When thy poor heart beats with outrageous beating,
Thou canst not strike it thus to make it still.
Wound it with sighing, girl, kill it with groans;
Or get some little knife between thy teeth,
And just against thy heart make thou a hole;
That all the tears that thy poor eyes let fall,
May run into that sink, and soaking in,
Drown the lamenting foot in sea-salt tears.

Marc. Fye, brother, fye! teach her not thus to lay
Such violent hands upon her tender life.

Tit. How, now! has sorrow made thee dote already?

Why, Marcus, no man should be mad but I,
What violent hands can she lay on her life!
Ah, wherefore dost thou urge the name of hands;
To bid Æneas tell the tale twice o’er,
How Troy was burnt, and he made miserable?
O, handle not the theme, to talk of hands;
Lest we remember still, that we have none.

Fye, fye, how frantically I square my talk!
As if we should forget we had no hands,
If Marcus did not name the word of hands!
Come, let’s fall to; and, gentle girl, eat this:
Here is no drink! Hark, Marcus, what she says;
I can interpret all her martyr’d signs; —

3 D 4
She says, she drinks no other drink but tears,
Brew'd with her sorrows, mesh'd upon her cheeks: 6
Speechless complainer, I will learn thy thought;
In thy dumb action will I be as perfect,
As begging hermits in their holy prayers:
Thou shalt not sigh, nor hold thy stumps to heaven,
Nor wink, nor nod, nor kneel, nor make a sign,
But I, of these, will wrest an alphabet,
And, by still 7 practice, learn to know thy meaning.

Boy. Good grandsire, leave these bitter deep laments:
Make my aunt merry with some pleasing tale.

Marc. Alas, the tender boy, in passion mov'd,
Doth weep to see his grandsire's heaviness.

Tit. Peace, tender sapling! thou art made of tears,
And tears will quickly melt thy life away.

[Marcus strikes the Dish with a Knife.

What dost thou strike at, Marcus, with thy knife?

Marc. At that that I have kill'd, my lord; a fly.

Tit. Out on thee, murderer! thou kill'st my heart;
Mine eyes are cloy'd with view of tyranny:
A deed of death, done on the innocent,
Becomes not Titus' brother: Get thee gone;
I see thou art not for my company.

Marc. Alas, my lord, I have but kill'd a fly.

Tit. But how, if that fly had a father and mother?
How would he hang his slender gilded wings,
And buzz lamenting doings in the air:
Poor harmless fly!

That with his pretty buzzing melody,
Came here to make us merry; and thou hast kill'd him.

Marc. Pardon me, sir; 'twas a black ill-fav'rd fly,
Like to the empress' Moor; therefore I kill'd him.

Tit. O, O, O,
Then pardon me for reprehending thee,
For thou hast done a charitable deed.
Give me thy knife, I will insult on him;
Flattering myself, as if it were the Moor,
Come hither purposely to poison me.

There's for thyself, and that's for Tamora.

Ah, sirrah! 9 —
Yet I do think we are not brought so low,
But that, between us, we can kill a fly,
That comes in likeness of a coal-black Moor.

Marc. Alas, poor man! grief has so wrought on
him,
He takes false shadows for true substances.

Tit. Come, take away. — Lavinia, go with me:
I'll to thy closet; and go read with thee
Sad stories, changed in the times of old.

Como, boy, and go with me; thy sight is young,
And thou shalt read, when mine begins to dazzle.

[Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I. — Before Titus's House.

Enter Titus and Marcus. Then enter young
Lucius, Lavinia running after him.

Boy. Help, grandsire, help! my aunt Lavinia
Follows me every where, I know not why:
Good uncle Marcus, see how swift she comes!
Alas, sweet aunt, I know not what you mean.

Marc. Stand by me, Lucius; do not fear thine aunt.

Tit. She loves thee, boy, too well to do thee harm.

Boy. Ay, when my father was in Rome, she did.

Marc. What means my niece Lavinia by these signs?

Tit. Fear her not, Lucius: — Somewhat doth she mean:
See, Lucius, see, how much she makes of thee:
Somewhither would she have thee go with her.
Ay, boy, Cornelia never with more care
Read to her sons, than she hath read to thee,
Sweet poetry, and Tully's Orator. 8
Canst thou not guess wherefore she plies thee thus?

Boy. My lord, I know not, I, nor can I guess,
Unless some fit or frenzy do possess her:
For I have heard my grandsire say full oft,
Excellency of griefs would make men mad;
And I have read that Hecuba of Troy
Ran mad through sorrow: That made me to fear:
Although, my lord, I know, my noble aunt
Loves me as dear as c'er my mother did,
And would not, but in fury, fright my youth;
Which made me down to throw my books, and fly;
Causeless, perhaps; But pardon me, sweet aunt:
And, madam, if my uncle Marcus go,
I will most willingly attend your ladyship.

6 An allusion to brewing. 7 Constant or continual practice.
8 Tully's Treatise on Eloquence, entitled Orator.

Marc. Lucius, I will.

[Lavinia turns over the Books which Lucius has let fall.

Tit. How now, Lavinia? — Marcus, what means
this?

Some book there is that she desires to see: —
Which is it, girl, of these? — Open them, boy. —
But thou art deeper read, and better skill'd;
Come, and take choice of all my library,
And so beguile thy sorrow, till the heavens
Reveal the vile contriver of this deed. —
Why lifts she up her arms in sequence thus?
Marc. I think, she means, that there was more than one
Confederate in the fact: — Ay, more there was: —
Or else to heaven she leaves them for revenge.

Tit. Lucius, what book is that she tosseth so?

Boy. Grandsire, 'tis Ovid's Metamorphosis;
My mother gave 't me.

Marc. For love of her that's gone,
Perhaps she cull'd it from among the rest.

Tit. Soft! see, how busily she turns the leaves!

Help her: —
What would she find; — Lavinia, shall I read?
This is the tragic tale of Philomel,
And treats of Tereus' treason, and his rape;
And rape, I fear, was root of thine annoy.

Marc. See, brother, see; note, how she quotes the leaves.

Tit. Lavinia, worth thou thus surpris'd, sweet girl,
Ravish'd and wrong'd, as Philomela was,
Forc'd in the ruthless, vast, and gloomy woods? —
See, see! —

Ay, such a place there is, where we did hunt,
(O, had we never, never, hunted there!)
Scene I. Titus Andronicus.

TITUS. Although for the gods delight in tragedies! What's Saturnine, as Tarquin erst, that left the camp to sin in Lucrece' bed? MARC. Sit down, sweet niece; — brother, sit down by me. — Apollo, Pallas, Jove, or Mercury, Inspire me, that I may this treason find! — My lord, look here; — Look here, Lavinia: This sandy plot is plain; guide, if thou canst, this after me, when I have writ my name Without the help of any hand at all. [He writes his Name with his Staff, and guides it with his Feet and Mouth. CURS'd be that heart, that force'd us to this shift! — Write thou, good niece; and here display, at last, What Heaven will have discover'd for revenge; Heaven guide thy pen to print thy sorrows plain, That we may know the traitors, and the truth! [She takes the Staff in her Mouth, and guides it with her Stumps, and writes. TIT. O, do you read, my lord, what she hath writ? STUPRUM — CHIRON — DEMETRIUS. MARC. What, what! — the lustful sons of Tamara Performers of this heinous, bloody deed? TIT. MAGNE DOMINATOR POLI, TAM LENTUS AUDIT SCEDERA? TAM LENTUS VIDES? MARC. O, calm thee, gentle lord! although I am Curs'd be that heart, that force'd us to this shift! — Write thou, good niece; and here display, at last, What Heaven will have discover'd for revenge; Heaven guide thy pen to print thy sorrows plain, That we may know the traitors, and the truth! [She takes the Staff in her Mouth, and guides it with her Stumps, and writes. TIT. Tis sure enough, an you knew how, But if you hurt these bear-whelps, then beware: The dam will wake; and, if she wind you once, She's with the lion deeply still in league, And, when he sleeps, will she do what she list. You're a young huntsman, Marcus; let it alone; And, come, I will go get a leaf of brass, And with a gad of steel will write these words, And lay it by: the angry northern wind Will blow these sands, like Sibyl's leaves, abroad, And where's your lesson then? — Boy, what say you? BOY. I say, my lord, that if I were a man, Their mother's bed-chamber should not be safe For these bad bondmen to the yoke of Rome. MARC. Ay, that's my boy! thy father hath full oft For this ungrateful country done the like. BOY. And uncle, so will I, an if I live. TIT. Come, go with me into my armoury; Lucius, I'll fit thee; and withal, my boy Shall carry from me to the empress' sons Presents, that I intend to send them both: Come, come; thou'lt do thy message, wilt thou not? BOY. Ay, with my dagger in their bosoms, grand- sire. [Flourish.

Tit. No, boy, not so; I'll teach thee another course.

Lavinia, come: — Marcus, look to my house; Lucius and I'll go brave it at the court; Ay, marry, will we, sir: and we'll be waited on. [Exit Titus, Lavinia, and Boy. MARC. O heavens, can you hear a good man groan, And not relent, or not compassion him? Marcus, attend him in his ecstasy; That hath more scars of sorrow in his heart, Than foe-men's marks upon his batter'd shield: But yet so just, that he will not revenge: Revenge the heavens for old Andronicus! [Exit.

Scene II. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Aaron, Chiron, and Demetrius, at one Door; at another Door, young Lucius, and an Attendant, with a Bundle of Weapons, and Verses writ upon them. CHI. Demetrius, here's the son of Lucius; He hath some message to deliver to us. AAR. Ay, some mad message from his mad grand-father. BOY. My lords, with all the humbleness I may, I greet your honours from Andronicus; — And pray the Roman gods, confound you both. [Aside. DEM. Gramercy, lovely Lucius: What's the news? BOY. That you are both decipher'd, that's the news, For villains mark'd with rape. [Aside.] May it please you, My grandsire, well advis'd, hath sent by me The goodliest weapons of his armoury, To gratify your honourable youth, The hope of Rome; for so he bade me say; And so I do, and with his gifts present Your lordships, that whenever you have need, You may be armed and appointed well: And so I leave you both, [Aside.] like bloody villains. [Exeunt Boy and Attendant. DEM. What's here? A scroll; and written round about? Let's see, INTEGER VITER, SCCELERISQUE PURUS, NON EGIT MAURI JACULIS, NEC AREC. CHI. O, tis a verse in Horace; I know it well: I read it in the grammar long ago. AAR. Ay, just! — a verse in Horace: — right, you have it. Now, what a thing it is to be an ass! Here's no sound jest! the old man hath found their guilt; And sends the weapons wrapp'd about with lines, That wound, beyond their feeling, to the quick. But were our witty empress well a-foot, She would applaud Andronicus' conceit. But let her rest in her unrest awhile. — And now, young lords, wasn't not a happy star Led us to Rome, strangers, and more than so, Captives, to be advanced to this height? It did me good, before the palace gate To brave the tribune in his brother's hearing. DEM. But me more good, to see so great a lord Basely insinuate, and send us gifts. AAR. Had he not reason, lord Demetrius? Did you not use his daughter very friendly? [Flourish.
Dem. Why doth the emperor’s trumpets flourish thus?
Chi. Belike for joy the emperor hath a son.
Dem. Soft; who comes here?

Enter a Nurse, with a Black-a-moor Child in her Arms.

Nur. Good morrow, lords:
O, tell me, did you see Aaron the Moor?
Aar. Well, more, or less, or ne’er a whit at all,
Here Aaron is: and what with Aaron now?
Nur. O, gentle Aaron, we are all undone!
Now help, or woe betide thee evermore!
Aar. Why, what a caterwauling dost thou keep?
What dost thou wrap and fumble in thine arms?
Nur. O, that which I would hide from heaven’s eye,
Our empress’ shame, and stately Rome’s disgrace;—
She is deliver’d, lords, she is deliver’d.
Aar. To whom?
Nur. I mean, she’s brought to bed.
Aar. Well, Jove
Give her good rest! What hath she got?
Aar. Why then she’s the devil’s dam; a joyful issue.
Nur. A joyless, dismal, black, and sorrowful issue:
Here is the babe, as loathsome as a toad
Amongst the fairest breeders of our clime.
The empress sends it thee, thy stamp, thy seal,
And bids thee christen it with thy dagger’s point.
Aar. Out, out, you wretch! is black so base a hue?
Sweet blosse, you are a beauteous blossom, sure.
Dem. Villain, what hast thou done?
Aar. Done! that which thou
Canst not undo.
Chi. Thou hast undone our mother.
Dem. Woe to her chance, accurs’d her loathed choice!
Woe to the offspring of so foul a fiend!
Chi. It shall not live.
Aar. It shall not die.
Nur. Aaron, it must: the mother wills it so.
Aar. What, must it, nurse? then let no man but I,
Do execution on my flesh and blood.
Dem. I’ll broach the tadpole on my rapiers point;
Nurse, give it me; my sword shall soon despatch it.
Aar. Sooner this sword shall plough thy bowels up.

[Takes the Child from the Nurse, and draws.
Stay, murderous villains! will you kill your brother?
Now, by the burning tapers of the sky,
He dies upon my scimitar’s sharp point,
That touches this my first-born son and heir!
I tell you, younglings, not Enceladus,
With all his threat’ning band of Typhon’s brood,
Nor great Alcides, nor the god of war,
Shall seize this prey out of his father’s hands.
What, what, ye sanguine, shallow-hearted boys!
Ye white-lim’d wals! ye ale-house painted signs!
Coal black is better than another hue,
In that it sounds to another hue:
For all the water in the ocean
Can never turn a swan’s black legs to white,
Although she lave them hourly in the flood.
Tell the empress from me, I am of age
To keep mine own; excuse it how she can.

Dem. Wilt thou betray thy noble mistress thus?
Aar. My mistress is my mistress; this, myself;
The vigour and the picture of my youth:

This, before all the world, do I prefer;
This, maugre? all the world, will I keep safe
Or some of you shall smoke for it in Rome.

Dem. Enter the Moor, this our mother for ever shamed.
Chi. Rome will despise her for this foul escape.
Nur. The emperor, in his rage, will doom her death.
Chi. I blush to think upon this ignomy.
Aar. Why, there’s the privilege your beauty bears:
Fye, treacherous hue! that will betray with blushing
The close enacts and counsels of the heart!
Here’s a young lad fram’d of another leer;
Look how the black slave smiles upon the father;
As who should say, Old lad, I am thine own.
He is your brother, lords; sensibly fed
Of that self-blood that first gave life to you;
Although my seal be stamped in his face.
Nur. Aaron, what shall I say unto the empress?
Dem. Advise thee, Aaron, what is to be done,
And we will all subscribe to thy advice;
Save thou the child, so we may all be safe.
Aar. Then sit we down, and let us all consult.
My son and I will have the wind of you:
Keep there: Now talk at pleasure of your safety.

[They sit on the Ground.

Dem. How many women saw this child of his?
Aar. Why so, brave lords! when we all join in league,
I am a lamb: but if you brave the Moor,
The chafield boar, the mountain lioness,
The ocean swells not so as Aaron storms. —
But, say again, how many saw the child?
Nur. Cornelia the midwife, and myself,
And no one else but the deliver’d empress.
Aar. The empress, the midwife, and yourself:
Two may keep counsel when the third’s away:
Go to the empress; tell her, this I said: —

[Stabbing her.
Weke, Weke! — so cries a pig prepar’d to the spit.
Dem. What mean’st thou, Aaron! Wherefore didst thou this?
Aar. O, lord, sir, ’tis a deed of policy:
Shall she live to betray this guilt of ours?
A long-tongu’d babbling gossip? no, lords, no.
And now be it known to all my present.
Not, one, Malvoleus lives, my countryman;
His wife but yesternight was brought to bed;
His child is like to her, fair as you are:
Go pack! with him, and give the mother gold,
And tell them both the circumstance of all;
And how this their child shall be advance’d
And be received for the emperor’s heir,
And substituted in the place of mine,
To calm this tempest whirling in the court;
And let the emperor dandle him for his own.
Hark ye, lords, ye see, that I have given her physick,

[Pointing to the Nurse.
And you must needs bestow her funeral;
The finest dress, and you and your relations;
This done, see that you take no longer days,
But send the midwife presently to me.
The midwife, and the nurse well made away,
Then let the ladies tattle what they please.
Chi. Aaron, I see thou wilt not trust the air
With secrets.
Dem. For this care of Tamora,
Herself, and hers, are highly bound to thee.

[Exeunt Demetrius and Chiron bearing off the Nurse.

1 In spite of.
2 Ignomy.
3 Complexion.
4 Contrive, bargain with.
Scene III.

To send down justice for to wreak our wrongs: Come, to this gear. You are a good archer, Marcus. [He gives them the Arrows.]

Ad Jovem, that's for you — Hear, ad Apollinem: Ad Martorem, that's for myself: —

Here, boy, to Pallas: — Here, to Mercury: To Saturn, Caius, not to Saturnine. —

You were as good to shoot against the wind. —

To it, boy. Marcus, loose when I bid: O' my word I have written to effect; There's not a god left unsolicited.

Marc. Kinsmen, shoot all your shafts into the court; We will afflict the emperor in his pride.

Tit. Now, masters, draw. [They shoot.] O, well said, Lucius! Marc. My lord, I aim a mile beyond the moon; Your letter is with Jupiter by this.

Tit. Why, there it goes: Jove give your lordship joy.

Enter a Clown, with a Basket and two Pigeons.

News, news from heaven! Marcus, the post is come.

Sirrah, what tidings? have you any letters? Shall I have justice? what says Jupiter?

Clo. Ho! the gibbon-maker! he says, that he hath taken them down again, for the man must not be hanged till the next week.

Tit. Why, villain, art not thou the carrier?

Clo. Ay, of my pigeons, sir; nothing else.

Tit. Why didst thou not come from heaven?

Clo. From heaven? alas, sir, I never came there. Why, I am going with my pigeons to the tribunal plebs, to take up a matter of brawn betwixt my uncle and one of the emerald men.

Marc. Why, sir, that is as fit as can be, to serve for your oration; and let him deliver the pigeons to the emperor from you.

Tit. Tell me, can you deliver an oration to the emperor with a grace?

Clo. Nay, truly, sir, I could never say grace in all my life.

Tit. Sirrah, come hither, make no more ado, But give your pigeons to the emperor: By me thou shalt have justice at his hands. Hold, hold; — mean while, here's money for thy charges.

Give me a pen and ink. —

Sirrah, can you with a grace deliver a supplication?

Clo. Ay, sir.

Tit. Then here is a supplication for you. And when you come to him, at the first approach, you must kneel; then kiss his foot; then deliver up your pigeons; and then look for your reward, I'll be at hand, sir: see you do it bravely.

Clo. I warrant you, sir; let me alone.

Tit. Sirrah, hast thou a knife? Come, let me see it.

Here, Marcus, fold it in the oration; For thou hast made it like an humble suppliant: And when thou hast given it to the emperor, Knock at my door, and tell me what he says.

Clo. Sir; I will.

Tit. Come, Marcus, let's go: — Publius, follow me. [Exeunt.
SCENE IV. — Before the Palace.

Enter SATURNINUS, TAMORA, CHIRON, DEMETRIUS, Lords, and others; SATURNINUS with the Arrows in his Hand, that Titus shot.

Sat. Why, lords, what wrongs are these? Was ever seen
An emperor of Rome thus overcome,
Troubled, confronted thus: and, for the extent
Of egal justice, us'd in such contempt?
My lords, you know, as do the mighty gods,
However these disturbers of our peace
But in the people's ears, there nought hath pass'd,
But even with law, against the willful sons
Of old Andronicus. And what an if
His sorrows hath so o'erwhelm'd his wits,
Shall we be thus afflicted in his wreaks,
His fits, his frenzy, and his bitterness?
And now he writes to heaven for his redress:
See, here's to Jove, and this to Mercury;
This to Apollo; this to the god of war:
Sweet scrolls to fly about the streets of Rome!
What's this, but libelling against the senate,
And blazoning our injustice every where?
A goodly humour, is it not, my lords?
As who would say, in Rome no justice were.
But, if I live, his feigned ecstasies
Shall be no shelter to these outrages:
But he and his shall know, that justice lives
In Saturninus' health; whom, if she sleep,
He'll so awake, as she in fury shall
Cut off the proudest conspirator that lives.
Tam. My gracious lord, my lovely Saturnine,
Lord of my life, commander of my thoughts,
Calm thee, and bear the faults of Titus' age,
The effects of sorrow for his valiant sons,
Whose loss hath pierc'd him deep, and scar'd his heart;
And rather comfort his distressed plight,
Than prosecute the meanest, or the best,
For these contempts. Why, thus it shall become High-witted Tamora to glose 9 with all:
[Aside.
But, Titus, I have touch'd thee to the quick,
Thy life-blood out: If Aaron now be wise,
Then all is safe, the anchor's in the port. —

Enter Clown.

How now, good fellow? wouldst thou speak with us?
Clo. Yes, forsooth, an your mistership be imperial.
Tam. Empress I am, but yonder sits the emperor.
Clo. 'Tis he. I have brought you a letter, and a couple of pigeons here.

[Saturninus reads the Letter.

Sat. Go, take him away, and hang him presently.
Clo. How much money must I have?
Tam. Come, sirrah, you must be hang'd.
Clo. Hang'd! then I have brought up a neck to a fair end.

[Exit, guarded.

Sat. Desperate and intolerable wrongs!
Shall I endure this monstrous villainy?
I know from whence this same device proceeds;
May this be borne? — as if his traitorous sons,
That died by law for murder of our brother,
Have by my means been butcher'd wrongfully. —
Go, drag the villain hither by the hair;

Nor age, nor honour, shall shape privilege: —
For this proud mock, I'll be thy slaughter-man;
Sly frantick wretch, that holp'st to make me great,
In hope thyself should govern Rome and me.

Enter EMILUS.

What news with thee, EMILUS?
Emil. Arm, arm, my lords; Rome never had more cause!
The Goths have gather'd head; and with a power
Of high resolved men, bent to the spoil,
They hither march amain, under conduct
Of Lucius, son to old Andronicus;
Who threats, in course of this revenge, to do
As much as ever Coriolanus did.

Sat. Is warlike Lucius general of the Goths?

These tidings nip me; and I hang the head
As flowers with frost, or grass beat down with storms.
Ay, now begin our sorrows to approach:
'Tis he the common people love so much;
Myself hath often over-heard them say,
(When I have walked like a private man,)
That Lucius' banishment was wrongfully,
And they have wish'd that Lucius were their emperor.
Tam. Why should you fear? is not your city strong?

Sat. Ay, but the citizens favour Lucius;
And will revolt from me, to succour him.
Tam. King, be thy thoughts imperious? like thy name.
Is the sun dimm'd, that gnats do fly in it?
The eagle suffers little birds to sing,
And is not careful what they mean thereby;
Knowing that with the shadow of his wings,
He can at pleasure stint 8 their melody:
Even so mayst thou the giddy men of Rome.
Then cheer thy spirit: for know, thou emperor,
I will enchant the old Andronicus,
With words more sweet, and yet more dangerous,
Than baits to fish, or honey sticks to sheep;
When as the one is wounded with the bait,
The other rotted with delicious feed.

Sat. But he will not entertain his son for us.
Tam. If Tamora entertain him, then he will:
For I can smooth, and fill his aged ear
With golden promises; that were his heart
Almost impregnable, his old ears deaf.
Yet should both ear and heart obey my tongue —
Go thou before, be our ambassador. [To EMILUS.
Say, that the emperor requests a parley
Of warlike Lucius, and appoint the meeting,
Even at his father's house, the old Andronicus.

Sat. EMILUS, do this message honourably:
And if he stand on hostage for his safety,
Bid him demand what pledge will please him best.
Emil. Your bidding shall I do effectually.

Tam. Now will I to that old Andronicus;
And temper him with all the art I have,
To pluck proud Lucius from the warlike Goths.
And now, sweet emperor, be bithie again,
And bury all thy fear in my devices.

Sat. Then go successfully, and plead to him.

[Exeunt.

7 Imperial. 8 Stop.
ACT V.

SCENE I. — Plains near Rome.

Enter Lucius, and Goths, with Drum and Colours.

Luc. Approved warriors, and my faithful friends, I have received letters from great Rome, Which signify what hate they hear their emperor, And bow desirous of their sight they are. Therefore, great lords, be, as your titles witness, Imperious, and impatient of your wrongs; And, wherein Rome hath done you any scath 2, Let him make treble satisfaction.

1 Goth. Brave slip, sprung from the great Andronicus, Whose name was once our terror, now our comfort; Whose high exploits, and honourable deeds, Ingrateful Rome requites with foul contempt, Be bold in us; we'll follow where thou lead'st,—

Like stinging bees in hottest summer's day, Led by their master to the flower'd fields,—

And be aveng'd on cursed Tamora. Goths. And, as he said, so say we all with him.

Luc. I humbly thank him, and I thank you all. But who comes here, led by a lusty Goth?

Enter a Goth, leading Aaron, with his Child in his Arms.

2 Goth. Renowned Lucius, from our troops I stray'd,

To gaze upon a ruinous monastery;

And as I earnestly did fix mine eye

Upon the wasted building, suddenly

I heard a child cry underneath a wall;

I made unto the noise; when soon I heard

The crying babe controll'd with this discourse:

Peace, tawny slave; half me, and half thy dam!

Did not thy hue bewray whose brut thou art,

Had nature lent thee but thy mother's look,

Villain thou might'st have been an emperor:

Peace, villain, peace! — even thus he rates the babe,—

For I must bear thee to a trusty Goth;

Who, when he knows thou art the empress' babe,

Will hold thee dearly for thy mother's sake.

With this, my weapon drawn, I rush'd upon him,

Surpriz'd him suddenly; and brought him hither,

To use as you think needful of the man.

Luc. O worthy Goth! this is the incarnate devil

That robb'd Andronicus of his good hand:

This is the pearl that pleas'd thy empress' eye!

Say, wall-cy'ld slave, whither wouldst thou convey

This growing image of thy fiend-like face?

Why dost not speak? What! deaf? No; not a word?

A halter, soldiers; hang him on this tree,

And by his side his fruit of bastardy.

Aar. Touch not the boy, he is of royal blood.

Luc. Too like the sire for ever being good. —

First, hang the child, that he may see it sprawl;

A sight to vex the father's soul withal.

Get me a ladder.

[A Ladder brought, which Aaron is obliged to ascend.

Aar. Lucius, save the child;

And bear it from me to the empress.

If thou do this, I'll show thee wond'rous things,

That highly may advantage thee to hear:

If thou wilt not, befall what may befal,

I'll speak no more; But vengeance say you all!

Luc. Say on; and, if it please me which thou speak'st,

Thy child shall live, and I will see it nourish'd.

Aar. An if it please thee? why, assure thee, Lucius,

'Twill vex thy soul to hear what I shall speak;

For I must talk of murders, rapes, and massacres,

Acts of black night, abominable deeds,

Complots of mischief, treason; villainies

Ruthful to hear, yet piteously perform'd:

And this shall all be buried by my death,

Unless thou swear to me, my child shall live.

Luc. Tell on thy mind; I say, thy child shall live.

Aar. Swear, that he shall, and then I will begin.

Luc. Who should I swear by? thou believest no god;

That granted, how canst thou believe an oath?

Aar. What if I do not? as, indeed, I do not:

Yet, — for I know thou art religious,

And hast a thing within thee, called conscience;

With twenty idle tricks and ceremonies,

Which I have seen the careful to observe,—

Therefore I urge thy oath; — and thou shalt vow

By that same god, what god soe'er it be,

That thou ador'st and hast in reverence, —

To save my boy, to nourish, and bring him up;

Or else I will discover nought to thee.

Luc. Even by my god, I swear to thee, I will.

Aar. First, know thou, I'm his father by the empress.

Luc. O most insatiate, luxurious woman!

Aar. Tut, Lucius! this was but a deed of charity,

To that which thou shalt hear of me anon,

'Twas her two sons that murder'd Bassianus:

They cut thy sister's tongue, and ravish'd her,

And cut her hands; and trimm'd her as thou saw'st.

Luc. O, détectable villain! call'st thou that trimm'd?

Aar. Why, she was wash'd, and cut, and trimm'd; and 'twas

Trim sport for them that had the doing of it.

Luc. O, barbarous, beastly villains, like thyself!

Aar. Indeed, I was their tutor to instruct them;

That wanton spirit bad they from their mother,

As sure a card as ever won the set:

That bloody mind, I think, they learn'd of me,

As true a dog as ever fought at head. —

Well, let my deeds be witness of my worth.

I train'd thy brethren to that gulleful hole,

Where the dead corpse of Bassianus lay:

I wrote the letter that thy father found,

And hid the gold within the letter mention'd,

Confederate with the queen, and her two sons;

And what not done, that thou hast cause to rue,

Wherein I had no stroke of mischief in it?

I play'd the cheater for thy father's hand;

And when I had it, drew myself apart,

And almost broke my heart with extreme laughter.

I pry'd me through the crevice of a wall,

When, for his hand, he had his two sons' heads;
Behold his tears, and laugh'd so heartily,
That both mine eyes were rainy like to his ;
And when I told the emperor of this sport,
She swounded almost at my pleasing tale,
And, for my tidings, gave me twenty kisses.

Goth. What ! canst thou say all this, and never blush?

Aar. Ay, like a black dog, as the saying is.

Luc. Art thou not sorry for these heinous deeds?

Aar. Ay, that I had not done a thousand more.

Even now I curse the day, (and yet, I think,
Few come within the compass of my curse,)
Wherein I did not some notorious ill;
As kill a man, or else devise his death;
Accuse some innocent, and forswear myself:
Set deadly enmity between two friends;
Make poor men's cattle break their necks;
Set fire on barns and hay-stacks in the night,
And bid the owners quench them with their tears.

Oft have I digg'd up dead men from their graves,
And set them upright at their dear friends' doors,
Even when their sorrows almost were forgot;
And on their skins, as on the bark of trees,
Have with my knife carved in Roman letters,
Let not your sorrow die, though I am dead.

Tut, I have done a thousand dreadful things,
As willingly as one would kill a fly;
And nothing grieves me heartily indeed,
But that I cannot do ten thousand more.

Luc. Bring down the devil; for he must not die
So sweet a death, as hanging presently.

Aar. If there be devils, ' would I were a devil,
But to torment you with my bitter tongue!

Luc. Sirs, stop his mouth, and let him speak no more.

Enter a Goth.

Goth. My lord, there is a messenger from Rome,
Desires to be admitted to your presence,

Luc. Let him come near. —

Enter Æmilius.

Welcome, Æmilius, what's the news from Rome?
Æmil. Lord Lucius, and you princes of the Goths,
The Roman emperor greets you all by me:
And, for he understands you are in arms,
He craves a parley at your father's house,
Willing you to demand your hostages,
And they shall be immediately deliver'd.

1 Goth. What says our general?

Luc. Æmilius, let the emperor give his pledges
Unto my father and my uncle Marcus,
And we will come. — March away. [Exeunt.

Enter Tamora, Chiron, and Demetrius, disguised.

Tam. Thus in this strange and sad habitation,
I will encounter with Andronicus;
And say, I am Revenge, sent from below,
To join with him, and right his heinous wrongs.
Knock at his study, where, they say, he keeps,
To ruminate strange plots of dire revenge;
Tell him, Revenge is come to join with him,
And work confusion on his enemies. [They knock.

Enter Titus above.

Tit. Who doth molest my contemplation?
Is it your trick, to make me ope the door;
I'll find some cunning practice out of hand,
To scatter and disperse the giddy Goths,
Or at the least, make them his enemies.
See, here he comes, and I must ply my theme.

Enter Titus.

Tit. Long have I been forlorn, and all for thee:
Welcome, dread fury, to my woful house; —
Rapine, and Murder, you are welcome too:
How like the empress and her sons you are!
Well are you fitted, had you but a Moor: —
Could not all hell afford you such a devil: —
For, well I wit, the empress never wags,
But in her company there is a Moor;
And would you represent our queen aright,
It was convenient you had such a devil: —
But welcome, as you are. What shall we do?
Tam. What wouldst thou have us do, Andronicus?
Dem. Show me a murderer, I'll deal with him.
Chi. Show me a villain, that hath done a rape,
And I am sent to be reveng'd on him.

Tam. Show me a thousand, that have done thee wrong,
And I will be revenged on them all.

Tit. Look round about the wicked streets of Rome;
And when thou find'st a man that's like thyself,
Good Murder, stab him; he's a murderer. —
Go thou with him; and when it is thy hap,
To find another that is like to thee,
Good Rapine, stab him; he is a ravisher. —
Go thou with them; and in the emperor's court
There is a queen, attended by a Moor;
Well mayst thou know her by thy own proportion,
For up and down she doth resemble thee;
I pray thee, do on them some violent death,
They have been violent to me and mine.

Tam. Well hast thou lesson'd us; this shall we do.
But would it please thee, good Andronicus,
To send for Lucius, thy thrice valiant son,
Who leads towards Rome a band of warlike Goths,
And bid him come and banquet at thy house:
When he is here, even at thy solemn feast,
I will bring in the empress and her sons,
The emperor himself, and all thy foes;
And at thy mercy shall they stoop and kneel,
And on them shalt thou ease thy angry heart.
What says Andronicus to this device?

Tit. Marcus, my brother! — 'tis sad Titus calls.

Enter Marcus.

Go, gentle Marcus, to thy nephew Lucius:
Thou shalt inquire him out among the Goths:
Bid him repair to me, and bring with him
Some of the chiefest princes of the Goths;
Bid him encamp his soldiers where they are:
Tell him, the emperor and the empress too
Feast at my house: and he shall feast with them.
This do thou for my love; and so let him,
As he regards his aged father's life.

Marc. This will I do, and soon return again. [Exit.

Tam. Now will I hence about thy business,
And take my ministers along with me.

Tit. Nay, nay, let Rape and Murder stay with me;
Or else I'll call my brother back again,
And cleave to no revenge but Lucius.

Tam. [To her Sons.] What say you, boys? will you abide with him,
Whiles I go tell my lord the emperor,

How I have govern'd our determin'd jest?
Yield to his humour, smooth and speak him fair,
And tarry with him, till I come again.

Tit. I know them all, though they suppose me mad;
And will o'er-reach them in their own devices

Dem. Madam, depart at pleasure, leave us here.

Tam. Farewell, Andronicus: Revenge now goes
To lay a complot to betray thy foes.

Chi. Tell us, old man, how shall we be employ'd?

Tit. Tut, I have work enough for you to do. —
Publius, come hither, Caius, and Valentine!

Enter Publius, and others.

Pub. What's your will?

Tit. Know you these two?

Pub. 'Tis the empress' sons, I take them, Chiron and Demetrius.

Tit. Fye, Publius, fye! thou art too much deceiv'd;
The one is Murder, Rape is the other's name;
And therefore bind them, gentle Publius;
Caius and Valentine, lay hands on them:
Oft have you heard me wish for such an hour,
And now I find it; therefore bind them sure;
And stop their mouths, if they begin to cry.

[Tit. Enter Titus. — Publius, &c. lay hold on Chiron and Demetrius.

Chi. Villains, forbear: we are the empress' sons.
Pub. And therefore do we what we are commanded. —
Stop close their mouths, let them not speake a word:
Is he sure bound? look, that you bind them fast.

Re-enter Titus Andronicus, with Lavinia; she bears a Bason, and he a Knife.

Tit. Come, come, Lavinia; look, thy foes are bound; —
Sirs, stop their mouths, let them not speak to me;
But let them hear what fearful words I utter. —
O villains, Chiron and Demetrius!
Here stands the spring whom you have stain'd with mud;
This goodly summer with your winter mix'd
You kill'd her husband; and, for that vile fault,
Two of her brothers were condemn'd to death:
My hand cut off, and made a merry jest:
Both her sweet hands, her tongue, and that, more
dear
Than hands or tongue, her spotless chastity,
Inhuman traitors, you constrain'd and forc'd,
What would you say, if I should let you speak?
Villains, for shame you could not beg for grace.
Hark, wretches, how I mean to martyr you.
This one hand yet is left to cut your throats;
Whilst that Lavinia 'twixt her stumps doth hold
The bason, that receives your guilty blood.
You know, your mother means to feast with me,
And calls herself; Revenge, and thinks me mad,—
Hark, villains; I will grind your bones to dust,
And with your blood and it, I'll make a paste;
And of the paste a coff'n I will rear,
And make two pasties of your shameful heads;
And bid that strumpets, your unhallow'd dam,
Like to the earth, swallow her own increase.
This is the feast that I have bid her to,
And this the banquet she shall surfeit on;
For worse than Philomel you us'd my daughter,
And worse than Progne I will be reveng'd:
And now prepare your throats, — Lavinia, come,
[He cuts their throats.
Receive the blood: and, when that they are dead,
Let me go grind their bones to powder small,
And with this hateful liquor temper it;
And in that paste let their vile heads be bak'd.
Come, come, be every one officious
To make this banquet; which I wish may prove
More stern and bloody than the Centaurs' feast.
So, now bring them in, for I will play the cook,
And see them ready 'gainst their mother comes.
[Exeunt, bearing the dead Bodies.

SCENE III. — A Pavillion, with Tables, &c.

Enter Lucius, Marcus, and Goths, with Aaron, Prisoner.

Luc. Uncle Marcus, since 'tis my father's mind,
That I repair to Rome, I am content.
1 Goth. And ours, with thine, befall what fortune will.

Luc. Good uncle, take you in this barbarous Moor,
This ravenous tiger, this accursed devil;
Let him receive no sustenance, fetter him,
Till he brought unto the empress' face,
For testimony of her foul proceedings:
And see the ambush of our friends be strong:
I fear, the emperor means no good to us.

Aar. Some devil whisper curses in mine ear,
And prompt me, that my tongue may utter forth
The venomous malice of my swelling heart!

Luc. Away, inhuman dog, unhallow'd slave! —
Sirs, help our uncle to convey him in.
[Exeunt Goths with Aaron. Flourish.

The trumpets show the emperor is at hand.

Enter Saturninus and Tamora, with Tribunes,
Senators, and others.

Sat. What, hath the firmament more suns than one?

Lnc. What boots it 3 thee, to call thyself a sun?
Marc. Rome's emperor, and nephew, break the parle;
These quarrels must be quietly debated.
The feast is ready which the careful Titus,
Hath ordain'd to an honourable end,
For peace, for love, for league, and good to Rome:
Please you, therefore, draw nigh, and take your places.

Sat. Marcus, we will.
[Hautboys sound. The Company sit down at Table.

Enter Titus dressed like a Cook, Lavinia, veiled,
Young Lucius, and others. Titus places the Dishes on the Table.

Tit. Welcome, my gracious lord; welcome, dread queen.
Welcome, ye warlike Goths; welcome, Lucius;
And welcome all: although the cheer be poor,
'Twill fill your stomachs; please you eat of it.

Sat. Why art thou thus attire'd, Andronicus?
Tit. Because I would be sure to have all well,
To entertain your highness, and your empress.

3 Of what advantage is it?

Tam. We are beholden to you, good Andronicus.
Tit. An if your highness knew my heart, you were.

My lord the emperor, resolve me this;
Was it well done of rash Virginius,
To slay his daughter with his own right hand,
Because she was enforc'd, stain'd, and deflour'd?

Sat. It was, Andronicus.
Tit. Your reason, mighty lord!
Sat. Because the girl should not survive her shame.

And by her presence still renew his sorrows.
Tit. A reason mighty, strong, and effectual:
A pattern, precedent, and lively warrant,
For me, most wretched, to perform the like: —

Die, die, Lavinia, and thy shame with thee;
[He kills Lavinia.

And, with thy shame, thy father's sorrow die!
Sat. What hast thou done, unnatural, and unkind?
Tit. Kill'd her, for whom my tears have made me blind.

I am as woful as Virginius was:
And have a thousand times more cause than he
To do this outrage; — and it is now done.

Sat. What, was she ravish'd? tell, who did the deed,

Tit. Will't please you eat? will't please your highness feed?

Tam. Why hast thou slain thine only daughter thus?

Tit. Not I; 'twas Chiron and Demetrius:
They ravish'd her, and cut away her tongue,
And they, 'twas they, that did her all this wrong.

Sat. Go, fetch them hither to us presently.

Tit. Why, there they are both, baked in that pye;
Whereof their mother daintily had fed,
Eating the flesh that she herself had bred
'Tis true, 'tis true; witness my knife's sharp point.

[ Killing Tamora.

Sat. Die, frantick wretch, for this accursed deed.

[ Killing Titus.

Luc. Can the son's eye behold his father bleed?
There's need for meed, death for a deadly deed.

[ Kills Saturninus. A great Tamul! The People in confusion disperse.
Marcus, Lucius, and their Parisians, ascend the Steps before Titus's House.

Marc. You sad-fac'd men, people and sons of Rome,

By uproar sever'd, like a flight of fowl
Scatter'd by winds and high tempestuous gusts,
O, let me teach you how to knit again
This scatter'd corn into one mutual sheaf,
These broken limbs again into one body.

Sen. Lest Rome herself be bane unto herself;
And she, whom mighty kingdoms court'sy to,
Like a forlorn and desperate cast-away,
Do shameful execution on herself.
But if my frosty signs and chaps of age,
Grave witnesses of true experience,
Cannot induce you to attend my words,—
Speak, Rome's dear friend; [To Lucius.] as erst our ancestor,
When with his solemn tongue he did discourse,
To love-sick Dido's sad attending ear,
The story of that baleful burning night,
When subtle Greeks surpriz'd King Priam's Troy;
Tell us what Sinon hath bewitch'd our ears,
Or who hath brought the fatal engine in,
That gives our Troy, our Rome, the civil wound.
Scene III.

Titus Andronicus.

Luc. Thanks, gentle Romans; May I govern so,
To heal Rome’s harms, and wipe away her woe!
But, gentle people, give me aim awhile, —
For nature puts me to a heavy task; —
Stand all aloof: — but, uncle, draw you near,
To shed obsequious tears upon this trunk:
O take this warm kiss on thy pale cold lips.

[KSses Titus.

These sorrowful drops upon thy blood-stain’d face,
The last true duties of thy noble son;
Marc. Tear for tear, and loving kiss for kiss,
Thy brother Marcus tenders on thy lips: —
O, were the sum of these that I should pay,
Countless and infinite, yet would I pay them.

Luc. Come hither, boy; come, come, and learn of us
To melt in showers: Thy grandsire lov’d thee well;
Many a time he danc’d thee on his knee,
Sung thee asleep, his loving breast thy pillow;
Many a matter hath he told to thee,
Meet, and agreeing with thine infancy;
In that respect then, like a loving child,
Shed yet some small drops from thy tender spring,
Because kind nature doth require it so:
Friends should associate friends in grief and woe:
Bid him farewell; commit him to the grave;
Do him that kindness, and take leave of him.
Boy. O grandsire, grandsire! even with all my heart
Would I were dead so you did live again! —
Good heaven, I cannot speak to him for weeping;
My tears will choke me, if I ope my mouth.

Enter Attendans, with Aaron.

1 Rom. You sad Andronicus, have done with woe;
Give sentence on this execrable wretch,
That hath been breeder of these dire events.

Luc. Set him breast-deep in earth, and famish him.
There let him stand, and rave and cry for food;
If any one relieves or pityes him,
For the offence he dies. This is our doom:
Some stay, to see him fasten’d in the earth.

Aar. O, why should wrath be mute, and fury dumb?
I am no baby, I, that, with base prayers,
I should repent the evils I have done;
Ten thousand, worse than ever yet I did,
Would I perform, if I might have my will;
If one good deed in all my life I did,
I do repent it from my very soul.

Luc. Some loving friends convey the emperor hence,
And give him burial in his father’s grave:
My father, and Lavinia, shall forthwith
Be closed in our household’s monument.
As for that heinous tiger, Tamora,
No funeral rite, nor man in mournful weeds,
No mournful bell shall ring her burial;
But throw her forth to beasts, and birds of prey;
Her life was beast-like, and devoid of pity;
And, being so, shall have like want of pity.
See justice done to Aaron, that vile Moor,
By whom our heavy haps had their beginning;
Then, afterwards, to order well the state;
That like events may ne’er it ruinate.

[Exeunt.
KING LEAR.

PERSONS REPRESENTED.

LEAR, King of Britain.
King of France.
Duke of Burgundy.
Duke of Cornwall.
Duke of Albany.
Earl of Kent.
Earl of Gloster.
Edgar, Son to Gloster.
Edmund, Bastard Son to Gloster.
Cukan, a Courtier.
Old Man, Tenant to Gloster.
Physician.

Fool.
Oswald, Steward to Goneril.
An Officer, employed by Edmund.
Gentleman, Attendant on Cordelia.
A Herald.
Servants to Cornwall.

Goneril, Regan, Cordelia, Daughters to Lear.

Knights attending on the King, Officers, Messengers.
Soldiers, and Attendants.

SCENE, Britain.
Enter Kent, Gloster, and Edmund.

Kent. I thought, the king had more affected the duke of Albany, than Cornwall.

Glo. It did always seem so to us; but now, in the division of the kingdom, it appears not which of the dukes he values most; for equalities are so weigh'd that curiosity 1 in neither can make choice of either's moiety. 2

Kent. Is this your son, my lord?

Glo. His breeding, sir, hath been at my charge: I have so often blush'd to acknowledge him, that now I am brazed to it. Do you smell a fault?

Kent. I cannot wish the fault undone, the issue of it being so proper.

Glo. But I have, sir, a son, by order of law, some year elder than this, who yet is no dearer in my account: — Do you know this noble gentleman, Edmund?

Edm. No, my lord.

Glo. My lord of Kent: remember him hereafter as my honourable friend.

Edm. My services to your lordship.

Kent. I must love you, and sue to know you better.

Edm. Sir, I shall study deserving.

Glo. He hath been out nine years, and away he shall again: — The king is coming.

[Trumpets sound within.

1 Most scrupulous nicety.

2 Part or division.
Dearer than eye-sight, space and liberty;
Beyond what can be valued, rich or rare;
No less than life, with grace, health, beauty, honour;
As much as child e'er lov'd, or father found.
A love that makes breath poor, and speech unable;
Beyond all manner of so much I love you.

Cor. What shall Cordelia do? love and be silent.

Lear. Of all these bounds, even from this line to this,
With shadowy forests and with champneys 3 rich'd,
With rivers, rivers and wide-skirted meads,
We made thee lady: To thine and Albany's issue
Be this perpetual. — What says our second daughter,
Our dearest Regan, wife to Cornwall? Speak.

Reg. I am made of that self metal as my sister,
And prize me at her worth. In my true heart
I find, she names my very deed of love;
Only she comes too short; — that I profess
Myself an enemy to all other joys,
Which the most precious square 4 of sense possesses;
And find, I am alone felicitate:
In your dear height's love,

Cor. And yet not so; since, am sure, my love's
More richer than my tongue.

Lear. To thee, and thine hereditary ever,
Remain this ample third of our fair kingdom:
No less in space, validity 5 , and pleasure,
Than that confirm'd on Goneril. — Now, our joy,
Although the last, not least; to whose young love
The vines of France, and milk of Burgundy,
Strive to be interest'd: what can you say, to draw
A third more opulent than your sisters? Speak.

Cor. Nothing, my lord.

Lear. Nothing?
Cor. Nothing.

Lear. Nothing can come of nothing: speak again.
Cor. Unhappy that I am, I cannot heave
My heart into my mouth: I love your majesty
According to my bond; nor more nor less.

Lear. How, how, Cordelia? mend your speech a little,
Lest it may mar your fortunes.

Cor. Good, my lord,
You have begot me, bred me, lov'd me: I
Return those duties back as are right fit,
Obey you, love you, and most honour you.
Why have my sisters husbands, if they say,
They love you, all? Haply, when I shall wed,
That lord, whose hand must take my plighted, shall Carry
Half my love with him, half my care, and duty:
Sure, I shall never marry like my sisters,
To love my father all.

Lear. But goes this with thy heart?
Cor. Ay, good my lord.

Lear. So young, and so unlettered?
Cor. So young, my lord, and true.

Lear. Let it be so, — Thy truth then be thy dowder:
For, by the sacred radiance of the sun;
The mysteries of Hecate, and the night;
By all the operations of the orbs,
From whom we do exist, and cease to be;
Here I disclaim all my paternal care,
Providence, and property of blood,
And as a stranger to my heart and me
Hold thee, from this for ever. The barbarous Scythian,

3 Open plains. 4 Comprehension. 5 Made happy. 6 Value. 7 Kindred. 8 From this time.

Or he that makes his generation 9 messes
To gorge his appetite, shall to my bosom
Be as well neighbour'd, pitied, and reliev'd,
As thou my sometime daughter.

Kent. Good my liege,

Lear. Peace, Kent!
Come not between the dragon and his wrath:
I lov'd her most, and thought to set my rest
On her kind nursery. — Hence, and avoid my sight!

[To Cordelia.

So be my grave my peace, as here I give
Her father's heart from her! — Call France; — Who stirs?

Call Burgundy. — Cornwall, and Albany,
With my two daughters' dowers digest this third:
Let pride, which she calls plainness, marry her.
I do invest you jointly with my power,
Pre-eminence, and all the large effects
That troop with majesty. — Ourself, by monthly course,
With reservation of an hundred knights,
By you to be sustain'd, shall our abode
Make with you by due turns. Only we still retain
The name, and all the additions 1 to a king;
The sway,
Revenue, execution of the rest,
Beloved sons, be yours: which to confirm,
This coronet part between you. [Giving the Crown.

Lear. The bow is bent and drawn, make from the shaft.

Kent. Let it fall rather, though the fork invade
The region of my heart: be Kent unmanfully,
When Lear is mad. What wouldst thou do, old man?
Think'st thou, that duty shall have dread to speak,
When power to flattery bows? To plainness honour's bound,
When majesty stoops to folly. Reverse thy doom;
And, in thy best consideration, check
This hideous rashness: answer my life my judgment,
Thy youngest daughter does not love thee least;
Nor are those empty-hearted, whose low sound
Reverbs 2 no hollowness.

Lear. Kent, on thy life, no more.
Kent. My life I never held but as a pawn
To wage against thine enemies; nor fear to lose it,
Thy safety being the motive.

Lear. Out of my sight!

Kent. Sir, let me remain
Thy eye.

Lear. Now, by Apollo, —

Kent. Thou swear'st by gods in vain.

Lear. O, vassal, miscreant!

[Loosing his Hand on his Sword.

Lear. Do;
Kill thy physician, and the fee bestow
Upon the foul disease. Revoke thy gift;
Or whilst I can vent clamour from my throat,
I'll tell thee, thou dost evil.

Lear. Hear me, recreant!
On thine allegiance hear me! —
Since thou hast sought to make us break our vow,
KING LEAR.

Act I.

Cor. I yet beseech your majesty, (If for I want that glib and oily art, To speak and purpose not; since what I well intend, I'll do't before I speak,) that you make known It is no vicious blot, murder, or foulness, No unghostly action or dishonour'd step, That hath depriv'd me of your grace and favour: But even for want of that, for which I am richer; A still-soliciting eye, and such a tongue That I am glad I have not, though not to have it, Hath lost me in your liking. Better thou Lear. Hadst not been born, than not to have pleas'd me better.

France. Is it but this? a tardiness in nature, Which often leaves the history unspoke, That it intends to do? — My lord of Burgundy, What say you to the lady? Love is not love, When it is mingled with respects, that stand Aloof from the entire point. Will you have her? She is herself a dowry.

Bur. Royal Lear, Give but that portion which yourself propos'd, And here I take Cordelia by the hand, Duchess of Burgundy.

Lear. Nothing: I have sworn; I am firm. Bur. I am sorry then, you have so lost a father, That you must lose a husband.

Cor. Peace be with Burgundy! Since that respects of fortune are his love, I shall not be his wife.

France. Fairest Cordelia, thou art most rich, being poor;

Most choice, forsaken: and most lov'd, despis'd! Thee and thy virtues here I seize upon:
Be it lawful, I take up what's cast away.
Gods, gods! 'tis strange, that from their cold'st neglect

My love should kindle to inflamm'd respect. — Thy dowressless daughter, king; thrown to my chance, Is queen of us, of ours, and, our fair France: Not all the dukes of Wat'tish Burgundy

Shall buy this unpriz'd precious maid of me. —
Bid them farewell, Cordelia, though unkind: Thou lostest here, a better where to find.

Lear. Thou hast her, France; let her be thine; for we Have no such daughter, nor shall ever see

That face of hers again: — Therefore be gone, Without our grace, our love, our benison. —

Come, noble Burgundy.

[Flourish. Exeunt Lear, Burgundy, Cornwall, Albany, Glositer, and Attendants.

France. Bid farewell to your sisters.

Cor. The jewels of our father, with wash'd eyes Cordelia leaves you; I know you what you are; And, like a sister, am most loath to call
Your faults, as they are nam'd. Use well our father:

To your professed bosoms I commit him: But yet, alas! I stood within his grace, I would prefer him to a better place. So farewell to you both.

Gon. Prescribe not us our duties.

Reg. Let your study
Be, to content your lord; who hath receiv'd you At fortune's alms. You have obedience scanted, And well are worth the want that you have wanted.

* Because.

* Blessing.
Cor. Time shall unfold what plaited cunning hides;
Who cover faults, at last shame them derides.
Well may you prosper!

France. Come, my fair Cordelia.
[Exeunt France and Cordelia.

Gon. Sister, it is not a little I have to say, of what most nearly appertains to us both. I think, our father will hence to-night.

Reg. That's most certain, and with you; next month with us.

Gon. You see how full of changes his age is: the observation we have made of it hath not been little: he always lov'd our sister most; and with what poor judgment he hath now cast her off, appears too grossly.

Reg. 'Tis the infirmity of his age: yet he hath ever but slantly known himself.

Gon. The best and soundest of his time hath been but rash; then must we look to receive from his age, not alone the imperfections of long-engrafted condition; but therewithal, the unruly waywardness that infirm and choleric years bring with them.

Reg. Such unconstant starts are we like to have from him, as this of Kent's banishment.

Gon. There is further compliment of leave-taking between France and him. Pray you, let us hit together: If our father carry authority with such dispositions as he bears, this last surrender of his will but offend us.

Reg. We shall further think of it.

Gon. We must do something, and 'tis the heat.
[Exeunt.

SCENE II. — A Hall in the Earl of Gloster's Castle.

Enter Edmund, with a Letter.

Edm. Thou, nature, art my goddess; to thy law My services are bound: Wherefore should I Stand in the plague of custom; and permit The curiosity of nations to deprive me, For that I am some twelve or fourteen moon-shines Lag of a brother? Why bastard? wherefore base? When my dimensions are as well compact, My mind as generous, and my shape as true, As honest madam's issue? Why brand they us With base? with baseness? bastardly? Well then, Legitimate Edgar, I must have your land: Our father's love is to the bastard Edmund, As to the legitimate: Fine word, — legitimate! Well, my legitimate, if this letter speed, And my invention thrive, Edmund the base Shall top the legitimate. I grow; I prosper: — Now, gods, stand up for bastards!

Enter Gloster.

Glo. Kent banish'd thus! And France in choler parted!
And the king gone to-night! subscribe'd his power! Confir'd to exhibition!
All this done
Upon the gad!

Edm. So please your lordship, none.

Glo. Why so earnestly seek you to put up that letter?

Edm. I know no news, my lord.

Glo. What paper were you reading?

Edm. Nothing, my lord.

Glo. No? What needed then that terrible despatch of it into your pocket? the quality of nothing hath not such need to hide itself. Let's see: Come, if it be nothing, I shall not need spectators.

Edm. I beseech you, sir, pardon me: it is a letter from my brother, that I have not all o'er read; for so much as I have perused, I find it not fit for your over-looking.

Glo. Give me the letter, sir.

Edm. I shall offend, either to detain or give it. The contents, as in part I understand them, are to blame.

Glo. Let's see, let's see.

Edm. I hope, for my brother's justification, he wrote this but as an essay 3 or taste of my virtue.

Glo. [Reads.] This policy, and reverence of age, makes the world bitter to the best of our times; keeps our fortunes from us, till our oldness cannot relish them. I begin to find an idle and fond 4 boudage in the oppression of aged tyranny; who sways, not as it hath power, but as it is suffered. Come to me, that of this I may speak more. If our father would sleep till I waked him, you should enjoy half his revenue for ever, and live the beloved of your brother, Edgar. —

Humph — Conspiracy! — Sleep till I waked him — you should enjoy half his revenue. — My son Edgar! Had he a hand to write this? a heart and brain to breed it in? — When came this to you? Who brought it?

Edm. It was not brought me; my lord, there's the cunning of it: I found it thrown in at the casement of my closet.

Glo. You know the character to be your brother's?

Edm. If the matter were good, my lord, I durst swear it were his; but in respect of that, I would fain think it were not.

Glo. It is his.

Edm. It is his hand, my lord; but, I hope, his heart is not in the contents.

Glo. Hath he never heretofore sounded you in this business?

Edm. Never, my lord: But I have often heard him maintain it to be fit, that, sons at perfect age, and fathers declining, the father should be as ward to the son, and the son manage his revenue.

Glo. O villain, villain! — His very opinion in the letter! — Abhorred villain! Unnatural, detested, brutish villain! worse than brutish! — Go, sirrah, seek him; I'll apprehend him: — Abominable villain! — Where is he?

Edm. I do not well know, my lord. If it shall please you to suspend your indignation against my brother, till you can derive from him better testimony of his intent, you shall run a certain course; where 5, if you violently proceed against him, mistaking his purpose, it would make a great gap in your own honour, and shake in pieces the heart of his obedience. I dare pawn my life for him, that he hath writ this to feel my affection to your honour, and to no other pretense of danger.

Glo. Think you so?

Edm. If your honour judge it meet, I will place you where you shall hear us confer of this, and by an auricular assurance have your satisfaction; and that without any further delay than this very evening.

Glo. He cannot be such a monster.

3 Trial.
4 Weak and foolish.
5 Whereas.
Edm. Nor is not, sure.
Glo. To his father, that so tenderly and entirely loves him. — Heaven and earth! — Edmund, seek him out; wind me into him, I pray you: frame the business after your own wisdom: I would unstate myself, to be in a due resolution.

Edm. I will seek him, sir, presently; convey the business as I shall find means, and acquaint you withal.

Glo. These late eclipses in the sun and moon portend no good to us: Though the wisdom of nature can reason it thus and thus, yet nature finds itself scourged by the sequent effects: love cools, friendship falls off, brothers divide; in cities, mutinies; in countries, discord; in palaces, treason; and the bond cracked between son and father. This villain of mine comes under the prediction; there's son against father: the king falls from bias of nature; there's father against child. We have seen the best of our time: Machinations, hollowness, treachery, and all ruinous disorders, follow us disquietly to our graves! — Find out this villain, Edmund, it shall lose thee nothing; do it carefully: — And the noble and true-hearted Kent banished! his offence, honest! Strange! strange! [Exit Edm.]

Edm. This is the excellent topple of the world! that when we are sick in fortune (often the surfeit of our own behaviour), we make guilty of our disasters, the sun, the moon, and the stars: as if we were villains by necessity; fools, by heavenly compulsion; knaves, thieves, and treachers, by spherical predominance; drunkards, liars, and adulterers, by an enforced obedience of planetary influence; and all that we are evil in, by a divine thrusting on: An admirable evasion of man, to lay his ill disposition to the charge of a star! Edgar —

Enter Edgab. and pat he comes, like the catastrophe of the old comedy: My cue is villainous melancholy, with a sigh like Tom o'Bedlam. — O, these eclipses do portend the best divisions! fa, sol, la, mi, f.

Edg. How now, brother Edmund? What serious contemplation are you in?

Edm. I am thinking, brother, of a prediction I read this other day, what should follow these eclipses.

Edg. Do you busy yourself with that?

Edm. I promise you, the effects he writes of, succeed unhappily; as of unnaturalness between the child and the parent; death, dearth, dissolutions of ancient amities; divisions in state, menaces and maledictions against king and nobles; needless difflences, banishment of friends, dissipation of cohorts; mutal breaches, and I know not what.

Edg. How long have you been a sectary astronomical?

Edm. Come, come; when saw you my father last?

Edg. Why, the night gone by.

Edm. Spake you with him?

Edg. Ay, two hours together.

Edm. Parted you in good terms? Found you no displeasure in him, by word or countenance?

Edg. None at all.

Edm. Behold yourself, wherein you may have offended him: and at my entreaty, forbear his presence, till some little time hath qualified the heat of his displeasure; which at this instant so rageth in him, that with the mischief of your person it would scarcely alay.

Edg. Some villain hath done me wrong.

Edm. That's my fear. I pray you, have a continent forbearance, till the speed of his rage goes slower; and, as I say, retire with me to my lodging, from whence I will fitly bring you to hear my lord speak: Pray you, go; there's my key: — If you do stir abroad, go armed.

Edg. Arm'd, brother?

Edm. Brother, I advise you to the best; go armed; I am no honest man, if there be any good meaning toward you. I have told you what I have seen and heard, but faintly; nothing like the image and horror of it: Pray you, away.

Edg. Shall I hear from you anon?

Edm. I do serve you in this business.

[Exit Edgab.]

A credulous father, and a brother noble, Whose nature is so far from doing harms, That he suspects none; on whose foolish honesty My practices ride easy! — I see the business. — Let me, if not by birth, have lands by wit: All with me's meet, that I can fashion fit. [Exit.

SCENE III. — A Room in the Duke of Albany's Palace.

Enter Goneril and Steward.

Gon. Did my father strike my gentleman for chiding of his fool?

Stew. Ay, madam.

Gon. By day and night! he wrongs me; every hour,
He flashes into one gross crime or other,
That sets us all at odds: I'll not endure it: His knights grow riotous, and himself upbraids us On every trifle: — When he returns from hunting, I will not speak with him; say, I am sick: — If you come slack of former services, You shall do well; the fault of it I'll answer.

Stew. He's coming, madam; I hear him.

[Horns within.

Gon. Put on what weary negligence you please, You and your fellows; I'd have it come to question: If he dislike it, let him to my sister,
Whose mind and mine, I know, in that are one, Not to be over-rul'd. Idle old man, That still would manage those authorities, That he hath given away! — Now, by my life, Old fools are babes again; and must be us'd With checks, as flatterers, — when they are seen abus'd.
Remember what I have said.

Stew. Very well, madam.

Gon. And let his knights have colder looks among you;
What grows of it, no matter; advise your fellows so: I would breed from hence occasions, and I shall,
That I may speak. — I'll write straight to my sister, To hold my very course: — Prepare for dinner.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV. — A Hall in the same.

Enter Kent, disguised.

Kent. If but as well I other accents borrow, That can my speech diffuse, my good intent

SCENE IV.\n
KING LEAR.

May carry through itself to that full issue
For which I râz’d 4 my likeness. — Now, banish’d
Kent.
If thou canst serve where thou dost stand condemn’d,
(So may it come!) thy master, whom thou lov’st,
Shall find thee full of labours.

Horns within. Enter Lear, Knights, and Attendants.

Lear. Let me not stay a jot for dinner: go, get it ready. [Exit an Attendant.] How now, what art thou?

Kent. A man, sir.

Lear. What dost thou profess? What wouldst thou with us?

Kent. I do profess to be no less than I seem; to serve him truly, that will put me in trust; to love him that is honest; to converse with him that is wise, and says little; to fear judgment; to fight, when I cannot choose; and to eat no fish.

Lear. What art thou?

Kent. A very honest-hearted fellow, and as poor as the king.

Lear. If thou be as poor for a subject, as he is for a king, thou art poor enough. What wouldst thou?

Kent. Service.

Lear. Who wouldst thou serve.

Kent. You.

Lear. Dost thou know me, fellow?

Kent. No, sir; but you have that in your countenance, which I would fain call master.

Lear. What’s that?

Kent. Authority.

Lear. What services canst thou do?

Kent. I can keep honest counsel, ride, run, mar a curious tale in telling it, and deliver a plain message bluntly: that which ordinary men are fit for, I am qualified in; and the best of me is diligence.

Lear. How old art thou?

Kent. Not so young, sir, to love a woman for singing; nor so old, to dote on her for any thing: I have years on my back forty-eight.

Lear. Follow me; thou shalt serve me: if I like thee no worse after dinner, I will not part from thee yet. — Dinner, ho, dinner! — Where’s my knife? my fool? Go you, and call my fool hither:

Enter Steward.

You, you, sirrah, where’s my daughter?

Stew. So please you, — [Exit.

Lear. What says the fellow there? Call the cloppoll back. — Where’s my fool, ho? — I think the world’s asleep. — How now, where’s that mongrel?

Knight. He says, my lord, your daughter is not well.

Lear. Why came not the slave back to me, when I call’d him?

Knight. Sir, he answer’d me in the roundest manner, he would not.

Lear. He would not!

Knight. My lord, I know not what the matter is; but, to my judgment, your highness is not entertain’d with that ceremonious afflication as you were wont; there’s a great abatement of kindness appears, as well in the general dependants, as in the duke himself also, and your daughter.

Lear. Ha! say’st thou so?

Knight. I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, if I be mistaken; for my duty cannot be silent, when I think your highness is wrong’d. 4

Lear. Thou but remember’st me of mine own conception; I have perceived a most faint neglect of late; which I have rather blamed as mine own jealous curiosity 5 than as a very pretence 6 and purpose of unkindness: I will look further into’t. — But where’s my fool? I have not seen him this two days.

Knight. Since my young lady’s going into France, sir, the fool hath much pin’d away.

Lear. No more of that; I have noted it well. — Go, you, and tell my daughter I would speak with her. — Go you, call hither my fool. —

Re-enter Steward.

O, you sir, you sir, come you hither: Who am I, sir?

Stew. My lady’s father.

Lear. My lady’s father! my lord’s knave: you slave! you cur!

Stew. I am none of this, my lord; I beseech you, pardon me.

Lear. Do you handy looks with me, you rascal?

Stew. I’ll not be struck, my lord.

Kent. Nor tripped neither; you base foot-ball player.

[Tripping up his Hoops.

Lear. I thank thee, fellow; thou servest me, and I’ll love thee.

Kent. Come, sir, arise, away; I’ll teach you differences; away, away: If you will measure your lubber’s length again, tarry: but away; go to:

Have you wisdom? so. [Pushes the Steward out.

Lear. Now, my friendly knave, I thank thee: there’s earnest of thy service. [Giving Kent Money.

Enter Fool.

Fool. Let me hire him too; — Here’s my coxcomb.

[Giving Kent his Cap.

Lear. How now, my pretty knave? how dost thou?

Fool. Sirrah, you were best take my coxcomb.

Kent. Why, fool?

Fool. Why, for taking one’s part that is out of favour: Nay, an thou canst not smile as the wind sits, thou’lt catch cold shortly: There, take my coxcomb: Why, this fellow has banish’d two of his daughters, and did the third a blessing against his will; if thou follow him, thou must needs wear my coxcomb. — How now, nuncle? 'Would I had two coxcombs, and two daughters!

Lear. Why, my boy?

Fool. If I gave them all my living, I’d keep my coxcombs myself; There’s mine; beg another of thy daughters.

Lear. Take heed, sirrah; the whip.

Fool. Truth’s a dog that must to kennel; he must be whipp’d out, when Lady, the brach, 7 may stand by the fire.

Lear. A pestilent gall to me!

Fool. Sirrah, I’ll teach thee a speech.

Lear. Do.

Fool. Mark it, nuncle: —

Have more than thou knowest,
Speak less than thou knowest,
Lend less than thou owest, 8
Ride more than thou goest,
Learn more than thou pretend, 9
Set less than thou pretend;
And thou shalt have more
Than two tens to a score.

4 Effaced. 5 Punctilious jealousy. 6 Design. 7 Bitch-hound. 8 Ownest, possessest. 9 Believest.
Lear. This is nothing, fool.
Fool. Then 'tis like the breath of an unfeid lawyer; you gave me nothing for't: Can you make no use of nothing, nuncle?
Lear. Why, no, boy; nothing can be made out of nothing.
Fool. Pr'ythee, tell him, so much the rent of his land comes to; he will not believe a fool.

[To Kent.]

Kent. This is not altogether fool, my lord.
Fool. No, 'faith, lords and great men will not let me; if I had a monopoly, they would have part on't: and ladies too, they will not let me have all fool to myself; they'll be snatching. — Give me an egg, nuncle, and I'll give thee two crowns.
Lear. What two crowns shall they be?
Fool. Why, after I have cut the egg i'the middle, and eat up the meat, the two crowns of the egg. When thou clowest thy crown i'the middle and gavest away both parts, thou borest thine ass on thy back over the dirt: Thou hast'd little wit in thy bald crown, when thou gavest thy golden one away. If I speak like myself in this, let him be whipp'd that first finds it so.

Fools had n'er less grace 1 in a year; [Singing.]
For wise men are grown foppish;
And know not how their wits to wear,
Their manners are so ajish.

Lear. When were you wont to be so full of songs, sirrah?
Fool. I have used it, nuncle, ever since thou madest thy daughters thy mother.

Then they for sudden joy did weep,
Singing, And I for sorrow sung,
That such a king should play bo-peep,
And go the fools among.

Pr'ythee, nuncle, keep a schoolmaster that can teach thy fool to lie; I would fain learn to lie.

Lear. If you lie, sirrah, we'll have you whipp'd.
Fool. I marvel, what kin thou and thy daughters are: they'll have me whipp'd for speaking true, thou'lt have me whipp'd for lying; and, sometimes, I am whipp'd for holding my peace. I had rather be any kind of thing, than a fool: and yet I would not be thee, nuncle; thou hast pared thy wit o'both sides, and left nothing in the middle: Here comes one o'the parings.

Enter Goneril.

Lear. How now, daughter! what makes that frontlet 2 on? Methinks, you are too much of late i'the frown.

Fool. Thou wast a pretty fellow, when thou hadst no need to care for her frowning; now thou art an O 3 without a figure: I am better than thou art now; I am a fool, thou art nothing. — Yes, forsooth, I will hold my tongue; so your face [To Gon.] bids me, though you say nothing. Munn, munn,

He that keeps nor crust nor crum
Weary of all, shall want some.

That's a shaw'd peascod. 4 [Pointing to Lear.]

Gon. Not only, sir, this thy all-licens'd fool,
But other of your insolent retinue,
Do hourly carp and quarrel; breaking forth
In rank and not-to-be-endured riots. Sir, I had thought, by making this well known unto you, To have found a safe redress; but now grow fearful,
By what yourself too late have spoke and done,
That you protect this course, and put it on
By your allowance 5; which if you should, the fault
Would not 'scape censure, nor the redresses sleep;
Which, in the tender of a wholesome weal 6,
Might in their working do you that offence,
Which else were shame, that then necessity
Will call discreet proceeding.

Fool. For you trow, nuncle,

The hedge-sparrow fed the cuckoo so long,
That it had its head bit off by its young.

So, out went the candle, and we were left darkling.

Lear. Are you our daughter?

Gon. Come, sir, I would, you would make use of that good wisdom whereof I know you are fraught; 7 and put away these dispositions, which of late transform you from what you rightly are.

Fool. May not an ass know when the cart draws the horse?

Lear. Does any here know me? — Why this is not Lear: does Lear walk thus? speak thus? Where are his eyes? Either his notion weakens, or his discursions are lathargied. — Sleeping or waking? — Ha! sure 'tis not so. — Who is it that can tell me who I am? — Lear's shadow? I would learn that; for by the marks of sovereignty, knowledge, and reason, I should be false persuaded I had daughters.

Fool. Which they will make an obedient father.

Lear. Your name, fair gentlewoman?

Gon. Come, sir; This admiration is much o' the favour 8 Of other your new pranks. I do beseech you To understand my purposes aright: As you are old and reverend, you should be wise; Here do you keep a hundred knights and squires: Men so disorder'd, so debauch'd, and bold, That this our court, infected with their manners, Shows like a riotous inn. The shame doth speak For instant remedy: Be then desir'd
By her, that else will take the thing she begs, A little to disquintify your train; And the remainder, that shall still depend, To be such men as may besort your age, And know themselves and their country.

Lear. Darkness and devils! — Saddle my horses; call my train together. — Degenerate bastard! I'll not trouble thee; Yet have I left a daughter.

Gon. You strike my people; and your disorder d rabble

Make servants of their betters.

SCENE IV.

Enter Albany.

LEAR. Woe, that too late repent, — O, sir, are you come?
Is it your will? [To ALB.] Speak, sir, — Prepare my horses?
Ingratitude! thou marble-hearted fiend,
More hideous, when thou show'st thee in a child,
Than the sea-monster!

ALB. Pray, sir, be patient.
LEAR. Detest kites! thou liest; [To GONERIL. My train are men of choice and rarest parts,
That all particulars of duty know;
And in the most exact respect regard
The worship of their name. — O most small fault,
How ugly didst thou in Cordelia show!
Which, like an engine!, wrench'd my frame of nature
From the fix'd place; drew from my heart all love,
And added to the gall. O Lear, Lear, Lear!
Beat at this gate that let thy folly in,
[Striking his Head.]
And thy dear judgment out! — Go, go, my people.

ALB. My lord, I am guiltless, as I am ignorant
Of what hath mov'd you.

LEAR. It may be so, my lord. — Hear, nature, hear;
Dear goddess, hear! Suspend thy purpose, if Thou didst intend to make this creature fruitful!
Into her womb convey sterility!
Dry up in her the organs of increase;
And from her derogate 2 body never spring
A babe to honour her! If she must teem,
Create her child of spleen; that it may live,
And be a thwart disnatur'd torment to her!
Let it stamp wrinkles in her brow of youth;
With cadent 3 tears fret channels in her cheeks;
Turn all her mother's pains, and benefits,
To laughter and contemp'nt; that she may feel
How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is
To have a thankless child! — Away, away! [Exit.

ALB. Now, gods, that we adore, whereof this comes?

GON. Never afflict yourself to know the cause;
But let his disposition have that scope
That dotage gives it.

Re-enter Lear.

LEAR. What, fifty of my followers, at a clap?
Within a fortnight?

ALB. What's the matter, sir?
LEAR. I'll tell thee; — Life and death! I am asham'd
That thou hast power to shake my manhood thus:

[To GONERIL.]

That these hot tears, which break from me perforce,
Should make thee worth them. — Blasts and fogs upon thee!
The untented 4 woundings of a father's curse
Pierce every sense about thee! — Old fond eyes, Beweep this cause again, I'll pluck you out;
And cast you, with the waters that you lose,
To tempe clay. — Ha! is it come to this?
Let it be so: — Yet have I left a daughter,
Who, I am sure, is kind and comfortable;
When she shall hear this of thee, with her nails She'll flay thy wolfish visage. Thou shalt find,
That I'll resume the shape which thou dost think
I have cast off for ever; thou shalt, I warrant thee.

[Exeunt Lear, Kent, and Attendants.]

GON. Do you mark that, my lord?
ALB. I cannot be so partial, Goneril,
To the great love I bear you, —

GON. Pray you, content. — What, Oswald, ho!
You, sir, more knave than fool, after your master.

[To the Fool.]

FOOL. Nuncle Lear, nuncle Lear, tarry, and take the fool with thee.

FOOL. A fox, when one has caught her,
And such a daughter,
Should sure to the slaughter,
If my cap would buy a halter;
So the fool follows after. [Exit.

GON. This man hath had good counsel: — A hundred knights!
'Tis politic, and safe, to let him keep
At point 5, a hundred knights. Yes, that on every dream,
Each bus, each fancy, each complaint, dislike,
He may enguard his dotage with their powers,
And hold our lives in mercy. — Oswald, I say! —

ALB. Well, you may fear too far.

GON. Safer than trust;
Let me still take away the arms I fear,
Not fear still to be taken. I know his heart:
What he hath utter'd, I have writ my sister;
If she sustain him and his hundred knights,
When I have show'd the unfitness, — How now, Oswald?

Enter Steward.

What, have you writ that letter to my sister?

STEW. Ay, madam.

GON. Take you some company, and away to horse:
Inform her full of my particular fear;
And thereto add such reasons of your own,
As may compact it more. Get you gone;
And hasten your return. [Exit. STEW.] No, no, my lord,
This milky gentleness, and course of yours,
Though I condemn it not, yet, under pardon,
You are much more attask'd 6 for want of wisdom,
Than prais'd for harmful mildness.

ALB. How far your eyes may pierce, I cannot tell; Striving to better, oft we mar what's well.

GON. Nay, then —

ALB. Well, well; the event.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V. — Court before the same.

Enter Lear, Kent, and Fool.

LEAR. Go you before to Gloster with these letters: acquaint my daughter no further with any thing you know, than comes from her demand out of the letter: If your diligence be not speedy, I shall be there before you.

KENT. I will not sleep, my lord, till I have delivered your letter.

[Exit.

FOOL. If a man's brains were in his heels, were't not in danger of kibes?

LEAR. Ay, boy.

FOOL. Then, I pr'ythee, be merry; thy wit shall not go slip-shod.

LEAR. Ha, ha, ha!

FOOL. Shalt see, thy other daughter will use thee kindly: for though she's as like this as a crab is like an apple, yet I can tell what I can tell.

ACT II.

SCENE I. — A Court within the Castle of the Earl of Gloster.

Enter Edmund and Curan, meeting.

Edm. Save thee, Curan.

Cur. And you, sir. I have been with your father; and given him notice, that the duke of Cornwall, and Regan his duchess, will be here with him to-night.

Edm. How comes that?

Cur. Nay, I know not: You have heard of the news abroad; I mean, the whispered ones, for they are yet but ear-kissing arguments?

Edm. Not I; 'Pray you, what are they?

Cur. Have you heard of no likely wars toward, 'twixt the dukes of Cornwall and Albany?

Edm. Not a word.

Cur. You may then, in time. Fare you well, sir. [Exit.

Edm. The duke be here to-night? The better! Best!

This weaves itself perforce into my business! My father hath set guard to take my brother; And I have one thing, of a queasy? question, Which I must act: — Briefness, and fortune, work! —

Brother, a word; descend: — Brother, I say;

Enter Edgar.

My father watches: — O sir, fly this place; Intelligence is given where you are hid; You have now the good advantage of the night: — Have you not spoken 'gainst the duke of Cornwall? He's coming hither; now, 'tis the night, 'tis the haste, And Regan with him; Have you nothing said Upon his party 'gainst the duke of Albany? Advise? yourself.

I am sure on't, not a word.

Edg. I hear my father coming. — Pardon me: —

In cunning, I must draw my sword upon you: —

Draw: Seem to defend yourself: Now quit you well.

why the seven stars are no more than seven, is a pretty reason.

Lear. Because they are not eight?

Fool. Yes, indeed: Thou wouldest make a good fool.

Lear. To take it again perforce! — Monster ingratitude!

Fool. If thou wert my fool, uncle, I'd have thee beaten for being old before thy time.

Lear. How's that?

Fool. Thou shouldst not have been old, before thou hadst been wise.

Lear. O let me not be mad, not mad, sweet heaven! Keep me in temper; I would not be mad! —

Enter Gentleman.

How now! Are the horses ready?

Gent. Ready, my lord.

Lear. Come, boy. [Exeunt.

Yield: — come before my father; — Light, ho here! —

Fly, brother; — Torches! torches! — So farewell. — [Exit Edgar.

Some blood drawn on me would beget opinion

[Wounds his Arm.

Of my more fierce endeavour: I have seen drunkards Do more than this in sport. — Father! father! Stop, stop! No help? —

Enter Gloster, and Servants with Torches.

Glo. Now, Edmund, where's the villain?

Edm. Here stood he in the dark, his sharp sword out,

Mumbling of wicked charms, conjuring the moon To stand his auspicious mistress: —

Glo. But where is he?

Edm. Look, sir, I bleed.

Glo. Where is the villain, Edmund?

Edm. Fled this way, sir. When by no means he could —

Glo. Pursue him, ho! — Go after. — [Exit Serv.] By no means, — what?

Edm. Persuade me to the murder of your lordship; But that I told him, the revenging gods

'Gainst parricides did all their thunders bend; Spoke, with how manifold and strong a bond The child was bound to the father; — Sir, in fine, Seeing how loathly opposite I stood To his unnatural purpose, in fell motion, With his prepared sword, he charges home My unprovided body, lanc'd mine arm: But when he saw my best alarum'd spirits, Bold in the quarrel's right, rous'd to the encounter, Or whether gasted? by the noise I made, Full suddenly he fled.

Glo. Let him fly far; Not in this land shall he remain uncaught; And found — Despatch. — The noble duke my master, My worthy arch? and patron, comes to-night: By his authority I will proclaim it, That he, which finds him, shall deserve our thanks,

7 Delicate. 8 Consider, recollect yourself.

9 Frighted.

1 Chief.
Bringing the murderous coward to the stake;
He, that conceals him, death.

Edm. When I dissuaded him from his intent,
And found him pight 2 to do it, with curt3 speech
I threaten'd to discover him: He replied,
Thou unpossessing bastard! dost thou think,
If I would stand against thee, would the reposal
Of all trust, virtue, or worth, in thee
Make thy words faith'd? No: what I should deny,
(As this I would; ay, though thou didst produce
My very character,) I'lt turn it all
To thy suggestion, plot, and damned practice:
And thou must make a dullard of the world,
If they not thought the profits of my death
Were very pregnant and potential spurrs
To make thee seek it.

[Trumpets within.

Hark, the duke's trumpets! I know not why he comes:
All ports I'll bar; the villain shall not scape;
The duke must grant me that: besides, his picture
I will send far and near, that all the kingdom
May have due note of him; and of my land,
Loyal and natural boy, I'll work the means
To make thee capable.4

Enter Cornwall, Regan, and Attendants.

Corn. How now, my noble friend? since I came hither, (Which I can call but now,) I have heard strange
news.

Reg. If it be true, all vengeance comes too short,
Which can pursue the offender. How dost, my lord?
Glo. O, madam, my old heart is crack'd, is crack'd!
Reg. What, did my father's godson seek your life?
He whom my father nam'd? your Edgar?
Glo. O, lady, lady, shame would have it hid!
Reg. Was he not companion with the riotous knights
That tend upon my father?

Glo. I know not, madam:

Edm. It is too bad, too bad. —

Reg. No marvel then, though he were ill affected;
'Tis they have put him on the old man's death,
To have the waste and spoil of his revenues.
I have this present evening from my sister
Been well inform'd of them; and with such cautions,
That, if they come to sojourn at my house,
I'll not be there.

Corn. Nor I, assure thee, Regan. —

Edmund, I hear that you have shown your father
A child-like office.

Edm. 'Twas my duty, sir.

Glo. He did bewray his practice 5; and receiv'd
This hurt you see, striving to apprehend him.

Corn. Is he pursu'd?

Glo. Ay, my good lord, he is.

Corn. If he be taken, he shall never more
Be fear'd of doing harm: make your own purpose,
How in my strength you please. — For you, Edmund,
Whose virtue and obedience doth this instant
So much commend itself, you shall be ours;
Natures of such deep trust we shall much need;
You we first seize on.

Edm. I shall serve you, sir,
Truly, however else.

Glo. For him, I thank your grace.
Corn. You know not why we came to visit you,—
Reg. Thus out of season; threading dark-ey'd night.

Occasions, noble Gloster, of some poize 6,
Of wherein we must have use of your advice: —
Our father he hath writ, so hath our sister,
Of differences, which I best thought it fit
To answer from our home; the several messengers
From hence attend despatch. Our good old friend,
Lay comforts to your bosom; and bestow
Your needful counsel to our business,
Which craves the instant use.

Glo. I serve you, madam:
Your graces are right welcome.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. — Before Gloster's Castle.

Enter Kent and Steward, severally.

Stew. Good dawning to thee, friend: Art of the house?

Kent. Ay.

Stew. Where may we set our horses?

Kent. I' the mire.

Stew. Pr'ythee, if thou love me, tell me.

Kent. I love thee not.

Stew. Why, then I care not for thee.

Kent. If I had thee in Lipsbury pinfold, I would make thee care for me.

Stew. Why dost thou use me thus? I know thee not.

Kent. Fellow, I know thee.

Stew. What dost thou know me for?

Kent. A knave; a rascal, an eater of broken meats; a base, proud, shallow, beggarly, three-suited, hundred-pound, worsted-stocking knife; a lily-liver'd, action-taking knife; a glass-gazing, superserviceable, finical rogue; one-trunk-inheriting slave; nothing but the composition of a knave, beggar, and coward: one whom I will beat into clamorous whining, if thou den'st the least syllable of thy addition.

Stew. Why, what a monstrous fellow art thou, thus to rai on one, that is neither known of thee, nor knows thee?

Kent. What a brazen-faced varlet art thou, to deny thou know'st me? Is it two days ago, since I trip'd up thy heels, and beat thee before the king?
Draw, you rogue: for, though it be night, the moon shines; I'll make a sop o' the moonshine of you:
Draw, you barber-monger, draw.

[Drawing his sword.

Stew. Away! I have nothing to do with thee.

Kent. Draw, you rascal: you come with letters against the king; and take vanity 8, the puppet's part, against the royalty of her father: Draw, you rogue, or I'll so carbonado your shanks: — draw, you rascal; come your ways.

Stew. Help, ho! murder! help!

Kent. Strike, you slave; stand, rogue, stand;
you meet slave, strike.

Stew. Help, ho! murder! murder!

Enter Edmund, Cornwall, Regan, Gloster, and Servants.

Kent. With you, Goodman boy, if you please;
come, I'll flesh you; come on, young master.

4 Kent. And true, but it is no matter, for a master may not be in the way of a servant.

5 Gloster. He has beguiled his practice, and receiv'd
this hurt you see, striving to apprehend him.

6 Weight. 7 Titles. 8 A character in the old moralities.
KENT. Sir, in good sooth, in sincere verity,
Under the allowance of your grand aspect,
Whose influence, like the wreath of radiant fire
On flickering Phoebus' front, —
Corn. What mean'st by this? KENT. To go out of my dialect, which you dis-commend so much. I know, sir, I am no flatterer;
he that beguiled you, in a plain accent, was a plain knife; which, for my part, I will not be, though I should win your displeasure to entreat me to it.
Corn. What was the offence you gave him?
Stew. Never any:
It pleas'd the king his master, very late,
To strike at me, upon his misconception;
When he, conjunct, and flattering his displeasure,
Tripp'd me behind: being down, insulted, rail'd,
And put upon him such a deal of man,
That worthy him, got praises of the king.
For him attempting who was self-subdu'd;
And, in the fleshment of this dread exploit,
Drew on me here.
KENT. None of these rogues, and cowards,
But Ajax is their fool. 5
Corn. Fetch forth the stocks, ho!
You stubborn ancient knave, you reverend braggart,
We'll teach you —
KENT. Sir, I am too old to learn:
Call not your stocks for me: I serve the king;
On whose employment I was sent to you:
You shall do small respect, show too bold malice
Against the grace and person of my master,
Stocking his messenger.
Corn. Fetch forth the stocks:
As I've life and honour, there shall he sit till noon.
Reg. Till noon! till night, my lord; and all night
too.
KENT. Why, madam, if I were your father's dog,
You should not use me so.
Reg. Sir, being his knife, I will.
[Stocks brought out.
Corn. This is a fellow of the self-same colour
Our sister speaks of: — Come, bring away the stocks.
Glo. Let me beseech your grace not to do so:
His fault is much, and the good king his master
Will check him for't: your purpose'd low correction
Is such, as basest and contemptu'tst wretches,
For pilferings and most common trespasses,
Are punish'd with: the king must take it ill,
That he's so slightly valued in his messenger,
Should have him thus restrain'd.
Corn. I'll answer that.
Reg. My sister may receive it much more worse,
To have her gentleman abus'd, assaul'ted,
For following her affairs. — Put in his legs. —
[Reg. is put in the Stocks.
Corn. Come, my good lord: away.
[Exeunt Regan and Cornwall.
Glo. I am sorry for thee, friend; 'tis the duke's pleasure,
Whose disposition, all the world well knows,
Will not be rubb'd, nor stopp'd: I'll entreat for thee.
KENT. Pray, do not, sir; I have watch'd, and travell'd hard;
Some time I shall sleep out, the rest I'll whistle.
A good man's fortune may grow out at heels:
Give you good morrow!
Glo. The duke's to blame in this: 'twill be ill taken.
[Exit.
Scene IV.

KING LEAR.

Kent. Good king, that must approve the common saw! 6
Thou out of heaven's benediction com'st
To the warm sun!
Approach, thou beacon to this under globe,
That by thy comfortable beams I may
Peruse this letter! — Nothing almost sees miracles,
But misery; — I know 'tis from Cordelia;
Who hath most fortunately been inform'd
Of my obscured course; and shall find time
From this enormous state, — seeking to give Losses their remedies: — All weary and o'erwatch'd,
Take vantage, heavy eyes, not to behold
This shameful lodging.
Fortune, good night; smile once more; turn thy wheel!

[He sleeps.]

Scene III. — A Part of the Heath.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. I heard myself proclaim'd:
And, by the happy hollow of a tree,
Esca'p'd the hunt. No port is free; no place,
That guard, and most unusual vigilance,
Does not attend my taking. While I may 'scape,
I will preserve myself; and am bethought
To take the basest and most poorest shape,
That ever menry, in contempt of man,
Brought near to beast: my face I'll grim'e with filth;
Blanket my loins: elf? all my hair in knots;
And with presented nakedness outface
The winds, and persecutions of the sky.
The country gives me proof and precedent
Of Bedlam beggars, who, with roaring voices,
Strike in their numb'd and mort'd'bare arms
Pins, wooden pricks 8, nails, spri's of rosemary;
And with this horrible object, from low farms,
Poor pelting villages, sheep-cotes and mills,
Sometime with lunatic basons, 9 sometime with prayers,
Enforce their charity. — Poor Turligood! poor Tom!
That's something yet; — Edgar I nothing am.

Scene IV. — Before Gloster's Castle.

Enter Lear, Fool, and Gentleman.

Lear. 'Tis strange, that they should so depart from home,
And not send back my messenger.

Gent. As I learn'd,
The night before there was no purpose in them
Of this remove.
Kent. Hail to thee, noble master!
Lear. How!

Mak'st thou this shame thy pastime?
Kent. No, my lord.
Fool. Ifa, ha; look! he wears cruel 1 garters!
Horses are tied by the heads; dogs and bears, by the neck; monkies by the loins; and men by the legs:
when a man is over-lusty at legs, then he wears wooden nether stocks. 2
Lear. What's he, that hath so much thy place mistook
To set thee here?
Kent. It is both he and she,
Your son and daughter.
Lear. No.
Kent. Yes.
Lear. No, I say.
Kent. I say, yea.
Lear. No, no; they would not.
Kent. Yes, they have.
Lear. By Jupiter, I swear, no.
Kent. By Juno, I swear, ay.
Lear. They durst not do't.
They could not, would not do't; 'tis worse than murder,
To do upon respect such violent outrage:
Resolve me, with all modest haste, which way
Thou'rt hand'rt deserve, or they impose, this usage,
Coming from us.

Kent. My lord, when at their home
I did commend your highness' letters to them,
Ere I was risen from the place that show'd
My duty kneeling, came there a reeking post,
Stew'd in his haste, half breathless, panting forth
From Goneril his mistress, salutations;
Deliver'd letters, spite of intermission,
Which presently they read: on whose contents,
They summon'd up their meany', 3 straight took horse;
Commanded me to follow, and attend
The leisure of their answer: gave me cold looks:
And meeting here the other messenger,
Whose welcome, I perceive'd, had poison'd mine,
(Being the very fellow that of late Display'd so saucily against your highness,)
Having more man than wit about me, drew:
He raised the house with loud and coward cries:
Your son and daughter found this trespass worth
The shame which here it suffers.

Fool. Winter's not gone yet, if the wild goose fly that way.

Fathers, that wear rags,
Do make their children blind;
But fathers, that bear bags,
Shall see their children kind.

But, for all this, thou shalt have as many dolours 4 for thy daughters, as thou canst tell in a year.

Lear. O, how this mother 5 swells up toward my heart!

Hysterica passio! down, thou climbing sorrow,
Thy element's below: — Where is this daughter?
Kent. With the earl, sir, here within.

Lear. Follow me not;
Stay here.  [Exit.

Gent. Made you no more offence than what you speak of?

Kent. None.

How chance the king comes with so small a train?

Fool. An thou hast been set i' the stocks for that question, thou hadst well deserved it.

Kent. Why, fool!

Fool. We'll set thee to school to an ant, to teach thee there's no labouring in the winter. Let go thy hold, when a great wheel runs down a hill, lest it break thy neck with following it; but the great one that goes up the hill, let him draw thee after. When a wise man gives thee better counsel, give me mine again: I would have none but knaves follow it, since a fool gives it.

That, sir, which serves and seeks for gain,
And follows but for form,
Will pack, when it begins to rain,
And leave thee in the storm.

3 People, train or retinue.
4 A quibble between dolours and dollars.
5 The disease called the mother.
But I will tarry, the fool will stay,
And let the wise man fly;
The knave turns fool, that runs away;
The fool no knave, perdy.

KENT. Where learned you this, fool?

FOOL. Not i' the stocks, fool.

Re-enter Lear, with GLOSTER.

Lear. Deny to speak with me? They are sick? They are weary?
They have travelled hard to-night? Mere fetches;
The images of revolt and flying off!
Fetch me a better answer.

GLOSTER. My dear lord, You know the fiery quality of the duke;
How unremovable and fixed he is
In his own course.

Lear. Vengeance! plague! death! confusion!
Fiery? what quality? Why, Gloster, Gloster,
I'd speak with the duke of Cornwall, and his wife.

GLOSTER. Well, my good lord, I have inform'd them so.

Lear. Inform'd them! Dost thou understand me, man?

GLOSTER. Ay, my good lord.

Lear. The king would speak with Cornwall; the dear father
Would with his daughter speak, commands her service:
Are they inform'd of this?— My breath and blood!—
Fiery? the fiery duke?— Tell the hot duke that—
No, but not yet:— may be he is not well
Infirmitie doth still neglect all office,
Wherefore our health is bound; we are not ourselves,
When nature, being oppress'd, commands the mind
To suffer with the body: I'll forbear;
And am fallen out with my more headier will,
To take the indispos'd and sickly fit
For the sound man. — Death on my state! wherefore [Looking on Kent.

Should he sit here? This act persuades me,
That this remotion 6 of the duke and her
Is practice 7 only. Give me my servant forth:
Go, tell the duke and his wife, I'd speak with them,
Now, presently: bid them come forth and hear me,
Or at their chamber door I'll beat the drum,
Till it cry Sleep to death.

GLOSTER. I'd have all well betwixt you. [Exit. Lear.

O me, my heart, my rising heart!— but, down.

FOOL. Cry to it, uncle, as the cockney did to the eels, when she put them in the paste alive; she rapp'd 'em o' the coxcombs with a stick, and cry'd, Down, wantons, down: 'Twas her brother, that in pure kindness to his horse, buttered his hay.

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, GLOSTER, and Servants.

Lear. Good morrow to you both.

CORNWALL. Hail to your grace! [Kent is set at liberty.

REGAN. I am glad to see your highness.

LEAR. Regan, I think you are; I know what reason
I have to think so: if thou shouldst not be glad,
I would divorce me from thy mother's tomb,
Sepulchring an adultress. — O, are you free?

[To Kent.

Some other time for that. — Beloved Regan,

6 Removing from their own house.
7 Artifice.

Thy sister's ought: O, Regan, she hath tied Sharp-tooth'd unkindness, like a vulture here.—

[Points to his Heart.

I can scarce speak to thee; thou'lt not believe,
Of how deprav'd a quality. — O, Regan!

REGAN. I pray you, sir, take patience; I have hope,
You less know how to value her desert,
Than she to scant her duty.

[Reg.

LEAR. Say, how is that?

REGAN. I cannot think, my sister in the least
Would fail her obligation: If, sir, perchance,
She have restrain'd the riots of your followers,
'Tis on such ground, and to such wholesome end,
As clears her from all blame.

LEAR. My curses on her!

REGAN. Nature in you stands on the very verge
Of her confine: you should be rul'd, and led
By some discretion, that discerns your state
Better than you yourself: Therefore, I pray you,
That to your sister you do make return;
Say, you have wrong'd her, sir.

LEAR. Ask her forgiveness?
Do you but mark how this becomes the house 8:

Dear daughter, I confess that I am old;
Age is unnecessary: on my knees I beg. [Kneeling.

That you 'vouchsafe me raiment, bed, and food.

REGAN. Good sir, no more; these are unsightly tricks:
Return you to my sister.

LEAR. Never, Regan:

She hath abated me of half my train;
Look'd black upon me; struck me with her tongue,
Most sour-mouth'd, upon the very heart:—
All the stor'd venom of the devil's hell
On her ingrateful top! Strike her young bones,
You taking airs, with lameness!

CORNWALL. Fye, fye, fye!

LEAR. You nimbler lightnings, dart your blinding flames
Into her scornful eyes! Infect her beauty,
You fen-suck'd fogs, drawn by the powerful sun,
To fall and blast her pride!

[Reg.

O the blest gods! So will you wish on me, when the rash mood's on.

LEAR. No, Regan, thou shalt never have my curse;
Thy temper'd nature shall not give
Thee o'er to hasty words; her eyes are fierce, but thine
Do comfort, and not burn: 'Tis not in thee to grudge my pleasures, to cut off my train,
To bandy hasty words, to scant my sizes 9,
And, in conclusion, to oppose the bolt
Against my coming in: thou better know'st
The offices of nature, bond of childhood,
Effects of courtesy, dues of gratitude;
Thy half o' the kingdom hast thou not forgot,
Wherein I thee endow'd.

[Reg.

Good sir, to the purpose.

[Trumpets within.

LEAR. Who put my man i' the stocks?

CORNWALL. What trumpet's that?

Enter Steward.

REGAN. I know 't, my sister's: this approves her letter,
That she would soon be here.— Is your lady come?

LEAR. This is a slave, whose easy borrow'd pride
Dwells in the flicker grace of her he follows:—

Out, varlet, from my sight!

8 The order of families.
9 Contract my allowances.
Scene IV.

KING LEAR.

Corn. What means your grace? Lear. Who stock'd my servant? Regan, I have good hope Thou didst not know of't.— Who comes here? O heavens.

Enter Goneril.

If you do love old men, if your sweet sway Allow obedience, if yourselves are old, Make it your cause; send down, and take my part! — Art not asham'd to look upon this beard? —

[To Goneril.

O, Regan, wilt thou take her by the hand? Goner. Why not by the hand, sir? How have I offended? All's not offence, that indiscretion finds, And dotage terms so.

Lear. O, sides, you are too tough! Will you yet hold? — How came my man the stocks? Corn. I set him there, sir: but his own disorders Deserv'd much less advancement.

Lear. You! did you? Reg. I pray you, father, being weak, seem so. If, till the expiration of your month, You will return and sojourn with my sister, Dismissing half your train, come then to me; I am now from home, and out of that provision Which shall be needful for your entertainment.

Lear. Return to her, and fifty men dismiss'd? No, rather I abuse all roofs, and choose To wage against the enmity o' the air; To be a comrade with the wolf and owl,— Necessity's sharp pinch! — Return with her? Why, the hot-blooded France, that dowerless took Our youngest born, I could as well be brought To kneel his throne, and, squire-like, pension beg To keep base life afoot: — Return with her? Persuade me rather to be slave and suppeter To this detested groom. [Looking on the Steward.

Goner. Lear. I pr'ythee, daughter, do not make me mad; I will not trouble thee, my child; farewell: We'll no more meet, no more see one another: — But yet thou art my flesh, my blood, my daughter; Or, rather, a disease that's in my flesh, Which I must needs call mine: but I'll not chide; Let shame come when it will, I do not call it: I do not bid the thunder-bearer shoot, Nor tell tales of thee to high-judging Jove: Mend when thou canst; be better at thy leisure: I can be patient; I can stay with Regan, I, and my hundred knights.

Reg. Not altogether so, sir; I look'd not for you yet, nor am provided For your fit welcome: Give ear, sir, to my sister; For those that mingle reason with your passion, Must be content to think you old, and so — But she knows what she does.

Lear. Is this well spoken now? Reg. I dare avouch it, sir: What, fifty followers? Is it not well? What should you need of more? Yes, or so many? sith 2 that both charge and danger Speak 'gainst so great a number? How, in one house, Should many people, under two commands, Hold amity? 'Tis hard; almost impossible.

Goner. Why might not you, my lord, receive attendance From those that she calls servants, or from mine? 1 Approve. 2 A horse that carries necessaries on a journey. 3 Since.
KING LEAR.

ACT III.

SCENE I. — A Heath.

A Storm is heard, with Thunder and Lightning.

Enter Kent, and a Gentleman, meeting.

Kent. Who's here, beside foul weather?

Gent. One minded like the weather, most unquietly.

Kent. I know you; Where's the king?

Gent. Contending with the fretful element:
Bids the wind blow the earth into the sea,
Or swell the curled waters 'bove the main,
That things might change, or cease: tears his white hair:
Which the impetuous blasts, with eyeless rage,
Catch in their fury, and make nothing of:
Strives in his little world 'O man to out-scorn
The to-and-fro-conflicting wind and rain.
This night, wherein the cub-drawn bear would couch,
The lion and the belly-pinched wolf
Keep their fur dry, unbonneted he runs,
And bids what will take all.

Kent. But who is with him?

Gent. None but the fool; who labours to out-jest
His heart-struck injuries.

Kent. Sir, I do know you;
And dare, upon the warrant of my heart,
Commend a dear thing to you. There is division,
Although as yet the face of it he cover'd
With mutual cunning, 'twixt Albany and Cornwall;
Who have (as who have not, that their great stars Thron'd and set high?) servants, who seem no less;
Which are to France the spies and speculations
Intelligent of our state; what hath been seen,
Either in sniffs and packings of the duke's
Or the hard rein which both of them have borne
Against the old king; or something deeper,
Whereof, perchance, these are but furnishings:
But, true it is, from France there comes a power
Into this scatter'd kingdom; who already,
Wise in our negligence, have secret feet
In some of our best ports, and are at point
To show their open banner. — Now to you:
If on my credit you dare build so far
To make your speed to Dover, you shall find
Some that will thank you, making just report
Of how unnatural and bemadding sorrow
The king hath cause to plain.
I am a gentleman of blood and breeding;
And from some knowledge and assurance, offer
This office to you.

Gent. I will talk further with you.

Kent. For confirmation that I am much more
4 Whose dugs are drawn dry by its young.
5 Sniffs dis-likeis, and packings underhand contrivances.
6 Samples.

Must be their schoolmasters: Shut up your doors;
He is attended with a desperate train;
And what they may incense? him to, being apt
To have his ear abus'd, wisdom bids fear.

Corn. Shut up your doors, my lord; 'tis a wild night;
My Regan counsels well; come out o' the storm.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. — Another Part of the Heath.

Storm continues.

Enter Lear and Fool.

Lear. Blow, wind, and crack your cheeks! rage! blow!
You cataracts, and hurricanoes, spout
Till you have drench'd our steeples, drown'd the cocks!
You sulphurous and thought-executing fires,
Vaunt couriers 9 to oak-cleaving thunder-bolts,
Sing me your head! And thou, all-shaking thunder,
Strike flat the thick rotundity o' the world!
Crack nature's moulds, all germsens spilt at once,
That make ingrateful man!

Fool. O nuncle, court holy-water 1 in a dry house is better than this rain-water out o' door. Good nuncle, in, and ask thy daughters' blessing; here's a night piltes neither wise men nor fools.

Lear. Rumble thy belly-full! Spit, fire! spout, rain!
Nor rain, wind, thunder, fire, are my daughters: I tax not you, you elements, with unkindness,
I never gave you kingdom, call'd you children,
You owe me no subscription 2; why then let fall
Your horrible pleasure; here I stand your slave,
A poor infirm, weak, and depis'd old man:
But yet I call you servile ministers,
That have with two pernicious daughters join'd
Your high engender'd battles 'gainst a head
So old and white as this. O! O! 'tis foul!

Fool. He that has a house to put his head in, has a good head-piece.

The man that makes his toe
What he his heart should make,
Shall of a corn cry wee,
And turn his sleep to wake.

— for there was never yet fair woman, but she made mouths in a glass.

7 Instigate.
8 Quick as thought.
9 Agent couriers, French.
10 A proverbial phrase for fair words.
11 Obedience.
Scene III.

Enter Kent.

Lear. No, I will be the pattern of all patience; I will say nothing.

Kent. Alas, sir, are you here? things that love night,

Love not such nights as these: the wrathful skies
Gallow 3 the very wanderers of the dark,
And make them keep their caves. Since I was man,
Such sheets of fire, such bursts of horrid thunder,
Such groans of roaring wind and rain, I never Remember to have heard: man's nature cannot carry
The affliction, nor the fear.

Let the great gods,
That keep this dreadful pother o'er our heads,
Find out their enemies now. Tremble, thou wretch,
That hast within thee undivulged crimes,
Unhapp'd of justice: Hide thee, thou bloody hand;
Thou perjur'd, and thou simular 4 man of vice
Thou art incestuous: Caitiff; to pieces shake,
That under covert and convenient seeming
Hast practis'd on man's life: — Close pent-up guilty,
Rive your concealing continents, and cry
These dreadful summoners grace. 5 — I am a man,
More sinn'd against, than sinning.

Kent. Alack, bare-headed! Greatly my lord, hard by here is a hovel;
Some friendship will it lend you 'gainst the tempest;
Repose you there: while I to this hard house,
(More hard than is the stone whereof 'tis rais'd; Which even but now, demanding after you, Denied me to come in,) return, and force
Their scant'd courtesy.

Lear. My wits begin to turn, —
Come on, my boy: How dost, my boy? Art cold? I am cold myself. — Where is this straw, my fellow? The art of our necessities is strange,
That can make vile things precious. Come, your hovel,
Poor fool and knave, I have one part in my heart
That's sorry yet for thee.

Fool. He that has a little tiny wu,—

With Leigh, ho, the wind and the rain,—

Must make content with his fortunes fit;
For the rain it raineth every day.

Lear. True, my good boy. — Come, bring us to this hovel. [Exit Lear and Kent.]

Fool. I'll speak a prophecy ere I go:

When priests are more in word than matter; When brewers mar their malt with water; When every case in law is right; No squire in debt, nor no poor knight; When slanderers do not live in tongues; Nor cutpurse come not to thron's; Then shall the realm of Albion Come to great confusion. Then comes the time, who lives to see't; That going shall be us'd with feet.

This prophecy Merlin shall make; for I live before his time. [Exit.

Scene III. — A Room in Gloster's Castle.

Enter Gloster and Edmund.

Glo. Alack, alack, Edmund, I like not this unnatural dealing: When I desired their leave that I might pity him, they took from me the use of mine own house; charged me on pain of their perpetual displeasure, neither to speak of him, entreat for him, nor any way sustain him.

Edm. Most savage, and unnatural!

Glo. Go to; say you nothing: There is division between the dukes; and a worse matter than that: I have received a letter this night; — 'tis dangerous to be spoken; — I have locked the letter in my closet: these injuries the king now bears will be revenged home; there is part of a power already fo'ted: we must incline to the king. I will seek him, and privily relieve him: go you, and maintain talk with the duke, that my charity be not of him perceived: If he ask for me, I am ill, and gone to bed. If I die for it, as no less is threatened me, the king my old master must be relieved. There is some strange thing toward, Edmund; pray you, be careful. [Exit.

Edm. This courtesy, forbid thee, shall the duke
Instantly know; and of that letter too: —
This seems a fair deserving, and must draw me
That which my father loses; no less than all:
The younger rises, when the old doth fall. [Exit.

Scene IV. — A Part of the Heath, with a Hovel.

Enter Lear, Kent, and Fool.

Kent. Here is the place, my lord; good my lord, enter;
The tyranny of the open night's too rough
For nature to endure. [Storm still.

Lear. Let me alone.

Kent. Good my lord, enter here.

Lear. 'Wilt break my heart?

Kent. I'd rather break mine own: Good my lord, enter.

Lear. Thou think'st 'tis much, that this contentious storm
Invades us to the skin: so 'tis to thee;
But where the greater malady is fix'd,
The lesser is scarce felt. Thou'dst shun a bear: But if thy flight lay toward the raging sea,
Thou'dst meet the bear i' the mouth. When the mind's free,
The body's delicate: the tempest in my mind
Doth from my senses take all feeling else,
Save what beats there. — Filial ingratitude! Is it not as this mouth should tear this hand,
For lifting food to 't? — But I will punish home: —
No, I will weep no more. — In such a night
To shut me out! — Pour on; I will endure:
In such a night as this! O Regan, Goneril! —
Your old kind father, whose frank heart gave all,—
O, that way madness lies; let me shun that:
No more of that.

Kent. Good my lord, enter here.

Lear. Pr'ythee, go in thyself; seek thine own ease;
This tempest will not give me leave to ponder
On things would hurt me more. — But I'll go in:
In, boy; go first. — [To the Fool.] You houseless poverty,
Nay, get thee in. — I'll pray, and then I'll sleep. —

[Fool goes in.

Poor naked wretches, wheresoe'er you are,
That bide the pelting of this pitiless storm,
How shall your houseless heads, and unfed sides,
Your loop'd, and window'd raggedness, defend you
From season such as these? O, I have ta'en

3 F
Too little care of this! Take physic, pomp;
Expose thyself to feel what wretches feel;
That thou may'st shake the superfluous to them,
And show the heavens more just.

Edg. [Within.] Fathom and half, fathom and half! Poor Tom!

[Fool runs out from the Hotel.

Fool. Come not in here, nuncle, here's a spirit.
Help me, help me!

Kent. Give me thy hand. — Who's there?

Fool. A spirit, a spirit; he says his name's poor Tom.

Kent. What art thou that dost grumble there?

I the straw?

Come forth.

Enter Edgar, disguised as a Madman.

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me! — Through the sharp hathorn blows the cold wind. — Humph! go to thy cold bed, and warm thee.

Lear. Hast thou given all to thy two daughters? And art thou come to this?

Edg. Who gives any thing to poor Tom? whom the foul fiend hath led through fire and through flame, through ford and whirlpool, over bog and quagmire; that hath laid knives under his pillow, and halters in his pew; set ratsbane by his porridge; made him proud of heart, to ride on a bay trotting-horse over four-inch bridges, to course his own shadow for a traitor: — Bless thy five wits! Tom's a-cold, — O, do de, do de, do de, do. — Bless thee from whirlwinds, star-blasting, and taking! ?

Doo poor Tom some charity, whom the foul fiend vexes: There could I have him now, — and there, — and there, — and there again, and there.

[Storm continues.

Lear. What, have his daughters brought him to this pass? —

Could'st thou save nothing? Didst thou give them all?

Fool. Nay, he reserved a blanket, else we had been all shamed.

Lear. Now, all the plagues that in the pendulous air

Hang fated o'er men's faults, light on thy daughters!

Kent. He hath no daughters, sir.

Lear. Death, traitor! nothing could have subdued nature

To such a lowness, but his unkind daughters. —

Is it the fashion, that discarding fathers

Should have thus little mercy on their flesh?

Judicious punishment! 'twas this flesh begot

Those pelican daughters.

Edg. Pillock sat on pillock's hill; —

Halloo, halloo, loo, loo!

Fool. This cold night will turn us all to fools and madmen.

Edg. Take heed o' the foul fiend: obey thy parents; keep thy word justly; swear not; commit not with man's sworn spouse; set not thy sweet heart on proud array: Tom's a-cold.

Lear. What hast thou been?

Edg. A serving-man, proud in heart and mind; that curled my hair; wore gloves in my cap; swore as many oaths as I spake words, and broke them in the sweet face of heaven: Wine loved I deeply; dice dearly; False of heart, light of ear, bloody of hand: Hog in soloth, fox in stealth, wolf in greediness, dog in madness, lion in prey. Let not the creaking of shoes, nor the rustling of silks, betray thy poor heart to women: Keep thy pen from lenders' books, and defy the foul fiend. — Still through the hathorn blows the cold wind: Says saum, mun, ha no nonny, dolphin my boy, my boy, sesat; let him trot by.

[Storm still continues.

Lear. Why, thou art better in thy grave, than to answer with thy uncovered body this extremity of the skies. — Is man no more than this? Consider him well: Thou owest the worm no silk, the beast no hide, the sheep no wool, the cat no perfume: — Ha! here three of us are sophisticated! — Thou art the thing itself: unaccommodated man is no more but such a poor, bare, forked animal as thou art. — Off, off, you lendings: — Come; unbutton here.

[Fearing off his Clothes.

Fool. Pry'thee, nuncle, be contented; this is a naughty night to swim in. — Look, here comes a walking fire.

Edg. This is the foul fiend Flibbertigibbet: he begins at curfew, and walks till the first cock; he gives the web and the pin, squints the eye, and makes the harelip: mildews the white wheat, and hunts the poor creature of earth.

Saint Withold! footed thrice the world;
He met the night-mare, and her nine-fold;
Bid her alight,
And, aroint thee 5, witch, aroint thee!

Kent. How fares your grace?

Enter Gloster, with a Torch.

Lear. What's he?

Kent. Who's there? What is't you seek?

Glo. What are you there? Your names?

Edg. Poor Tom; that eats the swimming frog, the toad, the tadpole, the wall-newt, and the water 4; that in the fury of his heart, when the foul fiend rages, swallows the old rat, and the ditch-dog; drinks the green mantle of the standing-pool; who is whipped from tything to tything 5, and stocked, punished, and imprisoned; who hath had three suits to his back, six shirts to his body, horse to ride, and weapon to wear.

But mice, and rats, and such small deer,
Have been Tom's food for seven long year.

Beware my follower: — Peace, Smolkin 6; peace, thou fiend!

Glo. What, hath your grace no better company?

Edg. The prince of darkness is a gentleman;

Modo he's call'd, and Mauh.7

Glo. Our flesh and blood, my lord, is grown so vile,

That it doth hate what gets it.

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold.

Glo. Go in with me; my duty cannot suffer

To obey in all your daughter's hard commands:
Though their injunction be to bar my doors,

And let this tyrannous night take hold upon you;
Yet have I ventur'd to come seek you out,

And bring you where both fire and food is ready.

9 Diseases of the eye.

A saint said to protect his devotees from the disease called the night-mare.

2 Wild downs, so called in various parts of England.

3 Avaunt.

4 i.e. The water-newt.

5 A tything is a division of a county.

6 Name of a spirit.

7 The chief devil.
SCENE V.

KING LEAR.

Lear. First let me talk with this philosopher. —

What is the cause of thunder?

Kent. Good my lord, take his offer;

Go into the house.

Lear. I'll talk a word with this same learned

Theban. —

What is your study?

Edg. How to prevent the fiend, and to kill ver-

min.

Lear. Let me ask you one word in private.

Kent. Impotence once more to go, my lord;

His wits begin to unsettle.

Glo. Can'tst thou blame him?

His daughters seek his death: — Ah, that good

Kent! —

He said it would be thus: — Poor banish'd man! —

Thou say'st, the king grows mad; I'll tell thee, friend,

I am almost mad myself: I had a son,

Now outlaw'd from my blood; he sought my life,

But lately, very late; I lov'd him, friend, —

No father be his dearer: tell that good

Kent! —

Storm continues.

The grief hath craiz'd my wits. What a night's this!

I do beseech your grace, —

O, cry you mercy:

Noble philosopher, your company.

Edg. Tom's a-cold.

Glo. In, fellow, there, to the hovel: keep thee warn.

Lear. Come, let's in all.

Kent. This way, my lord.

Lear. With him;

I will keep still with my philosopher.

Kent. Good my lord, soothe him; let him take the fellow.

Glo. Take him you on.

Kent. Sirrah, come on; go along with us.

Lear. Come, good Athenian.

Glo. No words, no words:

Hush.

Edg. Child 8 Rowland to the dark tower came,

His word was still, — Fie, fiuh, and fum,

I smell the blood of a British man.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VI. — A Room in Gloster's Castle.

Enter Cornwall and Edmund.

Corn. I will have my revenge, ere I depart his house.

Edm. How, my lord, I may be censured, that nature thus gives way to loyalty, something fears me to think of.

Corn. I now perceive, it was not altogether your brother's evil disposition made him seek his death;

but a provoking merit, set a-work by a reprovable badness in himself.

Edm. How malicious is my fortune, that I must repeat to be just! This is the letter he spoke of, which approves him an intelligent party to the advantages of France. O heavens! that this treason were not, or not I the detector!

Corn. Go with me to the duchess.

Edm. If the matter of this paper be certain, you have mighty business in hand.

Corn. True, or false, it hath made thee earl of Gloster. Seek out where thy father is, that he may be ready for our apprehension.

8 Child is an old term for knight.

Edm. [Aside.] If I find him comforting the king,

it will stuff his suspicion more fully. — I will persevere in my course of loyalty, though the conflict be sore between that and my blood.

Corn. I will lay trust upon thee; and thou shalt find a dearer father in my love.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VI. — A Chamber in a Farm-House, adjoining the Castle.

Enter GLOSTER, LEAR, KENT, Fool, and EDGAR.

Glo. Here is better than the open air; take it thankfully; I will piece out the comfort with what addition I can: I will not be long from you.

Kent. All the power of his wits has given way to his impatience: — The gods reward your kindness!

[Exit Gloster.

Edg. Frateretto calls me; and tells me, Nero is an angler in the lake of darkness. Pray, innocent?, and beware the foul fiend.

Fool. Pr'ythee, nuncle, tell me, whether a madman be a gentleman, or a yeoman?

Lear. A king, a king!

Fool. No; he's a yeoman, that has a gentleman to his son: for he's a mad yeoman, that sees his son a gentleman before him.

Lear. To have a thousand with red burning spits

Come hissing in upon them: —

Edg. The foul fiend bites my back.

Fool. He's mad, that trusts in the tameness of a wolf.

Lear. It shall be done, I will arraign them

straight: —

Come, sit thou here, most learned justicer; —

Thou, sapient sir, sit here. [To the Fool.] — Now,

you she foxes! —

Edg. Look, where he stands and glares! —

Wantest thou eyes at trial, madam?

Come o'er the bourn 1, Bessy, to me: —

Fool. She dared not come over to thee.

Edg. The foul fiend haunts poor Tom in the voice of a nightingale. Hapdance cries in Tom's belly for two white herring. Croak not, black angel; I have no food for thee.

Kent. How do you, sir? Stand you not so amaz'd?

Will you lie down and rest upon the cushions?

Lear. I'll see their trial first: — Bring in the evidence.

Thou rob'd man of justice, take thy place;

[To EDGAR.

And thou, his yoke-fellow of equity, [To the Fool.

Bench by his side: — You are of the commission,

Sit you too. [To KENT.

Edg. Let us deal justly.

Sleepest, or wakest thou, jolly shepherd?

Thy sheep be in the corn;

And for one blast of thy mislikin mouth,

Thy sheep shall take no harm.

Pur! the cat is grey.

Lear. Arraign her first; 'tis Goneril. I here take my oath before this honorable assembly, she kicked the poor king her father.

Fool. Come hither, mistress; Is your name Go-neril?

9 Addressed to the Fool, who were ancients called Innocents.

1 Brook, or rivulet.
KING LEAR.  Act III.

KING. Take yet—So, where—Is lay. [Exit.
Servants. We'll get and come, fairs, entertain breeds morning.

FAREWELL. Tom will throw his head at them:—
Avant, you curs!

Be thy mouth or black or white,
Tooth that poisons if it bite;
Mastiff, greyhound, mongrel grim,
Hound, or spaniel, brach, or tym 2; Or bobtail tike, or trundle-tail;
Tom will make them weep and wail:
For, with throwing thus my head,
Dogs keep the hatch, and all are fled.

Do de, do de. Sessa. Come, march to wakens and fairs, and market towns:— Poor Tom, thy horn is dry.

Lear. Then let them anatomi Regan, see what breeds about her heart: Is there any cause in nature that makes these hard hearts?—You, sir, I entertain you for one of my hundred; only, I do not like the fashion of your garments: you will say, they are Persian attire; but let them be changed.

Kent. Now, good my lord, lie here, and rest awhile.
Lear. Make no noise, make no noise; draw the curtains: So, so, so: We'll go to supper i' the morning; So, so, so.

FAREWELL. And I'll go to bed at noon.

Re-enter GLOSTER.

Glo. Come hither, friend: Where is the king my master?
Kent. Here, sir; but trouble him not, his wits are gone.
Glo. Good friend, I pray thee take him in thy arms; I have o'erheard a plot of death upon him: There is a litter ready; lay him in't, And drive towards Dover, friend, where thou shalt meet Both welcome and protection. Take up thy master: If thou should'st daily half an hour, his life With thine, and all that offer to defend him, Stand in assured loss: Take up, take up; And follow me, that will with some provision Give thee quick conduct.

Kent. Oppress'd nature sleeps:—
This rest might yet have balm'd thy broken senses, Which, if convenience will not allow,
Stand in hard cure.—Come, help to bear thy master; Thou must not stay behind. [To the Fool.

Come, come, away.

Glo. [Exit Kent, Gloster, and the Fool, bearing off the King.

Edg. When we our betters see bearing our woes, We scarcely think our miseries our foes. Who alone suffers, suffers most? the mind; Leaving free things, and happy shows, behind:

But then the mind much sufferance doth o'er-slip,
When grief hath mates, and bearing fellowship.
How light and portable my pain seems now,
When that which makes me bend, makes the king bow;
He childed, as I father'd:—Tom, away:
Mark the high noises 3; and thyself bewray,
When false opinion, whose wrong thought defiles thee,
In thy just proof, repeals, and reconcileth thee.
What will hap more to-night, safe 'scape the king! Lurk, lurk. [Exit.

SCENE VII. — A Room in Gloster's Castle.

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, GONERIL, EDMUND, and SERVANTS.

CORN. Post speedily to my lord, your husband; show him this letter:— the army of France is landed:—
Seek out the villain Gloster.

[Exeunt some of the SERVANTS.

REG. Hang him instantly.
GON. Pluck out his eyes.
CORN. Leave him to my displeasure. Edmund, keep you our sister company: the revenges we are bound to take upon your traitorous father are not fit for your beholding. Advise the duke, where you are going, to a most festeinate preparation: we are bound to the like. Our posts shall be swift, and intelligent betwixt us. Farewell, dear sister;—
farewell, my lord of Gloster.

Enter Steward.

How now? Where's the king?
STEW. My lord of Gloster hath convey'd him hence:
Some five or six and thirty of his knights, Hot questrists 8 after him, met him at gate;
Who, with some other of the lord's dependants, Are gone with him towards Dover, where they boast To have well armed friends.

CORN. Get horses for your mistress.
GON. Farewell, sweet lord, and sister.

[Exeunt GONERIL and EDMUND.
CORN. Edmund, farewell. — Go, seek the traitor Gloster,
Pinion him like a thief, bring him before us:

[Exeunt other SERVANTS.

Though well we may not pass upon his life Without the form of justice; yet our power Shall do a courtesy 8 to our wrath, which men May blame, but not control. Who's there? The traitor.

Re-enter SERVANTS, with GLOSTER.

REG. Ingratitude fox! 'tis he.
CORN. Bind fast his corky 7 arms.
GLO. What mean your graces? — Good my friends, consider You are my guests: do me no foul play, friends.
CORN. Bind him, I say. [Servants bind him.

REG. Hard, hard: — O filthy traitor!
GLO. Unmerciful lady as you are, I am none.
CORN. To this chair bind him: — Villain, thou shalt find — [Regan plucks his beard.

GLO. By the kind gods 'tis most ignobly done To pluck me by the beard.

3 The great events that are approaching.
4 Meaning Edmund invested with his father's title.
5 Enquirers.
6 Bend.
7 Dry, like cork.
8 A blood-hound.
KING LEAR.

Reg. So white, and such a traitor!
Glo. Naughty lady, these hairs, which thou dost ravish from my chin, Will quicken and accuse thee: I am your host; With robbers' hands, my hospitable favours You should not ruffle thus. What will you do?
Corn. Come, sir, what letters had you late from France?
Reg. Be simple-answer'd, for we know the truth.
Corn. And what confederacy have you with the traitors?
Late footed in the kingdom?
Reg. To whose hands have you sent the lunatick king?
Speak. Glo. I have a letter guisingly set down,
Which came from one that's of a neutral heart, And not from one oppos'd.
Corn. Cunning.
Reg. And false.
Corn. Where hast thou sent the king?
Glo. To Dover.
Reg. Wherefore to Dover? Wast thou not charg'd at thy peril?
Corn. Wherefore to Dover? Let him first answer that.
Glo. I am tied to the stake, and I must stand the course.
Reg. Wherefore to Dover?
Glo. Because I would not see thy cruel nails Pluck out his poor old eyes; nor thy fierce sister In his anointed flesh stick boarish fangs.
The sea, with such a storm as his bare head In hell-black night endur'd, would have buoy'd up, And quench'd the steddled fires: yet, poor old heart.
He holp the heavens to rain.
If wolves had at thy gate howl'd that stern time,
Thou shott'st have said, Good porter, turn the key; All cruel's else subscrib'd: — But I shall see
The winged vengeance overtake such children.
Corn. See it shalt thou never: — Fellows, hold the chair:
Upon these eyes of thine I'll set my foot.
[Gloster is held down in his Chair, while Cornwall plucks out one of his Eyes, and sets his Foot on it.
Glo. He, that will think to live till he be old,
Give me some help: — O cruel! O ye gods!
Reg. One side will mock another; the other too.
Corn. If you see vengeance,—
Serv. Hold your hand, my lord: I have serv'd you ever since I was a child:

But better service have I never done you,
Than now to bid you hold.
Reg. How now, you dog?
Serv. If you did wear a beard upon your chin,
I'd shake it on this quarrel: What do you mean?
Corn. My villain! [Draws, and runs at him.
Serv. Nay, then come on, and take the chance of anger.
[Draws. They fight. Cornwall is wounded.
Reg. Give me thy sword. — [To another Serv.] A peasant stand up thus!
[Snatches a Sword, comes behind, and stabs him.
Serv. O, I am slain! — My lord, you have one eye left
To see some mischief on him: — O! [Dies.
Corn. Lest it see more, prevent it: — Out, vile jelly!
Where is thy lustre now?
[Tears out Gloster's other Eye, and throws it on the Ground.
Glo. All dark and comfortless. — Where's my son Edmund?
Edmund, enkindle all the sparks of nature,
To quit this horrid act.
Reg. Out, treacherous villain! Thou call'st on him that hates thee: it was he That made the overture of thy treasons to us;
Who is too good to pity thee.
Glo. O my follies!
Then Edgar was abus'd —
Kind gods, forgive me that, and prosper him!
Reg. Go, thrust him out at gates, and let him smell His way to Dover. — How is't, my lord? How look you?
Corn. I have receiv'd a hurt: — Follow me, lady,—
Turn out that eyeless villain; throw this slave Upon the dunghill. — Regan, I bleed space: Untimely comes this hurt: Give me your arm.
[Exit Cornwall, led by Regan; — Servants unbind Gloster, and lead him out.
1 Serv. I'll never care what wickedness I do, If this man comes to good.
2 Serv. If she live long,
And, in the end, meet the old course of death,
Women will all turn monsters.
1 Serv. Let's follow the old earl, and get the Bedlam 6
To lead him where he would; his roguish madness Allows itself to any thing.
2 Serv. Go thou; I'll fetch some flax, and white eggs,
To apply to his bleeding face. Now, heaven help him!
[Exit severally.

ACT IV.

SCENE I. — The Heath.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. Yet better thus, and known to be contemn'd,
Than still contemn'd and flatter'd. To be worst,
The lowest and most dejected thing of fortune,
Stands still in esperance; lives not in fear:
The lamentable change is from the best;
The worst returns to laughter. Welcome then,

Thou unsubstantial air, that I embrace!
The wretch, that thou hast blown unto the worst,
Owes nothing to thy blasts. — But who comes here?

Enter Gloster, led by an old Man.

My father, poorly led? — World, world, O world!
But that thy strange mutations make us hate thee,
Life would not yield to age.
Old Man. O my good lord, I have been your tenant, and your father's tenant, these fourscore years.
Reg. Require. 5 Laid open. 6 Bedlamite, madman.

ACT IV.

Reg. So white, and such a traitor!
Glo. Naughty lady, these hairs, which thou dost ravish from my chin, Will quicken and accuse thee: I am your host; With robbers' hands, my hospitable favours You should not ruffle thus. What will you do?

Reg. Go, thrust him out at gates, and let him smell His way to Dover. — How is't, my lord? How look you?
Corn. I have receiv'd a hurt: — Follow me, lady,—
Turn out that eyeless villain; throw this slave Upon the dunghill. — Regan, I bleed space: Untimely comes this hurt: Give me your arm.
[Exit Cornwall, led by Regan; — Servants unbind Gloster, and lead him out.
1 Serv. I'll never care what wickedness I do, If this man comes to good.
2 Serv. If she live long,
And, in the end, meet the old course of death,
Women will all turn monsters.
1 Serv. Let's follow the old earl, and get the Bedlam 6
To lead him where he would; his roguish madness Allows itself to any thing.
2 Serv. Go thou; I'll fetch some flax, and white eggs,
To apply to his bleeding face. Now, heaven help him!
[Exit severally.
Glo. Away, get thee away; good friend, be gone; Thy comforts can do me no good at all, Theye they may hurt.

Old Man. Alack, sir, you cannot see your way. Glo. I have no way, and therefore want no eyes; I stumbled when I saw: Full oft 'tis seen, Our mean secure us; and our mere defects Prove our commodities. — Ah, dear son Edgar, The food of thy abused father's wrath! Might I but live to see thee in my touch, I'd say, I had eyes again!

Old Man. How now? Who's there? Edg. [Aside.] O gods! Who isn't can say, I am — at the worst? I am worse than e'er I was.

Old Man. 'Tis poor mad Tom. Edg. [Aside.] And worse I may be yet: The worst is not, So long as we can say, This is the worst.

Glo. He has some reason, else he could not beg. I' the last night's storm I such a fellow saw; Which made me think a man a worm: My son Came then into my mind; and yet my mind Was then scarce friends with him: I have heard more since.

Edg. How should this be? — Bad is the trade must play the fool to sorrow, Ang'ring itself and others. [Aside.] — Bless thee, master!

Glo. Then, pr'ythee, get thee gone: If, for my sake, Thou wilt o'ertake us, hence a mile or twain, I' the way to Dover, do it for ancient love; And bring some covering for this naked soul, Whom I'll entreat to lead me.

Old Man. Alack, sir, he's mad.

Glo. 'Tis the time's plague, when madmen lead the blind.

Do as I bid thee, or rather do thy pleasure; Above the rest, be gone.

Old Man. I'll bring him the best parel that I have, Come on't what will. [Exit.]

Glo. Sirrah, naked fellow.

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold: I cannot daub it further. [Aside.]

Glo. Know'st thou the way to Dover? Edg. Both stile and gate, horse-way and foot-path. Poor Tom hath been scared out of his good wits: Bless the good man from the foul fiend! Five fiends have been in poor Tom at once. So, bless thee, master!

Glo. Here, take this purse, thou whom the heaven's plagues Have humbled to all strokes: that I am wretched, Makes thee the happier: — Heavens, deal so still! Let the superfluous, and lust-dieted man That slaves your ordinance, that will not see Because he cloth not feel, feed your power quickly; So distribution should undo excess. And each man have enough. — Dost thou know Dover?

Edg. Ay, master.

Glo. There is a cliff, whose high and bending head Looks fearfully in the confined deep: Bring me but to the very brim of it, And I'll repair the misery thou dost bear, With something rich about me: from that place I shall no leading need.

Edg. Give me thy arm; Poor Tom shall lead thee. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Before the Duke of Albany's Palace.

Enter Goneril and Edmund; Steward meeting them.

Gon. Welcome, my lord: I marvel, our mild husband Not met us on the way: — Now, where's your master? Stew. Madam, within; but never man so chang'd: I told him of the army that was landed; He smil'd at it: I told him you were coming; His answer was, The worse: of Gloster's treachery, And of the loyal service of his son, When I inform'd him, then he call'd me sot; And told me, I had turn'd the wrong side out: — What most he should dislike, seems pleasant to him; What like, offensive.

Gon. Then shall you go no further. [To Edmund.]

It is the cowish terror of his spirit, That dares not undertake: he'll not feel wrongs, Which tie him to an answer; Our wishes, on the way, May prove effects. Back, Edmund, to my brother; Hasten his masters, and conduct his powers; I must change arms at home, and give the distress Into my husband's hands. This trusty servant Shall pass between us: ere long you are like to hear, If you dare venture in your own behalf, A mistress's command. Wear this; spare speech; [Giving a Favour.]

Decline your head: this kiss, if it durst speak, Would stretch thy spirits up into the air; — Conceive, and fare thee well.

Edm. Yours in the ranks of death.

Gon. My most dear Gloster! [Exit Edmund.]

O, the difference of man, and man! To thee A woman's services are due; my fool Usurps my bed.

Stew. Madam, here comes my lord. [Exit Steward]

Enter Albany.

Gon. I have been worth the whistle. 9

Alb. O Goneril,
You are not worth the dust which the rude wind Blows in your face. — I fear your disposition: That nature, which contemns its origin, Cannot be border'd certain in itself; She that herself will sliver 1 and disbranch From her material sap, perforse must wither, And come to deadly use.

Gon. No more; the text is foolish.

Alb. Wisdom and goodness to the vile seem vile: Fitth savour but themselves. What have you done? Tigers, not daughters, what have you perform'd? A father, and a gracious aged man, Whose reverence the head-lugg'd bear would lick, Most barbarous, most degenerate! have you maddened.

7 Disguise.

8 I. e. Our wishes on the road may be completed.

9 Worth calling for. 1 Tear off.
SCENE II.

KING LEAR.

Could my good brother suffer you to do it?
A man, a prince, by him so benefited?
If that the heavens do not their visible spirits
Send quickly down to tame these vile offences,
'Twill come,
Humanity must perforce prey on itself,
Like monsters of the deep.

Con. Milk-liver'd man!
Thou bear'st a cheek for blows, a head for wrongs;
Who hast not in thy brows an eye discerning
Thine honour from thy suffering; that not know'st,
Foils do those villains pity, who are punish'd
Ere they have done their mischief. Where's thy drum?
France spreads his banners in our noiseless land;
With plumed helm thy slayer begins threats;
Whilst thou, a moral fool, sit'st still, and cry'st,
Alack! why does he so?

Alb. See thyself, devil!
Proper deformity seems not in the fiend
So horrid, as in woman.

Con. O vain fool!

Alb. Thou changed and self-cover'd thing, for shame,
Be-monster not thy feature. Were it my fitness
To let these hands obey my blood,
They are apt enough to dislocate and tear
Thy flesh and bones: — Howe'er thou art a fiend,
A woman's shape doth shield thee.

Con. Marry, your manhood now!

Enter a Messenger.

Alb. What news?

Mess. O, my good lord, the duke of Cornwall's dead?
Slain by his servant, going to put out
The other eye of Gloster.

Alb. Gloster's eyes!

Mess. A servant that he bred, thrill'd with remorse,
Oppos'd against the act, bending his sword
To his great master; who, thereat enrag'd,
Flew on him, and amongst them fell'd him dead:
But not without that harmful stroke, which since
Hath pluck'd him after.

Alb. This shows you are above,
You justicers, that these our nether crimes
So speedily can venge! — But, O poor Gloster!
Lost he his other eye?

Mess. Both, both, my lord. —
This letter, madam, craves a speedy answer;
'Tis from your sister.

Con. [Aside.] One way I like this well;
But being widow, and my Gloster with her,
May all the building in my fancy pluck
Upon my hateful life: Another way,
The news is not so tart. — I'll read, and answer.

[Exit.]

Alb. Where was his son, when they did take his eyes?

Mess. Come with my lady hither.

Alb. He is not here.

Mess. No, my good lord; I met him back again.

Alb. Knows he the wickedness?

Mess. Ay, my good lord; 'twas he inform'd against him;

And quit the house on purpose, that their punishment
Might have the freer course.

Alb. Gloster, I live
To thank thee for the love thou show'dst the king,
And to revenge thine eyes. — Come hither, friend:
Tell me what more thou knowest. [Exit.]

SCENE III. — The French Camp near Dover.

Enter Kent, and a Gentleman.

Kent. Why the king of France is so suddenly gone back know you the reason?

Gent. Something he left imperfect in the state,
Which since his coming forth is thought of; which Imports to the kingdom so much fear and danger,
That his personal return was most requir'd,
And necessary.

Kent. Who hath he left behind him general?

Gent. The Mareschal of France, Monsieur le Fer.
Kent. Did your letters pierce the queen to any demonstration of grief?

Gent. Ay, sir; she took them, read them in my presence;
And now and then an ample tear trill'd down
Her delicate cheek: it seem'd, she was a queen
Over her passion; who, most rebel-like,
Sought to be king o'er her.

Kent. O, then it mov'd her.

Gent. Not to a rage: patience and sorrow strove
Who should express her goodliest. You have seen
Sunshine and rain at once: her smiles and tears
Were like a better day: Those happy smiles,
That play'd on her ripe lip, seem'd not to know
That guests were in her eyes; which parted thence,
As pearls from diamonds dropp'd. — In brief, sorrow
Would be a rarity most belov'd, if all
Could so become it.

Kent. Made she no verbal question? &

Gent. 'Faith, once, or twice, she heav'd the name of Father
Pantingly forth, as if it press'd her heart;
Cried, Sisters! sisters! — Shame of ladies! sisters!
Kent! father! sisters! What? 'tis the storm? 'tis the night?

Let pity not be beliiev'd! — There she shook
The holy water from her heavenly eyes,
And clamour moisten'd: then away she started
To deal with grief alone.

Kent. It is the stars,
The stars above us, govern our conditions;
Else one self mate and mate could not beget
Such different issues. You spoke not with her since?

Gent. No.

Kent. Was this before the king returned?

Gent. No, since.

Kent. Well, sir; The poor distress'd Lear is i' the town:
Who sometime, in his better tune, remembers
What we are come about, and by no means
Will yield to see his daughter.

Gent. Why, good sir?

Kent. A sovereign shame so ellows him: his own unkindness,
That stripp'd her from his benediction, turn'd her
To foreign casualties, gave her dear rights
To his dog-hearted daughters, — these things sting
His mind so venomously, that 'burning shame
Detains him from Cordelia.

Gent. Alack, poor gentleman!

Kent. Of Albany's and Cornwall's powers you heard not?

Gent. 'Tis so; they are afoot.

Kent. Well, sir, I'll bring you to our master Lear,
And leave you to attend him: some dear cause,
Will in concealment wrap me up awhile;
When I am known aright, you shall not grieve
Lending me this acquaintance. I pray you, go Along with me. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The same. A Tent.

Enter CORDELIA, Physician, and Soldiers.

Cor. Alack, 'tis he; why, he was met even now
As mad as the vex'd sea; singing aloud;
Crown'd with rank fumiter, 5 and furrow weeds,
With harlocks 6, hemlock, nettles, cuckoo-flowers,
Darnel, and all the idle weeds that grow
In our sustaining corn.—A century send forth;
Search every acre in the high-grown field,
And bring him to our eye. [Exit an Officer.—
What can man's wisdom do,
In the restoring his bereaved sense?
He, that helps him, take all my outward worth.

Phy. There is means, madam:
Our foster-nurse of nature is repose,
The whic he lacks; that to provoke in him,
Are many simples operative, whose power
Will close the eye of anguish.

Cor. All bless'd secrets,
All you unpublish'd virtues of the earth,
Spring with my tears! be aidant, and remediate,
In the good man's distress! — Seek, seek for him;
Lest his ungovern'd rage dissolve the life
That wants the means to lead it.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Madam, news;
The British powers are marching hitherward.

Cor. 'Tis known before; our preparation stands
In expectation of them. —O dear father,
It is thy business that I go about;
Therefore great France
My mourning, and important tears, hath pitied.
No blown 8 ambition doth our arms incite,
But love, dear love, and our ag'd father's right:
Soon may I hear, and see him. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—A Room in Gloster's Castle.

Enter REGAN and Steward.

Reg. But are my brother's powers set forth?
Stew. Ay, madam. Himself

In person there?
Stew. Madam, with much ado:
Your sister is the better soldier.

Reg. Lord Edmund speak not with your lord at home?
Stew. No, madam.

Reg. What might import my sister's letter to him?
Stew. I know not, lady.

Reg. Faith, he is posted hence on serious matter.
It was great ignorance, Gloster's eyes being out,
To let him live; where he arrives, he moves
All hearts against us: Edmund, I think, is gone,
In pity of his misery, to despatch
Hisighted life; moreover, to descry
The strength o' the enemy.

Stew. I must needs after him, madam, with my letter.

Reg. Our troops set forth to-morrow; stay with us;
The ways are dangerous.

Stew. I may not, madam;
My lady charg'd my duty in this business.

Reg. Why should she write to Edmund? Might not you
Transport her purposes by word? Belike,
Something — I know not what: — I'll love thee
much,
Let me unseal the letter.

Stew. Madam, I had rather —
Reg. I know, your lady does not love her husband;
I am sure of that: and, at her late being here,
She gave strange oalids, 9 and most speaking looks
To noble Edmund: I know, you are of her bosom.

Stew. I, madam?

Reg. I speak in understanding; you are, I know it:
Therefore, I do advise you, take this note:
My lord is dead; Edmund and I have talk'd;
And more convenient is he for my hand,
Than for your lady's: — You may gather more.
If you do find him, pray you, give him this:
And when your mistress hears thus much from you,
I pray, desire her call her wisdom to her.
So, fare you well.
If you do chance to hear of that blind traitor,
Preferment falls on him that cuts him off.

Stew. 'Would I could meet him, madam; I would show
What party I do follow.

Reg. Fare thee well. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI.—The Country near Dover.

Enter GLOSTER, and EDGAR dressed like a Peasant.

Glo. When shall we come to the top of that same hill?

Edg. You do climb up it now: look, how we labour.

Glo. Methinks, the ground is even.

Edg. Horrible steep;

Hark, do you hear the sea?

Glo. No, truly.

Edg. Why, then your other senses grow imperfect
By your eyes' anguish.

Glo. So may it be, indeed:
Methinks, thy voice is alter'd; and thou speak'st
In better phrase, and matter, than thou didst.

Edg. You are much deceiv'd; in nothing am I chang'd,
But in my garments.

Glo. Methinks, you are better spoken.

Edg. Come on, sir; here's the place: — stand still. — How fearful
And dizzy 'tis, to cast one's eyes so low!
The rows, and crows, and choughs, that wing the midday air,
Show scarce so gross as beetles: Half way down
Hangs one that gather's samphire 2; dreadful trade!
Methinks, he seems no bigger than his head;
The fishermen, that walk upon the beach,
Appear like mice; and you' tail anchoring bark,
Diminish'd to her cock 3; her cock, her buoy
Almost too small for sight: — The murmuring surge,
That on the unnumber'd idle pebbles chafes,
Cannot be heard so high: — I'll look no more;
Lest my brain turn, and the deficient sight
Topple 4 down headlong.

Glo. Set me where you stand.

5 Fumitory.
6 Charlocks.
7 Infibated, swelling.
9 A cast, or significant glance of the eye.
10 Observe what I am saying.
11 A vegetable gathered for pickling.
12 Her cock-boat.
13 Tumble.
Scene VI.

Edg. Give me your hand: You are now within a foot of the extreme verge; for all beneath the moon Would I not leap upright.

Glo. Let go my hand.

Here, friend, is another purse; in it a jewel Worth well a poor man's taking: Fairies, and gods, Prosper it with thee! Go thou further off; Bid me farewell, and let me hear thee going.

Edg. Now fare you well, good sir.

[Seems to go.

With all my heart.

Edg. Why do I trifle thus with his despair, In hope to cure it.

Glo. O you mighty gods! This world I do renounce: and, in your sights, Shake patiently my great affliction off:
If I could bear it longer, and not fall To quarrel with your great opposeless wills, My snuff, and loathed part of nature, should Burn itself out. If Edgar live, O, bless him! — Now fellow, fare thee well.

[He leaps, and falls along.

Glo. Away, and let me die.

Edg. Hadst thou been aught but gossamer, feathers, air,
So many fathom down precipitating,
Thou hadst shiver'd like an egg: but thou dost breathe;
Hast heavy substance; bleed'st not; speak'st: art sound.

Ten masts at each make not the altitude,
Which thou hast perpendicularly fell;
Thy life's a miracle: Speak yet again.

Glo. But have I fallen, or no?

Edg. From the dread summit of this chalky bourn;
Look up a-height; — the shrill-gorg'd 6 lark so far Cannot be seen or heard: do but look up.

Glo. Alack, I have no eyes.

Is wretchedness depriv'd that benefit,
To end itself by death? 'Twas yet some comfort,
When misery could beguile the tyrant's rage,
And frustrate his proud will.

Edg. Give me your arm:
Up: — So; — How is't? Feel you your legs? You stand.

Glo. Too well, too well.

Edg. This is above all strangeness.
Upon the crown o'the cliff, what thing was that Which parted from you?

Glo. A poor unfortunate beggar.

Edg. As I stood here below, methought, his eyes Were two full moons; he had a thousand noses, Horns whelk'd 7, and waw'd like the enrigled sea; It was some fiend: Therefore, thou happy father, Think that the clearest 3 gods, who make them honours

Of men's impossibilities, have preserv'd thee.

Glo. I do remember now: henceforth I'll bear Affliction, till it do cry out itself,

Enough, enough, and die. That thing you speak of, I took it for a man; often 'twould say,
The fiend, the fiend; he led me to that place.

Edg. Bear free and patient thoughts. — But who comes here?

Enter Lear, fantastically dressed up with flowers.
The safer sense will ne'er accommodate His master thus.

Lear. No, they cannot touch me for coining;
I am the king himself.

Edg. O thou side-piercing sight!

Lear. Nature's above art in that respect. — There's your press-money. That fellow handles his bow like a crow-keeper: draw me a clothier's yard. — Look, look, a mouse! Peace, peace; — this piece of toasted cheese will do't. — There's my gauntlet: I'll prove it on a giant. — Bring up the brown bills. — O, well flown bird! — I'the clout, i'the clout 8: hewgh! — Give the word.

Edg. Sweet marjoram.

Lear. Pass.

Glo. I know that voice.

Lear. Ha! Goneril! — with a white beard! — They flatter'd me like a dog; and told me, I had white hairs in my beard, ere the black ones were there. To say ay, and no, to every thing I said! — Ay and no too was the black and divinity. When the rain came to wet me once, and the wind to make me chatter; when the thunder would not peace at my bidding; there I found them, there I smelt them out. Go to, they are not men o' their words: they told me I was every thing; 'tis a lie; I am not ague-proof.

Glo. The trick 4 of that voice I do well remember: Is't not the king?

Lear. Ay, every inch a king:
When I do stare, see, how the subject quakes.

I pardon that man's life: what was thy cause?

Adultery.

Thou shalt not die: for Gosten's bastard son Was kinder to his father, than my daughters

Born in the lawful bed.

Glo. O, let me kiss that hand!

Lear. Let me wipe it first; it smells of mortality.

Glo. O ruin'd piece of nature! This great world Shall so wear out to nought. — Dost thou know me?

Lear. I remember thine eyes well enough. Dost thou squint 5 at me? No, do thy worst, blind Cupid; I'll not love. — Read thou this challenge; mark but the penning of it.

Glo. Were all the letters suns, I could not see one.

Edg. I would not take this from report: — it is, And my heart breaks at it.

Lear. Read.

Glo. What, with the case of eyes?

Lear. O, ho, are you there with me? No eyes in your head, nor no money in your purse? Your eyes are in a heavy case, your purse in a light: Yet you see how this world goes.

Glo. I see it feelingly.

Lear. What, art mad? A man may see how this world goes, with no eyes. Look with thine ears; see how you' justice rails upon you' simple thief. Hark, in thine ear: Change places; and, handy-dandy, which is the justice, which is the thief? — Thou hast seen a farmer's dog bark at a beggar?

9 An arrow of a cloth yard long.
* Battle-axes.
2 The white mark for archers to aim at.
3 The watch-word.
4 Likeness, manner.
5 Look asquint.
KING LEAR.

Act IV.

Edg. I thank you, sir: that's all.

Gent. Though that the queen on special cause is here,
Her army is mov'd on.

Edg. I thank you, sir. [Exit Gent.]

Glo. You ever-gentle gods, take my breath from me;
Let not my worser spirit 9 tempt me again
To die before you please!

Edg. Well pray you, father.

Glo. Now, good sir, what are you?

Edg. A most poor man, made tame by fortune's blows;
Who, by the art of known and feeling sorrows,
Am pregnant to good pity. Give me your hand,
I'll lead you to some bidding.

Glo. Hearty thanks;
The bounty and the benison 1 of heaven
To boot, and boot! 9

Enter Steward.

Stew. A proclaim'd prize! Most happy!
That eyeless head of thine was first fram'd flesh
To raise my fortunes. — Thou old unhappy traitor,
Briefly thyself remember: — The sword is out
That must destroy thee.

Glo. Now let thy friendly hand
Put strength enough to it. [Edgar opposes.

Stew. Wherefore, bold peasant,
Dar'st thou support a publish'd traitor? Hence;
Lest that the infection of his fortune take
Like hold on thee. Let go his arm.

Edg. Ch'll not let go, zir, without vurther 'casion.

Stew. Let go, slave, or thou diest.

Edg. Good gentleman, go your gait 3 and let poor volk pass.
And ch'ud ha' been swaggar'd out of my life, 'twould not ha' been so long as 'tis by a vortnight.
Nay, come not near the old man; keep out, che vor' ye, or ise try whether your cos-trad 4 or my bat 5 be the harder: Ch'll be plain with you.

Stew. Out, dunghill!

Edg. Ch'll pick your teeth, zir: Come; no matter vor your foins. 6

[They fight; and Edgar knocks him down.

Stew. Slave, thou hast slain me: — Villain, take my purse;
If ever thou wilt thrive, bury my body;
And give the letters, which thou findest about me,
To Edmund earl of Gloster; seek him out
Upon the British party: — O, untimely death!

[Dies.

Edg. I know thee well: A serviceable villain;
As duteous to the vices of thy mistress,
As badness would desire.

Glo. What, is he dead?

Edg. Sit you down, father; rest you. —
Let's see his pockets: these letters, that he speaks of,
May be my friends. — He's dead: I am only sorry
He had no other death's man. — Let us see:
Leave, gentle wax; and, mannerls, blame us not;
To know our enemies' minds, we'd rip their hearts;
Their papers, is more lawful.

[Reads.] Let our reciprocal vows be remember'd.
You have many opportunities to cut him off: if your will want not, time and place will be fruitfully offered.
There is nothing done, if he return the conqueror.

8 Block anciently signified the head part of a hat.
9 i.e., A man of tears.
10 The main body is expected to be desecrated every hour.
Then am I the prisoner, and his bed my gaol: from which deliver me, and supply the place for your labour.
Your wife, (so I would say,) and your affectionate servant,

KING.

O undistinguish’d space of woman’s will! —
A plot upon her virtuous husband’s life;
And the exchange, my brother! — Here, in the sands,
Thee I’ll rake up, and, in the mature time,
With this ungracious paper strike the sight
Of the death-practis’d duke: For him ’tis well,
That of thy death and business I can tell.

[Exit Edgar, dragging out the Body.

Glo. The king is mad: How stiff is my vile sense,
That I stand up, and have ingenious feeling
Of my huge sorrows! Better I were distract;
So should my thoughts be sever’d from my griefs;
And woes, by wrong imaginations, lose
The knowledge of themselves.

Re-enter Edgar.

Edg. Give me your hand:
Far off, methinks, I hear the beaten drum.
Come, father, I’ll bestow you with a friend.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VII. — A Tent in the French Camp.

LEAR on a Bed, asleep: Physician, Gentleman, and others, attending. Enter CORDELIA and Kent.

Cor. O thou good Kent, how shall I live, and work,
To match thy goodness? My life will be too short,
And every measure fail me.
Kent. To be acknowledg’d, madam, is o’erpaid.
All my reports go with the modest truth;
Nor more, nor clipp’d, but so.

Cor. These weeds are memories of those worser hours;
I pr’ythee, put them off.

Kent. Pardon me, dear madam;
Yet to be known, shortens my made intent:
My boon I make it, that you know me not,
Till time and I think meet.

Cor. Then be it so, my good lord. — How does the king?

Phys. Madam, sleeps still.

Cor. O you kind gods,
Cure this great breach in his abused nature!
Th’ untun’d and jarring senses, O, wind up,
Of this child-changed father!

Phys. So please your majesty,
That we may wake the king? he hath slept long.

Cor. Be govern’d by your knowledge, and proceed
I the sway of your own will. Is he array’d?

Gent. Ay, madam; in the heaviness of his sleep,
We put fresh garments on him.

Phys. Beby, good madam, when we do awake him;
I doubt not of his temperance.

Cor. Very well.

Phys. Please you, draw near. — Louder the musick there.

Cor. O my dear father! Restoration, hang
Thy medicine on my lips; and let this kiss
Repair those violent harms, that my two sisters
Have in thy reverence made: — For him ’tis well!

Kent. Kind and dear princess! —

Cor. Had you not been their father, these white flakes

Had challeng’d pity of them. Was this a face
To be expos’d against the warring winds?
To stand against the deep dread-bolted thunder?
In the most terrible and nimble stroke
Of quick, cross lightning? to watch (poor perdu!) With this thin helm? — Mine enemy’s dog.
Though he had bit me, should have stood that night
Against my fire; — And was I thus faint, poor father,
Toovel thee with swine, and rogues forlorn,
In short and musty straw? Alack, alack!
’Tis wonder, that thy life and wits at once
Had not concluded all. — He wakes; speak to him.

Phys. Madam, do you; ’tis fittest.

Cor. How does my royal lord? How fares your majesty?

LEAR. You do me wrong, to take me out o’ the grave:

Thou art a soul in bliss; but I am bound
Upon a wheel of fire, that mine own tears
Do seald like molten lead.

Cor. Sir, do you know me?

LEAR. You are a spirit, I know; When did you die?

Cor. Still, still, far wide!

Phys. He’s scarce awake; let him alone awhile.

LEAR. Where have I been? — Where am I?

Fair day-light?—

I am mightily abus’d. — I should even die with pity,
To see another thus. — I know not what to say.
I will not swear, these are my hands: — let’s see;
I feel this pin prick. — Would I were assur’d
Of my condition.

Cor. O, look upon me, sir;
And hold your hands in benediction o’er me: —
No, sir, you must not kneel.

LEAR. Pray do not mock me: I am a very foolish fond old man,
Fourscore and upward; and, to deal plainly,
I fear, I am not in my perfect mind.
Methinks, I should know you, and know this man:
Yet I am doubtful: for I am mainly ignorant
What place this is; and all the skill I have Remembers not these garments; nor I know not
Where I did lodge last night: Do not laugh at me;
For, as I am a man, I think this lady
To be my child Cordelia.

Cor. And so I am, I am.

LEAR. Be your tears wet? Yes, faith. I pray, wipe not:
If you have poison for me, I will drink it.
I know, you do not love me; for your sisters
Have, as I do remember, done me wrong;
You have some cause, they have not.

Cor. No cause, no cause.

LEAR. Am I in France?

Kent. In your own kingdom, sir.

LEAR. Do not abuse me.

Phys. Be comforted, good madam: the great rage,
You see, is cur’d in him; and yet it is danger
To make him even o’er the time he has lost.
Desire him to go in; trouble him no more,
Till further settling.

Cor. Will’t please your highness walk?

LEAR. You must bear with me:
Pray now, forget and forgive: I am old, and foolish.

[Exeunt LEAR, CORDELIA, Physician, and Attendants.

1 Thin covering of hair.

2 The allusion is to the forlorn hope in an army, called in French, enfans perdus.
SCENE I. — The Camp of the British Forces, near Dover.

Enter, with Drums and Colours, Edmund, Regan, Officers, Soldiers, and others.

Edm. Know of the duke, if his last purpose hold; Or, whether since he is advis’d by aught To change the course: He’s full of alteration, And self-reproving: — Bring his constant pleasure, to an Officer, who goes out.

Reg. Our sister’s man is certainly miscarried. Edmund.

Edm. ’Tis to be doubted, madam.

Reg. Now, sweet lord, You know the goodness I intend upon you: Tell me, — but truly, — but then speak the truth, Do you not love my sister?

Edm. In honour’d love.

Reg. I never shall endure her: Dear my lord, Be not familiar with her.

Edm. Fear me not: —
She, and the duke her husband, —

Enter Albany, Goneril, and Soldiers.

Gon. I had rather lose the battle, than that Shoul’d loosen him and me. [Aside.

Alb. Our very loving sister, well be met. —
Sir, this I hear, — The king is come to his daughter, With others, whom the rigour of our state, For’d to cry out. Where I could not but honest, I never yet was valiant: for this business, It toucheth us as France invades our land, Not holds the king; with others, whom I fear, Most just and heavy causes make oppose. Edmund.

Edm. Sir, you speak nobly.

Reg. Why is this reason’d?

Gon. Combine together ’gainst the enemy: For these domestic and particular broils Are not to question here.

Alb. Let us then determine With the ancient of war on our proceedings. Edmund.

Edm. I shall attend you presently at your tent.

Reg. Sister, you’ll go with us?

Gon. No.

Reg. ’Tis most convenient; pray you, go with us.

Gon. O, ho, I know the riddle: [Aside.] I will go.

As they are going out, enter Edgar, disguised.

Edg. If c’er your grace had speech with man so poor, Hear me one word.

Alb. I’ll overtake you. — Speak.

[Exeunt Edmund, Regan, Goneril, Officers, Soldiers, and Attendants.

3 His settled resolution. 4 i.e. Emboldens him.

KENT. Report is changeable.

'Tis time to look about; the powers o’ the kingdom Approach apace.

Gent. The arbitrement 6 is like to be a bloody. Fare you well, sir. [Exit.

KENT. My point and period will be thoroughly wrought, Or well, or ill, as this day’s battle’s fought. [Exit.

ACT V.

Edg. Before you fight the battle, ope this letter. If you have victory, let the trumpet sound For him that brought it: wretched though I seem, I can produce a champion, that will prove What is avouched there: If you miscarry, Your business of the world hath so an end, And machination ceases. Fortune love you!

Alb. Stay till I have read the letter.

Edg. I was forbid it. When time shall serve, let but the herald cry, And I’ll appear again. [Exit.

Alb. Why, fare thee well; I will o’erlook thy paper.

Re-enter EDMUND.

Edm. The enemy’s in view, draw up your powers. Here is the guess of their true strength and forces By diligent discovery; — but your haste Is now urg’d on you.

Alb. We will greet the time. [Exit.

Edm. To both these sisters have I sworn my love; Each jealous of the other, as the stung Are of the adder. Which of them shall I take? Both! one? or neither? Neither can be enjoy’d, If both remain alive: To take the widow, Exasperates, makes mad her sister Goneril; And hardly shall I carry out my side, Her husband being alive. Now then we’ll use His countenance for the battle: which being done, Let her, who would be rid of him, devise His speedy taking off. As for the mercy Which he intends to Lear, and to Cordelia, — The battle done, and they within our power, Shall never see his pardon: for my state Stands on me to defend, not to debate. [Exit.

SCENE II. — A Field between the two Camps.

Enter, with Drum and Colours, Lear, Cordelia, and their Forces; and exeunt.

Enter Edgar and Gloucester.

Edg. Here, father, take the shadow of this tree For your good host; pray that the right may thrive. If ever I return to you again, I’ll bring you comfort.

A Learums: afterwaress a Retreat. Re-enter Edgar.

Edg. Away, old man, give me thy hand, away; King Lear hath lost, he and his daughter ta’en: Give me thy hand, come on.

Glo. No further, sir; a man may rot even here.

6 Decision. 7 Be ready to meet the occasion. 8 i.e. Make my part good.
Edg. What, in ill thoughts again? Men must endure
Their going hence, even as their coming hither:
Ripeness is all: Come on.

Glo. And that's true too.

[Exit.

SCENE III. — The British Camp near Dover.

Enter, in Conquest, with Drum and Colours, Edmund; Lear and Cordelia, as Prisoners; Officers, Soldiers, &c.

Edm. Some officers take them away: good guard;
Until their greater pleasures first be known
That are to censure" of them.

Cor. We are not the first,
Who, with best meaning, have incur'd the worst.
For thee, oppressed king, am I cast down;
Myself could else out-frown false fortune's frown. —
Shall we not see these daughters, and these sisters?

Lear. No, no, no, no! Come, let's away to prison:
We two alone will sing like birds in the cage:
When thou dost ask me blessing, I'll kneel down,
And ask of thee forgiveness: So we'll live,
And pray, and sing, and tell old tales, and laugh
At gilded butterflies, and hear poor rogues
Talk of court news: and we'll talk with them too —
Who loses, and who wins; who's in, who's out: —
And take upon us the mystery of things,
As if we were Heaven's spies: And we'll wear out,
In a wall'd prison, packs and sects of great ones,
That ebb and flow by the moon.

Edm. Take them away.

Lear. Upon such sacrifices, my Cordelia,
The gods themselves throw incense. Have I caught thee?
He, that parts us, shall bring a brand from heaven,
And fire us hence, like foxes. Wipe thine eyes;
They shall not make us weep: we'll see them starve first.

Come. [Exit.]

Edm. Come hither, captain; hark.
Take thou this note; [Giving a Paper.] go, follow them to prison:
One step I have advanc'd thee; if thou dost
As this instructs thee, thou dost make thy way
To noble fortunes: Know thou this, — that men
Are as the time is: to be tender-minded
Does not become a sword: — Thy great employment
Will not bear question; either say, thou'lt do,
Or thrive by other means.

Edm. About it; and write happy, when thou hast done.
Mark, — I say, instantly; and carry it so,
As I have set it down.

Off. If it be man's work, I will do it.

[Exit Officer.

Flourish. Enter Albany, Goneril, Regan, Officers, and Attendants.

Alb. Sir, you have so long to-day your valiant
And fortune led you well: You have the captives,
Who were the opposites of this day's strife:
We do require them of you; so to use them,
As we shall find their merits and our safety
May equally determine.

Edm. Sir, I thought it fit
To send the old and miserable king
To some retention, and appointed guard;
Whose age has charms in it, whose title more,
To pluck the common bosom on his side,
And turn our impress'd lances in our eyes
Which do command them. With him I sent the queen;
My reason all the same; and they are ready
To-morrow, or at further space, to appear
Where you shall hold your session. At this time,
We sweat, and bleed; the friend hath lost his friend;
And the best quarrels, in the heat, are curst;
By those that feel their sharpness: —
The question of Cordelia, and her father,
Requires a fitter place.

Alb. Sir, by your patience,
I hold you but a subject of this war,
Not as a brother.

Reg. That's as we list to grace him.
Methinks, our pleasure might have been demanded,
Ere you had speak so far. He led our powers;
Bore the commission of my place and person;
The which immediacy I may well stand up,
And call itself your brother.

Gon. Not so hot:
In his own grace he doth exalt himself,
More than in your advancement.

Reg. By me invested, he comperest the best.

Gon. That were the most, if he should husband
You.

Gon. Holloa, holloa! That eye, that told you so, look'd but a-squint. 2

Reg. Lady, I am not well; else I should answer
From a full-flowing stomach. — General,
Take thou my soldiers, prisoners, patrimony;
Dispose of them, of me; the walls are thine:
Witness the world, that I create thee here
My lord and master.

Gon. Mean you to wed him?

Alb. The let-alone lies not in your good will,
Edm. Nor in thine, lord.

Alb. Half-blooded fellow, yes.

Reg. Let the drum strike, and prove my title
To Edmund, I arrest thee

On capital treason; and, in thy arrest,
This gilded serpent: [Pointing to Gon.] — for your claim, fair sister,
I bar it in the interest of my wife;
'Tis she is sub-contracted to this lord,
And I, her husband, contradict his banns.
If you will marry, make your love to me,
My lady is bespoke.

Gon. An interlude!

Alb. Thou art arm'd, Gloster: — Let the trumpet sound:
If none appear to prove upon thy person,
Thy heinous, manifest, and many treasons,
There is my pledge: [Throwing down a Glove.]
I'll prove it on thy heart,
Ere I taste bread, thou art in nothing less
Than I have here proclaim'd thee.

Reg. Are the banns hung up?
Sick, O, sick!

Gon. If not, I'll ne'er trust poison.

1 Authority to act on his own judgment.
2 Alluding to the proverb: "Love being jealous makes a good eye look a-squint."
KING LEAR.

ACT V.

Edm. There's my exchange: [Throwing down a Glove.] what in the world he is
That names me traitor, villain-like he lies:
Call by thy trumpet: he that dares approach,
On him, on you, (who not?) I will maintain
My truth and honour firmly.

Alb. A herald, ho!
Edm. A herald, ho, a herald!
Alb. Trust to thy single virtue; for thy soldiers,
All levied in my name, have in my name
Took their discharge.

Reg. This sickness grows upon me.

Enter a Herald.

Alb. She is not well; convey her to my tent.

[Exit Regan, led.

Come hither, herald,—Let the trumpet sound,—
And read out this.

[Off. Sound trumpet.

[A Trumpet sounds.

Herald reads.

If any man of quality, or degree, within the lists of the army, will maintain upon Edmund, supposed Earl of Gloster, that he is a manifold traitor, let him appear at the third sound of the trumpet: He is bold in his defence.

Edm. Sound.
Her. Again.
Her. Again.

[Trumpet answers within.

Enter Edgar, armed, preceded by a Trumpet.

Alb. Ask him his purposes, why he appears
Upon this call o' the trumpet.

Her. What are you?
Your name, your quality? and why you answer
This present summons?

Edg. Know, my name is lost;
By treason's tooth bare-gnawn, and canker-bit:
Yet am I noble, as the adversary
I come to cope withal.

Alb. Which is that adversary?

Edg. What's he, that speaks for Edmund earl of Gloster?

Edm. Himself;—What say'st thou to him?

Edg. Draw thy sword! That, if my speech offend a noble heart,
Thy arm may do thee justice: here is mine.
Behold, it is the privilege of mine honours,
My oath, and my profession: I protest,—
Maugre thy strength, youth, place, and eminence,
Despite thy victor sword, and fire-new fortune,
Thy valour, and thy heart,—thou art a traitor:
False to thy gods, thy brother, and thy father;
Conspiring against this high illustrious prince;
And, from the extremest upward of thy head,
To the descent and dust beneath thy feet,
A most toad-spotted traitor. Say thou, No,
This sword, this arm, and my best spirits, are bent
To prove upon thy heart, wheroeto I speak,
Thou liest.

Edm. In wisdom, I should ask thy name:
But, since thy outside looks so fair and warlike,
And that thy tongue some'say of breeding breathes,
What safe and nicely I might well delay
By rule of Knighthood, I disdain and spurn:
Back do I toss these treasons to thy head;
With the hell-hated lie o'erwhelm thy heart;

3 i. e. Valour. 4 Notwithstanding. 5 Sample.
Scene III.

KING LEAR.

Edg. This would have seem'd a period
To such as love not sorrow; but another,
To amplify too much, would make much more,
And top extremitie.

Edg. This have I tell'd you, before, I was big in clamarie, came there a man,
Who has seen me in my worst estate,
Shunn'd my abhor'd society; but then, finding
Who 'tis that so endur'd, with his strong arms
He fastend'd on my neck, and bellow'd out
As he'd burst heaven; threw him on my father;
Told the most piteous tale of Lear and him,
That ever ear receiv'd: which in recounting,
His grief grew puissant, and the strings of life
Began to crack: Twice then the trumpet sounded,
And there I left him tran'd.

Edg. Who was this? I have given the man's name to the steward,
And did him service for an enemy king, and did him service
Improper for a slave.

Enter a Gentleman hastily, with a bloody Knife.

Gent. Help! help! O help! What kind of help?

Edg. What means that bloody knife?

Gent. 'Tis hot, it smokes; it came even from the heart of

Edg. Who, man? speak.

Gent. Your lady, sir, your lady: and her sister
By her is poison'd; she confesses it.

Edg. I was contracted to them both; all three
Now marry in an instant.

Edg. Produce their bodies, be they alive or dead!
This judgment of the heavens, that makes us tremble,
Touches us not with pity.

[Exit Gentleman.]

Enter Kent.

Edg. Here comes Kent, sir.

Kent. I am come to bid my king and master aye# good night; is he not here?

Edg. Great thing of us forgot! —

Speak, Edmund, where's the king? and where's Cordelia?

See'st thou this object, Kent?

Edm. The Bodies of Goneril and Regan are brought in.

Kent. Alack, why thus?

Edm. Yet Edmund was belov'd: the me the other poison'd for my sake,
And after swel her self.

Edg. Even so. — Cover their faces.

Edm. I pant for life: — Some good I mean to do,
Despite of mine own nature. quickly send, —
Be brief in it, — to the castle; for my writ is on the life of Lear, and on Cordelia: —
Nay, send in time.

Edg. Run, run, O, run —

Edm. To whom, my lord? — Who has the office? —

Thy token of reprieve.

Edm. Well thought on; take my sword,
Give it the captain.

Edg. Hast thee, for thy life. [Exit Edgar.

Edm. He hath commission from thy wife and me To hang Cordelia in the prison, and To lay the blame upon her own despair,
That she fordid# herself.

Edm. The gods defend her! Bear him hence awhile.

[Edmund is borne off.

Enter Lear, with Cordelia dead in his arms; Edgar, Officer, and others.

Lear. Howl, howl, howl, howl! — O, ye are men of stones:
Had I your tongues and eyes, I'd use them so
That heaven's vault should crack: — O, she is gone for ever!
I know when one is dead, and when one lives;
She's dead as earth: — Lend me a looking glass;
If her breath will mist or stain the stone,
Why, then she lives.

Kent. Is this the promis'd end?

Edg. Or image of that horror?

Lear. This feather stirs; she lives! if it be so,
It is a chance that does redeem all sorrows
That ever I have felt.

Kent. O my good master! [Kneeling.

Lear. Pry'thee, away.

Edg. 'Tis noble Kent, your friend.

Lear. A plague upon you, murderers, traitors, all!

Edm. I might have sav'd her; now she's gone for ever! —

Cordelia, Cordelia, stay a little. Ha!

What is't thou say'st? — Her voice was ever soft,
Gentle, and low; an excellent thing in woman:

Kent. I kill'd the slave that was a hanging thee.

Off. 'Tis true, my lords, he did.

Lear. Did I not, fellow? I have seen the day, with my good bating faulchion
I would have made them skip: I am old now,
And these same crosses spoil me. — Who are you?

Mine eyes are none o' the best: — I'll tell you straight.

Lear. If fortune brag of two she lov'd and hated,
One of them we behold.

Lear. This is a dull sight: Are you not Kent?

Kent. The same; your servant Kent. Where is your servant Caius?

Lear. He's a good fellow, I can tell you that;

He'll strike, and quickly too: — He's dead and rotten.

Kent. No, my good lord; I am the very man; —

Lear. I'll see that straight.

Kent. That, from your first of difference and decay,
Have follow'd your sad steps.

Lear. You are welcome hither.

Kent. Nor no man else;

All's cheerless, dark, and deadly. —

Your eldest daughters have fore-doom'd themselves,
And desperately are dead.

Lear. Ay, so I think.

Lear. He knows not what he says; and vain it is That we present us to him.

Edg. Very bootless. ¹

Enter an Officer.

Off. Edmund is dead, my lord.

Edg. That's but a trifle here.

You lords and noble friends, know our intent.
What comfort to this great decay may come,

KING LEAR.

Act V.

Shall be applied: For us, we will resign,
During the life of this old majesty,
To him our absolute power: — You to your rights;
[To Edgar and Kent.
With boot, and such addition as your honours
Have more than merited. — All friends shall taste
The wages of their virtue, and all foes
The cup of their deservings. — O, see, see!

Lear. And my poor fool is hang’d! No, no, no life:
Why should a dog, a horse, a rat, have life,
And thou no breath at all? O, thou wilt come no more,
Never, never, never, never, never! —
Pray you, undo this button: Thank you, sir. —
Do you see this? Look on her,— look, — her lips,—
Look there, look there! — [He dies.

Edg. He faints! — My lord, my lord. —

Kent. Break, heart; I pr’ythee break!

Edg. Look up, my lord.

Kent. Vex not his ghost: O, let him pass! he hates him,
That would upon the rack of this tough world
Stretch him out longer.

Edg. O, he is gone, indeed.

Kent. The wonder is, he hath endur’d so long:
He but usurp’d his life.

Alb. Bear them from hence. — Our present business
Is general woe. Friends of my soul, you twain
[To Kent and Edgar.
Rule in this realm, and the gory state sustain.

Kent. I have a journey, sir, shortly to go;
My master calls, and I must not say, no.

Alb. The weight of this sad time we must obey;
Speak what we feel, not what we ought to say.
The oldest hath borne most: we, that are young,
Shall never see so much, nor live so long.

[Exeunt, with a dead March.]

SCENE, during the greater part of the Play, in Verona; once, in the fifth Act, at Mantua.
ROMEO AND JULIET.

PROLOGUE.

Two households, both alike in dignity,
In fair Verona, where we lay our scene,
From ancient grudge break to new mutiny,
Where civil blood makes civil hands unclean.
From forth the fatal loins of these two foes
A pair of star-cross'd lovers take their life;
Whose misadventur'd piteous overthrows
Do, with their death, bury their parents' strife.

The fearful passage of their death-mark'd love,
And the continuance of their parents' rage,
Which, but their children's end, nought could re. move.
Is now the two hours' traffick of our stage;
The which if you with patient ears attend,
What here shall miss, our toil shall strive to mend.

ACT I.

SCENE I. — A Publick Place.

Enter Sampson and Gregory, armed with Swords and Bucklers.

Sam. Gregory, o' my word, we'll not carry coals.\(^1\)
Gre. No, for then we should be colliers.
Sam. I mean, an we be in choler, we'll draw.
Gre. Ay, while you live, draw your neck out of the collar.
Sam. I strike quickly, being moved.
Gre. But thou art not quickly moved to strike.
Sam. A dog of the house of Montague moves me.
Gre. To move, is — to stir ; and to be valiant, is

\(^1\) A phrase formerly in use, to signify the bearing injuries.
Gre. How? turn thy back, and run?
Sam. Fear me not.
Gre. No, marry: I fear thee!
Sam. Let us take the law of our sides; let them begin.
Gre. I will frown as I pass by; and let them take it as they list.
Sam. Nay, as they dare. I will bite my thumb at them; which is a disgrace to them, if they hear it.
 Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?
Sam. I do bite my thumb, sir.
 Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?
Sam. Is the law on our side, if I say — ay?
Gre. No.
Sam. No, sir; I do not bite my thumb at you, sir: but I bite my thumb, sir.
Gre. Do you quarrel, sir?
 Abr. Quarrel, sir? no, sir.
Sam. If you do, sir, I am for you; I serve as good a man as you.
 Abr. No better.
Sam. Well, sir.

Enter Benvolio, at a distance.
Gre. Say — better; here comes one of my master's kinsmen.
Sam. Yes, better, sir.
 Abr. You lie.
Sim. Draw, if you be men. — Gregory, remember thy swashing blow.
[They fight.
Ben. Part, fools; put up your swords; you know not what you do.
[Beats down their Swords.

Enter Tybalt.
Tyb. What, art thou drawn among these heartless hinds?
Turn thee, Benvolio, look upon thy death.
Ben. I do but keep the peace: put up thy sword,
Or manage it to part these men with me.
Tyb. What, drawn, and talk of peace? I hate the word,
As I hate hell, all Montagues, and thee;
Have at thee, coward.
[They fight.

Enter several Partisans of both Houses, who join the Fray; then enter Citizens with Clubs.
Cit. Clubs², bills, and partisans! strike! beat them down!
Down with the Capulets! down with the Montagues!

Enter Capulet, in his Gown; and Lady Capulet.
Cap. What noise is this? — Give me my long sword, ho!
La. Cap. A crutch, a crutch! — Why call you for a sword?
Cap. My sword, I say! — Old Montague is come,
And flourishes his blade in spite of me.

Enter Montague, and Lady Montague.
Mon. Thou villain, Capulet, — Hold me not, let me go.
La. Mon. Thou shalt not stir one foot to seek a foe.

Enter Prince, with Attendants.
Prin. Rebellious subjects, enemies to peace,
Profaners of this neighbour-stained steel, —
Will they not hear? — what, ho! you men, you beasts,—

That quench the fire of your pernicious rage
With purple fountains issuing from your veins,
² Clubs! was the usual exclamation at an affray in the streets, as we now call Watch!

On pain of torture, from those bloody hands
Throw your mistemper'd weapons to the ground,
And hear the sentence of your moved prince. —
Three civil brawl, bred of an airy word,
By thee, old Capulet and Montague,
Have thrice disturb'd the quiet of our streets;
And made Verona's ancient citizens
Cast by their grave becomings ornaments,
To wield old partizans, in hands as old.
Canter'd with peace, to part your canker'd hate:
If ever you disturb our streets again,
Your lives shall pay the forfeit of the peace.
For this time, all the rest depart away:
You, Capulet, shall go along with me;
And, Montague, come you this afternoon.
To know our further pleasure in this case,
To old Free-town, our common judgment-place.
Once more, on pain of death, all men depart.

[Exeunt Prince, and Attendants; Capulet, Lady Capulet, Tybalt, Citizens, and Servants.

Mon. Who set this ancient quarrel new abroach?—
Speak, neighbour, were you by, when it began?
Ren. Here were the servants of your adversary,
And yours, close fighting ere I did approach:
I drew to part them; in the instant came
The fiery Tybalt, with his sword prepar'd; —
Which, as he breath'd defiance to my ears,
He swung about his head, and cut the winds,
Who, nothing hurt withal, his'd him in scorn:
While we were interchanging threat and blows,
Came more and more, and fought on part and part.
Till the prince came, who parted either part.

La. Mon. O, where is Romeo! — saw you him to-day?
Right glad I am, he was not at this fray.
Ben. Madam, an hour before the worship'd sun
Peer'd² forth the golden window of the east,
A troubled mind drave me to walk abroad;
Where — underneath the grove of Sycamore,
That westward rooteth from the city's side,—
So early walking did I see your son:
Towards him I made; but he was 'ware of me,
And stole into the covert of the wood:
I, measuring his affections by my own,—
That most are busied when they are most alone,— Pursu'd my humour, not pursuing his,
And gladly shunn'd who gladly fled from me.

Mon. Many a morning hath he there been seen,
With tears augmenting the fresh morning's dew,
Adding to clouds more clouds with his deep sighs:
But all so soon as the all-cheering sun
Should in the furthest east begin to draw
The shady curtains from Aurora's bed,
Away from light steals home my heavy son,
And private in his chamber pens himself;
Shuts up his windows, locks fair daylight out,
And makes himself an artificial night:
Black and portentous must this humour prove,
Unless good counsel may the cause remove.

Ben. My noble uncle, do you know the cause?
Mon. I neither know it nor can learn of him.
Ben. Have you impor'tum him by any means?
Mon. Both by myself, and many other friends:
But he, his own affection's counsellor,
Is to himself. — I will not say, how true —
But to himself so secret and so close,
So far from sounding and discovery,
As is the bud bit with an envious worm,
² Angry. ¹ A kind of pike. ³ Appeared.
Scene I.

ROMEO AND JULIET.

Ere he can spread his sweet leaves to the air,
Or dedicate his beauty to the sun,
Could we but learn from whence his sorrows grow,
We would as willingly give cure, as know.

Enter Romeo, at a distance.

Ben. See, where he comes: So please you, step aside;
I'll know his grievance, or be much denied.

Mon. I would, thou wert so happy by thy stay,
To hear true shift. — Come, madam, let's away.

[Exeunt Montague and Lady.

Ben. Good morrow, cousin.

Rom. Is the day so young?

Ben. But new struck nine.

Rom. Ah me! sad hours seem long.

Was that my father that went hence so fast?

Ben. It was: — What sadness lengthens Romeo's hours?

Rom. Not having that, which having, makes them short.

Ben. In love?

Rom. Out —

Ben. Of love?

Rom. Out of her favour, where I am in love.

Ben. Alas, that love, so gentle in his view,
Should be so tyrannous and rough in proof!

Rom. Alas, that love, whose view is muffled still,
Should, without eyes, see pathways to his will!
Where shall we dine? — O me! — What fray was here?

Yet tell me not, for I have heard it all.
Here's much to do with hate, but more with love: —
Why then, O brawling love! O loving hate!
O any thing, of nothing first create!
O heavy lightness! serious vanity!
Mix-shapen chaos of well-seeming forms!
Feather of lead, bright smoke, cold fire, sick health!
Still-waking sleep, that is not what it is! —
This love feel I, that feel no love in this.
Dost thou not laugh?

Ben. No, coz, I rather weep.

Rom. Good heart, at what?

Ben. At thy good heart's oppression.

Rom. Why, such is love's transgression. —
Griefs of mine own lie heavy in my breast;
Which thou wilt propagate, to have it prest
With more of thine: this love, that thou hast shown,
Doth add more grief to too much of mine own.
Love is a smoke rais'd with the fume of sighs;
Being purs'd, a fire sparkling in lovers' eyes;
Being vex'd, a sea nourish'd with lovers' tears:
What is it else? a madness most discreet,
A choking gall, and a preserving sweet.
Farewell, my coz. [Going.

Ben. Soft, I will go along;
And if you leave me so, do you me wrong.

Rom. Tut, I have lost myself; I am not here;
This is not Romeo, he's some other where.

Ben. Tell me in sadness who she is you love.

Rom. What, shall I groan, and tell thee?

Ben. Groan? why no?
But sadly tell me, who.

Rom. Bid a sick man in sadness make his will: —
Ah, word ill urg'd to one that is so ill! —
In sadness, cousin, I do love a woman.

Ben. I aim'd so near, when I supposed you lov'd.

Rom. A right good marks-man! — And she's fair I love.

Ben. A right fair mark, fair coz, is soonest hit.

Rom. Well, in that hit, you miss: she'll not be hit
With Cupid's arrow, she hath Dian's wit;
And, in strong proof of chastity well arm'd,
From love's weak childish bow she lives unharm'd.
She will not stay the siege of loving terms,
Nor bide the encounter of assailing eyes:
O, she is rich in beauty; only poor,
That, when she dies, with beauty dies her store.

Ben. Then she hath sworn, that she will still live chaste?

Rom. She hath, and in that sparing makes huge waste;
For beauty, starv'd with her severity,
Cuts beauty off from all posterity.
She is too fair, too wise; wisely too fair,
To merit bliss by making me despair:
She hath forsworn to love; and in that vow,
Do I live dead, that live to tell it now.

Ben. Be rule'd by me, forget to think of her.

Rom. O, teach me how I should forget to think.

Ben. By giving liberty unto thine eyes;
Examine other beauties.

Rom. 'Tis the way
To call hers, exquisite, in question more:
These happy masks, that kiss fair ladies brows,
Being black, put us in mind they hide the fair;
He, that is strucken blind, cannot forget
The precious treasure of his eyesight lost:
Show me a mistress that is passing fair,
What doth her beauty serve, but as a note
Where I may read, who pass'd that passing fair?
Farewell; thou canst not teach me to forget.

Ben. I'll pay that doctrine, or else die in debt.

[Exeunt.

Scene II. — A Street.

Enter Capulet, Paris, and Servant.

Cap. And Montague is bound as well as I,
In penalty alike; and 'tis not hard, I think,
For men so old as we to keep the peace.

Par. Of honourable reckoning are you both;
And pity 'tis, you liv'd at odds so long.

But now, my lord, what say you to my suit?

Cap. But saying o'er what I have said before:
My child is yet a stranger in the world,
She hath not seen the change of fourteen years;
Let two more summers wither in their pride,
Ere we may think her ripe to be a bride.

Par. Younger than she are happy mothers made.

Cap. And too soon marr'd are those so early made.
The earth hath swallow'd all my hopes but she,
She is the hopeful lady of my earth:
But woo her, gentle Paris, get her heart,
My will to her consent is but a part;
An she agree, within her scope of choice
Lies my consent and fair according voice.

This night I hold an old accustomed feast,
Whereeto I have invited many a guest,
Such as I love; and you, among the store,
One more, most welcome, makes my number more.

At my poor house, look to behold this night
Earth-treading stars, that make dark heaven light:
Such comfort, as do lusty young men feel
When well-apparel'd April on the head
Of limping winter treads, even such delight
Among fresh female birds shall you this night
Inherit? at my house; hear all, all see,
And like her most, whose merit most shall be:

6 Account, estimation.

7 To inherit, in the language of Shakespeare, is to possess.
Such, amongst view of many, mine, being one, May stand in number, though in reckoning none.
Come, go with me: — Go, sirrah, trudge about Through fair Verona; find those persons out, Whose names are written there; [Gives a Paper.] And to them say, My house and welcome on their pleasure stay. [Exeunt Capulet and Paris. Serv. Find them now, whose names are written here? It is written — the shoemaker should meddle with his yard, and the tailor with his last, the fisher with his pencil, and the painter with his nets; but I am sent to find those persons, whose names are here writ, and can never find what names the writing person hath here writ. I must to the learned: — In good time.

Enter Benvolio and Romeo.

Ben. Tut, man! one fire burns out another's burning,
One pain is lessen'd by another's anguish; Turn giddy, and be holy by backward turning: On these deep grief cure with another's languish: Take thou some new infection to thy eye, And the rank poison of the old will die.
Rom. Your plantain leaf is excellent for that.
Ben. For what, I pray thee?
Rom. For your broken shin.
Ben. Why, Romeo, art thou mad?
Rom. Not mad, but bound more than a madman is:
Shut up in prison, kept without my food, Whipp'd, and tormented, and — Good e'en, good fellow,
Serv. Good e'en, sir. — I pray, sir, can you read?
Rom. Ay, mine own fortune in my misery.
Serv. Perhaps you have learn'd it without book; But I pray, can you read any thing you see?
Rom. Ay, if I know the letters, and the language.
Serv. Ye say honestly: Rest you merry!
Rom. Stay, fellow; I can read. [Reads. Signior Martino, and his wife and daughters; County Anselme, and his beauteous sisters; The lady widow of Vitruvio; Signior Placentio, and his lovely nieces; Mercutio, and his brother Valentine; Mine uncle Capulet, his wife, and daughters; My fair niece Rosaline; Livia; Signior Valentio, and his cousin Tybalt; Lucio, and the lively Helena. A fair assembly; [Gives back the Note.] Whither should they come?
Serv. Up.
Rom. Whither?
Serv. To supper; to our house.
Rom. Whose house?
Serv. My master's.
Rom. Indeed, I should have asked you that before. Serv. Now I'll tell you without asking: My master is the great rich Capulet; and if you be not of the house of Montagues, I pray, come and crack a cup of wine. Rest you merry. [Exit. Ben. At this same ancient feast of Capulet's Sups the fair Rosaline, whom thou so lov'st; With whom admires admiring Rosaline. Go thither; and, with unattainted eye, Compare her face with some that I shall show, And I will make thee think thy swan a crow.
Rom. When the devout religion of mine eye Maintains such falsehood, then turn tears to fires!
8 We still say in cant language — crack a bottle.

And these, who, often drown'd, could never die, — Transparent hereticks, be burnt for liars! One fairer than my love! the all-seeing sun Ne'er saw her match, since first the world begun. Ben. Tut! you saw her fair, none else being by, Herself pois'd 9 with herself in either eye: But in those crystal scales, let there be weigh'd Your lady's love against some other maid That I will show you, shining at this feast, And she shall scant show well, that now shows best. Rom. I'll go along, no such sight to be shown, But to rejoice in splendour of mine own. [Exeunt. SCENE III. — A Room in Capulet's House. Enter Lady Capulet and Nurse. La. Cap. Nurse, where's my daughter? call her forth to me.

Enter Juliet.
Jul. How now, who calls?
Nurse. Your mother.
Jul. Madam, I am here, What is your will?
La. Cap. This is the matter: — Nurse, give leave awhile, We must talk in secret. — Nurse, come back again; I have remember'd me, thou shalt hear our counsel. Thou know'st, my daughter's of a pretty age.
Nurse. Yes, I can tell her age unto an hour.
La. Cap. She's not fourteen.
Nurse. I'll lay fourteen of my teeth, And yet, to my teen 4 be it spoken, I have but four,— She is not fourteen: How long is it now To Lammas-tide?
La. Cap. A fortnight, and odd days. Nurse. Even or odd, of all days in the year, Come Lammas-eve at night, shall she be fourteen. Susan and she were of an age, — but Susan's dead; She was too good for me: But as I said, On Lammas-eve at night shall she be fourteen; That shall she, marry; I remember it well. 'Tis since the earthquake now eleven years; And she was wean'd, — I never shall forget it,— Of all the days in the year, upon that day: For I had then laid wormwood to my teat, Sitting in the sun under the dove-house wall, My lord and you were then at Mantua: — Nay, I do bear a brain 3, — but, as I said, When it did taste the wormwood on the nipple And felt it bitter, O the pretty fool! To see it tetchy, and fall out with the teat. Shake, quoth the dove-house: 'twas no need, I trow, To bid me trudge. And since that time it is eleven years: For then she could stand alone; nay, by the rood 4, She could have run and waddled all about, For even the day before, she broke her brow.
La. Cap. Enough of this; I pray thee, hold thy peace.
Jul. And hold thy peace, I pray thee, nurse, say I.
Nurse. Peace, I have done. Heaven mark thee to its grace! Thou wast the prettiest babe that e'er I nurs'd: An I might live to see thee married once, I have my wish.
La. Cap. Marry, that marry is the very theme 9 Weight'd. 1 Scarcely. hardly. 2 To my sorrow. 3 i.e. I have a perfect remembrance or recollection. 4 The cross.
Scene IV.

ROMEO AND JULIET.

I came to talk of: — Tell me, daughter Juliet,
How stands your disposition to be married?

Jul. It is an honour that I dream not of.

Nurse. An honour! were not I thine only nurse,
I'd say, thou hadst suck'd wisdom from thy teat.

La. Cap. Well, think of marriage now; younger than you,
Here in Verona, ladies of esteem,
Are made already mothers: by my count,
I was your mother much upon those years
That you are now a maid. Thus then, in brief: —
The valiant Paris seeks you for his love.

Nurse. A man, young lady! lady, such a man,
As all the world — Why, he's a man of wax. 5

La. Cap. Verona's summer hath not such a flower.

Nurse. Nay, he's a flower; in faith, a very flower.

La. Cap. What say you? can you love the gentleman?

This night you shall behold him at our feast:
Read o'er the volume of young Paris' face,
And find delight writ there with beauty's pen;
Examine every married lineament,
And see how one another lends content:
And what obscure'd in this fair volume lies,
Find written in the margin of his eyes. 6

This precious book of love, this unbound lover,
To beautify him only lacks a cover:
The fish lives in the sea 7; and 'tis much pride,
For fair without the fair within to hide:
That book in many's eyes doth share the glory,
That in gold clasps locks in the golden story;
So shall you share all that he doth possess,
By having him, making yourself no less. —
Speak briefly, can you like of Paris' love?

Jul. I'll look to like, if looking like moving:
But no more deep will I endart mine eye,
Than your consent gives strength to make it fly.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Madam, the guests are come, supper served up, you called, my young lady asked for, the nurse cursed in the pantry, and every thing in extremity.
I must hence to wait; I beseech you, follow straight.

La. Cap. We follow thee. — Juliet, the county stays. [Exeunt.

Scene IV. — A Street.

Enter Romeo, Mercutio, Benvolio, with five or six
Maskers, Torch-bearers, and others.

Rom. What, shall this speech be spoke for our excuse?
Or shall we on without apology?

Ben. The date is out of such proximity:
We'll have no Cupid hood-wink'd 8 with a scarf,
Bearing a Tartar's painted bow of lath,
Scaring the ladies like a crow-keeper 9:
Nor no without-book prologue, faintly spoke
After the prompter, for our entrance:
But, let them measure us by what they will,
We'll measure them a measure 9, and be gone.

Rom. Give me a torch, — I am not for this ambling;
Being but heavy, I will bear the light.

Mer. Nay, gentle Romeo, we must have you dance.

Rom. Not I, believe me: you have dancing shoes,
With nimble soles: I have a soul of lead,
So stakes me to the ground, I cannot move.

Mer. You are a lover; borrow Cupid's wings,
And soar with them above a common bound.

Rom. I am too sore enpiерred with his shaft
To soar with his light feathers; and so bound,
I cannot bound a pitch above null woe:
Under love's heavy burden do I sink.

Mer. And, to sink in it, should you burden love;
To too great oppression for a tender thing.

Rom. Is love a tender thing? it is too rough.

Mer. If love be rough with you, be rough with love;
Give me a case to put my visage in;

[Putting on a Mask.

A visor for a visor! — what care I,

What curious eye doth quote 5 deformities?
Here are the beetle brows, shall blush for me.

Ben. Come, knock, and enter; and no sooner in,
But every man betake him to his legs.

Rom. A torch for me: let wants, light of heart,
Tickle the senseless rushes 3 with their heels;
For I am present'd with a grand sire phrase,—
I'll be a candle-holder, and look on, —
The game was ne'er so fair, and I am done.

Mer. Tut! dun's the mouse, the constable's own word:

If thou art dun, we'll draw thee from the mire
Of this (save reverence) love, wherein thou stick'st
Up to the ears. — Come, we burn day-light, ho.

Rom. Nay, that's not so.

Mer. I mean, sir, in delay.

We waste our lights in vain, like lamps by day.
Take our good meaning: for our judgment sits
Five times in that, ere once in our five wits.

Rom. And we mean well, in going to this mask;
But 'tis no wit to go.

Mer. Why, may one ask?

Rom. I dreamt a dream to-night.

Mer. And so did I.

Rom. Well, what was yours?

Mer. That dreamers often lie.

Rom. In bed, asleep, while they do dream things true.

Mer. O, then, I see, queen Mab hath been with you.
She is the fairies' midwife; and she comes
In shape no bigger than an agate-stone
On the fore-finger of an alderman,
Drawn with a team of little atoms 4

Athwart men's noses as they lie asleep:
Her waggon-spokes made of long spinners' legs;
The cover, of the wings of grasshoppers;
The traces, of the smallest spider's web;
The collars, of the moonshine's watery beams;
Her whip, of cricket's bone: the lash, of film;
Her waggoner, a small grey-coated gnat,
Not half so big as a round little worm
Prick'd from the lazy finger of a maid:
Her chariot is an empty hazel-nut,
Made by the joiner squirrel, or old grub,
Time out of mind the fairies' coach-makers.
And in this state she gallops night by night
Through lovers' brains, and then they dream of love:
On courtiers' knees, that dream on court'sies straight:
O'er lawyers' fingers, who straight dream on fees:
O'er ladies' lips, who straight on kisses dream;

3 Observe.

4 It was anctiently the custom to straw rooms with rushes.

5 Atoms.
ROMEO AND JULIET.

ACT I.

Which oft the angry Mab with blisters plagues,
Because their breath with sweet-meats tainted are.
Sometime she gallops o'er a courtier's nose,
And then dreams he of smelling out a suit: 5
And sometimes comes she with a tithe-pig's tail,
Tickling a parson's nose as 'a lies asleep,
Then dreams he of another benefice:
Sometime she driveth o'er a soldier's neck,
And then dreams he of cutting foreign throats,
Of breaches, ambuscades, Spanish blades,
Of healths five fathom deep; and then anon
Drums in his ear; at which he starts, and wakes;
And, being thus frightened, swears a prayer or two,
And sleeps again. This is that very Mab.
This, this is she —
Rom. Peace, peace, Mercutio, peace;
Thou talk'st of nothing.
Mer. True, I talk of dreams;
Which are the children of an idle brain,
Begot of nothing but vain fantasy;
Which is as thin of substance as the air;
And more inconstant than the wind, who woooes
Even now the frozen bosom of the north,
And, being anger'd, puff's away from thence,
Turning his face to the dew-dropping south.
Ben. This wind you talk of, blows us from ourselves;
Supper is done, and we shall come too late.
Rom. I fear, too early: for my mind misgives,
Some consequence, yet hanging in the stars,
Shall bitterly begin his fearful date
With this night's revels; and expire the term
Of a despised life, clos'd in my breast,
By some vile forfeiture of untimely death:
But He, that hath the steerage of my course,
Direct my sail! — On, gentlemen.
Ben. Strike, drum. [Exeunt.

SCENE V. — A Hall in Capulet's House.

Musicians waiting. Enter Servants.

1 Serv. Where's Potpan, that he helps not to take away? he shift a trencher! he scrape a trencher! 2 Serv. When good manners shall lie all in one or two men's hands, and they unwashed too, 'tis a foul thing.

1 Serv. Away with the joint stools, remove the court-cupboard 5, look to the plate: — good thou, save me a piece of march-pané; and, as thou lov'st me, let the porter let in Susan and Nell. — Antony and Potpan!

2 Serv. Ay, boy; ready.

1 Serv. You are look'd for, and called for, asked for, and sought for, in the great chamber.

2 Serv. We cannot be here and there too. — Cheerly, boys; be brisk a while, and the longer liver take all. [They retire behind.

Enter Capulet, &c. with the Guests and the Masters.

Cap. Gentlemen, welcome! ladies, that have their toes
Unplagu'd with corns, will have a bout with you: —
Ah ha, my mistresses! which of you all
Will now deny to dance? she that makes dainty, she I'll swear, hath corns; Am I come near you now?
You are welcome, gentlemen! I have seen the day,
That I have worn a visor; and could tell

* A whispering tale in a fair lady's ear,
Such as would please; —'tis gone, 'tis gone, 'tis gone:
You are welcome, gentlemen! — Come, musicians, play,
A hall! a hall! 8 give room, and foot it girls.
[Music plays, and they dance.

More light, ye knaves; and turn the tables up,
And quench the fire, the room is grown too hot. —
Ah, sirrah, this unlook'd-for sport comes well.
Nay, sit, stay, sit, good cousin Capulet;
For you and I are past our dancing days:
How long is't now, since last yourself and I
Were in a mask?
2 Cap. By'r lady, thirty years.
1 Cap. What, man! 'tis not so much, 'tis not so much:
'Tis since the nuptial of Lucentio,
Come Pentecost as quickly as it will,
Some five and twenty years; and then we mask'd.
2 Cap. 'Tis more, 'tis more: his son is elder, sir:
His son is thirty.
1 Cap. Will you tell me that?
His son was but a ward two years ago.
Rom. What lady's that which doth enrich the hand
Of yonder knight?
Serv. I know not, sir.
Rom. O, she doth teach the torches to burn bright!
Her beauty hangs upon the cheek of night
Like a rich jewel in an Ethiopia's ear:
Beauty too rich for use, for earth too dear!
So shows a snowy dove troop'd with crows,
As yonder lady o'er her fellows shows,
The measure 9 done, I'll watch her place of stand,
And, touching hers, make happy my rude hand.
Did my heart love till now? forswear it, sight!
For I never saw true beauty till this night.
Tyb. This, by his voice, should be a Montague: —
Fetch me my rapier, boy: — What! dares the slave
Come hither, cover'd with an antic face,
To fleer and scorn at our solemnity?
Now, by the stock and honour of my kin,
To strike him dead I hold it not a sin.
1 Cap. Why, how now, kinsman? wherefore storm you so?
Tyb. Unchaste, this is a Montague, our foe;
A villain, that is hither come in spite,
To scorn at our solemnity this night.
1 Cap. Young Romeo is't?
Tyb. 'Tis he, that villain Romeo.
1 Cap. Content thee, gentle coz, let him alone,
He bears him like a portly gentleman;
And, to say truth, Verona brags of him,
To be a virtuous and well-govern'd youth:
I would not for the wealth of all this town,
Here in my house, do him disparagement:
Therefore be patient, take no note of him,
It is my will; the which if thou respect,
Show a fair presence, and put off these frowns,
An ill-beseeming feast for a feast.
Tyb. It fits, when such a villain is a guest;
I'll not endure him.
1 Cap. He shall be endur'd; What, goodman boy! — I say, he shall; — Go to; — Am I the master here, or you? go to.
You'll make a mutiny among my guests! You will set a cock-a-hoop! you'll be the man!
Tyb. Why, uncle, 'tis a shame.
1 Cap. Go to, go to, you are a saucy boy: — Is't so indeed? —
8 & c. Make room.
9 The dance.
ACT II. Scene I.
ROME AND JULIET.

This trick may chance to scath you; — I know what. You must contrary me! marry, 'tis time —

Well said, my hearts: — You are a prince; go: — Be quiet, or — More light, more light, for shame! —

I'll make you quiet; What! — Cheerly, my hearts.

Tyb. Patience perform with wilful choleric meeting,
Makes my flesh tremble in their different greeting.

I will withdraw: but this intrusion shall,
Now seeming sweet, convert to bitter gall. [Exit.

Rom. If I profane with my unworthy hand

[To JULIET.

This holy shrine, the gentle fine is this,—

My lips, two blushing pilgims, ready stand
To smooth that rough touch with a tender kiss.

JUL. Good pilgrim, you do wrong your hand too much,
Which mannerly devotion shows in this;
For saints have hands that pilgrims' hands do touch, And palm to palm is holy palmers' kiss.

Rom. Have not saints lips, and holy palmers too?

Jul. Ay, pilgrim, lips, that they must use in prayer.

Rom. O then, dear saint, let lips do what hands do;
They pray, grant thou, lest faith turn to despair.

Jul. Saints do not move, though grant for prayers' sake.

Rom. Then move not, while my prayer's effect I take.
Thus from my lips, by yours, my sin is purg'd.

[ Kissing her.

Jul. Then have my lips the sin that they have took.

Rom. Sin from my lips? O trespass sweetly urg'd!
Give me my sin again.

Nurse. Madam, your mother craves a word with you.

Rom. What is her mother?

Nurse. Marry, bachelor,

Her mother is the lady of the house,
And a good lady, and a wise, and virtuous:
I nurs'd her daughter, that you talk'd withal;
I tell you, — he, that can lay hold of her,
Shall have the chinks.

Is she a Capulet?
O dear account! my life is my foe's debt.

Ben. Away, begone; the sport is at the best.

Rom. Ay, so I fear; the more is my unrest.

1 Cap. Nay, gentlemen, prepare not to be gone;
We have a trifling foolish banquet towards.

Is it e'en so? Why, then I thank you all;
I thank you, honest gentlemen; good night:

More torches here! — Come on, then let's to bed.

Ah, sirrah, [To 2 Cap.] by my faith, it waxes late;
I'll to my rest. [Exeunt all but JULIET and Nurse.

Jul. Come hither, nurse: What is your gentleman?

Nurse. The son and heir of old Tiberio.

Jul. What's he, that now is going out of door?

Nurse. Marry, that, I think, be young Petruchio.

Jul. What's he, that follows there, that would not dance?

Nurse. I know not.

Jul. Go, ask his name: — if he be married,
My grave is like to be my wedding bed.

Nurse. His name is Romeo, and a Montague;
The only son of your great enemy.

Jul. My only love sprung from my only hate!
Too early seen unknown, and known too late!

Prodigious birth of love it is to me,
That I must love a loathed enemy.

Nurse. What's this? what's this?

Jul. A rhyme I learn'd even now

Of one I danc'd withal. [One calls within, JULIET!

Nurse. Anon, anon: —

Come, let's away; the strangers all are gone.

[Exeunt.

Enter Chorus.

Now old desire doth in his death-bed lie,
And young affection gaps to be his heir;
That fair, which love groan'd for, and would die,
With tender Juliet match'd is now not fair.
Now Romeo is belov'd and loves again,
Alike bewitched by the charm of looks;
But to his foe suppos'd he must complain,
And she steal love's sweet bait from fearful hooks:

Being held a foe, he may not have access
To breathe such vows as lovers use to swear;
And she as much in love, her means much less
To meet her new-beloved any where:

But passion lends them power, time means to meet,
Temp'ring extremities with extreme sweet. [Exit.

ACT II.

SCENE I. — An open Place, adjoining Capulet's Garden.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. Can I go forward when my heart is here? Turn back, dull earth, and find thy centre out.

[He climbs the Wall, and leaps down within it.

Enter BENVOLIO and MERCUTIO.

Ben. Romeo! my cousin Romeo!

Mer. He is wise;

And, on my life, hath stolen him home to bed.

Ben. He ran this way, and leap'd this orchard wall:

Call, good Mercutio.

Mer. Nay, I'll conjure too —

Romeo! humour! madman! passion! lover! Appear thou in the likeness of a sigh, Speak but one rhyme, and I am satisfied; 1

1 Do you an injury.

Rom. Cry but — Ah me! couple but — love and dove;
Speak to my gossip Venus one fair word,
One nick-name for her purblind son and heir,
Young Adam Cupid, he that shot so trim,
When king Caphtetus lov'd the beggar-maid. 4

He heareth not, stirreth not, he moveth not;
The ape is dead, and I must conjure him.

I conjure thee by Rosaline's bright eyes,
By her high forehead, and her scarlet lip,
That in thy likeness thou appear to us.

Ben. An if he hear thee, thou wilt anger him.

Mer. This cannot anger him: my invocation
Is fair and honest, and, in his mistress' name,
I conjure only but to raise him.

Ben. Come, he hath hid himself among those trees.

3 Faith.

4 Alluding to the old ballad of the king and the beggar.

This phrase in Shakespeare's time was used as an expression of tenderness.

3 G 4
To be consorted with the humorous night:
Blind is his love, and best betits the dark.

Mer. If love be blind, love cannot hit the mark.
Romeo, good night; — I'll to my truckle bed;
This field-bed is too cold for me to sleep:
Come, shall we go?

Ben. Go, then; for 'tis in vain
To seek him here, that means not to be found.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. — Capulet’s Garden.
Enter Romeo.

Rom. He jests at scars, that never felt a wound. —

[Juliet appears above, at a Window.

But, soft! what light through yonder window breaks!
It is the east, and Juliet is the sun! —

Arise, fair sun, and kill the envious moon,
Who is already sick and pale with grief,
That thou her maid art far more fair than she:
Be not her maid, since she is envious;
Her vestal vesture is but sick and green,
And none but fools do wear it; cast it off. —

It is my lady; O, it is my love:
O, that she knew she were! —

She speaks, yet she says nothing: What of that?
Her eye discourses, I will answer it.

I am too bold, 'tis not to me she speaks:
Two of the fairest stars in all the heaven,
Having some business, do entreat her eyes
To twinkle in their spheres till they return.

What if her eyes were there, they in her head?
The oracles of her cheek would shame those stars,
As daylight doth a lamp; her eye in heaven
Would through the airy region stream so bright,
That birds would sing, and think it were not night.

See, how she leans her cheek upon her hand!
O, that I were a glove upon that hand,
That I might touch that cheek!

Jul. Ah me!

Rom. She speaks:—

O, speak again, bright angel! for thou art
As glorious to this night, being o'er my head,
As is a winged messenger of heaven
Unto the white-upturned wondering eyes
Of mortals, that fall back to gaze on him,
When he bestrides the lazy-pacing clouds,
And sails upon the bosom of the air.

Jul. O Romeo, Romeo! wherefore art thou Romeo?
Deny thy father, and refuse thy name:
Or, if thou wilt not, be but sworn my love,
And I'll no longer be a Capulet.

Rom. Shall I hear more, or shall I speak at this?

Jul. 'Tis but thy name, that is my enemy; —
Thou art thyself, though not a Montague.
What's Montague? it is nor hand, nor foot,
Nor arm, nor face, nor any other part
Belonging to a man. O, be some other name!
What's in a name? that which we call a rose,
By any other name would smell as sweet;
So Romeo would, were he not Romeo call’d,
Retain that dear perfection which he owes?,
Without that title: — Romeo, doff's thy name;
And for that name which is not part of thee,
Take all myself.

Rom. I take thee at thy word:
Call me but love, and I'll be new baptiz'd;
Henceforth I never will be Romeo.

Jul. What man art thou, that, thus bescreen’d in night,
So stumbllest on my counsel?

Rom. By a name
I know not how to tell thee who I am:
My name, dear saint, is hateful to myself,
Because it is an enemy to thee.
Had I it written, I would tear the word.

Jul. My ears have not yet drunk a hundred words
Of that tongue’s utterance, yet I know the sound;
Art thou not Romeo, and a Montague?

Rom. Neither, fair saint, if either thee dislike.

Jul. How camst thou hither, tell me? and wherefore?

The orchard walls are high, and hard to climb;
And the place death, considering whom thou art,
If any of my kinsmen find thee here.

Rom. With love’s light wings did I o’er-perch these walls;
For stony limits cannot hold love out:
And what love can do, that dares love attempt,
Therefore thy kinsmen are no less to me.

Jul. If they do see thee, they will murder thee.

Rom. Alack! there lies more peril in thine eye,
Than twenty of their swords; look thou but sweet,
And I am proof against their enmity.

Jul. I would not for the world they saw thee here.

Rom. I have night’s cloak to hide me from their sight;
And, but I thou love me, let them find me here:
My life were better ended by their hate,
Than death prorogued, wanting of thy love.

Jul. By whose direction found’st thou out this place?

Rom. By love, who first did prompt me to inquire;
He lent me counsel, and I lent him eyes.
I am no pilot; yet wert thou as far
As that vast shore wash’d with the furthest sea,
I would adventure for such merchandise.

Jul. Thou knowest the mask of night is on my face;
Else would a maiden blush bepaint my cheek,
For that which thou hast heard me speak to-night.

Fain would I dwell on form, fain, fain, deny
What I have spoke: But farewell compliment!

Dost thou love me? I know thou wilt say — Ay;
And I will take thy word: yet if thou swearst,
Thou mayst prove false; at lovers’ perjuries,
They say, Jove laughs. O, gentle Romeo,
If thou dost love, pronounce it faithfully:
Or, if thou think’st I am too quickly won,
I’ll frown, and be perverse, and say thee nay,
So thou wilt woo; but else, not for the world.

In truth, fair Montague, I am too fond;
And therefore thou mayst think my ‘haviour light:
But trust me, gentleman, I’ll prove more true
Than those that have more cunning to be strange.

I should have been more strange, I must confess,
But that thou over-heard’st, ere I was ware,
My true love’s passion; therefore, pardon me;
And not impute this yielding to light love,
Which the dark night hath so discovered.

Rom. Lady, by yonder blessed moon I swear,
That tips with silver all these fruit-tree tops,—

Jul. O, swear not by the moon, the inconstant moon
That monthly changes in her circled orb,
Lest that thy love prove likewise variable.

Rom. What shall I swear by?

Jul. Do not swear at all;
Scene II.

Romeo and Juliet. 825

Or, if thou wilt, swear by thy gracious self,
Which is the god of my idolatry,
And I'll believe thee.

Rom. If my heart's dear love —
Jul. Well, do not swear; although I joy in thee,
I have no joy of this contract to-night:
It is too rash, too unadvis'd, too sudden;
Too like the lightning, which doth cease to be,
Ere one can say — It lightens. Sweet, good night!
This bud of love, by summer's ripening breath,
May prove a beautiful flower when next we meet.
Good night, good night! as sweet repose and rest
Come to thy heart, as that within my breast!
Rom. O, wilt thou leave me so unsatisfied?
Jul. What satisfaction canst thou have to-night?
Rom. The exchange of thy love's faithful vow for mine.

Jul. I gave thee mine before thou didst request it:
And yet I would it were to give again.
Rom. Wouldst thou withdraw it? for what purpose, love?
Jul. But to be frank, and give it thee again.
And yet I wish but for the thing I have:
My bounty is as boundless as the sea,
My love as deep; the more I give to thee,
The more I have, for both are infinite.

[Nurse calls within.]
I hear some noise within: Dear love, adieu! Anon, good nurse! — Sweet Montague, be true.
Stay but a little, I will come again. [Exit.]
Rom. O blessed, blessed night! I am afeard,
Being in night, all this is but a dream,
Too flattering-sweet to be substantial,

Re-enter Juliet, above.

Jul. Three words, dear Romeo, and good night, indeed.
If that thy bent of love be honourable,
Thy purpose marriage, send me word to-morrow,
By one that I'll procure to come to thee,
Where, and what time, thou wilt perform the rite;
And all my fortunes at thy foot I'll lay,
And follow thee, my lord, throughout the world: —

Nurse. [Within.] Madam.

Jul. I come, anon: — But if thou mean'st not well,
I do beseech thee,—

Nurse. [Within.] Madam.

Jul. By and by, I come: —
To cease thy suit, and leave me to my grief:
To-morrow will I send.

Rom. So thrive my soul, —
Jul. A thousand times good night! [Exit.
Rom. A thousand times the worse, to want thy light.

Love goes toward love, as school-boys from their books:
But love from love, toward school with heavy looks.

[Retiring slowly.

Re-enter Juliet, above.

Jul. Hist! Romeo, hist! — O, for a falconer's voice,
To lure this tassel-gentle 4 back again!
Bondage is hoarse, and may not speak aloud;
Else would I tear the cage where echo lies,
And make her airy tongue more hoarse than mine
With repetition of my Romeo's name.

Rom. It is my soul, that calls upon my name:
How silver sweet sound lovers' tongues by night,
Like softest musick to attending ears!
Jul. Romeo!
Rom. My sweet!
Jul. At what o'clock to-morrow
Shall I send to thee?
Rom. At the hour of nine.
Jul. I will not fail; 'tis twenty years till then,
I have forgot why I did call thee back.
Rom. Let me stand here till thou remember it.
Jul. I shall forget, to have thee still stand there,
Rememb'ring how I love thy company.
Rom. And I'll still stay, to have thee still forget,
Forgetting any other home but this.
Jul. 'Tis almost morning, I would have thee gone:
And yet no further than a wanton's bird;
Who lets it hop a little from her hand,
Like a poor prisoner in his twisted gryes, 5
And with a silk thread plucks it back again,
So loving-jealous of his liberty.
Rom. I would, I were thy bird.
Jul. Sweet, so would I: —
Yet I should kill thee with much cherishing.
Good night, good night! parting is such sweet sorrow,
That I shall say — good night, till it be morrow.

[Exit.

Rom. Sleep dwell upon thine eyes, peace in thy breast! —
'Would I were sleep and peace, so sweet to rest!
Hence will I to my ghostly father's cell;
His help to crave, and my dear hap 6 to tell. [Exit.

Scene III. Friar Laurence's Cell.

Enter Friar Laurence, with a Basket.

Fri. The grey-ey'd mourn smiles on the frowning night,
Checkering the eastern clouds with streaks of light;
And flecked 7 darkness like a drunkard reeds
From forth day's path-way, made by Titan's 8 wheels:
Now ere the sun advance his burning eye,
The day to cheer, and night's dank dew to dry,
I must fill up this osier cage of ours,
With baleful weeds, and precious-juiced flowers.
The earth, that's nature's mother, is her tomb;
What is her burying grave, that is her womb:
And from her womb children of divers kind
We sucking on her natural nurse find;
Many for many virtues excellent,
None but for some, and yet all different.
O, mickle is the powerful grace, that lies
In herbs, plants, stones, and their true qualities:
For nought so vile that on the earth doth live,
But to the earth some special good doth give;
Nor aught so good, but, strain'd from that fair use,
Revolts from true birth, stumbling on abuse:
Virtue itself turns vice, being misapplied;
And vice sometime's by action dignified.
Within the infant rind of this small flower
Poison hath residence, and medicine power:
For this, being smelt, with that part cheers each part;
Being tasted, slays all senses with the heart.
Two such opposed foes encamp them still
In man as well as herbs, grace, and rude will;
And where the worser is predominant,
Full soon the canker death eats up that plant.

8 Fetter.
6 Chance, fortune.
7 Spotted, streaked.
5 Mickle.
4 The tassel is the male hawk, the falcon the female.

9 Mickle.
8 Titan.
Enter Romeo.

Rom. Good morrow, father!

Fri. Benedicite!

What early tongue so sweet saluteth me?
Young son, it argues a distemper'd head,
So soon to bid good morrow to thy bed:
Cure keeps his watch in every old man's eye,
And where cure lodges, sleep will never lie;
But where unbruised youth with unstiff'd brain
Doth coax his limbs, there golden sleep doth reign;
Therefore thy earliness doth me assure,
Thou art up-rous'd by some distemperate;
Or if not so, then here I hit it right—
Our Romeo hath not been in bed to-night.

Rom. That last is true.

Fri. Wast thou with Rosaline?

Rom. With Rosaline, my ghostly father? no;
I have forgot that name, and that name's woe.

Fri. That's my good son: But where hast thou been then?

Rom. I'll tell thee, ere thou ask it me again.
I have been feasting with mine enemy;
Where, on a sudden, one hath wounded me,
That's by me wounded; both our remedies
Within thy help and holy physic lies:
I bear no hatred, blessed man: for, lo,
My intercession likewise steads my foes.

Fri. Be plain, good son, and homely in thy drift;
Riddling confession finds but riddling shift.

Rom. Then plainly know, my heart's dear loves is set
On the fair daughter of rich Capulet:
As mine on hers, so hers is set on mine;
And all combin'd, save what thou must combine
By holy marriage: When, and where, and how,
We met, we woo'd, and made exchange of vow,
I'll tell thee as we pass; but this I pray,
That thou consent to marry us this day.

Fri. Holy saint Francis! what a change is here?
Is Rosaline, whom thou didst love so dear,
So soon forsaken? young men's love then lies
Not truly in their hearts but in their eyes.
O, Romeo, what a deal of sorrow's brine
Hath wash'd thy sallow checks for Rosaline!
How much salt water thrown away in waste,
To season love, that of it doth not taste!
The sun not yet thy sighs from heaven clears,
Thy old groans ring yet in my ancient ears;
Lo, here upon thy cheek the stain doth sit
Of an old tear that is not wash'd off yet:
If e'er thou wast thyself, and these woes thine,
Thou and these woes were all for Rosaline;
And art thou chang'd? pronounce this sentence
then—

Women may fall, when there's no strength in men.

Rom. Thou chid'st me oft for loving Rosaline.

Fri. For do'ing, not for loving, pupil mine.

Rom. And bad'st me bury love.

Fri. Not in a grave,

To lay one in, another out to have.

Rom. I pray thee, chide not: she, whom I love now,
Doth grace for grace, and love for love allow;
The other did not so.

Fri. O, she knew well,

Thy love did read by rote, and could not spell.
But come, young waverer, come go with me,
In one respect I'll thy assistant be;
For this alliance may so happy prove,
To turn your households' rancour to pure love.

Rom. O let us hence; I stand on sudden haste.
Fri. Wisely, and slow; they stumble, that run fast.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV. — A Street.

Enter Benvolio and Mercutio.

Mer. Where should this Romeo be?

Ben. Not to his father's; I spoke with his man.

Mer. Alas, that same pale hard-hearted wench,

That Rosaline,

Torments him so, that he will sure run mad.

Ben. Tybalt, the kinsman of old Capulet,

Hath sent a letter to his father's house.

Mer. A challenge, on my life.

Ben. Romeo will answer it.

Mer. Any man, that can write, may answer a letter.

Ben. Nay, he will answer the letter's master, how he dares, being dared.

Mer. Alas, poor Romeo, he is already dead!

And with a white girl's black eye! shot thorough the ear with a love-song: the very pin of his heart cleft with the blind bow-boy's butt-shaft; and is he a man to encounter Tybalt?

Ben. Why, what is Tybalt?

Mer. More than prince of cats, I can tell you. O, he is the courageous captain of compliments. He fights as you sing, keeps time, distance, and proportion; rests me his mimik rest one, two, and the third in your bosom: the very butcher of a silk button, a duellist, a duellist; a gentleman of the very first house,—of the first and second cause: Ah, the immortal passado! the punto reverso! the hay!

Ben. The what?

Mer. The plague of such an antick, lisping, affecting fantasticoes; these new tuners of accents! Why, is not this a lamentable thing, grand sire, that we should be thus afflicted with these strange flies, these fashion-mongers, these pardonnez-moys, who stand so much on the new form, that they cannot sit at ease on the old bench? O, their bon's, their bon's!

Enter Romeo.

Ben. Here comes Romeo, here comes Romeo.

Mer. Without his roe, like a dried herring: — O flesh, flesh, how art thou fishified! — Now is he for the numbers that Petrarch flowed in: Laura, to his lady, was but a kitchen-wench; — marry, she had a better love to be-rhyme her: Dido, a dowdy; Cleopatra, a gipsy; Thisbé, a grey eye or so, but not to the purpose. — Signior Romeo, bon jour! there's a French salutation to your French slop. You gave us the counterfeit fairly last night.

Rom. Good morrow to you both. What counterfeit did I give you?

Mer. The slip, sir, the slip; Can you not conceive?

Rom. Pardon, good Mercutio, my business was great; and, in such a case as mine, a man may strain courtesy.

Mer. Nay, I am the very pink of courtesy.

Rom. Pink for flower.
Scene IV.

ROMEO AND JULIET. 827

Mer. Right.
Rom. Why, then is my pump well flowered.
Mer. Well said; follow me this jest now, till thou hast worn out thy pump; that, when the single sole of it is worn, the jest may remain after the wearing, solely singular.
Rom. O a single-soled jest, solely singular for the singleness!
Mer. Come between us, good Benvolio; my wits fail.
Rom. Switch and spurs, switch and spurs; or I'll cry a match.
Mer. Nay, if thy wits run the wild-goose chase, I have done: for thou hast more of the wild-goose in one of thy wits, than, I am sure, I have in my whole five: Was I with you there for the goose?
Rom. Thou wast never with me for any thing, when thou wast not there for the goose.
Mer. I will bite thee by the ear for that jest.
Rom. Nay, good goose, bite not.
Mer. Thy wit is a very bitter-sweeting; it is a most sharp sauce.
Rom. And is it not well served in to a sweet goose?
Mer. O, here's a wit of cheverel, that stretches from an inch narrow to an ell broad!
Rom. I stretch it out for that word — broad — which added to the goose, proves thee far and wide a broad goose.
Mer. Why, is not this better now than grooming for love? now art thou sociable, now art thou Romeo; now art thou what thou art, by art as well as by nature.
Rom. Here's goodly geer!

Enter Nurse and Peter.

Mer. A sail, a sail, a sail!
Nurse. Peter!
Pet. Anon?
Nurse. My fan, Peter.
Mer. Pr'ythee, do, good Peter, to hide her face; for her fan's the fairer of the two.
Nurse. Good morrow, gentlemen.
Mer. Good den, fair gentlewoman.
Nurse. Is it good den?
Mer. 'Tis no less, I tell you; for the hand of the dial is now upon the point of noon.
Nurse. Gentlemen, can any of you tell me where I may find the young Romeo?
Rom. I can tell you; but young Romeo will be elder when you have found him, than he was when you sought him; I am the youngest of that name, for fault of a worse.
Nurse. You say well.
Mer. Ye, is the worse well? very well took, i' faith; wisely, wisely.
Nurse. If you be he, sir, I desire some confidence with you.
Pet. She will indite him to some supper.
Rom. Romeo, will you come to your father's we'll to dinner this
Pet. I will follow you.
Mer. Farewell, ancient lady; farewell, lady, lady.
Nurse. Marry, farewell! I pray you, sir, what saucy merchant was this, that was so full of his ropery?

Rom. A gentleman, nurse, that loves to hear himself talk; and will speak more in a minute, than he will stand to in a month.
Nurse. An 'a speak any thing against me, I'll take him down an 'a were luster than he is, and twenty such Jacks; and if I cannot, I'll find those that shall. Pray you, sir, a word: and, as I told you, my young lady bade me inquire you out; what she bade me say, I will keep to myself: but first let me tell ye, if ye should lead her into a fool's paradise, as they say, it were a very gross kind of behaviour, as they say: for the gentlewoman is young: and, therefore, if you should deal double with her, truly, it were an ill thing to be offered to any gentlewoman, and very weak dealing.
Rom. Nurse, commend me to thy lady and mistress. I protest unto thee,
Nurse. Good heart! and, i' faith, I will tell her as much: She will be a joyful woman.
Rom. What wilt thou tell her, nurse? thou dost not mark me.
Nurse. I will tell her, sir, — that you do protest; which, as I take it, is a gentleman-like offer.
Rom. Bid her devise some means to come to shrift!
This afternoon;
And there she shall at friar Laurence' cell
Be shriv'd, and married. Here is for thy pains.
Nurse. No, truly, sir; not a penny.
Rom. Go to; I say you shall.
Nurse. This afternoon, sir; well, she shall be there.
Rom. And stay, good nurse, behind the abbey-wall:
Within this hour my man shall be with thee;
And bring thee cords made like a tackled stair,
Which to the high top-gallant of my joy
Must be my convoy in the secret night.
Farewell! — Be trusty, and I'll quit thy pains.
Farewell! — Commend me to thy mistress.
Nurse. Now, heaven bless thee! — Hark you, sir.
Rom. What say'st thou, my dear nurse?
Nurse. Is your man secret? Did you never hear say —
Two may keep counsel, putting one away?
Rom. I warrant thee; my man's as true as steel.
Nurse. Well, sir; my mistress is the sweetest lady; — I was a little prating thing. — O, — there's a nobleman in town, one Paris, that would fain lay knife aboard; but she, good soul, had as lieve see a toad, a very toad, as see him. I anger her sometimes, and tell her that Paris is the properer man; but, I'll warrant you, when I say so, she looks as pale as any clout in the vascally world. Doth not rosemary and Romeo begin both with a letter?
Rom. Ay, nurse; What of that? both with an R.
Nurse. Ah, mocker! that's the dog's name, R. is for the dog. No; I know it begins with some other letter; and she hath the prettiest sententious of it, of you and rosemary, that it would do you good to hear me mark me.
Rom. Command me to thy lady.

[Exeunt. Nurse. Ay, a thousand times. — Peter!
Pet. Anon?
Nurse. Peter, take my fan, and go before.

[Exeunt.]
SCENE V. — Capulet's Garden.

Enter Juliet.

Jul. The clock struck nine, when I did send the nurse;
In half an hour she promis'd to return.
Perchance she cannot meet him: that's not so. —
O, she is lame! love's heralds should be thoughts,
Which ten times faster glide than the sun's beams,
Driving back shadows over lowering hills:
Therefore do nimble-pinion'd doves draw love,
And therefore hath the wind-swift Cupid's wings.
Now is the sun upon the highest hill
Of this day's journey; and from nine till twelve
Is three long hours, — yet she is not come.
Had she affections, and warm youthful blood,
She'd be as swift in motion as a ball;
My words would bandy * her to my sweet love,
And his to me:
But old folks, many feign as they were dead;
Unwieldy, slow, heavy and pale as lead.

Enter Nurse and Peter.

O here she comes! — O honey nurse, what news?
Hast thou met with him? Send thy man away.
Nurse. Peter, stay at the gate. [Exit Peter.

Jul. Now, good sweet nurse, — why look'st thou sad?
Though news be sad, yet tell them merrily;
If good, thou sham'st the music of sweet news
By playing it to me with so sour a face.
Nurse. I am weary, give me leave a while; — Fye, how my bones ake! What a jaunt have I had!
Jul. I would, thou hadst my bones, and I thy news:
Nay, come, I pray thee, speak; — good, good nurse, speak.

Nurse. What haste? can you not stay a while?
Do you not see that I am out of breath?
Jul. How art thou out of breath, when thou hast breath
To say to me — that thou art out of breath?
The excuse that thou dost make in this delay,
Is longer than the tale thou dost excuse.
Is thy news good, or bad? answer to that;
Say either, and I'll stay the circumstance:
Let me be satisfied, It's good or bad?

Nurse. Well, you have made a simple choice;
you know not how to choose a man: Romeo! no, not he; though his face be better than any man's, yet his leg excels all men's; and for a hand and a foot, they are past compare: He is not the flower of courtesy, — but, I'll warrant him as gentle as a lamb. What, have you dined at home?

Jul. No, no: But all this did I know before;
What says he of our marriage? what of that?
Nurse. O, how my head akes! what a head have I!
It beats as it would fall in twenty pieces.
My back o' the other side. — O, my back, my back! —
Beshear your heart, for sending me about,
To catch my death with jouncing up and down!

Jul. I' faith, I am sorry that thou art not well:
Sweet, sweet, sweet nurse, tell me, what says my love?

Nurse. Your love says, like an honest gentleman,
And a courteous, and a kind, and a handsome,
And, I warrant, a virtuous: — Where is your mother?

* Drive her, as a ball struck with a bandy, i.e. a bat or battledore.

Jul. Where is my mother? — why, she is within;
Where should she be? How oddly thou reply'st;
Your love says like an honest gentleman,—
Where is your mother?

Nurse. Marry, come up, I trow:
Is this the poultrie for my aking bones?
Henceforward do your messages yourself.

Jul. Here's such a coil, — come, what says Romey?
Nurse. Have you got leave to go to shift to-day?
Jul. I have.

Nurse. Then hie you hence to friar Laurence' cell,
There stays a husband to make you a wife:
Now comes the wanton blood up in your cheeks,
They'll be in scarlet straight at any news.
Hie you to church; I must another way,
I must go fetch a ladder for your love;
I am the drudge, and toll in your delight.
Go, I'll to dinner; hie you to the cell.

Jul. Hie to high fortune! — honest nurse, fare-well.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VI. — Friar Laurence's Cell.

Enter Friar Laurence and Romeo.

Fri. So smile the heavens upon this holy act,
That after-hours with sorrow chide us not.
Rom. Amen, amen! but come what sorrow can,
It cannot countervail the exchange of joy
That one short minute gives me in her sight:
Do thou but close our hands with holy words,
Then love-devouring death do what he dare,
It is enough. I may but call her mine.

Fri. These violent delights have violent ends,
And in their triumph die; like fire and powder,
Which, as they kiss, consume: The sweetest honey
Is loathsome in his own deliciousness,
And in the taste confounds the appetite:
Therefore, love moderately; long love doth so;
Too swift arrives as tardy as too slow.

Enter Juliet.

Here comes the lady: — O, so light a foot
Will ne'er wear out the everlasting flint:
A lover may bestride the gossamer:
That idle in the wanton summer air,
And yet not fall; so light is vanity.

Jul. Good even to my ghostly confessor.

Fri. Romeo shall thank thee, daughter, for us both.

Jul. As much to him, else are his thanks too much.

Rom. Ah, Juliet, if the measure of thy joy
Be heap'd like mine, and that thy skill be more
To blazon it, then sweeten with thy breath
This neighbour air, and let rich music's tongue,
Unfold the imagin'd happiness that both
Receive in either by this dear encounter.

Jul. Conceit, more rich in matter than in words,
Brags of his substance, not of ornament:
They are but beggars that can count their worth;
But my true love is grown to such excess,
I cannot sum up half my sum of wealth.

Fri. Come, come with me, and we will make short work;
And holy church incorporate two in one. [Exeunt.
ACT III.

SCENE I. — A Publick Place.

Enter Mercutio, Benvolio, Page, and Servants.

Ben. I pray thee, good Mercutio, let’s retire; The day is hot, the Capulets abroad, And, if we meet, we shall not ESCAPE a brawl; For now, these hot days, is the mad blood stirring. Merc. Thou art like one of those fellows, that, when he enters the confines of a tavern, claps me his sword upon the table, and says, Heaven send me no need of thee! and, by the operation of the second cup, draws it on the drawer, when, indeed, there is no need.

Ben. Am I like such a fellow? Merc. Come, come, thou art as hot a Jack in thy mood as any in Italy; and as soon moved to be moody, and as soon moody to be moved.

Ben. And what to? Merc. Nay, an there were two such, we should have none shortly, for one would kill the other. Thou! why thou wilt quarrel with a man that hath a hair more, or a hair less, in his beard, than thou hast. Thou wilt quarrel with a man for cracking nuts, having no other reason but because thou hast hazel eyes; What eye, but such an eye, would spy out such a quarrel? Thy head is as full of quarrels as an egg is full of meat; and yet thy head hath been beaten as addle as an egg, for quarrelling. Thou hast quarreled with a man for coughing in the street, because he hath wakened thy dog that hath lain asleep in the sun. Didst thou not fall out with a tailor for wearing his new doublet before Easter? with another, for tying his new shoes with old riband? and yet thou wilt tutor me from quarrelling!

Ben. An I were so apt to quarrel as thou art, any man should buy the fee-simple of my life for an hour and a quarter.

Merc. The fee-simple? O simple!

Enter Tybalt, and others.

Tyb. Follow me close, for I will speak to them. Gentlemen, good den; a word with one of you. Merc. And but one word with one of us? Couple it with something; make it a word and a blow.

Tyb. You will find me apt enough to that, sir, if you will give me occasion.

Ben. We talk here in the publick haunt of men: Either withdraw into some private place, Or reason coldly of your grievances, Or else depart; here all eyes gaze on us. Merc. Men’s eyes were made to look, and let them gaze; I will not budge for no man’s pleasure, I.

Enter Romeo.

Tyb. Well, peace be with you, sir! here comes my man.

Merc. But I’ll be hanged, sir, if he wear your livery; Marry, go before to field, he’ll be your follower; Your worship, in that sense, may call him — man. Tyb. Romeo, the hate I bear thee, can afford No better term than this — Thou art a villain.

Rom. Tybalt, the reason that I have to love thee Doth much excuse the appertainings rage To such a greeting: — Villain am I none; Therefore, farewell; I see, thou know’st me not. Tyb. Boy, this shall not excuse the injuries That thou hast done me; therefore turn, and draw. Rom. I do protest I never injur’d thee; But love thee better than thou canst devise, Till thou shalt know the reason of my love: And, so, good Capulet, — which name I tender As dearly as mine own, — be satisfied.

Merc. O calm, dishonourable, vile submission! A la stocca ta carries it away. [Draws.] Tybalt, you rat-catcher, will you walk? Tyb. What wouldst thou have with me?

Merc. Good king of cats, nothing, but one of your nine lives; that I mean to make bold withal, and as you shall use me hereafter, dry-beat the rest of the eight. Will you pluck your sword out of his pilcher 1 by the ears? make haste, lest mine be about your ears ere it be out.

Tyb. I am for you. [Draws.] Rom. Gentle Mercutio, put thy rapier up.

Merc. Come, sir, your passado. [They fight.] Rom. Draw, Benvolio; Beat down their weapons: — Gentlemen, for shame; Forbear this outrage; — Tybalt — Mercutio — The prince expressly hath forbid this bandying In Verona streets: — hold, Tybalt; — good Mercutio. [Exeunt Tybalt and his Partisans.]

Merc. I am hurt; —

A plague o’ both the houses! — I am sped: — Is he gone, and hath nothing?

Where is my page? — go, villain, fetch a surgeon. [Exit Page.]

Rom. Courage, man; the hurt cannot be much. Merc. No, ’tis not so deep as a well, nor so wide as a church door; but ’tis enough, ’twill serve: ask for me to-morrow, and you shall find me a grave man. I am peppered, I warrant, for this world: A plague o’ both your houses! — A dog, a rat, a mouse, a cat, to scratch a man to death! a brag-gart, a rogue, a villain, that fights by the book of arithmetick! — Why, the devil, came you between us? I was hurt under your arm.

Rom. I thought all for the best. Merc. Help me into some house, Benvolio, Or I shall faint. — A plague o’ both your houses! They have made worm’s meat of me: I have it, and soundly too: — Your houses! [Exeunt Mercutio and Benvolio.

9 The Italian term for a thrust or stab with a rapier.

1 Case or scabbard.
Romeo and Juliet.

Act III.

Romeo. This gentleman, the prince's near ally,
My very friend, hath got his mortal hurt.
In my behalf; my reputation stain'd
With Tybalt's slander, Tybalt, that an hour
Hath been my kinsman: — O sweet Juliet,
Thy beauty hath made me effeminate,
And in my temper soft'en'd valour's steel.

Re-enter Benvolio.

Benv. O Romeo, Romeo, brave Mercutio's dead;
That gallant spirit hath aspird the clouds,
Which too untimely here did scorn the earth.
Romeo. This day's black fate on more days doth depend;
This but begins the woé, others must end.

Re-enter Tybalt.

Benv. Here comes the furious Tybalt back again.
Romeo. Alive! in triumph! and Mercutio slain!
Away to heaven, respective 9 lenity,
And fire-ey'd fury be my conduct now! —
Now, Tybalt, take the villain back again,
That late thou gav'st me; for Mercutio's soul
Is but a little way above our heads,
Staying for thine to keep him company;
Either thou, or I, or both, must go with him.
Tyb. Thou, wretched boy, that didst consort 4 him here,
Shalt with him hence.

Romeo. This shall determine that.

Benv. Romeo, away, be gone! The citizens are up, and Tybalt slain:
Stand not amaz'd: — the prince will doom thee death,
If thou art taken: — hence! — be gone! — away!
Romeo. O! I am fortune's fool!

Enter Citizens, &c.

1 Cit. Which way ran he, that kill'd Mercutio?
Tybalt, that murderer, which way ran he?
Romeo. There lies that Tybalt.
1 Cit. Up, sir, go with me; I charge thee in the prince's name, obey.

Enter Prince, attended; Montague, Capulet, their Wives, and others.

Prin. Where are the vile beginners of this fray?
Benv. O noble prince, I can discover all
The unlucky manage of this fatal brawl:
There lies the man slain by young Romeo,
That slew thy kinsman, brave Mercutio.

La. Cap. Tybalt, my cousin! — O my brother's child!
Unhappy sight! ah me, the blood is spill'd
Of my dear kinsman! — Prince, as thou art true, 5
For blood of ours, shed blood of Montague.

Romeo. O cousin, cousin!
Prin. Benvolio, who began this bloody fray?
Benv. Tybalt, here slain, whom Romeo's hand did slay;
Romeo that spoke him fair, bade him bethink
How nice 6 the quarrel was, and urg'd withal
Your high displeasure: — All this — uttered
With gentle breath, calm look, knees humbly bow'd,
Could not take truce with the unruly spleen

Of Tybalt, deaf to peace, but that he tilts
With piercing steel at bold Mercutio's breast;
Who, all as hot, turns deadly point to point,
And, with a martial scorn, with one hand beats
Cold death aside, and with the other sends
It back to Tybalt, whose dexterity
Retorts it: Romeo he cries aloud,
Hold friends! friends part! and, swifter than his tongue,
His agile arm beats down their fatal points,
And 'twixt them rushes; underneath whose arm
An envious thrust from Tybalt hit the life
Of stout Mercutio, and then Tybalt fled:
But by and by comes back to Romeo,
Who had but newly entertain'd revenge,
And to't they go like lightning; for, ere I
Could draw to part them, was stout Tybalt slain;
And, as he fell, did Romeo turn and fly:
This is the truth, or let Benvolio die.

La. Cap. He is a kinsman to the Montague,
Affection makes him false, he speaks not true:
Some twenty of them fought in this black strife,
And all those twenty could but kill one life:
I beg for justice, which thou, prince, must give;
Romeo slew Tybalt, Romeo must not live.

Prince. Romeo slew him, he slew Mercutio;
Who now the price of his dear blood doth owe?
Mont. Not Romeo, prince, he was Mercutio's friend;
His fault concludes but what the law should end,
The life of Tybalt,

Prince. And, for that offence, Immediately we do exile him hence:
I have an interest in your hates' proceeding,
My blood for your rude brawls doth lie a bleeding;
But I'll amerce 7 you with so strong a fine,
That you shall all repent the loss of mine:
I will be deaf to pleading and excuses;
Nor tears, nor prayers, shall purchase out abuses;
Therefore use none: let Romeo hence in haste,
Else, when he's found, that hour is his last.
Bear hence this body, and attend our will:
Mercy but murders, pardoning those that kill.

[Exit.

SCENE II. — A Room in Capulet's House.

Enter Juliet.

Juliet. Gallop apace, you fiery-footed steeds,
Towards Phoebus' mansion; such a waggoner
As Phaeton would whip you to the west,
And bring in cloudy night immediately.
Spread thy close curtain, and come, civil 8 night,
Thou sober-suited matron, all in black:
Come, night! — Come, Romeo! come, thou day in night!
For thou wilt lie upon the wings of night
Wiltier than new snow on a raven's back.
Comb gentle night; come, loving, black-brow'd 9 night,
Give me my Romeo: and when he shall die,
Take him and cut him out in little stars,
And he will make the face of heaven so fine,
That all the world will be in love with night,
And pay no worship to the garish 9 sun.

Enter Nurse, with Coins.

Here comes my nurse,
And she brings news; and every tongue, that speaks,
But Romeo's name, speaks heavenly eloquence.

7 Punish by fine. 8 Grave, solemn. 9 Gaudy, showy.
Now, nurse, what news? What hast thou there, the cords,
That Romeo bade thee fetch?

Nurse. Ay, ay, the cords.

[Throws them down.]

Jul. Ah me! what news! why dost thou wring thy hands?

Nurse. Ah well-a-day! he's dead, he's dead, he's dead!

We are undone, lady, we are undone! —

Alack the day! — he's gone, he's kill'd, he's dead!

Jul. Can heaven be so envious?

Nurse. Romeo can,

Though heaven cannot: — O Romeo! Romeo! —

Who ever had thought it? — Romeo.

Jul. What devil art thou, that dost torment me thus?

Hath Romeo slain himself? say thou but I,

And that bare vowel I shall poison more

Than the death-darting eye of cockatrice:

I am not I, if there be such an I:

Or those eyes shut, that make thee answer, I.

If he be slain, say — I; or if not, no,

Brief sounds determine of my weal, or woe,

Nurse. I saw the wound, I saw it with mine eyes, —

'Twas here, e'en here, upon his manly breast:

A piteous corse, a bloody piteous corse;

Pale, pale as ashes, all bedaub'd in blood,

All in gore blood: I swooned at the sight.

Jul. O break, my heart! — poor bankrupt, break at once!

To prison, eyes! ne'er look on liberty!

Vile earth, to earth resign; end motion here;

And thou, and Romeo, press one heavy bier!

Nurse. O Tybalt, Tybalt, the best friend I had!

O courteous Tybalt! honest gentleman!

That ever I should live to see thee dead!

Jul. What storm is this, that blows so contrary?

Is Romeo slaughter'd, and is Tybalt dead?

My dear lov'd cousin, and my dearest lord!

Then, dreadful trumpet, sound the general doom!

For who is living, if those two are gone?

Nurse. Tybalt is gone, and Romeo banished;

Romeo, that kill'd him, he is banished.

Jul. O heaven! — did Romeo's hand shed Tybalt's blood?

Nurse. It did, it did; alas the day! it did.

Jul. O serpent heart, h'ud with a flowing face!

Did ever dragon keep so fair a cave?

Beautiful tyrant! fiend angelical!

Dove-feather'd raven! wolvish raving lamb!

Despised substance of divinest show!

Just opposite to what thou justly seem'st:

Was ever book, containing such vile matter,

So fairly bound? O, that deceit should dwell

In such a gorgeous palace!

Nurse. There's no trust,

No faith, no honesty in men; all perjur'd,

All forsown, all naught, all dissemblers. —

Ah, where's my man? give me some aqua vitae: —

These griefs, these woes, these sorrows make me old.

Shame come to Romeo!

Jul. Blister'd be thy tongue,

For such a wish! he was not born to shame:

Upon his brow shame is asham'd to sit;

For 'tis a throne where honour may be crown'd

Sole monarch of the universal earth.

O, what a beast was I to chide at him!

1 In Shakespeare's time the affirmative particle _ay_ was usually written _I_, and here it is necessary to retain the old spelling.

Nurse. Will you speak well of him that kill'd your cousin?

Jul. Shall I speak ill of him that is my husband?

Ah, poor my lord, what tongue shall smooth thy name,

When I, thy three-hours' wife, have mangled it? —

But, wherefore, villain, didst thou kill my cousin?

That villain cousin would have kill'd my husband:

Back, foolish tears, back to your native spring;

Your tributary drops belong to woe,

Which you, mistakes, offer up to joy.

My husband lives, that Tybalt would have slain;

And Tybalt's dead, that would have slain my husband.

All this is comfort; Wherefore weep I then?

Some word there was, worse than Tybalt's death,

That murder'd me: I would forget it fain;

But, O! it presses to my memory,

Like horrid guilty deeds to sinners' minds:

Tybalt is dead, and Romeo — banished;

That — banished, that one word — banished,

Hath slain ten thousand Tybals. Tybalt's death

Was woe enough, if it had ended there:

Or, — if sour woe delights in fellowship,

And needly will be rank'd with other griefs,

— Why follow'd not, when she said — Tybalt's dead,

Thy father, or thy mother, nay, or both,

Which modern _2_ lamentation might have mov'd?

But, with a rear-ward following Tybalt's death,

Romeo is banished; — to speak that word,

Is father, mother, Tybalt, Romeo, Juliet,

All slain, all dead: — Romeo is banished;

There is no end, no limit, measure, bound,

In that word's death; no words can that woe sound.

Where is my father, and my mother, nurse?

Nurse. Weeping and wailing over Tybalt's corse:

Will you go to them? I will bring you thither.

Jul. Wash they his wounds with tears? mine shall be spent,

When theirs are dry, for Romeo's banishment.

Take up those cords: — Poor ropes, you are beguil'd.

Both you and I; for Romeo is exil'd.

Nurse. He to your chamber: I'll find Romeo,

To comfort you: — I wot _3_ well where he is.

Hark ye, your Romeo will be here at night;

I'll to him; he is hid at Laurence' cell.

Jul. O find him! give this ring to my true knight,

And bid him come to take his last farewell.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III. — Friar Laurence's Cell.

Enter Friar Laurence and Romeo.

Fri. Romeo, come forth; come forth, thou fearful man;

Affliction is enamour'd of thy parts,

And thou art wedded to calamity.

Rom. Father, what news? what is the prince's doom?

What sorrow craves acquaintance at my hand,

That I yet know not?

Fri. Too familiar

Is my dear son with such sour company:

I bring thee tidings of the prince's doom.

Rom. What less than dooms-day is the prince's doom? —

Fri. A gentler judgment vanish'd from his lips,

Not body's death, but body's banishment.

Rom. Ha! banishment? be merciful, say — death:

For exile hath more terror in his look,

Much more than death: do not say — banishment.

2 Common.

3 Know.
Fri. Hence from Verona art thou banished:
Be patient, for the world is broad and wide.

Rom. There is no world without Verona walls,
Hence-banished is banish'd from the world,
And world's exile is death: — then banishment
Is death mis-termin'd: calling death — banishment,
Thou cutt'st my head off with a golden axe,
And smil'st upon the stroke that murders me.

Fri. O deadly sin! O rude unthankfulness!
Thy fault our law calls death; but the kind prince,
Taking thy part, hath rush'd aside the law,
And turn'd that black word death to banishment:
This is dear mercy, and thou seest it not.

Rom. 'Tis torture, and not mercy: heaven is here,
Where Juliet lives; and every cat, and dog,
And little mouse, every unworthy thing,
Live here in heaven, and may look on her,
But Romeo may not. — More validity,
More honourable state, more courtship lives
In carrion flies, than Romeo: they may seize
On the white wonder of dear Juliet's hand,
And steal immortal blessing from her lips;
Who, even in pure and vestal modesty,
Still blush, as thinking their own kisses sin;
But Romeo may not; he is banished:
Flies may do this, when I from this must fly;
They are free men, but I am banished.
And say'st thou, yet, that exile is not death?
Hadst thou no poison mix'd, no sharp-ground knife,
No sudden mean of death, though ne'er so mean,
But, — banished — to kill me; banished?
O cruel friar, how hast thou the heart,
Being a divine, a ghastly confessor,
A sin-absolver, and my friend profess'd,
To mangle me with that word — banishment?

Fri. Thou fond mad man, hear me but speak a word.

Rom. O, thou wilt speak again of banishment.

Fri. I'll give thee armour to keep off that word;
Adversity's sweet milk, philosophy,
To comfort thee, though thou art banished.

Rom. Yet banished? — Hang up philosophy!

Fri. Unless philosophy can make a Juliet,
Displant a town, reverse a prince's doom;
It helps not, it prevails not, talk no more.

Rom. O, then I see that madmen have no ears.

Fri. How should they, when that wise men have no eyes?

Rom. Let me dispute with thee of thy estate.

Rom. Thou canst not speak of what thou dost not feel:
Wert thou as young as I, Juliet thy love,
An hour but married, Tybalt murdered,
Doting like me, and like me banished,
Then might'st thou speak, then might'st thou tear thy hair,
And fall upon the ground as I do now,
Taking the measure of an unmade grave.

Fri. Arise; one knocks; good Romeo, hide thyself.

Rom. Not I; unless the breath of heart-sick groans,
Mist-like, infold me from the search of eyes.

Fri. Hark, how they knock! — Who's there? —

Rom. Arise:
Thou wilt be taken: — Stay a while: stand up;

Fri. Knocking.

Run to my study: — By and by: — I come!

What wilfulness is this? — I come, I come.

[Knocking.

Who knocks so hard? whence come you? what's your will?

Nurse. [Within.] Let me come in, and you shall know my errand;
I come from lady Juliet.

Fri. Welcome then.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. O holy friar, O, tell me, holy friar,
Where is my lady's lord, where's Romeo?

Fri. There on the ground, with his own tears made drunk.

Nurse. O, he is even in my mistress' case,
Just in her case!

Fri. O woeful sympathy! Pieux predicament!

Nurse. Even so lies she, Blubbering and weeping, weeping and blubbering: —
Stand up, stand up; stand, an you be a man:
For Juliet's sake, for her sake, rise and stand;
Why should you fall into so deep an O?

Rom. Nurse!

Nurse. Ah sir! ah sir! — Well, death's the end of all.

Rom. Spak'st thou of Juliet? how is it with her?
Does she not think me an old murderer,
Now I have stain'd the childhood of our joy
With blood remov'd but little from her own?
Where is she? and how doth she? and what says
My conceal'd lady to our cancell'd love?

Nurse. O, she says nothing, sir, but weeps and weeps;
And now falls on her bed; and then starts up,
And Tybalt calls; and then on Romeo cries,
And then down falls again.

Rom. As if that name, Shot from the deadly level of a gun,
Did murder her; as that name's cursed hand
Murder'd her kinsman. — O tell me, friar, tell me,
In what vile part of this anatomy
Doth my name lodge? tell me, that I may sack
The hateful mansion. [Drawing his Sword.

Fri. Hold thy desperate hand:
Art thou a man? thy form cries out, thou art;
Thy tears are womanish, thy wild acts denote
The unreasonable fury of a beast:
Unseemly woman, in a seeming man!
Or ill-becoming beast, in seeming both!
Thou hast amaz'd me; by my holy order,
I thought thy disposition better temper'd,
Hast thou slain Tybalt? wilt thou slay thyself?
And slay thy lady too that lives in thee,
By doing violence upon thyself?
Why rais'st thou on thy birth, the heaven, and earth?
Since birth, and heaven, and earth, all three do meet
In thee at once; which thou at once wouldst lose.
Fye, fye! thou sham'st thy shape, thy love, thy wit;
Which, like an usurer, abound'st in all,
And usest none in that true use indeed
Which should bedeck thy shape, thy love, thy wit.
Thy noble shape is but a form of wax,
Digress'd from the valour of a man:
Thy dear love, sworn, but hollow periery,
Killing that love which thou hast vow'd to cherish;
Thy wit, that ornament to shape and love,
Mis-shapen in the conduct of them both,
Like powder in a skill-less soldier's flask,
Is set on fire by thine own ignorance,
And thou dismember'd with thine own defence,
What, rouse thee, man! thy Juliet is alive,
For whose dear sake thou wast but lately dead;
There art thou happy: Tybalt would kill thee,
But thou slewest Tybalt; there art thou happy too:
The law, that threaten'd death, becomes thy friend,
And turns it to exile; there art thou happy:
A pack of blessings lights upon thy back:
Happiness courts thee in her best array;
But, like a mis-behav'd and sullen wench,
Thou pou'st upon thy fortune and thy love:
Take heed, take heed, for such die miserable.
Go, get thee to thy love, as was decreed,
Ascend her chamber, hence and comfort her;
But, look, thou stay not till the watch be set,
For then thou canst not pass to Mantua;
Where thou shalt live, till we can find a time
To blaze your marriage, reconcile your friends,
Beg pardon of the prince, and call thee back
With twenty hundred thousand times more joy
Than thou went'st forth in lamentation. —
Go before, nurse: commend me to thy lady;
And bid her hasten all the house to bed,
Which heavy sorrow makes them apt to:
Romeo is coming.
Nurse. I could have staid all night,
To hear good counsel: O, what learning is! —
My lord, I'll tell my lady you will come.
Rom. Do so, and bid my sweet prepare to chide.
Nurse. Here, sir, a ring she bid me give you, sir:
Hie you, make haste, for it grows very late.
[Exit Nurse.
Rom. How well my comfort is reviv'd by this!
Fri. Go hence: Good night: and here stands all your state 5;
Either be gone before the watch be set,
Or by the break of day disguis'd from hence:
Sojourn in Mantua; I'll find out your man,
And he shall signify from time to time
Every good hap to you, that chances here:
Give me thy hand; 'tis late; farewell; good night.
Rom. But that a joy past joy calls out on me,
It were a grief, so brief to part with thee:
Farewell.
[Exeunt.

SCENE IV.

A Room in Capulet's House.

Enter Capulet, Lady Capulet, and Paris.

Cap. Things have fallen out, sir, so unluckily
That we have had no time to move our daughter:
Look you, she lov'd her kinsman Tybalt dearly,
And so did I: — Well, we were born to die.
'Tis very late, she'll not come down to-night:
I promise you, but for your company,
I would have been a-bed an hour ago.
Par. These times of woe afford no time to woo;
Madam, good night; commend me to your daughter.
La. Cap. I will, and know her mind early to-morrow;
To-night she's mew'd 6 up to her heaviness.
Cap. Sir Paris, I will make a desperate 7 tender
Of my child's love: I think, she will be rul'd
In all respects by me; nay more, I doubt it not.
Wife, go you to her ere you go to bed;
Acquaint her here of my son Paris' love;
And bid her, mark you me, on Wednesday next —
But soft: What day is this?

5 The whole of your fortune depends on this.
6 Shut up.
7 Bold.

Par. Monday, my lord.
Cap. Monday? ha! ha! Well, Wednesday is too soon,
O' Thursday let it be; — o' Thursday, tell her,
She shall be married to this noble earl: —
Will you be ready? do you like this haste?
We'll keep no great ado; — a friend, or two:
For, hark you, Tybalt being slain so late,
It may be thought we held him carelessly,
Being our kinsman, if we reveal much:
Therefore we'll have some half a dozen friends,
And there an end. But what say you to Thursday?
Par. My lord, I would that Thursday were to-morrow.
Cap. Well, get you gone: — O' Thursday be it then: —
Go you to Juliet ere you go to bed,
Prepare her, wife, against this wedding-day, —
Farewell, my lord. — Light to my chamber, ho!
Afore me, it is so very late, that we
May call it early by and by: — Good night.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V. — Juliet's Chamber.

Enter Romeo and Juliet.

Jul. Wilt thou be gone? it is not yet near day.
It was the nightingale, and not the lark,
That pierced the fearful hollow of thine ear;
Nightly she sings on yon pomegranate tree:
Believe me, love, it was the nightingale.
Rom. It was the lark, the herald of the morn,
No nightingale: look, love, what envious streaks
Do lace the severing clouds in yonder east:
Night's candles are burnt out, and jocund day
Stands tiptoe on the misty mountain tops;
I must be gone and live, or stay and die.
Jul. You light is not day-light, I know it, I:
It is some metcer that the sun exhales,
To be to thee this night a torch-bearer,
And light thee on thy way to Mantua:
Therefore stay yet, thou need'st not to be gone.
Rom. Let me be ta'en, let me be put to death;
I content my heart, tho' thou wilt have it.
I'll say, you grey is not the morning's eye,
'Tis but the pale reflex of Cynthia's brow!
Nor that is not the lark, whose notes do beat
The vaulcy heaven so high above our heads:
I have more care 9 to stay, than will to go; —
Come, death, and welcome! Juliet wills it so.
How is't my soul? let's talk, it is not day.
Jul. It is, it is, his face, hence be gone, away;
It is the lark that sings so out of tune,
Straining harsh discords, and unpleasing sharps.
Some say, the lark makes sweet division 1;
This doth not so, for she divideth us:
Some say, the lark and loathed toad change eyes;
O, now I would they had changed voices too;
O, now be gone; more light and light it grows.

[Exit Nurse.

Nurse. Madam!
Jul. Nurse?
Nurse. Your lady mother's coming to your chamber:
The day is broke; be wary, look about.

[Exit Nurse.
Jul. Then, window, let day in, and let life out.
Rom. Farewell, farewell! one kiss, and I'll de-scend. [Romeo descends.
Jul. Art thou gone so? my love! my lord! my friend!
I must hear from thee every day 't the hour,
For in a minute there are many days:
O! by this count I shall be much in years,
Ere I again behold my Romeo.
Rom. Farewell! I will omit no opportunity
That may convey my greetings, love, to thee.
Jul. O, think'st thou, we shall ever meet again?
Rom. I doubt it not; and all these woes shall serve
For sweet discourses in our time to come,
Jul. Alas, I have an ill-divining soul;
Methinks, I see thee, now thou art below,
As one dead in the bottom of a tomb;
Either my eye-sight fails, or thou look'st pale.
Rom. And trust me, love, in mine eye so do you:
Dry sorrow drinks our blood. Adieu! adieu!
[Exit Romeo.

Jul. O fortune! fortune! all men call thee fickle:
If thou art fickle, what dost thou with him
That is renown'd for faith? Be fickle, fortune:
For then, I hope, thou wilt not keep him long,
But send him back.
La. Cap. [Within.] Ho, daughter! are you up.
Jul. Who is't that calls? is it my lady mother?
Is she not down so late, or up so early?
What unacustom'd cause procures her hitter?

Enter Lady Capulet.

La. Cap. Why, how now, Juliet?
Jul. Madam, I am not well.
La. Cap. Evermore weeping for your cousin's death?
What, wilt thou wash him from his grave with tears?
And if thou couldst, thou couldst not make him live;
Therefore, have done: Some grief shows much of love;
But much of grief shows still some want of wit.
Jul. Yet let me weep for such a feeling loss.
La. Cap. So shall you feel the loss, but not the friend,
Which you weep for.
Jul. Feeling so the loss,
I cannot choose but ever weep the friend.
La. Cap. Well, girl, thou weep'st not so much for his death,
As that the villain lives which slaughter'd him.
Jul. What villain, madam?
Jul. Villain and he are many miles asunder.
Heaven pardon him! I do, with all my heart;
And yet no man, like he, doth grieve my heart.
La. Cap. That is, because the traitor murderer lives.
Jul. Ay, madam, from the reach of these my hands.
'Would, none but I might 'venge my cousin's death!
La. Cap. We will have vengeance for it, fear thou not:
Then weep no more. I'll send to one in Mantua,—
Where that same banish'd runagate doth live, —

2 Brings.

That shall bestow on him so sure a draught,
That he shall soon keep Tybalt company:
And then, I hope, thou wilt be satisfied.
Jul. Indeed, I never shall be satisfied
With Romeo, till I behold him — dead —
Is my poor heart so for a kinsman vex'd: —
Madam, if you could find out but a man
To bear a poison, I would temper it;
That Romeo should, upon receipt thereof,
Soon sleep in quiet. — O, how my heart abhors
To hear him name'd; — and cannot come to him,—
To wreak the love I bore my cousin Tybalt
Upon his body that hath slaughter'd him!
La. Cap. Find thou the means, and I'll find such a man.
But now, I'll tell thee joyous tidings, girl.
Jul. And joy comes well in such a needful time:
What are they, I beseech your ladyship?
La. Cap. Well, well, thou hast a careful father, child;
One, who, to put thee from thy heaviness,
Hath sorted out a sudden day of joy
That thou expect'st not, nor I look'd not for.
Jul. Madam, in happy time, what day is that?
La. Cap. Marry, my child, early next Thursday morn,
The gallant, young, and noble gentleman,
The county Paris, at Saint Peter's church,
Shall happily make thee there a joyous bride.
Jul. Now, by Saint Peter's church, and Peter too,
He shall not make me there a joyous bride.
I wonder at this haste: that I must wed
Ere he, that should be husband, comes to woo.
I pray you, tell my lord and father, madam,
I will not marry yet; and when I do, I swear,
It shall be Rome, whom you know I hate,
Rather than Paris: — These are news indeed!
La. Cap. Here comes your father: tell him so yourself,
And see how he will take it at your hands.

Enter Capulet and Nurse.

Cap. When the sun sets, the air doth drizzle dew;
But for the sunset of my brother's son,
It rains downright. —
How now? a conduit, girl? what, still in tears?
Ever more showering; in one little body
Thou counterfeit'st a bark, a sea, a wind:
For still thy eyes, which I may call the sea,
Do ebb and flow with tears; the bark thy body is,
Sailing in this salt flood: the winds, thy sighs;
Who, — raging with thy tears, and they with them,—
Without a sudden calm, will overset
Thy tempest-tossed body. — How now, wife?
Have you deliver'd to her our decree?
La. Cap. Ay, sir; but she will none, she gives you thanks.
I would, the fool were married to her grave!
Cap. Soft, take me with you, take me with you, wife.
How! will she none? doth she not give us thanks?
Is she not proud? doth she not count her bless'd,
Unworthy as she is, that we have wrought
So worthy a gentleman to be her bridegroom?
Jul. Not proud, you have; but thankful, that you have:
Proud can I never be of what I hate;
But thankful even for hate, that is meant love.
Act IV. Scene I.

ROMEO AND JULIET.

Cap. How now! how now, chop-logick! What is this?
Proud, — and, I thank you, — and, I thank you now.
And yet not proud; — Mistress minion, you,
Thank me no thankings, nor proud me no prouds,
But settle your fine joints 'gainst Thursday next,
To go with Paris to St. Peter's church,
Or I will drag thee on a hurdle thither.

La. Cap. Fye, fye! what, are you mad?
Jul. Good father, I beseech you on my knees,
Hear me with patience but to speak a word.

Cap. Hang thee, young baggage! disobedient wretch!
I tell thee what, — get thee to church o' Thursday,
Or never after look me in the face:
Speak not, reply not, do not answer me:
My fingers itch. — Wife, we scarce thought us bless'd,
That heaven had sent us but this only child:
But now I see this one is too much,
And that we have a curse in having her.

Nurse. You are to blame, my lord, to rate her so.
Cap. And why, my lady wisdom? hold your tongue,
Good prudence; smatter with your gossips, go.

Nurse. May not one speak?

Cap. No: Peace, you mumbling fool! Utter your gravity o'er a gossip's bowl,
For here we need it not.

La. Cap. You are too hot.
Cap. It makes me mad: Day, night, late, early,
At home, abroad, alone, in company,
Waking, or sleeping, still my care hath been
To have her matched: and having now provided
A gentleman of princely parentage,
Of fair demeanes, youthful, and nobly train'd,
Stuff'd (as they say) with honourable parts,
Proportion'd as one's heart could wish a man, —
And then to have a wretched piling fool,
A whining mammet, in her fortune's tender,
To answer — I'll not wed, — I cannot love,
I am too young, — I pray you, pardon me; —
But, an you will not wed, I'll pardon you:
Graze where you will, you shall not house with me;
Look to't, think on't, I do not use to jest.
Thursday is near; lay hand on heart, advise:
An you be mine, I'll give you to my friend;
An you be not, hang, beg, starve, die i' the streets,
For, by my soul, I'll ne'er acknowledge thee,
Nor what is mine shall never do thee good:
Trust to't, bethink you, I'll not be forsworn. [Exit.

Jul. Is there no pity sitting in the clouds,
That sees into the bottom of my grief?
O, sweet my mother, cast me not away?
Delay this marriage, for a month, a week;
Or, if you do not, make the bridal bed
In that dim monument where Tybalt lies.

La. Cap. Talk not to me, for I'll not speak a word:
Do as thou wilt, for I have done with thee. [Exit.

Jul. O heaven! — O nurse! how shall this be prevented?
My husband is on earth, my faith in heaven;
How shall that faith return again to earth,
Unless that husband send it me from heaven
By leaving earth? — Comfort me, counsel me.
Alack, alack, that heaven should practise stratagems
Upon so soft a subject as myself! —
What say'st thou? hast thou not a word of joy?
Some comfort, nurse.

Nurse. Faith, here 'tis: Romeo is banish'd; and all the world to nothing,
That he dares ne'er come back to challenge you;
Or, if he do, it needs must be by stealth.
Then, since the case so stands as now it doth,
I think it best you married with the county.
O, he's a lovely gentleman!
Romeo is naught to him: an eagle, madam,
Hath not so green, so quick, so fair an eye,
As Paris hath. Beshrew my very heart,
I think you are happy in this second match,
For it excels your first: or if it did not,
Your first is dead; or 'twere as good he were,
As living here and you no use of him.

Jul. Speakest thou from thy heart?

Nurse. From my soul too,
Or else beshrew them both.

Jul. Amen!

Nurse. To what?

Jul. Well, thou hast comforted me marvellous much.
Go in; and tell my lady I am gone,
Having displeas'd my father, to Laurence' cell,
To make confession, and to be absolv'd.

Nurse. Marry, I will; and this is wisely done.

[Exit.

Jul. Is it more sin — to wish me thus forsworn,
Or to dispraise my lord with that same tongue
Which she hath prais'd him with above compare
So many thousand times? — Go, counsellor;
Thou and my bosom henceforth shall be twain.
I'll to the friar, to know his remedy;
If all else fail, myself have power to die. [Exit.

ACT IV.

Scene I.—Friar Laurence's Cell.

Enter Friar Laurence and Paris.

Fri. On Thursday, sir? the time is very short.
Par. My father Capulet will have it so;
And I am nothing slow, to slack his haste.

Fri. You say you do not know the lady's mind;
Uneven is the course, I like it not.

Par. Immoderately she weeps for Tybalt's death,
And therefore have I little talk'd of love,
For Venus smiles not in a house of tears.
Now, sir, her father counts it dangerous,
That may be, sir, when I may be a wife.

Par. That may be, must be, love, on Thursday next.

Jul. What must be shall be.

Fri. That's a certain text.

Par. Come you to make confession to this father? Jul. To a travail, that were to confess to you.

Par. Do not deny to him, that you love me.

Jul. I will confess to you, that I love him.

Par. So will you, I am sure, that you love me.

Jul. If I do so, it will be of more price,

Being spoke behind your back, than to your face.

Par. Poor soul, thy face is much abus'd with tears.

Jul. The tears have got small victory by that;

For it was bad enough, before their spite.

Par. Thou wrong'st it, more than tears, with that report.

Jul. That is no slander, sir, that is a truth;

And what I spake, I spake it to my face.

Par. Thy face is mine, and thou hast slander'd it.

Jul. It may be so, for it is not mine own.

Are you at leisure, holy father, now;

Or shall I come to you at evening mass?

Fri. My leisure serves me, pensive daughter,

now:

My lord, we must entreat the time alone.

Par. Now heaven forbid, I should disturb devotion!
Juliet, on Thursday early will I rouse you:

Till then, adieu! and keep this holy kiss.

[Exit Paris.

Jul. O, shut the door! and when thou hast done so,

Come weep with me. Past hope, past cure, past help!

Fri. Ah, Juliet, I already know thy grief;

It strains me past the compass of my wits;

I hear thou must, and nothing must prorogue it,

On Thursday next be married to this county.

Jul. Tell me not, friar, that thou hearst of this,

Unless thou tell me how I may prevent it:

If, in thy wisdom, thou canst give no help,

Do thou but call my resolution wise,

And with this knife I'll help it presently.

Love join'd my heart and Romeo's, thou our hands;

And ere this hand, by thee to Romeo seal'd,

Shall be the label to another deed,

Or my true heart with treacherous revolt

Turn to another, this I shall slay them both:

Therefore, out of thy long-experience'd time,

Give me some present counsel; or, behold,

'Twixt my extremes and me this bloody knife

Shall play the umpire; 3 arbitrating that

Which the commission 4 of thy years and art

Could to no issue of true honour bring.

Be not so long to speak; I long to die,

If what thou speak'st speak not of remedy.

Fri. Hold, daughter; I do spy a kind of hope,

Which craves as desperate an execution

As that is desperate which we would prevent.

If, rather than to marry county Paris,

Thou hast the strength of will to say thyself,

Then is it likely, thou wilt undertake

A thing like death to chide away this shame,

That cop'st with death himself to scape from it;

And, if thou dar'st, I'll give thee remedy.

Jul. O, bid me leap, rather than marry Paris,

From off the battlements of yonder tower;

Or walk in thievish ways; or bid me lurk

Where serpents are; chain me with roaring bears;

3 Decide the struggle between me and my distresses.

4 Authority or power.

Or shut me nightly in a charnel-house.

O'er-cover'd quite with dead men's rattling bones,

With reeky shanks, and yellow chapless skulls;

Or bid me go into a new-made grave,

And hide me with a dead man in his shroud:

Things that, to hear them told, have made me tremble:

And I will do it without fear or doubt,

To live an unstant'd wife to my sweet love.

Fri. Hold, then; go home, be merry, give consent

To marry Paris: Wednesday is to-morrow;

To-morrow night look that thou lie alone,

Let not thy nurse lie with thee in thy chamber:

Take thou this phial, being then in bed,

And this distilled liquor drink thou off:

When, presently, through all thy veins shall run

A cold and drowsy humour, which shall seize

Each vital spirit; for no pulse shall keep

His natural progress, but surcease to beat:

No warmth, no breath, shall testify thou liv'st;

The roses in thy lips and cheeks shall fade

To paly ashes; thy eyes' windows fall,

Like death, when he shuts up the day of life;

Each part, deprived of supple government,

Shall stiff, and stark, and cold, appear like death:

And in this borrow'd likeness of shrunk death

Shall thou remain full two and forty hours,

And then awake as from a pleasant sleep.

Now when the bridegroom in the morning comes

To rouse thee from thy bed, there art thou dead:

Then (as the manner of our country is)

In thy best robes uncover'd on the bier,

Thou shalt be borne to that same ancient vault,

Where all the kindred of the Capulets lie.

In the mean time, against thou shalt awake,

Shall Romeo by my letters know our drift;

And hither shall he come; and he and I

Will watch thy waking, and that very night

Shall Romeo bear thee hence to Mantua.

And this shall free thee from this present shame;

If no incessant toy, nor wanishment fear,

Abate thy valour in the acting it.

Jul. Give me. O give me! tell me not of fear.

Fri. Hold; get you gone, be strong and prosperous

In this resolve: I'll send a friar with speed

To Mantua, with my letters to thy lord.

Jul. Farewell, thou noble strength! and strength shall help afford.

Farewell, dear father!

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—A Room in Capulet's House.

Enter Capulet, Lady Capulet, Nurse, and Servants.

Cap. So many guests invite as here are writ.—

[Exit Servant.

SIRRah, go hire me twenty cunning cooks.

2 SERV. You shall have none ill, sir.

Cap. Go, be gone.—

[Exit Servant.

We shall be much unfurnish'd for this time.

What, is my daughter gone to friar Laurence?

NURSE. Ay, forsooth.

Cap. Well, he may chance to do some good on her:

A peevish self-will'd harlotry it is.

[Enter JULIET.

NURSE. See, where she comes from shrift with merry look.

Cap. How now, my headstrong? where have you been gadding?

Jul. Where I have learn'd me to repent the sin

Of disobedient opposition
SCENE III. — JULIET'S CHAMBER.

Enter Juliet and Nurse.

JULIET. Ay, those attires are best: — But, gentle nurse,
I pray thee, leave me to myself to-night;
For I have need of many orisons?
To move the heavens to smile upon my state,
Which, well thou know'st, is cross and full of sin.

Enter Lady Capulet.

LA. CAP. What, are you busy? do you need my help?

JULIET. No, madam; we have cull'd such necessaries
As are behoefful for our state to-morrow;
So please you let me now be left alone,
And let the nurse this night sit up with you;
For, I am sure, you have your hands full all,
In this so sudden business.

LA. CAP. Good night! Get thee to bed, and rest; for thou hast need.

Enter Lady Capulet and Nurse.

JULIET. Farewell! — Heaven knows, when we shall meet again.
I have a faint cold fear thrills through my veins,
That almost freezes up the heat of life:
I'll call them back again to comfort me; Nurse! — What should she do here?
My dismal scene I needs must act alone. —
Come, phial, —
What if this mixture do not work at all?
Must I of force be married to the county? —
No, no; — this shall forbid it: — lie thou there.

What if it be a poison, which the friar
Subtle hath minister'd to have me dead;
Lest in this marriage he should be dishonour'd,
Because he married me before to Romeo?
I fear, it is: and yet, methinks, it should not,
For he hath still been tried a holy man:
I will not entreat so bad a thought. —
How if, when I am laid into the tomb,
I wake before the time that Romeo
Come to redeem me? there's a fearful point!
Shall I not then be stified in the vault,
To whose foul mouth no healthsome air breathes in,
And there die strangled ere my Romeo comes?
Or, if I live, is it not very like,
The horrible conceit of death and night,
Together with the terror of the place, —
As in a vault, an ancient receptacle,
Where for these many hundred years, the bones
Of all my buried ancestors are pack'd;
Where bloody Tybalt, yet but green in earth,
Lies fest'ring in his shroud; where, as they say,
At some small hours in the night spirits resort;
Alack, alack! is it not like, that I,
So early waking, — what with loathsome smell,
And shrieks like mandrakes torn out of the earth,
That living mortals, hearing them, run mad;
O! if I wake, shall I not be distraught,
Environd with all these hideous fears?
And madly play with my forefathers' joints?
And pluck the mangled Tybalt from his shroud?
And, in this rage, with some great kinsman's bone,
As with a club, dash out my desperate brains?
O, look! methinks, I see my cousin's ghost
Seeking out Romeo, that did spit his body
Upon a rapier's point: — Stay, Tybalt, stay! —
Romeo, I come! this do I drink to thee.

[She throws herself on the bed.

SCENE IV. — CAPELET'S HALL.

Enter LA. CAPULET and Nurse.

LA. CAP. Hold, take these keys, and fetch more spices, nurse.

NURSE. They call for dates and quinces in the pastry. —

Enter Capulet.

CAP. Come, stir, stir, stir! the second cock hath crow'd,
The curfew bell hath rung, 'tis three o'clock: —
Look to the bak'd meats, good Angelica: —
Spare not for cost.

NURSE. Go, go, you cot-queen, go,
Get you to bed; 'tis night, you'll be sick to-morrow
For this night's watching.

CAP. No, not a whit: What! I have watch'd ere now
All night for lesser cause, and ne'er been sick.

LA. CAP. Ay, you have been a mouse-hunt in your time;
But I will watch you from such watching now.

Enter Lady Capulet and Nurse.

CAP. A jealous-hood, a jealous-hood! — Now, fellow,
What's there?

2 The fabulous accounts of the plant called a mandrake give it a degree of animal life, and when it is torn from the ground it groans, which is fatal to him that pulls it up.
3 Distracted.
4 The room where pies were made.

Enter Servants, with Spits, Logs, and Baskets.

1 Serv. Things for the cook, sir; but I know not what.

Cap. Make haste, make haste. [Exit 1 Serv.]—

Siryah, fetch drier logs; Call Peter, he will show thee where they are.

2 Serv. I have a head, sir, that will find out logs, And never trouble Peter for the matter. [Exit.

Cap. 'Mass, and well said: A merry fellow! ha, Thou shalt be logger-head. — Good faith, 'tis day: The county will be here with musick straight.

[Music within.

For so he said he would. I hear him near: — Nurse! — Wife! — what, ho! — what, nurse, I say! —

Enter Nurse.

Go, waken Juliet, go, and trim her up; I'll go and chat with Paris: — He, make haste, Make haste! the bridegroom he is come already: Make haste, I say! [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Juliet's Chamber; Juliet on the Bed.

Enter Nurse.

Why, lamb! — why, lady! — fye, you slug-a-bed! —

Why, love, I say! — madam! sweetheart! why, bride! —

What, not a word? — you take your pennysworths now; —

Sleep for a week: how sound is she asleep! I needs must wake her: — Madam, madam, madam! What, drest! and in your clothes! and down again! I must needs wake you: Lady! lady! lady! —

Alas! alas! — Help! help! my lady's dead! —

O, well-a-day, that ever I was born! —

Some aqua vitae, ho! — my lord! my lady!

Enter Lady Capulet.

La. Cap. What noise is here? —

Nurse. O lamentable day! —

La. Cap. What is the matter? —

Nurse. Look, look! O heavy day! —

La. Cap. O me, O me! — my child, my only life, Revive, look up, or I will die with thee! —

Help, help! — call help.

Enter Capulet.

Cap. For shame, bring Juliet forth; her lord is come.

Nurse. She's dead, deeca'sd; she's dead; alack the day! —

La. Cap. Alack the day! she's dead, she's dead, she's dead.

Cap. Ha! let me see her: — Out, alas, she's cold,

Her blood is settled; and her joints are stiff; —

Life and these lips have long been separated:

Death lies on her, like an untimely frost

Upon the sweetest flower of all the field.

Accursed time! unfortunate old man! —

Nurse. O lamentable day! —

La. Cap. O woeful time! —

Cap. Death that hath ta'en her hence to make me weep,

Ties up my tongue, and will not let me speak.

Enter Friar Laurence and Paris, with Musicians.

Fri. Come, is the bride ready to go to church? —

Cap. Ready to go, but never to return: O son, the night before thy wedding-day

Hath death lain with thy bride: — See, there she lies,

Flower as she was, deflowered by him.

Death is my son-in-law, death is my heir; —

My daughter he hath wedded! I will die, And leave him all; life leaving, all is death's.

Par. Have I thought long to see this morning's face,

And doth it give me such a sight as this? —

La. Cap. Accurs'd, unhappy, wretched, hateful day! Most miserable hour, that e'er time saw

In lasting labour of his pilgrimage!

But one, poor one, one poor and loving child,

But one thing to rejoice and solace in,

And cruel death hath catch'd it from my sight.

Nurse. O woe! O woeful, woeful, woeful day! Most lamentable day! most woeful day,

That ever, ever, I did yet behold! —

O day! O day! O day! O hateful day! —

Never was seen so black a day as this: —

O woeful day, O woeful day!

Par. Beguil'd, divorced, wronged, spited, slain!

Most detestable death, by thee beguil'd,

By cruel, cruel thee quite overthrown!

O love! O life! — not life, but love in death!

Cap. Despis'd, distressed, hated, martyr'd, kill'd! —

Uncomfortable time! why cam'st thou now

To murder, murder our solemnity? —

O child! O child! — my soul, and not my child! —

Dead art thou, dead! — alack! my child is dead;

And with my child, my joys are buried!

Fri. Peace, ho, for shame! confusion's cure lives not

In these confusions. Heaven and yourself

Had part in this fair maid; now heaven hath all,

And all the better is it for the maid:

Your part in her you could not keep from death;

But heaven keeps his part in eternal life.

The most you sought was — her promotion;

For 'twas your heaven, she should be advancement;

And weep ye now, seeing she is advancement,

Above the clouds, as high as heaven itself?

O, in this love, you love your child so ill,

That you run mad, seeing that she is well;

She's not well married, that lives married long;

But she's best married, that dies married young.

Dry up your tears, and stick your rosemary

On this fair corse; and, as the custom is,

In all her best array bear her to church:

For though fond nature bids us all lament,

Yet nature's tears are reason's merriment.

Cap. All things that we ordained festival,

Turn from your office to black funeral:

Our instruments, to melancholy bells;

Our wedding cheer, to a sad burial feast;

Our solemn hymns to sullen dirges change;

Our bridal flowers serve for a buried corse,

And all things change them to the contrary.

Fri. Sir, go you in, — and, madam, go with him; —

And go, sir Paris; — every one prepare

To follow this fair corse unto her grave:

The heavens do lower upon you, for some ill;

Move them no more, by crossing their high will.

[Exeunt Capulet, Lady Capulet, Paris, and Friar.]
Act V. Scene I. Romeo and Juliet.

Pet. Then have at you with your wit; I will dry-beat you with an iron wit, and put up my iron dagger: — Answer me like men:

When gripping grief the heart doth wound,
And doleful dumps the mind oppress,
Then musick, with her silver sound;

Why, silver sound? why, musick with her silver sound?
What say you, Simon Cating?
1 Mus. Marry, sir, because silver hath a sweet sound.
Pet. Pretty! What say you, Hugh Rebeck?
2 Mus. I say — silver sound, because musicians sound for silver.
Pet. Pretty too! — What say you, James Sound-post?
3 Mus. 'Faith, I know not what to say.
Pet. O, I cry you mercy! you are the singer: I will say for you. It is — musick with her silver sound, because such fellows as you have seldom gold for sounding: —

Then musick with her silver sound,
With speedy help doth tend redress.

[Exit, singing.

1 Mus. What a pestilent knave is this same?
2 Mus. Hang him, Jack! Come, we'll in here; tarry for the mourners, and stay dinner. [Exeunt.

ACT V.

Scene I. — Mantua. A Street.

Enter Romeo.

Rom. If I may trust the flattering eye of sleep,
My dreams presage some joyful news at hand:
My bosom's lord sits lightly in his throne;
And all this day, an unaccustomed spirit
Lifts me above the ground with cheerful thoughts.
I dreamt, my lady came and found me dead;
(Strange dream! that gives a dead man leave to think)
And breath'd such life with kisses in my lips,
That I reviv'd, and was an emperor.
Ah me! how sweet is love itself possess'd,
When but love's shadows are so rich in joy?

Enter Balthazar.

Balt. Pardon me, sir, I will not leave you thus:
Your looks are pale and wild, and do import
Some misadventure.

Rom. Tush, thou art deceiv'd;
Leave me, and do the thing I bid thee do:
Hast thou no letters to me from the friar?
Balt. No, my good lord.

Rom. No matter: get thee gone,
And hire those horses; I'll be with thee straight.

[Exit Balthazar.

Well, Juliet, I will lie with thee to-night.
Let's see for means: — O, mischief thou art swift
To enter in the thoughts of desperate men!
I do remember an apothecary, —
And hereabouts he dwells, — whom late I noted
In tatter'd weeds, with overwhelming brows,
Culling of simples; meagre were his looks,
Sharp misery had worn him to the bones:
And in his needy shop a tortoise hung,
An alligator stuff'd, and other skins
Of ill-shap'd fishes; and about his shelves
A beggarly account of empty boxes,
Green earthen pots, bladders, and musty seeds,
Remnants of packthread, and old cakes of roses,
Were thinly scatter'd, to make up a show.
Noting this penury, to myself I said —
And if a man did need a poison now,
Whose sale is present death in Mantua,
Here lives a cautif wretch would sell it him.
O, this same thought did but fore-run my need;
And this same needy man must sell it me.
As I remember, this should be the house:
Being holiday, the beggar's shop is shut. —
What, ho! apothecary!

3 H 4
Enter Apothecary.

Ap. Who calls so loud?
Rom. Come hither, man. I see, that thou art poor; hold, there is forty ducats: let me have a dram of poison; such soon-speeding gear as will disperse itself through all the veins, that the life-weary taker may fall dead;
and that the trunk may be discharg’d of breath
as violently, as hasty powder’d.
Doth hurry from the fatal cannon’s womb.
Ap. Such mortal drugs I have; but mantua’s law
is death, to any he that utters them.
Rom. Art thou so bare, and full of wretchedness, and fear’st to die? famine is in thy cheeks,
need and oppression starveth in thine eyes,
Upon thy back hangs ragged misery,
the world is not thy friend, nor the world’s law:
the world afford’s no law to make thee rich;
then be not poor, but break it, and take this.
Ap. My poverty, but not my will, consents.
Rom. I pay thy poverty, and not thy will.
Ap. Put this in any liquid thing you will,
and drink it off; and, if you had the strength of twenty men, it would despatch you straight.
Rom. There is thy gold; worse poison to men’s souls, doing more murders in this loathsome world,
than these poor compounds that thou may’st not sell;
I sell thee poison, thou hast sold me none.
Farewell; buy food, and get thyself in flesh.—
come, cordial, and not poison; go with me to Juliet’s grave, for there must I use thee.
[Exit.

SCENE II. — Friar Laurence’s Cell.

Enter Friar John.

John. Holy Franciscan friar! brother, ho!

Enter Friar Laurence.

Lau. This same should be the voice of friar John.—
Welcome from mantua: what says Romeo?
or, if his mind be writ, give me his letter.
John. Going to find a barefoot brother out, one of our order to associate me,
here in this city visiting the sick,
and finding him, the searchers of the town, suspecting that we both were in a house
where the infectious presidence did reign, seal’d up the doors, and would not let us forth;
so that my speed to mantua there was stay’d.
Lau. Who bare my letter then to Romeo?
John. I could not send it, — here it is again,— nor get a messenger to bring it thee,
so fearful were they of infection.
Lau. Unhappy fortune! by my brotherhood,
the letter was not nice, but full of charge,
of dear import; and the neglecting it may do much danger: friar John, go hence;
Get me an iron crow, and bring it straight unto my cell.
John. Brother, I’ll go and bring it thee.
[Exit.
Lau. Now must I to the monument alone;
within these three hours will fair Juliet wake;
8 stuff.
6 i. e. On a trivial or idle subject.

She will beshrew me much that Romeo
Hath had no notice of these accidents:
But I will write again to mantua,
And keep her at my cell till Romeo come;
Poor living corse, close’d in a dead man’s tomb!
[Exit.

SCENE III. — A Church-Yard; in it, a Monument belonging to the Capulets.

Enter Paris, and his Page, bearing Flowers, and a Torch.

Par. Give me thy torch, boy: Hence, and stand aloof; —
Yet put it out, for I would not be seen.
Under yon yew-trees lay thee all along,
holding thine ear close to the hollow ground
so shall no foot upon the churchyard tread, (Being loose, uniform, with digging up of graves,)
but thou shalt hear it: whistle then to me, as signal that thou hear’st something approach.
Give me these flowers. Do as I bid thee, go.
Page. I am almost afraid to stand alone.
Here in the churchyard; yet I will adventure.

Par. Sweet flower, with flowers I strew thy bridal bed:
sweet tomb, that in thy circuit dost contain
The perfect model of eternity;
Fair Juliet, that with angels dost remain,
Accept this latest favour at my hands;
That living honour’d thee, and, being dead,
With funeral praises do adorn thy tomb!
[The Boy whistles.

The boy gives warning, something doth approach.
What cursed foot wanders this way to-night,
to cross my obsequies, and true-love’s rites?
What, with a torch! — muffle me, night, a while.
[Retires.

Enter Romeo and Balthazar, with a Torch, Mattock, &c.

Rom. Give me that mattock, and the wrenching iron.
Hold, take this letter; early in the morning
See thou deliver it to my lord and father.
Give me the light: Upon thy life, I charge thee,
Whate’er thou hear’st or see’st stand all aloof,
And do not interrupt me in my course.
Why I descend into this bed of death,
Is, partly, to behold my lady’s face,
But, chiefly, to take thence from her dead finger
a precious ring; a ring that I must use in dear employment: therefore hence, begone: —
But if thou, jealous, dost return to pray
in what I further shall intend to do,
By heaven, I will tear thee joint by joint,
And stew this hungry churchyard with thy limbs:
The time and my intents are savage-wide;
More fierce, and more inexorable far,
Than empty tigers, or the roaring sea.
Bal. I will be gone, sir, and not trouble you.
Rom. So shalt thou show me friendship. — Take theh that:
Live, and be prosperous; and farewell, good fellow.
Bal. For all this same, I’ll hide me hereabout;
His looks I fear, and his intents I doubt. [Retires.
Rom. Thou detestable maw, thou womb of death,
ROMEO AND JULIET.

And never from this palace of dim night
Depart again; here, here will I remain
With worms that are thy chambermaids; O, here
Will I set up my everlasting rest;
And shake the yoke of inauspicious stars
From this world-wearied flesh. — Eyes, look your last!
Arms, take your last embrace! and lips, O you
The doors of breath, seal with a righteous kiss
A dateless bargain to engrossing death! —
Come, bitter conduct, come, unsavoury guide!
Thou desperate pilot, now at once run on
The dashing rocks thy sea-sick weary bark!
Here's to my love! — [Drinks.] O, true apothecary!
Thy drugs are quick. — Thus with a kiss I die.

[Dies.]

Enter, at the other End of the Churchyard, Friar Laurence, with a Lantern, Crow, and Spade.

Fri. Saint Francis be my speed! how oft to-night
Have my old feet stumbled at graves? — Who's there?
Who is it that consorts, so late, the dead?
Bal. Here's one, a friend, and one that knows you well.

Fri. Bliss be upon you! Tell me, good my friend,
What torch is yond', that vainly lends his light
To grubs and eyeless skulls? as I discern,
It burneth in the Capels' monument.

Bal. It doth so, holy sir; and there's my master,
One that you love.

Fri. Who is it?

Bal. Romeo.

Fri. How long hath he been there?

Bal. Full half an hour.

Fri. Go with me to the vault.

Bal. I dare not, sir:

My master knows not, but I am gone hence;
And fearfully did menace me with death,
If I did stay to look on his intents.

Fri. Stay then, I'll go alone: — Fear comes upon me,
O, much I fear some ill-luckey thing.

Bal. As I did sleep under this yew-tree here,
I dreamt my master and another fought,
And that my master slew him.

Fri. Romeo? [Advances.

Alack, alack, what blood is this, which stains
The stony entrance of this sepulchre?
What mean these masterless and gory swords
To lie discolour'd by this place of peace?

[Enter the Monument.

Romeo! O, pale! — Who else? what, Paris, too?
And steep'd in blood? — Ah, what an unkind hour
Is guilty of this lamentable chance?

The lady stirs. — [Juliet wakes and stirs.

Jul. O, comfortable friar! where is my lord?
I do remember well where I should be,
And there I am: — Where is my Romeo?

[Noise within.

Fri. I hear some noise. — Lady, come from that nest
Of death, contagion, and unnatural sleep;
A greater Power than we can contradict
Hath thwarted our intents; come, come away:
Thy husband in thy bosom there lies dead;
And Paris too: come, I'll dispose of thee
Among a sisterhood of holy nuns.

1 Conductor.
Stay not to question, for the watch is coming;
Come, go, good Juliet. — [Noise again.] I dare stay no longer.

Jul. Go, get thee hence, for I will not away. —
What's here? a cup, close'd in my true love's hand?
Poison, I see, hath been his timeless end: —
O churl! drink all; and leave no friendly drop,
To help me after? — I will kiss thy lips;
Haply, some poison yet doth hang on them,
To make me die with a restorative.

Kisses him.

Thy lips are warm!

1 Watch. [Within.] Lead, boy: — Which way?
Jul. Yea, noise? — then I'll be brief. — O happy dagger! [Snatching Romeo's Dagger.]
This is thy sheath; [Stabs herself.] there rust, and let me die.

[Dies on Romeo's Body, and dies.]

Enter Watch, with the Page of Paris.

Page. This is the place; there, where the torch doth burn.

1 Watch. The ground is bloody; Search about
the churchyard:
Go, some of you, whose'er you find, attach.

[Exeunt some.]

Pitiful sight! here lies the county slain; —
And Juliet bleeding: warm, and newly dead,
Who here hath lain these two days buried.

Go, tell the prince, — run to the Capulets, —
Raise up the Montagues,—some others search; —

[Exeunt other Watchmen.]

We see the ground wherein these woes do lie; —
But the true ground of all these piteous woes,
We cannot without circumstance descry.

Enter some of the Watch, with Balthazar.

2 Watch. Here's Romeo's man, we found him in the churchyard.

1 Watch. Hold him in safety, till the prince come hither.

Enter another Watchman, with Friar Laurence.

3 Watch. Here is a friar, that trembles, sighs, and weepes:
We took this mattock and this spade from him,
As he was coming from this churchyard side.

1 Watch. A great suspicion: Stay the friar too.

Enter the Prince and Attendants.

Prince. What misadventure is so early up,
That calls our person from our morning's rest?

Enter Capulet, Lady Capulet, and others.

Cap. What should it be, that they so shriek abroad?

La. Cap. The people in the street cry — Romeo,
Some — Juliet, and some — Paris; and all run,
With open outcry toward our monument.

Prince. What fear is this, which startles in our ears?

1 Watch. Sovereign, here lies the county Paris slain;
And Romeo dead; and Juliet, dead before,
Warm and new kill'd.

Prince. Search, seek, and know how this foul murder comes.

1 Watch. Here is a friar, and slaughter'd Romeo's
man;
With instruments upon them, fit to open
These dead men's tombs.

Cap. O, heavens! — O wife! look how our daughter bleeds!
This dagger hath mista'en; — for lo! his house
Is empty on the back of Montague;
And is mis-sheathed in my daughter's bosom.

La. Cap. O me! this sight of death is as a bell,
That warns my old age to a sepulchre.

Enter Montague and others.

Prince. Come, Montague; for thou art early up,
To see thy son and heir more early down.

Mon. Alas, my liege, my wife is dead to-night;
Grief of my son's exile hath stopp'd her breath:
What further woe conspires against mine age?

Prince. Look, and thou shalt see.

Mon. O thou untaught! what manners is in this,
To press before thy father to a grave?

Prince. Seal up the mouth of outrage for a while,
Till we can clear these ambiguities,
And know their spring, their head, their true descent;
And then will I be general of your woes,
And lead you even to death: Meantime forbear,
And let mischance be slave to patience. —
Bring forth the parties of suspicion.

Fri. I am the greatest, able to do least,
Yet most suspected, as the time and place
Doth make against me, of this direful murder;
And here I stand, both to impeach and purge
Myself condemned and myself excused.

Prince. Then say at once what thou dost know in this.

Fri. I will be brief, for my short date of breath
Is not so long as is a tedious tale.
Romeo, there dead, was husband to that Juliet;
And she, there dead, that Romeo's faithful wife: —
I married them; and their stolen marriage-day
Was Tybalt's dooms-day, whose untimely death
Banish'd the new-made bridgroom from this city; —
For whom, and not for Tybalt, Juliet pin'd.

You — to remove that siege? of grief from her, —
Betrothed, and would have married her perforce,
To count Paris; — Then comes she to me;
And, with wild looks, bid me devise some means
To rid her from this second marriage,
Or, in my cell there would she kill herself.
Then gave I her, so tutor'd by my art,
A sleeping potion; which so took effect
As I intended, for it wrought on her
The form of death: meantime I writ to Romeo,
That he should hither come as this dire night,
To help to take her from her borrow'd grave,
Being the time the potion's force should cease.
But he which bore my letter, friar John,
Was staid by accident; and yesternight
Return'd my letter back: Then all alone,
At the prefixed hour of her waking,
Came I to take her from her kindred's vault;
Meaning to keep her closely at my cell,
Till I conveniently could send to Romeo;
But, when I came (some minute ere the time
Of her awakening,) here untimely lay
The noble Paris, and true Romeo, dead. 2
She wakes; and I entreated her come forth,
And bear this work of heaven with patience:
But then a noise did scare me from the tomb; —
And she, too desperate, would not go with me,
But (as it seems,) did violence on herself.
All this I know; and to the marriage,

2 i.e. The seabbard. 3 Seat.
Scene III.

ROMEO AND JULIET.

843

Her nurse is privy: And, if aught in this Miscarried by my fault, let my old life
Be sacrific'd, some hour before his time,
Unto the rigour of severest law.

Prince. We still have known thee for a holy man. —
Where's Romeo's man? what can he say in this?

Bal. I brought my master news of Juliet's death;
And then in post he came from Mantua,
To this same place, to this same monument.
This letter he early bid me give his father;
And threaten'd me with death, going in the vault,
If I departed not, and left him there.

Prince. Give me the letter, I will look on it.

— Where is the county's page that rais'd the watch?

Page. He came with flowers to strew his lady's grave;
And bid me stand aloof, and so I did:
Anon, comes one with light to ope the tomb;
And, by and by, my master drew on him;
And then I ran away to call the watch.

Prince. This letter doth make good the friar's words,
Their course of love, the tidings of her death:
And here he writes — that he did buy a poison
Of a poor 'potheccary, and therewithal
Came to this vault to die, and lie with Juliet. —
Where be these enemies? Capulet! Montague!
See what a scourge is laid upon your hate,
That heaven finds means to kill your joys with love!
And I, for winking at your discords too,
Have lost a brace of kinsmen: — All are punish'd.

Cap. O brother Montague, give me thy hand:
This is my daughter's jointure, for no more
Can I demand.

Mon. But I can give thee more:
For I will raise her statue in pure gold;
That, while Verona by that name is known,
There shall no figure at such rate be set,
As that of true and faithful Juliet.

Cap. As rich shall Romeo by his lady lie;
Poor sacrifices of our enmity!

Prince. A glooming peace this morning with it brings;
The sun for sorrow will not show his head:
Go hence, to have more talk of these sad things;
Some shall be pardon'd, and some punished:
For never was a story of more woe,
Than this of Juliet and her Romeo. [Exeunt.

HAMLET, PRINCE OF DENMARK.

PREFACE TO HAMLET.

When so great a writer as Johnson declares himself unable to perceive any satisfactory cause for Hamlet's counterfeit madness, I fear I shall be accused of presumption, if I attempt to offer any solution of the problem; yet I really think that the difficulty is not as great as he supposes it to be. He says that Hamlet does nothing in the character of a lunatic, which he might not have done in his proper senses; but in this observation he appears to have overlooked what Hamlet intended to do, which ought to have been taken into consideration as well as what he actually did.

The state of the question I take to be as follows:—

Hamlet being informed by the Ghost of the murder of his father, and being at the same time required to revenge it, forms the resolution of killing his uncle; but, being sensible that he has no proof of the murder, except what was said by the Ghost to himself alone, which could have no weight with any other person, he feels conscious that his killing the king would be considered as the act of a traitor and an assassin: he therefore determines to assume the appearance of madness, in order that the intended blow might be ascribed to distraction rather than to treason. Having formed this resolution, he requires the most solemn oaths from Horatio and Marcellus, that they will not, if he allow any expression to escape them, which would convey an idea of what might have occasioned the alteration in his behaviour.

"Perchance hereafter shall think meet, To put an antick disposition on."

Hamlet is nevertheless induced, by more mature reflection, to doubt the propriety of proceeding to extremities, till he has further proof of the king's guilt.

"The spirit that I have seen May be a devil; I'll have grounds More relative than this."

He therefore has recourse to the play. The stratagem succeeds; and, being now convinced of the truth of what was said by the Ghost, he determines to kill the king.

"Now could I drink hot blood," &c.

This resolution he would immediately afterwards have carried into effect, if a very extraordinary circumstance (the finding the king engaged in prayer) had not induced him to postpone it. I am happy that it is by no means necessary for me to say any thing respecting his horrid reflections on that occasion; they do not affect the course of argument which I am pursuing, and in this, as in other instances, I attempt nothing more than to point out the motives of Hamlet's conduct, without entering into the propriety or impropriety of those motives, or of the actions to which they gave birth.

Hamlet now goes to his mother, and while he is with her, he does (as he supposes) what he had before resolved to do. He thinks he is killing the king, when he kills Polonius. That he supposed the person behind the arras to be the king, is evident from his words to his mother: “Is it the king?” and to the dead Polonius, “I took thee for thy better.” After this, he entreats the queen by no means to disclose the secret of his madness being counterfeit, and not real distraction.

Here, then, with all due submission to Dr. Johnson, is an act done by Hamlet while supposed to be mad, which would have been thought an unpardonable murder if he had been in his proper senses; and this is the use which Hamlet afterwards makes of his counterfeit madness. He excuses himself to Laertes on this very ground:

“This presence knows, and you must needs have heard, How I am punish’d with a sore distraction. What I have done, That might your nature, honour, and exception, Roughly awake, I here proclaim was madness,” &c.

It appears, then, that Hamlet resolved to counterfeit madness, that he might kill the king without being considered as a traitor and a murderer. He thought he was killing him when he killed Polonius, and if the person behind the arras had been the king, Hamlet would have excused his death, as he excused the death of Polonius, by saying,

“What I have done, I here proclaim was madness.”

I shall add one word in answer to a question which I have heard frequently asked: Why did Hamlet act the madman in a manner so distressing to the amiable Ophelia? The reason I take to be this: Ophelia was known to be the object of his affection. The queen hoped

“She would have been her Hamlet’s wife.”

If, then, it appeared that he acted as a madman in the presence of the object of his tenderest regard, he considered it as a certain consequence, that no doubt could be entertained of the reality of his distraction.

ACT I.

SCENE I. — Elsinore. A Platform before the Castle.

Francisco on his Post. Enter to him Bernardo.

Ber. Who’s there?

Fran. Nay, answer me: stand, and unfold Yourself.

Ber. Long live the king! Bernardo?

Fran. He.

Ber. You come most carefully upon your hour.

Fran. ‘Tis now struck twelve; get thee to bed, Francisco.

Ber. For this relief, much thanks; ‘tis bitter cold,
And I am sick at heart.

Fran. Have you had quiet guard?

Ber. Not a mouse stirring.

Ber. Well, good night.

If you do meet Horatio and Marcellus,
The rivals 1 of my watch, bid them make haste.

Enter Horatio and Marcellus.

Fran. I think, I hear them. — Stand, ho! Who is there?

Hor. Friends to this ground.

Mar. Andliegeni to the Dane.

Fran. Give you good night.

Mar. O, farewell, honest soldier: Who hath reliev’d you?

Fran. Bernardo hath my place. [Exit Francisco.

Mar. Give you good night.

Ber. Holla! Bernardo! Say,

What, is Horatio there?

Hor. A piece of him.

Ber. Welcome, Horatio; welcome, good Marcellus.

Hor. What, has this thing appear’d again tonight?

---

* Make good or establish.
HAMLET, Act I.

Hor. Stay, speak: speak I charge thee, speak. [Exit Ghost.

Mar. 'Tis gone, and will not answer.

Ber. How now, Horatio? you tremble, and look pale:
Is not this something more than fantasy?
What think you of it?

Hor. Before my God, I might not this believe,
Without the sensible and true avouch
Of mine own eyes.

Mar. Is it not like the king?

Hor. As thou art to thyself:
Such was the very armour he had on,
When he the ambitious Norway combated;
So frown'd he once, when, in an angry parle,
He smote the sledded Polack on the ice.
'Tis strange.

Mar. Thus, twice before, and jump'd at this dead hour,
With martial stalk hath he gone by our watch.

Hor. In what particular thought to work, I know not;
But in the gross and scope of mine opinion,
This bodes some strange eruption to our state.

Mar. Good now, sit down, and tell me, he that knows,
Why this same strict and most observant watch
So nightly toils the subject of the land;
And why such daily cast of brazen cannon,
And foreign mart for implements of war;
Why such impress of shipwrights, whose sore task
Does not divide the Sunday from the week:
What might be toward, that this sweaty haste
Doth make the night joint-labourer with the day;
Who is't, that can inform me?

Hor. That can I;
At least, the whisper goes so. Our last king,
Whose image even but now appear'd to us,
Was, as you know, by Fortinbras of Norway,
Thereto prick'd on by a most emulat pride,
Dar'd to the combat; in which our valiant Hamlet (For so this side of our known world esteem'd him,)
Did slay this Fortinbras; who, by a seal'd compact,
Well ratified by law and heraldry,
Did forfeit, with his life, all those his lands,
Which he stood seis'd of, to the conqueror:
Against the which, a motley competent
Was gaged by our king; which had return'd
To the inheritance of Fortinbras,
Had he been vanquisher; as, by the same comart,
And carriage of the article design'd,
His fell to Hamlet: Now, sir, young Fortinbras,
Of unimproved mettle hot and full;
Hath in the skirts of Norway, here and there,
Shark'd up a list of landless resolute,
For food and diet, to some enterprise
That hath a stomach in't: which is no other (As it doth well appear unto our state,)
But to recover of us, by strong hand,
And terms compulsory, those foresaid lands
So by his father lost: And this, I take it,
Is the main motive of our preparations;
The source of this our watch; and the chief head
Of this post-haste and romage in the land.

Ber. I think, it be no other, but even so:
Well may it sort, that this portentous figure

Comes armed through our watch; so like the king
That was, and is the question of those wars.

Hor. A mote it is, to trouble the mind's eye.
In the most high and palmy state of Rome,
A little ere the mightiest Julius fell,
The graves stood tenantless, and the sheeted dead
Did squeak and gibe in the Roman streets.
Stars shone with trains of fire; dews of blood fell;
Disasters veil'd the sun; and the moist star
Upon whose influence Neptune's empire stands,
Was sick almost to doomsday with eclipse.
And even the like precure of fierce events, —
As harbingers preceding still the fates,
And prologue to the omen? coming on, —
Have heaven and earth together demonstrated
Unto our climatures and countries. —

Re-enter Ghost.

But, soft; behold! lo, where it comes again!
I'll cross it, though it blast me. — Stay, illusion!
If thou hast any sound, or use of voice,
Speak to me:
If there be any good thing to be done,
That may to thee do ease, and grace to me,
Speak to me:
If thou art privy to thy country's fate,
Which, happily, foreknowing, may avoid,
O speak!
Or, if thou hast upholdered in thy life
Exorted treasure in the womb of earth,
For which, they say, you spirits oft walk in death,
To the confusion of the living.

Speak of it: —stay, and speak. — Stop it, Marcellus,

Mar. Shall I strike at it with my partisan?

Hor. Do, if it will not stand.

Ber.

Hor.

'Tis here!

Mar. 'Tis gone!

Hor. 'Tis here!

[Exit Ghost.

We do it wrong, being so majestical,
To offer it the show of violence;
For it is, as the air, invulnerable,
And our vain blows malicious mockery.

Ber. It was about to speak, when the cock crew

Hor. And then it started like a guilty thing
Upon a fearful summons. I have heard,
The cock, that is the trumpet of the morn,
Doth with his lofty and shrill-sounding throat
Awake the god of day; and, at his warning,
Whether in sea or fire, in earth or air,
The extravagant and erring spirit seeks
To his confine: and of the truth herein
This present object made probation.

Mar. It fades on the crowing of the cock.
Some say, that ever 'gainst that season comes
Wherein our Saviour's birth is celebrated,
This bird of dawning singeth all night long:
And then they say no spirit dares stir abroad;
The nights are wholesome; then no planets strike.
No fairy takes, nor witch hath power to charm,
So hallow'd and so gracious is the time.

Hor. So have I heard, and do in part believe it.
But, look, the morn, in russet mantle clad,
Walks o'er the dew of yon high eastern hill:
Break we our watch up; and, by my advice,
Let us impart what we have seen to-night
Unto young Hamlet: for, upon my life,
This spirit, dumb to us, will speak to him:

1. A sort of rake.
2. Victorious.
3. The moon.
4. Search.
5. The moon.
7. Prophetic.
Scene II.

PRINCE OF DENMARK.

Do you consent we shall acquaint him with it, as needful in our loves, fitting our duty?

Mar. Let's do't; I pray; and I this morning know where we shall find him most convenient.

[Exeunt.

Scene II. — A Room of State in the same.

Enter the King, Queen, Hamlet, Polonius, Laertes, Voltimand, Cornelius, Lords, and Attendants.

King. Though yet of Hamlet our dear brother's death the memory be green; and that it us bethitted to bear our hearts in grief, and our whole kingdom to be contracted in one bower of woe; yet so far hath discretion fought with nature, that we with wisest sorrow think on him, together with remembrance of ourselves. Therefore our sometime sister, now our queen, the imperial jointress of this warlike state, have we, as 'twere, with a defeated joy, — with one auspicious, and one dropping eye; with mirth in funeral, and with dirge in marriage, in equal scale weighing delight and dole; — taken to wife: nor have we herein bar'd your better wisdoms, which have freely gone with this affair along: — For all, our thanks.

Now follows, that you know, young Fortinbras, holding a weak supposal of our worth; or thinking, by our late dear brother's death, our state to be disjoint and out of frame, Colleagues with this dream of his advantage, he hath not fail'd to press us with message, importing the surrender of those lands lost by his father, with all bands of law; — to our most valiant brother. — So much for him. Now for ourselves, and for this time of meeting. Thus much the business is: we have here writ to Norway, uncle of young Fortinbras, — who, impotent and bed-rid, scarcely hear's of this his nephew's purpose, — to suppress his further gait herein; in that the levies, the lists, and full proportions, are all made out of his subject: — and we here despatch you, good Cornelius, and you, Voltimand, for bearers of this greeting to old Norway; giving to you no further personal power, to business with the king, more than the scope of these dilated articles allow. Farewell; and let your haste commend your duty.

Cor. Vol. In that, and all things, will we show our duty.

King. We doubt it nothing: heartily farewell.

[Exeunt Voltimand and Cornelius.

And now, Laertes, what's the news with you? You told us of some suit: what is't, Laertes? You cannot speak of reason to the Dane, and lose your voice: What wouldst thou beg, Laertes? That shall not be my offer, not thy asking? The head is not more native to the heart, the hand more instrumental to the mouth, than is the throne of Denmark to thy father. What wouldst thou have, Laertes?

Laert. My dread lord, your leave and favour to return to France; from whence though willingly I came to Denmark, to show my duty in your coronation; yet now I must confess, that duty done, my thoughts and wishes bend again toward France, and bow them to your gracious leave and pardon.

King. Have you your father's leave? What says Polonius?

Pol. He says, my lord, wrung from me my slow leave, by laboursome petition; and, at last, upon his will I seal'd my hard consent: I do beseech you, give him leave to go.

King. Take thy fair hour, Laertes; time be thine, and thy best graces: spend it at thy will. — But now, my cousin Hamlet, and my son, Ham. A little more than kin, and less than kind.

[Aside.

King. How is it that the clouds still hang on you? Ham. Not so, my lord; I am too much i'the sun. Queen. Good Hamlet, cast thy nightscolour off, and let thine eye look like a friend on Denmark. Do not, for ever, with thy vailed lids, seek for thy noble father in the dust: Thou know'st 'tis common; all, that live, must die, passing through nature to eternity. Ham. Ay, madam, it is common.

Queen. If it be, why seems it so particular with thee? Ham. Seems, madam! nay, it is; I know it not seems.

'Tis not alone my inky cloak, good mother, nor customary suits of solemn black, nor windy inspiration of forc'd breath, nor, no, the fruitful river in the eye, nor the dejected haviour of the visage, together with all forms, modes, shows of grief, that can denote me truly: these, indeed, seem, for they are actions that a man might play: But I leave that within, which passeth show, these, but the trappings and the suits of woe.

King. 'Tis sweet and commendable in your nature, Hamlet, to give these mourning duties to your father: But, you must know, your father lost a father; That father lost his: and the survivor bound in filial obligation, for some term to do obsequious sorrow: But to persever in obstinate condolation, is a course of impious stubborn grief: 'tis a Guatemala grief: it shows a will most incorrect to heaven, a heart unfortified, or mind impatient; an understanding simple and unschoold: for, what we know, must be, and is as common as any the most vulgar thing to sense, why should we, in our peevish opposition, take it to heart? Fye! 'tis a fault to heaven, a fault against the dead, a fault to nature, to reason most absurd; whose common theme is death of fathers, and who still hath cried, from the first corse, till he that died to-day, this must be so. We pray you, throw to earth this unperturbation; and think of us as of a father: for let the world take note, you are the most immediate to our throne; and, with no less nobility of love, than that which dearest father bears his son, Do I impart toward you. For your intent In going back to school in Wittenberg, it is most retrograde to our desire: And, we beseech you, bend you to remain here, in the cheer and comfort of our eye, our chiefest courtier, cousin, and our son.

1 Grief. 2 Bonds. 3 Way, path.
HAMLET,

Act I.

Queen. Let not thy mother lose her prayers,
Hamlet;
I pray thee stay with us, go not to Wittenberg.

Ham. I shall in all my best obey you, madam.

King. Why, 'tis a loving and a fair reply;
Be as ourself in Denmark. — Madam, come;
This gentle and unfore'ed accord of Hamlet.
Sits smiling to my heart: in grace whereof,
No jocund health, that Denmark drinks to-day,
But the great cannon to the clouds shall tell;
And the king's rouse? the heaven shall brutit 8 again,
Re-speaking earthly thunder. Come away.

[Exeunt King, Queen, Lords, &c. Polonius, and Laertes.

Ham. O, that this too solid flesh should melt,
Thaw, and resolve 9 itself into a dew!
Or that the Everlasting had not fix'd
His canon 1 against self-slaughter! O God! O God!
How weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable
Seem to me all the uses of this world!
Eye on't! O fye! 'tis an unweeded garden,
That grows to seed; things rank, and gross in nature,
Possess it merely. That it should come to this!
But two months dead! — nay, not so much, not two:
So excellent a king; that was, to this,
Hyperion 2 to a satyr: so loving to my mother,
That he might not beteem 3 the winds of heaven
Visit her face too roughly. Heaven and earth!
Must I remember? why, she would hang on him
As if increas'd of appetite and greediness,
By what it fed on: And yet, within a month,— Let me not think on't; — Frailty, thy name is woman! —
A little month; or ere those shoes were old,
With which she follow'd my poor father's body,
Like Niobe, all tears; — why she, even she,—
O heaven! a beast, that wants discourse of reason,
Would have mourn'd longer, — married with my uncle,
My father's brother; but no more like my father,
Than I to Hercules: Within a month;
Ere yet the salt of most unrighteous tears
Had left the eye, the trembling唇 gloss'd eyes,
She married: — O most wicked speed, to post
With such dexterity to incestuous sheets!
It is not, nor it cannot come to, good;
But break, my heart: for I must hold my tongue!

Enter Horatio, Bernardo, and Marcellus.

Hor. Hail to your lordship!

Ham. I am glad to see you well.

Horatio, — or I do forget myself.

Hor. The same, my lord, and your poor servant ever.

Ham. Sir, my good friend; I'll change that name
with you.

And what make you from Wittenberg, Horatio? — Marcellus?

Mar. My good lord,—

Ham. I am very glad to see you; good even, sir.

But what, in faith, make you from Wittenberg?

Hor. A truant disposition, good my lord.

Ham. I would not hear your enemy say so:
Nor shall you do mine ear that violence,
To make it truster of your own report
Against yourself: I know, you are no truant.

But what is your affair in Elsinore?
We'll teach you to drink deep ere you depart.

Hor. My lord, I came to see your father's funeral.

Ham. I pray thee, do not mock me, fellow-student;
I think, it was to see my mother's wedding.

Hor. Indeed, my lord, it follow'd hard upon.

Ham. Thrift, thrift, Horatio! the funeral bak'd meats
Did coldly furnish forth the marriage tables.

Hor. Would I had met my dearest 4 foe in heaven
Or ever I had seen that day, Horatio! —
My father, — Methinks, I see my father.

Hor. Where, my lord?

Ham. In my mind's eye, Horatio.

Hor. I saw him once, he was a goodly king.

Ham. He was a man, take him for all in all,
I shall not look upon his like again.

Hor. My lord, I think I saw him yesternight.

Ham. Saw! who?

Hor. My lord, the king your father.

Ham. The king my father!

Hor. Season your admiration for a while
With an attent 5 ear; till I may deliver,

Upon the witness of these gentlemen,
This marvel to you.

Ham. For Heaven's love, let me hear.
Hor. Two nights together had these gentlemen,
Marcellus and Bernardo, on their watch,
In the dead waist and middle of the night,
Been thus encounter'd. A figure like your father,
Armed at point, exactly cap-a-po,;
Appears before them, and, with solemn march,
Goes slow and stately by them: thrice he walk'd,
By their oppress'd and fear-surpriz'd eyes,
Within his truncheon's length; whilst they, distill'd
Almost to jelly with the act of fear,
Stand dumb, and speak not to him. This to me
In dreadful secrecy impart they did;
And I with them, the third night kept the watch:
Where, as they had deliver'd, both in time,
Form of the thing, each word made true and good,
The apparition comes: I knew your father:
These hands are not more like.

Ham. But where was this?

Mar. My lord, upon the platform where we watch'd.

Ham. Did you not speak to it?

Hor. My lord, I did; But answer made it none: yet once, methought,
It lifted up its head, and did address
Itself to motion, like as it would speak:
But, even then, the morning cock crew loud;
And at the sound it shrunk in haste away,
And vanish'd from our sight.

Ham. 'Tis very strange.

Hor. As I do live, my honour'd lord, 'tis true;
And we did think it writ down in our duty,
To let you know of it.

Ham. Indeed, indeed, sirs, but this troubles me.
Hold you the watch to-night?

All. We do, my lord.

Ham. Arni'd, say you?

All. Arm'd, my lord.

Ham. From top to toe?

All. My lord, from head to foot.

Ham. Then saw you not
His face?

4 Chiefest. 5 Attentive.
Scene III.

Prince of Denmark.

Hor. O, yes, my lord! he wore his beaver up.
Ham. What, look'd he frowningly?
Hor. A countenance more
In sorrow than in anger.
Ham. Pale, or red?
Hor. Nay, very pale.
Ham. And fix'd his eyes upon you?
Hor. Most constantly.
Ham. But, I would, I had been there.
Hor. It would have much amaz'd you.
Ham. It would have much amaz'd you.

Very like:

Stay'd it long?

Hor. While one with moderate haste might tell a hundred.
Hor. Not when I saw it.
Ham. His beard was grizzill'd? no?
Hor. It was, as I have seen it in his life,
A sable silver'd.

Ham. I will watch to-night;

Hor. I warrant, it will.

Ham. If it assume my noble father's person,
I'll speak to it, though hell itself should gape,
And hid me hold my peace. I pray you all,
If you have hitherto conceal'd this sight,
Let it be tenable in your silence still:
And whatsoever else shall hap to-night,
Give it an understanding, but no tongue;
I will require your loves: So, fare you well:
Upon the platform, 'twixt eleven and twelve,
I'll visit you.

All. Our duty to your honour.
Ham. Your loves, as mine to you: Farewell.

[Exit Hor. Mar. and Ber.]

My father's spirit in arms! all is not well;
I doubt some foul play: 'would, the night were come!
Till then sit still my soul: Foul deeds will rise,
Though all the earth o'erwhelm them, to men's eyes,

Enter Laertes and Ophelia.

Laer. My necessaries are embark'd; farewell:
And, sister, as the winds give benefit,
And convoy is assistant, do not sleep,
But let me hear from you.

Oph. Do you doubt that?

Laer. For Hamlet, and the trifling of his favour,
Hold it a fashion, and a toy in blood;
A violet in the youth of primy nature,
Forward, not permanent, sweet, not lasting,
The pérfrümé and suppliance of a minute;
No more.

Oph. No more but so?

Laer. Think it no more:
For nature, creasé7, does not grow alone
In thews, and bulk, but, as this temple waxes,
The inward service of the mind and soul
Grows wide withal. Perhaps, he loves you now;
And now no soil, nor cautel5, doth besmirch
The virtue of his will; but, you must fear,
His greatness weigh'd, his will is not his own;
For he himself is subject to his birth:
He may not, as unvalued persons do,
Carve for himself; for on his choice depends

The safety and the health of the whole state;
And therefore must his choice be circumscrib'd
Unto the voice and yielding of that body,
Whereof he is the head: Then if he says he loves
you,
It fits your wisdom so far to believe it,
As he in his particular act and place
May give his saying deed; which is no further,
Then the main voice of Denmark goes withal,
Then weigh what loss your honour may sustain,
If with too credent ear you list his songs:
Or lose your heart; or your chaste treasure open
To his unmaster'd importunity.
Fear it, Ophelia, fear it, my dear sister;
And keep you in the rear of your affection,
Out of the shot and danger of desire.
The choicest maid is prodigal enough,
If she unmask her beauty to the moon:
Virtue itself scapes not calamitous strokes:
The canker galls the infants of the spring,
Too oft before their buttons be disclos'd;
And in the morn and dew of youth
Contagious blaments are most imminent.
Be wary then: best safety lies in fear;
Youth to itself rebels, though none else near.

Oph. I shall the effect of this good lesson keep,
As watchman to my heart: But, good my brother,
Do not, as some ungracious pastors do,
Show me the steep and thorny way to heaven;
Whilst, like a puff'd and reckless libertine,
Himself the primrose path of dalliance treads,
And recks not his own read. 5

Laer. O fear me not.
I stay too long; — But here my father comes.

Enter Polonius.

A double blessing is a double grace;
Occasion smiles upon a second leave.

Pol. Yet here, Laertes! aboard, aboard, for shame;
The wind sits in the shoulder of your sail,
And you are said for: There, — my blessing with you:

[They go away.]

Laer. Tell thou the character. 6 Give thy thoughts no tongue,
Nor any unproportion'd thought his act.
Be thou familiar, but by no means vulgar.
The friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,
Grapple them to thy soul with hooks of steel:
But do not dull thy palm with entertainment
Of each new-hatch'd, unledged comrade. Beware
Of entrance to a quarrel: but, being in,
Bear it, that the opposer may beware of thee.
Give every man thine ear, but few thy voice:
Take each man's censure, but reserve thy judgment.

Costly thy habit, as thy purse can buy,
But not express'd in fancy; rich, not gaudy:
For the apparel oft proclaims the man,
And they in France of the best rank and station,
Are most select and generous, chief in that.
Neither a borrower, nor a lender be:
For loan oft loses both itself and friend;
And borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry
This above all, — To thine ownself be true;
And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man.
Farewell; my blessing season 1 this in thee!
Laer. Most humbly do I take my leave, my lord.
Pol. The time invites you; go, your servants tend. 2
Laer. Farewell, Ophelia; and remember well What I have said to you.
Oph. 'Tis in my memory lock'd, And you yourself shall keep the key of it.
Laer. Farewell! [Exit LAETIUS.
Pol. What is't, Ophelia, he hath said to you?
Oph. So please you, something touching the lord Hamlet.
Pol. Marry, wellbethought: 'Tis told me, he hath very oft of late Given private time on you: and you yourself Have of your audience been most free and bounteous:
If it be so, (as so 'tis put on me, And that in way of caution,) I must tell you, You do not understand yourself so clearly, As it behoves my daughter, and your honour: What is between you? give me up the truth. 6
Oph. He hath my lord, of late, made many tenders, Of his affection to me.
Pol. Affection? Puh! you speak like a green girl, Unmoulded 3 in such perilous circumstances. Do you believe his tenders, as you call them? Oph. I do not know, my lord, what I should think. Pol. Marry, I'll teach you; think yourself a baby; That you have ta'en these tenders for true pay Which are not sterling. Tender yourself more dearly;
Or (not to crack the wind of the poor phrase, Wringing it thus,) you'll tender me a fool. Oph. My lord, he hath importun'd me with love, In honourable fashion.
Pol. Ay, fashion you may call it; go to, go to.
Oph. And hath given countenance to his speech, my lord, With almost all the holy vows of heaven.
Pol. Ay, springs to catch woodcocks. I do know, When the blood burns, how prodigal the soul Lends the tongue vows: these blazes, daughter, Giving more light than heat, — extinct in both, Even in their promise, as it is a making, — You must not take for fire. From this time, Be somewhat scatter of your maiden presence; Set your entertainments 4 at a higher rate, Than a command to parade. For lord Hamlet, Believe so much in him, That he is young; And with a larger tether may he walk, Than may be given you: In few, Ophelia, Do not believe his vows, for they are brokers, Not of that die which their investments show, But mere importors 5 of unholy suits, Breathing like sanctified and pious bonds, The better to beguile. This is for all, — I would not, in plain terms, from this time forth, Have you so slander any moment's leisure, As to give words or talk with the lord Hamlet. Look to't, I charge you; come your ways.
Oph. I shall obey, my lord. [Exit.

SCENE IV. — The Platform.

Enter Hamlet, Horatio, and Marcellus.

Ham. The air bites shrewdly; it is very cold.
Hor. It is a nipping and an eager 6 air.

Ham. What hour now?
Hor. I think, it lacks of twelve.
Mar. No, it is struck.
Hor. Indeed? I heard it not; it then draws near the season, Wherein the spirit held his wont to walk.

[A Flourish of Trumpets, and Ordinance shot off, within.

What does this mean, my lord?

Ham. The king doth wake to-night, and takes his rouse? Keeps wassell, and the swaggering up-spring 7 reeds; And, as he drains his draughts of Rhenish down, The kettle-drum and trumpet thus bray out The triumph of his pledge.

Hor. Is it a custom?

Ham. Ay, marry, is't:
But to my mind, — though I am native here, And to the manner born, — it is a custom More honour'd in the breach, than the observance. This heavy-headed revel, cast and west, Makes us traduc'd and tax'd of other nations: They clepe 1 us drunkards, and with swinish phrase Soil our addition; and, indeed, it takes From our achievements, though perform'd at height, The pith and marrow of our attribute. So oft it chances in particular men, That for some vicious mode of nature in them, As, in their birth, (wherein they are not guilty, Since nature cannot choose his origin,) By the o'ergrowth of some complexion, Oft breaking down the pales and forts of reason; Or by some habit, that too much o'er-leavens The form of plausible manners; — that these men, — Carrying, I say, the stamp of one defect; Being nature's livery, or fortune's star, — Their virtues else (be they as pure as grace, As infinite as man may undergo,) Shall in the general censure take corruption From that particular fault: The dram of base Doth all the noble substance often dout, To his own scandal.

Hor. Look, my lord, it comes!

Enter Ghost.

Ham. Angels and ministers of grace defend us! — Be thou a spirit of health, or goblin damn'd, Bring with thee airs from heaven, or blasts from hell, Be thy intents wicked, or charitable, Thou com'st in such a questionable 8 shape, That I will speak to thee; I'll call thee, Hamlet, King, father, royal Dane: O, answer me: Let me not burst in ignorance! but tell, Why thy canoniz'd bones, hearsed in death, Have burst their cerements? why the sepulchre, Wherein we saw thee quietly in-urn'd, Hath op'd its ponderous and marble jaws, To cast thee up again! What may this mean, That thou, dead corse, again, in complete steel Revisit'st thus the glimpses of the moon, Making night hideous; and we fools of nature, So horrifying to shake our disposition, With thoughts beyond the reaches of our souls? Say, why is this? wherefore? what should we do?

Hor. It beckons you to go away with it,
As if it some impartation did desire To you alone.

Ham. 7 Jovial draught. 8 Jollity. 9 A dance.
2 Wait. 3 Untempered. 4 Company. 5 Call. 6 Humour. 7 Do out. 8 Conversable.
SCENE V.

PRINCE OF DENMARK.

851

Mar. Look, with what courteous action
It waves you to a more removed ground:
But do not go with it.

Hor. No, by no means.

Ham. It will not speak; then I will follow it.

Hor. Do not, my lord.

Ham. Why, what should be the fear?
I do not set my life at a pin's fee; 5
And, for my soul, what can it do to that,
Being a thing immortal as itself?
It waves me forth again; — I'll follow it.

Hor. What, if it tempt you toward the flood, my lord,
Or to the dreadful summit of the cliff,
That beetles 6 o'er his base into the sea!
And there assume some other horrible form,
Which might deprive your sovereignty of reason,
And draw you into madness? think of it:
The very place puts toys 7 of desperation,
Without more motive, into every brain,
That looks so many fathoms to the sea,
And hears it roar beneath.

Ham. It waves me still:
Go on, I'll follow thee.

Mar. You shall not go, my lord.

Ham. Hold off your hands.

Hor. Be rul'd, you shall not go.

Ham. My fate cries out,
And makes each petty artery in this body
As hardy as the Nemean lion's nerve. —

[Ghost beckons.]

Still am I call'd: — unhand me, gentlemen; —

[Breaking from them.]

By heaven, I'll make a ghost of him that lets 8 me:

I say, away: — Go on, I'll follow thee.

[Exit Ghost and Hamlet.]

Hor. He waxes desperate with imagination.

Mar. Let's follow; 'tis not fit thus to obey him.

Hor. Have after: — To what issue will this come?

Mar. Something is rotten in the state of Denmark.

Hor. Heaven will direct it.

[Exit.

SCENE V. — A more remote part of the Platform.

Re-enter Ghost and Hamlet.

Ham. Whither wilt thou lead me? Speak, I'll go no further.

Ghost. Mark me.

Ham. I will.

Ghost. My hour is almost come,
When I to sulphurous and tormenting flames
Must render up myself.

Ham. Alas, poor ghost!

Ghost. Pity me not, but lend thy serious hearing
To what I shall unfold.

Ham. Speak, I am bound to hear.

Ghost. So art thou to revenge, when thou shalt hear.

Ham. What?

Ghost. I am thy father's spirit;
Doom'd for a certain term to walk the night;
And, for the day, confin'd to fast in fires,
Till the foul crimes, done in my days of nature,
Are burnt and purg'd away. But that I am forbid
To tell the secrets of my prison-house,
I could a tale unfold, whose lightest word
Would harrow up thy soul; freeze thy young blood;
Make thy two eyes, like stars, start from their spheres;
Thy knotted and combined locks to part,
And each particular hair to stand on end
Like quills upon the fretful porcupine:
But this eternal blazon 9 must not be
To ears of flesh and blood: — List, list, O list! —
If thou didst ever thy dear father love,

Ham. O heaven!

Ghost. Revenge his foul and most unnatural murder.

Ham. Murder?

Ghost. Murder most foul, as in the best it is;
But this most foul, strange, and unnatural.

Ham. Haste me to know it; that I, with wings
As meditation, or the thoughts of love,
May sweep to my revenge.

Ghost. I find thee apt;
And dumber shouldst thou be than the fat weed
That rots itself in ease on Lethe wharf,
Wouldest thou not stir in this. Now, Hamlet, hear:

By given out, that sleeping in mine orchard,
A serpent sting'd me; so the whole ear of Denmark
Is by a forged process of my death
Rankly abus'd; but know, thou noble youth,
The serpent that did sting thy father's life,
Now wears his crown.

Ham. O, my prophetic soul! my uncle.

Ghost. Ay, that incestuous, that adulterate beast,
With witchcraft of his wit, with traitorous gifts,
(O wicked wit, and gifts, that have the power
So to seduce!) won to his shameful lust
The will of my most seeming virtuous queen;
O, Hamlet, what a falling-off was there!
From me, whose love was of that dignity,
That it went hand in hand even with the vow
I made to her in marriage; and to decline
Upon a wretch, whose natural gifts were poor
To those of mine! —

But, soft! methinks I scent the morning air;
Brief let me be; — Sleeping within mine orchard,
My custom always of the afternoon,
Upon my secure hour thy uncle stole,
With juice of cursed hebenon 1 in a vial,
And in the porches of mine ears did pour
The leperous distilment: whose effect
Holds such an enmity with blood of man,
That, swift as quicksilver, it courses through
The natural gates and alleys of the body;
And, with a sudden vigour, it doth posset
And curd, like eaiser droppings into milk,
The thin and wholesome blood: so did it mine;
And a most instant tetter bark'd about,
Most lazar-like 2; with vile and loathsome crust,
All my smooth body.
Thus was I, sleeping, by a brother's hand,
Of life, of crown, of queen, at once despatch'd 3;
Cut off even in the blossoms of my sin,
Unhoused 4, disappointed 5, unanelled 6;
No reckoning made, but sent to my account
With all my imperfections on my head:
O, horrible! O, horrible! most horrible!
If thou hast nature in thee, bear it not;
Let not the royal bed of Denmark be
A couch for luxury and horrid incest.

9 Display. 1 Henbane. 2 Leprous. 3 Bereft.
4 Without having received the sacrament.
5 Unappointed, unprepared. 6 Without extreme unction.
Hamlet,

Act I.

But, howsoever thou pursu’st this act,
Talent not thy mind, nor let thy soul contrive
Against thy mother’s sight; leave her to heaven,
And to those thorns that in her bosom lodge,
To prick and sting her. Fare thee well at once!
The glow-worm shows the matin to be near.
And gins to pale his uneffectual fire:
Adieu, adieu! remember me. [Exit.

Ham. O all you host of heaven! O earth! What else?
And shall I couple hell? — O yea! — Hold, hold,
my heart;
And you, my sinews, grow not instant old,
But bear me stiffly up! — Remember thee?
Ay, thou poor ghost, while memory holds a seat
In this distracted globe. 7 Remember thee?
Yes, from the table of my memory
I’ll wipe away all trivial fond records,
All saws 8 of books, all forms, all pressures past,
That youth and observation copied there;
And thy commandment all alone shall live
Within the book and volume of my brain,
Unmix’d with baser matter: yes, by heaven.
O most pernicious woman!
O villain, villain, smiling, damned villain!
My tables? — meet it is, I set it down,
That one may smile, and smile, and be a villain;
At least, I am sure, it may be so in Denmark: 9

[Writing.

So, uncle, there you are Now to my word;
It is, Adieu, adieu! remember me.
I have sworn’t.

Hor. [Within.] My lord, my lord, —
Mar. [Within.] Lord Hamlet, —
Hor. [Within.] Heaven secure him.

Ham. So be it!

Mar. [Within.] Illo, ho, ho, my lord!
Ham. Hillo, ho, ho, boy! come, bird, come.

Enter Horatio and Marcellus.

Mar. How is’t, my noble lord?

Hor. What news, my lord?

Ham. O wonderful!

Hor. Good, my lord, tell it.

Ham. No;
You will reveal it.

Hor. Not I, my lord, by heaven.

Mar. Nor I, my lord.

Ham. How say you then; would heart of man
Once think it? —

But you’ll be secret, —

Hor. Mar. Ay, by heaven, my lord.

Ham. There’s ne’er a villain, dwelling in all
Denmark,
But he’s an arrant knave.

Hor. There needs no ghost, my lord, come from the grave,
To tell us this.

Ham. Why, right; you are in the right;
And so, without more circumstance at all,
I hold it fit, that we shake hands, and part:
You, as your business, and desire, shall point you; —
For every man hath business, and desire,
Such as it is, — and, for my own poor part,
Look you, I will go pray.

Hor. These are but wild and whirling words, my lord.

Ham. I am sorry they offend you, heartily; yes,
Faith, heartily.

ACT II.

SCENE I. — A Room in Polonius's House.

Enter Polonius and Reynaldo.

Pol. Give him this money, and these notes, Reynaldo.

Reyn. I will, my lord.

Pol. You shall do marvellous wisely, good Reynaldo,

Reyn. Before you visit him, to make inquiry

Of his behaviour.

Pol. My lord, I did intend it.

Reyn. Marry, well said: very well said. Look you, sir,

Inquire me first what Danskers a are in Paris;

And bow, and who, what means, and where they keep,

What company, at what expense; and finding,

By this encompassment and drift of question,

That they do know my son, come you more nearer

Than your particular demands will touch it:

Take you, as 'twere, some distant knowledge of him;

As thus, — I know his father, and his friends,

And, in part, him; — Do you mark this, Reynaldo?

Reyn. Ay, very well, my lord.

Pol. And, in part, him; — but, you may say, not well:

But, if 't be I mean, he's very wild;

Addicted so and so; — and there put on him

What forgeries you please; marry, none so rank

As may dishonour him; take heed of that:

But, sir, such wanton, wild, and usual slips,

As are companions noted and most known

To youth and liberty.

Reyn. As gaming, my lord.

Pol. Ay, or drinking, fencing, swearing, quarrelling.

Reyn. My lord, that would dishonour him.

Pol. 'Faith, no; as you may season it in the charge.

You must not put another scandal on him,

That he is open to incontinency;

That's not my meaning; but breathe his faults so quaintly,

That they may seem the taints of liberty:

The flash and out-break of a fiery mind;

A savageness in unreclaimed blood,

Of general assault.

Reyn. But, my good lord, —

Pol. Wherefore should you do this?

Reyn. Ay, my lord,

I would know that.

Pol. Marry, sir, here's my drift;

And, I believe, it is a fetch of warrant:

You laying these slight sullies on my son,

As 'twere a thing a little soil'd i' the working,

Mark you,

Your party in converse, him you would sound,

Having ever seen in the prenominant crimes,

The youth you breathe of, guilty, be assur'd,

He closes with you in this consequence;

Good air, or so; or, friend, or gentleman —

According to the phrase, or the addition,

Of man, and country.

Reyn. Very good, my lord.

Pol. And then, sir, does he this, — He does —

What was I about to say? — By the mass, I was about to say something: — Where did I leave?

Reyn. At, closes in the consequence.

Pol. At, closes in the consequence, — Ay, marry;

He closes with you thus; — I know the gentleman;

I saw him yesterday, or t' other day,

Or then, or then; with such, or such; and, as you say,

There was he gaming; there o'erlook in his house;

There falling out at tennis: or to forth. —

See you now;

Your bait of falsehood takes this carp of truth:

And thus do we of wisdom and of reach,

With windlases, and with assases of bias,

By indirects find directions out;

So, by former lecture and advice,

Shall you, my son: You have me, have you not?

Reyn. My lord, I have.

Pol. Then, fare you well.

Reyn. Good my lord, —

Pol. Observe his inclination in yourself.

Reyn. I shall, my lord.

Pol. And let him ply his musick.

Reyn. Well, my lord. [Exit.

Enter Ophelia.

Pol. Farewell! — How now, Ophelia? what's the matter?

Oph. O, my lord, my lord, I have been so af-frighted!

Pol. With what, in the name of heaven?

Oph. My lord. As I was sewing in my closet,

Lord Hamlet, — with his doublet all unbrac'd;

No hat upon his head; his stockings foul'd,

Ungarter'd, and down-gyved 4 to his ankle;

Pale as his shirt; his knees knocking each other;

And with a look so pitiful in purport,

As if it had been loosed out of hell,

To speak of horrors, — he comes before me.

Pol. Mad for thy love?

Oph. My lord, I do not know;

But, truly, I do fear it.

Pol. What said he?

Oph. He took me by the wrist, and held me hard;

Then goes he to the length of all his arm:

And with his other hand thus o'er his brow,

He fails to such perusal of my face,

As he would draw it. Long stay'd he so;

At last, — a little shaking of mine arm,

And thrice his head thus waving up and down,

— He rais'd a sigh so piteous and profound,

As it did seem to shatter all his bulk,

And end his being: That done, he lets me go:

And, with his head over his shoulder turn'd,

He seem'd to find his way without his eyes;

For out of doors he went without their helps,

And, to the last, bended their light on me.

Pol. Come, go with me; I will go seek the king.

This is the very ecstasy of love;

Whose violent property foredoes 5 itself,

And leads the will to desperate undertakings,

As oft as any passion under heaven,

That does afflict our natures. I am sorry, —

* Hanging down like fetters.
* Destroys.
What, have you given him any hard words of late?

Oph. No, my good lord: but, as you did command, I did repel his letters, and denied His access to me.

Pol. That hath made him mad. I am sorry, that with better heed and judgment, I had not quoted 6 him: I fear'd, he did but trifle, And meant to wreck thee; but, beshrew my jealousy! It seems, it is as proper to our age To cast beyond ourselves in our opinions, As it is common for the younger sort To lack discretion. Come, go we to the king; This must be known; which, being kept close, might move More grief to hide, than hate to utter love, Come. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. — A Room in the Castle.

Enter King, Queen, Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, and Attendants.

King. Welcome, dear Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern! Moreover that we much did long to see you, The need, we have to use you, did provoke Our hasty sending. Something have you heard Of Hamlet's transformation; so I call it, Since not the exterior nor the inward man Resembles that it was: What it should be, More than his father's death, that thus hath put him So much from the understanding of himself, I cannot dream of: I entreat you both, That,—being of so young days brought up with him: And, since, so neighbour'd to his youth and humour,— That you vouchsafe your rest here in our court Some little time: so by your companies To draw him on to pleasures; and to gather, So much as from occasion you may glean, Whether sought, to us unknown, afflicts him thus, That, open'd, lies within our remedy.

Queen. Good gentlemen, he hath much talk'd of you; And, sure I am, two men there are not living, To whom he more adheres. If it will please you To show us so much gentry, and good will, As to expend your time with us awhile, For the supply and profit of our hope, Your visitation shall receive such thanks As fits a king's remembrance.

Ros. Both your majesties Might, by the sovereign power you have of us, Put your dread pleasures more into command Than to entreaty.

Guil. But we both obey; And here give up ourselves, in the full bent? To lay our service freely at your feet, To be commanded.

King. Thanks, Rosencrantz, and gentle Guildenstern.

Queen. Thanks, Guildenstern, and gentle Rosencrantz:
And I beseech you instantly to visit My too much changed son. — Go, some of you, And bring these gentlemen where Hamlet is.

Guil. Heavens make our presence, and our practices, Pleasant and helpful to him!

Queen. Ay, amen!

[Exeunt Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, and some Attendants.

Enter Polonius.

Pol. The ambassadors from Norway, my good lord, Are joyfully return'd.

King. Thou still hast been the father of good news. Pol. Have I, my lord? Assure you, my good liege, I hold my duty, as I hold my soul, Both to my God, and to my gracious king: And I do think, (or else this brain of mine Hunts not the trail 8 of policy so sure As it hath us'd to do,) that I have found The very cause of Hamlet's lunacy.

King. O, speak of that: that do I long to hear. Pol. Give first admittance to the ambassadors; My news shall be the fruit to that great feast.

King. Thyself do grace to them, and bring them in.

[Exeunt Polonius. He tells me, my dear Gertrude, he hath found The head and source of all your son's distemper. Queen. I doubt it is no other but the main; His father's death, and our o'erhasty marriage.]

Re-enter Polonius, with Voltimand and Cornelius.

King. Well, we shall sift him. — Welcome, my good friends! Say, Voltimand, what from our brother Norway?

Volt. Most fair return of greetings, and desires. Upon our first, he sent out to suppress His nephew's levies; which to him appear'd To be a preparation 'gainst the Polack 9; But, better look'd into, he truly found It was against your highness: Whereat griev'd, — That so his sickness, age, and impotence, Was falsely borne in hand! — sends out arrests On Fortinbras; which he, in brief obeys; Receives rebuke from Norway; and, in fine, Makes vow before his uncle, never more To give the assay of arms against your majesty. Whereon old Norway, overcome with joy, Gives him three thousand crowns in annual fee; And his commission to employ those soldiers So levied as before, against the Polack: With an entreaty, herein further shown, [Gives a paper. That it might please you to give quiet pass Through your dominions for this enterprize; On such regards of safety, and allowance, As therein are set down.]

King. It likes us well: And, at our more consider'd time, we'll read, Answer, and think upon this business. Mean time, we thank you for your well-took labour: Go to your rest; at night we'll feast together: Most welcome home! [Exeunt Voltimand and Cornelius.

Pol. This business is well ended. My liege, and madam, to expostulate 8 What majesty should be, what duty is, Why day is day, night, night, and time is time,
Were nothing but to waste night, day, and time, Therefore,—since brevity is the soul of wit, And tediousness the limbs and outward florishes, I will be brief: Your noble son is mad: Mad call I it: for, to define true madness, What is't, but to be nothing else but mad? But let that go.

Queen. More matter with less art.
Pol. Madam, I swear I use no art at all, That he is mad; 'tis true: 'tis true, 'tis pity; And pity 'tis 'tis true: a foolish figure; But farewell it, for I will use no art.
Mad let us grant him then: and now remains, That we find out the cause of this effect; Or, rather say, the cause of this defect; For this effect, defective, comes by cause: Thus it remains, and the remainder thus. Perpend.
I have a daughter; have, while she is mine; Who, in her duty and obedience, mark, Hath given me this: Now gather and surmise.
—To the celestial, and my soul's idol, the most beautified Ophelia, That's an ill phrase, a vile phrase; beautified is a vile phrase; but you shall hear. Thus:
Queen. Came this from Hamlet to her?
Pol. Good madam, stay awhile; I will be faithful.

[Reads.]

Doubt thou, the stars are fire;
Doubt that, the sun doth move;
Doubt truth to be a liar;
But never doubt, I love.

O dear Ophelia, I am ill at these numbers; I have not art to reckon my groans; but that I love thee best, I must best, believe it.
Thine evermore, most dear lady, whilst this machine is to him, Hamlet.
This, in obedience, hath my daughter shown me: And more above, hath his solicitings, As they fell out by time, by means, and place, All given to mine ear.
King. But how hath she
Pol. Receiv'd his love?
King. As of a man faithful and honourable.
Pol. I would fain prove so. But what might you think,
When I had seen this hot love on the wing, (As I perceiv'd it, I must tell you that, Before my daughter told me,) what might you, Or my dear majesty your queen here, think, If I had play'd the desk, or table-book; Or given my heart a working, mute and dumb; Or look'd upon this love with idle sight; What might you think? no, I went round to work, And my young mistress thus did I bespeak:
Lord Hamlet. A prince out of thy sphere;
This must not be: and then I precepts gave her, That she should lock herself from his resort, Admit no messengers, receive no tokens. Which done, she took the fruits of my advice; And he, repulsed, (a short tale to make,) Fell into a madness; then into a fast; Thence to a watch; thence into weakness; Thence to a lightness; and, by this declension, Into the madness wherein he raves, And all we mourn for.

---

King. Do you think, 'tis this?
Queen. It may be, very likely.
Pol. Hath there been such a time, (I'd fain know that,) That I have positively said, 'Tis so,
When it prov'd otherwise?
King. No, not I.
Pol. Take this from this, if this be otherwise;
[Pointing to his Head and Shoulder.]
If circumstances lead me, I will find Where truth is hid, though it were hid indeed Within the centre.
King. How may we try it further?
Pol. You know, sometimes he walks four hours together,
Here in the lobby.
Queen. So he does, indeed.
Pol. At such a time I'll loose my daughter to him;
Be you and I behind an arras then;
Mark the encounter: if he love her not, And be not from his reason fallen thereon, Let me be no assistant for a state, But keep a farm, and carter.
King. We will try it.

Enter Hamlet, reading.
Queen. But look, where sadly the poor wretch comes reading.
Pol. Away, I do beseech you, both away;
I'll board him presently; — O, give me leave.
[Exeunt King, Queen, and Attendants.]

How does my good lord Hamlet?

Ham. Well, god-a-mercy.
Pol. Do you know me, my lord?
Ham. Excellent well; you are a fishmonger.
Pol. Not I, my lord.
Ham. Then I would you were so honest a man.
Pol. Honest, my lord?
Ham. Ay, sir; to be honest, as this world goes, is to be one man picked out of ten thousand.
Pol. That's very true, my lord.
Ham. For if the sun breed maggots in a dead dog, being a god, kissing carrion,— Have you a daughter?
Pol. I have, my lord.
Ham. Let her not walk i' the sun: conception is a blessing; but not as your daughter may conceive — friend, look to't.
Pol. How say you by that? [Aside.] Still harping on my daughter: — yet he knew me not at first; he said, I was a fishmonger; He is far gone, far gone: and, truly in my youth I suffered much extremity for love: very near this. I'll speak to him again. — What do you read, my lord?
Ham. Words, words, words!
Pol. What is the matter, my lord?
Ham. Between who?
Pol. I mean the matter that you read, my lord.
Ham. Slanders, sir: for the satirical rogue says here, that old men have grey beards; that their faces are wrinkled; their eyes purging thick amber, and plum-tree gum; and that they have a plentiful lack of wit: all of which, sir, though I most powerfully and inventively believe, yet I hold it not honesty to have it thus set down; for yourself, sir, shall be as old as I am, if, like a crab, you could go backward.
Pol. Though this be madness, yet there's method in it. [Aside.] Will you walk out of the air, my lord?
Ham. Into my grave?

Pol. Indeed, that is out o’ the air. — How pregnant sometimes his replies are! a happiness that often madness hits on, which reason and sanity could not so prosperously be delivered of. I will leave him, and suddenly contrive the means of meeting between him and my daughter. — My honourable lord, I will most humbly take my leave of you.

Ham. You cannot, sir, take from me any thing that I will more willingly part withal; except my life, except my life, except my life.

Pol. Fare you well, my lord.

Ham. These tedious old fools!

Enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Pol. You go to seek the lord Hamlet; there he is.

Ros. God save you sir! [To Polonius.

[Exit Polonius.

Guil. My honoured lord! —

Ros. My most dear lord! —

Ham. My excellent good friends! How dost thou, Guildenstern? Ah, Rosencrantz! Good lads, how do ye both?

Ros. As the indifferent children of the earth.

Guil. Happy, in that we are not over happy.

On fortune’s cap we are not the very button.

Ham. Nor the soles of her shoe?

Ros. Neither, my lord.

Ham. Then you live in the middle of her favours? Well, what news?

Ros. None, my lord: but that the world is grown honest.

Ham. Then is doomsday near: But your news is not true. Let me question more in particular: What have you, my good friends, deserved at the hands of fortune, that she sends you to prison hither?

Guil. Prison, my lord!

Ham. Denmark’s a prison.

Ros. Then is the world one.

Ham. A goodly one; in which there are many confines, wards, and dungeons; Denmark being one of the worst.

Ros. We think not so, my lord.

Ham. Why, then ’tis none to you; for there is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so; to me it is a prison.

Ros. Why then your ambition makes it one; ’tis too narrow for your mind.

Ham. O heaven! I could be bounded in a nutshell, and count myself a king of infinite space; were it not that I have bad dreams.

Guil. Which dreams, indeed, are ambition; for the very substance of the ambitious is merely the shadow of a dream.

Ham. A dream itself is but a shadow.

Ros. Truly, and I hold ambition of so airy and light a quality, that it is but a shadow’s shadow.

Ham. Then are our beggars, bodies; and our monarchs, and outstretched heroes, the beggars’ shadows: Shall we to the court? For, by my fay, I cannot reason.

Ros. Guil. We’ll wait upon you.

Ham. No such matter: I will not sort you with the rest of my servants; for, to speak to you like an honest man, I am most dreadfully attended. But, in the beaten way of friendship, what make you at Elsinore?

Ros. To visit you, my lord; no other occasion.

Ham. Beggar that I am, I am even poor in thanks; but I thank you: and sure, dear friends, my thanks are too dear at a halfpenny. Were you not sent for? is it your own inclining? Is it a free visitation? Come, come; deal justly with me: come, come; nay speak.

Guil. What should we say, my lord?

Ham. Any thing — but to the purpose. You were sent for; and there is a kind of confession in your looks, which your modesties have not craft enough to colour: I know the good king and queen have sent for you.

Ros. To what end, my lord?

Ham. That you must teach me. But let me conjure you by the rights of our fellowship, by the consonancy of our youth, by the obligation of our ever-preserved love, and by what more dear a better proposer could charge you withal, be even and direct with me, whether you were sent for, or no?

Ros. What say you? [To Guildenstern.

Ham. Nay, then I have an eye of you; [Aside.]

If you love me.

Guil. My lord, we were sent for.

Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery, and your secrecy to the king and queen moult no feather. I have of late, (but, wherefore, I know not,) lost all my mirth, forgone all custom of exercise: and indeed, it goes so heavily with my disposition, that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory: this most excellent canopy, the air, look you, this brave o’erhanging firmament, this majestical roof fretted with golden fire, why, it appears no other thing to me, than a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is man! How noble in reason! how infinite in faculties! in form and moving, how express and admirable! in action, how like an angel! in apprehension, how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals! And yet, to me, what is this quintessence of dust? man delights not me, — nor woman neither; though by your smiling, you seem to say so.

Ros. My lord, there is no such stuff in my thoughts.

Ham. Why did you laugh then, when I said, Man delights not me?

Ros. To think, my lord, if you delight not in man, what lenten entertainment the players shall receive from you: we coted them on the way: and hither are they coming, to offer you service.

Ham. He that plays the king, shall be welcome; his majesty shall have tribute of me; the adventurous knight shall use his foil, and target: the lover shall not sigh gratis; the humorous man shall end his part in peace: the clown shall make those laugh whose lungs are tickled o’ the sere: and the lady shall say her mind freely, or the blank verse shall halt for’t. — What players are they?

Ros. Even those you were wont to take such delight in, the tragedians of the city.

Ham. How chances it they travel? their residence, both in reputation and profit, was better both ways.

Ros. I think their inhibition comes by the means of the late innovation.

Ham. Do they hold the same estimation they did when I was in the city? Are they so followed?

4 Ready, apt

5 Spare.

6 Overtook.
Scene II. PRINCE OF DENMARK.

Ros. No, indeed, they are not.

Ham. How comes it? Do they grow rusty?

Ros. Nay, their endeavour keeps in the wonted pace: But there is, sir, an aery of children, little eyases ⁷, that cry out on the top of question ⁸, and are most tyrannically clapp'd fo'rt: these are now the fashion; and so berattle the common stages (so they call them), that many, wearing rapiers, are afraid of goose quills, and dare scarce come thither.

Ham. What are they children who maintains them? how are they escoted? ⁹ Will they pursue the quality no longer than they can sing? will they not say afterwards, if they should grow themselves to common players, (as it is most like, if their means are no better,) their writers do them wrong, to make them exclaim against their own succession?

Ros. 'Faith, there has been much to do on both sides; and the nation holds it no sin, to tarre ² them on to controversy: there was, for a while, no money bid for argument, unless the poet and the player went to cuffs in the question.

Ham. Is it possible?

Guit. O, there has been much throwing about of brains.

Ham. Do the boys carry it away?

Ros. Ay, that they do, my lord; Hercules and his load, too.³

Ham. It is not very strange: for my uncle is king of Denmark, and those, that would make mouths at him while my father lived, give twenty, forty, fifty, an hundred ducats a-piece, for his picture in little. There is something in this more natural, if philosophy could find it out.

[Flourish of Trumpets within.

Guit. There are the players.

Ham. Gentlemen, you are welcome to Elsinore. Your hands. Come then: the appurtenance of welcome is fashion and ceremony: let me compy ⁴ with you in this garb; lest my extent to the players, which, I tell you, must show fairly outward, should more appear like entertainment than yours. You are welcome; but my uncle-father, and aunt-mother, are deceived.

Guit. In what, my dear lord?

Ham. I am but mad north-north-west: when the wind is southerly, I know a hawk from a handsaw.

Enter Polonius.

Pol. Well be with you, gentlemen!

Ham. Hark you, Guildenstern; — and you too: — at each ear a hearer: that great baby, you see there, is not yet out of his swaddling-clouts.

Ros. Happily, he's the second time to come to them; for they say an old man is twice a child.

Ham. I will prophesy, he comes to tell me of the players; mark it. — You say right, sir: o' Monday morning; 'twas then, indeed.

Pol. My lord, I have news to tell you.

Ham. My lord, I have news to tell you; When Roscius was an actor in Rome, —

Pol. The actors are come hither, my lord.

Ham. Bus, bus!

Pol. Upon my honour, —

Ham. Then come each actor on his ass, —

Pol. The best actors in the world, either for tragedy, comedy, history, pastoral, pastoral-comical, historical-pastoral, [tragical-historical, tragical-comical-historical-pastoral,] scene indivisible, or poem unlimited: Seneca cannot be too heavy, nor Plautus too light. For the law of writ ⁵ and the liberty, these are the only men.

Ham. O Jephthah, judge of Israel, — what a treasure hast thou!

Pol. What a treasure had he, my lord?

Ham. Why — One fair daughter, and no more;

The which he loved passing well.

Pol. Still on my daughter.

Aside. Ham. Am I not i' the right, old Jephthah?

Pol. If you call me Jephthah, my lord, I have a daughter, that I love passing well.

Ham. Nay, that follows not.

Pol. What follows then, my lord?

Ham. Why, As by lot, God wot, and then you know, It came to pass, As most like it was, — The first row of the pious chanson ⁶ will show you more; — for look, my abridgment comes.

Enter four or five Players.

You are welcome, masters: welcome all; — I am glad to see thee well; — welcome, good friends: —

O, old friend! Why, thy face is valanced ⁷ since I saw thee last; Com'st thou to bear me in Denmark? — What! my young lady and mistress! your ladyship is nearer to heaven than when I saw you last, by the altitude of a chopine.⁸ Pray heaven, your voice, like a piece of uncertain gold, be not cracked within the ring. — Masters, you are all welcome. We'll e'en to't like French falconers, fly at any thing we see: We'll have a speech straight: Come, give us a taste of your quality; come, a passionate speech.

1. Play. What speech, my lord?

Ham. I heard thee speak me a speech once,— but it was never acted; — or, if it was, not above once: for the play, I remember, pleased not the million; 'twas a caviare to the general ¹: but it was (as I received it, and others, whose judgments, in such matters, cried in the top ⁸ of mine,) an excellent play; well digested in the scenes, set down with as much modesty as cunning. I remember, one said, there were no salads in the lines, to make the matter savoury; nor no matter in the phrase, that might indele ⁹ the author of affection; but called it, an honest method, as wholesome as sweet, and by very much more handsome than fine. One speech in it I chiefly loved: 'twas ⁴Æneas' tale to Dido; and thereabout of it especially, where he speaks of Priam's slaughter: If it live in your memory, begin at this line: let me see, let me see; —

The rugged Pyrrhus, like the Hycranian beast,— 'tis not so; it begins with Pyrrhus.

The rugged Pyrrhus,— he, whose subtle arms, Black as his purpose, did the night resemble When he lay couched in the ominous horse, Hath now this thread and black complexion smeared With heredity more dismal; head to foot Now is he total gudes; ⁵ horridly trick'd⁶ With blood of fathers, mothers, daughters, sons; Bak'd and impasted with the parching streets,

HAMLET, Act II.

Pol. My lord, I will use them according to their desert.
Ham. Much better, man: Use every man after his desert, and who shall 'scape whipping? Use them after your own honour and dignity: The less they deserve, the more merit is your bounty. Take them in.

Pol. Come, sirs.
[Exit POLONIUS, with some of the Players.]

Ham. Follow him, friends: we'll hear a play to-morrow.
Dost thou hear me, old friend; can you play the murder of Gonzago?

1 Play. Ay, my lord.

Ham. We'll have it to-morrow night. You could, for a need, study a speech of some dozen or sixteen lines, which I would set down, and insert in 't: could you not?

1 Play. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Very well. — Follow that lord; and look you mock him not. [Exit Player.] My good friends, [To ROS. and GUIL.] I'll leave you till night: you are welcome to Elsinore.

Ros. Good my lord!

Ham. What's Hecuba to him, or he to Hecuba, That he should weep for her? What would be do, Had he the motive and the cue for passion, That I have? He would drown the stage with tears, And cleave the general ear with horrid speech; Make mad the guilty, and appall the free, Confound the ignorant; and amaze, indeed, The very faculties of eyes and ears.

Yet I,
A dull and muddy-mettled rascal, peak,
Like John—a dreams, unpregnant of my cause,
And can say nothing; no, not for a king,
Upon whose property, and most dear life,
A vile defeat 5 was made. Am I a coward?
Who calls me villain? breaks my pate across?
Plucks off my beard, and blows it in my face?
Tweaks me by the nose? gives me the lie i' the throat,
As deep as to the lungs? Who does me this?
Ha!

Why, I should take it: for it cannot be,
But I am pigeon-liver'd, and lack gall!
To make oppression bitter; or, ere this,
I should have fatted all the region kites
With this slave's offal: Bloody, murderous villain!
Remorseless, treacherous, unnatural villain!
Why, what an ass am I? This is most brave;
That I, the son of a dear father murder'd,
Prompted to my revenge by heaven and hell,
Must, like a drab, unpack my heart with words,
And fall a cursing!
Fye upon't! foh! About my brains! Humph! I have heard,
That guilty creatures, sitting at a play,
Have by the very cunning of the scene

[Light clouds. 8 Eternal. 9 Muffled. 1 Blind. 9 Milky. 7 Destruction.]

Pol. Anon he finds him Striking too short at Greeks; his antique sword, Rebellious to his arm, lies where it falls,
Repugnant to command: Unequal match'd,
Pyrrhus at Priam drives; in rage, strikes wide;
But with the whip and wind of his fell sword
The unerv'd father falls. Then senseless Ilium,
Seeming to feel this blow, with flaming top
Stoops to his base; and with a hideous crash
Takes prisoner Pyrrhus' ear; for, lo! his sword
Which was declining on the milky head
Of reverend Priam, seem'd i' the air to stick:
So, as a painted tyrant, Pyrrhus stood;
And, like a neutral to his will and matter,
Did nothing.

But, as we often see, against some storm,
Of its own head, the great, the huge, the strong,
To the earth's heaves, the rack 7 stand still,
The bold winds speechless, and the orb below
As hush as death: anon the dreadful thunder
Doth rend the region: So, after Pyrrhus' pause,
A roused vengeance sets him new a work;
And never did the Cyclops' hammers fall
On Mars' armour, forc'd for proof eternal 9;
With less remorse than Pyrrhus' bleeding sword
Now falls on Priam.

Out, out, thou stumprel, Fortune! All you gods,
In general synod, take away her power;
Break all the spokes and feltries from her wheel,
And bowl the round wave down the hill of heaven,
As low as to the floods!

Pol. This is too long.

Ham. It shall to the barber's with your beard —
Pytrhee, say on: — He's for a jig, or he sleeps: — say on: come to Hecuba.

1 Play. But who, ah woë! had seen the mangled 9 queen —

Ham. The mangled queen?

1 Play. That's good; mangled queen is good.

Ham. The mangled queen?

1 Play. Run barefoot up and down, threat'ning the sky.

Pol. Look, whether he has not turn'd his colour, and has tears in 's eyes. — Pytrhee, no more.

Ham. 'Tis well: I'll have thee speak out the rest of this soon. — Good my lord, will you see the players well bestowed? Do you hear, let them be well used; for they are the abstract, and brief chronicles, of the time: After your death you were better have a bad epitaph, than their ill report while you live.
Act III. Scene I.——A Room in the Castle.

Enter King, Queen, Polonius, Ophelia, Rosen-crantz, and Guildenstern.

King. And can you, by no drift of conferenceGet from him, why he puts on this confusion;Grating so harshly all his days of quietWith turbulent and dangerous lucy?Ros. He does confess, he feels himself distracted;But from what cause he will by no means speak.Guild. Nor do we find him forward to be sounded;But with a crafty madness, keeps aloof,When we would bring him on to some confessionOf his true state.

Queen. Did he receive you well?Ros. Most like a gentleman.Guild. But with much forcing of his disposition.Ros. Niggard of question; but, of our demands,Most free in his reply.Queen. Did you assay himTo any pastime?Ros. Madam, it so fell out, that certain playersWho over-rasht 6 on the way: of these we told him;And there did seem in him a kind of joyTo hear of it; they are about the court;And, as I think, they have already orderThis night to play before him.

Pol. 'Tis most true:And he beseech'd me to entreat your majesties,To hear and see the matter.

King. With all my heart; and it doth much content me.To hear him so inclin'd.Good gentlemen, give him a further edge,And drive his purpose on to these delights.

Roa. We shall, my lord.[Exeunt RosenCranzt and Guildenstern.

King. Sweet Gertrude, leave us too.

For we have closely sent for Hamlet hither;That he, as 'twere by accident, may hereAfright? Ophelia:Her father, and myself (lawful spes3),Will so bestow ourselves, that, seeing, unseen,Wax may of their encounter frankly judge;And gather by him, as he is behav'd,It be the affliction of his love, or no,That thus he suffers for:

Queen. I shall obey you:And, for your part, Ophelia, I do wish,That your good beauties be the happy causeOf Hamlet's wildness: so shall I hope, your virtuesWill bring him to his wonted way again,To both your honours.

Oph. Madam, I wish it may.[Exit Queen.

May be a devil: and the devil hath powerTo assume a pleasing shape; yea, and, perhaps,Out of my weakness, and my melancholy,(As he is very potent with such spirits,)Abuses me to damn me: I'll have groundsMore relative than this: The play's the thing,Wherein I'll catch the conscience of the king. [Exit.

ACT III.

Pol. Ophelia, walk you here:——Gracious, so please you,Wc will bestow ourselves:——Read on this book;
[To Ophelia.That show of such an exercise may colourYour loneliness.——We are oft to blame in this,—'Tis too much prov'd,——that, with devotion's visage,And pious action, we do sugar o'erThe devil himself.

King. O, 'tis too true! how smartA lash that speech doth give my conscience!The harlot's cheek, beautied with plastering art,Is not more ugly to the thing that helps it,Than is my deed to my most painted word:O heavy burden! [Aside.Pol. I hear him coming; let's withdraw, my lord.[Exeunt King and Polonius.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. To be, or not to be, that is the question:Whether 'tis nobler in the mind to sufferThe slings and arrows of outrageous fortune;Or to take arms against a sea of troubles,And, by opposing, end them?——To die,——to sleep,No more;——and, by a sleep, to say we endThe heart-ache, and the thousand natural shocksThat flesh is heir to,——'tis a consummation<br.Devoutly to be wish'd.——To die;——to sleep;To sleep! perchance to dream;——ay, there's the rub;For in that sleep of death what dreams may come,When we have shuffled off this mortal coil1,Must give us pause:——There's the respect,2That makes calamity of so long life:For who would bear the whips and scorns of time,The oppressor's wrong, the proud man's contumely,3The pangs of despis'd love, the law's delay,The insolence of office, and the spurnsThat patient merit of the unworthy takes,When he himself might his quietus4 makeWith a bare bodkin?5——Who would fardels6 bear,To grunt and sweat under a weary life!But that the dread of something after death,——The undiscover'd country, from whose bourn7No traveller returns,——puzzles the will;And makes us rather bear those ills we have,Than fly to others that we know not of?Thus conscience does make cowards of us all;And thus the native hue of resolutionIs sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought;And enterprizes of great pith and moment,With this regard, their currents turn awry,9 Too frequent. 1 Stir, bustle. 2 Consideration. 3 Rudeness. 4 Quiet. 5 The ancient term for a small dagger. 6 Pack, burden. 7 Boundary, limits.
And lose the name of action. — Soft you, now! The fair Ophelia: — Nymph, in thy orisons 8
Be all my sins remember'd.

Oph. Good my lord, How does your honour for this many a day ?

Ham. I humbly thank you; well.'

Oph. My lord, I have remembrances of yours, That I have longed long to re-deliver; I pray you, now receive them.

Ham. No, not I: I never gave you aught.

Oph. My honour'd lord, you know right well, you did; And, with them, words of so sweet breath compos'd As made the things more rich: their perfume lost, Take these again; for to the noble mind, Rich gifts wax poor, when givers prove unkind. There, my lord.

Ham. Ha, ha! are you honest?

Oph. My lord?

Ham. Are you fair?

Oph. What means your lordship?

Ham. That if you be honest and fair, you should admit no discourse to your beauty.

Oph. Could beauty, my lord, have better commerce than with honesty?

Ham. Ay, truly: for the power of beauty will sooner debate honesty from what it is, than the force of honesty can translate beauty into his likeness; this was some time a paradox, but now the time gives it proof. I did love you once.

Oph. Indeed, my lord, you made me believe so.

Ham. You should not have believed me: for virtue cannot so inoculate our old stock, but we shall relish of it: I lov'd you not.

Oph. I was the more deceived.

Ham. Get thee to a nunnery! Why wouldst thou be a breeder of sinners? I am myself indifferent honest; but yet I could accuse me of such things, that it were better my mother had not borne me: I am very proud, revengeful, ambitious; with more offences at my beck, than I have thoughts to put them in, imagination to give them shape, or time to act them in: What should such fellows as I do crawling between earth and heaven! We are arrant knaves, all; believe none of us: Go thy ways to a nunnery. Where's your father?

Oph. At home, my lord.

Ham. Let the doors be shut upon him; that he may play the fool no where but in 's own house. Farewell.

Oph. O, help him, you sweet heavens!

Ham. If thou dost marry, I'll give thee this plague for thy dowry; Be thou as chaste as ice, as pure as snow, thou shalt not escape calumny. Get thee to a nunnery; farewell: Or, if thou wilt needs marry, marry a fool; for wise men know well enough, what monsters you make of them. To a nunnery, go; and quickly too. Farewell.

Oph. Heavenly powers, restore him!

Ham. I have heard of your paintings too, well enough; Nature hath given you one face, and you make yourselves another: you jig, you amble, and you lisp, and nick-name God’s creatures, and make your wantonness your ignorance: Go to; I'll no more of 't; it hath made me mad. I say, we will have no more marriages; those that are married already, all but one, shall live; the rest shall keep as they are. To a nunnery, go. [Exit Hamlet.]

Oph. O, what a noble mind is here o’erthrown! The courtier’s, soldier’s, scholar’s, eye, tongue, sword:
The expectancy and rose of the fair state,
The glass of fashion, and the mould of form,
The observed of all observers! quite, quite down!

And I, of ladies most deject and wretched,
That suck’d the honey of his musick vows,
Now see that noble and most sovereign reason,
Like sweet bells jangled, out of tune and harsh;
That unmatch’d form and feature of blown youth,
Blasted with ecstacy ! O, woe is me!
To have seen what I have seen, see what I see!

Re-enter King and Polonius.

King. Love! his affections do not that way tend; Nor what he spake, though it lack’d form a little, Was not like madness. There’s something in his soul,

O'er which his melancholy sits on brood;
And, I do doubt, the hatch, and the disclose,
Will be some danger: Which for to prevent,
I have, in quick determination,
Thus set it down; Heshall with speed to England,
For the demand of our neglected tribute:
Haply, the seas, and countries different,
With variable objects, shall expel
This something-settled matter in his heart;
Whereon his brains, still beating, puts him thus
From fashion of himself. What think you on't?

Pol. It shall do well: but yet I do believe,
The origin and commencement of his grief
Sprung from neglected love. — How now Ophelia,
You need not tell us what lord Hamlet said;
We heard it all. — My lord, do as you please;
But, if you hold it fit, after the play,
Let his queen mother all alone entreat him
To show his grief; let her be round 1 with him;
And I’ll be plac’d, so please you in the ear,
Of all their conference: If she find him not,
To England send him; or confine him, where Your wisdom best shall think.

King. It shall be so:
Madness in great ones must not unwatch'd go. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. — A Hall in the same.

Enter Hamlet, and certain Players.

Ham. Speak the speech, I pray you, as I pronounced it to you, trippingly on the tongue: but if you mouth it, as many of our players do, I had as lief the town-crier spoke my lines. Nor do I saw the air too much with your hand, thus; but use all gently; for in the very torrent, tempest, and (as I may say) whirlwind of your passion, you must acquire and beget a temperance, that may give it smoothness. O, it offends me to the soul, to hear a robustious periwigg’d fellow fear a passion to tatters, to very rags, to split the ears of the groundlings 9; who, for the most part, are capable of nothing but inexplicable dumb shows and noise: I would have such a fellow whipt for o’er-doing Termagant; it out-heroes Herod 3: Pray, you, avoid it.

1 Play. I warrant your honour.

Ham. Be not too tame neither, but let your own discretion be your tutor: suit the action to the 9 Alienation of mind.

1 Reprimand him with freedom.
2 The meaner people then seem to have sat in the pit.
3 Herod's character was always violent.
As I do thee.—Something too much of this.—There is a play to-night before the king; One scene of it comes near the circumstance, Which I have told thee of my father's death. I pray thee, when thou seest that act afoot, Even with the very comment of thy soul Observe my uncle: if he occulted guilt Do not itself unkennel in one speech, It is a damned ghost that we have seen; And my imaginations are as foul As Vulcan's stithy.8 Give him heedful note: For I mine eyes will rivet to his face: And, after, we will both our judgments join In censure9 of his seeming.

Hor. Well, my lord: If he steal aught, the whilst this play is playing, And 'scape detecting, I will pay the theft.

Ham. They are coming to the play; I must be idle:
Get you a place.

Danish March. A Flourish. Enter King, Queen, Polonius, Ophelia, Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, and others.

King. How fares our cousin Hamlet?

Ham. Excellent, 'tis faith; of the camelion's dish: I eat the air, promise-crammed: You cannot feed capons so.

King. I have nothing with this answer, Hamlet; these words are not mine.

Ham. No, nor mine now. My lord,—you played once in the university, you say? [To Polonius.

Pol. That did I, my lord: and was accounted a good actor.

Ham. And what did you enact?

Pol. I did enact Julius Caesar; I was kill'd i' the Capitol; Brutus killed me.

Ham. It was a brute part of him, to kill so capital a calf there. —Be the players ready?

Ros. Ay, my lord; they stay upon your patience. Queen. Come hither, my dear Hamlet, sit by me. Ham. No, good mother, here's metal more attractive. [Laying down at Ophelia's Feet.

Pol. O ho! do you mark that? [To the King.

Oph. You are merry, my lord.

Ham. Who, I?

Oph. Ay, my lord.

Ham. O! your only jig-maker. What should a man do, but be merry? for, look you, how cheerfully my mother looks, and my father died within these two hours.

Oph. Nay, 'tis twice two months, my lord.

Ham. So long? Nay, then let the devil wear black, for I'll have a suit of sables. 1 O heavens! die within two months, and not four! What? Then there's hope, a great man's memory may outlive his life half a year: But he must build churches then: or else shall he suffer not thinking on, with the hobby-horse; whose epitaph is, For, O, for, O, the hobby-horse is forgot.

Trumpets sound. The dumb Show follows.

Enter a King and a Queen, very lovingly; the Queen embracing him, and he her. She kneels, and makes show of protestation unto him. He takes her up, and declines his head upon her neck; lays him down upon a bank of flowers; she, seeing him asleep, leaves:

7 Secret.
8 A stithy is a smith's shop.
9 Opinion.
10 The richest dress.
HAMLET,

Act III.

P. King. I do believe, you think what now you speak;
But, what we do determine, oft we break.
Purpose is but the slave to memory:
Of violent birth, but poor validity:
Which now like fruit unripe, sticks on the tree:
But fall, unshaken, when they mellow be.
Most necessary 'tis, that we forget
To pay ourselves what to ourselves is debt:
What to ourselves in passion we propose,
The passion ending, doth the purpose lose.
The violence of either grief or joy
Their own enactures 8 with themselves destroy:
Where joy most revels, grief doth most lament;
Grief joys, joy grieves, on slender accident.
This world is not for aye; nor 'tis not strange,
That even our loves should with our fortunes change;
For 'tis a question left us yet to prove,
Whether love lead fortune, or else fortune love.
The great man down, you mark, his favourite flies;
The poor advance'd makes friends of enemies.
And hitherto doth love on fortune tend:
For who not needs, shall never lack a friend;
And who in want a hollow friend doth try,
Directly seasons him his enemy.
But, orderly to end where I begun,—
Our wills, and fates, do so contrary run,
That our devices still are overthrown;
Our thoughts are ours, their ends none of our own:
So think thou wilt no second husband wed;
But die thy thoughts, when thy first lord is dead.
P. Queen. Nor earth to give me food, nor heaven light!
Sport and repose lock from me, day and night!
To desperation turn my trust and hope!
An anchor's 9 cheer in prison be my scope!
Each opposite, that blanks the face of joy,
Meet what I would have well, and it destroy!
Both here, and hence, pursue me, lasting strife,
If, once a widow, ever I be wife!

P. King. If she should break it now,—

[To Ophelia.]

P. King. 'Tis deeply sworn. Sweet, leave me here a while;
My spirits grow dull, and pain I would beguile
The tedious day with sleep.

[Sleeps.
P. Queen. Sleep rock thy brain;
And never come mischance between us twain!]

[Exit.
P. Queen. The lady doth protest too much, methinks.

Ham. O, but she'll keep her word.

King. Have you heard the argument? Is there no offence in't?

Ham. No, no, they do but jest, poison in jest;
no offence i' the world.

King. What do you call the play?

This play is the image of a murder done in Vienna:
Gonzago is the duke's name; his wife, Baptista; you shall see anon; 'tis a knavish piece of work:
But what of that? Your majesty, and we that have free souls, it touches us not:
Let the galled jade wince, our withers are unwrung.

Enter Lucianus.

This is one Lucianus, nephew to the king.

Oph. You are as good as a chorus, my lord.

8 Determinations. 9 Anchoret.
Scene II.

Prince of Denmark.

Ham. Begin, murderer; — leave thy horrible faces, and begin. Come; —

The croaking raven
Doth bellow for a stage.

Luc. Thoughts black, hands apt, drugs fit, and time agreeing;
Confederate season, else no creature seeing;
Thou mixture rank, of midnight weeds collected,
With Hecat's ban 1 thrice blasted, thrice infected,
Thy natural magick and dire property,
On wholesome life usurp immediately.

Pours the Poison into the Sleeper's Ears.

Ham. He poisons him? I° the garden for his estate.

His name's Gonzago: the story is extant, and written in very choice Italian: You shall see anon, how the murderer gets the love of Gonzago's wife.

Opk. The king rises.

Ham. What! frighted with false fire!

Queen. How fares my lord?

Pol. Give o'er the play.

King. Give me some light; — away!

Pol. Lights, lights, lights!

Execute all but Hamlet and Horatio.

Ham. Why, let the stricken deer go weep,
The hart ungalled play:
For some must watch, while some must sleep;
Thus runs the world away. —

Would not this, sir, and a forest of feathers, (if the rest of my fortunes turn Turk with me,) with two Provençal crooks, and my razed 2 shoes, get me a fellowship in a cry 3 of players, sir?

Hor. Half a share.

Ham. A whole one, I.

For thou dost know, O Damon dear,
This realm dismantled was
Of Jove himself; and now reigns here
A very, very — peacock.

Hor. You might have rhymed.

Ham. O good Horatio, I'll take the ghost's word for a thousand pound. Didst perceive?

Hor. Very well, my lord.

Ham. Upon the talk of the poisoning,—

Hor. I did very well note him.

Ham. Ah, ah! — Come, some music; come,

the recorders. 4—

For if the king like not the comedy,

Why then, belike, — he likes it not, perdy. 5 —

Enter Rosen crab and Guilemestern.

Come, some music.

Guil. Good my lord, vouchsafe me a word with
you.

Ham. Sir, a whole history.

Guil. The king, sir,—

Ham. Ay, sir, what of him?

Guil. Is, in his retirement, marvellous distempered.

Ham. With drink, sir?

Guil. No, my lord, with choler.

Ham. Your wisdom should show itself more richer, to signify this to the doctor; for, for me to put him to his purgation, would, perhaps, plunge him into more choler.

Guil. Good my lord, put your discourse into some frame, and start not so wildly from my affair.

Ham. I am tame, sir: — pronounce.

Guil. The queen, your mother, in most great affliction of spirit, hath sent me to you.

1 Curse. 2 Slashed. 3 Pack, company. 4 A kind of flute. 5 For Dieu.

Ham. You are welcome.

Guil. Nay, good my lord, this courtesy is not of the right breed. If it shall please you to make me a wholesome answer, I will do your mother's commandment: if not, your pardon, and my return, shall be the end of my business.

Ham. Sir, I cannot.

Guil. What, my lord?

Ham. Make you a wholesome answer; my wit's diseased: But, sir, such answer as I can make, you shall command; or, rather, as you say, my mother:
therefore no more, but to the matter: My mother,
you say,—

Ros. Then thus she says; Your behaviour hath struck her into amazement and admiration.

Ham. O wonderful son, that can so astonish a mother! — But is there no sequel at the heels of this mother's admiration? Impart.

Ros. She desires to speak with you in her closet, er ye go to bed.

Ham. We shall obey, were she ten times our mother. Have you any further trade with us?

Ros. My lord, you once did love me.

Ham. And do still, by these pickers and stealers.

Ros. Good my lord, what is your cause of distemper? you do, surely, but bar the door upon your own liberty, if you deny your griefs to your friend.

Ham. Sir, I lack advancement.

Ros. How can that be, when you have the voice of the king himself for your succession in Denmark?

Ham. Ay, sir, but While the grass grows,— the proverb is something musty.

Enter the Players, with Recorders.

O, the recorders: — let me see one. — To withdraw with you: — Why do you go about to recover the wind of me, as if you would drive me into a toil?

Guil. O, my lord, if my duty be too bold, my love is too unmanly.

Ham. I do not well understand that. Will you play upon this pipe?

Guil. My lord, I cannot.

Ham. I pray you.

Guil. Believe me, I cannot.

Ham. I do beseech you.

Guil. I know no touch of it, my lord.

Ham. 'Tis as easy as lying; govern these ven-tages 6 with your fingers and thumb, give it breath with your mouth, and it will discourse most eloquent music. Look you, these are the stops.

Guil. But these cannot I command to any utterance of harmony; I have not the skill.

Ham. Why, look you now, how unworthy a thing you make of me? You would play upon me; you would seem to know my stops; you would pluck out the heart of my mystery; you would sound me from my lowest note to the top of my compass: and there is much music, excellent voice, in this little organ; yet cannot you make it speak. Do you think, I am easier to be played on than a pipe?
Call me what instrument you will, though you can fret me, you cannot play upon me.

Enter Polonius.

Bless you, sir!

Pol. My lord, the queen would speak with you, and presently.

6 Holes.
HAMLET.

Do you see yonder cloud, that's almost in shape of a camel?

Pol. By the mass, and 'tis like a camel, indeed.

Ham. Methinks, it is like a weasel.

Pol. It is backed like a weasel.

Ham. Or, like a whale?

Pol. Very like a whale.

Ham. Then will I come to my mother by and by.— They fool me to the top of my bent. — I will come by and by.

Pol. I will say so.

Ham. By and by is easily said. — Leave me, friends.

[Exit Pol. Hor. &c.

'Tis now the very witching time of night;
When churchyards yawn, and hell itself breathes out
Contagion to this world: Now could I drink hot blood,
And do such bitter business as the day
Would quake to look on. Soft; now to my mother.

O, heart, lose not thy nature; let not ever
The soul of Nero enter this firm bosom:
Let me be cruel, not unnatural:
I will speak daggers to her, but use none;
My tongue and soul in this be hypocrites:
How in my words soever she be shent,
To give them seals? never, my soul, consent! [Exit.

SCENE III. — A Room in the same.

Enter King, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

King. I like him not; nor stands it safe with us,
To let his madness range. Therefore, prepare you;
I your commission will forthwith despatch,
And he to England shall along with you:
The terms of our estate may not endure
Hazard so near us, as doth hourly grow
Out of his lunes.¹

Gult. We will ourselves provide:
Most holy and religious fear it is,
To keep those many many bodies safe,
That live, and feed, upon your majesty.

Ros. The single and peculiar life is bound,
With all the strength and armour of the mind,
To keep itself from 'noyance; but much more that spirit,
Upon whose weal depend and rest
The lives of many. The cease of majesty
Dies not alone; but, like a gulf, doth draw
What's near it, with it: it is a massy wheel,
Fix'd on the summit of the highest mount,
To whose huge spokes ten thousand lesser things
Are mortis'd and adjoin'd; which, when it falls,
Each small annexment, petty consequence,
Attends the boist'rous ruin. Never alone
Did the king sigh, but with a general groan.

King. Arm you, I pray you, to this speedy voyage;
For we will fetters put upon this fear,
Which now goes too free-footed.

Ros. Guil. We will haste us.

[Exit Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Enter Polonius.

Pol. My lord, he's going to his mother's closet:
Behind the arras I'll convey myself,
To hear the process; I'll warrant, she'll tax him home:
And, as you said, and wisely was it said,
'Tis meet that some more audience, than a mother,
⁷ Utmost stretch.
⁸ Reproofed.
⁹ Authority to put them in execution.¹¹ Lunacies.

Since nature makes them partial, should o'erhear
The speech, of vantage. Fare you well, my liege;
I'll call upon you ere you go to bed,
And tell you what I know.

King. Thanks, dear my lord.

[Exit Polonius.

O, my offence is rank, it smells to heaven;
It hath the primal eldest curse upon't,
A brother's murder! — Pray can I not,
Though inclination be as sharp as will;
My stronger guilt defeats my strong intent;
And, like a man to double business bound,
I stand in pause where I shall first begin,
And both neglect. What if this cursed hand
Were thicker than itself with brother's blood?
Is there not rain enough in the sweet heavens,
To wash it white as snow? Whereeto serves mercy,
But to confront the visage of offence?
And what's in prayer, but this two-fold force,
— To be forestalled, ere we come to fall,
Or pardon'd, being down? Then I'll look up;
My fault is past. But, O, what form of prayer
Can serve my turn? Forgive me my foul murder! —
That cannot be; since I am still possess'd
Of those effects for which I did the murder,
My crown, mine own ambition, and my queen.
May one be pardon'd, and retain the offence?
In the corrupted currents of this world,
Offence's gilded hand may move by justice;
And oft 'tis seen, the wicked prize itself
Buys out the law: But 'tis not so above:
There is no shuffling, there the action lies
In his true nature; and we ourselves compell'd,
Even to the teeth and forefront of our faults,
To give in evidence. What then? what rests?
Try what repentance can: What can it not?
Yet what can it, when one cannot repent?
O wretched state! O bosom, black as death!
O limed soul; that struggling to be free,
Art more engag'd! Help, angels, make assay!
Bow, stubborn knees! and, heart, with strings of steel;
Be soft as sinews of the new-born babe,
All may be well! [Retires and kneels.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. Now might I do it, pat, now he is praying;
And now I'll do't; — and so he goes to heaven:
And so am I reveng'd! That would be scam'd ¹²
A villain kills my father; and, for that, I, his sole son, do this same villain send
To heaven.

Why, this is hire and salary, not revenge.
He took my father grossly, full of bread;
With all his crimes broad blown, as flush as May;
And, how his audit stands, who knows, save Heaven?
But in our circumstance and course of thought,
'Tis heavy with him: And am I then reveng'd,
To take him in the purging of his soul,
When he is fit and season'd for his passage?

No.

Up, sword; and know thou a more horrid hent ²⁴
When he is drunk, asleep; or in his rage;
At gaming, swearing; — or about some act
That has no relish of salvation in't. —
My mother stays:
This physic but prolongs thy sickly days. [Exit.

² Captured with bird-time.
³ Should be considered.
⁴ Hold, i.e., purpose.
SCENE IV.

The King rises and advances.

King. My words fly up, my thoughts remain below:
Words, without thoughts, never to heaven go.

[Exit.]

SCENE IV. — Another Room in the same.

Enter Queen and Polonius.

Pol. He will come straight. Look, you lay home to him;
Tell him, his pranks have been too broad to bear with;
And that your grace hath screen'd and stood between Much heat and him. I'll silence me e'en here.
Pray you, be round with him.

Queen. I'll warrant you;
Fear me not: — withdraw, I hear him coming.

[Polonius hides himself.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. Now, mother; what's the matter?
Queen. Hamlet, thou hast thy father much offended.
Ham. Mother, you have my father much offended.
Queen. Come, come, you answer with an idle tongue.
Ham. Go, go, you question with a wicked tongue.
Queen. Why, how now, Hamlet?
Ham. What's the matter now?
Queen. Have you forgot me?
Ham. No, by the rood, not so:
You are the queen, your husband's brother's wife;
And, — would it were not so! — you are my mother.
Queen. Nay, then I'll set those to you that can speak.

Ham. Come, come, and sit you down; you shall not budge;
You go not, till I set you up a glass
Where you may see the inmost part of you.
Queen. What wilt thou do? thou wilt not murder me?
Help, help, ho!

Pol. [Behind.] What, ho! help!

Ham. How now! a rat?

[Draws.]

Dead, for a ducat, dead.

[Hamlet makes a pass through the Arras.

Pol. [Behind.] O, I am slain.

[Dies and falls.]

Queen. O me, what hast thou done?
Ham. Nay, I know not:
Is it the king?

[He lifts up the Arras, and draws forth Polonius.

Queen. O, what a rash and bloody deed is this!
Ham. A bloody deed; — almost as bad, good mother,
As kill a king, and marry to his brother.

Queen. As kill a king!

Ham. Ay, lady, 'twas my word. —
Thou wretched, rash, intruding fool, farewell! —

[To Polonius.

I took thee for thy better: take thy fortune:
Thou find'st, to be too busy, is some danger. —
Leave wringing of your hands: Peace; sit you down,
And let me wring your heart: for so I shall,
If it be made of penetrable stuff;
If horrid custom have not brazen it so,
That it be proof and bulwark against sense.

Queen. What have I done, that thou dar'st wag thy tongue
In noise so rude against me?

Ham. Such an act,
That blurs the grace and blush of modesty;
Calls virtue, hypocrite; takes off the rose
From the fair forehead of an innocent love,
And sets a blister there; makes marriage vows
As false as dicen's oaths: O, such a deed
As from the body of contraction 6 plucks
The very soul; and sweet religion makes
A rhapsody of words: Heaven's face doth glow;
Yea, this solidity and compound mass,
With tristful 7 visage, as against the doom,
Is thought-sick at the act.

Queen. Ah me, what act,
That roars so loud, and thunders in the index? 6

Ham. Look here, upon this picture, and on this;
The counterfeit presentment of two brothers.
See, what a grace was seated on this brow:
Hyperion's 9 curls; the front of Jove himself;
An eye like Mars, to threaten and command;
A station 1 like the herald Mercury,
New-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill;
A combination, and a form, indeed,
Where every god did seem to set his seal,
To give the world assurance of a man:
This was your husband. — Look you now, what follows:
Here is your husband; like a mildew'd ear,
Blasting his wholesome brother. Have you eyes?
Could you on this fair mountain leave to feed,
And button 2 on this moor? Ha! have you eyes?
You cannot call it, love: for, at your age,
The hey-day in the blood is tame, it's humble,
And waits upon the judgment; And what judgment
Would step from this to this? Sense, sure, you have, Else, could you not have motion: But, sure, that sense
Is apoplex'd: for madness would not err;
Nor sense to ecstasy 4 was ne'er so thrall'd,
But it reserv'd some quantity of choice,
To serve in such a difference. What devil was,
That thus hath cozen'd you at hoof-man-blind? 5
Eyes without feeling, feeling without sight,
Ears without hands or eyes, smelling sans 6 all
Or but a sickly part of one true sense
Could not so mope. 7
O shame! where is thy blush?

Queen. O Hamlet, speak no more:
Thou turn'st mine eyes into my very soul;
And there I see such black and grained spots,
As will not leave their tinct. 8

Ham. Nay, but to live
In an incestuous bed, —

Queen. O, speak to me no more;
These words, like daggers, enter in mine ears:
No more, sweet Hamlet.

Ham. A murderer, and a villain:
A slave, that is not twentieth part the tythe
Of your precedent lord: — a vice 9 of kings:
A cutpurse of the empire and the rule;
That from a shelf the precious diadem stole,
And put it in his pocket! —

Queen. No more.

HAMLET,
Act III.

_Ham._ O, throw away the worser part of it,
And live the purer with the other half.

Good night: but go not to my uncle's bed;
Assume a virtue, if you have it not.
That monster, custom, who all sense doth eat
Of habit's devil, is angel yet in this;
That to the use of actions fair and good
He likewise gives a frock, or livery,
That aptly is put on: Refrain to-night;
And that shall lend a kind of easiness
To the next abstinenice: the next more easy:
For use almost can change the stamp of nature,
And either curb the devil, or throw him out
With wondrous potency. Once more good night!
And when you are desirous to be bless'd,
I'll blessing beg of you. — For this same lord,
Instructed to Polonius.

I do repent: But heaven hath pleas'd it so,—
To punish me with this, and this with me,
That I must be their scourge and minister.
I will bestow him, and will answer well
The death I gave him. So again good night! —
I must be cruel, only to be kind:
Thus bad begins, and worse remains behind. —
But one word more, good lady.

_Queen._ What shall I do?

_Ham._ Not this, by no means, that I bid you do:
Let the bloat king tempt you again to bed;
And let him for a pair of wanton kisses,
Make you to ravel all this matter out,
That I essentially am not in madness,
But mad in craft. 'Twere good, you let him know:
For who, that's but a queen, fair, sober, wise,
Would from a paddock 7, from a bat, a gib 8,
Such dear concernings? hide? who would so do?
No, in despite of sense, and secrecy,
Unpeg the basket on the house's top,
Let the birds fly: and, like the famous ape,
To try conclusions 9, in the basket creep,
And break your own neck down.

_Queen._ Be thou assur'd, if words be made of breath,
And breath o' life, I have no life to breathe
What thou hast said to me.

_Ham._ I must to England; you know that?

_Queen._ Alack,

I had forgot; 'tis so concluded on.

_Ham._ There's letters seal'd: and my two school-fellows, —

Whom I will trust, as I will adders fang'd 1, —
They bear the mandate; they must sweep my way,
And marshal me to knavery: Let it work;
For 'tis the sport to have the engineer
Hoist with his own petar 2: and it shall go hard,
But I will delve one yard below their mines,
And blow them at the moon: O, 'tis most sweet,
When in one line two crafts directly meet. —
This man shall set me packing.
I'll lug the body to the neighbour room: —
Mother, good night. — Indeed, this counsellor
Is now most still, most secret, and most grave,
Who was in life a foolish prating knave.
Come, sir, to draw toward an end with you: —
Mother, good night.

ACT IV.

SCENE I. — A Room in the Castle.

Enter King, Queen, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

King. There's matter in these signs; these profound heaves;
You must translate: 'tis fit we understand them:
Where is your son?
Queen. Bestow this place on us a little while. —
[To Rosencrantz and Guildenstern, who go out.

Ah, my good lord, what have I seen to-night!
King. What, Gertrude? How does Hamlet?
Queen. Mad as the sea, and wind, when both contend
Which is the mightier: In his lawless fit,
Behind the airs bearing some thing stirr
Whips out his rapier, cries, A rat! a rat!

And, in this brainish apprehension, kills
The unseen old man.

King. O heavy deed!
It had been so with us, had we been there:
His liberty is full of threats to all;
To you yourself, to us, to every one.
Alas! how shall this bloody deed be answer'd?
It will be laid to us, whose providence
Should have kept short, restrain'd, and out of haunt
This mad young man; but, so much was our love,
We would not understand what was most fit;
But, like the owner of a foul disease,
To keep it from divulging, let it feed
Even on the pith of life. Where is he gone?
Queen. To draw apart the body he hath kill'd;
O'er whom his very madness, like some ore,
Among a mineral 4 of metals base,
Shows itself pure; he weeps for what is done.
King. O, Gertrude, come away!
The sun no sooner shall the mountains touch,
But we will slip him hence: and this vile deed
We must, with all our majesty and skill,
Both countenance and excuse. — Ho! Guildenstern!

Enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Friends both, go join you with some further aid:
Hamlet in madness hath Polonius slain,
And from his mother's closet hath he dragged him;
Go seek him out: speak fair, and bring the body
Into the chapel. I pray you haste in this.

[Exeunt Ros. and Guil.

Come, Gertrude, we'll call up our wisest friends:
And let them know both what we mean to do,
And what's untimely done: so, haply, slander,
— Whose whisper o'er the world's diameter,
As level as the cannon to his blank;
Transports his poison'd shot, — may miss our name,
And hit the woundless air. — O come away!
My soul is full of discord, and dismay. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. — Another Room in the same.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. — Safely stowed, — [Ros. &c. within,
Hamlet! lord Hamlet!] But soft! — what noise?
who calls on Hamlet? — O, here they come.

Enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Ros. What have you done, my lord, with the dead body?
Ham. Compound it with dust, whereto 'tis kin.
Ros. Tell us where 'tis; that we may take it thence,
And bear it to the chapel.
Ham. Do not believe it.
Ros. Believe what?
Ham. That I can keep your counsel, and not mine own. Besides, to be demanded of a sponge — what replication should be made by the son of a king?
Ros. Take you me for a sponge, my lord?
Ham. Ay, sir; that soak's up the king's countenance, his rewards, his authorities. But such officers do the king best service in the end: He keeps them, like an ape, in the corner of his jaw: first moulting, to be last swallowed: When he needs what you have gleamed, it is but squeezing you, and, sponge, you shall be dry again.
Ros. I understand you not, my lord.
Ham. I am glad of it: a knavish speech sleeps in a fool's ear.
Ros. My lord, you must tell us where the body is, and go with us to the king.
Ham. The body is with the king, but the king is not with the body. The king is a thing —
Guil. A thing, my lord?
Ham. Of nothing: bring me to him. Hide fox, and all after. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. — Another Room in the same.

Enter King, attended.

King. I have sent to seek him, and to find the body.
How dangerous is it, that this man goes loose?
Yet must not we put the strong law on him:
He's lord of the distracted multitude,
Who like not in their judgment, but their eyes;
And, where 'tis so, the offender's scourge is weigh'd,
But never the offence. To bear all smooth and even,
This sudden sending him away must seem
Deliberate pause: Diseases, desperate grown,
By desperate appliance are reliev'd,

Enter Rosencrantz.

Or not at all. — How now? what hath befallen?
Ros. Where the dead body is bestow'd, my lord, We cannot get from him.
King. But where is he?
Ros. Without, my lord; guarded, to know your pleasure.
King. Bring him before us.
Ros. Ho, Guildenstern! bring in my lord.

Enter Hamlet and Guildenstern.

King. Now, Hamlet, where's Polonius?
Ham. At supper.
King. At supper? Where?

3 K 2
HAMLET,

Act IV.

King. Alas, alas! A man may fish with the worm that hath eat of a king; and eat of the fish that hath fed of that worm.

Ham. What dost thou mean by this?

King. Nothing; but to show you how a king may go a progress through the body of a beggar.

Ham. Where is Polonius?

King. In heaven; send thither to see: if your messenger find him not there, seek him i' the other place yourself. But, indeed, if you find him not within this month, you shall nose him as you go up the stairs into the lobby.

Ham. Go seek him there. [To some Attendants. He will stay till you come. [Exit Attendants.

King. Hamlet, this deed, forthine especial safety, — Which we do tender, as we dearly grieve For that which thou hast done, — must send thee hence With fiery quickness: Therefore, prepare thyself; The bark is ready, and the wind at help. The associates tend, and every thing is bent For England.

For England?

Ham. Ay, Hamlet.

King. Good.

Ham. So is it, if thou knew'st our purposes.

Ham. I see a cherub, that sees them. — But, come, for England! — Farewell, dear mother.

King. Thy loving father, Hamlet.

Ham. My mother: Father and mother is man and wife; man and wife is one flesh; and so, my mother. Come, for England! — [Exit.

King. Follow him at foot: tempt him with speed abroad; Delay it not, I'll have him hence to-night: Away; for every thing is seal'd and done That else leans on the affair: Pray you make haste. [Exit Ros. and Guil.

And, England, if my love thou hol'dst at aught, (As my great power thereof may give thee sense; Since yet thy caiticrare looks raw and red After the Danish sword, and thy free awe Pays homage to us,) thou may'st not coldly set? Our sovereign process; which imports at full, By letters conjuring to that effect, The present death of Hamlet. Do it, England; For like the hectic in my blood he rages, And thou must cure me: Till I know 'tis done, Howe'er my haps, my joys will ne'er begin. [Exit.

SCENE IV. — A Plain in Denmark.

Enter Fortinbras, and Forces, marching.

For. Go, captain, from me greet the Danish king; Tell him, that, by his licenc, Fortinbras Craves the conveyance of a promised march Over his kingdom. You know the rendezvous. If that his majesty would aught with us, We shall express our duty in his eye,

And let him know so. 7

Cap. I will do't, my lord.

For. Go softly on. [Exit Fortinbras and Forces.

Enter Hamlet, Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, &c.

Ham. Good sir, whose powers are these? Cap. They are of Norway, sir.

Ham. How purpos'd, sir, I pray you? Cap. Against some part of Poland.

Ham. Who Commands them, sir?

Cap. The nephew to old Norway, Fortinbras.

Ham. Goes it against the main of Poland, sir, Or for some frontier?

Cap. Truly to speak, sir, and with no addition, We go to gain a little patch of ground, That hath in it no profit but the name, To pay five ducats, five, I would not farm it; Nor will it yield to Norway, or the Pole, A ranker rate, should it be sold in fee.

Ham. Why, then the Polack never will defend it.

Cap. Yes, 'tis already garrison'd.

Ham. Two thousand souls, and twenty thousand ducats, Will not debate the question of this straw: This is the imposthume of much wealth and peace; That inward breaks, and shows no cause without Why the man dies. — I humbly thank you, sir.

Cap. God be wi' you, sir. [Exit Captain. Ros. Will't please you go, my lord? Ham. I will be with you straight. Go a little before. [Exit Ros. and Guil.

How all occasions do inform against me, And spur my dull revenge! What is a man, If his chief good, and market of his time, Be but to sleep, and feed? a beast, no more. Sure, He, that made us with such large discourse, Looking before, and after, gave us not That capability and godlike reason To lust i' the unbus'ed. Now, whether it be Bestial oblivion, or some craven 2 scruple Of thinking too precisely on the event, — A thought, which quarter'd, hath but one part wisdom, And, ever, three parts coward, — I do not know Why yet I live to say, This thing's to do; Sith' I have cause, and will, and strength, and means, To do't. Examples, gross as earth, exhort me: Witness, this army of such mass, and charge, Led by a delicate and tender prince: Whose spirit, with divine ambition puff'd, Makes mouths at the invisible event; Exposing what is mortal, and unsure, To all that fortune, death, and danger, dare, Even for an egg-shell. Rightly to be great, Is not to stir without great argument; But greatly to find quarrel in a straw, When honour's at the stake. How stand I then, That have a father kill'd, a mother stain'd, Excitements of my reason, and my blood, And let all sleep? while, to my shame, I see The imminent death of twenty thousand men, That, for a fantasy, and trick of fame, Go to their graves like beds; fight for a plot Whereon the numbers cannot try the cause, Which is not tomb enough, and continent

SCENE V. — Elsinore. A Room in the Castle.

Enter QUEEN and HORATIO.

QUEEN. — I will not speak with her.

HORATIO. She is importunate; indeed, distract;
Her mood will needs be piteied.

QUEEN. What would she have?

HORATIO. She speaks much of her father; says, she hears,
There's tricks i' the world; and hems, and beats her
heart;
S朋s enviously at straws: speaks things in doubt,
That carry but half sense: her speech is nothing,
Yet the unshaped use of it doth move
The hearers to collection: they aim at it,
And both the words up fit to their own thoughts;
Which, as her winks, and nods, and gestures yield
them,
Indeed would make one think, there might be thought,
Though nothing sure, yet much unhappily.

QUEEN. 'Twere good she were spoken with; for she may strew
Dangerous conjectures in ill-breeding minds:
Let her come in. [Exit HORATIO.

To my sick soul, as sin's true nature is,
Each toy seems prologue to some great amiss
So full of artless jealousy is guilt,
It spills itself in fearing to be split.

Re-enter HORATIO, with OPHELIA.

Oph. Where is the beauteous majesty of Denmark?

QUEEN. How now, Ophelia?

Oph. How should I your true love know
From another one?
By his cockle hat and staff,
And his sandal shoon. [Sings.

QUEEN. Alas, sweet lady, what imports this song?

He is dead and gone, lady,
He is dead and gone:
At his head a grass-green turf,
At his feet a stone.

O, ho! — QUEEN. Nay, but Ophelia, —

Oph. Pray you, mark.

White his shroud as the mountain snow,

Sings.

QUEEN. Alas, look here, my lord.

Oph. Larded all with sweet flowers;
Which bequest to the grave did go,
With true-love showers.

King. How do you, pretty lady?

Oph. Well! they say the owl was a baker's daughter.
We know what we are, but know not what what we may be.

King. Conceit upon her father.

Oph. Pray, let us have no words of this; but when they ask you, what it means, say you this:

Good morrow, 'tis Saint Valentine's day,
All in the morning betime,
And I a maid at your window,
To be your Valentine.

King. How long hath she been thus?

Oph. I hope, all will be well. We must be patient: but I cannot choose but weep, to think, they should lay him i' the cold ground: My brother shall know of it, and so I thank you for your good counsel. Come, my coach! Good night, ladies; good night, sweet ladies: good night, good night.

[Exit.

King. Follow her close; give her good watch,
I pray you.

[Exit HORATIO.

O, this is the poison of deep grief; it springs
All from her father's death: And now behold,
O Gertrude, Gertrude,
When sorrows come, they come not single spies,
But in battalions! First, her father slain;
Next, your son gone; and he most violent author
Of his own just remove: The people muddied, Thick and unwholesome in their thoughts and whispers.

For good Polonius' death; and we have done but greenly,
In hugger-mugger to inter him: Poor Ophelia
Divided from herself, and her fair judgment;
Without the which we are pictures, or mere beasts.
Last, and as much containing as all these,
Her brother is in secret come from France:
Feeds on his wonder, keeps himself in clouds,
And wants not buzzers to infect his ear
With pestilent speeches of his father's death;
Wherein necessity, of matter beggar'd,
Will nothing stick our person to arrange
In ear and ear. O my dear Gertrude, this,
Like to a murdering piece, in many places
Gives me superfluous death! [A Noise within.

QUEEN. Alack! what news is this?

Enter a Gentleman.

King. Attend.

Where are my Switzers! Let them guard the door:
What is the matter?

Gent. Save yourself, my lord;
The ocean, overpeering of his list;
Eats not the flats with more impetuous haste,
Than young Laertes, in a riotous head,
O'beirs your officers! The rabble call him lord;
And, as the world were now but to begin,
Antiquity forgot, custom not known,
The ratifiers and props of every word,
They cry, Choose we; Laertes shall be king!
Caps, hands, and tongues, applaud it to the clouds,
Laertes shall be king, Laertes king!

QUEEN. How cheerfully on the false trail they cry!

O, this is counter? you false Danish dogs.

King. The doors are broke. [Noise within.

Enter LAERTES, armed; Danes following.

LAERTES. Where is this king? — Sirs, stand you all without.

DAN. No, let's come in.

LAERTES. I pray you give me leave.

DAN. We will, we will.

[They retire without the door.

Laer. I thank you:—keep the door. O thou vile king, Give me my father. Queen. Calmly, good Laertes. Laer. That drop of blood, that's calm, proclaims me bastard. King. What is the cause, Laertes, That thy rebellion looks so giant-like?— Let him go, Gertrude; do not fear our person; There's such divinity doth hide a king, That treason can but peep to what it would, Acts little of his will. — Tell me, Laertes, Why thou art thus incens'd;— Let him go, Gertrude;— Speak, man. Laer. Where is my father? King. Dead. Queen. But not by him. King. Let him demand his fill. Laer. How came he dead? I'll not be jugged with:
To hell, allegiance! To this point I stand,— That both the worlds I give to negligence, Let come what comes; only I'll be reveng'd Most thoroughly for my father. King. Who shall stay you? Laer. My will; not all the world's: And, for my means, I'll husband them so well, They shall go far with little. King. Good Laertes. If you desire to know the certainty, Of your dear father's death, is't writ in your revenge, That, sweepstake, you will draw both friend and foe, Winner and loser? Laer. None but his enemies. King. Will you know them then? Laer. To his good friends thus wide I'll ope my arms; And, like the kind life-rend'ring pelican, Repast them with my blood. King. Why, now you speak Like a good child and a true gentleman. That I am guiltless of your father's death, And am most sensibly in grief for it, It shall as level to your judgment 'pear, As day does to your eye. Danes. [Within.] Let her come in. Laer. How now! what noise is that? Enter Ophelia, fantastically dressed with Straws and Flowers. O heat, dry up my brains! tears seven times salt, Burn out the sense and virtue of mine eye!— By heaven, thy madness shall be paid with weight, Till our scale turn the beam. O rose of May! Dear maid, kind sister, sweet Ophelia! O heavens! is't possible, a young maid's wits Should be as mortal as an old man's life? Nature is fine # in love; and, where 'tis fine, It sends some precious instance of itself After the thing it loves. Oph. They bore him barefaced on the bier; Hey no nonny, nonny hey nonny: And in his grave rain'd many a tear;— Fare you well, my dove! Laer. Hadst thou thy wits, and didst persuade revenge, It could not move thus. # Artful. Oph. You must sing, Down-a-down, an you call him a-down-a. O, how the wheel b becomes it! It is the false steward, that stole his master's daughter. Laer. This nothing's more than matter. Oph. There's rosemary, that's for remembrance; pray you, love, remember; and there is pansies, that's for thoughts. Laer. A document in madness; thoughts and remembrance fitted. Oph. There's a fennel for you, and columbines:— there's rue for you; and here's some for me:— we may call it, herb of grace o' Sundays:— you may wear your rue with a difference.1— There's a daisy :— I would give you some violets; but they withered all, when my father died:— They say, he made a good end,——

For bonny sweet Robin is all my joy,—— [Sings. Laer. Thought and affliction, passion, hell itself, She turns to favour, and to prettiness. Oph. And will he not come again? [Sings. And will he not come again? No, no, he is dead, Go to thy death-bed, He never will come again. His beard was as white as snow, All fazed was his poll: He is gone, he is gone, And we cast away moan; Gramercy on his soul! And of all Christian souls! Adieu. [Exit Ophelia. Laer. Do you see this, O God? King. Laertes, I must commune with your grief, Or you deny me right. Go but apart. Make choice of whom your wisest friends you will, And they shall hear and judge 'twixt you and me: If by direct or by collateral hand They find us touch'd, we will our kingdom give, Our crown, our life, and all that we call ours, To you in satisfaction; but, if not, Be you content to lend your patience to us, And we shall jointly labour with your soul To give it due content. Laer. Let this be so; His means of death, his obscure funeral,— No trophie, sword, nor hatchment, o'er his bones, No noble rite, nor formal ostentation,— Cry to be heard, as 'twere from heaven to earth, That I must call in question. King. So you shall, And where the offence is, let the great axe fall, I pray you, go with me. [Exeunt. SCENE VI. — Another Room in the same. Enter Horatio, and a Servant. Hor. What are they, that would speak with me? Serv. Sailors, sir; They say, they have letters for you. Hor. Let them come in:— [Exit Servant. I do not know from what part of the world I should be greeted, if not from lord Hamlet. 9 The burthen. 1 i. e. By its Sunday name, "herb of grace," mine is merely rue, i. e. sorrow.
PRINCE OF DENMARK.

SCENE VII. — Another Room in the same.

Enter King and Laertes.

King. Now must your conscience my acquaintance seal,
And you must put me in your heart for friend;
Sith you have heard, and with a knowing ear,
That he, which hath your noble father slain,
Purs'd my life.

Lear. It well appears: — But tell me,
Why you proceeded not against these feats,
So criminal and so capital in nature,
As by your safety, greatness, wisdom, all things else,
You mainly were stirr'd up.

King. O, for two special reasons:
Which may to you, perhaps, seem much unmiss'd,
But yet to me they are strong. The queen his mother,
Lives almost by his looks; and for myself,
(‘My virtue, or my plague, be it either which,) She is so conjunctive to my life and soul,
That, as the star moves not but in his sphere,
I could not but by her. The other motive,
Why to a public count I might not go,
Is, the great love the general gender 2 bear him;
Who, dipping all his faults in their affection,
Work like the spring that turneth wood to stone,
Convert his gyves 3 to graces; so that my arrows,
Too slightly timber'd for so loud a wind,
Would have reverted to my bow again,
And not where I had aim'd them.

Lear. And so have I a noble father lost;
A sister driven into desperate terms;
Whose worth, if praises may go back again,
Stood challenger on mount of all the age
For her perfections: — But my revenge will come.

King. Break not your sleeps for that; you must not think,
That we are made of stuff so flat and dull,
That we can let our beard be shok with danger,
And think it pastime. You shortly shall hear more:
I loved your father, and we love ourself;
And that, I hope, will teach you to imagine,—
How now? what news?

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Letters, my lord, from Hamlet:
This to your majesty; this to the queen.

King. From Hamlet? who brought them?

Mess. Sailors, my lord, they say: I saw them not;
They were given me by Claudio, he receiv'd them
Of him that brought them.

King. Laertes, you shall hear them: —

Leave us. [Exit Messenger.

[Reads.] High and mighty, you shall know, I am not naked on your kingdom. To-morrow, shall I big leave to see your kingly eyes; when I shall, first asking your pardon thereunto, recount the occasion of my sudden and more strange return.

Hamlet. What should this mean! Are all the rest come back?
Or is it some abuse, and no such thing?

Lear. Know you the hand?

King. 'Tis Hamlet's character. Naked, —
And, in a postscript here, he says, alone:
Can you advise me?

Lear. I am lost in it, my lord. But let him come;
It warms the very sickness in my heart,
That I shall live and tell him to his teeth,
Thus diddest thou.

King. If it be so, Laertes,
As how should it be so? how otherwise? —

Will you be rul'd by me?

Lear. Ay, my lord;
So you will not o'er-rule me to a peace.

King. To this our own peace. If he be now return'd, —

As checking 4 at his voyage, and that he means
No more to undertake it, — I will work him
To an exploit, now ripe in my device,
Under which the shall not choose but fall:
And for his death no wind of blame shall breathe;
But even his mother shall uncharge the practice,
And call it, accident.

Lear. My lord, I will be rul'd;
The rather, if you could advise it so,
That I might be the organ.

King. It falls right.
You have been talk'd of since your travel much,
And that in Hamlet's hearing, for a quality,
Wherein, they say, you shine: your sum of parts
Did not together pluck such envy from him,
As did that one; and that, in my regard,
Of the unworthiest siege. 5

Lear. What part is that, my lord?

King. A very riband in the cap of youth,
Yet needful too; for youth no less becomes
The light and careless livery that it wears,
Than settled age his sables, and his weeds,
Importing health and graveness. — Two months since,
Here was a gentleman of Normandy; —
I have seen myself, and serv'd against, the French,
And they can well on horseback; but this gallant
Had witchcraft in' t; he grew unto his seat;

3 Common people. 4 Objecting to.
5 Seat, place.
And to such wond'rous doing brought his horse,
As 'he had been incorp's'd and demi-natur'd
With the brave beast: so far he topp'd my thought,
That I, in forgery of shapes and tricks,
Come short of what he did.

Lear. A Norman, wasn't?
King. A Norman.
Lear. Upon my life, Lamord.
King. The very same.
Lear. I know him well: he is the brooch 6 indeed,
And gem of all the nation.
King. He made confusion of you;
And gave you such a masterly report,
For art and exercise in your defence,
And for your rapier most especial,
That he cried out, 'twould be a sight indeed,
If one could match you: the scrimmers of their nation,
He swore, had neither motion, guard, nor eye,
If you oppos'd them: Sir, this report of his
Did Hamlet so envenom with his envy,
That he could nothing do, but wish and beg
Your sudden coming o'er, to play with you.
Now, out of this, —

Lear. What out of this, my lord?
King. Laertes, was your father dear to you?
Or are you like the painting of a sorrow,
A face without a heart?
Lear. Why ask you this?
King. Not that I think, you did not love your father;
But that I know, love is begun by time;
And that I see, in passages of proof 9,
Time qualifies the spark and fire of it.
There lives within the very flame of love
A kind of wick, or snuff, that will abate it;
And nothing is at a like goodness still;
For goodness, growing to a pleurisy,
Dies in his own too-much: That we would do,
We should do when we would; for this would changes,
And hath abatements and delays as many,
As there are tongues, are hands, are accidents;
And then this should is like a spendthrift sighs,
That hurts by easing. But, to the quick o' the ulcer:
Hamlet comes back; What would you undertake,
To show yourself in deed your father's son
More than in words?

Lear. To cut his throat i' the church.
King. No place, indeed, should murder sanctuarize;
Revenge should have no bounds. But, good Laertes,
Will you do this, keep close within your chamber?
Hamlet, return'd, shall know you are come home:
We'll put on those shall praise your excellence,
And set a double varnish on the fame
The Frenchman gave you; bring you, in fine, togetherness,
And wager o'er your heads: he, being remiss,
Most generous, and free from all contriving,
Will not peruse the foils; so that, with ease,
Or with a little shuffling, you may choose
A sword unbated 9, and, in a pass of practice,
Require him for your father.

6 Ornament.
7 Fencers.
8 Daily experience.
9 Not blunted as foils are.

Lear. I will do't;
And, for the purpose, I'll anoint my sword.
I bought an uncion of a mountebank,
So mortal, that but dip a knife in it,
Where it draws blood no cataplasm so rare,
Collected from all simples that have virtue
Under the moon, can save the thing from death,
That is but scratch'd withal: I'll touch my point
With this contagion; that, if I call him slightly,
It may be death.
King. Let's further think of this;
Weigh, what convenience, both of time and means,
May fit us to our shape: if this should fail,
And that our drift look through our bad performance,
'Twere better not essay'd: therefore this project
Should have a back, or second, that might hold,
If this should blast in proof;
Soft; — let me see:
We'll make a solemn wager on your workings 9, —
I ha't:
When in your motion you are hot and dry,
(As make your bouts more violent to that end),
And that he calls for drink, I'll have preferr'd him
A chalice for the nonce;
whereon but sipping,
If he by chance escape your venom'd stuck 4,
Our purpose may hold there. But stay, what noise?

Enter Queen.

How now, sweet queen?
Queen. One woe doth tread upon another's heel,
So fast they follow: — Your sister's drown'd, Laertes.
Lear. Drown'd! O, where?
Queen. There is a willow grows asant near the brook,
That shows his hoar leaves in the glassy stream;
There with fantastick garlands did she make
Of crow-flowers, nettles, daisies, and long purples,
And on the pendent boughs her coronet weeds
Clambering to hang, an envious sliver broke;
When down her weedy trophies, and herself,
Fell in the weeping brook. Her clothes spread wide;
And, mermaid-like, awhile they bore her up:
Which time she chanted snatches of old tunes;
As one incapable of her own distress,
Or like a creature native and indu'd
Unto that element: but long it could not be,
Till that her garments, heavy with their drink,
Pull'd the poor wretch from her melodious lay
To muddy death.

Lear. Alas, then, she is drown'd?
Queen. Drown'd, drown'd.
Lear. Too much of water hath thou, poor Ophelia,
And therefore I forbid my tears: But yet
It is our trick; nature her custom holds,
Let shame say what it will: when these are gone,
The woman will be out. — Adieu, my lord!
I have a speech of fire, that fain would blaze,
But that this folly drowns it.

[Exit.]
King. Let's follow, Gertrude:
How much I had to do to calm his rage!
Now fear I, this will give it start again;
Therefore, let's follow.

[Exeunt.
ACT V.

SCENE I. — A Church Yard.

Enter two Clowns, with Spades, &c.

1 Clo. Is she to be buried in Christian burial, that wilfully seeks her own salvation?

2 Clo. I tell thee, she is; therefore make her grave straight: the crowner hath set on her, and finds it Christian burial.

1 Clo. How can that be, unless she drowned herself in her own defence?

2 Clo. Why, 'tis found so.

1 Clo. It must be se offentendo; it cannot be else. For here lies the point: If I drown myself willingly, it argues an act: and an act hath three branches; it is, to act, to do, and to perform: Argal, she drowned herself willingly.

2 Clo. Nay, but hear you, goodman deliver.

1 Clo. Give me water. Here lies the good: here stands the man; good: If the man go to this water, and drown himself, it is, will he, nill he, he goes; mark you that: but if the water come to him, and drown him, he drownes not himself: Argal, he, that is not guilty of his own death, shortens not his own life.

2 Clo. But is this law?

1 Clo. Ay, marry is't; crowner's quest law.

2 Clo. Will you ha' the truth on't? If this had not been a gentlewoman, she should have been buried out of Christian burial.

1 Clo. Why, there thou say'st: And the more pity; that great folks shall have countenance in this world to drown or hang themselves, more than their even Christian. Come, my spade. There is no ancient gentlemen but gardeners, ditches, and grave-makers; they hold up Adam's profession.

2 Clo. Was he a gentleman?

1 Clo. He was the first that ever bore arms.

2 Clo. Why, he had none.

1 Clo. What, art a heathen? How dost thou understand the Scripture? The Scripture says, Adam digged: Could he dig without arms? I'll put another question to thee: if thou answerest me not to the purpose, confess thyself —

2 Clo. Go to.

1 Clo. What is he, that builds stronger than either the mason, the shipwright, or the carpenter?

2 Clo. The gallows-maker; for that frame outlives a thousand tenants.

1 Clo. I like thy wit well, in good faith; the gallows does well; but how does it well? it does well to those that do ill: now thou dost ill, to say, the gallows is built stronger than the church; argal, the gallows may do well to thee. To't again; come.

2 Clo. Who builds stronger than a mason, a shipwright, or a carpenter?

1 Clo. Ay, tell me that, and unyoke. 6

2 Clo. Marry, now I can tell.

1 Clo. To't.

Enter HAMLET and HORATIO, at a distance.

1 Clo. Cudgel thy brains no more about it; for your dull ass will not mend his pace with beating: and, when you are asked this question next, say, a grave-maker; the houses that he makes, last till doomsday. Go, get thee to Vaugham and fetch me a stoup of liquor. [Exit 2 Clown.

1 Clown digs, and sings.

In youth, when I did love, did love?

Methought, it was very sweet,

To contract, 0, the time, for, ah, my behave

0, methought, there was nothing meet.

Ham. Has this fellow no feeling of his business? he sings at grave-making.

Hor. Custom hath made it in him a property of easiness.

Ham. 'Tis e'en so; the hand of little employment hath the daintier sense.

1 Clo. But age, with his stealing steps,

Hath clove'd me in his clutch,

And hath shipped me into the land,

As if I had never been such.

[Throws up a Skull.

Ham. That skull had a tongue in it, and could sing once: How the knave jouls it to the ground, as if it were Caius's jaw-bone, that did the first murder! This might be the pate of a politician, which this ass now o'er-reaches; one that would circumvent any body, might it not?

Hor. It might, my lord.

Ham. Or of a courtier; which could say, Good morrow, sweet lord! How dost thou, good lord? This might be my lord Such-a-one, that praised my lord Such-a-one's horse, when he meant to beg it; might it not?

Hor. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Why, 'e'en so: and now my lady Worm's; chapless, and knocked about the mazzard with a sexton's spade: Here's fine revolution, an we had the trick to see't. Did these bones cost no more the breeding, but to play at lottags! with them? mine ache to think on't.

1 Clo. A pick-axe, and a spade, a spade, [Sings,

For — and a shrouding sheet:

O, a pit of clay for to be made

For such a guest is meet.

[Throws up a Skull.

Ham. There's another: Why may not that be the skull of a lawyer? Where be his quiddits now, his quilllets, his cases, his tenures, and his tricks? why does he suffer this rude knave now to knock him about the scence with a dirty shovell, and will not tell him of his action of battery? Humph! This fellow might be in's time a great buyer of land, with his statutes, his recognizances, his fines, his double vouchers, his recoveries: Is this the fine of his fines, and the recovery of his recoveries, to have his fine pate full of fine dirt? will his vouchers vouch

9 The song entire is printed in Percy's Reliques of ancient English Poetry, vol. i. it was written by Lord Vaux.

1 An ancient game played as quotis are at present.

2 Subtilities

3 Frivolous distinctions.
Here's a skull now hath lain you i' the earth three and-twenty years.

_Ham._ Whose was it?

_1 Clos._ A mad fellow's it was; Whose do you think it was?

_Ham._ Nay, I know not.

_1 Clos._ A pestilence on him for a mad rogue! he poured a flagon of Rhenish on my head once. This same skull, sir, was Yorick's skull, the king's jester.

_Ham._ This?

[Aside.]

_Ham._ Alas! poor Yorick!—I knew him, Horatio; a fellow of infinite jest, of most excellent fancy: he hath borne me on his back a thousand times; and now how abhorred in my imagination it is! my gorge rises at it. Here hung those lips, that I have kissed I know not how oft. Where be your gibes now? your gambols? your songs? your flashes of merriment, that were wont to set the table on a roar?
not one now, to mock your own grinning? quite chap-fallen? Now get you to my lady's chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thick, to this favour 2 she must come: make her laugh at that.

_Pr'ythee, Horatio, tell me one thing._

_Hor._ What's that, my lord?

_Ham._ Dost thou think, Alexander looked o' this fashion i' the earth?

_Hor._ E'en so.

_Ham._ And smelt so? pah!

[Throws down the Skull.]

_Hor._ E'en so, my lord.

_Ham._ To what base uses we may return, Horatio!
Why may not imagination trace the noble dust of Alexander, till he find it stopping a bung-hole?

_Hor._ Twere to consider too curiously, to consider so.

_Ham._ No, faith, not a jot: but to follow him thither with modesty enough, and likelihood to lead
it: As thus; Alexander died, Alexander was buried, Alexander returneth to dust: the dust is earth; of earth we make loan: And why of that loan, where-to he was converted, might they not stop a beer-barrel?

Imperious 3 Cesar, dead, and turn'd to clay,
Might stop a hole to keep the wind away:
O, that the earth, which kept the world in awe,
Should patch a wall to expel the winter's flaw! 8
But soft! but soft! aside:—Here comes the king.

_Enter Priests, &c. in Procession; the Corpse of Ophelia, Laertes, and Mourners following;_

_King, Queen, their Trains, &c._

The queen, the courtiers: Who is this they follow?
And with such maimed rites! This doth betoken,
The corse, they follow, did with desperate hand
Fordo 9 its own life. 'Twas of some estate:
Couch we a while, and mark.

[Retiring with_Horatio._]

_Laer._ What ceremony else?

_Ham._ That is Laertes,
A very noble youth: Mark.

_Laer._ What ceremony else?

1 _Priest._ Her obsequies have been as far enlarg'd
As we have warranty: Her death was doubtful;
And, but that great command o'ersways the order,
She should in ground unsanctified have lodg'd
Till the last trumpet; for charitable prayers, Sharps, 6 flints, and pebbles, should be thrown on
her,

6 Countenance, complexion.
7 Imperial.
8 Softly.
9 Undo, destroy.
Scene I. PRINCE OF DENMARK.

Yet here she is allow'd her virgin crants; her maiden strewnets, and the bringing home of bell and burial.
Laer. Must there no more be done? 1 Priest. No more be done! We should profane the service of the dead, To sing a requiem, and such rest to her As to peace-parted souls.
Laer. Lay her i' the earth; — And from her fair and unpolluted flesh, May violets spring! — I tell thee, churlish priest, A ministring angel shall my sister be, When thou liest howling.
Ham. What, the fair Ophelia! [Scattering Flowers. I hop'd, thou shouldst have been my Hamlet's wife; I thought, thy bride-bed to have deck'd, sweet maid, And not have strew'd thy grave.
Laer. O treble woe Fall ten times treble on that cursed head, Whose wicked deed thy most ingenious sense Depriv'd thee of! — Hold off the earth a while, Till I have caught her once more in mine arms:
[Leaps into the Grave.
Now pile thy dust upon the quick and dead; Till of this flat a mountain you have made
To o'ertop old Pelion, or the skysky head Of blue Olympus.
Ham. [Advancing.] What is he, whose grief Bears such an emphasis? whose phrase of sorrow Conjures the wand'ring stars, and makes them stand Like wonder-wounded hearers? this is I, Hamlet the Dane. [Leaps into the Grave. Laer. The devil take thy soul! [Grappling with him.
Ham. Thou pray'st not well.
I pray thee, take thy fingers from my throat; For, though I am not splenetic and rash, Yet have I in me something dangerous, Which let thy wisdom fear: hold off thy hand. King. Pluck them asunder.
Queen. Hamlet, Hamlet! All. Gentlemen, — Good my lord, be quiet. [The Attendants part them, and they come out of the Grave.
Ham. Why, I will fight with him upon this theme, Until my eyelids will no longer wag.
Queen. O my son! what theme?
Ham. I lov'd Ophelia: forty thousand brothers Could not, with all their quantity of love, Make up my sum. — What wilt thou do for her?
King. O, he is mad, Laertes.
Queen. For love of God, forbear him.
Ham. Show me what thou'lt do: Wouldst work? woult' fight? woulst fast? woulst tear thyself? Wouldst drink up Esil? 5 eat a crocodile? I'll do't. — Dost thou come here to whine? To outface me with leaping in her grave? Be buried quick with her, and so will I: And, if thou prate of mountains, let them throw Millions of acres on us; till our ground, Singeing his pate against the burning zone, Make Ossa like a wart? Nay, an thou'lt mouth, I' ll rant as well as thou.

Queen. This is mere madness; And thus a while the fit will work on him; Anon, as patient as the female dove, When that her golden couples are disclos'd, His silence will sit drooping.
Ham. Hear you, sir, What is the reason that you use me thus? I lov'd you ever: But it is no matter; Let Hercules himself do what he may, The cat will mew, and dog will have his day. [Exit. King. I pray thee, good Horatio, wait upon him. —
[Exit Horatio.
Strengthen your patience in our last night's speech; We'll put the matter to the present push. — Good Gertrude, set some watch over your son. — This grave shall have a living monument: An hour of quiet shortly shall we see; Till then, in patience our proceeding be. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. — A Hall in the Castle.
Enter Hamlet and Horatio.
Ham. So much for this, sir: now, shall you see the other; — You do remember all the circumstance?
Hor. Remember it, my lord! Ham. Sir, in my heart there was a kind of fighting, The would not let me sleep: methought, I lay Worse than the mutines in the bilboes. 8 Rashly, And prai'd be rashness for it, — Let us know, Our indiscretion sometimes serves us well, When our deep plots do pall; 9 and that should teach us, There's a divinity that shapes our ends, Rough-hew them how we will.
Hor. That is most certain.
Ham. Up from my cabin, My sea-gown scarf'd about me, in the dark Grop'd I to find out them: had my desire; Finger'd their packet: and, in fine, withdrew To mine own room again: making so bold, My fears forgetting manners, 10 to unsel Their grand commission; where I found, Horatio A royal knavery; an exact command, — Larded with many several sorts of reasons, Importing Denmark's health, and England's too, With, ho! such bags and goblins in my life, That, on the supervise, no leisure bated, No, not to stay the grinding of the axe, My head should be struck off.
Hor. Is't possible?
Ham. Here's the commission; read it at more leisure. But wilt thou hear now how I did proceed? Hor. Ay, beseech you.
Ham. Being thus benetted round with villanies, Or I could make a prologue to my brains, They had begun the play; — I sat me down; Devis'd a new commission; wrote it fair: I once did hold it, as our statists do, A baseness to write fair, and labour'd much How to forget that learning; but, sir, now It did me yeoman's service: Wilt thou know The effect of what I wrote?
Hor. Ay, good my lord.
Ham. An earnest conjunction from the king, — As England was his faithful tributary; 6 Hatched 7 Mutineers.

Footnotes:
5 Garland. 2 A mass for the dead. 4 Living. 6 Fetters and handcuffs brought from Bilboa in Spain. 7 Hatched 8 Mutineers.
6 Fetters and handcuffs brought from Bilboa in Spain. 9 Fall. 1 Bugbears. Before. Statesmen.
As love between them like the palm might flourish;
As peace should still her wheaten garland wear,
And stand a comma 4 'tween their amities;
And many such like as's of great charge,—
That, on the view and knowing of these contents,
Without debatement further, more, or less,
He should the bearers put to sudden death,
Not shrieve 5 time allowed.

Hor. How was this seal'd?

Ham. Why, even in that was heaven ordain'd;
I had my father's signet in my purse,
Which was the model of that Danish seal:
Folded the writ up in form of the other;
Subscribe'd it; gave't the impression; plac'd it safely,
The changeling never known: Now the next day
Was our sea-fight; and what to this was sequent
Thou know'st already.

Hor. So Guildenstern and Rosencrantz go to't.

Ham. Why man, they did make love to this employment;
They are not near my conscience; their defeat
Does by their own insinuation grow:
'Tis dangerous, when the baser nature comes
Between the pass and fell incensed points
Of mighty opposites.

Hor. Why, what a king is this!

Ham. Does it not, think thee, stand me now upon?
He that hath kill'd my king, seduce my mother;
Popp'd in between the election and my hopes;
Thrown out his angle for my proper life,
And with such cozenage; is't not perfect conscience,
To quit him with this arm? and not to let
This canker of our very nature come
In further evil?

Hor. It must be shortly known to him from England,
What is the issue of the business there.

Ham. It will be short: the interim is mine;
And a man's life no more than to say, one.
But I am very sorry, good Horatio,
That to Laertes I forgot myself;
For by the image of my cause, I see
The portraiture of his: 'Twill count 9 his favours:
But, sure, the bravery of his grief did put me
Into a towering passion.

Hor. Peace; who comes here?

Enter OSRIC.

Osr. Your lordship is right welcome back to

Denmark.

Ham. I humbly thank you, sir. — Dost know this waterfily?

Hor. No, my good lord.

Ham. Thy state is the more gracious; for 'tis a vice to know him: He hath much land, and fertile;
let a beast be lord of beasts, and his crib stand at the king's mess: 'Tis arough? but, as I say, spacious in the possession of dirt.

Osr. Sweet lord, if your lordship were at leisure,
I should impart a thing to you from his majesty.

Ham. I will receive it, with all diligence of spirit: Your bonnet to his right use; 'tis for the head.

Osr. I thank your lordship, 'tis very hot.

Ham. No, believe me, 'tis very cold; the wind is northerly.

Osr. It is indifferent cold, my lord, indeed.

Ham. But yet, methinks it is very sultry and hot; or my complexion ——

Osr. Exceedingly, my lord: it is very sultry — as 'twere, — I cannot tell how. — My lord, his majesty bade me signify to you, that he has laid a great wager on your head: Sir, this is the matter, —

Ham. I beseech you, remember ——

Ham. Nay, good my lord; for my ease, in good faith. 8 Sir, here is newly come to court, Laertes: believe me, an absolute gentleman, full of most excellent differences 9, of very soft society, and great showing: Indeed, to speak feelingly of him, he is the card 1 or calendar of gentry, for you shall find in him the continent 2 of what part a gentleman would see.

Ham. Sir, his definition suffers no perturbation in you; — though, I know, to divide him inventorially, would dizzy the arithmetick of memory; and yet but raw neither, in respect of his quick sail. But, in the verity of extolment, I take him to be a soul of great article; and his infusion of such dearth and rareness, as, to make true diction of him, his semblable is his mirrour; and, who else would trace him, his umbrage, nothing more. 9

Osr. Your lordship speaks most infallibly of him.

Ham. The concernancy, sir? why do we wrap the gentleman in our more rawer breath?

Osr. Sir?

Hor. Is't not possible to understand in another tongue? You will do't, sir, really.

Ham. What imports the nomination of this gentleman?

Osr. Of Laertes?

Ham. His purse is empty already; all his golden words are spent.

Ham. Of him, sir.

Osr. I know, you are not ignorant ——

Ham. I would, you did, sir; yet, in faith, if you did, it would not much approve 4 me; — Well, sir.

Osr. You are not ignorant of what excellence Laertes is ——

Ham. I dare not confess that, lest I should compare with him in excellence; but, to know a man well, were to know himself.

Osr. I mean, sir, for his weapon; but in the imputation laid on him by them, in his need 5 he's unfollowed.

Ham. What's his weapon?

Osr. Rapier and dagger.

Ham. That's two of his weapons: but, well.
Osr. The king, sir, hath wagered with him six Barbary horses: against the which he has impawned 6, as I take it, six French rapiers and poniards, with their assigns, as girdle, hangers, 7, and so; Three of the carriages, in faith, are very dear to fancy, very responsive to the hils, most delicate carriages, and of very liberal conceit.

Ham. What call you the carriages?

Hor. I knew you must be edified by the mar-gent 8, ere you had done.

Osr. The carriages, sir, are the hangers.

Ham. The phrase would be more german 9 to the matter, if we could carry a cannon by our sides; I would, it might be hangers still then. But, on: Six Barbary horses against six French swords, their assigns, and three liberal concocted carcasses; that's the French bet against the Danish: Why, is this impawndown, as you call it?

PRINCE OF DENMARK.

Osr. The king, sir, hath laid, that in a dozen passes between yourself and him, he shall not exceed you three hits; he hath laid, on twelve for nine; and it would come to immediate trial, if your lordship would vouchsafe the answer.

Ham. How, if I answer, no?

Osr. I mean, my lord, the opposition of your person in trial.

Ham. Sir, I will walk here in the hall: If it please his majesty, it is the breathing-time of day with me: let the foils be brought, the gentleman willing, and the king hold his purpose, I will win for him, if I can; if not, I will gain nothing but my shame, and the odd hits.

Osr. Shall I deliver you so?

Ham. To this effect, sir; after what flourish your nature will.

Osr. I commend my duty to your lordship. [Exit Ham. Yours, yours. — He does well to commend it himself; there are no tongues else for 's turn.

Hor. This lapwing runs away with the shell on his compulsion.

Ham. He did comply with his dugs, before he sucked it. Thus has he (and many more of the same breed, that I know, the drossy age dotes on,) only got the tune of the time, and outward habit of encounter; a kind of yesty collection, which carries them through and through the most fond and winnowed opinions; and do but blow them to their trial, the bubbles are out.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. My lord, his majesty commended him to you by young Osric, who brings back to him, that you attend him in the hall: He sends to know, if your pleasure hold to play with Laertes, or that you will take longer time.

Ham. I am constant to my purposes, they follow the king's pleasure: if his fitness speaks, mine is ready; now, or whatsoever, provided I be so able as now.

Lord. The king, and queen, and all are coming down.

Ham. In happy time.

Lord. The queen desires you, to use some gentle entertainment to Laertes, before you fall to play.

Ham. She well instructs me. [Exit Lord. Hor. You will lose this wager, my lord.

Ham. I do not think so; since he went into France, I have been in continual practice; I shall win at the odds. But thou wouldst not think, how ill all's here about my heart: but it is no matter.

Hor. Nay, good my lord, —

Ham. It is but foolery; but it is such a kind of gain-giving, as would, perhaps, trouble a woman.

Hor. If your mind dislike any thing, obey it: I will forestall their repair hither, and say, you are not fit.

Ham. Not a whit, we defy augury; there is a special providence in the fall of a sparrow. If it be now, 'tis not to come; if it be not to come, it will be now; if it be not now, yet it will come: the readiness is all: Since no man, of aught he leaves, knows, what is't to leave betimes? Let be.

Enter King, Queen, Laertes, Lords, Osric, and Attendants, with Foils, &c.

King. Come, Hamlet, come, and take this hand from me. [The King puts the Hand of Laertes into that of Hamlet.

Ham. Give me your pardon, sir: I have done you wrong;

But pardon it, as you are a gentleman.

This presence knows, and you must needs have heard, how I am punish'd with a sore distraction.

What I have done, That might your nature, honour, and exception. Roughly awake, I here proclaim was madness.

Was't Hamlet wronged Laertes? Never, Hamlet: If Hamlet from himself, be ta'en away, And, when he's not himself, does wrong Laertes, Then Hamlet does it not, Hamlet denies it. Who does it then? His madness: If 't be so, Hamlet is of the faction that is wrong'd; His madness is poor Hamlet's enemy.

Sir, in this audience, Let my disclaiming from a purpos'd evil Free me so far in your most generous thoughts, That I have shot my arrow o'er the house, And hurt my brother.

Laer. I am satisfied in nature, Whose motive, in this case, should stir me most To my revenge: but in my terms of honour, I stand aloof; and will no reconcilement, Till by some elder masters of known honour, I have a voice and precedent of peace, To keep my name ungord': But till that time, I do receive your offer'd love like love, And will not wrong it.

Ham. I embrace it freely; And will this brother's wager frankly play. —

Give us the foils; come on.

Laer. Come, one for me.

Ham. I'll be your foil, Laertes; in mine ignorance Your skill shall, like a star i' the darkest night, Stick fiery off indeed.

Laer. You mock me, sir.

Ham. No, by this hand.

King. Give them the foils, young Osric. — Cousin Hamlet, You know the wager?

Ham. Very well, my lord; Your grace hath laid the odds o' the weaker side.

King. I do not fear it: — I have seen you both: But since he's better'd, we have therefore odds.

Laer. This is too heavy, let me see another.

Ham. This likes me well: These foils have all a length? [They prepare to play.

Osr. Ay, my good lord.

King. Set me the stoups of wine upon that table: —

If Hamlet give the first or second hit, Or quit in answer of the third exchange, Let all the battlements their ordnance fire, The king shall drink to Hamlet's better breath; And in the cup an union shall be throw,

The king and queen's presence. Unwounded. Large jugs. A precious pearl.

1 A bird which runs about immediately it is hatched. 2 Compliment. 3 Wordless. 4 For joint read joint'd. 5 Misgiving.
HAMLET,

Act V.

Richer than that which four successive kings
In Denmark's crown have worn; Give me the cups;
And let the kettle to the trumpet speak,
The trumpet to the cannoner without,
The cannons to the heavens, the heaven to earth,

Now the King drinks to Hamlet. — Come, begin; —
And you, the judges, bear a wary ear.

Ham. Come on, sir.
Lae. Come, my lord. [They play. One.
Ham. No.
Lae. Judgment.
Osr. A hit, a very palpable hit.
Ham. Stay, give me drink: Hamlet, this pearl is thine;
Here's to thy health. — Give him the cup.
[Trumpets sound; and Cannon shot off within.
Ham. I'll play this bout first, set it by a while.
Come. — Another hit; What say you? [They play.
Lae. A touch, a touch, I do confess.
King. Our son shall win.
Osr. He's fat, and scant of breath.

Here, Hamlet, take my napkin, rub thy brows:
The queen carouses to thy fortune, Hamlet.

Ham. Good madam,—

King. Gertrude, do not drink.
Osr. I will, my lord; — I pray you, pardon me.
King. It is the poison'd cup; it is too late. [Aside.
Ham. I dare not drink yet, madam; by and by.
Osr. Come, let me wipe thy face.
Lae. My lord, I'll hit him now.
King. I do not think it.
Lae. And yet it is almost against my conscience.

Ham. Come, for the third, Laertes: You do but daily;
I pray you, pass with your best violence;
I am afeard, you make a wanton of me.
Lae. Say you so? come on. [They play.
Osr. Nothing neither way.
Lae. Have at you now.
[Laertes wounds Hamlet; then, in scuffleing, they change Rapiers, and Hamlet wounds Laertes.

King. Part them, they are incens'd.
Ham. Nay, come again. [The Queen falls.
Osr. Look to the queen there, ho!
Hor. They bleed on both sides: — How is it, my lord?
Osr. How is't, Laertes?
Lae. Why, as a woodcock to my own springe, Osr.
I am justly kill'd with mine own treachery.

Ham. How does the queen?
King. She swoons to see them bleed.
Osr. No, no, the drink, the drink,—O my dear Hamlet!
The drink, the drink; — I am poison'd! [Dies.
Ham. O villainy! — Ho! let the door be lock'd:
Treachery! seek it out. [Laertes falls.
Lae. It is here, Hamlet: Hamlet, thou art slain;
No medicine in the world can do thee good,
In thee there is not half an hour's life;
The treacherous instrument is in thy hand,
Unbated, and envenom'd: the foul practice
Hath turned itself on me; lo, here I lie,
Never to rise again: Thy mother's poison'd;
I can no more; the king, the king's to blame.

Ham. The point
Envenom'd too! — Then, venom, to thy work.

[Stabs the King.
Osr. & Lords. Treason! treason!
King. O, yet defend me, friends, I am but hurt.
Ham. Here thou incestuous, murd'rous, damned Dane,
Drink off this potion: — Is thy union here?
Follow my mother. [King dies.
Lae. He is justly serv'd;
It is a poison temper'd 3 by himself. —
Exchange forgiveness with me, noble Hamlet:
Mine and my father's death come not upon thee;
Nor thine on me! [Dies.
Ham. Heaven make thee free of it! I follow thee.
I am dead, Horatio: — Wretched queen, adieu! —
You that look pale and tremble at this chance,
That are but mutes or audience to this act,
Had I but time, (as this fell sergeant 4 death,
Is strict in his arrest,) O, I could tell you,
But let it be: — Horatio, I am dead;
Thou livest; report me and my cause aright
To the unsatisfied. [Died.

Hor. Never believe it;
I am more an antique Roman than a Dane,
Here's yet some liquor left.

Ham. As thou'rt a man, —
Give me the cup; let go; by heaven I'll have it. —
O good Horatio, what a wounded name,
Things standing thus unknown, shall live behind me?
If thou didst ever hold me in thy heart,
Absent thee from felicity awhile,
And in this harsh world draw thy breath in pain,
To tell my story. —

[March afar off, and Shot within.

What warlike noise is this?
Osr. Young Fortinbras, with conquest come from Poland,
To the ambassadors of England gives
This warlike volley.

Ham. O, I die, Horatio;
The potent poison quite o'er-crows my spirit;
I cannot live to hear the news from England:
But I do prophesy the election lights
On Fortinbras; he has my dying voice;
So tell him, with the occurrences, 5 more or less,
Which have solicited 6 — the rest is silence. [Dies.
Hor. Now cracks a noble heart; — Good night,
sweet prince;
And flights of angels sing thee to thy rest!
Why does the drum come hither? [March within.

Enter Fortinbras, the English Ambassadors, and others.

Fort. Where is this sight?
Hor. What is it you would see?
If aught of woe, or wonder, cease your search.
Fort. This quarry? cries on havock! 8 — O proud
death!
What feast is toward in thine eternal cell,
That thou so many princes, at a shot,
So bloodyhood hast struck?

1 Amb. The sight is dismal;
And our affairs from England come too late:
The ears are senseless, that should give us hearing,

3 Mixed. 4 A sergeant is a sheriff's officer.
5 Occurrences. 6 Incited.
7 Heap of dead game.
8 A word of censure when more game was destroyed than was reasonable.
Scene II. PRINCE OF DENMARK.

To tell him, his commandment is fulfill'd,
That Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are dead:
Where should we have our thanks?

Hor. Not from his mouth,
Had it the ability of life to thank you;
He never gave commandment for their death.
But since, so jump 9 upon this bloody question,
You from the Polack 1 wars, and you from England,
Are here arriv'd; give order, that these bodies
High on a stage be placed to the view;
And let me speak, to the yet unknowing world,
How these things come about: So shall you hear
Of carnal, bloody, and unnatural acts;
Of accidental judgments, casual slaughters;
Of deaths put on by cunning, and forc'd cause;
And in this upshot, purposes mistook
Fall'n on the inventors' heads: all this can I Truly deliver.

Fort. Let us haste to hear it,
And call the noblest to the audience.

9 So exactly at the time. 1 Polish.

For me, with sorrow I embrace my fortune;
I have some rights of memory in this kingdom,
Which now to claim my vantage doth invite me.

Hor. Of that I shall have also cause to speak,
And from his mouth whose voice will draw on
more:
But let this same be presently perform'd,
Even while men's minds are wild; lest more mis-
chance,
On plots and errors, happen.

Fort. Let four captains
Bear Hamlet, like a soldier, to the stage;
For he was likely, had he been put on,
To have prov'd most royally: and, for his passage,
The soldier's musick, and the rites of war,
Speak loudly for him.—
Take up the bodies: — Such a sight as this Becomes the field, but here shows much amiss.
Go, bid the soldiers shoot. [A dead March.

Exeunt, bearing off the dead Bodies; after which, a Peal of Ordnance is shot off.

OTHELLO, THE MOOR OF VENICE.

PREFACE TO OTHELLO.

This tragedy is justly considered as one of the noblest efforts of dramatic genius that has appeared in any age or in any language; but the subject is unfortunately little suited to family reading. The arguments which are urged, and the facts which are adduced as proofs of adultery, are necessarily of such a nature as cannot be expressed in terms of perfect delicacy; yet neither the arguments, nor the facts, can be omitted; for although every reader must "weep

"O'er gentle Desdemona's woes!"

yet I believe there is no person who would wish to aggravate the guilt of Othello, by leaving out any of those circumstances which give an appearance of truth to the suggestions of Iago.

From the multitude of indecent expressions which abound in the speeches of the inferior characters, I have endeavoured to clear the play; but I cannot erase all the bitter terms of reproach and exclamation with which the transports of jealousy and revenge are expressed by the Moor, without altering his character; losing sight of the horror of those passions; and, in fact, destroying the Tragedy. I find myself, therefore, reduced to the alternative of either departing in some degree from the principle on which this publication is undertaken, or materially injuring a most invaluable exertion of the genius of Shakspeare. I have adopted the former part of the alternative, and, in making this decision, I have been much influenced by an opinion which I have long entertained, that this play, in its present form, is calculated to produce an excellent effect on the human mind: by exhibiting a most forcible and impressive warning against the admission of that baneful passion, which, when once admitted, is the inevitable destroyer of conjugal happiness.

1 Scott's Rokeby.

That adultery is a crime which is deservedly placed next to murder, will be allowed, not only by the Christian, but by every being whose mind is not wholly insensible to the most obvious principles of virtue. But in proportion to the enormity of the offence, should be the caution with which the suspicion is permitted to be entertained; for besides the injury which is thus done to the person accused, the jealous accuser will assuredly exclaim with Othello:—

"O now for ever,

Farewell the tranquil mind—fearwell content."

Shakspeare appears to have been particularly desirous of warning mankind against the indulgence of this fatal passion; for, independent of various observations in different parts of his works, he has made it the principal subject of no less than four of his best plays: exerting his matchless powers in painting it with every variety of colouring that was calculated to warn the human mind against its admission. It is laughably ridiculous in Ford; it is justly odious in Leontes; we tremble for its consequences in Posthumus; and we view them in their utmost horror in Othello.

After the foregoing observations, I shall only add, that I have endeavoured to erase the objectionable expressions which so frequently occur in the original text, whenever it could be done consistently with the character and situation of the speaker; but if, after all that I have omitted, it shall still be thought that this inimitable tragedy is not sufficiently correct for family reading, I would advise the transferring of it from the parlour to the cabinet, where the perusal will not only delight the poetic taste, but convey useful and important instruction both to the heart and the understanding of the reader.
ACT I.

SCENE I. — Venice. A Street.

Enter Roderigo and Iago.

Rod. Tush, never tell me, I take it much unkindly,
That thou, Iago, — who hast had my purse,
As if the strings were thine, — shouldst know of this.

Iago. But you will not hear me: —
If ever I did dream of such a matter,
Abhor me.

Rod. Thou toldst me, thou didst hold him in thy hate.

Iago. Despise me, if I do not. Three great ones of the city,
In personal suit to make me his lieutenant,
Oft capp’d 1 to him; — and, by the faith of man,
I know my price, I am worth no worse a place:
But he, as loving his own pride and purposes,
Evades them, with a bombast circumstance, 2
Horribly stuff’d with epithets of war;
And, in conclusion, nonsuits
My mediators; for certes 3 says he,
I have already chose my officer.
And what was he? Forsooth, a great arithmetician,
One Michael Cassio, a Florentine,
That never set a squadron in the field,
Nor the division of a battle knows
More than a spinster; unless the bookish theorick,
Wherein the toged consuls can propose
As masterly as he: mere prattle, without practice,
Is all his soldiery. But he, sir, had the election:
And I, — of whom his eyes had seen the proof,
At Rhodes, at Cyprus; and on other grounds
Christian and heathen, — must be be-lee’d and calmd 4
By debitor and creditor, this counter-caster 5;
He, in good time, must his lieutenant be,
And I, sir, (bless the mark!) his Moorship’s ancient.

Rod. By heaven, I rather would have been his hangman.

Iago. But there’s no remedy, ’tis the curse of service;
Preferment goes by letter, and affection,
Not by the old gradation, where each second
Stood heir to the first. Now, sir, be judge yourself,
Whether I in any just term am affin’d 6
To love the Moor.

Rod. I would not follow him then.

Iago. O, sir, content you;
I follow him to serve my turn upon him:
We cannot all be masters, nor all masters
Cannot be truly follow’d. You shall mark
Many a duteous and knee-crooking knave,
That, doting on his own obsequious bondage,
Wears out his time, much like his master’s ass,
For nought but provender; and, when he’s old,
cashier’d; 7
Whip me such honest knaves: Others there are,
Who, trimm’d in forms and visages of duty,
Keep yet their hearts attending on themselves;

1 Saluted. 2 Circumlocution. 3 Certainly. 4 It was anciently the practice to reckon up sums with counters. 5 Related.

And, throwing but shows of service on their lords,
Do well thrive by them, and when they have lin’d 8 their coats,
Do themselves homage: these fellows have some soul;
And such a one do I profess myself.

For, sir,
It is as sure as you are Roderigo,
Were I the Moor, I would not be Iago:
In following him, I follow but myself;
Heaven is my judge, not I for love and duty,
But seeming so, for my peculiar end:
For when my outward action doth demonstrate
The native act and figure of my heart
In compliment extern, ’tis not long after
But I will wear my heart upon my sleeve
For daws to peck at: I am not what I am.

Rod. What a full fortune does the thick-lips owe, 9
If he can carry’t thus!

Iago. Call up her father,
Rouse him: make after him, poison his delight,
Proclaim him in the streets; incense his kinsmen,
And, though he in a fertile climate dwell,
Plague him with flies: though that his joy be joy,
Yet throw such changes of vexation on’t,
As it may lose some colour.

Rod. Here is her father’s house; I’ll call aloud.

Iago. Do; with like timorous accent, and dire yell,
As when, by night and negligence, the fire
Is spied in populous cities.

Rod. What ho! Brabantio! signior Brabantio, ho!
Iago. Awake! what ho! Brabantio! thieves! thieves!
thieves! thieves!
Look to your house, your daughter, and your bags!
Thieves! thieves!

BRABANTIO, above, at a Window.

Bra. What is the reason of this terrible summons?
What is the matter there?

Rod. Signior, is all your family within?
Iago. Are your doors lock’d?
Bra. Why? wherfore ask you this?
Iago. Sir, you are robb’d; for shame, put on your gown;
Your heart is burst, you have lost half your soul;
Awake the snorting citizens with the bell:
Arise, I say.

Bra. What, have you lost your wits?

Rod. Most reverend signior, do you know my voice.
Bra. Not I: What are you?

Rod. My name is — Roderigo.

Bra. The worst welcome;
I have charg’d thee, not to haunt about my doors:
In honest plainness thou hast heard me say,
My daughter is not for thee; and now, in madness,
Being full of supper, and distempering draughts,
Upon malicious bravery, dost thou come
To start my quiet.

Rod. Sir, sir, sir, sir, —

Bra. But thou must needs be sure,
My spirit, and my place, have in them power
To make this bitter to thee.

Rod. Patience, good sir.

6 Own, possess. 7 3 L
OTHELLO, Act I.

Past thought! — What said she to you? — Get more tapers:
Raise all my kindred. — Are they married, think I was you? —
Rod. Truly, I think, they are.

Bra. O heaven, how got she out! — O treason of the blood! —

Fathers, from hence trust not your daughters' minds
By what you see them act. — Are there not charms,
By which the property of youth and maidhood
May be abus'd? Have you not read, Roderigo,
Of some such thing?

Rod. Yes, sir; I have indeed.

Bra. Call up my brother. — O, that you had had her! —

Some one way, some another. — Do you know
Where we may apprehend her and the Moor?

Rod. I think, I can discover him: if you please
To get good guard, and go along with me.

Bra. Pray you, lead on. At every house I'll call;
I may command at most; — Get weapons, ho!
And raise some special officers of night. —

On, good Roderigo: — I'll deserve your pains.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. — Another Street.

Enter Othello, Iago, and Attendants.

Iago. Though in the trade of war I have slain men,
Yet do I hold it very stuff o' the conscience,
To do no contriv'd murder; I lack iniquity
Sometimes to do me service: Nine or ten times
I had thought to have yerk'd him here under the ribs.

Oth. 'Tis better as it is.

Iago. Nay, but he prated,
And spoke such scurrv and provoking terms
Against your honour,
That, with the little godliness I have,
I did full hard forbear him. But, I pray, sir,
Are you fast married? for, be sure of this, —
That the magnifico 3 is much beloved;
And hath, in his effect, a voice potential
As double as the duke's; he will divorce you;
Or put upon you what restraint and grievance
The law (with all his might, to enforce it on,)
Will give him cable.

Oth. Let him do his spite;
My services, which I have done the signiory,
Shall out-tongue his complaints. 'Tis yet to know,
(Which when I know that boasting is an honour,
I shall promulgate,) I fetch my life and being
From men of royal siege; 4 and my demerits 5
May speak, unbonneted, as proud a fortune
As this that I have reach'd: For know, Iago,
But that I love the gentle Desdemona,
I would not my unhoused free condition
Put into circumscription and confine
For the sea's worth. But, look! what lights come yonder?

Enter Cassio, at a distance, and certain Officers with Torches.

Iago. These are the raised father, and his friends:
You were best go in.

Oth. Not 1: I must be found;

1 A lone farm-house. 2 Midnight. 3 Approbation.
Wandering. 4 Old age. 5 Brabantio, magnifico is his title as a senator.
6 Seat or throne. 7 Demerits has the same meaning in Shakespear as merits.
SCENE II.

THE MOOR OF VENICE.

My parts, my title, and my perfect soul,
Shall manifest me rightly. Is it they?
Iago. By Janus, I think no.

Oth. The servants of the duke, and my lieutenant.
The goodliness of the night upon you, friends!
What is the news?

Cas. The duke does greet you, general;
And he requires your haste, post-haste appearance,
Even on the instant.

Oth. What is the matter, think you?

Cas. Something from Cyprus, as I may divine;
It is a business of some heat: the gallies
Have sent a dozen sequent messengers
This very night at one another's heels;
And many of the consuls, rais'd, and met,
Are at the duke's already: You have been hotly call'd for;
When, being not at your lodging to be found,
The senate hath sent about three several quests,
To search you out.

Oth. 'Tis well I am found by you.
I will but spend a word here in the house,
And go with you. [Exit.]

Cas. Ancient, what makes he here?
Iago. He hath to-night boarded a land carack; 8
If it prove lawful prize, he's made for ever.
Cas. I do not understand.
Iago. He's married.
Cas. To who?

Re-enter OTHELLO.

Iago. Marry, to — Come, captain, will you go?

Oth. Have with you.

Cas. Here comes another troop to seek for you.

Enter BRABANTIO, RODERIGO, and OFFICERS OF NIGHT, with TORCHES and WEAPONS.

Iago. It is Brabantio: — general, be advis'd;
He comes to bad intent.

Oth. Hola! stand there!
Rod. Signior, it is the Moor.
Bra. Down with him, thief!

[They draw on both sides.

Iago. You, Roderigo! come sir, I am for you.

Oth. Keep up your bright swords, for the dew will rust them. —
Good signior, you shall more command with years,
Than with your weapons.
Bra. O thou foul thief, where hast thou stow'd my daughter?

Wretch that thou art, thou hast enchanted her:
For I'll refer me to all things of sense,
If she in chains of magick were not bound,
Whether a maid — so tender, fair, and happy;
So opposite to marriage, that she shunn'd
The wealthy curled darlings of our nation,
Would ever have, to incur a general mock,
Run from her guardance to the sooty bosom
Of such a thing as thou: to fear, not to delight.
Judge me the world, if 'tis not gross in sense,
That thou hast practis'd on her with foul charms;
Abus'd her delicate youth with drugs, or minerals,
'Tis probable, and palpable to thinking.
I therefore apprehend and do attach thee,
For an abuser of the world, a practiser
Of arts inhibited and out of warrant: —
Lay hold upon him; if he do resist,
Subdue him at his peril.

Oth. Hold your hands,
Both you of my inclining, and the rest:
Were it my cue to fight, I should have known it
Without a prompter. — Where will you that I go
To answer this your charge?

Bra. To prison: till fit time
Of law, and course of direct session,
Call thee to answer.

Oth. What if I do obey?
How may the duke be therewith satisfied;
Whose messengers are here about my side,
Upon some present business of the state,
To bring me to him?

Off. 'Tis true, most worthy signior,
The duke's in council; and your noble self,
I am sure, is sent for.

Bra. How! the duke in council!
In this time of the night! — Bring him away:
Mine's not an idle cause: the duke himself,
Or any of my brothers of the state,
Cannot but feel this wrong, as 'twere their own;
For if such actions may have passage free,
Bond-servants, and pagans, shall our statesmen be.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. — A Council Chamber.

The Duke, and Senators, sitting at a Table; Officers attending.

Duke. There is no composition in these news,
That gives them credit.
1 Sen. Indeed, they are disproportion'd;
My letters say, a hundred and seven gallies.

Duke. And mine a hundred and forty.

2 Sen. And mine, two hundred;
But though they jump not on a just account,
(As in these cases, where the aim 8 reports,
'Tis oft with difference,) yet do they all confirm
A Turkish fleet, and bearing up to Cyprus.
Duke. Nay, it is possible enough to judgment;
I do not so secure me in the error,
But the main article I do approve
In fearful sense.

Enter an Officer, with a Sailor.

Off. A messenger from the gallies.
Duke. Now? the business?
Sailor. The Turkish preparation makes for Rhodes:
So was I bid report here to the state,
By signior Angelo.

Duke. How say you by this change?

1 Sen. This cannot be,
By no assay of reason; 'tis a pageant,
To keep us in false gase: When we consider
The importancy of Cyprus to the Turk;
And let ourselves again but understand,
That, as it more concerns the Turk than Rhodes,
So may he with more facile question 9 bear it,
For that it stands not in such warlike brace,
But altogether lacks the abilities
That Rhodes is dress'd in: — if we make thought
of this,
We must not think, the Turk is so unskilful,
To leave that latest which concerns him first;
Neglecting an attempt of ease, and gain,
To wake and wage, a danger profitless.

Duke. Nay, in all confidence, he's not for Rhodes.

Off. Here is more news.
1 Consistency. 8 Conjecture. 9 Easy dispute.
State of defence. 8 Combat.
3 L 2
Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The Ottomites, reverend and gracious, Steering with due course toward the isle of Rhodos, Have there joined them with an after fleet.

1 Sen. Ay, so I thought: — How many, as you guess?

Mess. Of thirty sail: and now do they re-stem Their backward course, bearing with frank appearance Their purposes toward Cyprus. — Signior Montano, Your trusty and most valiant servitor, With his free duty recommends you thus, And prays you to believe him.

Duke. 'Tis certain then for Cyprus. — Marcus Lucchesé, is he not in town?

1 Sen. He's now in Florence.

Duke. Write from us; wish him post post-haste: despatch.

1 Sen. Here comes Brabantio, and the valiant Moor.

Enter Brabantio, Othello, Iago, Rodrigo, and Officers.

Duke. Valiant Othello, we must straight employ you Against the general enemy Ottoman. I did not see you; welcome, gentle signior; [To Brabantio. We lack'd your counsel and your help to-night.

Bra. So did I yours: Good your grace, pardon me; Neither my place, nor aught I heard of business, Hath rais'd me from my bed; nor doth the general care Take hold on me; for my particular grief Is of so flood-gate and o'erbearing nature, That it engluts and swallows other sorrows, And it is still itself.

Duke. Why, what's the matter?

Bra. My daughter! O, my daughter!

Sen. Dead?

Bra. Ay, to me;

She is abus'd, stol'n from me, and corrupted By spells and medicines bought of mountebanks: For nature so preposterously to err, Being not deficient, blind, or lame of sense, Sans witchcraft could not —

Duke. Who'er he be, that, in this foul proceeding, Hath thus beguil'd your daughter of herself, And you of her, the bloody book of law You shall yourself read in the bitter letter, After your own sense; yea, though our proper son Stood in your action.

Bra. Humbly thank your grace.

Here is the man, this Moor; whom now, it seems, Your special mandate, for the state affairs, Hath hither brought.

Duke & Sen. We are very sorry for it.

Duke. What, in your own part, can you say to this? [To Othello.

Bra. Nothing but this is so.

Oth. Most potent, grave, and reverend signiors, My very noble and approv'd good masters, That I have taken away this old man's daughter, It is most true; true, I have married her; The very head and front of my offending Hath this extent, no more. Rude am I in my speech, And little bess'd with the set phrase of peace,

For since these arms of mine had seven years' pith, Till now some nine moons wasted, they have us'd Their dearest action 5 in the tented field: And little of this great world can I speak, More than pertains to feats of broil and battle; And therefore little shall I grace my cause, In speaking for myself: Yet, by your gracious patience, I will a round unvarnished tale deliver Of my whole course of love; what drugs, what charms, What conjugation, and what mighty magic, (For such proceeding I am charg'd withal,) I won his daughter with.

Bra. A maiden never bold; Of spirit so still and quiet, that her motion Blush'd at herself; and she, — in spite of nature, Of years, of country, credit, every thing, — To fall in love with what she fear'd to look on? It is a judgment maim'd, and most imperfect, That will confess — perfection so could err Against all rules of nature, and must be driven To find out practices of cunning hell, Why this should be. I therefore vouch again, That with some mixtures powerful o'er the blood, Or with some dram conjur'd to this effect, He wrought upon her.

Duke. To vouch this is no proof; Without more certain and more overt test 6, Than these thin habits, and poor likelihoods Of modern seeming?, do prefer against him.

1 Sen. But, Othello, speak; — Did you by indirect and forced courses Subdue and poison this young maid's affections? Or came it by request, or such fair question As soul to soul afforded?

Oth. I do beseech you, Send for the lady to the Sagittary 8; And let her speak of me before her father: If you do find me foul in her report, The trust, the office, I do hold of you, Not only take away, but let your sentence Even fall upon my life.

Oth. Ancient, conduct them; you best know the place. [Exeunt Iago, and Attendants. And, till she come, as truly as to heaven I do confess the vices of my blood, So justly to your grave ears I'll present How I did thrive in this fair lady's love, And she in mine.

Duke. Say it, Othello.

Oth. Her father lov'd me, oft invited me; Still question'd me the story of my life, From year to year; the battles, sieges, fortunes, That I have pass'd. I ran it through, even from my boyish days, To the very moment that he bade me tell it. Wherein I spoke of most disastrous chances, Of moving accidents, by flood and field; Of hair-breath escape: the imminent deadly breach; Of being taken by the insolent foe, And sold to slavery: of my redemption thence, And portance 9 in my travel's history: Wherein of antres vast, and desarts idle, Rough quarries, rocks, and hills whose heads touch heaven, 5 Best exertion. 6 Open proof. 7 Weak show. 8 The sign of the fictitious creature so called. 9 My behaviour. 1 Caves and dens.

It was my hint to speak, such was the process; And of the Cannibals that each other eat, The Anthropophagi, and men whose heads Do grow beneath their shoulders. These things to hear,
Would Desdemona seriously incline: But still the house affairs would draw her thence; Which ever as she could with haste despatch, She'd come again, and with a greedy ear Devour up my discourse: Which I observing, Took once a pliant hour; and found good means To draw from her a prayer of earnest heart, That I would all my pilgrimage dilate, Whereof by parcells she had sometime heard, But not intentionally: I did consent; And often did beguile her of her tears, When I did speak of some distressful stroke, That my youth suffer'd. My story being done, She gave me for my pains a world of sights: She swore,—In faith, 'twas strange, 'twas passing strange;
'Twas pitiful, 'twas wondrous pitiful: She wish'd, she had not heard it; yet she wish'd That heaven had made her such a man: she thank'd me;
And bade me, if I had a friend that lov'd her, I should but teach him how to tell my story, And that would woo her. Upon this hint, I spake; She lov'd me for the dangers I had pass'd; And I lov'd her, that she did pity them. This only is the witchcraft I have us'd; Here comes the lady, let her witness it.

Enter DESDEMONA, IAGO, and ATTENDANTS.

Duke. I think, this tale would win my daughter too.

Good Brabantio, Take up this mangled matter at the best: Men do their broken weapons rather use, Than their bare hands.

Br. I pray you, hear her speak; If she confess, that she was half the wooer, Destruction on my head, if my bad blame Light on the man!—Come hither, gentle mistress; Do you perceive in all this noble company, Where most you owe obedience?

Des. My noble father, I do perceive here a divided duty: To you I am bound for life and education; My life, and education, both do learn me How to respect you; you are the lord of duty, I am hitherto your daughter: But here's my husband; And so much duty as my mother show'd To you, preferring you before her father, So much I challenge that I may profess Due to the Moor, my lord.

Br. Then I have done. — Please it your grace, on to the state affairs: I had rather to adopt a child, than get it. — Come hither, Moor: I here do give thee that with all my heart, Which, but thou hast already, with all my heart I would keep from thee. — For your sake, jewel, I am glad at soul I have no other child; For thy escape would teach me tyranny, To hang clogs on them.—I have done, my lord.

Duke. Let me speak like yourself, and lay a sentence;

Which, as a grise, or step, may help these lovers Into your favour. When remedies are past, the griefs are ended, By seeing the worst, which late on hopes depended. To mourn a mischief that is past and gone, Is the next way to draw new mischief on. What cannot be preserved when fortune takes, Patience her injury a mockery makes. The robb'd, that smiles, steals something from the thief;
He robs himself, that spends a bootless grief.

Br. So let the Turk of Cyprus us beguile; We lose it not, so long as we can smile. He bears the sentence well, that nothing bears But the free comfort which from thence he hears: But he bears both the sentence and the sorrow, That, to pay grief, must of poor patience borrow. These sentences, to sugar, or to gall, Being strong on both sides are equivocal: But words are words; I never yet did hear, That the bruise'd heart was pierced through the ear. I humbly beseech you, proceed to the affairs of state.

Duke. The Turk with a most mighty preparation makes for Cyprus: — Othello, the fortitude of the place is best known to you: And though we have there a substitute of most allowed sufficiency, yet opinion, a sovereign mistress of effects, throws a more safer voice on you: you must therefore be content to slumber the gloss of your new fortunes with this more stubborn and boisterous expedition.

Oth. The tyrant custom, most grave senators, Hath made the flinty and steel couch of war My thrice-driven bed of down: I do sanguine A natural and prompt alacrity, I find in hardness, and do undertake These present wars against the Ottomites. Most humbly therefore bending to your state, I crave fit disposition for my wife; Due reference of place, and exhibition: With such accommodation, and besort, As levels with her breeding.

Duke. If you please, Be't at her father's.

Br. I'll not have it so.

Oth. Nor I.

Des. Nor I; I would not there reside, To put my father in impatient thoughts, By being in his eye. Most gracious duke, To my unfold ing lend a gracious ear; And let me find a charter in your voice, To assist my simplicity.

Duke. What would you, Desdemona?

Des. That I did love the Moor to live with him, My downright violence and storm of fortunes May trumpet to the world; my heart's subdued Even to the very quality of my lord: I saw Othello's visage in his mind; And to his honours, and his valiant parts, Did I my soul and fortunes consecrate. So that, dear lords, if I be left behind, A moth of peace, and he go to the war, I shall a heavy interim support. By his dear absence: Let me go with him.

Oth. Your voices, lords: — beseech you, let her will Have a free way. Vouch with me, heaven; I therefore beg it not For my distinct and proper satisfaction;

1 Intention and attention were once synonymous.
2 Grise from degrees.
3 Obscure. 4 Acknowledge.
5 Allowance.
But to be free and bounteous to her mind:
And heaven defend? your good souls, that you think
I will your serious and great business scant;
For I am with you: No, when light-wing’d toys
Of feather’d Cupid seek with wanton dulness
My speculative and active instruments,
That my disports corrupt and taint my business,
Let housewives make a skittle 1 of my helm 2,
And all indign and base adversities
Make head against my estimation!
    Duke. Be it as you shall privately determine,
Either for her stay, or going: the affair cries—haste,
And speed must answer it; you must hence to-night,
    Des. To-night, my lord?
    Duke. This night,
    Oth. With all my heart.
    Duke. At nine i’ the morning here we’ll meet again.
Othello, leave some officer behind,
And he shall our commission bring to you;
With such things else of quality and respect,
As doth import you.
    Oth. Please your grace, my ancient;
A man he is of honesty and trust:
To his conveyance I assign my wife,
With what else needful your good grace shall think
To be sent after me.
    Duke. Let it be so. —
Good night to every one. — And, noble signior,
[To Brabantio.]
If virtue no delighted beauty lack,
Your son-in-law is far more fair than black.
    1 Sen. Adieu, brave Moor! use Desdemona well.
    Bra. Look to her, Moor; have a quick eye to see;
She has deceiver’d her father, and may thee,
    [Exeunt Duke, Senators, Officers, &c.
    Oth. My life upon her faith. — Honest Iago,
My Desdemona must I leave to thee;
I pray thee, let thy wife attend on her;
And bring them after in the best advantage.—
    Oth. My Desdemona; I have but an hour
Of love, of worldly matters and direction,
To spend with thee: we must obey the time.
    [Exeunt Othello and Desdemona.

    Rod. Iago.
    Iago. What say’st thou, noble heart?
    Rod. What will I do, thinkest thou?
    Iago. Why, go to bed, and sleep.
    Iago. I will contendsingly 3 drown myself.
    Iago. Well, if thou dost, I shall never love thee after it. Why, thou silly gentleman!
    Rod. It is silliness to live, when to live is a torment:
and then have we a prescription to die, when death is our physician.
    Iago. O villainous! I have looked upon the world for four times seven years! and since I could distinguish between a benefit and an injury, I never found a man that knew how to love himself. Ere
I would say, I would drown myself for the love of a Guinea-hen, I would change my humanity with a baboon.
    Rod. What should I do? I confess it is my shame to be so found; but it is not in my virtue to amend it.
    Iago. Virtue? a fig! ‘tis in ourselves, that we are thus, or thus. We have reason to cool our raging passions; whereof I take this, that you call
— love, to be one.
    Rod. It cannot be.
    Iago. Come, be a man: Drown thyself? drowned cats, and blind puppies. I have professed my thy friend, and I confess me knit to thy deserving with cables of perdurable toughness; I could never better stead thee than now. Put money in thy purse; follow these wars; defeat thy favour with an usurped beard! I say, put money in thy purse. It cannot be, that Desdemona should long continue her love to the Moor, — put money in thy purse;
— nor he his to her: it was a violent commencement,
and thou shalt see an answerable sequestration;
— put but money in thy purse. — These Moors are changeable in their wills; — fill thy purse with money: drowning thyself is clean out of the way: seek thou rather to be hanged in compassing thy joy, than to be drowned and go without it.
    Rod. Wilt thou be fast to my hopes, if I depend on the issue?
    Iago. Thou art sure of me; — Go, make money;
— I have told thee often, and I re-tell thee again and again, I hate the Moor: My cause is hearted; thine hath no less reason: Let us be conjunctive in our revenge against him: go; provide thy money.
We will have more of this to-morrow. Adieu.
    Rod. Where shall we meet i’ the morning?
    Iago. At my lodging.
    Rod. I’ll be with thee betimes.
    Iago. Go to; farewell. Do you hear, Roderigo?
    Rod. What say you?
    Iago. No more of drowning, do you hear?
    Rod. I am changed. I’ll sell all my land.
    Iago. Go to; farewell; put money enough in your purse.
    [Exeunt Roderigo.
Thus do I ever make my fool my use:
For I mine own gain’d knowledge should profane,
If I would time expend with such a snipe,
But for my sport and profit. I hate the Moor;
And it is thought abroad, that in my bed
He has done me wrong, I know not if’t be true;
But I, for mere suspicion in that kind,
Will do, as if for surety. He holds me well;
The better shall my purpose work on him.
Cassio’s a proper man: Let me see now;
To get his place, and to plume up my will;
A double knavery, — How? how? — Let me see:—
After some time, to abuse Othello’s ear,
That he is too familiar with his wife: —
He hath a person, and a smooth dispose,
To be suspected; fram’d to make women false.
The Moor is of a free and open nature,
That thinks men honest that but seem to be so;
And will as tenderly be led by the nose,
As asses are.
I have’t; — it is engender’d: — Hell and night.
Must bring this monstrous birth to the world’s light.
    [Exit.]

4 Change your countenance with a false beard.
ACT II.

SCENE I. — A Sea-port Town in Cyprus.

A Platform.

Enter Montano and two Gentlemen.

Mon. What from the cape can you discern at sea?
1 Gent. Nothing at all: it is a high-wrought flood;
I cannot, \( \text{`tis} \) the heaven and the main,
Descry a sail.

Mon. Methinks, the wind hath spoke aloud at land:
A fuller blast ne'er shook our battlements;
If it hath ruffian'd so upon the sea,
What ribs of oak, when mountains melt on them,
Can hold the morrise? what shall we hear of this?

2 Gent. A segregation \(^5\) of the Turkish fleet:
For do but stand upon the foaming shore,
The chiding billow seems to pelt the clouds;
The wind-shak'd surge, with high and monstrous main,
Seems to cast water on the burning bear,\(^6\)
And quench the guards of the ever-fixed pole;
I never did like molestation view
On th' encased flood.

Mon. If that the Turkish fleet
Be not inshelter'd and embay'd, they are drown'd:
It is impossible they bear it out.

Enter a third Gentleman.

3 Gent. News, lords! our wars are done;
The desperate tempest hath so bang'd the Turks,
That their desigment halts: A noble ship of Venice
Hath seen a grievous wreck and sufferance
On most part of their fleet.

Mon. How! is this true?
3 Gent. The ship is here put in,
A Veronesè; Michael Cassio,
Lieutenant to the warlike Moor, Othello,
Is come on shore: the Moor himself's at sea,
And is in full commission here for Cyprus.

Mon. I am glad on't; \( \text{`tis} \) a worthy governor.

3 Gent. But this same Cassio, — though he speak of comfort,
Touching the Turkish loss, — yet he looks sadly,
And prays the Moor be safe; for they were parted
With foul and violent tempest.

Mon. \( \text{`Pray} \) heaven he be;
For I have serv'd him, and the man commands
Like a full soldier. Let's to the sea-side, ho!
As well to see the vessel that's come in,
As throw out our eyes for brave Othello;
Even till we make the main, and the aërial blue,
An indistinct regard.
3 Gent. Come, let's do so;
For every minute is expectancy
Of more arrivance.

Enter Cassio.

Cas. Thanks to the valiant of this warlike isle,
That so approve the Moor; \( \mathrm{O} \), let the heavens
Give him defence against the elements,
For I have lost him on a dangerous sea!
Mon. Is he well shipp'd?\(^7\)

\(^5\) Separation. \(^6\) The constellation near the polar star

---

Cas. His bark is stoutly timber'd, and his pilot
Of very expert and approv'd allowance:\(^7\)
Therefore my hopes, not surfeit'd to death,
Stand in bold cure.

[Within.]

A sail, a sail, a sail!

Enter another Gentleman.

Cas. What noise?
4 Gent. The town is empty; on the brow o' the sea
Stand ranks of people and they cry — a sail.

Cas. My hopes do shape him for the governour.
2 Gent. They do discharge their shot of courtesy:

[Guns heard.]

Our friends, at least.

Cas. I pray you, sir, go forth,
And give us truth who 'tis that is arriv'd.

2 Gent. I shall.

[Exit.

Mon. But, good lieutenant, is your general wiv'd?

Cas. Most fortunately: he hath achiev'd a maid
That paragons description, and wild fame;
One that excels the quirks of blazoning pens,
And in the essential vesture of creation,
Does bear all excellency. — How now? who has put in?

Re-enter second Gentleman.

2 Gent. 'Tis one Iago, ancient to the general.
Cas. He has had most favourable and happy speed:

Tempests themselves, high seas, and howling winds,
The gutter'd rocks, and congregated sands,—

Traitors ensteep'd to clog the guiltless keel,
As having sense of beauty, do omit
Their mortal natures, letting go safely
The divine Desdemona.

Mon. What is she?

Cas. She that I speake of, our great captain's captain,
Left in the conduct of the bold Iago;
Whose footing here anticipates our thoughts,
A se'night's speed. — Great Jove, Othello guard,
And swell his sail with thine own powerful breath;
That he may bless this bay with his tall ship,
Give renew'd fire to our extincted spirits,
And bring all Cyprus comfort! — \( \mathrm{O} \), behold,

Enter Desdemona, Emilia, Iago, Roderigo, and Attendants.

The riches of the ship is come on shore!
Ye men of Cyprus, let her have your knees; —

Hail to thee, lady! and the grace of heaven,
Before, behind thee, and on every hand,
Enwheel thee round!

Des. I thank you, valiant Cassio.

What tidings can you tell me of my lord?

Cas. He is not yet arriv'd; nor know I aught
But that he's well, and will be shortly here.

Des. O, but I fear; — How lost you company?

Cas. The great contention of the sea and skies
Parted our fellowship: But, hark! a sail.

[Cry within. A sail, a sail! Then Guns heard.

7 Allow'd and approv'd expertness.
I ensnare as great a fly as Cassio. Ay, smile upon her, do: I will gyve thee in thine own courtship. You say true; 'tis so, indeed: if such tricks as these strip you out of your lieutenanty, it had been better you had not kissed your three fingers so oft. Very good; an excellent courtesy! 'tis so, indeed.

[Trumpet.] The Moor, I know his trumpet.

Cas. 'Tis truly so.

Des. Let's meet him, and receive him.

Cas. Lo, where he comes!

Enter Othello, and Attendants.

Oth. O my fair warrior!

Des. My dear Othello?

Oth. It gives me wonder great as my content, To see you here before me. O my soul's joy! If after every tempest come such calms, May the winds blow till they have waken'd death! And let the labouring bark climb hills of seas, Olympus-high; and duck again as low As hell's from heaven! If it were now to die, 'Twere now to be most happy; for, I fear, My soul hath her content so absolute, That not another comfort like to this Succeeds in unknown fate.

Des. The heavens forbid, But that our loves and comforts should increase, Even as our days do grow!

Oth. Amen to that, sweet powers! —

I cannot speak enough of this content, It stops me here; it is too much of joy:

And this, and this, the greatest discords be,

That c'er our hearts shall make!

Oth. O ye are well tun'd now! But I'll set down the pegs that make this musick, As honest as I am.

[Aside.

Oth. Come, let's to the castle.

News, friends; our wars are done, the Turks are drownd.'

How do our old acquaintance of this isle? —

Honey, you shall be well desir'd 2 in Cyprus, I have found great love amongst them. O my sweet, I prattle out of fashion, and I dote

In mine own comforts. — I pr'ythee, good Iago,

Go to the bay, and disembark my coffers:

Bring thou the master to the citadel;

He is a good one, and his worthiness

Does challenge much respect. — Come, Desdemona,

Once more well met at Cyprus.

[Exeunt Othello, Desdemona, and Attendants.

Iago. Do thou meet me presently at the harbour. Come hither. If thou be'st valiant as (they say) base men, being in love, have then a nobility in their natures more than is native to them,— list me. 3

The lieutenant to-night watches on the court of guard; — First, I must tell thee this — Desdemona is directly in love with him.

Rod. With him! why, 'tis not possible.

Iago. Lay thy finger — thus, and let thy soul be instructed. Mark me with what violence she first loved the Moor, but for bragging, and telling her fantastical lies: And will she love him still for prating? let not thy discreet heart think it. Her eye must be fed; and what delight shall she have to look on the devil? There should be,— loveliness in favour; sympathy in years, manners, and

1 Shackle, fetter.

2 Much solicited by invitation.

3 Listen to me.
THE MOOR OF VENICE.

Scene I.

Abuse him to the Moor in the rank garb; — For I fear Cassio with my night-cap too; — Make the Moor thank me, love me, and reward me, For making him egregiously so ass, And practising upon his peace and quiet Even to madness. 'Tis here, but yet confus'd; Knavery's plain face is never seen, till us'd.

Enter A Herald, with a Proclamation, People following.

Her. It is Othello's pleasure, our noble and valiant general, that, upon certain tidings now arrived, importing the mere? perdition of the Turkish fleet, every man put himself into triumph; some to dance, some to make bonfires, each man to what sport and revels his addiction leads him; for, besides these beneficial news, it is the celebration of his nuptials: So much was his pleasure should be proclaimed. All offices are open; and there is full liberty of feasting, from this present hour of five, till the bell hath told eleven. Heaven bless the isle of Cyprus, and our noble general, Othello.

[Exeunt.

Scene III. — A Hall in the Castle.

Enter Othello, Desdemona, Cassio, and Attendants.

Oth. Good Michael, look you to the guard to-night: Let's teach ourselves that honourable stop, Not to out-sport discretion. Cas. Iago hath direction what to do; But, notwithstanding, with my personal eye Will I look to't.

Oth. Iago is most honest. Michael, good night: To-morrow, with our earliest, Let me have speech with you. — Come, my dear love. [To Desdemona.]

[Exeunt Oth. Des. and Attendants.

Enter Iago.

Cas. Welcome, Iago: We must to the watch. Iago. Not this hour, lieutenant; 'tis not yet ten o'clock: Our general cast's us thus early, for the love of his Desdemona; whom let us not therefore blame. Cas. She's a most exquisite lady. Iago. Come, lieutenant, I have a stoop of wine; and here without are a brace of Cyprus gallants that would fain have a measure to the health of the black Othello. Cas. Not to-night, good Iago; I have very poor and unhappy brains for drinking: I could well wish courtesy would invent some other custom of entertainment. Iago. O, they are our friends; but one cup; I'll drink for you.

Cas. I have drunk but one cup to-night, and that was craftily qualified too, and, behold, what innovation it makes here: I am unfortunate in the infirmity, and dare not task my weakness with any more. Iago. What, man! 'tis a night of revels; the gallants desire it.
Cas. Where are they?
Iago. Here at the door; I pray you, call them in.
Cas. I'll do't; but it dislikes me. [Exit Cassio.
Iago. If I can fasten but one cup upon him,
With that which he hath drunk to-night already,
He'll be as full of quarrel and offence
As my young mistress' dog. Now, my sick fool,
Roderigo,
Whom love has turn'd almost the wrong side outward,
To Desdemona hath to-night carous'd
Potations pottle deep; and he's to watch:
Three lads of Cyprus,—no blew swelling spirits,
That hold their honours in a wary distance,
The very elements of this warlike isle.—
Have I to-night fluster'd with flowing cups,
And they watch too. Now, 'mongst this flock of drunkards,
Am I to put our Cassio in some action
That may offend the isle: — But here they come:
If consequence do but approve my dream,
My boat sails freely, both with wind and stream.

Re-enter Cassio, with him Montano, and Gentlemen.

Cas. 'Fore heaven, they have given me a rouse 3 already.

Mon. Good faith, a little one; not past a pint,
as I am a soldier.
Iago. Some wine, ho! 4

And let me the canakin clink, clink; [Sings.
And let me the canakin clink:
A soldier's a man;
A life's but a span;
Why then, let a soldier drink.

Some wine boys! [Wine brought in.
Cas. That's an excellent song.
Iago. I learned it in England, where (indeed) they are most potent in putting: your Dane, your German, and your Hollander,—Drink, ho! — are nothing to your English.
Cas. Is your Englishman so expert in his drinking?
Iago. Why, he drinks you, with facility, your Dane dead drunk; and can overthrow both your Almain and your Hollander.
Cas. To the health of our general.
Mon. I am for it, lieutenant; and I'll do you justice.

Iago. O sweet England!
King Stephen was a worthy peer, 5
His breeches cost him but a crown;
He held them sixpence all too dear,
With that he call'd the tailor—in.own. 6
He was a wight of high renown,
And thou art but of low degree:
'Tis pride that pulls the country down,
Then take thine auld cloak about thee.

Some wine, ho!
Cas. Why, this is a more exquisite song than the other.

Iago. Will you hear it again?
Cas. No; for I hold him to be unworthy of his place, that does those things. — Well, — Heaven's above all; and there be souls that must be saved, and there be souls must not be saved.

Iago. It's true, good lieutenant.
Cas. For mine own part, — no offence to the general, or any man of quality, — I hope to be saved.

Iago. And so do I too, lieutenant.
Cas. Ay, but, by your leave, not before me; the lieutenant is to be saved before the ancient. — Let's have no more of this; let's to our affairs. — Forgive us our sins! — Gentlemen, let's look to our business. — Do not think, gentlemen, I am drunk; this is my ancient; — this is my right hand, and this is my left hand: — I am not drunk now; I can stand well enough, and speak well enough.

All. Excellent well.
Cas. Why, very well, then: you must not think then that I am drunk. [Exit.

Mon. To the platform, masters; come, let's set the watch.

Iago. You see this fellow that is gone before; —
He is a soldier, fit to stand by Caesar
And give direction; and do but see his vice;
'Tis to his virtue a just equinox,
The one as long as the other: 'tis pity of him.
I fear, the trust Othello puts him in,
On some odd time of his infirmity
Will shake this island.

Mon. But is he often thus?
Iago. 'Tis evermore the prologue to his sleep:
He'll watch the horologe a double set,
If drink rock not his cradle.

Mon. It were well,
The general were put in mind of it.
Perhaps he sees it not; or his good nature
Prizes the virtue that appears in Cassio,
And looks not on his evils: Is not this true?

Enter Roderigo.

I pray you, after the lieutenant; go.

[Exit Roderigo.

Mon. And 'tis great pity, that the noble Moor
Should hazard such a place, as his own second,
With one of an ingraft 8 infirmity:
It were an honest action, to say
So to the Moor.
Iago. Not I, for this fair island:
I do love Cassio well; and would do much
To cure him of this evil. But hark! what noise?
[Clown within. — Help! help!
Re-enter Cassio, driving in Roderigo.

Cas. You rogue! you rascal!
Mon. What's the matter, lieutenant?
Cas. A knave! — teach me my duty!
I'll beat the knave into a twigg'd 9 bottle.
Rod. Beat me!
Cas. Dost thou prate, rogue?

[Striking Roderigo.

Mon. Nay, good lieutenant; [Staying him.
I pray you, sir, hold your hand.
Cas. Let me go, sir,
Or I'll knock you o'er the mazzard.

Mon. Come, come, you're drunk. [They fight.
Iago. Away, I say! go out, and cry — a mutiny.
[Aside to Roder. who goes out.
Nay, good lieutenant,— alas, gentlemen,—
Help, ho! — Lieutenant, — sir,— Montano, — sir,—

7 While the clock strikes two rounds, or four and twenty hours. 8 Rooted, settled. 9 A wicker'd bottle.
Help, masters! — Here's a goodly watch, indeed! [Bell rings.]

Who's that that rings the bell? The town will rise. Lieutenant, hold, you will be sham'd for ever.

Enter Othello, and Attendants.

Oth. What is the matter here?

Mon. I bleed still, I am hurt to the death; — he dies.

Oth. Hold, for your lives.

Iago. Hold, hold, lieutenant, sir, Montano, — gentlemen, —

Have you forgot all sense of place and duty?

Hold, hold! the general speaks to you; hold, for shame!

Oth. Why, how now, ho! from whence ariseth this?

Are we turn'd Turks; and to ourselves do that, Which heaven hath forbid the Ottonites?

For Christian shame, put by this barbarous brawl: He that still next to carve for his own rage,

Holds his soul light; he dies upon his motion.

Silence that dreadful bell, it frights the isle

From her propriety. — What is the matter, masters? Honest Iago, that look'st dead with grieving,

Speak, who began this? on thy love, I charge thee.

Iago. I do not know; — friends all but now, even now,

In quarter, and in terms: and then, but now, (As if some planet had unwitt'd men,) Swords out, and tilting one at other's breast, In opposition bloody. I cannot speak

Any beginning to this peevish odds; And 'would in action glorious I had lost. These legs, that brought me to a part of it!

Oth. How comes it, Michael, you are thus forgot?

Cas. I pray you pardon me, I cannot speak.

Oth. Worthy Montano, you were wont be civil;

The gravity and stillness of your youth The world hath noted, and your name is great In mouths of wisest censure; What's the matter, That you unlace your reputation thus, And spend your rich opinion, for the name Of a night brawler? give me answer to it.

Mon. Worthy Othello, I am hurt to danger; Your officer, Iago, can inform you —

While I spare speech, which something now offends me —

Of all that I do know: nor know I aught

By me that's said or done amiss this night; Unless self-charity be sometime a vice; And to defend ourselves it be a sin,

When violence assails us.

Oth. Now, by heaven, My blood begins my safer guides to rule; And passion, having my best judgment call'd 1, Assays to lead the way: If once I stir, Or do but lift this arm, the best of you Shall sink in my rebuke. Give me to know How this foul rauk began, who set it on; And he that is approv'd 2 in this offence, Though he had twinn'd with me, both at a birth, Shall lose me. — What! in a town of war, Yet wild, the people's hearts brimful of fear, To manage private and domestick quarrel, In night, and on the court and guard of safety! 'Tis monstrous. — Iago, who began it?

Mon. If partially affin'd 3, or leagu'd in office, Thou dost deliver more or less than truth, Thou art no soldier.

Iago. Touch me not so near:

I had rather have this tongue cut from my mouth, Than it should do offence to Michael Cassio;

Yet, I persuade myself, to speak the truth Shall nothing wrong me. — This it is, general, Montano and myself being in speech,

There comes a fellow, crying out for help;

And Cassio following him with determin'd sword,

To execute upon him: Sir, this gentleman

Steps in to Cassio, and entreats his pause;

Myself the crying fellow did pursue,

Lest, by his clamour, (as it so fell out,) The town might fall in fright: he, swift of foot, Outran my purpose; and I return'd the rather For that I heard the clink and fall of swords, And Cassio high in oath; which, till to-night, I ne'er might say before: when I came back, (For this was brief,) I found them close together, At blow, and thrust; even as again they were, When you yourself did part them.

More of this matter can I not report: —

But men are men; the best sometimes forget: —

Thou Cassio did some little wrong to him, —

As men in rage strike those that wish them best; —

Yet, surely, Cassio, I believe, receiv'd, From him that fled, some strange indignity, Which patience could not pass.

Oth. I know, Iago,

Thy honesty and love doth mince this matter,

Making it light to Cassio: — Cassio, I love thee:

But never more be officer of mine. —

Enter Desdemona, attended.

Look, if my gentle love be not rais'd up; —

I'll make thee an example.

Des. What's the matter, dear?

Oth. All's well now, sweeting; Come away to bed. Sir, for your hurts, Myself will be your surgeon: Lead him off. [To Montano, who is led off.]

Iago, look with care about the town;

And silence those whom this vile brawl distracted. —

Come, Desdemona; 'tis the soldier's life, To have their balm's slumbers wak'd with strife.

[Exeunt all but Iago and Cassio.]

Iago. What, are you hurt, lieutenant?

Cas. Ay, past all surgery.

Iago. Marry, heaven forbid!

Cas. Reputation, reputation, reputation! O, I have lost my reputation! I have lost the immortal part, sir, of myself, and what remains is bestial. —

My reputation, Iago, my reputation.

Iago. As I am an honest man, I thought you had received some bodi'f wound; there is more offence in that, than in reputation. Reputation is an idle and most false imposition; oft got without merit, and lost without deserving: You have lost no reputation at all, unless you repute yourself such a loser. What, man! there are ways to recover the general again: You are but now cast in his mood 4, a punishment more in policy than in malice; even so as one would beat his offencless dog, to affright an imperious lion: sue to him again, and he's yours.

Cas. I will rather sue to be despised, than to deceive so good a commander, with so slight, so drunken, and so indiscreet an officer. Drunk? and speak parrot? 2 and squable? swagger? swear? and 1 Darkened. 2 Convicted by proof. 3 Related by nearness of office. 4 Dismayed in his anger. 5 Talk idly.

discourse fustian with one's own shadow?—O thou invisible spirit of wine, if thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee—devil!

Iago. What was he that you followed with your sword? What had he done to you?

Cas. I know not.

Iago. Is it possible?

Cas. I remember a mass of things, but nothing distinctly; a quarrel, but nothing wherefore. — O, that men should put an enemy in their mouths, to steal away their brains! that we should, with joy, revel, pleasure, and applause, transform ourselves into beasts!

Iago. Why, but you are now well enough: How came you thus recovered?

Cas. It hath pleased the devil, drunkenness, to give place to the devil, wrath: one unperfectness shows another, to make me frankly despise myself.

Iago. Come, you are too severe a moraler: As the time, the place, and the condition of this country stands, You, or any man living, may be drunk at some time, man. I'll tell you what you shall do. Our general's wife is now the general: — I may say so in this respect, for that he hath devoted and given up himself to the contemplation, mark, and denotement of her parts and graces: — confess yourself freely to her; importune her; she'll help to put you in your place again: she is of so free, so kind, so apt, so blessed a disposition, that she holds it a vice in her goodness, not to do more than she is requested: This broken joint, between you and her husband, entreat her to splinter; and, my fortunes against any lay 6 worth naming, this crack of your love shall grow stronger than it was before.

Cas. You advise me well.

Iago. I protest in the sincerity of love, and honest kindness.

Cas. I think it freely; and, betimes in the morning, I will beseech the virtuous Desdemona to undertake for me: I am desperate of my fortunes, if they check me here.

Iago. You are in the right. Good night, lieutenant; I must to the watch.

ACT III.

SCENE I. — Before the Castle.

Enter Cassio, and some Musicians.

Cas. Masters, play here, I will content your pains, Something that's brief; and bid — good-morrow, general. [Musick.

Cas. Good night, honest Iago. [Exit Cassio.

Iago. And what's he then, that says,—I play the villain?

When this advice is free, I give, and honest, Probable to thinking, and (indeed) the course
To win the Moor again? For, 'tis most easy
The inclining Desdemona to subdue
In any honest suit: she's fram'd as fruitful
As the free elements. And then for her
To win the Moor, — were't not to renounce his baptism,
His soul is so enfetter'd to her love,
That she may make, unmake, do what she list,
With his weak function. How am I then a villain,
To counsel Cassio to this parallel 8 course,
Directly to his good? Divinity of hell!
When devils with their blackest sins put on,
They do suggest at first with heavenly shows,
As I do now: For while this honest fool
Plies Desdemona to repair his fortunes,
And she for him pleads strongly to the Moor,
I'll pour this pestilence into his ear,—
That she repels 9 him for her love of him?
And, by how much she strives to do him good,
She shall undo her credit with the Moor.
So will I turn her virtue into pitch;
And out of her own goodness make the net,
That shall ensnare them all. — How now, Roderigo?

Enter Roderigo.

Rod. I do follow here in the chase, not like a hound that hunts, but one that fills up the cry. My money is almost spent: I have been to-night exceedingly well cudgel'd; and, I think, the issue will be — I shall have so much experience for my pains: and so, with no money at all, and a little more wit, return to Venice.

Iago. How poor are they, that have no patience! —
What wound did ever heal, but by degrees?
Thou know'st we work by wit, and not by witchcraft;
And wit depends on dilatory time.
Does't not go well? Cassio hath beaten thee,
And thou, by that small hurt, hast cashier'd Cassio;
Though other things grow fair against the sun,
Yet fruits, that blossom first, will first be ripe:
Content thyself a while: 'tis almost morn;
Counsel, and action, make the hours seem short.—
Retire thee; go where thou art billeted:
Away, I say; thou shalt know more hereafter:
Nay, get thee gone. [Exit Ron.] Two things are to be done,—
My wife must move for Cassio to her mistress;
I'll set her on;
Myself, the while, to draw the Moor apart,
And bring him jump 1 when he may Cassio find
Soliciting his wife: — Ay, that's the way;
Dull not device by coldness and delay. [Exit.}

Enter Clown.

Clo. Masters, here's money for you: and the general so likes your musick, that he desires you, of all loves, to make no more noise with it.

1 Mus. Well, sir, we will not.

2 Liberal, bountiful. 8 Even.

9 Recalls. 1 Just at the time.
THE MOOR OF VENICE.

Scene III.

Des. O, that's an honest fellow. — Do not doubt, Cassio,
But I will have my lord and you again
As friendly as you were.

Cas. Bounteous madam, Whatever shall become of Michael Cassio,
He's never any thing but your true servant.

Des. O, sir, I thank you: You do love my lord:
You have known him long; and be you well
assur'd, He shall in strangeness stand no further off
Than in a politic distance.

Cas. Ay, but, lady, That policy may either last so long,
Or feed upon such nice and waterish diet,
Or breed itself so out of circumstance,
That, I being absent, and my place supplied,
My general will forget my love and service.

Des. Do not doubt that; before Emilia here,
I give thee warrant of thy place: assure thee,
If I do vow a friendship, I'll perform it
To the last article: my lord shall never rest;
I'll watch him tame; and talk him out of patience;
His bed shall seem a school, his board a shrift;
I'll intermingle every thing he does
With Cassio's suit: Therefore be merry, Cassio;
For thy solicitor shall rather die,
Than give thy cause away.

Enter Othello, and Iago, at a distance.

Emil. Madam, here comes My lord.

Cas. Madam, I'll take my leave.

Des. Why, stay,
And hear me speak.

Cas. Madam, not now; I am very ill at ease,
Unfit for mine own purposes.

Des. Well, well,
Do your discretion. [Exit Cassio.

Iago. Ha! I like not that.

Oth. What dost thou say?

Iago. Nothing, my lord: or if — I know not what.

Oth. Was not that Cassio, parted from my wife? Iago. Cassio, my lord? No, sure, I cannot think it,
That he would steal away so guilty-like,
Seeing you coming.

Oth. I do believe 'twas he.

Des. How now, my lord? I have been talking with a suitor here,
A man that languishes in your displeasure.

Oth. Who is't, you mean?

Des. Why, your lieutenant Cassio. Good my lord,
If I have any grace, or power to move you,
His present reconciliation take:
For, if he be not one that truly loves you,
That errs in ignorance, and not in cunning,
I have no judgment in an honest face: I pr'ythee, call him back.

Oth. Went he hence now?

Des. Ay, sooth; so humbled,
That he hath left part of his grief with me;
I suffer with him. Good love, call him back.

Oth. Not now, sweet Desdemona; some other time.
Des. But shall it be shortly?
Oth. The sooner, sweet, for you.
Des. Shall it be to-night at supper?
Oth. No, not to-night.
Des. To-morrow dinner then?
Oth. I shall not dine at home;
I meet the captains at the citadel.
Des. Why then, to-morrow night; or Tuesday morn;
Or Tuesday noon, or night; or Wednesday morn;—
I pray thee, name the time; but let it not Exceed three days: in faith he's pentiment;
And yet his trespass, in our common reason,
(Save that, they say, the wars must make examples
Out of their best'rs) is not almost a fault
To incur a private check: When shall he come?
Tell me, Othello. I wonder in my soul,
What you could ask me, that I should deny,
Or stand so hammering on. What! Michael Cassio,
That came a wooing with you; and many a time,
When I have spoke of you disparingly,
Hath ta'en your part; to have so much to do
To bring him in! Trust me, I could do much. —
Oth. Pr'ythee, no more: let him come when he will;
I will deny thee nothing.
Des. Why this is not a boon;
'Tis as I should entreat you wear your gloves,
Or feed on nourishing dishes, or keep you warm;
Or sue to you to do peculiar profit
To your own person: Nay, when I have a suit,
Wherein I mean to touch your love indeed,
It shall be full of pose 5 and difficulty,
And fearful to be granted.
Oth. I will deny thee nothing:
Whereon, I do beseech thee, grant me this,
To leave me but a little to myself.
Des. Shall I deny you? no: Farewell, my lord.
Oth. Farewell, my Desdemona: I will come to thee straight.
Des. Emilia, come:— Be it as your fancies teach you;
Whate'er you be, I am obedient.
[Exit, with EMILIA.
Oth. Excellent wretch! Perdition catch my soul,
But I do love thee! and when I love thee not,
Chaos is come again.
Iago. My noble lord,—
Oth. What dost thou say, Iago?
Iago. Did Michael Cassio, when you woo'd my lady,
Know of your love?
Oth. He did, from first to last: Why dost thou ask?
Iago. But for a satisfaction of my thought;
No further harm.
Oth. Why of thy thought, Iago?
Iago. I did not think, he had been acquainted with her.
Oth. O, yes; and went between us very oft.
Iago. Indeed?
Oth. Indeed! ay, indeed:— Discern'st thou aught in that?
Is he not honest?
Iago. Honest, my lord?
Oth. Ay, honest.
Iago. My lord, for aught I know.
Oth. What dost thou think?
Iago. Think, my lord?
Oth. Think, my lord!
By heaven, he echoes me,
As if there were some monster in his thought Too hideous to be shown. — Thou dost mean something:
I heard thee say but now,— Thou lik'dst not that,
When Cassio left my wife; What didst not like?
And, when I told thee — he was of my counsel
In my whole course of wooing, thou cry'dst, Indeed?
And didst contract and pursue thy brow together,
As if thou then hast shut up in thy brain
Some horrible conceit: If thou dost love me,
Show me thy thought.
Iago. My lord, you know I love you.
Oth. I think thou dost:
And, — for I know thou art full of love and honesty,
And weigh'st thy words before thou giv'st them breath, —
Therefore these stops of thine fright me the more:
For such things, in a false disloyal knave,
Are tricks of custom; but, in a man that's just,
They are close denotements, working from the heart,
That passion cannot rule.
Iago. For Michael Cassio,—
I dare be sworn, I think that he is honest.
Oth. I think so too.
Iago. Men should be what they seem;
Or, those that be not, 'would they might seem none!
Oth. Certain, men should be what they seem.
Iago. Why then, I think that Cassio is an honest man.
Oth. Nay, yet there's more in this:
I pray thee, speak to me as to thy thinkings,
As thou dost ruminate; and give thy worst of thoughts
The worst of words.
Iago. Good my lord, pardon me;
Though I am bound to every act of duty,
I am not bound to that all slaves are free to.
Utter my thoughts? Why, say, they are vile and false,—
As where's that palace, whereinto foul things
Sometimes intrude not? Who has a breast so pure,
But some uncleanly apprehensions
Keep leets, 7 and law-days, and in session sit
With meditations lawful?
Oth. Thou dost conspire against thy friend, Iago,
If thou but think'st him wrong'd, and mak'st his ear
A stranger to thy thoughts.
Iago. I do beseech you,—
Though I, perchance, am vicious in my guess,
As, I confess, it is my nature's plague
To spy into abuses; and, oft, my jealousy
Shapes faults that are not,— I entreat you then,
From one that so imperfectly conjects, 8
You take no notice; nor build yourself a trouble
Out of his scattering and unsure observance:
It were not for your quiet, nor your good,
Nor for my manhood, honesty, or wisdom,
To let you know my thoughts.
Oth. What dost thou mean?
Iago. Good name, in man, and woman, dear my lord,
Is the immediate jewel of their souls:
Who steals my purse, steals trash: 'tis something,
nothing;
7 Courts of enquiry.
8 Conjectures.
Scene III.  THE MOOR OF VENICE.

'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands;
But he that fiches from me my good name,
Rob me of that, which not enriches him,
And makes me poor indeed.

Oth. By heaven, I'll know thy thought.

Iago. You cannot, if my heart were in your hand;
Nor shall not, whilst 'tis in my custody.

Oth. Ha!

Iago. O, beware, my lord, of jealousy;
It is the green-ey'd monster, doth mock
The meat it feeds on: That cukold lives in bliss,
Whose certain of his fate, loves not his wronger;
But, O, what dreadful minutes tells he o'er,
Who dotes, yet doubts; suspects, yet strongly loves!

Oth. O misery!

Iago. Poor, and content, is rich, and rich enough,
But riches, finless, is as poor as winter,
To him that ever fears he shall be poor:
Good heaven, the souls of all my tribe defend
From jealousy.

Oth. Why, why is this?

Think'st thou, I'd make a life of jealousy,

To follow still the changes of the moon
With fresh suspicions? No: to be once in doubt,
Is once to be resolved: Exchange me for a goat,
When I shall turn the minutes of my soul
To such exsufficate and blown surmises,

MATCHING thy inference. 'Tis not to make me jealous,

To say, — my wife is fair, feeds well, loves company,
Is free of speech, sings, plays, and dances well;
Where virtue is, these are more virtuous:
Nor from mine own weak merits will I draw
The smallest fear, or doubt of her revolt;
For she had eyes, and chose me: No, Iago;
I'll see, before I doubt; when I doubt, prove;
And, on the proof, there is no more but this, —

Away at once with love, or jealousy.

Iago. I am glad of this, for now I shall have reason

To show the love and duty that I bear you
With franker spirit: therefore, as I am bound,
Receive it from me — I speak not yet of proof.

Look to your wife: observe her well with Cassio;
Wear your eye — thus, not jealous, nor secure:
I would not have your free and noble nature,
Out of self-bounty, be abus'd; look to:
I know our country disposition well;
In Venice, they do let heaven see the pranks
They dare not show their husbands; their best confidence

Is — not to have undone, but keep unknown.

Oth. Dost thou say so?

Iago. She did deceive her father, marrying you;
And when she seem'd to shake, and fear your looks,
She lov'd them most.

Oth. And so she did.

Iago. Why, go to, then.

She that, so young, could give out such a seeming,
To see 1 her father's eyes up close as oak; —
He thought 'twas witchcraft: — But I am much to blame;
I humbly do beseech you of your pardon,
For too much loving you.

Oth. I am bound to thee for ever.

Iago. I see this hath a little dash'd your spirits.

Oth. Not a jot, nor a jot.

Iago. Trust me, I fear it has.

I hope, you will consider, what is spoke

Comes from my love; — But, I do see, you are mov'd: —

I am to pray you, not to strain my speech
To groser issues 3, nor to larger reach,

Than to suspicion.

Oth. I will not.

Iago. Should you do so, my lord,

My speech should fall into such vile success

As my thoughts, I aim not at. Cassio's my worthy friend:

My lord, I see you are mov'd.

Oth. No, not much mov'd: —

I do not think but Desdemona's honest.

Iago. Long live she so! and long live you to think so!

Oth. And yet, how nature, erring from itself, —

Iago. Ay, there's the point: — As, — to be bold with you, —

Not to affect many proposed matches,

Of her own clime, complexion, and degree;

Whereeto, we see, in all things nature tends:

But, pardon me: I do not, in position,

Distinctly speak of her: though I may fear,
Her will, recalling to her better judgment,
May fall to match you with her country forms,

And (happily) repeat,

Oth. Farewell, farewell;

If more thou dost perceive, let me know more;

Set o'n thy wife to observe: Leave me, Iago.

[Going.

Iago. My lord, I take my leave.

Oth. Why did I marry? — This honest creature, doubleless,

Sees and knows more, much more, than he unfolds.

Iago. My lord, I would, I might entreat your honour

To scan this thing no further; leave it to time:
And though it be fit that Cassio have his place,
(For, sure, he fills it up with great ability),

Yet, if you please to hold him off a while,
You shall by that perceive him and his means:

Note, if your lady strain his entertainment 3

With any strong or vehement importunity;

Much will be seen in that. In the mean time,
Let me be thought too busy in my fears,
(As worthy cause I have, to fear — I am,) And hold her free, I do beseech your honour.

Oth. Fear not my government.

Iago. I once more take my leave.

[Exit.

Oth. This fellow's of exceeding honesty,
And knows all qualities, with a learned spirit,

Of human dealings: If I do prove her baggard 4,

Though that her jesses 5 were my dear heart-strings,
I'd whistle her off, and let her down the wind,

To prey at fortune. Haply, for I am black;
And have not those soft parts of conversation
That chamberers have: — Or, for I am declin'd
Into the vale of years; — yet that's not much;

She's gone; I am abus'd; and my relief

Must be — to loath her. O curse of marriage,

That we can call these delicate creatures ours,

And not their appetites! I had rather be a toad,
And live upon the vapour of a dungeon,

3 Press hard his re-admission to his office.

4 A species of hawk, also a term of reproach applied to a wanton.

5 Straps of leather by which a hawk is held on the fist.

1 An expression from falconry: to see a hawk is to sew up his eye-iris.
Than keep a corner in the thing I love,
For others' uses. Yet, 'tis the plague of great ones;
Prrrogativ'd are they, less than the base;
'Tis destiny unshunnable, like death.
But Desdemona comes! if she be false,

Enter Desdemona and Emilia.

O, then heaven mocks itself!—I'll not believe it.
Des. How now, my dear Othello?
Your dinner, and the generous islanders
By you invited, do attend your presence.
Oth. I am to blame.
Des. Why is your speech so faint? are you not well?
Oth. I have a pain upon my forehead here.
Des. Why that's with watching; 'twill away again.
Let me but bind it hard, within this hour
It will be well.

Oth. Your napkin is too little;
[He puts the Handkerchief from him, and it drops.
Let it alone. Come, I'll go in with you.
Des. I am very sorry that you are not well.

[Exeunt Oth. and Des.

Emil. I am glad I have found this napkin;
This was her first remembrance from the Moor:
My wayward husband hath a hundred times
Would me to steal it; but she so loves the token,
(For he conjur'd her, she would ever keep it,) That she reserves it ever more about her,
To kiss and talk to. I'll have the work ta'en out,
And give it Iago:
What he'll do with it, heaven knows, not I;
I nothing, but to please his fantasy.

Enter Iago.

Iago. How now! what do you here alone?
Emil. Do not you chide; I have a thing for you.
Iago. A thing for me?—it is a common thing.
Emil. Ha!
Iago. To have a foolish wife.
Emil. O, is that all? What will you give me now
For that same handkerchief?
Iago. What handkerchief?
Emil. What handkerchief?
Why, that the Moor first gave to Desdemona;
That which so often you did bid me steal.
Iago. Hast stolen it from her?
Emil. No, faith; she let it drop by negligence;
And to the advantage, I, being here, took't up.
Look, here it is.

Iago. A good wench; give it me.
Emil. What will you do with it, that you have been so earnest
To have me file it?
Iago. Why, what's that to you?
[Snatching it.
Emil. If it be not for some purpose of import,
Give it me again: Poor lady! she'll run mad,
When she shall lack it.
Iago. Be not you known of;'t; I have use for it.
Go, leave me.
[Exit Emilia.

I will in Cassio's lodging lose this napkin,
And let him find it: Trifles, light as air,
Are, to the jealous, confirmations strong
As proofs of holy writ. This may do something.
The Moor already changes with my poison;—
Dangerous conceits are, in their natures, poisons,
Which, at the first, are scarce found to distaste;
But, with a little act upon the blood,
Burn like the mines of sulphur. — I did say so:

Enter Othello.

Look, where he comes! Not poppy, nor mandra-} gora, 6
Nor all the drowsy syrups of the world,
Shall ever medicine thee to that sweet sleep
Which thou ow'dst? yesterday.
Oth. Ha! ha! false to me?
To me?
Iago. Why, how now, general? no more of that.
Iago. Avant! be gone! thou hast set me on the rack:
I swear, 'tis better to be much abus'd,
Than but to know't a little.

Iago. How now, my lord?
Oth. What sense had I of her stolen hours of guilt?
I saw it not, thought it not, it harm'd not me:
I slept the next night well, was free and merry;
I found not Cassio's kisses on her lips:
He that is robb'd, not wanting what is stolen,
Let him not know it, and he's not robb'd at all.
I had been happy had I nothing known.
Iago. I am sorry to hear this.
Oth. O now, for ever,
Farewell the tranquil mind! farewell content!
Farewell the plumed troop, and the big wars,
That make ambition virtue! O, farewell!
Farewell the neighing steed, and the shrill trump,
The spirit-stirring drum, the ear-piercing fife,
The royal bannier; and all quality,
Pride, pomp, and circumstance of glorious war!
And O you mortal engines, whose rude threats
The immortal Jove's dread clamours counterfeit,
Farewell! Othello's occupation's gone!
Iago. Is it possible? — My lord,—
Oth. Villain, be sure thou prove my love a whore;
Be sure of it; give me the ocular proof;
[Taking him by the Throat.
Or, by the worth of mine eternal soul,
Thou hadst been better have been born a dog,
Than answer my wak'd wrath.
Iago. Is it come to this?
Oth. Make me to see it; or (at the least) so prove it,
That the probation bear no hinge, nor loop,
To hang a doubt on: or, woe upon thy life!
Iago. My noble lord,—
Oth. If thou dost slander her, and torture me,
Never pray more: abandon all repose,
On horror's head horrors accumulate:
Do deeds to make heaven weep, all earth amaz'd,
For nothing can'st thou to damnation add,
Greater than that.
Iago. O grace! O heaven defend me!
Are you a man? have you a soul, or sense?—
God be wi' you; take mine office. — O wretched fool,
That liv'st to make thine honesty a vice!—
O monstrous world! Take note, take note, O world.
To be direct and honest, is not safe. —
I thank you for this profit; and, from hence,—
I'll love no friend, since love breeds such offence.
Oth. Nay, stay: — Thou shouldst be honest.
Iago. I should be wise; for honesty's a fool,
And loses that it works for.

6 The mandrake has a soporific quality.
7 Possessive.
Scene III.

THE MOOR OF VENICE.

Oth. By the world, I think my wife be honest, and think she is not. I think that thou art just, and think thou art not; I'll have some proof: Her name, that was as fresh As Dian's visage, is now begrim'd and black As mine own face. — If there be cords, or knives, Poison, or fire, or suffocating streams, I'll not endure it. — Would, I were satisfied!

Iago. I see, sir, you are eaten up with passion: I do repent me, that I put it to you. You would be satisfied?

Oth. Would? nay, I will.

Iago. And may: But, how? how satisfied, my lord? Would you, the supervisor, see their crime?

Oth. Death and damnation!

Iago. It was a tedious difficulty, I think, To bring them to that prospect: Damn them then, If ever mortal eyes do see their guilt, More than their own! What then? How then? What shall I say? Where's satisfaction? It is impossible you should see this, Impossible, though they were fools as gross As ignorance made drunk. But yet, I say, If imputation, and strong circumstances, Which lead directly to the door of truth, Will give you satisfaction, you may have it.

Oth. Give me a living reason she's disloyal.

Iago. I do not like the office: But, sith I am enter'd in this cause so far, — Prick'd to it by foolish honesty and love, — I will go on. I lay with Cassio lately; And, being troubled with a raging tooth, I could not sleep. There are a kind of men so loose of soul, That in their sleep will mutter their affairs; One of this kind is Cassio: In sleep I heard him say, — Sweet Desdemona, Let us be wary, let us hide our loves; And then, sir, would he wring my hand and cry, O cursed fate! that gave thee to the Moor!

Oth. O monstrous! monstrous!

Iago. Nay, this was but his dream.

Oth. But this denoted a foregone conclusion; Tis a shrud doubt, though it be but a dream.

Iago. And this may help to thicken other proofs, That do demonstrate thinly.

Oth. I'll bear her all to pieces.

Iago. Nay, but be wise: yet we see nothing done; She may be honest yet. Tell me but this, — Have you not sometimes seen a handkerchief, Spotted with strawberries, in your wife's hand?

Oth. I gave her such a one; 'twas my first gift.

Iago. I know not that; but such a handkerchief, (I am sure it was your wife's,) did I to-day See Cassio wipe his beard with.

Oth. If it be that, —

Iago. If it be that, or any that was hers, It speaks against her with the other proofs.

Oth. O, that the slave had forty thousand lives; One is too poor, too weak for my revenge!

Now do I see 'tis true. — Look here, Iago; All my fond love thus I do blow to heaven: 'Tis gone. —

Arise, black vengeance, from thy hollow cell! Yield up, O love, thy crown, and hearted throne, To tyrannous hate! swell, bosom, with thy fraught! For 'tis of aspicks tongues!

3 Speaking, manifest.
9 The heart on which thou wast enthroned.
1 Freight, load.

Iago. Pray, be content.

Oth. O, blood, Iago, blood!

Iago. Patience, I say; your mind, perhaps, may change.

Oth. Never, Iago. Like to the Pontick sea, Whose icy current and compulsive course Ne'er feels retiring ebb, but keeps due on To the Propontick, and the Hellespont; Even so my bloody thoughts, with violent pace, Shall ne'er look back, ne'er ebb to humble love, Till that a capable and wide revenge Swallow them up. — Now, by yond' marble heaven, In the due reverence of a sacred vow [Kneels. I here engage my words.

Oth. Do not rise yet. — [Kneels. Witness, you ever-burning lights above! You elements that clip us round about! Witness, that here Iago doth give up The execution of his wit, hands, heart, To wrong'd Othello's service! let him command, And to obey shall be in me remorse,

What bloody work soever.

Oth. I greet thy love, Not with vain thanks, but with acceptance bounteous, And will upon the instant put thee to't: Within these three days let me hear thee say, That Cassio's not alive.

Iago. My friend is dead; 'tis done, at your request; But let her live.

Oth. Damn her, lewd minx! O, damn her! Come, go with me apart; I will withdraw, To furnish me with some swift means of death For the fair devil. Now art thou my lieutenant.

Iago. I am your own for ever. [Execute.

Scene IV. — The same.

Enter Desdemona, Emilia, and Clown.

Des. Do you know where lieutenant Cassio lodges?

Clo. I know not where he lodges.

Des. Can you enquire him out, and be edified by report?

Clo. I will catechise the world for him; that is, make questions, and by them answer.

Des. Seek him, bid him come hither: tell him I have moved my lord in his behalf, and hope, all will be well.

Clo. To do this, is within the compass of man's wit; and therefore I will attempt the doing it. [Exit.

Des. Where should I lose that handkerchief, Emilia?

Emil. I know not, madam.

Des. Believe me, I had rather have lost my purse Full of cruzadoes, b And, but my noble Moor Is true of mind, and made of no such baseness As jealous creatures are, it were enough To put him to ill-thinking.

Emil. Is he not jealous?

Des. Who, he? I think, the sun, where he was born, Drew all such humours from him.

Emil. Look, where he comes.

Des. I will not leave him now, till Cassio Be call'd to him. — How is't with you, my lord?

2 Capacious.
3 Embrace.
4 Not of malice to others, but of tenderness for him.
5 A Portuguese coin.

3 M

3M
Enter Othello.

Oth. Well, my good lady: — [Aside.] O, hard- ness to dissemble! —

How do you, Desdemona?

Des. Well, my good lord.

Oth. Give me your hand: This hand is moist, my lady.

Des. It yet has felt no age, nor known no sorrow.

Oth. 'Tis a good hand, a frank one.

Des. You may indeed say so;

For 'twas that hand that gave away my heart.

Oth. A liberal hand: The hearts, of old, gave hands;

But our new heraldry is — hands, not hearts.

Des. I cannot speak of this. Come now, your promise.

Oth. What promise, chuck?

Des. I have sent to bid Cassio come speak with you.

Oth. I have a salt and sullen rheum offends me;

Lend me thy handkerchief.

Des. Here, my lord.

Oth. That which I gave you.

Des. I have it not about me.

Oth. Not?

Des. No, indeed, my lord.

Oth. That is a fault:

That handkerchief
Did an Egyptian to my mother give;
She was a charmer?, and could almost read
The thoughts of people: she told her, while she kept it,
'Twould make her amiable, and subdue my father
Entirely to her love; but if she lost it,
Or made a gift of it, my father's eye
Should hold her loathly, and his spirits should hunt
After new fancies: She, dying, gave it me;
And bid me, when my fate would have me wive,
To give it her. I did so: and take heed of 't,
Make it a darling like your precious eye;
To lose or give't away, were such perdition,
As nothing else could match.

Des. Is it possible?

Oth. 'Tis true: there's magic in the web of it:
A shibyl, that had number'd in the world
The sun to make two hundred compasses,
In her prophetic fury sew'd the work;
The worms were hallow'd that did breed the silk;
And it was died in mummy, which the skilful
Conserv'd of maidens' hearts.

Des. Indeed! is't true?

Oth. Most veritable; therefore look to't well.

Des. Then 'would to heaven, that I had never seen it.

Oth. Ha! wherefor?

Des. Why do you speak so startingly and rash?7

Oth. Is't lost? is't gone? speak, is it out of the way?

Des. Heaven bless us!

Oth. Say you?

Des. It is not lost; But what an if it were?

Oth. Ha!

Des. I say, it is not lost.

Oth. Fetch't, let me see it.

Des. Why, so I can, sir, but I will not now;
This is a trick, to put me from my suit;
I pray, let Cassio be receiv'd again.

Oth. Fetch me that handkerchief: my mind mis- gives.

* Enchantress.  7 Vehemently, violently.

Des. Come, come;

You'll never meet a more sufficient man.

Oth. The handkerchief,

Des. I pray, talk me of Cassio,

Oth. The handkerchief,

Des. A man that, all his time,

Hath founded his good fortune on your love;

Shall'd dangers with you:

Oth. The handkerchief,

Des. In sooth,

You are to blame.

Oth. Away! [Exit Othello.

Emil. Is not this man jealous?

Des. I ne'er saw this before.

Sure, there's some wonder in this handkerchief: I am most unhappy in the loss of it.

Emil. 'Tis not a year or two shows us a man; But look you! Cassio, and my husband, come.

Enter Iago and Cassio.

Iago. There is no other way: 'tis she must do't;

And, lo, the happiness! go, and importune her.

Des. How now? good Cassio? what's the news with you?

Cas. Madam, my former suit: I do beseech you, That, by your virtuous means, I may again Exist, and be a member of his love,

Whom I, with all the duty of my heart,

Entirely honour: I would not be delay'd:

If my offence be of such mortal kind,

That neither service past, nor present sorrows,

Nor purpose'd merit in futurity,

Can ransom me into his love again,

But to know must be my benefit;

So shall I clothe me in a fore'd content,

And shut myself up in some other course,

To fortune's alms.

Des. Alas! thrice gentle Cassio,

My advocation is not now in tune;

My lord is not my lord; nor should I know him,

Were he in favour9 as in humour alter'd.

So help me, every spirit sanctified,

As I have spoken for you all my best;

And stood within the blank of his displeasure!

For my free speech! You must a while be patient:

What I can do, I will; and more I will,

Than for myself I dare: let that suffice you.

Iago. Is my lord angry?

Emil. He went hence but now,

And, certainly, in strange unequilleness.

Iago. Can he be angry? I have seen the cannon,

When it hath blown its ranks into the air;

And, like the devil, from his very arm

Puff'd his own brother; — And can he be angry?

Something of moment, then: I will go meet him;

There's matter in't indeed, if he be angry.

Des. I pry'thee do so. — Something, sure of state,— [Exit Iago.

Either from Venice; or some unbatch'd practice9 Made demonstrable here in Cyprus to him,—

Had puddled his clear spirit: and, in such cases, Men's natures wrangle with inferior things,

Though great ones are their object. 'Tis even so;

For let our finger ache, and it endures

Our other healthful members ev'n to that sense

Of pain: Nay, we must think, men are not gods;

Nor of them look for such observances

As fit the bridal. — Beshrew me much, Emilia,

9 In countenance.  1 Within the shot of his anger.

9 Made demonstrable, in which cases,

The nuptial feast.
I have this while with leaden thoughts been press'd;
But I shall, in a more continue time
Strike off this score of absence. Sweet Bianca, [Giving her Desdemona’s Handkerchief.

Take me this work out.]

Bian. O, Cassio, whence came this?
This is some token from a newer friend.
To the felt absence now I feel a cause:
Is it come to this? Well, well.

Cas. Woman, go to!
Throw your vile guesses in the devil’s teeth,
From whence you have them. You are jealous now,
That this is from some mistress, some remembrance;
No, in good truth, Bianca.

Bian. Why, whose is it?
Cas. I know not, sweet: I found it in my chamber.
I like the work well; ere it be demanded,
(As like enough, it will,) I’d have it copied;
Take it, and do’t; and leave me for this time.

Bian. Leave you! wherefore?
Cas. I do attend here on the general;
And think it no addition, nor my wish,
To have him see me woman’d.

Bian. Why, I pray you?
Cas. Not that I love you not.

But that you do not love me.
I pray you, bring me on the way a little;
And say, if I shall see you soon again.

Cas. ’Tis but a little way, that I can bring you,
For I attend here; but I’ll see you soon.

Bian. ’Tis very good; I must be circumspect’d.

[Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I. — The same.

Enter Othello and Iago.

Iago. Will you think so?

Oth. Think so, Iago?

Iago. But if I give my wife a handkerchief,—

Oth. What then?

Iago. Why then ’tis yours, my lord; and, being yours,
She may, I think, bestow’t on any man.

Oth. She is protectress of her honour too;
May she give that?

Iago. Her honour is an essence that’s not seen;
They have it very oft, that have it not:
But, for the handkerchief,—

Oth. By heaven I would most gladly have forgot it:
Thou said’st, — O, it comes o’er my memory,
As doth the raven o’er the infected house,
Boding to all — he had my handkerchief.

Iago. Ay, what of that?

Oth. That’s not so good now.

Iago. What, if I had said, I had seen him do you wrong?

Or heard him say, — As knaves be such abroad,
Who having, by their own importunate suit,
Or voluntary dowry of some mistress,
Convinced or supplied them, cannot choose
But they must blab —

4 The raven was thought to be a constant attendant on a house infected with the plague.

5 Old spelling of supplied, & c. softened.

Iago. He hath my lord; but be you well assurance,
No more than he’ll unswear.

Oth. What hath he said?

Iago. ’Faith, that he did, — I know not what he did.

[falls in a trance.

Iago. Work on,
My medicine, work! Thus credulous fools are caught;
And many worthy and chaste dames, even thus, All guiltless meet reproach. — What, ho! my lord

Enter Cassio.

My lord, I say! Othello! — How now, Cassio?

Cas. What is the matter?

Iago. My lord is fallen into an epilepsy;
This is his second fit; he had one yesterday.

Cas. Rub him about the temples.

Iago. No, forbear: The lethargy must have his quiet course:
If not, he foams at mouth; and, by and by, Breaks out to savage madness. Look, he stirs.

8 Time less interrupted.
? The meaning is, not pick out the work, but copy this work in another handkerchief.

9 M 2
Do you withdraw yourself a little while,
He will recover straight; when he is gone,
I would on great occasion speak with you. —

[Exit Cassio.

How is it, general? have you not hurt your head?

Oth. Dost thou mock me?

Iago. I mock you! no, by heaven:
‘Would you would bear your fortunes like a man.

Oth. A horned man’s a monster, and a beast.

Iago. There’s many a beast then in a populous city,
And many a civil monster.

Oth. Did he confess it?

Iago. Good sir, be a man.

This is the spit of hell. But let me know;
And, knowing what I am, I know what she shall be.

Oth. O, thou art wise; ’tis certain a beast.

Iago. Confine yourself but in a patient list.

Whilst you were here, ere while mad with your grief,
(A passion most unsuiting such a man,) Cassio came hither: I shifted him away,
And laid good scuse upon your ecstasy;
Bade him anon return, and here speak with me;
The which he promis’d. Do but encave yourself,
And mark the fleers, the gibes, and notable scorns,
That dwell in every region of his face;
For I will make him tell the tale anew,—
And say when he’s again to meet your wife;
I say, but mark his gesture. Marry, patience;
Or I shall say, you are all in all in spleen,
And nothing of a man.

Oth. Dost thou hear, Iago?

Iago. I will be found most cunning in my patience;
But (dost thou hear?) most bloody.

Iago. That’s not amiss;
But yet keep time in all. Will you withdraw?

[Othello withdraws.

Now will I question Cassio of Bianca,
A housewife, that, by selling her desires,
Buys herself bread and clothes: it is a creature,
That dotes on Cassio, — as ’tis the trumpet’s plague,
To beguile many, and he beguils’d by one;
He, when he hears of her, cannot refrain
From the excess of laughter: — Here he comes:—

Re-enter Cassio.

As he shall smile, Othello shall go mad;
And his unbookish jealousy must construe
Poor Cassio’s smiles, gestures, and light behaviour
Quite in the wrong. — How do you now, lieutenant?

Cass. The worser, that you give me the addition,
Whose want even kills me.

Iago. Ply Desdemona well, and you are sure of it.

Now, if this suit lie in Bianca’s power,

[Speaking lower.

How quickly should you speed?

Cass. Alas, poor caitiff!
Oth. Look, how he laughs already! [Aside.

Iago. I never knew a woman love man so.

Cass. Alas, poor rogue! I think indeed she loves me.

Oth. Now he denies it faintly, and laughs it out.

[Aside.

Iago. Do you hear, Cassio?

Oth. Now he importunes him
To tell it o’er: Go to; well said, well said. [Aside.

Iago. She gives it out, that you shall marry her;

Do you intend it?

8 Within the bounds of patience.  9 Title of lieutenant.
THE MOOR OF VENICE.

Scene I.

not live: No, my heart is turned to stone; I strike it, and it hurts my hand. O, the world hath not a sweeter creature: she might lie by an emperor's side.

Iago. Nay, that's not your way.
Oth. Hang her! I do but say what she is:—So delicate with her needle!—An admirable musician! O, she will sing the savageness out of a bear!—
Of so high and plenteous wit and invention!—
Iago. She's the worse for all this.
Oth. O, a thousand, a thousand times:—And then, of so gentle a condition! 4
Iago. Ay, too gentle.
Oth. Nay, that's certain: But yet the pity of it, Iago!—O, Iago, the pity of it, Iago!
Iago. If you are so fond over her iniquity, give her patent to offend; for, if it touch not you, it comes near nobody.
Oth. I will chop her into messes:—Cuckold me!
Iago. O, 'tis foul in her.
Oth. With mine officer!
Iago. That's fouler.
Oth. Get me some poison, Iago; this night:—I'll not expostulate with her, lest her beauty unpro vide my mind again: this night, Iago.
Iago. Do it not with poison, strangle her in her bed, even the bed she hath contaminated.
Oth. Good, good: the justice of it pleases; very good.
Iago. And, for Cassio,—let me be his under taker:
You shall hear more by midnight.
[A trumpet within.
Oth. Excellent good. — What trumpet is that same?
Iago. Something from Venice, sure. 'Tis Lodovico,
Come from the duke: and, see, your wife is with him.

Enter Lodovico, Desdemona, and Attendants.

Lod. 'Save you, worthy general!
Oth. With all my heart, sir.
Lod. The duke and senators of Venice greet you.
[Give him a Packet.
Oth. I kiss the instrument of their pleasures.
[Open the Packet and reads.
Des. And what's the news, good cousin Lodovico?
Iago. I am very glad to see you, signior;
Welcome to Cyprus.
Lod. I thank you; How does lieutenant Cassio?
Iago. Lives, sir.
Des. Cousin, there's fallen between him and my lord
An unkind breach: but you shall make all well.
Oth. Are you sure of that?
Des. My lord?
Oth. This fail you not to do, as you will—[Reads.
Lod. He did not call; he's busy in the paper.
Is there division 'twixt my lord and Cassio?
Des. A most unhappy one; I would do much To stone 5 them, for the love I bear to Cassio.
Oth. Fire and brimstone!
Des. My lord?
Oth. Are you wise?
Des. What, is he angry?
Lod. 'May be, the letter mov'd him;
For, as I think, they do command him home,
Deputing Cassio in his government.

Des. By my troth, I am glad on't.
Oth. Indeed?
Des. My lord?
Oth. I am glad to see you mad.
Des. How, sweet Othello?
Oth. Devil! [Striking her.
Des. I have not deserv'd this.
Lod. My lord, this would not be believ'd in Venice.
Though I should swear I saw it: 'Tis very much;
Make her amends, she weeps.
Oth. O devil, devil!
If that the earth could teem with woman's tears,
Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile:—
Out of my sight!
Des. I will not stay to offend you.
[Going.

Lod. Truly, an obedient lady:—
I do beseech your lordship, call her back.
Oth. Mistress,—
Des. My lord?
Oth. What would you with her, sir?
Lod. Who, I, my lord?
Oth. Ay; you did wish that I would make her turn:
Sir, she can turn, and turn, and yet go on,
And turn again; and she can weep, sir, weep:
And she's obedient, as you say,—obedient,—
Very obedient;—Proceed you in your tears.
Concerning this, sir,—O well-painted passion!
I am commanded home: Get you away;
I'll send for you anon.—Sir, I obey the mandate,
And will return to Venice;—Hence, avaint!

[Exit Desdemona.

Cassio shall have my place. And,—sir, to-night, I do entreat that we may sup together.
You are welcome, sir, to Cyprus. —Gosets, and monkeys!
[Exit.

Lod. Is this the noble Moor whom our full senate Call—all-in-all sufficient?—This the noble nature Whom passion could not shake? whose solid virtue The shot of accident, nor dart of chance, Could neither graze, nor pierce?
Iago. He is much chang'd.
Lod. Are his wits safe? is he not light of brain?
Iago. He is that he is; I may not breathe my censure.
What he might be,—if, what he might, he is not,—
I would to heaven he were.
Lod. What, strike his wife!
Iago. 'Faith, that was not so well; Yet 'would I knew,
That stroke would prove the worst.
Lod. Is it his use?
Or did the letters work upon his blood,
And new-create this fault?
Iago. Alas, alas
It is not honesty in me, to speak
What I have seen and known. You shall observe him;
And his own courses will denote him so,
That I may save my speech: Do but go after,
And mark how he continues.
Lod. I am sorry, that I am deceiv'd in him.
[Exeunt.

SCENE II. — A Room in the Castle.

Enter Othello and Emilia.
Oth. You have seen nothing then!
Emil. Nor ever heard; nor ever did suspect.
Oth. Yes, you have seen Cassio and she together.

3 M 3
OTHELLO, Act IV.

Emil. But then I saw no harm: and then I heard each syllable, that breath made up between them.

Oth. What, did they never whisper?

Emil. Never, my lord.

Oth. Nor send you out of the way?

Emil. Never.

Oth. To fetch your fan, her gloves, her mask, nor nothing?

Emil. Never, my lord.

Oth. That’s strange.

Emil. I durst, my lord, to wager she is honest, lay down my soul at stake: if you think other, remove your thought; it doth abuse your bosom. If any wretch hath put this in your head, let heaven requite it with the serpent’s curse! For, if she be not honest, chaste, and true, there’s no man happy: the purest of their wives is foul as slander.

Oth. Bid her come hither:—go.—

[Exit Emilj.

She says enough:—yet she’s a simple drab:
That cannot say as much. This is a subtle pimp,
A closet-lock-and-key of villainous secrets.

Re-enter Emilj, with Desdemona.

Des. My lord, what is your will?

Oth. Pray, chuck, come hither.

Des. What is your pleasure?

Oth. Let me see your eyes;

Look in my face.

Des. What horrible fancy’s this?

Oth. Some of your function, mistress; [To Emilj.

Leave us alone, and shut the door:
Cough, or cry—hem, if any body come;
Your mystery, your mystery;—nay, despatch.

[Exit Emilj.

Des. Upon my knees, what doth your speech import?

I understand a fury in your words,
But not the words.

Oth. Why, what art thou?

Des. Your wife, my lord; your true and loyal wife.

Oth. Come, swear it, damn thyself;

Lest, being like one of heaven, the devils themselves should fear to seize thee:

Swear—thou art honest.

Des. Heaven doth truly know it.

Oth. Heaven truly knows, that thou art false as hell.

Des. To whom, my lord? with whom? how am I false?

Oth. O Desdemona!—away! away! away!

Des. Alas, the heavy day!—why do you weep?

Am I the occasion of these tears, my lord?

If, haply, you my father do suspect,

An instrument of this your calling back,

Lay not your blame on me; if you have lost him, why, I have lost him too.

Oth. Had it pleas’d Heaven to try me with affliction; had he rain’d
All kinds of sores, and shames, on my bare head;

Steep’d me in poverty to the very lips;

Given to captivity me and my utmost hopes;

I should have found in some part of my soul
A drop of patience: but (alas!) to make me

A fixed figure, for the time of scorn

To point his slow and moving finger at,—

O! O!

Yet could I bear that too; well, very well:

But there, where I have garnered’d up my heart;

Where either I must live, or bear no life;

The fountain from the which my current runs,

Or else dries up; to be discarded thence!

Turn thy complexion there!

Patience, thou young and rose-lipp’d cherubin;

Ay, there, look grim as hell!

Des. I hope, my noble lord esteems me honest.

Oth. O, ay: as summer flies are in the shambles,

That quicken even with blowing. O thou weed,

Who art so lovely fair, and smell’st so sweet,

That the sense aches at thee.—'Would thou hadst ne’er been born!'

Des. Alas, what ignorant sin have I committed?

Oth. Was this fair paper, this most goodly book,

Made to write whore upon! What committed!

Committed!—O thou publick commoner!

I should make very forges of my cheeks,

That would to cinders burn up modesty,

Did I but speak thy deeds—What committed!

The very wind that kisses all it meets,

Is hush’d within the hollow mine of earth,

And will not hear it: What committed!—

Impudent strumpet!

Des. By heaven, you do me wrong.

Oth. Are not you a strumpet?

Des. No, as I am a Christian:

If to preserve this vessel for my lord,

From any other foul unlawful touch,

Be, not to be a strumpet, I am none.

Oth. What, not a whore?

Des. No, as I shall be saved.

Oth. Is it possible?

Des. O, heaven forgive us!

Oth. I cry you mercy, then;

I took you for that cunning whore of Venice,

That married with Othello.——You, mistress,

Re-enter Emilj.

That have the office opposite to Saint Peter,

And keep the gate of hell; You! you! ay, you:

We have done our course: there’s money for your pains;

I pray you, turn the key, and keep our counsel.

[Exit Emiij.

Emil. Alas, what does this gentleman conceive?

How do you, madam? how do you, my good lady?

Des. Faith, half asleep.

Emil. Good madam, what’s the matter with my lord?

Des. With who?

Emil. Why, with my lord, madam.

Des. Who is thy lord?

Emil. He that is yours, sweet lady.

Des. I have none: Do not talk to me, Emilia; I cannot weep; nor answer I have none,

But what should go by water. Pr’ythee to-night

Lay on my bed my wedding sheets,—remember;—

And call thy husband hither.

Emil. Here is a change, indeed!

[Exit Emiij.

Des. 'Tis meet I should be us’d so, very meet.

How have I been behav’d, That he might stick

The small’st opinion on my great’st abuse?

Re-enter Emilia, with Iago.

Iago. What is your pleasure, madam? How is it with you?

6 Treasured up.
Scene II.

THE MOOR OF VENICE.

Des. I cannot tell. Those that do teach young babes,
Do it with gentle means, and easy tasks:
He might have chid me so: for, in good faith,
I am a child to chiding.

Iago. What's the matter, lady?

Emil. Alas, Iago, my lord hath so bewhor'd her,
Thrown such despite and heavy terms upon her,
As true hearts cannot bear.

Des. Am I that name, Iago?

Iago. What name, fair lady?

Des. Such as, she says, my lord did say I was.

Emil. He call'd her, whore; a beggar, in his drink,
Could not have laid such terms upon his callet?

Iago. Why did he so?

Des. I do not know; I am sure, I am none such.

Iago. Do not weep, do not weep; Alas the day!

Emil. Has she forsook so many noble matches,
Her father, and her country, and her friends,
To be call'd—whore? would it not make one weep?

Des. It is my wretched fortune.

Iago. Beshrew him for it!
How comes this trick upon him?

Des. Nay, heaven doth know.

Emil. I will be hang'd, if some eternal villain,
Some busy and insinuating rogue,
Some coggling cozening slave, to get some office,
Have not devis'd this slander; I'll be hang'd else.

Iago. Fye, there is no such man; it is impossible.

Des. If any such there be, heaven pardon him!

Emil. A halter pardon him. Who keeps her company?

What place? what time? what form? what likelihood?

The Moor's abus'd by some most villainous knave,
Some base notorious knave, some scurvy fellow:—
O, heaven, that such companions thou'rt unfold;
And put in every honest hand a whip,
To lash the rascal naked through the world,
Even from the east to the west!

Iago. Speak within door.

Emil. O, fye upon him! some such squire he was,
That turn'd your wit the seamy side of without,
And made you to suspect me with the Moor.

Iago. You are a fool; go to.

Des. O, good Iago,
What shall I do to win my lord again?

Good friend, go to him; for by this light of heaven,
I know not how I lost him. Here I kneel:—

If ever my will did trespass 'gainst his love,
Either in discourse of thought, or actual deed;
Or that mine eyes, mine ears, or any sense,
Delighted them in any other form;
Or that I do not yet, and ever did,
And ever will,—though he do shake me off,
To beggarly divorcement,—love him dearly,
Comfort forswear me: Unkindness may do much;
And his unkindness may defeat my life.
But never taint my love. I can't say, whore;

It does abhor me, now I speak the word;
To do the act that might the addition earn,
Not the world's mass of vanity could make me.

Iago. I pray you, be content; 'tis but his humour;
The business of the state does him offence,
And he does chide with you.

Des. If 'twere no other,

Iago. It is but so, I warrant you. [Trumpets.
Hark, how these instruments summon to supper!

And the great messengers of Venice stay:
Go in, and weep not; all things shall be well.

[Exeunt Desdemona and Emilia.

Enter Rodrigo.

How now, Rodrigo?

Rod. I do not find, that thou deal'st justly with me.

Iago. What in the contrary?

Rod. Every day thou dost me with some device, Iago; and rather (as it seems to me now) keep'st from me all conveniency, than supplies me with the least advantage of hope. I will, indeed, no longer endure it: Nor am I yet persuaded, to put up in peace what already I have foolishly suffered.

Iago. Will you hear me, Rodrigo?

Rod. I have heard too much; for your words, and performances, are no kin together.

Iago. You charge me most unjustly.

Rod. With nought but truth. I have wasted myself out of my means. The jewels you have had from me, to deliver to Desdemona, would half' have corrupted a vostarist: You have told me — she has received them, and returned me expectations and comforts of sudden respect and acquittance 5; but I find none.

* Iago. Well; go to; very well.

Rod. Very well! go to! I cannot go to, man; nor 'tis not very well; By this hand, I say, it is very scurry; and begin to find myself bobbed in it.

Iago. Very well.

Rod. I tell you, 'tis not very well. I will make myself known to Desdemona: If she will return me my jewels, I will give over my suit, and repent my unlawful solicitation: if not, assure yourself, I will seek satisfaction of you.

Iago. You have said now.

Rod. Ay, and I have said nothing, but what I protest intention of doing.

Iago. Why, now I see there's mettle in thee; and even, from this instant, do build on thee a better opinion than ever before. Give me thy hand, Rodrigo: Thou hast taken against me a most just exception; but yet, I protest, I have dealt most directly in thy affair.

Rod. It hath not appeared.

Iago. I grant, indeed, it hath not appeared; and your suspicion is not without wit and judgment. But, Rodrigo, if thou hast that within thee indeed, which I have greater reason to believe now than ever,—I mean, purpose, courage, and valour,—this night show it: if thou the next night following enjoyest not Desdemona, take me from this world with treacherous and devise engines for my life.

Rod. Well, what is it? is it within reason, and compass?

Iago. Sir, there is especial commission come from Venice, to depute Cassio in Othello's place.

Rod. Is that true? why, then Othello and Desdemona return again to Venice.

Iago. O, no; he goes into Mauritania, and takes away with him the fair Desdemona, unless his abode be lingered here by some accident; wherein none can be so determinate, as the removing of Cassio.

Rod. How do you mean — removing of him?

Iago. Why, by making him uncapable of Othello's place; knocking out his brains.

Rod. And that you would have me do?
Iago. Ay; if you dare do yourself a profit and a right. He sups to-night with a harlot, and thither will I go to him;—he knows not yet of his honourable fortune: if you will watch his going thence, (which I will fashion to fall out between twelve and one,) you may take him at your pleasure; I will be near to second your attempt, and he shall fall between us. Come, stand not amazed at it, but go along with me; I will show you such a necessity in his death, that you shall think yourself bound to put it on him. It is now high supper-time, and a necessity grows to waste: about it.

Rod. I will hear further reason for this.

Iago. And you shall, be satisfied. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. — Another Room in the Castle.

Enter Othello, Lodovico, Desdemona, Emilia, and Attendants.

Lod. I do beseech you, sir, trouble yourself no further.

Oth. O, pardon me; 'twill do me good to walk.

Lod. Madam, good night; I humbly thank your ladyship.

Des. Your honour is most welcome.

Oth. Will you walk, sir? —

O. — Desdemona, —

Des. My lord?

Oth. Get you to bed on the instant, I will be returned forthwith: dismiss your attendant there; look, it be done.

Des. I will, my lord. [Exeunt Oth. Lod. and Attendants.

Emil. How goes it now? he looks gentler than he did.

Des. He says he will return incontinent; he hath commanded me to go to bed, and bade me to dismiss you.

Emil. Dismiss me!

Des. It was his biding; therefore good Emilia, give me my nightly wearing, and adieu: We must not now displease him.

Emil. I would, you had never seen him!

Des. So would not I; my love doth so approve him, That even his stubbornness, his checks, and frowns,— Pr'ythee, unpinned me, — have grace and favour in them.

Emil. I have laid those sheets you bade me on the bed.

Des. All's one: Good father! how foolish are our minds! —

If I do die before thee, pr'ythee, shroud me In one of those same sheets.

Emil. Come, come, you talk.

Des. My mother had a maid call'd — Barbara; She was in love; and he, she lov'd, proved mad, And did forsake her; she had a song of — willow, An old thing 'twas, but it express'd her fortune, And she died singing it: That song, to-night, Will not go from my mind; I have much to do But to go hang my head all at one side, And sing it like poor Barbara. Pr'ythee, despatch.

Emil. Shall I go fetch your night-gown?

Des. No, unpinned me here. —

This Lodovico is a proper man.

Emil. A very handsome man.

Des. And he speaks well.

Emil. I know a lady in Venice, who would have walked barefoot to Palestine, for a touch of his nearer lip.

I. Des. The poor soul sat sighing by a yew-cour tree, Sing all a green willow; — [Singing.

Her hand on her bosom, her head on her knee, Sing willow, willow, willow:

The fresh streams ran by her, and murmur'd her moans; Sing willow, &c.

Her salt tears fell from her, and soften'd the stones:

[Exeunt. Lay by these:

Singing, willow, willow, willow;

Pr'ythee, hie thee; he'll come anon.

Sing all a green willow must be my garland.

II. Let nobody blame him, his scorn I approve, —

Nay, that's not next. — Har! who is it that knocks?

Emil. It is the wind.

Des. 'Sot, get thee gone; good night. Mine eyes do itch;

Dost that bode weeping?

Emil. 'Tis neither here nor there.

Des. I have heard it said so. — O, these men, these men! —

Dost thou in conscience think, — tell me, Emilia, — That there be women do abuse their husbands

In such gross kind?

Emil. There be some such, no question.

Des. Wouldst thou do such a deed for all the world?

Emil. Why, would not you?

Des. No, by this heavenly light! Wouldst thou do such a deed for all the world?

Emil. The world is a huge thing: 'Tis a great price.

Des. Good troth, I think thou wouldst not.

Emil. By my troth, I think I should. Marry, I would not do such a thing for a joint-ring; nor for measures of lawn; nor for gowns, petticoats, nor caps, nor any petty exhibition: but, for the whole world.

Des. Beshrew me, if I would do such a wrong for the whole world.

Emil. Why, the wrong is but a wrong 'i' the world; and, having the world for your labour, 'tis a wrong in your own world, and you might quickly make it right.

Des. I do not think there is any such woman.

Emil. Yes, a dozen.

But, I do think, it is their husbands' faults, If wives do fall: Say, that they slack their duties, Or else break out in peevish jealousies, Throwing restraint upon us; or, say they strike us, Or scant our former having 6 in despite; Why, we have galls; and, though we have some grace, Yet we have some revenge. Let husbands know Their wives have sense 7 like them: they see, and

And have their palates both for sweet and sour, As husbands have. What is it that they do, When they change us for others? Is it sport? I think it is; And doth affection breed it? I think it doth; Is't frailty, that thus errs? It is so too: And have not we affections? Desires like them? and frailty, as men have? Then, let them use us well: else let them know, The ills we do, their ills instruct us to.

Des. Good night, good night: Heaven me such usage send, Not to pick bad from bad; but, by bad, mend! [Exeunt.
SCENE I. — A Street.

Enter Iago and Roderigo.

Iago. Here, stand behind this bulk; straight will he come:
Wear thy good rapier bare, and put it home;
Quick, quick; fear nothing: I will be at thy elbow:
It makes us, or it mars us; think on that,
And fix most firm thy resolution.

Roderigo. Be near at hand; I may miscarry in’t.

Iago. Here, at thy hand; be bold, and take thy sword.

[Retires to a little distance.

Roderigo. I have no great devotion to the deed;
And yet he has given me satisfying reasons: —
’Tis but a man gone: — forth, my sword; he dies.

[Go to his stand.

Iago. I have rubb’d this youngster almost to the sense,
And he grows angry. Now, whether he kill Cassio,
Or Cassio him, or each do kill the other,
Every way makes my gain: Live Roderigo,
He calls me to a restitution large
Of gold, and jewels, that I babb’d from him,
As gifts to Desdemona;
It must not be: if Cassio do remain,
He hath a daily beauty in his life,
That makes me ugly; and, besides, the Moor
May unfold me to him; there stand I in much peril;
No, he must die: — But so, I swear.

Enter Cassio.

Roderigo. I know his gait, ‘tis he; — Villain, thou diest.
[Runs from his post, and makes a pass at Cassio.

Cassio. That thrust had been mine enemy indeed,
But that my coat is better than thou thinkest;
I will make proof of thine.

[Draws, and wounds Roderigo.

Roderigo. O, I am slain! Iago rushes from his post, cuts Cassio behind in the Leg, and Exit.

Cassio. I am maim’d for ever: — Help, ho! murder! murder!

[Fall.

Enter Othello, at a distance.

Othello. The voice of Cassio: — Iago keeps his word.
Roderigo. O, villain that I am!

Othello. Hark! ‘tis even so.

Cassio. O, help! ho! light! a surgeon!

Othello. ’Tis he; — O brave Iago, honest, and just,
That hath such noble sense of thy friend’s wrong!
Thou teachest me, — Minion, thy dear lies dead,
And your fate his apace: — Strumpet, I come:
For’tis of my heart those charms, thine eyes, are blotted;
Thy bed, now stain’d, shall with thy blood be spotted.

[Exit Othello.

Enter Lodovico and Gratiano, at a distance.

Cassio. What, ho! no watch? no passage? murder! murder!

Gratiano. ’Tis some miscarriage; the cry is very direful.

Enter Iago, with a Light.

Lodovico. Hark! Here’s one comes in his shirt, with light and weapons.

Iago. Who’s there? whose noise is this, that cries on murder?

Lodovico. We do not know.

Iago. Did you not hear a cry?

Cassio. Here, here; for heaven’s sake, help me.

Iago. What’s the matter?

Gratiano. This is Othello’s ancient, as I take it.

Lodovico. The same, indeed; a very valiant fellow.

Iago. What are you here that cry so grievously?

Cassio. O, I am spoil’d, undone by villains! Give me some help.

Lodovico. O me, lieutenant! what villains have done this?

Cassio. I think, that one of them is hereabout,
And cannot make away.

Iago. O treacherous villains! — What, are you there? come in, and give some help.

[To Lodovico and Gratiano.

Lodovico. O, help me here!

Cassio. That’s one of them.

Iago. O murderous slave! O villain! [Iago stabs Roderigo.

Lodovico. O vile Iago! O inhuman dog! — O! O! O! Iago. Kill men! the dark! — Where be these bloody thieves?

How silent is this town! — Ho! murder! murder!

What may you be? are you of good, or evil?

Lodovico. As you shall prove us, praise us.

Iago. Signior Lodovico?

Lodovico. He, sir.

Iago. I cry you mercy; Here’s Cassio hurt By villains.

Gratiano. Cassio?

Iago. How is it, brother?

Cassio. My leg is cut in two.

Iago. Marry, heaven forbid! — Light, gentlemen; I’ll bind it with my shirt.

Enter Bianca.

Bianca. What is the matter, ho? who is’t that cry’d?

Iago. Who is’t that cry’d?

Bianca. O my dear Cassio! my sweet Cassio!

Cassio. O Cassio! Cassio! Cassio!

Iago. O notable strumpet! — Cassio, may you suspect

Who they should be, that have thus mangled you?

Bianca. No.

Gratiano. I am sorry, to find you thus: I have been to seek you.

4 Thick, cloudy.
Iago. Lend me a garter: So.—O, for a chair, To bear him easily hence! The Do you shake at that? What is that, husband? Your hand do you shake not. Iago. O, did he so? I charge you go with me. Iago. I am no Dr. I am no Dr. of Venice? Iago. I know him, ay. Iago. Signior Gratiano? I cry you gentle pardon; These bloody accidents must excuse my manners, That so neglected you. save your labour. Iago. Cassio hath here been set on in the dark, By Roderigo, and fellows that are 'scap'd; He's almost slain, and Roderigo dead. Emilia. Alas, good gentleman! alas, good Cassio! Iago. This is the fruit of lewdness. Pr'ythee, Emilia, Go know of Cassio where he supp'd to-night: What, do you shake at that? Iago. He supp'd at my house; but I therefore shake not. Iago. You did so? I charge you go with me. Iago. I am no Dr. I am no Dr. of Venice? Iago. Kind gentlemen, let's go see poor Cassio dress'd: — Come, mistress, you must tell us another tale. — Emilia, run you to the citadel, And tell my lord and lady what has happ'd. — Will you go on, I pray? — This is the night, That either makes me, or fordoes5 me quite.

SCENE II. A Bed-chamber: Desdemona in Bed asleep. A Light burning. Enter Othello. Oth. It is the cause, it is the cause, my soul, — Let me not name it to you, you chaste stars! — It is the cause. — Yet I'll not shed her blood; Nor scar that whiter skin of her's than snow, And smooth as monumental alabaster. [Takes off his Sword. Yet she must die, else she'll betray more men. Put out the light, and then put out the light: If I quench thee, thou flaming minister, I can again thy former light restore, Should I repent me: — but once put out thine, Thou cunning'st pattern of excelling nature, I know not where is that Prometheus heat, That can thy light reform. When I have pluck'd thy rose, I cannot give it vital growth again, It needs must wither: — I'll smell it on the tree. — [Kissing her. O balmy breath, that dost almost persuade Justice to break her sword! — One more, one more — Be thus when thou art dead, and I will kill thee, And love thee after: — One more, and this the last: So sweet was ne'er so fatal. I must weep, But they are cruel tears: She wakes — Des. Who's there? Othello? Oth. Ay, Desdemona. Des. Will you come to bed, my lord? Oth. Have you pray'd to-night, Desdemona? Des. Ay, my lord. Oth. If you bethink yourself of any crime, Unreconcil'd as yet to heaven and grace, Solicit for it straight. Des. Alas, my lord, what may you mean by that? Oth. Well, do it, and be brief; I will walk by; I would not kill thy unprepared spirit; No, — Heaven forfend!? — I would not kill thy soul. Des. Talk you of killing? Oth. Des. Then, heaven Have mercy on me! Oth. Amen, with all my heart! Des. If you say so, I hope you will not kill me. Oth. Humph! Des. And yet I fear you: for you are fatal then, When your eyes roll so: Why should I fear, I know not, Since guiltiness I know not; but yet, I feel, I fear. Oth. Think on thy sins. Des. They are loves I bear to you. Oth. Ay, and for that thou diest. Des. That death's unnatural, that kills for loving. — Alas, why gnaw you so your nether lip? Some bloody passion shakes your very frame: These are portents: but yet, I hope, I hope, They do not point on me. Oth. Peace, and be still! Des. I will so: What's the matter? Oth. That handkerchief which I so lov'd and gave thee, Thou gav'st to Cassio. Des. No, by my life and soul; Send for the man and ask him.

6 i. e. The light of life.
This is the punctuation of the folio of 1633, and of Pope, Steevens, &c., but some editors point it thus: —
Put out the light, and then: —— Put out the light.

THE MOOR OF VENICE.

SCENE II.

Oth. Sweet soul, take heed, Take heed of perjury; thou art on thy death-bed.

Des. Ay, but not yet to die.

Oth. Therefore confess thee freely of thy sin; For to deny each article with oath, Cannot remove, nor choke, the strong conception, That I do groan within. Thou art to die.

Des. O heaven, have mercy on me! Oth. I say, amen.

Des. And have you mercy too! — I never did Offend you in my life; never lov'd Cassio, But with such general warranty of heaven As I might love: I never gave him token. Oth. By heaven, I saw thy handkerchief in his hand.

O perjur'd woman! thou dost stone my heart, And mak'st me call what I intend to do, — A murder, which I thought a sacrifice: I saw the handkerchief.

Des. He found it then; I never gave it him: — Send for him hither, Let him confess a truth.

Oth. He hath confess'd.

Des. How? unlawfully?

Oth. Ay.

Des. He'll not say so.

Oth. No, his mouth is stopp'd; Honest Iago hath ta'en order for't.

Des. My fear interprets then,—What, is he dead?

Oth. Had all his hairs been lives, my great revenge Had stomach for them all.

Des. Alas! he is betray'd, and I undone.

Oth. Out, strumpet! Weep'st thou for him to my face?

Des. O, banish me, my lord, but kill me not.

Oth. Down, strumpet!

Des. Kill me to-morrow, let me live to-night.

Oth. Nay, if you strive, —

But half an hour.

Being done,

There is no pause.

Des. But while I say one prayer.

Oth. It is too late.

Emil. [Within.] My lord, my lord! what ho? my lord! my lord!

Oth. What noise is this? — Not dead! not yet quite dead?

I, that am cruel, am yet merciful;
I would not have thee linger in thy pain. —

So, so.

Emil. [Within.] What ho! my lord, my lord!

Oth. Who's there?

Emil. [Within.] O, good my lord, I would speak a word with you.

Oth. Yes; — 'tis Emilia: — by and by. — She's dead.

'Tis like she comes to speak of Cassio's death:
The noise was high. — Ha! no more moving? Still as the grave. Shall she come in? Weren't good?

I think, she stirs again: — No. — What's the best? If she come in, she'll sure speak to my wife: My wife! my wife! what wife? — I have no wife: O, insupportable! O heavy hour! Methinks it should be now a huge eclipse Of sun and moon; and that the affrighted globe Should yawn at alteration.

Emil. [Within.] I do beseech you I may speak with you. O, good my lord!

Oth. I had forgot thee: O, come in, Emilia: —

Soft, — by and by: — Let me the curtains draw. — Where art thou? What's the matter with thee now?

[Unlocks the door.]

Enter Emilia.

Emil. O, good my lord, yonder's foul murder done.

Oth. What? now?

Emil. But now, my lord! Oth. It is the very error of the moon; She comes more near the earth than she was wont; And makes men mad.

Emil. Cassio, my lord, has kill'd a young Venetian,

Call'd — Roderigo.

Oth. Roderigo kill'd!

And Cassio kill'd!

Emil. No, Cassio is not kill'd.

Oth. Not Cassio kill'd! then murder's out of tune, And sweet revenge grows harsh.

Des. O, falsely, falsely murder'd!

Emil. Alas! what cry is that?

Oth. That! what?

Emil. Out, and alas! that was my lady's voice: — Help! help! ho! help! — O lady, speak again! Sweet Desdemona! O, sweet mistress, speak!

Des. A guiltless death I die. O, who hath done

This deed?

Des. Nobody; I myself; farewell: Commend me to my kind lord; O, farewell. [Dies.

Oth. Why, how should she be murder'd? Emil. Oth. You heard her say herself, it was not I. Emil. She said so, I must needs report the truth. Oth. She's like a liar, gone to burning hell; 'Twas I that kill'd her.

Emil. O, the more angel she, And you the blacker devil!

Oth. She turn'd to folly, and she was a whore.

Emil. Thou dost belie her, and thou art a devil.

Oth. She was false as water.

Emil. Thou art rash as fire, to say That she was false; O, she was heavenly true!

Oth. False, and with Cassio; ask thy husband else.

O, I were damn'd beneath all depth in hell, But that I did proceed upon just grounds To this extremity; Thy husband knew it all. Emil. My husband?

Oth. Thy husband.

Emil. That she was false to wedlock?

Oth. Ay, with Cassio.

Nay, had she been true,
If heaven would make me such another world Of one entire and perfect chrysolite, I'd not have sold her for it.

Emil. My husband?

Oth. Ay, 'twas he that told me first;
An honest man he is, and hates the slime That sticks on filthy deeds.

Emil. My husband.

Oth. What needs this iterance, woman? I say, thy husband.

Emil. O mistress, villainy hath made mocks with love! —

My husband say, that she was false?

* A precious stone.
9 Repetition.
Oth. He, woman.
I say, thy husband; Dost understand the word? My friend, thy husband, honest, honest Iago.

Emil. If he say so, may his pernicious soul Rot half a grain a day! he lies to the heart; She was too fond of her most filthy bargain.

Oth. Ha!

Emil. Do thy worst:
This deed of thine is no more worthy heaven, Than thou wast worthy her.

Oth. Peace, you were best.

Emil. Thou hast not half the power to do me harm, As I have to be hurt.1 O gull! O dot! As ignorant as dirt! thou hast done a deed, — I care not for thy sword; I'll make thee known, Though I lost twenty lives:— Help! help, ho! help! The Moor has kill'd my mistress; Murder! murder!

Enter Montano, Gratiano, and Iago.

Mon. What is the matter? — How now, general?

Emil. O, are you come, Iago? you have done well, That men must lay their murders on your neck.

Grat. What is the matter?

Emil. Disprove this villain, if thou be'st a man. He says, thou told'st him, that his wife was false: I know, thou didst not, thou art not such a villain; Speak, for my heart is full.

Iago. I told him what I thought; and told no more Than what he four himself was apt and true.

Emil. But did you ever tell him she was false?

Iago. I did.

Emil. You told a lie; an odious, damned lie; Upon my soul, a lie; a wicked lie: — She false with Cassio! — Did you say with Cassio?

Iago. With Cassio, mistress; Go to, charm your tongue.

Emil. I will not charm my tongue; I am bound to speak;

My mistress here lies murder'd in her bed.

All. O heavens forfend! 4

Emil. And your reports have set the murder on.

Oth. Nay, stare not at masters; it is true, indeed.

Grat. 'Tis a strange truth.

Mon. O monstrous act!

Emil. Villainy, villainy, villainy! —
I think upon't; — I think, — I smell't; — O villainy! I thought so then; — I'll kill myself for grief. — O villainy, villainy! —

Iago. What, are you mad? I charge you, get you home.

Emil. Good gentlemen, let me have leave to speak:

'Tis proper I obey him, but not now: —
Perchance, Iago, I will ne'er go home.

Oth. O! O! O! [Hanging over his Wife.]

Emil. Nay, lay thee down, and roar; — For thou hast killed the sweetest innocent, That e'er did lift up eye.

Oth. O, she was foul! — [Rising.

I scarce did know you, uncle: There lies your niece, Whose breath, indeed, these hands have newly stopp'd; —
I know, this act shows horrible and grim.

Grat. Poor Desdemona! I am glad thy father's dead; Thy match was mortal to him, and pure grief

Shore his old thread in twain: did he live now, This sight would make him do a desperate turn.

Oth. 'Tis pitiful: but yet Iago knows, That she with Cassio hath the act of shame A thousand times committed; Cassio confess'd it: And she did gratify his amorous vows With that recognizance and pledge of love Which I first gave her; I saw it in his hand; It was a handkerchief, an antique token
My father gave my mother.

Emil. O heaven! O heavenly powers!

Iago. Come, hold your peace.

Emil. 'Twill out, 'twill out; — I hold my peace, sir? no; —
No, I will speak as liberal3 as the air; —
Let heaven, and men, and devils, let them all, All, all, cry shame against me, yet I'll speak.

Iago. Be wise, and get you home.

Emil. I will not.

Grat. [Iago offers to stab his Wife.]

Fye!

Your sword upon a woman?

Emil. O thou dull Moor! that handkerchief thou speak'st of, I found by fortune, and did give my husband; —
For often, with a solemn earnestness, (More than, indeed, belong'd to such a trifle,) He begged of me to steal it.

Iago. Villainous liar!

Emil. She give it Cassio! no, alas; I found it, And I did give't my husband.

Iago. Filth, thou liest.

Emil. By heaven, I do not: I do not, gentlemen: O murmurd'scoxcomb! what should such a fool Do with so good a wife?

[Enter Montano and Gratiano.

Mon. 'Tis a notorious villain. Take you this weapon Which I have here recover'd from the Moor: —
Come, guard the door without; let him not pass. But kill him rather; I'll after that same villain.

[Exeunt Montano and Gratiano.

Oth. I am not valiant neither, But every puny whistle gets my sword; — But why should honour outlive honesty? Let it go all.

Emil. What did thy song bode, lady? —
Hark, canst thou hear me? I will play the swan, And die in music; — Willow, willow, willow. —
Moor, she was chaste; she lov'd thee, cruel Moor; So come my soul to bliss, as I speak true; —
So speaking as I think, I die, — I die. — [Dies.]

Oth. I have another weapon in this chamber; It is a sword of Spain, the ice-brook's temper; —
O, here it is: — Uncle, I must come forth.

Grat. [Within.] If thou attempt it, it will cost thee dear; —
Thou hast no weapon, and perforce must suffer.

Oth. Look in upon me then, and speak with me, Or, naked as I am, I will assault thee.

Re-enter Gratiano.

Grat. What is the matter?

1 More can I hear than you dare execute. 2 Forbid.

3 Free.

4 Steel is hardened by being put red-hot into very cold water.
Scene II.

THE MOOR OF VENICE.

Oth. Behold! I have a weapon; a bore that never did itself sustain
Upon a soldier's thigh: I have seen the day, That, with this little arm, and this good sword, I have made my way through more impediments Than twenty times your stop: — But, O vain boast! Who can control his fate? 'tis not so now. — Be not afraid, though you do see me weapon'd; Here is my journey's end, here is my butt, And very sea-mark of my utmost sail. Do you go back dismay'd? 'tis a lost fear; Man but a rush against Othello's breast, And he retires; — Where should Othello go? — Now, how dost thou look now? O ill-star'd weapon! Pale as thy smock! when we shall meet at compt. This look of thine will hurl my soul from heaven, And fiends will snatch at it. Cold, cold, my girl? Even like thy chastity. —

O cursed, cursed slave! — Whisp me, ye devils, From the possession of this heavenly sight! Blow me about in winds! roast me in sulphur! Wash me in steep-downs of liquid fire! — O Desdemona! Desdemona! dead? Dead? O! O! O!

Enter LODOVICO, MONTANO, CASSIO, carried in a Chair, and Officers, with IAGO, prisoner.

Lod. Where is this rash and most unfortunate man?

Oth. That's he, that was Othello; here I am.

Lod. Where is that viper? bring the villain forth.

Oth. I look down towards his feet; — but that's a fable:

If that thou be'st a devil, I cannot kill thee. [Othello wounds IAGO.

Lod. Wrench his sword from him.

Iago. I bleed, sir; but not kill'd.

Oth. I am not sorry neither; I'd have thee live;

For, in my sense, 'tis happiness to die.

Lod. O thou Othello, that was once so good,

Fall'n in the practice? of a cursed slave,
What shall be said to thee?

Oth. Why, any thing:

An honourable murderer, if you will;

For nought I did in hate, but all in honour.

Lod. This wretch hath part confesse'd his villainy:
Did you and he consent in Cassio's death?

Oth. Ay.

Cas. Dear general, I never gave you cause.

Oth. I do believe it, and I ask your pardon.

Will you, I pray, demand that demi-devil, Why he hath thus ensn'd my soul and body?

Iago. Demand me nothing: What you know, you know:

From this time forth I never will speak word.

Lod. What? not to pray?

Gra. Torments will ope your lips.

Oth. Well, thou dost best.

Lod. Sir, you shall understand what hath befell'nt,
Which, as I think, you know not; Here is a letter, Found in the pocket of the slain Roderigo; And here, another: the one of them imports The death of Cassio to be undertook

By Roderigo.

Oth. O villain!

9 Account. By the stratagem,

Cas. Most heathenish, and most gross!

Lod. Now here's another discontented paper, Found in his pocket too: and this it seems, Roderigo meant to have sent this worst of villains,

But that, belike, Iago in the interim

Came in and satisfied him.

Oth. O the pernicious caitiff! —

How came you, Cassio, by that handkerchief

That was my wife's?

Cas. I found it in my chamber: And he himself confess'd, but even now, That there he dropp'd it for a special purpose, Which wrought to his desire.

Oth. O fool! fool! fool! —

Cas. There is, besides, in Roderigo's letter,

How he upbraids Iago, that he made him

Brave me upon the watch; whereon it came

That I was cast: And even but now he spake,

After long seeming dead, — Iago hurt him,

Iago set him on.

Lod. You must forsake this room and go with us;

Your power and your command is taken off;

And Cassio rules in Cyprus. For this slave, —

If there be any cunning cruelty,

That can torment him much, and hold him long,

It shall be his: You shall close prisoner rest,

Till that the nature of your fault be known;

To the Venetian state: — Come, bring away.

Oth. Soft you; a word or two before you go.

I have done the state some serv'ce, and they know it;

No more of that: — I pray you, in your letters,

When you shall these unlucky deeds relate,

Speak of me as I am; nothing extenuate,

Nor set down aught in malice; then must you speak

Of one, that lov'd not wisely, but too well;

Of one, not easily jealous, but, being wrought,

Perplex'd in the extreme; of one, whose hand,

Like the base Judean, threw a pearl away,

Richer than all his tribe; of one, whose subdu'd eyes,

Albeit unused to the melting mood,

Drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees

Their medicinal gum: Set you down this:

And say, besides, — that in Aleppo once,

Where a malignant and a turban'd Turk

Beat a Venetian, and traduc'd the state,

I took by the throat the circumcised dog,

And smote him — thus. [Stabs himself.

Lod. O bloody period! —

Gra. All, that's spoke, is marr'd.

Oth. I kiss'd thee, ere I kill'd thee; — No way but this, [Falling upon Desdemona.

Killing myself, to die upon a kiss. [Dies.

Cas. This did I fear, but thought he had no weapon:

For he was great of heart.

Lod. O Spartan dog,

More fell than anguish, hunger, or the sea;

Look on the tragic loading of this bed; — [To IAGO.

This is thy work: the object poisons sight; —

Let it be hid. — Gratiano, keep the house,

And seize upon the fortunes of the Moor,

For they succeed to you. — To you, lord governor,

Remains the censure of this hellish villain;

The time, the place, the torture, — O enforce it!

Myself will straightaway; and, to the state,

This heavy act with heavy heart relate. [Exeunt.
POSTSCRIPT TO OTHELLO.

In considering this admirable tragedy, which if not the very first, is certainly one of the first of dramatic writings, I think it is impossible to help wishing that one easy alteration had been made, which would add to the probability of the story, and would rather improve than injure the general effect of the drama. If Othello had entrusted Desdemona at Venice to the care of Cassio instead of Iago, the accusation of the latter would have gained an additional degree of probability. Cassio was the most intimate friend of Othello, he went a wooing with him, and to whom could he so naturally entrust the care of his wife, when compelled to leave her at the hour of his marriage? Iago might then have urged their being together at Venice after the departure of Othello, and their performing the voyage together; but as the story is now told, the adultery of Desdemona with Cassio is a crime not only improbable, but absolutely impossible to have been committed; Cassio having sailed at the same time as Othello during the night of the marriage: —

"You must away to-night."

The drunken quarrel in the street of Cyprus, took place on the night of Othello's arrival, and it was the next day that Iago urged Desdemona's entreaties for the pardon of Cassio, as a proof of her unlawful connection with him. Every argument which he enforces to prove their guilt, might, therefore, as the story is now told, have been answered, by saying the thing is impossible; and this objection to the play might have been obviated, by the easy and natural alteration which has here been suggested.

from Original Drawings made on the spot by W. H. Bartlett; and by Maps, Charts, Woodcuts of Coins, &c.

* * * In course of publication in Monthly Parts, price 2s. each; of which Seven are now ready.

"The design of this undertaking is to give a more life-like and animated picture of St. Paul than has heretofore been presented, by placing him in the midst of the circumstances by which he was actually surrounded, explaining the political and social position of the people he belonged to, exhibiting the character of Greek and Roman civilisation at the opening of his career, and shewing the various social gradations and influences with which he had to deal in the course of it. Many engravings accompany the work, having the same object in view. Maps retrace the course of his active and various wanderings, and landscapes show us the principal places he visited. The general plan of the work is very complete, and up to this point admirably executed. The division of labour assigns the translation of the epistles and speeches to Mr. Conybeare, and the narrative and descriptive portions of the book to Mr. Howson.
When completed it will doubtless be the best existing account of the life, travels, and epistles of the great Apostle."—

Students of the English Bible. By the Rev. F. C. COOK, M.A. one of Her Majesty's Inspectors of Church Schools. Post 8vo. 8s. 6d. cloth.

"A very excellent edition of the Acts, with explanatory notes, religious reflections, and introductory matter; the critical exposition drawn from a great variety of sources; the more religious suggestions original... Mr. Cook's object is... first, to supply whatever information may be required by the English reader in order to understand the text; and secondly, to assist him in drawing practical inferences from the word that was given to make us 'wise unto salvation': both of which purposes the book is well adapted to fulfil."—SPECTATOR.

HUMPHREYS AND JONES.—THE ILLUMINATED BOOKS OF THE MIDDLE AGES:
A series of Fac-similes from the most beautiful MSS. of the Middle Ages, in Gold, Silver, and Colours, selected and described by Henry Noel Humphreys. Elegantly bound in antique calf. Royal folio, £10. 10s.; imperial folio (large paper), £16. 16s.

"The gorgeous folio now lying before us is illuminated by means of chromolithography, an art which would have excited the astonished and admiration of the earlier printers, and which Mr. Owen Jones has carried to the greatest perfection. We believe that the manufactures of England and France are indebted to his 'Alhambra' for many of their most beautiful patterns; and the illuminated books of the Saxons form an interesting contrast to the Moorish palaces of Grenada."

THE REV. DR. W. I. KIP.—THE CHRISTMAS HOLIDAYS
KIRBY & SPENCE.—AN INTRODUCTION TO ENTOMOLOGY;

"This is the Second Series of Mr. Laing's "Notes of a Traveller," but referring more to home than to foreign parts than the first series did, and is, to our judgment, infinitely more important and deserving of the public consideration. The author is no common writer; none of the servus pecus class. For right or for wrong, for truth or for error, he is an original thinker; one of the rarest characters; among our multitudinous acquaintance, except a few in science, and very few in literature, the fine arts, or anything else......We recommend the volume to every reader in search of truth and accessible to the effects of strikingly novel treatment."

MURE.—A CRITICAL HISTORY OF THE LANGUAGE AND LITERATURE OF ANCIENT GREECE. By WILLIAM MURE, M.P., of Caldwell. 3 vols. 8vo. 36s. cloth.

"The history of the language and literature of Greek has so constantly been confined to the schools of the learned that notwithstanding the numerous and excellent works extant upon this subject, a work which treats of it in a more popular form, suitable to the general reader as we have the scholar, has hitherto been a desideratum in our literature. The want is admirably supplied by the volumes of Mr. Mure, which, within the limits which the author has proposed to himself, contain a full and most interesting account of the rise and progress of the literature of ancient Greece ... Unable for want of space to follow the author into the details of his interesting performance, we must content ourselves with this sketch of a work which, in point of copiousness and accuracy of information, has few to surpass it, while its freedom from all unnecessary display of learning, and its practical and common sense method of handling the subject, render it eminently fitted to introduce to an acquaintance with the beauties of Greek literature those who without possessing the advantage of scholarship, are yet able to sympathise with the interest attaching to the literary development of the most accomplished antiquity."—John Bull.
